| | 4d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... |
| | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... |
| | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... |
| | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... |
| | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... |
| | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 4d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 8d. | 8d. | 8d.B | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | 8d. | ... | B | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d.C | C | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 1/6 | ... |
| D | D | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d.E | ... | E | 4d.F | F | ... | ... | F | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | 8d. | ... |
| | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 8d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 4d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 4d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | 4dA. | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 4d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | 4d.A | ... | ... | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d.A | ... | ... | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 4d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 4d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | 4d.A | ... | ... | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 8d. | 8d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d.A | ... | ... | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... |
| | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | 4d.A | ... | ... | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 8d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 4d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d.A | ... | ... | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d.A | ... | ... | ... | A | 8d | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |

† Oboe has the Melody. X Flute has the Melody. § May be had as a complete Suite.

THE ENGLISH COUNTRY DANCE

GRADED SERIES

CONTAINING THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DANCES TOGETHER WITH THE TUNES

BY

CECIL J. SHARP

VOL. 1.
BRIGHTON CAMP.
*GALOPEDE.
*NANCY'S FANCY.
*THE BLACK NAG.
*GATHERING PEASCODS.
*RUFTY TUFTY.

VOL. 2.
RIBBON DANCE.
GODDESSES.
*THE MARY AND DOROTHY.
*IF ALL THE WORLD WERE PAPER.
PICKING UP STICKS.
*HASTE TO THE WEDDING.

VOL. 3.
BONNETS SO BLUE.
THE MAID PEEPED OUT AT THE WINDOW.
CHRISTCHURCH BELLS.
*HEY, BOYS, UP GO WE.
*SELLENGER'S ROUND.
THE MERRY, MERRY MILKMAIDS.

VOL. 4.
SAGE LEAF.
EPPING FOREST.
CHILDGROVE.
*THE OLD MOLE.
HIT AND MISS.
NEWCASTLE.

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS EACH VOLUME.

* The Dances marked with an asterisk may be had for Brass or Military Band.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

TWELVE COUNTRY DANCE TUNES

COLLECTED BY

CECIL J. SHARP

ARRANGED FOR

BRASS OR MILITARY BAND

By GORDON JACOB

IN THREE SETS

PRICE ... ... 4*s.* 6*d.* EACH.

Separate Parts, 3*d.* each.

SET 1.
THE BUTTERFLY
GALOPEDE.
HASTE TO THE WEDDING.
NANCY'S FANCY.

SET 2.
GATHERING PEASCODS.
RUFTY, TUFTY.
HEY BOYS.
THE BLACK NAG.

SET 3.
IF ALL THE WORLD WERE PAPER.
THE OLD MOLE.
SELLENGER'S ROUND.
THE MARY AND DOROTHY.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

JOHN SEBASTIAN BACH

48 PRELUDES AND FUGUES

(THE WELL-TEMPERED CLAVIER)

A NEW EDITION, EDITED BY

HAROLD BROOKE

IN TWO PARTS

Price Four Shillings each

Or, Complete, Cloth, Price Twelve Shillings and Sixpence

ANALYSIS

FOR THE USE OF STUDENTS

BY

FREDERICK ILIFFE

Price Four Shillings and Sixpence; Paper Boards, Five Shillings and Sixpence

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NATIONAL SONGS

WITH

DESCANTS

SET I. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 271

THE BAY OF BISCAY (English)
A HUNTING WE WILL GO (English)
JOHN PEEL (English)
ALL THROUGH THE NIGHT (Welsh)
SCOTS, WHA HAE (Scottish)
THE OAK AND THE ASH (Scottish)
EARLY ONE MORNING (English)
OH, DEAR! WHAT CAN THE MATTER BE? (English)
THE BRITISH GRENADIERS (English)
THE ASH GROVE (Welsh)
GOOD KING WENCESLAS (Traditional)
THE FIRST NOWELL (Traditional)

SET II. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 275

COME LASSES AND LADS (English)
WI' A HUNDRED PIPERS (Scottish)
DAVID OF THE WHITE ROCK (Welsh)
THE YOUNG MAY MOON (Irish)
THE GOLDEN VANITY (English)
THE FLIGHT OF THE EARLS (Irish)

SET III. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 276

MEETING OF THE WATERS (Irish)
THERE'S NAE LUCK (Scottish)
DRINK TO ME ONLY WITH THINE EYES (English)
LET ERIN REMEMBER (Irish)
THE BAILIFF'S DAUGHTER OF ISLINGTON (English)
THE BELLS OF ABERDOVEY (Welsh)

SET IV. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 307

THE CAMPBELLS ARE COMIN' (Scottish)
IN DERRY VALE (The Londonderry Air) (Irish)
THE AGINCOURT SONG (English)
ANNIE LAURIE (Scottish)
AUTUMN'S GOLDEN LEAF (English)
SILENT, O MOYLE (Irish)
MINE EYES HAVE SEEN (American)
OFT IN THE STILLY NIGHT (Irish)
I SAW THREE SHIPS (Traditional)
SHEPHERDS! SHAKE OFF YOUR DROWSY SLEEP (Traditional)

(PRICE EIGHTPENCE EACH SET)

(Each Song can be had separately.)

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NEW EDITION

POCKET SING-SONG BOOK

FOR SCHOOLS, HOMES

AND

COMMUNITY SINGING

CONTENTS

A-hunting we will go
All people that on earth do dwell (Old 100th)
All through the night
Arethusa, The Ash Grove, The
Auld Lang Syne
Bay of Biscay, The Begone, dull care
Bells of Aberdovey, The Blow, blow, thou winter wind
Blue Bell of Scotland, The Bonnie Banks of Loch Lomond, The British Grenadiers, The Campbells are comin', The Camptown Races
Charlie is my Darling
Coasts of High Barbary, The Come, lasses and lads
Come, let's be merry
Dashing away with the smoothing iron
Down among the dead men
David of the White Rock
Drink to me only with thine eyes
Early one morning
Flight of the Earls, The Girl I left behind me, The Glory to Thee, my God, this night (Tallis)
God rest you merry, gentlemen
God save the King
Golden Vanity, The Good-morrow, Gossip Joan
Harp that once through Tara's halls, The Heart of Oak
Heave away, my Johnny
Here's a health unto His Majesty
I saw three ships
John Brown's body
John Peel
Keel row, The Land of my Fathers
Lass of Richmond Hill, The Last Rose of Summer, The Let the hills resound
Londonderry Air
March of the Men of Harlech
Marching thro' Georgia
Marseillaise, The Meeting of the Waters, The Mermaid, The Minstrel Boy, The
My Lady Greensleeves
Now thank we all our God
O no, John !
Oak and the Ash, The
Oh, dear ! what can the matter be
Oh ! we can play
Old Folks at Home
Old King Cole
One man went to mow
Onward, Christian Soldiers
Poacher, The Polly Oliver
Polly-wolly-doodle
Rio Grand
Rounds: Come, follow me
'Tis humdrum
Chairs to mend
Rule, Britannia
So early in the morning
Summer is a-coming in
There was a simple maiden
This great world is a trouble
Tight little Island, The Twelve days of Christmas
Vicar of Bray, The Wanderer, The
We be Three Poor Mariners
When I was a Tailor
When Johnny comes marching home
Wi' a Hundred Pipers
Widdicombe Fair
Will ye no come back again
Young May Moon, The

Size 6½ in. by 5 in., rounded corners, and lined paper cover. The songs are generally set in low keys with simple pianoforte accompaniments. The voice part is printed in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa notations.

PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE

Words only, price 4*d*.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

ORGAN MUSIC

SUITABLE FOR PERFORMANCE AT CINEMAS, ETC.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| J. BENEDICT | | |
| Variations on Arne's "Where the bee sucks" | 2 | 0 |
| DUDLEY BUCK | | |
| At Evening | 2 | 0 |
| WALFORD DAVIES | | |
| Solemn Melody | 2 | 0 |
| EDWARD ELGAR | | |
| Contrasts (The Gavotte) | 2 | 0 |
| PERCY E. FLETCHER | | |
| Fountain Reverie | 3 | 0 |
| Matinale | 1 | 6 |
| EDWARD GERMAN | | |
| Morris Dance (Henry VIII.) | 2 | 0 |
| Shepherds' Dance | 2 | 0 |
| Torch Dance | 2 | 0 |
| R. G. HAILING | | |
| Chanson de Joie | 1 | 6 |
| KING HALL | | |
| Canzone | 2 | 0 |
| ALFRED HOLLINS | | |
| Allegretto Grazioso | 1 | 6 |
| Barcarolle | 1 | 6 |
| Berceuse | 2 | 0 |
| Evening Rest | 3 | 0 |
| In Springtime | 2 | 0 |
| Intermezzo in D flat | 2 | 0 |
| Maytime (Gavotte) | 1 | 6 |
| Minuet | 2 | 0 |
| Morning Song | 2 | 0 |
| Spring Song | 1 | 6 |
| EDWARD J. HORSMAN | | |
| The Curfew | 2 | 0 |
| BERNARD JOHNSON | | |
| Pavane in A | 2 | 0 |
| S. KARG-ELERT | | |
| Harmonies du Soir | 1 | 6 |
| EDWIN H. LEMARE | | |
| Andantino in D flat | 2 | 0 |
| Chanson d'Été | 2 | 0 |
| Elegy in G | 2 | 0 |
| Intermezzo in B flat | 2 | 0 |
| Madrigal | 2 | 0 |
| Minuet Nuptiale | 2 | 0 |
| Pastorale in E | 2 | 0 |
| Reverie in E flat | 3 | 0 |
| Romance in D flat | 3 | 0 |
| J. A. MEALE | | |
| Chanson d'Espoir | 2 | 0 |
| J. RAFF | | |
| Cavatina | 1 | 6 |
| SCHUBERT | | |
| Ave Maria | 1 | 6 |
| Serenade | 1 | 6 |
| BERTHOLD TOURS | | |
| Allegretto Grazioso | 1 | 6 |
| Menuetto | 1 | 6 |
| TSCHAIKOWSKY | | |
| Chanson Triste | 1 | 6 |
| Chant sans Paroles | 1 | 6 |
| Andantino (Symphony No. 4) | 3 | 0 |
| ERIC WEBSTER | | |
| Berceuse | 1 | |
| H. DAVAN WETTON | | |
| Andantino in D flat | 1 | 6 |
| H. A. WHEELDON | | |
| Cantilene | 3 | 6 |
| Canzona | 3 | 0 |
| W. WOLSTENHOLME | | |
| Canzona | 3 | 6 |
| Romanza and Allegretto in E flat | 3 | 0 |

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

TWENTY SHORT AND EASY PIECES

FOR THE ORGAN

SET VI.

| No. | | |
|---|---|---|
| 1. | ADAGIO FROM SEXTETT (OP. 81) | BEETHOVEN |
| 2. | ALLEGRO GRANDIOSO | HUGH BLAIR |
| 3. | LARGO IN E FLAT | E. BUNNETT |
| 4. | MODERATO | GEORGE CALKIN |
| 5. | BERCEUSE | CÉSAR CUI |
| 6. | ADAGIO IN D | OTTO DIENEL |
| 7. | POSTLUDE | EDMONDSTOUNE DUNCAN |
| 8. | IMPROMPTU IN A | A. M. GOODHART |
| 9. | WEDDING MARCH | A. GUILMANT |
| 10. | MARCH FROM "ODE ON ST. CECILIA'S DAY" | HANDEL |
| 11. | LIEDER OHNE WORTE, No. 9 | F. MENDELSSOHN-BARTHOLDY |
| 12. | ALLEGRO IN C | GUSTAV MERKEL |
| 13. | ANDANTE | REISSIGER |
| 14. | POSTLUDE IN F | J. VARLEY ROBERTS |
| 15. | PRELUDE | B. LUARD-SELBY |
| 16. | PRELUDE IN A | HENRY SMART |
| 17. | ANDANTE CON MOTO | CHARLES STEGGALL |
| 18. | ALLEGRETTO GRAZIOSO | BERTHOLD TOURS |
| 19. | COMMUNION IN B FLAT | FERRIS TOZER |
| 20. | CON MOTO | JOHN E. WEST |

PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS.

Cloth, Six Shillings.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

JUST PUBLISHED

IN TONIC SOL-FA NOTATION.

A SONG OF DESTINY

(SCHICKSALSLIED)

COMPOSED BY

JOHANNES BRAHMS.

OP. 54.

PRICE ONE SHILLING

Staff Notation Edition, price 1s. 6d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

"LONELINESS"

and other Essays, also extracts from Lectures on Singing delivered to the Students of the Royal Academy of Music, London.

By AGNES J. LARKCOM, F.R.A.M.

Price 4s. 6d.; postage, 4d. extra.

GERALD DUCKWORTH & CO.,

3, HENRIETTA ST., COVENT GARDEN, or any bookseller.

JUST PUBLISHED.

SEVENTEEN SONGS

COMPOSED BY

HENRY PURCELL.

Edited and arranged, with accompaniment for the Pianoforte, by

ARTHUR SOMERVELL.

Price Four Shillings

CONTENTS.

A PASTORAL ELEGY ON THE DEATH OF MR. JOHN PLAYFORD.
AH! CRUEL NYMPH.
AH! HOW PLEASANT.
AH! WHAT PAINS.
AN ELEGY ON THE DEATH OF MATTHEW LOCKE.
ANACREON'S DEFEAT.
CEASE, O MY SAD SOUL.
HOW DELIGHTFUL 'S THE LIFE.
I FAIN WOULD BE FREE.
IF MUSIC BE THE FOOD OF LOVE (2nd Version).
LET EACH GALLANT HEART.
LOVE ARMS HIMSELF.
OLINDA.
ON THE BROW OF RICHMOND HILL.
SAWNEY IS A BONNY LAD.
THE FATAL HOUR COMES ON.
THE QUEEN'S EPICEDIUM (ELEGY ON THE DEATH OF QUEEN MARY, 1695).

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

Specially composed for the Blackpool Musical Festival, 1928.

THE BLESSED DAMOZEL

BY

D. G. ROSSETTI

SET TO MUSIC FOR FEMALE VOICES

BY

JULIUS HARRISON

Price, One Shilling and Sixpence

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED

THREE SHORT PIECES FOR ORGAN

No. 1. Andante con moto in D.
No. 2. Andantino in A minor.
No. 3. Larghetto con espressione in A flat.

By

BASIL HARWOOD

Op. 45.

(No. 20, Original Compositions for the Organ)

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

CHURCH MUSIC

by the late

ARTHUR HENRY BROWN.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| THE CANTICLES OF HOLY CHURCH set to some of their Ancient tones ... 21st edn. | 0 | 3 |
| THE INTROITS for the Sundays and Holy Days throughout the year. Adapted from the Authentic Plain Chant ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| MISSA SERAPHICA. The Order for Holy Communion ... ... ... 16th thousand | 1 | 0 |
| MISSA QUINTI TONI. A Plain Chant Service for the Holy Communion ... ... 6th edn. | 0 | 3 |
| THE PLAIN-SONG OF THE ATHANASIAN CREED, with organ accompaniment ... ... | 0 | 3 |

ETC., ETC.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

COMMUNION SERVICE

IN F

FOR MEN'S VOICES.

BY

R. WALKER ROBSON

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

THE LIMITATIONS OF MUSIC

A STUDY IN ÆSTHETICS

BY ERIC BLOM.

6*s. net.*

Royal College of Music Magazine: "The principle of limitations and the nature of limitations in music are discussed; invention and artistry, realism, imagination, form, style, and psychological problems. Mozart is treated at some length, and Folk Music, Nationalism, and other interesting subjects are considered."

MACMILLAN & Co., LTD., LONDON, W.C.2.

Parcels of Piano or Organ Music.

Having just purchased a Music Library in which a very large selection of Piano and Organ Music is included, we have decided to make the following offer to readers of the Musical Times:—We will send a Bargain Parcel of 12 pieces of Piano or Organ Music for 3*s.* (Piano) or 4*s.* (Organ), post free in U.K. State whether Piano or Organ is desired. Every parcel will give satisfaction. Lists of the Music are not available.

QUOTE OFFER 122/BP.

FOYLE'S MUSIC DEPT.,
119, Charing Cross Road, London, W.C.2.

JOSEF HOLBROOKE
CHAMBER WORKS

Violin and Pianoforte Sonata (No. 3). "Orientale."

Violin Concerto in F (Op. 59).

Trio for PIANO, VIOLIN, and HORN (or VIOLA).

Trio for PIANO, OBOE, and CLARINET (or FLUTE).

Piano Quartet in G minor.

Piano Quintet in G minor.

Quintet No. 1—for TWO VLNS., VIOLA, 'CELLO, and CLARINET.

Quintet No. 2—for TWO VLNS., VIOLA, 'CELLO, and CLARINET.

Sextet (Dances) No. 1—for PIANO, TWO VLNS., VIOLA, 'CELLO, and CLARINET.

Sextet No. 2—for PIANO, FLUTE, OBOE, CLARINET, and CORNET.

Sextet No. 3—for PIANO and STRINGS.

Sextet No. 4. "In Memoriam." For PIANO and STRINGS.

Suites Nos. 1 and 2—for STRING ORCHESTRA.

For full list of Pianoforte Music and Songs apply to

W. PAXTON & Co., LTD.
22, HIGH STREET, NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.C.1.

FOREIGN MUSIC

If you have any difficulty in obtaining Foreign Music, we invite you to send your inquiries to us. Our Foreign Department holds a large and comprehensive stock of foreign editions, including those of André, Choudens, Costallat, Durand, Heugel, Hug, Hamelle, Leduc, Lemoine, Schlesinger, Simon, Zimmermann, and many others of equal note.

Certain catalogues and list are available, and will be sent on application.

The comprehensive nature of our stock will be judged by the following list:

PIANOFORTE
Solos, duets, &c., transcriptions and arrangements of all kinds.

VOCAL
Operatic, concert, and classical solos, duets, glees, exercises, vocal scores of operas, oratorios, &c., and orchestral parts.

ORGAN
Original compositions, transcriptions, and arrangements, in volumes and separately.

HARMONIUM
Duos, trios, quartets, transcriptions, &c.

INSTRUMENTAL
Solos, duets, trios, quartets, &c.

ORCHESTRAL
Scores and parts, miniature scores, pianoforte arrangements, studies, exercises, &c., for all instruments.

Inquiries for little-known or unknown works will be welcomed, and any compositions not in stock can be obtained at short notice.

When writing please state which of the above sections is of interest to you.

SCHUBERT CENTENARY

Messrs. Novello have in stock certain of the 21 folio volumes of Schubert's works, forming the Complete Edition as published by Breitkopf & Härtel. List and prices will be sent on application.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

MADGE
A CAMP-FIRE PLAY
BY
KITTY BARNE
INTRODUCING
FOLK-SONGS, SUNG AND ACTED

Price One Shilling.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

Years Ahead

The past is present only in careful, painstaking construction; for the Chappell Piano is the really modern instrument embodying the inventive genius of the present age, and designed exclusively for to-day and the future. In many important features, the Chappell Piano is far ahead of the times, and will be "up-to-date" for some time to come. That is why the Chappell is becoming ever more and more the Piano chosen by the great musicians.

THE CHAPPELL PIANO CO. LTD.
50, NEW BOND ST., LONDON, W.1.

CHAPPELL

PIANO PIECES
BY # POLDOWSKI

THE HALL OF MACHINERY—WEMBLEY .... ... 2/- net.
SONATINE .... .... .... .... .... .... .... 2/- „
STUDY .... .... .... .... .... .... .... .... 2/- „
CALEDONIAN MARKET. Eight Pieces .... .... .... 5/- „

1. Street Hawkers;
2. Mouth Organs;
3. The Bloomsbury Waltz;
4. Humming Tops;
5. Child talking to the Cat;
6. Musical Box;
7. The Bouncing Ball;
8. Picture of Clowns.

These Piano pieces show clearly that Poldowski is not content with standing still. They show a distinct advance, and they strike, like all the composer's works, a vividly personal note.

J. & W. CHESTER, Ltd., 11, Gt. Marlborough St., London, W.1.

London: Printed by NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited, at Novello Works, Soho, and published at 160, Wardour Street, Soho, W.1. Saturday, June 30, 1928.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

FOUNDED IN 1844

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH

No. 1,026—Vol. 69. Registered at the General Post Office for Canadian Postage.

AUGUST 1 1928

Price 6d.; Postage, 2d.

Annual Subscription, post-free, 7s. 6d.

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY.

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

(Season, 1928-1929.)

There are now VACANCIES in the CHOIR for SOPRANOS, CONTRALTOS, TENORS, and BASSES. Applicants should have STRONG VOICES OF GOOD QUALITY, and must be prepared to pass an examination in SIGHT-READING. Address, The Secretary, Royal Choral Society, Royal Albert Hall, S.W.7.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, LONDON, N.W.1

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patrons:
HIS MAJESTY THE KING
HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN
H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT
AND STRATHEARN, K.G.
H.R.H. THE PRINCESS LOUISE (Duchess of Argyll)

President:
H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT
AND STRATHEARN, K.G.

Principal:
JOHN B. MCEWEN, M.A., D.Mus., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M.

MICHAELMAS TERM
BEGINS 17TH SEPTEMBER.

VACATION COURSE FOR TEACHERS.
PIANOFORTE,
CLASS-SINGING,
AURAL TRAINING, and
MUSICAL HISTORY and APPRECIATION.
SEPTEMBER 11th to 14th, 1928.

STUDENTS' ORCHESTRA.
Conducted by SIR HENRY J. WOOD, D. Mus., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M.

CONDUCTORS' COURSE.
FOR THE TRAINING OF CONDUCTORS.

OPERA COURSE.
FOR THE TRAINING OF OPERATIC SINGERS.

SCHOLARSHIPS.
SEVENTY-TWO SCHOLARSHIPS AND EXHIBITIONS.

L.R.A.M.
Examinations held during the Summer, Christmas, and Easter Vacations.

PROSPECTUSES, ENTRY FORMS, and all other information from

A. ALGER BELL, Secretary.

GLASGOW
ATHENÆUM SCHOOL OF MUSIC

SESSION 1927-28

The Session consists of Three Terms: September 12 to December 3, December 5 to March 10, and March 12 to June 8.

Complete Musical Curriculum. Day and Evening Classes. Single Subjects taught.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from:

STUART S. FORSYTH, Secretary,
ATHENÆUM BUILDINGS, GLASGOW.

The Royal College of Organists

THE SOLO-PLAYING TESTS for the next F.R.C.O. EXAMINATION are:

Prelude and Fugue in C minor, J. S. Bach. (Novello, Book 7, p. 64; Augener, p. 168; Peters, Vol. 2, No. 6.)

Choral Prelude, "St. Mary's," Charles Wood, No. 1, of 16 Preludes, Vol. 1. (Stainer & Bell.)

Larghetto from the Quintet, Op. 108, Mozart. Arrangements for the Organ by W. T. Best, No. 20, p. 247. (Novello.)

The 10 selected pieces and the book set for the Essay for the January, 1929, A.R.C.O Examination, are the same as those set for July, 1928.

For the convenience of members, past examination papers have been bound in one volume: Fellowship and Associateship Organ Work, January, 1913, to July, 1927; Paper Work, July, 1924, to July, 1927. Price 4*s.*, to be obtained by members only.

Regulations, List of College Publications, Lectures, &c., may be had on application.

Examples indicating the character and approximate difficulty of the NEW TESTS, set for the first time at the July, 1924, Examinations, may be obtained at the College.

Associateship or Fellowship, 6*d.* each (post free).

N.B.—The College is closed during August.

H. A. HARDING, Hon. Secretary.

Kensington Gore, S.W.7.

The Royal College of Music

PRINCE CONSORT ROAD, SOUTH KENSINGTON, S.W.7

Patrons: { HIS MAJESTY THE KING
{ HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

Director: SIR HUGH P. ALLEN, C.V.O., M.A., D.Mus., D.Litt.

CHRISTMAS TERM

THE CHRISTMAS TERM will commence on Monday, September 24th, 1928.

Entrance Examination on or about September 19th.

COMPLETE MUSICAL EDUCATION
is provided by Teachers of the highest eminence.

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT
Classes are held for pupils under sixteen, whose time is also occupied by their general education.

SPECIAL CLASSES ARE HELD FOR:
Score Reading, Conducting, Training of Teachers, Musical Criticism, and Ballet.

OPERATIC CLASSES
The College possesses a fully equipped College Opera Theatre for an audience of 600.

SCHOLARSHIPS, EXHIBITIONS
Upwards of 70 Scholarships and Exhibitions are provided from a permanent endowment fund.

ENSEMBLE CLASSES
There are Vocal and Instrumental Ensemble Classes, and Pupils sufficiently advanced in this work are given the opportunity of putting their knowledge into practice at College Concerts.

A.R.C.M.

Examinations for Associateship of the College (A.R.C.M.) are held three times a year, in September, December, and April.
Full particulars obtainable from the Registrar.

LONDON SOCIETY OF ORGANISTS

FOUNDED 1913

PRESIDENT FOR 1928: J. PERCY BAKER, Mus. B.

Organists, Assistant-Organists, are eligible. Register of vacant appointments. All particulars on application to the Hon. Secretary, De Crespigny House, Denmark Hill, S.E.5.

THE ASSOCIATED BOARD

OF THE R.A.M. AND THE R.C.M.
FOR LOCAL EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING
President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

LOCAL CENTRE EXAMINATIONS (SYLLABUS A)

Written Examinations held in March and November at all centres. Practical Examinations in March-April and November-December at all Centres. Entries for the November-December Examinations close Wednesday, October 10th, 1928.

"SCHOOL" EXAMINATIONS (SYLLABUS B).

Held throughout the British Isles three times a year, viz., March-April, June-July, and October-November. Entries for the October-November-Examinations close Wednesday, October 3rd, 1928.

ELOCUTION EXAMINATIONS will be held at certain fixed centres in March-April. June-July, and November-December each year. For full particulars see special Elocution Syllabus.

The Board offers annually SIX EXHIBITIONS tenable at The R.A.M. or The R.C.M. for Two or Three Years.

Syllabuses A and B, Elocution Syllabus, Entry Forms, and any further information, may be obtained post-free from:

THE SECRETARY, 14 & 15, Bedford Square, London, W.C.1.

Guildhall School of Music

(Founded in 1880 by the Corporation of London, and managed by the Music Committee)

VICTORIA EMBANKMENT, E.C.4

PRINCIPAL: SIR LANDON RONALD, F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M., &c.

PRIVATE Lessons in any single Musical Subject, and STAGE TRAINING in Elocution, Gesture, Dancing, Opera; Classes in Conducting, Fencing, French Classical Drama.

Complete Musical Education at inclusive fees, £12 12s. and £14 14s. Opera Class, Saturdays. Special Training Course for Teachers (approved by Teachers' Registration Council).

Prospectus and Syllabus of Local Centres and Schools Examinations (open to general public) free.

H. SAXE WYNDHAM, Secretary.

Telephone: Cent. 4459; and City 5566.

96 & 95, WIMPOLE STREET, W.1

TOBIAS MATTHAY PIANOFORTE SCHOOL

Instruction under his teachers, and under his own supervision.

Open to Professionals and Amateurs, and also to Children.

The Staff consists of thirty-nine senior Professors of thorough experience and platform reputation, all trained by the founder.

Special Short Courses for Teachers during term and vacation.

LECTURE-LESSON CLASS by MR. MATTHAY on the practical teaching of Technique and Interpretation, diagnosis and correction of faults, musical analysis and synthesis, &c., alternate Wednesday evenings.

COMPLETE TRAINING COURSE FOR TEACHERS
(Approved by the Teachers' Registration Council)

This ONE-YEAR Course may be joined at the beginning of ANY TERM.

For further particulars please apply, MRS. MARION COLE, Secretary.

ROYAL MANCHESTER COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Founded 1893. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1923

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF YORK, K.G.
Principal: DR. ADOLPH BRODSKY
Registrar: STANLEY WITHERS, M.A.

Students are requested to enter upon a complete course of Musical instruction, and are not admitted for a shorter period than one year.

Fee for the year, £36 Special fee for Organ Course, £30, and for Wind Instrument Coruse, £18.

Systematic Course for the training of Teachers, approved by Teachers' Registration Council.

The Prospectus, with Scholarship information, Diploma Regulations, and Entry Forms, on application.

WIGMORE HALL STUDIOS.—These splendidly appointed Studios are the recognised centre of the best musical activities in London. Forty-five rooms. Grand Piano in every room. Lift, telephone, and every comfort and convenience. Low inclusive rates. One morning or afternoon per week the minimum time arranged for. Apply, 38, Wigmore Street, W.1.

Manchester School of Music

Founded by J. A. CROSS (1892)

Late Principal (1897-1925): ALBERT J. CROSS, A.R.A.M.
Director: LEOPOLD H. CROSS, M.A.

The oldest Institution in Manchester devoted solely to the interests of Music.

All branches of Music taught. Day and evening Private Lessons. Opera Class. Full Orchestral Class. Intermediate and Elementary String Orchestras. Classes for Ensemble Playing, Elocution, Choral Singing, Harmony, Aural Training, &c.

Students prepared for all Royal Academy and Trinity College Exams.

Single Subjects taught. Prospectus from the Secretary, 16, Albert Square.

BIRMINGHAM & MIDLAND INSTITUTE

SCHOOL OF MUSIC

Visitor ... Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M., Mus. Doc., LL.D.
Director ... GRANVILLE BANTOCK, M.A., D. Mus. (Ed.).

SESSION 1927-1928

The Season consists of AUTUMN TERM (September 22 to December 20); WINTER TERM (January 14 to April 11); SUMMER TERM (April 20 to July 4).

Instruction in all branches of Music, Students' Orchestra, Chamber Music, Students' Rehearsals, and Concerts.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from—

H. M. FRANCIS, Secretary.
Paradise Street, Birmingham.

THE LONDON SCHOOL OF SINGING

New Address: 2, Gray Street, Duke Street, W.1 (near Selfridge's).
President: A. NETTLEFOLD
Principal: DAVID GODELL

Instruction in all Vocal Subjects. A thorough musical education if desired.

Special Voice-curing Courses for all vocal defects, caused by over-strain and incorrect production.

Practice with Accompaniste can be obtained at the School at a moderate fee.

Particulars from Secretary, Miss M. HEATH. Mayfair 3819.

JOIN THE ORGAN CLUB

PRESIDENT:

AND VISIT
MESSRS. HILL & SONS AND NORMAN & BEARD'S ORGAN WORKS,
AUGUST 18.
HOLY TRINITY, UPPER TOOTING,
SEPTEMBER 15.
Further attractive visits to follow.

Entrance Fee, 2s. 6d. Annual Subscription, 10s. 6d.

For full particulars apply Hon. Sec.,
28, HILLMORE GROVE, SYDENHAM, S.E.26.

PIANO PEDALS, with Octave Coupler

This wonderful invention supersedes all Piano Pedals, and is a Master Patent.

St. George's Hall, Liverpool,
9th April, 1921.

"The simplicity of the attachment, and the clever sixteen-feet, eight-feet, or both combined, 'OPTIONAL OCTAVE' contrivance astonished me.

"I was delighted with the Pedal touch and with the variety in that touch, which your Attachment makes possible. It is very responsive to the movements of the feet, and is reliable."

HERBERT F. ELLINGFORD, Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.R.C.O.

Owing to increased output, we have reduced the price of our Popular Model to 14 guineas cash. Deferred payments if desired.

Write for Lists, Prices, and Clients' Opinions and References to

THE MALKIN PATENT PEDAL CO., LTD.,
NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LYME.
London Address: 34, Spencer Hill, Wimbledon, S.W.19.
Please mention this paper when writing.

ANY ORGAN can be SUCCESSFULLY PHOTOGRAPHED, at a low fee, by Gilbert Benham, "Bramerton," New Barnet, who has specialised in this hobby for years. Many important organs have just been photographed.—Prints for Sale.

MEMORISE YOUR MUSIC

BY MEANS OF THE

Mackinnon Course

HARRIET COHEN

the celebrated Pianist, writes to the Author:

"I have read through your remarkable Memory Course, and consider that you have performed a great service to all musicians, for, apart from its scientific analysis and technical perfection, you have brought into the light of day the whole question of Memorising and its difficulties which have hitherto been 'taboo.' Your psychological notes as to the state of mind before and during performance are to my mind of inestimable benefit."

(Signed) HARRIET COHEN.—18/6/28.

A pupil writes:

"The lesson on nervousness was of more help to me than I can say. I also find that since taking your Course I can learn pieces in an amazingly short time, and I am simply delighted with the results in every way."

THE FEE FOR THE COMPLETE COURSE OF SIX POSTAL LESSONS IS £3 : 3 : 0.

Write for free Booklet, giving particulars, testimonials and guarantee to:

MISS LILIAS MACKINNON 1, Paultons Square, London, S.W.3.

The Pianist's Hands

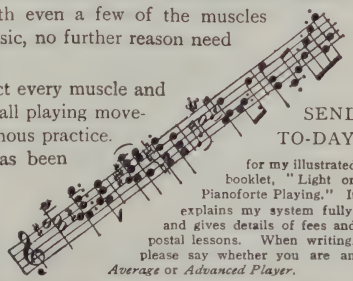
The Times says: "The excellence of Mr. Macdonald Smith's methods has been abundantly proved."

PREVALENT among pianists is the idea that you cannot play well unless you have a special sort of hand; this is a mistake. It is obvious, however, that the hands must be in perfect condition, otherwise the many technical difficulties to be overcome will be found insuperable. For a pianist every single muscle of the hands and arms must move the instant it is required to do so, and if this fails to be the case with even a few of the muscles brought into play in any complicated passage of music, no further reason need be sought to account for failure.

Let the "From Brain to Keyboard" System perfect every muscle and nerve in your hands and give you instant control over all playing movements without any of the usual drudgery and monotonous practice. Why not learn something about the System that has been used by many of our eminent musicians.



SEND TO-DAY

for my illustrated booklet, "Light on Pianoforte Playing." It explains my system fully, and gives details of fees and postal lessons. When writing, please say whether you are an Average or Advanced Player.

From Brain to Keyboard

Macdonald Smith's System of Pianoforte Playing.

M. C. MACDONALD SMITH, 94, GOWER STREET, LONDON, W.C.1

THREE CHOIRS FESTIVAL

GLOUCESTER.

SEPTEMBER 2nd, 4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th, 1928.

For the Benefit of the Widows and Orphans of the Clergy of the Dioceses of Gloucester, Worcester, and Hereford.

Patrons:

THEIR MAJESTIES THE KING AND QUEEN
HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES
THEIR ROYAL HIGHNESSES THE DUKE AND DUCHESS OF YORK
HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF GLOUCESTER
HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS PRINCE GEORGE

Principals:

Miss JOAN ELWES — Miss DORA LABBETTE
Miss DOROTHY SILK — Miss ELSIE SUDDABY
Miss MARGARET BALFOUR — Miss BETTY BANNERMAN
Miss MURIEL BRUNSKILL — Miss ASTRA DESMOND
Mr. PARRY JONES — Mr. FRANK TITTERTON
Mr. WALTER WIDDOP — Mr. STEUART WILSON
Mr. ROY HENDERSON — Mr. ROBERT MAITLAND
Mr. ROBERT RADFORD — Mr. STUART ROBERTSON
Mr. HORACE STEVENS — Mr. HAROLD WILLIAMS
Mr. W. H. REED (Solo Violin) — Mr. LIONEL TERTIS (Solo Viola)

Miss BEATRICE HARRISON (Solo Violoncello)

LONDON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

(Principal 1st Violin: Mr. W. H. REED)

Organists: SIR IVOR ATKINS and DR. HULL

CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA OF ABOUT 400 PERFORMERS

CONDUCTOR:
Mr. HERBERT W. SUMSION, Mus.Bac., F.R.C.O.

For Programmes (post free, 7*d.*) and full details, apply—
A. A. G. JONES, Secretary, Eldon Chambers, Gloucester.

CINEMA ORGAN LESSONS

Mr. FRANK NEWMAN

(F.R.C.O.)

Solo organist,

LOZELLS PICTURE HOUSE, BIRMINGHAM

(The well-known Broadcast Organist)

gives Lessons in Cinema Organ playing on the Würlitzer Unit Organ at LOZELLS PICTURE HOUSE.

Single Lessons given.

For Terms, apply to

FRANK NEWMAN, F.R.C.O.,

at above address.

LONDONDERRY "FEIS"

COMPOSERS' COMPETITION (OPEN) FOR THE BEST MIXED-VOICE DUET.

PERPETUAL CHALLENGE CUP AND MINIATURE CUP.

Syllabus and particulars from

MISS BRIDE O'NEILL,
"Feis" Office, Londonderry, Northern Ireland.

Southend & S.E. Essex Musical Festival

ANNUAL PUBLIC COMPETITIONS will be held at SOUTHEND-ON-SEA on

NOVEMBER 8th to 17th, 1928.

Pianoforte, Solo Singing, Choirs, Organ, Strings, Elocution, and Country Dancing Classes.

ENTRIES CLOSE on OCTOBER 6th, 1928.

SYLLABUS and full information on application to the Hon. Secretary, 112, Westbourne Grove, Westcliff-on-Sea, Essex.

Guide to A.R.C.M. and other Exams.

IN PIANOFORTE TEACHING.

2nd Edition, enlarged.

BY ARTHUR FILLINGHAM, A.R.C.M.

96, The Crescent, Roundhay, Leeds.

"Candidates want advice of this kind."—Musical Herald.

"A handy brochure; gives a clear idea of what is expected."—Musical Record.

"Most original and encouragingly helpful."—J. H. Thomas, Esq., L.R.A.M. AND MANY OTHERS. 2*s.* 6*d.*

"MASTERY OF THE KEYBOARD"

SIGHT-READING LESSONS

COMPLETE COURSE OF SIX POSTAL LESSONS

The Times: "Deals with the subject systematically from the first stage."

Music: "Goes fully and thoroughly into his subject from every possible standpoint. Cannot fail to be of service."

A PUPIL FROM CHINA WRITES: "My master is a gifted pianist, a minor genius, but he has not the least idea how he sight-reads, and cannot explain."

AFTER SECOND LESSON: "Your course has so far quite revolutionised my playing, and even now I am finding pieces far easier to sight-read."

GEORGE DENHAM, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.,
41, AVONDALE ROAD, S. CROYDON,
and WEEKES'S STUDIOS, 14, HANOVER ST., W.1
('Phone: Croydon 2703)

"SIMPLEXA" FINGER TRAINER

(Registered No. 692810)

FOR ALL INSTRUMENTALISTS

A simple and very effective appliance for giving strength and flexibility to the fingers.
Recommended by Editor of the Musical Times.

IMPROVED MODEL
Price 2*s.* 6*d.*; postage and packing, 3*d.*

BYEWAYS, CLIFF ROAD, SEABROOK, HYTHE, KENT

PIANO REPAIRS. "WIGMORE HALL FINISH

denotes a standard not obtainable elsewhere.
THE MOST HIGHLY SKILLED WORKMANSHIP.
THE FINEST MATERIALS (regardless of cost).
PERFECT SATISFACTION.

WIGMORE HALL AND PIANO GALLERIES, 32-40, Wigmore Street, W.1

LYRICS WANTED.—Sentimental, Humorous &c., Send MSS.—LYRICS FOR SALE. Send stamp for Lists. The Lyric Agency, 151, Nevill Road, London, N.16.

THE LONDON ORATORIO AND CONCERT ASSOCIATION.

FOUNDED 1912.

THE ASSOCIATION exists for the purpose of bringing Secretaries of CHORAL SOCIETIES, OPERATIC AND MUSICAL SOCIETIES, ETC., into direct communication with capable and reliable Artists, without the intervention of an agent, and is based on the co-operation of its members. Choral Societies engaging a quartet of soloists for any work, can have the advantage of preliminary rehearsal of the principals by the musical director.

Musical Director: MR. HUBERT BATH.

SOME APPRECIATIONS OF THE WORK OF THE ASSOCIATION.

BIRMINGHAM:

'My Committee were highly pleased with the Artists engaged at the Town Hall for October last, the audience being delighted with their singing."—J. J. SMITH, Sec., Postmen's Federation.

RAMSGATE:

"All the audience present at my Annual Concert for the relief of the Poor were delighted with the Artists."—HIS EXCELLENCY THE COUNT RIVAROLA, Hon. Organizer.

DUNSTABLE:

"Everyone was delighted with Soloists ['Holy City'], and I hasten to recommend them to any Choir or Choral Society."—ARTHUR E. BUNKER, Conductor, Wesleyan Choir.

For Prospectus and List of Artists, address Secretary,

26, GUILFORD STREET, RUSSELL SQUARE, LONDON, W.C.1.

THE TECHNIQUER

A BOON TO ALL INSTRUMENTALISTS

Invented and Patented by MR. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac.

Copy of Testimonial from the renowned organist, ARTHUR MEALE, ESQ.

"Westminster Central Hall, June 1, 1928.

"I have used the 'Techniquer' for a great number of years. It is the best means of keeping the fingers supple that I know of. Specially, lately, during convalescence, has it been invaluable, when not being able to endure the fatigue and strain of tonal practice, I have been able to use it for the preservation of finger and wrist suppleness."

Send for list of testimonials and full particulars post free

"Hand Development," with 16 Photos, 1*s.* 6*d.*

Secretary: MISS F. J. FITCH, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M.

21, Boundary Road, N.W.8. 'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

YOUNG SINGERS

Their Voice Cultivation and Preservation.

A concise, comprehensive, up-to-date guide to all engaged in teaching voice-production, enunciation, and singing to boys and girls

By JAMES BATES

To be obtained from:—

MESSRS. STAINER & BELL, 58, Berners Street, London, W.1.

Price One Shilling and Twopence, post free.

PAPER WORK BY MUS. B., F.R.C.O.

OVER 1,100 SPECIMEN WORKINGS

"Your lessons and ideas splendid."

"Your excellent models make my attempts look cold."

SUCCESSES (with those for January, 1928) include 3 F.R.C.O. (1 for Jan., 1928). 3 A.R.C.O. 2 L.R.A.M.

2*s.* 6*d.* per lesson and postage.

"E. B.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

CRAMER

MAGNIFICENT 1928 LATEST MODELS

| | |
|---|---|
| BABY GRAND ... | 120 Gns. |
| UPRIGHT GRAND | 65 Gns. |
| UPRIGHT PLAYER | 103 Gns. |

FULL SCALE
LATEST DEVICES

Write for our very generous Hire-Purchase Terms.

J. B. CRAMER & CO., Ltd.,
139 NEW BOND ST., W.1.
46 MOORGATE, E.C.2.
128/130 KENSINGTON HIGH STREET, W.8

FERD. KUECHLER'S

(Teacher at the Leipsic Conservatory)

COURSE of VIOLIN INSTRUCTION

is a

TRIUMPH

of practical teaching

TO KNOW IT IS TO RECOMMEND IT

Send for a specimen copy from the publishers, or ask your music-seller to let you have one on approval.

HUG & Co.

MUSIC PUBLISHERS.
LEIPSIC

DEGREES IN MUSIC

Oxford Preliminary Arts, and Durham Matriculation, Also B.A. and B.Sc.

EXPERT TUITION BY CORRESPONDENCE.

For terms, testimonials, &c., address,
Mr. J. CHARLESTON, B.A.,
14, ELSHAM ROAD, KENSINGTON, W.14.

JUST PUBLISHED.

FESTAL OFFERTORIUM

FOR ORGAN

BY

PERCY E. FLETCHER.

Price Two Shillings.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

No. 99.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS AND EDUCATIONAL SERIES.

PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT

BY

WELTON HICKIN

PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS.

Paper Boards, Five Shillings.

London: NOVELLO & COMPANY, Limited.

No. 103.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS AND EDUCATIONAL SERIES.

THE ART OF PIANOFORTE PRACTISING

WITH AN APPENDIX ON

LEGATO-PEDALLING

BY

C. EGERTON LOWE.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

MR. F. C. FIELD-HYDE

Will be in London for Lessons, Advice, or Final Coaching previous to the September Examinations for the L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Diplomas, &c.

Of the last fifty teachers who have taken these Diplomas under Mr. FIELD-HYDE'S personal tuition, forty-two passed the practical section at first sitting.

A Lecture-Training Course will be commenced next term in direct preparation for the Professional Examinations for Teachers of Singing.

FOR DETAILS, ADDRESS:

SECRETARY, FIELD-HYDE VOCAL SCHOOL

43, Upper George St., Bryanston Square, London, W.1.

STEINWAY STUDIOS

COMFORTABLY FURNISHED
ELECTRIC LIGHT
CENTRAL HEATING
TELEPHONE LIFT
NEW STEINWAY PIANOS

Full particulars from

STEINWAY & SONS
THE NEW STEINWAY HALL,
1 & 2, GEORGE ST., CONDUIT ST., LONDON, W.1.
'PHONE: MAYFAIR 6641-5.

PIANOS

BY

Bechstein, Bord, Schiedmayer,
Chappell, Rogers, Gors, & Kallmann

and other celebrated makers

The Profession most cordially invited to inspect our large and varied stock of New and Second-hand Pianos. Cash, Hire, or Hire-purchase. Pianos taken in exchange.

Apply for lists:

CHAS. STILES & CO.
74-76, SOUTHAMPTON ROW
LONDON, W.C.1.
'Phone: MUSEUM 0439.

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED

LYRICS SET TO MUSIC, MELODIES HARMONIZED, MUSIC TRANSPOSED AND COPIED, BAND PARTS WRITTEN, MSS. PREPARED FOR PUBLICATION BY A MASTER HAND, ACCOMPANIMENTS OF DISTINCTION WRITTEN TO SONGS.

For terms, write, A. CARRINGTON BRIGGS, Glenholme, Hessle High Road, Hull, Yorks.

MODERN CORR. COLLEGE

Principal: Arthur McAlister, B.A. Cantab.

MATRIC. — Durham: London: Dublin. Successes ... 157.

MUS. BAC. — The Guarantee Course for the complete Degree has become very popular. For ONE FEE, which can be paid by Monthly Instalments, Tuition is given until the Degree is gained. If the Course is interrupted the student is under no liability.

A.R.C.O., F.R.C.O. — For ONE FEE Tuition is given until both Diplomas are gained. The Courses include Form, Musical History, Voice Culture. F.R.C.O.—Failed 7 times. A student after failing 7 times joined the M.C.C., and he was then successful. A.R.C.O.—A student after failing 4 times joined the M.C.C. and passed after a course of ten lessons.

A. MUS. T.C.L. — This is entirely Theoretical, and forms an excellent preliminary to Mus. Bac. One of our Students gained an average of 82% at a recent Exam. Mus. T.C.L.—A student of the M.C.C. gained 95% Orchestration, and then passed 1st Mus. Bac. at the FIRST ATTEMPT.

A.T.C.L. — Art of Teaching ... ... ... ... ... ... 93%

L.R.A.M. / A.R.C.M. (Pf.) — The Course for L.R.A.M. includes Form: Art of Teaching: Phrasing: Touch: Fingering: Pedalling. A student writes: "I gained 81% for Form and Art of Teaching. At a previous Exam. (under other tuition) I gained 66%." A.R.C.M. writes: "I obtained 123 out of 126 for Special Paperwork."

A.R.C.M. — (Musical Appreciation.) 4. All at first ATTEMPT.

L.R.A.M. — (Singing.) "I was complimented by the Examiners for my paper on Vocal Physiology."

A.R.C.M. — (Singing.) "Your Course may be summed up in one word, MODERN."

L.R.A.M. — (Voice Culture and Class Singing.) "The questions were quite easy to answer owing to your suggestions and training generally."

TUITION IN SINGLE SUBJECTS. — Harmony: Orchestration: Fugue: Art of Teaching: Composition: Form: Counterpoint: Essay: History.

REVISION COURSES. — ALL EXAMINATIONS.

PLEASE STATE EXAM. OR SUBJECT.

MODERN CORR. COLLEGE

SHERWIN ROAD, NOTTINGHAM.

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES

MISS LYDIA JOHN
(A.R.A.M., L.R.A.M.), CONTRALTO.
Lecture-Recitals of Folk-Songs, Elizabethan Songs, &c.
Professor of Voice-Production and Singing.
Pupils prepared for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c., Scholarships and Festivals.
28, ALBION ROAD, LONDON, N.W.6.
Lessons given at above address or West-End Studio, Cricklewood Conservatoire of Music, N.W.2; and Highbury Conservatoire, N.5, &c. Primrose 3869.

HAROLD KNOWLTON
TENOR.
Soloist, St. Paul's Cathedral.
Shirley, Park Road, Crouch End, N.8. Mountview 5289.

VERNON HARRISS
L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Gold Medalist. BASS.
Oratorio, Concerts. Vocal Coach and Adjudicator.
Senior Music Master, Downside School, near Bath.

VOICE-PRODUCTION AND SINGING.
ALBERT GARCIA
CARRIES ON THE TRADITIONS OF HIS GRANDFATHER, THE LATE MANUEL GARCIA.
Studio: 59, QUEEN'S ROAD, N.W.8.

MISS MARY LINDSAY
L.R.A.M. (Teacher's Diploma).
Gives lessons in Voice Production and Singing.
Moderate Terms.
26, Onslow Square, S.W.7. Tel.: Kensington 3627.

MISS PITT SOPER F.R.A.M.
Professor of Singing, Royal Academy of Music, London.
Prepares Candidates for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Examinations (Teachers and Performers).
For particulars, apply Wigmore Hall Studios.

MISS MARY WILSON, F.R.A.M.
Professor of Singing at the Royal Academy of Music, London,
Receives pupils for Voice Production and Singing. Prepares candidates for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Diplomas as Teacher or Performer. Also gives SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS to candidates entering for the L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Singing Teachers' Diplomas.
Particulars on application.
Address: 10, Harley Street, London, W.1. Phone: Langham 3909.

MR. J. C. BRYDSON, Mus.B.,
SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE TUITION.
Fees from 10s. 6d. for 10 lessons, according to Course.
"Balcary," KEGWORTH, near Derby.

ARTHUR MANGELSDORFF
SOLO PIANIST
RUSSIAN MUSIC
CONCERTS AND RECITALS
TALKS AT THE PIANO
For terms, apply to
ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

E. SIMS-HILDITCH
LECTURER AND ADJUDICATOR
Address, 37 Victoria Street, Crewe.

YOUNG MUS. DOC.
COACHES BY CORRESPONDENCE.
ALL branches of Music, including Paper Work for Professional and Higher Examinations.
Send stamped, addressed envelope and specimen of work for FREE LESSON.
Fees from 2s. each Lesson.
"H. K.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING
Mus. Doc., Lond., L.R.A.M.
CORRESPONDENCE COACHING for EXAMINATIONS.
Special Courses as follows:—
(1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work
(2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work
(3.) Touch, and Technique (for Pianoforte Diplomas)
(4.) Trinity College Diplomas
(5.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O.
(6.) Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc. (London and Durham)
(7.) Separate Subjects
NUMEROUS SUCCESSES
Address: Dr. Norman Sprankling, 46, Clarendon Road, Redland, Bristol. Telephone: Bristol 3033.

GEORGE A. ARMSTRONG, Mus. Bac., A.R.M.C.M., L.Mus. T.C.L. Correspondence Lessons in all subjects. Preparation for diplomas. 131, Warbreck Drive, Blackpool, N.S.

CAPTAIN PERCY BAKER, M.C., F.R.C.O., L. Mus. T.C.L. (Author of "Compendof Musical Knowledge," "Studies in History and Form," &c.). Specialist in Tuition by post for T.C.L. and R.C.O. Essay Models, Sight-Reading Courses, Study Aids, 9d. Studies in Modulation, 3s.
Send for interesting Pamphlets on Methods.
Hazeldene, Tewkesbury.

MR. J. PERCY BAKER, Mus. B. Dunelm., F.R.A.M., gives Postal Tuition and prepares for Examinations. Personal Lessons (Pianoforte and Theory), at 14, Hanover Street, W.1. Address, 12, Longley Road, Tooting Graveney, S.W.17.

MISS J. BLAKE, A.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. (Teacher of Singing), prepares pupils L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Exams., as Teacher or Performer. Highest recommendations. Studio, 139, New Bond Street, W.1.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:—
(1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work.
(2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work.
(3.) Interesting Courses of Study in Rudiments, Harmony, Form, &c.
L.R.A.M. Exams. 1910-28... 334 Correspondence Pupils successful.
A.R.C.M. Exams. 1914-28... 90 " " "
Mr. E. H. BIBBY, Mus.Bac., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Waterloo Buildings, Piccadilly, Manchester.

In response to many requests, Mr. BIBBY begs to announce that he has prepared the following additional Correspondence Courses:
(1.) The "Mus. Bac." Degree.
(2.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Paper Work.
(3.) A.T.C.L. and L.T.C.L. Paper Work. (25 Successes.)
(4.) The Associated Board Examinations in Rudiments, Harmony, and Counterpoint. (21 Successes.)
(Address as above.)

MR. BIBBY also gives PERSONAL Lessons in Manchester. Complete Preparation (Practical and Paper Work) for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L., &c. Address as above.

POSTAL TUITION by F.R.C.O., F.T.C.L. (Registered Teacher). Any Exam. One guinea ten lessons. Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, &c. Courses in History, Choir-Training, Aural Tests, Analysis, R.C.O. exams. Recent successes, F.R.C.O., July, 1927; A.R.C.O., January, 1928. Address: BM/JRMB, London, W.C.1.

CORRESPONDENCE COURSE.—Mr. F. Cunningham Woods, late Organist and Music Master at Highgate School, N.6, prepares candidates for the theoretical part of various examinations. Terms on application. Address: Pemberton, Ranelagh Grove, St. Peters-in-Thanet, Broadstairs.

ALLAN BROWN, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., L. Mus. T.C.L. (Organist and Musical Director, Kingsway Hall, 298, Balham High Road, S.W.17. Telephone: Battersea 0916.

Special preparation for F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O. Also L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. ORGAN EXAMINATIONS.

SINGLE LESSONS and PRACTICE on facsimile R.C.O. inst. Also large four-manual organ. Pieces registered and phrased.

RECENT SUCCESSES IN ORGAN WORK:

| | |
|---|---|
| 1 L.R.A.M., Dec., 1919. | 3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1921. |
| 1 A.R.C.M., April, 1920. | 1 A.R.C.O., July, 1921. |
| 1 L.R.A.M., April, 1924. | 3 A.R.C.O., July, 1922. |
| 1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1922. | 1 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1923. |
| 1 F.R.C.O., July, 1922. | 4 A.R.C.O., July, 1923. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1923. | 1 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1924. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1923. | 3 A.R.C.O., July, 1924. |
| 2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1925. | 3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1925. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1925. | 5 A.R.C.O., July, 1925. |
| 1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1926. | 3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1926. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., July, 1926. | 4 A.R.C.O., July, 1926. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1927. | 4 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1927. |
| 2 F.R.C.O., July, 1927. | 4 A.R.C.O., July, 1927. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1928. | 5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1928. |

"Hints for R.C.O. Candidates" to be obtained from the Publishers, Reid Bros., 26, Eastcastle Street, Oxford Circus, W.1. 2/8 post free.

MR. AMBROSE COVIELLO, F.R.A.M., is arranging times for Revision Courses, Coaching, and Consultation Lessons throughout August and early September. The time available will be strictly limited, and applicants are requested to write early. Address, Mr. Ambrose Coviello, Wigmore Hall Studios, Wigmore Street, London, W.1.

L. R.A.M., A.R.C.M., PIANOFORTE.—Special Coaching by Arthur Ellershaw, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

FREDERICK GREEN, Mus. B., F.R.C.O., &c. Voice Specialist, Vocal Coach, and Adjudicator. Prep. for A.R.C.M. and L.R.A.M. 1, Newington, Liverpool.

FREDERICK C. HAGGIS, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., L.T.C.L., specialises in VOICE-TRAINING and SINGING. Pupils are offered, in addition to private tuition, exceptional advantages in Class-Singing, for the further study of Sight-Singing, Ear-Training, and Interpretation. Address: 14, Hanover St., W.1.

DR. CUTHBERT HARRIS, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE TUITION. 413 Successes in Mus. D., Mus. B., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.O., and the paper-work requirements for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Diplomas in pianoforte playing. For terms, &c., apply to 58, Avondale Road, Gorleston-on-Sea.

DR. CHASTEY HECTOR, D. Mus. Oxon., 1922, L.R.A.M., instructs Candidates personally or by post, for Degrees and Diplomas in Music. "The Downs," Old Shoreham Road, Hove, Sussex.

DR. CHASTEY HECTOR, Organist and Director of the choir, Brighton Parish Church, has a vacancy for an ARTICLED PUPIL. Good experience in choir-training and preparation for R.C.O. exams. Special terms to one able to assist with Services. Address as above.

MISS H. HEALE COACHES for all EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC (at private residence or at West-End Studio), in Pianoforte, Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, Form, Orchestration, "Teaching," Modulation, Transposition, &c. For Terms, &c., apply, Dunraven House, 41, Albert Bridge Road, S.W.11.

HERBERT HODGE, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., Organist and Choirmaster, St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, London, has, since 1908, made a speciality of coaching Candidates for the Organ Playing Examinations of the Royal College of Organists, and can arrange a private course of instruction (or single lessons) to organists visiting London.

SUCCESSES IN ORGAN PLAYING SINCE 1910:

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1910 | ... | 8 | 1919 | ... | 11 |
| 1911 | ... | 10 | 1920 | ... | 7 |
| 1912 | ... | 20 | 1921 | ... | 9 |
| 1913 | ... | 18 | 1922 | ... | 15 |
| 1914 | ... | 25 | 1023 | ... | 15 |
| 1915 | ... | 25 | 1924 | ... | 7 |
| 1916 | ... | 18 | 1925 | ... | 14 |
| 1917 | ... | 2 | 1926 | ... | 11 |
| 1918 | ... | 3 | 1927 | ... | 12 |

5, Streatham Place, S.W.2. Telephone: Streatham 2195.

DR. A. G. IGGULDEN, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE COACHING. Latest Successes: Durham, Sept., 1927, Mus. Doc., 3 Final Mus. Bac., and three 1st Mus. Bac. passes. Also in 1927—4 Mus. Doc. and 3 Mus. Bac. Exs., after prelim. course in composition. 200 successes at Durham alone, besides R.C.O. Diplomas. The Durdans, Reigate.

DR. ORLANDO A. MANSFIELD, Mus. Doc., University of Toronto; F.R.C.O., F.A.G.O., &c., Sirsa House, Cheltenham. Correspondence Lessons. Revision of MSS. Scoring, editing, and arranging. Examination pieces analysed and annotated.

MISS F. HELENA MARKS, Author of "The Sonata: Its Form and Meaning" prepares for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and all other examinations, Pianoforte, Harmony, "Form and Teaching," &c. Personal or Correspondence Lessons in all Paper-Work subjects, including those for L.R.A.M., "Aural Training and Sight-Singing," and A.R.C.M. in "The Teaching of Musical Appreciation," &c. Pupils received and visited for the Pianoforte. Many recent successes L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c.
10, Matheson Road, London, W.14.

DR. H. H. L. MIDDLETON, Mus. Doc., F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Specialist in Pianoforte Playing, Touch, Technique, and Interpretation. Thirty years' experience in preparing for examinations. More than 1,000 of Dr. Middleton's pupils have gained Degrees and Diplomas. Address: Weekes' Studios, 14, Hanover Street, W.1.

MR. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M. (Double Dip. Singing and Piano), L.R.A.M., Class A, Performer and Teacher.
Prof. Singing, G.S.M., 1905-1915. Special Lect. on Musical Appreciation to L.C.C.
"Recit. and its Rendering," 1s. 6d. "Vade Mecum for Singers." 6d.
Preparation for all Exams. by Post and Personal Lessons.
Special Courses of Papers: Singing, Piano, Touch, Musical Appreciation, &c.
Nearly 1,000 Successes for Degrees and Diplomas.
Send for Prospectus,
21, Boundary Road, N.W.8. 'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

DR. PERCY WOOD, Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O. SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:
(1) Elementary Harmony and Counterpoint.
(2) F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O.
(3) A.R.C.M. (Theory of Music).
(4) Mus. Bac. Degree.
Several recent successes in all these examinations.
R.C.O. EXAMINER says: "Your system is undoubtedly an excellent one."
SUCCESS GUARANTEED—given any pupils with the requisite musical ability for the examination in view.
328 A.R.C.O. Successes since 1909.
195 F.R.C.O. " " "
RECENT SUCCESSES IN PAPER WORK:

| | |
|---|---|
| 2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1918. | 2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1918. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., July, 1918. | 2 A.R.C.O., July, 1918. |
| 1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1919. | 3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1919. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1919. | 3 A.R.C.O., July, 1919. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1920. | 10 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1920. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1920. | 6 A.R.C.O., July, 1920. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1921. | 7 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1921. |
| 6 F.R.C.O., July, 1921. | 8 A.R.C.O., July, 1921. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1922. | 5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1922. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., July, 1922. | 5 A.R.C.O., July, 1922. |
| 8 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1923. | 6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1923. |
| 7 F.R.C.O., July, 1923. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1923. |
| 7 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1924. | 9 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1924. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1924. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1924. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1925. | 8 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1925. |
| 7 F.R.C.O., July, 1925. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1925. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1926. | 6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1926. |
| 6 F.R.C.O., July, 1926. | 6 A.R.C.O., July, 1926. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1927. | 12 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1927. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1927. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1927. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1928. | 12 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1928. |
| 6 F.R.C.O., July, 1928. | 9 A.R.C.O., July, 1928. |

"Tralee," Warwick Road, Cliftonville, Margate.

F.R.C.O. AND A.R.C.O. PAPER WORK

A SPECIAL COURSE OF CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS for the January, 1929, F.R.C.O., and A.R.C.O. Examinations is now commencing. The chief reason why this system of tuition is so successful is that pupils are taught how to work. Experience has proved that a large number of candidates fail because they do not reach a high enough standard in their work, which is often the result of training on wrong lines. Now in this system of tuition, pupils are taught to produce work which is above the standard required by the examiners.

F.R.C.O. pupils are trained to work on a definite plan in such tests as the String Quartet, Part-Song, Solo, so as to acquire speed, which is a most vital factor, especially in the afternoon, when so many candidates come to grief.

Hints on how to study the score selected for the January examination as well as a complete analysis (which will give answers to likely questions) will be sent to all pupils.

A.R.C.O. pupils receive special help with Free Counterpoint, Pianoforte Accompaniment, and Four-Part Harmony. Questions on Choir-Training, Musical History, and Musical Form are included in the lessons.

The whole aim of this method is to teach the principles which underlie all highly artistic music, and also the application of these principles to examination work, so that a pupil who is thus equipped is enabled not only to pass the F.R.C.O. or A.R.C.O. examination, as the case may be, but also to develop to the utmost the musical ability with which he is endowed.

DR. PERCY WOOD, Mus. Doc. OXON., F.R.C.O.,
"TRALEE," WARWICK ROAD, CLIFTONVILLE, MARGATE.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L. Exams. Correspondence lessons in Harmony, Form, Teaching, &c. 29 pupils' successes Moderate terms. Arthur W. Morrison, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c. 39, Clarendon Road, Fulwood, Sheffield.

W. J. FREDERICK PUGH, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., prepares for L.R.A.M. (Aural Culture and Voice Culture, Diplomas), A.R.C.M. (Appreciation Diploma). Recent Successes. 34, Wilmington Avenue, Chiswick, W.4. Chiswick 3267.

DR. A. E. TAYLOR. PUPIL GAINED STILLIE Bursary for Cpt.; Gold Medal for Cpt., Ass. Board; Gold Medal for Har., Ass. Board; C. C. Scholarship; A.R.C.O., A.T.C.L., Mus. B. Compositions revised and accompaniments written. Portland Place, Lancaster.

HARRY VERYARD, FIVE-FOUR HARMONY. Every note, every chord; for every instrument. Modernised Music all on one line. Harmonically numbered Wonder Sheet, 1s. 173, Martindale Road, Hounslow.

W. G. WEBBER, F.R.C.O. Recitalist, &c. Preparation for Exams. Organ lessons given on new four-manual Willis. Address, Christ Church, Westminster Bridge Road, London, S.E.1.

CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS (all music Exams.) by recognised and well-qualified Professor. 1s. 6d. per lesson, and postage. Stamp for specimen. Composers advised and assisted. "W. H. D.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

POSTAL LESSONS.—All Music Exams.; well-qualified teacher. 1s. 6d. per lesson and postage. Stamp for specimen. Composers advised. "W. H. D.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

TO COMPOSERS.—Complete and systematic course, by correspondence, in Military Band Instrumentation. Write, Major Charles Hoby, M.B.E., Mus. Doc., Oxon., 80, Warwick Gardens, London, W.14.

FREE TUITION for one month and then reduced fees to promising voice. Pure Italian method. West-End Studio. Write, "Audition," Box 49, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ACCOMPANIST (lady) Experienced.—Good sight-reader. Requires Permanent engagement with vocalist or instrumentalist. "M. M.," 16, Haydon Park Road, Wimbledon, S.W.19.

SALISBURY CATHEDRAL.

There is a VACANCY for an ALTO LAY-VICAR; candidates must be members of the Church of England; age preferably not more than 35. Applications, enclosing copies of three testimonials, should be sent to the Chapter Clerk, Bishop's Walk. The Close, Salisbury.

TENOR and ALTO WANTED.—All Saints', Devonshire Road, S. Lambeth, in return for Lessons in Singing, Piano, or Organ. "W. A.," 21, Thurlestone Road, S.E.27.

TENOR SOLOIST WANTED for St. Gabriel's, Pimlico. £22. Communicant. Good reader essential. Letter only to E. E. Douglas-Smith, 39, Gauden Road, Clapham, S.W.4.

EXPERIENCED ORGANIST and CHOIR-TRAINER, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., can DEPUTISE August and, September. Good organ essential. Box 5, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, London, W.1.

ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER.—Church of England, retired from Calcutta, India, ex-Organist and Choirmaster, St. Paul's Cathedral, Calcutta, seeks similar position in Church of England or Nonconformist Church, in or near London. Twenty years' experience men and boys' choirs, also mixed choirs. Due London, 15th August. Apply, "W. F. M., Jun.," 79, Holmewood Gardens, Brixton Hill, London, S.W.2.

ORGANIST-CHOIRMASTER of important Church DESIRES SIMILAR POSITION in Colonies. Experienced choir trainer: C. of E. Excellent testimonials, F.R.C.O. Apply, Box No. 1, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour St., W.1.

ORGANIST-CHOIRMASTER DESIRES RESPONSIBLE POSITION in England or the Colonies. At present holds one of the most important positions in the Episcopal Church of America, but desires to return to the British Flag. Has established position with a choir of ninety voices; is recitalist of note, and also head of endowed choir school. Is British born, and gained early experience in England. Married, with family. Present salary $4,000 per annum. Can offer high clerical and lay testimonials as to integrity and musical standing. Allow at least six weeks for a reply. Box 44, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER WANTED for prominent Church in Eastern Canada. Salary, £240. Good field for teaching, and recitals; First-class musician could make about £800 with this appointment. Apply, Box No. 3, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER WANTED at St. Matthew's Church, Sydenham. Stipend, £40. Apply, by letter only, to Priest-in-Charge.

PROFESSIONAL ORGANIST AVAILABLE on WEEK-DAYS during August for weddings, funerals, &c. Also other times possible by arrangement. Write, BM/XFAN, London, W.C.1.

PUPIL-ASSISTANT WANTED.—London Free Church. Apply, "Organist, D. W. H.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

WANTED.—ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER for the Glenorchy Congregational Church, Exmouth, Devon. £50 per annum. Apply, A. R. Walker, 40, Chapel Street, Exmouth.

STUDENT coming to LONDON UNIVERSITY WANTS POST as ORGANIST or ORGANIST-CHOIRMASTER in September. Four years' experience in Parish Church. Lee, 19, Henry Street, Keighley.

ORGANISTS WANTED to introduce new 40-Stop, three-Manual Pneumatic Organ of the best description. Detached Oak console. "F.R.C.O.," 4, Wellington Gdns., Hastings.

ORGAN CLASS (Saturdays, 2 p.m.)

(See M.T. for July.)

New term commences September 8th, 1928. Apply at once, to "R. C. M.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1. Number limited.

ORGAN PRACTICE.—1s. 4d. an hour (pupils, 9d.). Hydraulic-blown, two-manual and pedal organ, at the Fulham School of Music, 2, Edgarley Terrace, S.W.6.

ORGAN LESSONS at ST. STEPHEN'S WALBROOK, E.C.4. GEORGE METZLER, F.R.C.O. Tel.: Putney 4208.

CONDUCTOR (experienced) will GIVE SERVICES to any Choral, Orchestral, or Operatic Society London or Provinces. Box 38, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

TO PROFESSORS OF SINGING.—Excellent Connection FOR DISPOSAL. Could recommend for valuable choir appointments. Full particulars, Box No. 4, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

FOR SALE.—TWO-MANUAL REED ORGAN (with pedals), by Karn. 10 Stops, 6 sets of reeds: excellent case, in good condition. "R. G.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

FOR SALE.—First-class Two-Manual PEDAL ORGAN. Swell and Great. 15 Speaking Stops. Two 16-ft., one 8-ft. on Pedal. Five couplers. Built on pneumatic system; electric motor. Cost £900. Accept £600. Splendid condition, suitable for Chapel. Built by Taylor, Leicester. Apply Box 41, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGAN FOR SALE.—Two Manuals and Pedal, 9 speaking stops; built under the direction of the late Mr. R. H. M. Bosanquet, F.R.S., of Rock, author of the article Organ in Encyclopædia Britannica. Good condition; front pipes of pure tin. Suitable for small church. Apply, Estate Office, Rock, Alnwick, Northumberland.

ORGANS (New and Second-hand) for SALE.—Electric and pneumatic action up-to-date. Built or reconstructed. Bedwell & Son, The Cambridge Organ Works, Cambridge.

TWO-MANUAL PEDAL ORGAN FOR SALE.—15 speaking Stops. Hand or foot blown. Fine walnut case. Suit Mission Hall, or private house. £75. Apply, Box No. 2, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

SMALL PIPE ORGAN FOR SALE.—Now in Lilburn Tower, Northumberland. One-manual, six Stops, handsome Oak case. Good condition. Suitable for small Church. Also a HARMONIUM, in good condition. Apply, Lilburn Estate Office, Alnwick.

FOR SALE.—PIANO PEDALS. Norman & Beard pneumatic. In good condition. Complete with stool. £10, or nearest. Cartwright, 30, Birmingham St., Willenhall, Staffs.

FOR SALE.—ORGAN PEDALS for PIANO (Norman & Beard). R.C.O. scale. Pneumatic action. Splendid condition. Forman, 55, Southfield Road, Chiswick, W.4.

FOR SALE.—VIRGIL CLAVIER. BARGAIN. 4, Victoria Crescent, Chelmsford.

MAX ADOLF BABY GRAND.—AS NEW, £50. Write, Walton, 88, Fellows Road, N.W.3.

CELLO FOR SALE, with bow, and water-proof case. A beautiful-toned instrument. A bargain at 18 guineas. H. Hooper, 40, Baker Street, W.1.

BUSINESS FOR SALE.—Old-established Pianoforte and Music business in West of England, with good connection. Apply, Mann, Judd, Gordon & Co., 8, Frederick's Place, E.C.2.

GLASGOW.—TEACHING CONNECTION (Pianoforte) FOR SALE: excellent growing nucleus, southern suburb; 15 pupils. £4 weekly. Address offers, "BM/ZHKD," London, W.C.1.

AUTHORS and COMPOSERS.—SONGS and MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED, PRINTED, and PUBLISHED on a Royalty basis. We compose Music to Lyrics if desired. Send MSS. (words or music) to The Carlton Publications, 251, Nevill Road, London, N.16.

MUSIC DUPLICATING.—All kinds, any number; perfect copies. Specimens and prices on application to E. Herrick, at 37, Amherst Road, West Ealing, W.

TO A.R.C.O. CANDIDATES. M.S.: 24 Hymn Tunes for Transposition, 2s. 6d.; 24 Accompaniment Tests, 5s., or 2s. 6d. for 12. Modelled on latest Paper. Successful Paper work coaching undertaken. F.R.C.O./L., c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

A TREATISE ON CONDUCTING.

12,000 WORDS. ILLUSTRATED METHOD. 2s. 6d. Post free; Abroad, 3s. Pre-eminent Technique. It will thoroughly prepare you for the position of "Conductor." M. T. Cooper, M.D., 23, Beech Avenue, Blackpool.

WANTED.—HUMOROUS ORIGINAL WORDS for Songs (not copyright). Miss Waring, Rodborough Rectory, Stroud, Glos.

THE LIMITATIONS OF MUSIC

A STUDY IN ÆSTHETICS

By ERIC BLOM

6s. net.

The Music Bulletin: "This study in æsthetics is one of the most absorbing books on music I have read for many months . . . . I recommend Mr. Blom's study to all who enjoy the kind of philosophy which is the result of wide experience, human instincts, and brave thinking."

MACMILLAN & Co., LTD., LONDON, W.C.2.

JUST PUBLISHED.

GOD WITHIN

MOTET

FOR CHORUS, ORCHESTRA, AND ORGAN

Composed for the 274th Festival of the Sons of the Clergy

BY

A. HERBERT BREWER

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

MADGE

A CAMP-FIRE PLAY

BY

KITTY BARNE

INTRODUCING

FOLK-SONGS, SUNG AND ACTED

Price One Shilling.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

Specially composed for the Blackpool Musical Festival, 1928.

THE BLESSED DAMOZEL

BY

D. G. ROSSETTI

SET TO MUSIC FOR FEMALE VOICES

BY

JULIUS HARRISON

Price, One Shilling and Sixpence

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

JUST PUBLISHED

THREE SHORT PIECES FOR ORGAN

No. 1. Andante con moto in D.
No. 2. Andantino in A minor.
No. 3. Larghetto con espressione in A flat.

By

BASIL HARWOOD

Op. 45.

(No. 20, Original Compositions for the Organ)

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

SEVENTEEN SONGS

COMPOSED BY

HENRY PURCELL.

Edited and arranged, with accompaniment for the Pianoforte, by

ARTHUR SOMERVELL.

Price Four Shillings

CONTENTS.

A PASTORAL ELEGY ON THE DEATH OF MR. JOHN PLAYFORD.
AH! CRUEL NYMPH.
AH! HOW PLEASANT.
AH! WHAT PAINS.
AN ELEGY ON THE DEATH OF MATTHEW LOCKE.
ANACREON'S DEFEAT.
CEASE, O MY SAD SOUL.
HOW DELIGHTFUL 'S THE LIFE.
I FAIN WOULD BE FREE.
IF MUSIC BE THE FOOD OF LOVE (2nd Version).
LET EACH GALLANT HEART.
LOVE ARMS HIMSELF.
OLINDA.
ON THE BROW OF RICHMOND HILL.
SAWNEY IS A BONNY LAD.
THE FATAL HOUR COMES ON.
THE QUEEN'S EPICEDIUM (ELEGY ON THE DEATH OF QUEEN MARY. 1695).

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

NATIONAL PIANO PLAYING CONTEST

ORGANIZED BY THE

Daily Express

Seventy-two British Pianos as Prizes

THE aim of the Daily Express in promoting this contest is to encourage the art of piano playing. It believes that our musical welfare depends in large measure upon our cultivation of that art. It desires therefore to stimulate, by means of the incentives it is offering, interest in piano-performance.

Piano-music has been the delight of many generations of music-lovers. But nowadays, the great provision of the ready-made music of mechanical instruments is tempting some people to regard piano-playing skill as an accomplishment scarcely worth the task of acquiring. That is an erroneous idea. Gramophone, player-piano, and wireless music is assured of popularity. But there will always be hosts of people who know that it is better to make their music than to have it made for them. The great claim of the piano is that it calls for our own effort—the thought of our own brains, the play of our own imaginations, the skill of our own hands.

The best function of the mechanical instruments is that of setting standards of performance—as has been done in the case of this contest by gramophone records of the test-pieces made by a well-known pianist.

Particulars and Conditions

How to enter and what to do

The National Piano Playing Contest is open to every man, woman, and child (from 8 years of age) of British Nationality. An entry form should be filled in and despatched at once with the entrance fee of 2*s.* 6*d.* to The Organizer, National Piano Playing Contest, Daily Express, 23, St. Bride Street, London, E.C 4.

The final date for receipt of entries will be announced in the Daily Express.

Four Grades

Entrants will be divided into four grades as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Grade A | 18 years of age and over. |
| Grade B | 15, 16, and 17 years of age. |
| Grade C | 12, 13, and 14 years of age. |
| Grade D | 8, 9, 10, and 11 years of age. |

For the purposes of this contest, the grade of a competitor shall be determined by his or her age on November 1st, 1928.

Test-Pieces

Test-pieces have been written specially for each grade. The contest will be based entirely on the set test-pieces, which are as follows:

Grade A

| | |
|---|---|
| "Reverie" ... ... ... ... | York Bowen |
| "Rondo" ... ... ... ... | John Ireland |
| "Primrose Mount" ... ... | George Dyson |

Grade B

| | |
|---|---|
| "Le Bal Poudré" ... ... ... | Orlando Morgan |
| "Serenata" ... ... ... ... | Felix Swinstead |
| "The Rambling Sailor" ... ... | Alec Rowley |

Grade C

| | |
|---|---|
| "Dew Fairies" ... ... ... | Thomas Dunhill |
| "Legend" ... ... ... ... | Dr. Markham Lee |

Grade D

| | |
|---|---|
| "Miniature Scherzo" ... ... | Adam Carse |
| "Sun and Shade" ... ... | Richard H. Walthew |

Note The examiners will call upon competitors to play all or any of or any portion of the test-pieces set for the grade in which they are competing.

These test-pieces are obtainable from all music shops at 2*s.* each.

Intending entrants are advised to purchase their copies immediately in order to allow as much time for practice as possible.

FULL PARTICULARS AND ENTRY FORMS FROM ALL PIANO HOUSES, MUSIC SELLERS, Etc.

NOVELLO'S EDITIONS

ORGAN VOLUNTARIES

BASED ON POPULAR HYMN TUNES

ADAMS, THOMAS — s. d.
Short Fantasia on 'Abridge' (No. 16, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6
Short Fantasia on 'Veni, Creator Spiritus' (No. 46, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

BEST, WILLIAM T.
Prelude on the tunes 'London,' 'Halifax,' and 'St. Bride' (Bk. 3, Best's Collection of Pieces)... ... 3 0

CALKIN, J. BAPTISTE
Study on Pleyel's Hymn (No.4, Calkin's Compositions) ... ... 3 0

DARKE, HAROLD E.
Three Choral Preludes:
'St. Peter'
'Darwell's 148th'
Theme by Tallis
(No. 60, Original Compositions) (New Series) 3 6

FAULKES, WILLIAM
Alleluya, Festal Prelude on the tune 'Lasst uns erfreuen' (No. 110, Original Compositions) (New Series) ... ... ... ... ... 1 6
Fantasia on the old melody 'Urbs beata' (No. 37, Original Compositions) ... ... 1 6
Festival Prelude on 'Ein' feste Burg' (No. 3, Original Compositions) ... ... 2 0

HIGGS, HENRY M.
Variations on the tune 'Heinlein' (No. 44, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

LÉFÉBURE-WÈLY, L. J. A.
Processional Hymn, 'Adoro te' (No. 6, 'The Modern Organist') ... ... 3 0

LEMARE, EDWIN H.
Concert Fantasia on the tune 'Hanover' (No. 4, Lemare's Original Compositions)... 4 6

MACFARREN, GEORGE A.
Variations on the tune 'Windsor' (No. 81, Original Compositions) ... ... 1 6

MORGAN, THOMAS J.
Fantasia on the tune 'Twrgwyn' (No. 66, Original Compositions) (New Series) 2 0

PARRY, C. HUBERT H.
Seven Chorale Preludes (1st Set):
'Dundee' 'Melcombe'
'Rockingham' 'Christe, Redemptor omnium'
'Hampton'
'Old 104th' 'St. Ann's'
(No. 1, Original Compositions) (New Series) 5 6

PARRY, C. HUBERT H. (continued) — s. d.
Seven Chorale Preludes (2nd Set):
'Croft's 136th' 'St. Mary'
'Martyrdom' 'Eventide'
'St. Thomas' 'St. Cross'
'Hanover'
(No. 45, Original Compositions) (New Series) 5 6

PYE, JAMES T.
Introductory Voluntary on the Russian Hymn (No. 446, Original Compositions) ... ... 1 6

SILAS, EDWARD
Fantasia on 'St. Ann's' tune (No. 14, Silas's Original Compositions) ... 2 0

SPARK, WILLIAM
Jerusalem the Golden, with Variations and Finale ... ... ... ... ... 2 0

STEPHENS, CHARLES E.
Concluding Voluntary or Fantasia on the Chorale 'St. Mary' or 'Hackney' (No. 13, Original Compositions) ... ... 1 6
Fantasia on Choral 'St. James's' (No. 260, Original Compositions) ... ... 2 0

THORNE, EDWARD H.
Variations on the tune 'St. Luke' (No. 306, Original Compositions) ... ... 3 0

WALLACE, JAMES E.
Chorale Fantasia on the tune 'Heinlein' (No. 75, Original Compositions) (New Series) 3 0

WEST, JOHN E.
Prelude on Dykes's tune 'Requiescat' (No. 37, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6
Three Chorale Preludes:
'Winchester New'
'Burford'
'St. Michael'
(No. 47, Original Compositions) (New Series) 3 6
Improvisation on Schultz's tune 'We plough the fields' (No. 43, 'The Village Organist') 1 6
Prelude on Sullivan's tune 'We are but strangers here' (No. 37, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6
Prelude on Dykes's tune 'Now the labourer's task is o'er' (No. 37, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

WOODS, F. CUNNINGHAM
Variations on Elvey's tune 'Come, ye thankful people, come' (No. 43, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

HARVEST FESTIVAL MUSIC

CANTATAS

A GOLDEN HARVEST

FOR TENOR AND BASS SOLI AND CHORUS
WITH HYMNS TO BE SUNG BY THE CONGREGATION

THE WORDS AND HYMNS SELECTED AND WRITTEN BY
H. KNIGHT

THE MUSIC BY
THOMAS ADAMS

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.; Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

THE RAINBOW OF PEACE

FOR TENOR AND BASS SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORGAN

THE MUSIC BY
THOMAS ADAMS

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.
Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

HARVEST-TIDE

FOR TENOR AND BASS SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORGAN
OR SMALL ORCHESTRA

THE MUSIC BY
HUGH BLAIR

Price One Shilling and Sixpence; Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.
Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.
Full Score and Orchestral Parts can be hired.

HARVEST CANTATA

FOR CHORUS, SEMI-CHORUS, AND ORGAN

THE WORDS SELECTED AND WRITTEN BY
J. F. WALLER

THE MUSIC BY
G. M. GARRETT

Price One Shilling and Sixpence. Tonic Sol-fa, 8d.
Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100; or with Music to the Hymns, 12s. 6d. per 100.
Full Score and Orchestral Parts can be hired.

RUTH

FOR SOPRANO, CONTRALTO, AND BASS SOLI AND CHORUS

THE WORDS BY
E. OXENFORD

THE MUSIC BY
ALFRED R. GAUL

Price Three Shillings.
Paper boards, Four Shillings; Cloth, Six Shillings.
Tonic Sol-fa, 1s. Choruses only, 1s. 6d. Book of Words, 6s. 6d. per 100.
Full Score and Orchestral Parts can be hired.

HARVEST CANTATA

FOR SOPRANO (OR TENOR) AND CONTRALTO (OR BARITONE) SOLI AND CHORUS

THE WORDS BY
R. D. BETJEMANN

THE MUSIC BY
JULIUS HARRISON

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.; Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

SONG OF THANKSGIVING

FOR SOPRANO, TENOR, AND BASS (OR CONTRALTO)
SOLI AND CHORUS.
WITH HYMNS TO BE SUNG BY THE CONGREGATION

THE WORDS WRITTEN AND ARRANGED BY
S. WENSLEY

THE MUSIC BY
J. H. MAUNDER

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence:
Paper boards, Three Shillings and Sixpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.; Words only, 12s. 6d. per 100;
String Parts, price 13s. 6d.; Wind Parts, 21s. 5d.; Full Score, MS.

THE JUBILEE CANTATA

FOR SOLO VOICES, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

THE MUSIC BY
C. M. WEBER

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.
Paper boards, Two Shillings and Sixpence.
Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.
String Parts, 12s.; Wind Parts, 9s. 8d.; Full Score on hire.

SEED-TIME AND HARVEST

FOR SOPRANO AND TENOR SOLI AND CHORUS

THE MUSIC BY
JOHN E. WEST

Price Three Shillings. Tonic Sol-fa, 1s. 6d.
Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100; or 3d. each with Music to the Hymns.
Orchestral Parts can be hired.

A HARVEST SONG

FOR SOPRANO SOLO AND CHORUS

THE WORDS BY
J. BENNETT

THE MUSIC BY
C. LEE WILLIAMS

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.
Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.
String Parts, 9s. 9d.; Full Score and Wind Parts, MS.

HYMNS AND CAROLS.

BARNBY, J.—Come, ye thankful people, come ... ... ... 1½d.
Harvest-tide thanksgiving, The. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... 3d.
Words only, per 100 2s.
Let all our brethren join in one ... ... ... ... ... 1½d.
Words only, per 100 3s.
Lord of the harvest, Thee we hail (Two Versions) each 3d.
O Lord of heaven and earth and sea ... ... ... ... 1½d.
Praise, O praise, our God and King ... ... ... ... 3d.
Sing to the Lord a joyful song ... ... ... ... ... 3d.
Sower went forth sowing, The. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... 2d.
BUNNETT, ED.—Sing to the Lord a joyful song ... ... 1½d.
CRAMENT, J. M.—Sowing and reaping (Carol)
Words only, per 100 2s.
DYKES, J. B.—Holy is the seed-time ... ... ... ... 2d.
Words only, per 100 3s.
GILBERT, B.—Come, ye thankful people, come ... ... 1½d.
HARVEY, W. C.—We thank Thee, Lord, for this fair earth
(Children's voices) (Staff and Sol-fa Notations) ... ... 1½d.
HERVEY, F. A. J.—Make melody within your hearts (Carol) 2d.
KETÈLBEY, A. W.—God with plenty fills the hours ... ... 4d.
LEE, T.—King and Ruler of Creation ... ... ... ... 4d.
LOWE, A.—Holy is the seed-time (Carol) ... ... ... 2d.
Words only, per 100 3s.
MAUNDER, J. H.—Harvest Hymn of praise, A. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... 3d.
Words only, per 100 3s.
Joy of Harvest, The. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... ... ... 3d.
Words only, per 100 3s.
STIRLING, E.—Now Autumn strews on every plain ... ... 3d.
TOZER, F.—Lord of the rich and golden grain ... ... ... 3d.
Words only, per 100 3s.
TWELVE HYMNS selected from The Hymnary ... ... 1½d.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NOVELLO'S HARVEST ANTHEMS
SELECTED LIST

EVERY GOOD GIFT. By GEORGE RATHBONE.
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

THOMAS ADAMS
ALL THY WORKS PRAISE THEE
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

IT IS A GOOD THING TO GIVE THANKS
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

W. G. ALCOCK
GIVE EAR, O YE HEAVENS
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

E. C. BAIRSTOW
I WILL GREATLY REJOICE
Price Fourpence.

J. BARNBY
THE EYES OF ALL WAIT UPON THEE
Price Twopence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

HUGH BLAIR
OH, BRING TO THE LORD
Price Fourpence.

A. HERBERT BREWER
LET THE PEOPLE PRAISE THEE
Price Threepence.

EDWARD BUNNETT
BLESSED BE THOU, LORD GOD
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

O CLAP YOUR HANDS
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

PERCY C. BUCK
GOD BE MERCIFUL UNTO US
For Boys' Voices.
Price Fourpence.

H. A. CHAMBERS
IF YE WALK IN MY STATUTES
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

EDWARD ELGAR
FEAR NOT, O LAND
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

PERCY E. FLETCHER
LET THE PEOPLE PRAISE THEE
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

ALFRED R. GAUL
O BE JOYFUL IN THE LORD
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

A. M. GOODHART
LET US NOW FEAR THE LORD
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

CUTHBERT HARRIS
AND GOD SAID
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

SING A SONG OF PRAISE
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

ALFRED HOLLINS
GOD THE ALL-FATHERLY
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

ALBERT LOWE
THE EARTH IS THE LORD'S
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

ARTHUR W. MARCHANT
I WILL MAGNIFY THEE
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

GEORGE C. MARTIN
THUS SAITH THE LORD GOD
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

E. W. NAYLOR
I WILL CAUSE THE SHOWER
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

J. VARLEY ROBERTS
BLESS THE LORD THY GOD
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

I WILL MAGNIFY THEE
Price Fourpence.

F. W. WADELY
PRAISE, O PRAISE OUR GOD
Price Threepence.

HERBERT W. WAREING
THE LORD GOD PLANTED A GARDEN
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

HAROLD E. WATTS
THE GOD OF ABRAHAM PRAISE
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

JOHN E. WEST
PRAISE TO GOD, IMMORTAL PRAISE
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

FATHER OF MERCIES, GOD OF LOVE
Arranged for Boys' or Female Voices.
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

W. WOLSTENHOLME
O THAT MEN WOULD PRAISE THE LORD
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Mandeville Place, Manchester Square, London, W.1

President:

THE RT. HON. THE EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, K.P., G.C.V.O., C.B.E.

Chairman of Board and Director of Studies:

Professor J. C. BRIDGE, M.A., Mus.D., F.S.A.

Director of Examinations: E. F. HORNER, Mus.D.

SUMMER VACATION, 1928.

The College will be entirely closed from Monday, August 13th, to Saturday, September 1st, inclusive.

Monday, September 24th.—Michaelmas Term begins.

The College provides INSTRUCTION and TRAINING in all Musical Subjects (Instrumental, Vocal, and Theoretical) and Dramatic and Operatic Elocution. The Lessons are arranged to meet the convenience of both day and evening students. Entry may be made for any number of Subjects—from one to the Full Course. The College is open to beginners as well as to the more proficient student; pupils under 16 years of age are received for the Junior School at reduced fees.

The Orchestral, Choral, the Operatic, and Chamber Music Classes are open to sufficiently competent persons who are no College Students for other subjects.

Tuition in the Rudiments of the Theory of Music, Harmony, Counterpoint, Form, Instrumentation, Composition, and the Art of Teaching is also given by Correspondence.

Particulars of the Teaching Department, with list of Professors, Fees, Scholarships regulations, &c., and the Syllabuses of the Diploma and Local Examinations, free on application to the undersigned.

C. N. H. RODWELL, Secretary.

Just Published

NEW ORGAN WORK

by

SIGFRID KARG-ELERT

(Op. 100.)

PARTITA in E

1. Entrata
2. Canzona
3. Corrente e Siciliano
4. Rigaudon (Alla Burla)
5. Sarabande
6. Gavotte e Carillon
7. Finale quasi ritorno

Price Five Shillings and Sixpence

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

BROADWOOD PIANOS

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD'S

SUCCESSFUL CHORAL WORK.

ALBERT W. KETÈLBEY'S Patriotic Ode

MEN OF ENGLAND

Words by Thomas Campbell (1777-1844)

FOR CHORUS (S.A.T.B.)

Price Sixpence net

With Organ, Pianoforte, or Orchestral Accompaniment. (Orchestral Parts may be hired.)

Tonic Sol-fa Arrangement just Issued.. Price 4d. net.

This work received enthusiastic receptions when featured at the Kingsway Hall (and broadcast) on several recent occasions.

A specimen copy will be forwarded to any professional musician who is interested.

SIX SCHOOL SONGS

BY

EDWARD WATSON

Used by Teachers and Choirs in all the Principal Schools.

| | | Price |
|---|---|---|
| 1. | The Owl and the Pussycat. (Junior) ... ... ... | 4d |
| 2. | Hot Cross Buns. (Junior) ... ... ... ... ... | 3d. |
| 3. | I love little Pussy. (Preparatory) ... ... ... | 2d. |
| 4. | Oh hush thee, my baby. (Upper Forms) ... ... | 4d |
| 5. | Simple Simon. (Junior) ... ... ... ... ... | 2d |
| 6. | The House that Jack Built. (Upper Forms) ... ... | 4d. |

HAND CULTURE

By BLANCHE RENNIE.

FINGER, HAND, and ARM GYMNASTICS, for ORGANISTS, PIANISTS, and VIOLINISTS—the Exercises being taken at the Piano.

Giving Strength, Flexibility, and Complete Finger Independence.

Price Five Shillings net.

SENT FREE. Organ and Choral Catalogues. Specimen copies of School Songs.

BOSWORTH & Co., Ltd.,

8, Heddon Street, Regent Street, London, W.1

Just Published.

SOLEMN MELODY

by

H. WALFORD DAVIES

arranged for

BRASS BAND

by

J. ORD HUME

Price Three Shillings per Set

Separate parts, 2d. each

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

The Musical Times

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

AUGUST 1 1928

(For List of Contents see Page 752.)

POETRY, SONG, AND SCHUBERT

I.

By Mrs. Frank Liebich

During the hundred years which have elapsed since the death of Schubert the appeal of his personality has persisted and the knowledge and appreciation of his life-work have been increased and amplified. The present Centenary anniversary will no doubt help to emphasise his position still more in the history of music and musicians, and at the same time it will tend further to sift what is vital from what is inconsiderable in his creative work.

He was one of the most prolific of composers. Ten Symphonies, String and Pianoforte Trios, Quartets, Quintets, and other chamber music, sacred, choral, and dramatic works, pianoforte compositions in large numbers, and more than six hundred songs, besides other incidental pieces, were composed in his short life of thirty-one years.

In 1811, when aged fourteen, he confided to his friend Spaun that he had composed a Sonata, a Fantasia, and a little opera, and was preparing to write a Mass. That his other school studies did not progress quite so satisfactorily is not to be wondered at, considering that the boy's whole mind was in his music. Neither is it surprising that his father, a somewhat severe schoolmaster, failing to understand the lad's budding genius, showed severity.

Undeterred, however, by harsh treatment, Franz, chancing on the Songs and Ballads of Zumsteeg, began to try his hand on a similar style of composition.

Soon after, one of the boy's songs, 'Hagar's Lament,' came into the hands of Salieri, who, finding soon after that Franz knew as much as the teacher with whom he was then studying, took the boy's tuition into his own hands. As young Schubert advanced in years his natural charm and sweetness of disposition gained him many friends, and instinctively he seemed always to gravitate towards those among his associates who were poets. His short span of life that embraced the years between 1797 and 1828 was contemporaneous with some of Germany's greatest poets. It was the period when young men in England, from Coleridge to Carlyle, were influenced by the German writers from Goethe to Bürger and Wieland to Tieck and Hoffmann; which was not more than a reflex movement of repayment of what Goethe and Herder had learnt from the Border Ballads in Percy's Reliques. Schubert, partly from inclination and partly owing to his friendship with the young Viennese poets of his day, absorbed at an early age all that was best of the poetry that was placed in his way. There are hundreds of instances in which he has transmuted the intrinsic meaning and beauty of a poem into its correlative melody and harmony. While he was thus metamorphosing his countrymen's verses into vocal music a galaxy of world poets existed. Of the group of English immortals who were his contemporaries—Shelley, Keats, Scott, Coleridge, Byron, Wordsworth—Scott alone furnished him with poems for a musical setting. But it is with Keats that he might have been most in sympathy—Keats who could distil the essence and vital power of beautiful scenery into a phrase of poetry, and who possessed the same faculty as Schubert of transfusing the beauty and magic and secret rhythm of things into his own vehicle of expression.

There is much in common between their two natures—their sentient, mobile temperament, their gift for friendship, their love of beauty and truth, their delight in wild, picturesque landscapes. One is reminded of Keats in Schubert's letters from Steyr and Salzburg when, amid that grand scenery he roamed the mountain sides, watching the peaks 'towering higher and higher,' noting 'the Unsterberg, with its ghosts and legends, peering like a magician above the rest'; he describes also 'the gloomy masses of cloud gliding over the mountains like eerie mist-wreaths seeming to be keeping away from the peak of the Unsterberg as if fearful of its ghostly inhabitants.' Its majesty he described as being almost overwhelming. All of which reads like Keats writing home of his first sight of the English lake mountains and of his gradual ascent in Scotland of Cairn Regan and Glen App, and the effect of Ailsa Craig in the mist. Keats imagined the existence of something in the ultimate nature of the universe that accounted for the 'wild and harmonized tune' which all the scattered beauties of the world originated in his mind.

Schubert drew largely from the nature music of Austrian folk-dance and song in his instrumental music, into which he absorbed much of its underlying sadness. A great deal of his Symphonies and chamber music is full of both laughter and tears; the two being inextricably united in all that is intrinsically beautiful. But from their contiguity results no note whatsoever of sentimentality. Neither is there a vestige of this odious characteristic in Schubert's character or in any of his work. Those who fancy they find tokens of it in his music are their own purveyors of what they fancy they discover. Latins, Celts, Czechs, and very certainly the Viennese, show no trace of this unattractive qualification, and 'Schwämmerl,' as his jovial companions nicknamed Schubert, had no note of it either in himself or in his music.

That he is called a Romantic composer originates from the mania for penning individuals and periods into hard-and-fast compartments and affixing labels to them. And this seems to be more overdone in music than in any of the other arts.

That Schubert possessed fortitude and courage is amply proved by the events of his life. He was usually ill-provided with the wherewithal to live. As a boy he composed secretly during school hours, one of his schoolfellows supplying him with the music paper he so often lacked. Many of these boy contemporaries became known as lawyers, professors, and poets. In a letter to his elder brother Ferdinand, little Franz tells of the eight and a half hours he has to go fasting and hungry after a meagre breakfast of a roll and an apple or two. These missives were signed by him, 'Your loving, hopeful, poverty-stricken—and again I repeat, poverty-stricken—brother, Franz.'

Later, when he met the poet Mayrhofer, from Steyr in Upper Austria, he finds in him a true friend; and Schubert possessed a genius for attracting and making friends. Mayrhofer was twenty-seven years of age, Schubert eighteen when they met. A mutual acquaintance had given Schubert Mayrhofer's poem, 'Am See,' to set to music. Mayrhofer and the genial Franz von Schober wrote the words of many of Schubert's most beautiful songs. The composer and a group of his friends would meet at various cafés and taverns in and around Vienna, and these social gatherings took on the name of Schubertiaden. Evidently Schubert was the pivot round which the others revolved. Shy and earnest and reticent at times with strangers, he was also on occasion the wildest of madcaps. In those days writers and musicians reciprocally influenced and helped one another. Mayrhofer's intimacy with Schubert aided greatly to mature his own powers as a poet.

When attracted to a subject Schubert would read the poem several times in succession, and gradually it would transform itself in his mind into song. He would then scribble the notes so rapidly on to paper that they seemed to tumble over one another as he wrote. 'Der Wanderer' was written thus in an incredibly short time, as well as 'Der Zwerg' and 'Erlkönig.'

Klein, Berger, Reichardt, and Zelter were in the ascendant as Lieder composers when Schubert began to be famous. Both Zelter and Reichardt had set a number of Goethe's lyrics. Beethoven expressed wonder and delight on hearing that Schubert had written over five hundred songs. He was known to have pored over 'Iphigenia,' 'Grenzen der Menschheit,' 'Die Allmacht,' 'Die Junge Nonne,' 'Viola,' 'The Miller' cycle, and several others. Jean Paul Richter, also, was greatly attracted by Schubert's genius. He asked a few hours before his death for the 'Erl-King' to be sung to him. Strange to say, it is considered unlikely that Beethoven and Schubert ever met. Hüttenbrenner's mention of a visit paid by Schubert to the dying Beethoven has never, as yet, been verified. But Schindler used to bring Schubert's Lieder to the great master during his last illness, and he is said to have remarked that there was 'a spark of the divine' in Schubert.

In an essay on 'Perfection and Imperfection,' the Italian philosopher Benedetto Croce writes of an untameable Beauty 'who writhes and twists and fights back,' as Carducci said of his Muse, and all writers confess to the scratches they have earned wrestling with it. Of a certainty Schubert must have experienced this also. And the short concentrated pain of a few moments probably surpassed the ache of the long-drawn wrestling with a subject or an idea of less quick-brained creators. His short span of life points to this. Also his great output probably helped to wear out his delicate organization.

A volume could be devoted to his songs, apart from any of his other compositions. And very especially would that study show the effect of his familiarity with 'the face of Poetry' and the marked and abiding influence it had on his mind and character. Among the romantic poets Schubert was most attracted to Wilhelm Müller, the poet of 'Die Schöne Müllerin' and the 'Winterreise.' From Rückert's poems are three of his best-known songs: 'Du bist die Ruh,' 'Sei mir gegrüsst,' and 'Greisengang.' The Heine songs in the 'Schwanengesang' are among his finest settings. His somewhat frail health began to show signs of wear and tear during his work on that cycle of poems. Asked by Spaun the reason for the depression that had laid hold of him, he replied, 'Come to Schober's; I will sing you a cycle of gloomy melodies. They have taken more out of me than any other songs. And in Schober's room he sang the 'Winterreise' cycle to his friends.

The rest of the year 1828 was devoted to instrumental music: the Trio in E flat, the Fantasia for violin and pianoforte, the 'Moments Musicaux,' and some Impromptus. But towards autumn his health began to give his friends anxiety. In October he journeyed into Hungary with his brother Ferdinand, and remained a whole hour deep in thought by the grave of Haydn. Soon after his return to Vienna he fell ill of typhus fever. His constitution was unable to withstand the ravages of the illness. In his delirium he imagined himself away from home with strangers around him. His brother tried to reassure him that he was in his own room. 'No,' he replied, 'that is not so.

Beethoven isn't here.' The following day he died. They buried his mortal remains close to the grave of Beethoven.

And now autres temps, autres mœurs. Yet Schubert's songs of yester-year prevail. But there are also now autres musiques, which for the many are 'jarring things,' as Byron's Eastern tales were for Keats. But those who are disturbed and irritated by the scrapping of the old systems by modernity and the modernists will, doubtless, be able to derive consolation from Schubert's centenary celebrations, which, like what Keats sought in the kingdom of poetry, will be 'gentle and soothing like a lawn beneath a myrtle tree.' They may then, perhaps, find echoing in their minds those words of the poet:

> And they shall be accounted poet-kings
> Who simply sing the most heart-easing things.*

ON MAKING MELODY

By Alexander Brent-Smith

No one, not even the youngest and most inexperienced philosopher, would be rash enough, I suppose, to say exactly what a good melody is, whence a good melody comes, or what distinguishes a true from a false inspiration. But though we cannot say exactly what are the distinguishing features of a true inspiration, we can at least say that it is generally characterized by two qualities, a defiance of the passing of time and a defiance of an all-satisfying analysis. This first quality we will call Durability, the second we will call Mysticism.

First let us discuss Durability. In all great art there is, to quote the words of Lionel Johnson, an eternal beauty and strength as though they were from everlasting. In Homer, Virgil, in the story of Job, and in the Psalms, we find thoughts which seem possessed of eternal youth, and which generation after generation of men have pondered and found true. And though it is not possible, in our consideration of melodies, to say this is false, or this is true, yet we can say, at each rehearing of a melody, 'I find it more completely satisfying.' The old proverb, Securus judicat orbis terrarum (Sure and sound is the judgment of the whole world), is one not lightly to be disregarded, and if we come across a tune which has stood high in the affections of men for a hundred, two hundred, or a thousand years, we shall do well to treat it with very great respect. Unfortunately the test of durability is one which we cannot apply to the very melodies which we would like to test.

The other quality—Mysticism—is some attribute in a work of art which escapes ordinary observation and cannot be described in our ordinary workaday language. It will be found true of nearly all human knowledge, that however closely the facts are considered there will be one quality or fact which cannot be proved or explained, and which has to be accepted as an act of faith. All our philosophy and knowledge has to be built upon the fact that I am I, for which no external proof can be adduced. However perseveringly scientists narrow down the distance which lies between man and omniscience, the last step in the process of reasoning has to be taken for granted, and to be classed, for the present at any rate, as a mystery. During the last few years scientists have progressed so rapidly in their analysis of matter that they can state definitely that the human body consists of twelve elements, and twelve elements only, such as oxygen, potassium, iron, &c. But, though they know the exact ingredients from which the human brain is constructed, no scientist yet can explain how these twelve elements, which are kept stored in every laboratory, can become a living, thinking machine, able to reason, to memorise, and to perform the many hundred actions which are the daily work of any ordinary brain. We know that potassium cannot think, that oxygen cannot think, that the remaining ten elements also cannot think, and yet we know that when these twelve elements are combined and charged with that undiscoverable, unanalysable something else, they become capable of all the astounding feats of intellect which raise mankind towards the Divine Source of knowledge.

So also, when we come to analyse great melodies, we find that however skilfully we notice the causes of their beauty, there is always an additional beauty which cannot be described, far less explained. Many men have tried to give rules for the detection of a good melody. The test most usually applied is the test of outline. That is, if the notes of a melody are joined together by lines, the resulting line should make a bold contour, comparable to a range of mountains or the profile of a face. I am told that some people believe that the first subject of the 'Eroica' Symphony has an outline bearing a strong resemblance to Napoleon Buonaparte. Others claim that some melodies of Richard Strauss's are like the profile of Cyrano de Bergerac. This test, in spite of its seeming success, cannot be accepted as final, for there are many undeniably great tunes which have, in the words of Mr. Mantalini, a demnition outline.

But although we cannot discover the whole secret of great melody, we can sometimes ascertain one or two contributory causes of its greatness. Sometimes it is an harmonic feature, sometimes a slight rhythmic alteration which gives it its beauty and distinction. Lovers of poetry know how certain words, frequently proper names, always produce a beautiful effect in any line of poetry. Such a proper name is the word Hebrides, which has such a lovely sound that it cannot fail to give beauty to the line wherein it occurs. What a marvellous effect it gives to the following verse of the unknown author of the Canadian Boat Song:

* 'Sleep and Poetry' (Keats).

From the lone shieling of the misty island
Mountains divide us, and the waste of seas;
Yet still the blood is strong, the heart is Highland,
And we in dreams behold the Hebrides.

Wordsworth, too, wrought a miracle of beauty in his poem, the 'Solitary Reaper,' with this lovely proper name:

Breaking the silence of the seas
Among the farthest Hebrides.

Composers also find that some chords give beauty wherever they are used. Such a chord is the dominant thirteenth. Schubert was peculiarly sensitive to this chord, and used it with great effect. Consider how much the second subject of the Octet (first movement) depends upon this glowing chord, which seems to satisfy the pent-up emotions of the opening bars. Elgar, too, depends to a great extent upon this seductive harmony for the appeal of the second subject of his Violin Concerto.

Sometimes we can see how a composer has slightly varied the rhythm of a melody which had a tendency to become too square. For instance, the great chorale-melody of the Ninth Symphony is by nature a strong-beat melody, the metre of Schiller's verse, 'Freude schöne Götterfunken,' demanding that each line should begin with a strong beat. But Beethoven saw that what was good for the poet was bad for the composer, so in the last line he throws the accent or beat before the expected place, thereby redeeming the melody from squareness and giving it an unexpected piquancy. A scholarly analysis of how Beethoven's mind brooded over his melodies is to be found in Mr. Colles's 'The Growth of Music.'

. . . . . .

To the question, How is a melody written? though we cannot give a definite answer, we can at least state the conditions under which the production of a melody is probable. We can specify, for instance, the mental characteristics needful for a man who wishes to be a composer. Some of these characteristics we will discuss in detail.

First of all he must have the Desire to Create. By this I do not mean that a man should have merely a wish to write a good tune. Far from it. By Desire to Create I mean a burning, all-consuming passion to create, absorbing all his energy day and night. Creation of beauty is not a pleasant occupation for a wet afternoon; it is the devotion of a lifetime.

It will be noticed that I have said that the first characteristic of the composer is the Desire to Create, not the capacity to create. Capacity follows in the wake of Desire. To illustrate this truth, I cannot do better than quote two striking and seemingly contradictory statements which occur in the first chapter of the book of Genesis. The first statement occurs in verse 3, where it is written, 'God said, Let there be light, and there was light.' The other occurs in verses 14-19, 'And God said, Let there be lights in the firmament . . . And God made two great lights; the greater light to rule the day, and the lesser light to rule the night; he made the stars also.' I am not concerned with the textual problems raised by these verses. My purpose is to show how absolutely correct they are from the point of view of artistic creation, for they show that the idea of light existed in the mind of God before the idea for light; that is, in creative effort the idea of a work must precede the ideas for a work. A boy must desire to set the Thames on fire before he has ever seen the Thames or possessed himself of a box of matches. It is a fact, I suppose, that at the moment a boy conceives the idea of being a novelist he sees in his mind's eye a complete row of his novels, bound in a uniform edition, although at the moment he has no idea for the plot, title, or character of a single novel. But when once the idea of a work or works is generated, the ideas for the work or works will somehow be discovered. Lest this statement should seem an exaggeration, I will mention one instance of how the idea of work precedes the ideas for the work. On a certain day in his life, Bach had a sudden idea that he would write a set of Preludes and Fugues in every major and minor key in order to strengthen the cause of equal temperament. This means that in a single flash he conceived the idea of a work which would require at least forty-eight separate ideas. How many ideas had he in his mind when he first conceived the idea of the great work? Perhaps half-a-dozen, not more. But the idea of the work being established, ideas for the work began to suggest themselves. It is probable that the idea of the 'Eroica' Symphony was conceived at the moment when Beethoven finished the second Symphony and realised that he had something to say more definitely personal than anything he had previously written.

The second mental characteristic of a great composer is an intense sensibility to musical sounds, combined with an instantaneous appreciation of their significance. This mental characteristic, in varying forms, is a feature in all men of distinction, in every branch of life. Many men before the days of Sir Isaac Newton had seen an apple fall to the ground, but it was left for him to ponder on the strange yet obvious fact that apples fall down and do not fly upwards, and to discover from that obvious fact the great natural truth known as the Law of Gravitation, which still remains (in spite of the recent knowledge contributed by Prof. Einstein) the practical guide of all navigators, astronomers, and engineers. Again, many of us have seen a laburnum tree, a lilac tree, or a guelderose tree in bloom, but how many of us can see, as Moses saw in the burning bush, a symbol of the existence of God, and, more than that, a challenge to understand the ways and purposes of God. It is not necessary for us to believe that Moses actually saw the Creator of the Universe in the form of a burning bush, but we can and should believe that he, the philosopher, saw that the beauty of life and nature was an outward manifestation of God's purpose, and furthermore we must believe that it was this sudden realisation of God's purpose which gave him his mission in life, and with it a code of morality which has since that time drawn men nearer and nearer towards the perfection of God, and further and further from the instincts of the ape.

This mental characteristic is to be found in all the greatest composers. They see what the ordinary man sees, but they differ from the ordinary man in that they understand what they see. Many of us could have written great tunes, if only, as Wordsworth said, we had the mind. How many of us, for instance, have heard a sequence of notes, known as a bugle-call, and heard nothing more than a commonplace succession of notes? Yet Franz Schubert once heard mentally those self-same notes, and perceived at once their significance, and the harmony needful to transform them into a lovely tune, which he did in the graceful melody known as the 'Rosamunde' Ballet-music. Or again, many of us have heard the last four notes of an upward-rising scale and thought of them as being nothing more than a scale. But again Franz Schubert heard those very same notes and, by a stroke of that unanalysable thing called genius, so arranged them that they made the bewitching cadence that ends the melody, 'Who is Sylvia?'

The third mental characteristic of a great composer is a restless searching for beauty. Melodies do not often lie open to the public gaze, nor are they delivered complete in registered envelopes by kindly-disposed ministers of inspiration. Readers of that immortal work 'The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes,' will remember how that infallible man would occasionally startle and mystify the slow-witted Watson and the matter-of-fact Lestrade by suddenly stooping down and picking up some unconsidered trifle—a cigar-end or a scrap of paper, trifles which proved to be the missing link in the chain of evidence. When asked how it was he came to notice such a negligible trifle, he would reply, 'Because I was looking for it.' So, too, if Schubert or Mozart had been asked how they came to write some lovely tune, they might truthfully have replied (if they had been prigs—which, of course, they weren't), 'Because I was looking for it.' Few people realise how incessant is the search of a composer for melodies, and how many he rejects for every one he uses. Night and day the search goes on. Every envelope and scrap of paper becomes the temporary home for musical waifs waiting for adoption. The reason why Shakespeare's plays are so full of great thoughts is not that these thoughts occurred to him during writing hours (no doubt a few did), but that he was always bringing his mind to bear on great questions and problems, and finding similes, metaphors, and quaint illustrations of his thoughts. Then, when the opportunity arose, his mind, well-stocked with thoughts, found occasion for their expression.

So, too, composers are for ever trying to find beautiful tunes and striking themes, and then, when some definite work is being composed, the destination of some previously written melody is revealed to them. For a long while the value of some idea remains unknown until a fresh undertaking reveals its possibilities.

Another aspect of the artist's incessant search for beauty is his unlimited and tireless industry—which bears witness to the truth of Carlyle's dictum that genius is an infinite capacity for taking trouble. That composers find such lovely tunes is, perhaps, luck, but it is equally the reward of industry. An instance of genius combined with good luck, taken from a different walk of life, may be quoted here to advantage. During the Open Golf Championship in 1926 that prodigy of golf, Bobby Jones, who has had a greater share of successes than any man, living or dead, found his ball in a deep bunker beside the pin. If he exploded violently he would send his ball too far; if he hit it too gently he would remain in the bunker. The many thousand spectators held their breath. The stroke might mean the winning or the loss of the championship. With a set face Bobby walked into the bunker. He hit the ball a decisive blow; it rose spinning in the air, and fell dead beside the pin. Every one gasped, and murmured, 'What a stroke of luck!' It was luck, but how few of those present realised that Bobby Jones had practised that kind of shot hundreds of times in his bedroom, hitting the ball firmly yet gently from a rug on to his bed. So, too, when composers create a lovely cadence or phrase, they are lucky, but they deserve their luck. We know that only a very few bars can be a direct inspiration, and from the mere fact that Time passes quickly, it is obvious that a slow-moving melody cannot suddenly appear whole and complete in a composer's mind. Given the germ, or we might call it the clue, the composer is compelled to work out the problem for himself. That is why it is so difficult to write a melody in the classical sense. The opening phrase is either an inspiration or it is not: the cadence (so terribly prone to become commonplace) must be the unaided work of the composer, unless, as sometimes happens, a striking cadence is the initial inspiration, in which case it is the opening phrase which has to be added.

Nor is a composer's work limited to the threshing out of his melodies. He has to consider the balance of the phrases and the fitness of the harmony. Only composers know the agony of mind caused by the final shaping and setting of a melody. One awkward harmony, perhaps, will cause him days of unceasing toil. There is a story told that Oscar Wilde once arrived late for a dinner party. He excused himself on the plea that he had been dreadfully busy. His hostess asked him what he had been working at, hoping, no doubt, that he would admit to the composition of a witty play, a poem, or an essay. His answer was, however, 'All the morning I was putting in a comma, and all the afternoon I was taking it out.' That is a day's work which often falls to the lot of a composer, though it is not an uncompromising comma which worries him but an equally uncompromising harmony.

The last mental characteristic is elasticity of mind, which means that the composer must allow himself to be guided by his inspiration, and must not force his inspiration into preconstructed shapes. He must follow the spirit, whithersoever it leads. Of course, he must start with a definite scheme in his mind, but he must be prepared to alter that scheme if the material seems to demand it. He must not complain if his intended quartet develops into a symphony, or if a potentially lucrative romanza becomes enshrined in a non-selling string quintet. Composers are not like that unfortunate person (man, woman, or child, I never discovered) who complained to a railway porter, 'Whatever shall I do? I wanted to go to Birmingham and they've taken me on to Crewe,' because, to an artist, everywhere is where he wants to go. I will not dwell on this point further, for I have previously written in 'Studies and Caprices' upon the differences which exist between the author's intention and the fulfilment.

There are finally the questions: For how long can composers continue writing melodies? Are not the possible arrangements of notes already exhausted? The answers to these questions are too long to be given here, and must be left until the days grow longer.*

THE PERSPECTIVES OF MUSICAL STYLE

By Leonid Sabaneev

Prophesying, no matter in what sphere, is certainly a somewhat thankless occupation; nevertheless, scientific historical thought is at times able to foresee the contours of the future. It has hardly ever concerned itself with the arts, especially music, and therefore the present attempt at prognostication may not be without interest.

The historical rhythm in the sphere of the arts, including music, is expressed in the change of styles. Every style forms a unit, and consists in the combination of the definite signs which characterise it. Historical observation shows that when a style has attained complete expression it degenerates and is replaced by another. To put it simply, the characteristic signs become wearisome, and musical reception seeks a change, a contrast. Here we see one of the most general æsthetic laws—the requirement of contrast in the æsthetic prolongation of, or addition to, any phenomenon, since an unduly protracted sojourning in the sphere of one style or of phenomena of the same category becomes repugnant and tedious, and causes a reaction. Hence we notice that, in the historical perspective, styles do not alter gradually nor form a continuous line; periodically one style seems bound to bring into existence another, whose most characteristic features are the antithesis of those of its predecessor. Consequently the music of to-day has no greater foe than the art of yesterday. Rather, the day before yesterday always proves to be nearer and more desirable. The law which compels a composer to alternate the first theme of a sonata with a second, dissimilar in character and often in rhythm—that same law obliges one style to give place to another, contrasted with it in its most salient features. Musical history, like any sonata, is also written in a sort of sonata form; in it there are periodical returns and alternations, and in it we can therefore conjecture that with which we are threatened by yesterday.

We see, further, that every style has a certain average period of existence, beyond which it cannot be prolonged. This period of time ('the life of a style') proves in most cases to be equal to the mean difference in the ages of the generations, of parents and children, and comprises twenty-five to thirty years. The alternation of styles in accordance with this principle is evident in the earliest periods of musical history. In the historical perspective the differences in styles very remote from our era are obliterated, but as we come nearer to our own times the existence of this law becomes distinctly evident. The 'heavy baroque' style (Bach and Handel) attained its maximum development between 1710 and 1740. Bach outlived it, and when he wrote his last works they were not understood by his 'children,' to whom his complex and exuberant contrapuntal technique had already become distasteful. This new age sought a lighter, simpler, more elegant, more homophonous music. The intermediate style, which was the negation of the 'Bach baroque,' was that of Philip Emanuel Bach and his contemporaries (le style galant); it lasted from 1740 to 1770, and was supplanted by the style of

* Mr. Sabaneev's 'The Destinies of Music,' in the June number, dealt with the second question above, and anticipated the writer's intention, made some time ago, expressed in the last sentence.

Mozart and Haydn, which prevailed from 1770 till the end of the century. Again we see that the characteristic features of this style—its elegance, its naïveté, its humour, its lack of desire to arouse soul-storms—provoke a reaction Beethoven's early romanticism is nothing else than a protest against the musical etiquette created by classical music, against the excessive gallantry, the elegance, and the suppression of profound emotions and intense mental agitation. The early romantic period (Beethoven, Weber, Schubert) also continued for thirty years (1800-30), and gave place to the later romanticism (Wagner and Liszt), which was exhausted in the 'nineties of last century and made way for impressionism.

The romanticism of all generations, from the early to the 'neo,' displays to the end the turbulent Dionysian spirit of the musical element. Impressionism is, of course, an offshoot of romanticism, wearied and exhausted by the tempestuous emotions of the latter. The Weltschmerz and the philosophical outlook typical of romanticism are replaced by the external attributes of colour and picturesqueness (Debussy, Ravel, the later Rimsky-Korsakov). Impressionism carries to its extreme limits and exhausts the characteristics of this style. Music is weary of the quest for refinement of emotions and resonances; it feels that it has had enough and to spare of the rhythmical vagueness of impressionism, and just as it thirsted for storms and commotions after the hedonistic era of classicism, so it now longs for rhythmical refreshment, and proceeds involuntarily, by virtue of the law of contrast, to brutality, to the cult of harshness, of rough rhythms, and to some extent even of barbarism (Stravinsky, beginning with 'Petroushka'; Prokofiev; Schönberg; the new composers down to Milhaud).

This is the period which musical history has now reached. Impressionism has perished, and has not even endured for those sacramental thirty years. This is explained by the fact that its æsthetic characteristics were too highly spiced; that essentially it was nothing but the culmination of romanticism; and that the mean difference in the ages of the generations of man himself has been reduced to less than thirty years. In any case the term of impressionism expired in 1910, and the 'brutal' era in music was established. The end of the latter is visibly at hand, and it will be reached by 1935 at the latest. Already the air is filled with a definite desire for a change.

The whole history of music up to the present has been, with few exceptions, the history of the complicating of the musical tissue, of the exorcism of tonal masses, which by the mastery of the artist have been brought within the grasp of the musical consciousness. It is the story of the conquest of the musical spaces. Like every conquest, it has not proceeded in a direct line but in zig-zags; there have been tactical retreats, and art has often sacrificed complexity in one direction in order to develop it in another, untried. Thus we remember that, after the grandiose complicating of the polyphonic tissue during the period of the contrapuntists (1500-1600), music abandoned polyphony entirely for many years and cultivated melody with an accompaniment. Far too much time had been spent in captivity to counterpoint, and this provoked a reaction. The longer the bondage of a style, the more violent the reaction against it. At the present moment we are undergoing a similar experience.

Music is weary of quests, weary of the piling-up of resonances created by the search for novelty, by the thirst for harmonies unheard of, by the striving for originality. Everything has been tested, all the harmonies, including those which employ the whole of the scale, have been written. The brutal era, which has cultivated rhythmical brilliancy and distinctness as a counterpoise to impressionism, has nevertheless continued the pursuit of new resonances. Such is generally the case: on its appearance a new style rejects one of the attributes of its immediate predecessor, and leaves the rest alone. This is sufficient to give a sense of contrast. So, knowing the characteristics of the contemporary brutal style, knowing its genesis from impressionism, we can draw an approximate picture of the future style, which will manifest itself in not more than eight years from now.

The cult of strident and intricate harmonies and of rhythm has been most characteristic of the current era, which is now perceptibly coming to an end. I have already said that the more brilliant the characteristics of a style the more rapid the reaction and the more decisive the opposition to those very characteristics. In the history of music it is difficult to point to anything harsher, more typical, more categorically self-assertive than this rhythmic cacophony, reduced to a principle, of the new music. And we are already conscious of a rising against it. Mankind—musical mankind—is tired of the cult of harsh harmonies, the cult of beauty in ugliness, the cult of decorativeness; it is impatient of the persecution set on foot against expressiveness and emotion—which in its turn was a reaction against the excessive worship of expressiveness and descriptiveness during the era of impressionism and romanticism. The most prominent composers of the present day (including Stravinsky, as one of the cleverest and most sensitive) are aware that the end is drawing near. The simplification of style which we observe even in 'Œdipus Rex' is just the expression of this sense of the future. I do not think that the practising composers of our generation would be capable of altering their style to comply with the demands of the future: they usually fail in this respect, and the fault is not theirs but is attributable to the mechanism of musical history. It is evident that what even Stravinsky is doing in 'Œdipus Rex,' what he has in view in other of his recent works, represents the death struggle of a stylist who foresees the shattering of his own style; in no case is it a new and coming style. These compositions are the attempts of a clever and sensitive man to adapt himself, but, however paradoxical the assertion may sound, I insist that they are old-fashioned. Musical history demands other tones and categorically calls for genuine simplicity and euphony, as it did before Palestrina arrived. This task will not be accomplished by the hands even of gifted workers of the past, such as Stravinsky must certainly be reckoned. We are on the eve of the appearance of music whose characteristics will be the opposite of those excessively brilliant qualities which distinguished the music of the 'brutal' era. Instead of harsh and rough harmonies we shall have the idea of euphony; the persecution of expressiveness will give place to a demand for it; melodiousness, which has long since departed from music, will inevitably be recalled. The new music will borrow its prototypes preferably from the sphere of the classics of the pre-Beethoven period. There is reason for the surprising growth which we are now witnessing of sympathy for such composers as Tchaikovsky and Brahms. As always, we are more sensible of the day before yesterday of art than of the yesterday of impressionism and the to-day of brutality. After the long wanderings in search of the utmost complexity, after the triumphant usurpation of the musical plane of tone, music must once more return to the embraces of the idea of euphony.

He who does not understand this, or thinks that he can somehow turn the wheel of history to suit his taste, merely shows his ignorance of the laws of the development of art. Contemporary composers who have only just cut their quills in order to write modern music—in the sense of the invention of still newer harshnesses, newer harmonic tricks and rhythmical devices—do not feel nor suspect that all this is now antiquated and no longer new; that its days are numbered; that at any moment, together with the compositions of the last ten or twelve years, it will prove to be as old-fashioned and worn-out as the decadents in poetry or the impressionist lines in architecture and ornament now seem to us. Anything of genius that has been created in this sphere will, of course, survive, just as Beethoven, Wagner, and Brahms have remained to us from the past, but we shall get away from it all and it will appear incomparably more remote and unnecessary than even Beethoven or Tchaikovsky; it will bear the impress 'Out of fashion.' From the future, already near, we shall expect—on the basis of historical analogies and in no case of any personal sympathies—euphonious melodious music, but in all probability it will observe the rhythmical demands of past years, and will be sufficiently indifferent to the problem of descriptiveness and colour, since a great deal of attention was paid to these things in bygone days.

The wheel of musical history revolves rapidly. That which was new becomes old, and, conversely, through the capricious play of the historical mechanism, much that was old proves to be surprisingly new. The seeming reactionaries may, unexpectedly to themselves, turn out to be more advanced, more in harmony with the present, than the sworn innovators who have not reckoned with the fact that the duration of any style is limited; and those who have been accustomed to the position of seekers and revealers of new paths are astonished to find themselves working in an antiquated fashion and in an altogether different direction from that taken by the age and the taste of the age. It would, of course, be ingenuous to suppose that music is simply returning to the embraces of antiquity; history is familiar with returns, but not with exact repetitions. In this attempt roughly to outline the features which the music of to-morrow may, on the basis of the historical prognoses, be expected to assume, we can speak of the music of Mozart and the early classics only as its approximate prototype; it will not be actually identical with Mozart, just as Schumann was not identical with Bach, nor Prokofiev with the Russians of the mighty band. These descriptions and indications must merely give an idea of the approximate direction of the march of musical thought, whose essential nature it is, of course, beyond the powers of the historical method to conjecture.

(Translated by S. W. Pring.)

Ad Libitum

By 'Feste'

TOO MUCH DOMINANT SEVENTH

Monteverde may or may not have discovered the dominant seventh; and the identity of the pioneer who first burst into the dominant ninth is even more a matter of doubt. Certainly both chords have just been rediscovered by Feste junior (ætat seven), thanks to the gift (since seen to be injudicious) of a mouth-organ. There are, I believe, mouth-organs that have some claim to be regarded as musical instruments. The national championship of the Mouth-Organ League (I hope I have got the title right) was recently blown off solemnly in London by the finalists chosen from some thousands of players up and down the country, the judge being a Doctor of Music, no less. Presumably the organs used, though small enough to be negotiated by the normal human mouth, were large enough to contain greater harmonic resources than the threepenny example played by the younger Feste. He is limited to two chords. Expiration gives him the tonic, inspiration the dominant seventh, with a ninth stuck on midway as a kind of pimple. To one whose adventures at the pianoforte are at present limited to single notes, the ability to obtain these riches by a mere puff of the breath has provided something of a thrill. The glamour has now lasted for several days, the house resounding (with intervals for meals) to:

Ex. 1.

Yesterday welcome signs of satiety appeared, and I thought the worst was past. But I reckoned without his discovery of the principle of variation. To-day, after a few trial flights, he is making his two chords the bases of brilliant rhythmical flourishes, of which the following are perhaps the best:

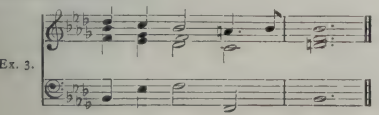
Ex. 2.

The melodic possibilities will soon be exhausted, and the instrument will then join the growing collection of derelict models of various kinds of transport (mostly a wheel or wing short) that, although without visible means of propulsion, somehow manage to make their way into all sorts of unsuitable places. (I know of few things less comfortable to sit on unexpectedly than a tin motor-lorry, 6-in. by 4-in., deceitfully embedded in a cushion.) So the visitation, though fierce, will be short.

---

Not only because of young Feste's mouth-organ have I often wished that the dominant seventh and ninth had never been discovered. They are too much with us, just as their now unfashionable cousin, the diminished seventh, was some years ago. I fancy that Purcell, Bach, and Handel, and, in fact, most of the composers of that period, were aware of the weakness of the dominant seventh. At all events, it is worth while noticing that whereas the seventh is nowadays almost invariably present in the dominant chord when used cadentially, it is far from being so in (for example) the 'Forty-eight.' I have just overhauled the volume, and have been surprised to see how often Bach prefers the plain chord. At first I thought the frequent absence of the seventh was due to the exigencies of two- and three-part counterpoint, but the cadence of, e.g., the B flat minor Fugue in Book 2 shows that the plain chord was the deliberate choice:

Ex. 3.

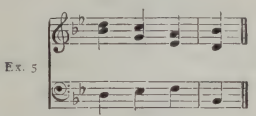


Again, the three-part writing at the end of the B flat major Fugue in the same book would have allowed of the seventh in the middle voice. But Bach prefers to make the G drop to the C:

Ex. 4.

Most composers of to-day would regard the scheme as:

Ex. 5



instead of:

Ex. 6.

It is sometimes interesting to discover in a progression the detail that gives us pleasure. I doubt if I have ever played this Fugue without a special little relish at the cadence. I see now that it was due to that dropping alto.

---

When we have discovered the relishable detail it is worth while carrying our quest a little farther, and trying to see if there was some little bit of reason or logic that made the composer write just so. (Most of us undervalue the part reason and common-sense play in composition. Heart without head has produced very little good music; head without heart quite a respectable quantity; to the pair combined—with the head doing about five-sixths of the job—we owe almost all the masterpieces.) Anyway, here, I think, is the reason for Bach's preference for the C (apart from the fact that it makes the alto more interesting). If we look at the preceding bar we shall note the prominence given to the seventh in the last inversion of the dominant seventh. Those three bass E flats give us ample; the use of the E flat in the alto of the next bar would be just the little more that is too much. Prove this by a further experiment. Resolve Bach's supertonic minor ninth differently, so as to avoid the three bass E flats, and you will find the seventh may be used in the alto of the next bar with no feeling of weakness (though the C is still preferable on melodic grounds):

Ex. 7.

The dominant seventh is heard at its weakest and most cloying in the second inversion. The old composers had little use for it. Notice, for example, how consistently Handel omits the root and makes it a plain chord of the sixth. Yet over and over again we find modern editors filling in basses of Handel, Purcell, &c., and writing :

Ex 8

when all the evidence shows that the composers would have written :

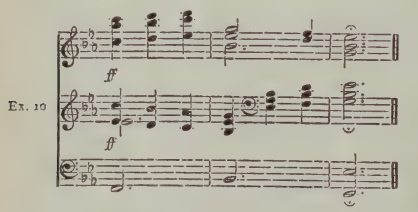
Ex 9

A feeling for such details of style is a more important qualification for editorship than tons of mere learning.

---

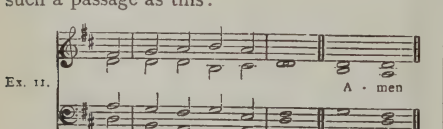
I said above that few composers of to-day ever write a plain dominant chord in a final cadence. Here is a rare example from Saint-Saëns's organ Fugue in E flat :

Ex. 10



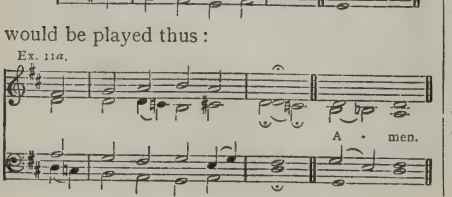
How many organists can play this fine, bold ending without a finger wandering idly to the A flat that makes the close merely ordinary ? – I think I know one who can't—the miscreant under whom I sat in a Midland church recently. Throughout the service he maintained a steady flow of unauthorised sevenths. For example, such a passage as this :

Ex. 11.



would be played thus :

Ex. 11a.

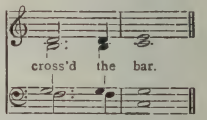


Apparently there is no way of dealing with artistic crimes of this kind. All we musicians can do is to limit our church attendance to services at which there is no music, and, therefore, no risk of annoyance.

---

The third inversion of the dominant seventh is as strong as the second is weak. Unfortunately it seems to be unsatisfactory in cadences. I saw once in a harmony book (whose title I forget) an example from Handel; and J. F. Bridge's setting of ' Crossing the bar ' ends thus (I quote from memory) :

Ex 12.



But I never feel that the seventh is effectively treated by this drop of a fourth in the bass. A very small change is needed, however, to make this into a fine cadence. Substitute A for G, so that you have the ninth instead of the root, and the result is one of the best of closes. (But flatten that ninth and the progression becomes a weak reminder of all the dull fourth-rate composers of a generation ago—Germans to a man, no matter what their nominal race—to whom minor ninths, diminished sevenths, and ' pathetic ' cadences were almost as great an obsession as processions of fourths and fifths, and other archaisms, are to our Hucbalds of to-day.)

---

Coming back to that mouth-organ, and reflecting on those thousands of competitors for the championship, I find myself wondering if we musicians do not undervalue the part played by such humble instruments as jews-harps, concertinas, tin-whistles, harmoniums, and the like. The mere mention of the tin-whistle sends my mind back to the time when, a six-year-old, I made my first music on one that cost no more than a penny—perhaps only a half-penny, for those were fabulously cheap days. And I am sure that the overcoming of many a tough difficulty in adult years has given no more pleasure than that with which I solved certain inevitable problems in the matter of semitones on my first instrument. In the same way, subsequent wrestlings with polyphonic keyboard playing seemed less of a feat than my first effort at part-playing, which took place on a consumptive harmonium. The delight with which I found the hymn-tune ' Eudoxia ' would ' go ' in thirds must have been something like that of one of the organum and descant pioneers. But I had trouble with the cadence. My system of thirds carried out to the bitter end gave me an unexpectedly gloomy cadence :

Ex. 13.

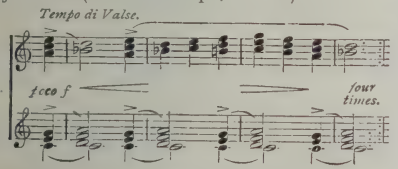
I felt in my bones that the E was wrong, but I couldn't see what else to do with the leading note. (Those early descanters had me beaten there.) However, nobody but myself seemed to mind.

On the contrary, the ability to harmonize a tune thus right away was hailed as a sign of remarkable precocity. On such slender bases does the family circle decide that one is 'a born musician'! However, to that asthmatic harmonium, together with a rather more robust specimen on which, a few years later, I was the proud player at a tiny village church, I still owe a kindly feeling for this most despised of instruments.

As for the concertina, how many musicians know what an excellent and unique effect can be produced from a large number playing together? Wandering recently round the back streets near the docks at Belfast, I heard sounds of approaching music that, for a while, might have been anything—bagpipes, strings, wood-wind, or what-not. It turned out to be a regular band of concertinas, about fifty strong, stepping out smartly, preceded by a drum major, and playing a march in capital style. I have heard far less stirring and musical sounds from more reputable and costly material.

Both Stravinsky and Goossens have seized on the characteristic alternation of the dominant ninth and tonic that is the feature not only of young Feste's mouth-organ but also of hurdy-gurdies and musical boxes of the smaller type. The example in 'Petroushka' is so realistic as to deceive many hearers at first. But Goossens's is even better, seeing that he has only the unpromising pianoforte to work on. Here is the start of the middle section of 'The Hurdy-Gurdy Man' ('Kaleidoscope,' No. 3):

Ex. 14.



In the rest of the piece the mechanism persistently plays G natural instead of G sharp, and there is also a cipher on top B, with other functional disorders. Here the internal trouble affects the B. This piece is among the best examples of musical humour. I am sorry for anybody who can hear it all through without a smile. Yet, like all really humorous things, it has its touch of pathos. Somehow it seems to be an apter expression of human failure and futility than many a pretentious work with a tragic title. I can never hear it without visualising some poor devil with cold-hunched shoulders, coat held together with string, and deplorable boots—own brother to the shivering grinder in Schubert's song.

P.S.—My prophecy that Feste minor would speedily exhaust the melodic possibilities of the mouth-organ has proved to be right. He tells me that he has just heard some gifted youth perform a whole lot of tunes on a shilling flute. Do I think . . .? I do indeed! Never was shilling better spent! A flute by all means; it will be long before (if ever) he can produce a dominant seventh arpeggio from that!

NEW LIGHT ON LATE TUDOR COMPOSERS

By W. H. Grattan Flood

XXXVI.—Richard Carlton

Richard Carlton deserves inclusion in the present series, not only as the composer of a collection of 'Madrigals for Five Voices,' and also as a contributor to the 'Triumphs of Oriana,' but as Master of the Choristers in Norwich Cathedral for over forty years. Dr. Ernest Walker, in his 'History of Music in England' (new edition, 1924), styles this madrigalist 'the remarkably talented and far too neglected Carlton.' Yet very few details of his career have come down to us. In regard to his birth, it is doubtful that he is to be regarded as the 'son of Nicholas Carlton of the Mulliner Book' (as Davey writes); in fact, Dr. Fellowes assures us that 'there is no evidence to show that he was the son of Nicholas Carlton.' It is, however, not unlikely that he was a younger brother of the latter composer, to whom Sebastian Westcote bequeathed a not inconsiderable sum of money in 1582.

I can find no earlier reference to Richard Carlton than the year 1574, in the Easter term of which he matriculated at Clare College, Cambridge, according to Dr. Venn's monumental book of Cambridge graduates. He obtained his degree of B.A. in 157$\frac{7}{8}$, proceeding soon after to Mus. Bac., and took priest's orders in 1581. We can thus assume that he was born circa 1557,* and he was associated with William Cobbald and William Inglott in the musical services of Norwich Cathedral from 1588 to 1608. In 1597 he appears as Minor Canon and Master of the Choristers in succession to William Inglott.

Carlton's creative period as a composer may be dated between the years 1590 to 1606. In addition to vocal music, he wrote some instrumental pieces, including a few interesting Pavans for five viols in parts (cantus, altus, tenor, quintus, and bassus), in the British Museum (Add. MSS., 17,792-96). Mr. Henry Davey, in his brief notice of Carlton, says that Thomas Tomkins 'dedicated a song to him.' But this is a slip, for the dedication of Tomkins's song, No. 20, 'Phyllis, yet see him dying,' in his 'Songs of 3, 4, 5, and 6 parts' (1622), is to 'Master Nicholas Carlton.'

Modern readers are familiar with Carlton by his Oriana madrigal 'Calm was the air and clear the sky,' written in 1600, and included in that collection published in 1601. The merit of the composition has not received adequate recognition, but Dr. Ernest Walker prints the first sixteen bars, describing them as 'the exquisitely fresh and placidly antique opening, which secures the atmosphere of the words as perfectly as does any madrigal of the period.'

* Dr. Fellowes says 'about 1558' ('The English Madrigal').

Carlton's powers are seen to full advantage in his volume of 'Madrigals for Five Voices,' containing twenty-one madrigals, some of which are exceedingly melodious and attractive, and deserve to be better known. This volume, 'by Richard Carlton, priest,' was printed by his friend Thomas Morley in 1601, and though Dr. Fellowes considers 'The witless boy, that blind is to behold' as 'perhaps the best,' I should be inclined to give the preference to No. 13, 'If women can be courteous when they list.' This little gem was evidently much appreciated in the early years of the 17th century, as there is an arrangement of it for five viols in the British Museum among the Add. MSS., 37,402-06.

Carlton's abilities were not without recognition, and gained for him Church preferment, as, in October, 1612, he was presented by Thomas Thursby to the Rectory of Bawsey and Glosthorp in Norfolk. He held this living until 1638 (Venn), and it is assumed that he died in that year, being then an octogenarian. He also held the post of Master of the Choristers in Norwich Cathedral until his death, retaining his Rectory as a non-resident.

---

'THE MUSIC MEETING'

Few people outside the cities and counties of Gloucester, Worcester, and Hereford realise the traditional meaning of this quaint title. It may be of interest to consider its origin.

We may read in 'View of the Conditions of the Parochial Clergy' (Lysons), that as far back as 1408 the Professors of Divinity of the Universities were requested to draw up a statement concerning the poverty and grievances of the Church to be laid before a General Council.

Again in 1535 Bishop Kennett says, 'This is the proper season for doing justice to the parochial Clergy.'

In 1603 the King (presumably James I.), on his accession to the throne, sent injunctions to the Archbishops and Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, to inquire into the state of all benefices, expressing the royal opinion that 'nothing has been a greater impediment to the furtherance of religion than the want of a competent living to maintain learned men, in such places where the ordinary benefit of the vicarages did not suffice.'

Just a hundred years later we find attempts being made to relieve the long-continued distress of the clergy, for in the year 1714 Queen Anne was pleased to give a generous example in 'an act of bounty and perpetual benificence to the poorer clergy out of her own revenue.'

Later on her majesty was pleased to say that 'if the House of Commons can find any proper method by which her good intention to the poorer clergy may be made more effectual, it would be a great advantage to the public, and very acceptable to her Majesty's wishes.'

Probably 'Queen Anne's Bounty' has proved a welcome and acceptable fund for some two hundred years or more. From time to time Parliamentary grants have been made; certainly in 1811 a sum of £100,000 was so devoted to the furtherance of this helpful 'Bounty.'

It is to-day generally realised that for some six centuries a great proportion of the English clergy have been in a distressed state. At the Reformation, when permission to marry was first given them, their condition grew worse and worse, and many died leaving their wives and families penniless and destitute.

It was about the middle of the 17th century that benevolent people began to think of devising some plan for making provision for the widows and orphans.

In this good work the art of music has played, and is to-day playing, no inconsiderable part. Two ancient institutions have largely contributed to this: the Music Meeting of the Three Choirs; and the Feast, or Festival, of the Sons of the Clergy, founded in 1655.

The latter is by a few years the senior institution, and yearly in the month of May its Festival Service is held in St. Paul's Cathedral.

The Music Meeting of the Three Choirs from existing evidence can be traced as far back as 1715, when the choirs of Gloucester, Worcester, and Hereford met annually in each city for the practice of madrigals and glees, and it is probable this custom originated at a much earlier date.

It was not, however, until the year 1722 that the lead given by the 'Sons of the Clergy Corporation' was followed, and 'The Music Meeting of the Three Choirs' organized with the object of providing a 'Charity Fund' for the widows and orphans of the poorer clergy in the three dioceses.

Since that time the 'Music Meeting' has continued to develop in musical stature till it has reached the interesting form in which we know it to-day. The distribution of the proceeds of these ancient gatherings is dealt with by the Diocesan Boards of Finance, and every care is taken that the moneys are used to the best possible advantage, and in strict accordance with the objects for which the 'Meetings' were established. We may express a hope that the three cities of Gloucester, Worcester, and Hereford realise what a valuable asset and copyright they possess in their traditional title, 'The Music Meeting.'

To-day outside the three cities this title is something of an enigma.

At this time of year the man in the street, or in the train, or in his car, is apt to see in the West of England artistically designed posters announcing the 'Three Choirs Festival,' which may or may not cause him to make further inquiries on the subject.

It is certain that the pedigree of these old gatherings would pass the severe examination of the College of Heralds, with honours. We can trace the early 'Meetings' to the years following the Peace of Utrecht, and we can read that the citizens of Worcester were 'somewhat disturbed' by the news that Prince Charlie and his army had reached Derby, and were rapidly marching south. But the harmony of the Three Choirs was to be heard in the city notwithstanding the approaching discord of war.

Apparently the citizens of the three cities at this date allowed nothing to disturb them, for during the Seven Years' War, the French Revolution, the Reign of Terror, and the twenty years' war with France, ending with Waterloo, the Three Choirs were calmly singing on their way quite undisturbed by these historical events.

It is interesting to note that at Gloucester, in 1724, there was only one 'Steward,' who presumably had to 'pay the piper' on any deficit that occurred. In 1756, at Hereford, there appear to have been two Stewards, and from this date to 1798 the same number in the three cities seems to have sufficed. Brave and generous men these Stewards must have been, for they were frequently called upon to 'make good' when the balance sheet indicated a 'musical success, but financial disaster.'

We may note the increasing interest shown in the Music Meeting. At Hereford, in 1864, some fifty-two Stewards responded to the call, and of late years an astonishing increase has taken place, for at Gloucester, in 1925, 'over four hundred ladies and gentlemen of the City and County sent in their names.'

We may take this as a happy sign of increasing sympathy for the cause of the widow and orphan, coupled, no doubt, with the opportunity of hearing the compositions of the ancient and modern masters of music under conditions which only the solemn and religious atmosphere of our old cathedrals can afford them. There, amongst the sister arts of great Architecture and Sculpture, the silent contemplation of all these things undoubtedly creates an effect on thoughtful minds long to be remembered. C. L.-W.

HONORARY DEGREE CONFERRED ON MR. J. A. FULLER-MAITLAND

Musicians will learn with pleasure that Mr. J. A. Fuller-Maitland had the Degree of D.Litt. honoris causa conferred upon him by the University of Durham on June 26 last. The Professor of Music (Dr. J. C. Bridge) presented Mr. Fuller-Maitland, and spoke as follows:

Mr. Vice-Chancellor and Proctors,—I present to you Mr. John Alexander Fuller-Maitland for the degree of Doctor of Letters honoris causa. After graduating at Cambridge University, Mr. Fuller-Maitland devoted himself to the historical and critical side of musical art, and soon showed such a grasp of his subject that in 1889 he was appointed chief musical critic of The Times, a position which, I need not say, could be satisfactorily filled only by a first-class and highly-educated musician. At no time did that great newspaper stand higher in public opinion, and for more than twenty years Mr. Fuller-Maitland held his own with all the other writers on that paper and with all the critics of the day. With wide reading, an analytical mind, and scrupulous fairness, his criticisms were always learned and lucid, and form a great contrast to that nebulous style of writing of the present day which, under a cloud of words, means nothing, and has been aptly described by Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch as 'jargon.'

Having written the 'Life of Schumann,' 'The Age of Bach and Handel' for the 'Oxford History of Music,' and joined in translating Spitta's monumental 'Life of Bach,' Mr. Fuller-Maitland next undertook the laborious work of preparing a new edition of Grove's 'History of Music.' Next, in conjunction with the late W. Barclay Squire, of the British Museum, he laid all musicians under deep obligations by transcribing and publishing the 'Fitzwilliam Virginal Book'—a marvellous collection of early virginal music of which this country may well be proud. As a skilled harpsichord player the work was to Mr. Fuller-Maitland a labour of love, but it entailed much anxiety, as English music publishers would not take any financial responsibility with regard to the work.

Of his other publications I may mention 'The Musician's Pilgrimage' and 'The Spell of Music' (which deal respectively with the psychology of the performer and listener), 'The Consort of Music' (one of the few books which treats of musical ensemble), and an important monograph on Brahms.

Mr. Fuller-Maitland was one of the founders of the Folk-Song Society, and published one of the earliest collections of English folk-songs. His pen has never ceased working, and quite lately he has discovered, deciphered, and edited a Motet in nineteen real parts written by a Scottish monk in 1546.

We old musicians are sometimes called Victorian as a form of reproach. It will be well for music if in another fifty years the art will be found to have been enriched by works equal to those by some of the Victorians, such as Sir George Grove, Mr. Barclay Squire, and Mr. Fuller-Maitland.

The two former have 'passed to the other side,' but happily we still have Mr. Fuller-Maitland with us to receive to-day from this University a reward for his labours on behalf of the great Art and Science of Music.

FAMOUS VICTORIANS IN A TOY SYMPHONY

In the early 'eighties I was living in London, and heard a good deal of music. Quite the most amusing of my experiences in St. James's Hall was an event announced as 'A Concert for the Children's Hospital, Great Ormond Street,' given 'on Friday, May 14, 1880, at 8 o'clock, by the Viscountess Folkestone, assisted by' a number of undistinguished people, together with 'forty members of Mr. Henry Leslie's choir.' The pith of the announcement, however, was that twenty of the most prominent musicians in London would take part in a performance of Romberg's 'Toy Symphony.' It must have been this that induced me to climb the steps to that familiar quarter, the gallery of St. James's Hall, and I was richly rewarded.

The cast of the Symphony orchestra was a strong one. Taking its members in the order in which they appear in the accompanying photograph, they were as follows: Back row, standing (left to right)—Dr. Stainer (trumpet), A. S. Chappell (woodpecker), W. Kuhe (trumpet), Louis Engel (triangle), A. Randegger (drum), Carl Rosa (second violin), J. F. Barnett (pianoforte), August Manns (first violin), Wilhelm Ganz (viola). Seated: J. Barnby (nightingale), F. Cowen (pianoforte), Charles Santley (second violin), W. H. Cusins (first violin), Viscountess Folkestone, Sir Julius Benedict (bells), H. Daubert (violoncello), J. Blumenthal (rattle). Squatting on the ground are Sullivan (cuckoo) and Henry Leslie (conductor). The only absentee is Hallé, who took the 'quail' and was, I presume, allowed leave of absence from rehearsal on the ground of the elementary character of his one-note part. The most pleasing feature of this little band was that, with the exception of Leslie and Daubert, not one member was doing his accustomed job, which gave a peculiar zest to the performance, and made the players all the more keen. Hallé, I remember, put his whole soul into his 'quail,' and Stainer, who was always a wag, found his chance in one passage to give a tremendous blast on his penny trumpet. The effect was so impressive that, meeting him a few days after, I asked him with a great show of seriousness if it was true he was leaving St. Paul's, and when he said he had no such intention, I explained that I imagined, after his great success on the trumpet . . . Sullivan also found occasion for his little joke. In the slow movement he had two cuckoo solos: the first was beautifully executed; the second was just a little flat, as if the bird had been out in the rain all night. Royalties were thick on the ground that evening, and one of them was overheard to say, 'Wasn't your cuckoo just a little out of tune, Mr. Sullivan?' To which aspersion he replied, with a touch of indignation, 'Not in the least, I assure you.'

Photo by] [F. A. Bridge, 6, Norfolk Road, Dalston Lane.

Nor was the fun confined to the Symphony. Leslie's choir not only sang some orthodox part-songs, but introduced an extempore feature not mentioned in the programme, performing on 'Mirlitons' (vulg., 'Tommy-talkers') the March from Gounod's 'Faust,' conducted with great vigour by no less surprising a personage than Trebelli-Bettini, the incomparable contralto of her day. The applause was, of course, vociferous and in response Viscountess Folkestone, Trebelli-Bettini, and Henry Leslie appeared, and performed, on the same delectable instruments, 'Three blind mice.' Even here Trebelli's dramatic instinct was apparent in the immense gusto she put into her lead.

Of all that merry party of musicians only one survivor is left, Sir Frederic Cowen—and, indeed, it was the sight of him in a box at Covent Garden the other day that recalled this comic Intermezzo to my recollection.

Herbert Thompson.

New Music

SONGS

Last month I wrote of the lack of simplicity in modern songs, and here at the top of a new batch of examples is an effective reply to the view I expressed. Ireland's 'When I am dead, my dearest' is absolutely direct, and absolutely simple; the texture of the accompaniment is as plain as possible, and the song relies largely on a straightforward recitation of the words. The vocal line is fresh and apt to the poem, and the whole thing, with words as full of meaning as these are, is very moving. Ireland is not always as simple as this; but it is when he speaks most directly, in terms understood by everybody, that he gets his fullest effect. It was so in 'Sea-Fever,' and it is so here. His new cycle, 'We'll to the woods no more,' is less plain-spoken, and in some ways less striking; it is less effortless; and the constant thickening of simple chords with auxiliary notes is apt to cloy. The vocal lines are firm and telling, and would have had even more force with a pianoforte part of lighter texture. This weakness, if it be a weakness, however, does not rob the songs of their power. They are completely sincere and able settings of Housman's poems, and cannot fail to express for the hearer some of the deep-seated emotions we have all felt. They will depend largely upon the performers, especially the pianist. The closing number of this volume is particularly interesting. Ireland seems to feel that, in this case, he can do no more with the ordinary song form, and his last setting, 'Spring will not wait the loiterer's time,' is a pianoforte solo dealing with the lines that are its motto, and summing up the autumnal, regretful, bitter-sweet message of all these poems. It is an interesting and successful experiment.

S. Taylor Harris's 'The Feast of Christmas' is a good swinging song of plain material and business-like cut. The phrases are of uncommon length, but they have poise, and the work is out of the ordinary. Unusual and thoughtful again is Hall Collins's setting of Wyatt's 'Forget not yet,' but the supertonic close, which is frequent at first, becomes rather irritating before one reaches the end. The song is palpably in G; there can be no doubt of that, and to close it on an A minor chord verse after verse is an affectation. 'Desire in Spring,' by Ivor Gurney, has just such unexpected touches of colour, but manages to incorporate them into the work as a whole; they do not disturb the flow of the song as they achieve their effect. A beautiful and sensitive work is this. Warlock's 'Cradle Song' is a simple tune, seasoned up with some piquant harmony; an unrhythmical performance will make the texture seem unbearably thick, but given the right lilt the song moves along charmingly. As usual, Warlock has found some unknown and very attractive words. All the above songs are Oxford University Press publications. This house also sends three classical songs reprinted for the 1928 Blackpool Festival: Beethoven's 'In des lebens,' with an excellent English version by Marmaduke Brown; Steuart Wilson's translation of Schubert's 'Grenzen der Menscheit'; and Purcell's 'Anacreon's Defeat.' These singable versions of fine works are extremely welcome. The Oxford University Press has also issued Warlock's transcription of some twenty 'ayres' from Bataille's 'Airs de différents autheurs' (1608-18). This volume will be discussed next month.

Two very fresh songs are Patrick Beynon's 'The Ribbon Song' and 'With mirth, thou pretty bird.' The tunes are shapely and well proportioned, and the words lend themselves to long phrasing and a flowing line. The least happy feature of the songs is their accompaniments, which are stolid and rather chunky, but they are plain-spoken and firm, too, and that is a virtue. Altogether the songs are very musicianly and attractive. Chesters are the publishers.

Winthrop Rogers send three able songs by Rebecca Clarke. Most immediately arresting is the setting of Housman's 'Eight o'clock.' It was a big thing to attempt, and I for one think that the terrible little poem is better left alone; but Miss Clarke has done it well. Particularly strong and almost brutal is the final Coda, which seems to say what little the poem left unsaid. That is the point. So often the great power of tragic literature is in what it leaves to the imagination. If music steps in and expresses what was only suggested it wrongs the poem; some will feel that the present setting does this, but no one can deny its real power. The composer's grip of her material is shown again in 'Greeting,' a song quieter in style but not lacking intensity. The most penetrating of the three songs is 'A Dream.' The composer seems here to be making less effort and achieving more; the music does not add, so much as deepen what is already present in the poem—the air of mystery and of fantastic sorrow. It is a completely successful and beautiful song.

Another good song, not so able nor so distinguished as these last, but sincere, straightforward, and effective, is Eva Pain's 'The Death of Robin Hood.' Its directness and obvious truth of style are its making. 'Love's Worship,' by Kenneth Wright, begins well, and has a fine sweep of sound, but fails to maintain the note of intensity with which it begins. It is a pity in a modern song to repeat a rather poor line of verse three times to suit the musical structure. This is a symptom of the song's general weakness; it does not hang together. Its rhapsodical vitality, however, and the generally 'appassionata' air of the work will have effect if the performers are themselves convinced.

'The Isles of Greece,' by Paul Irby, is a set of three Byron songs, published by the Wellington Music Company, and written for a bass voice. They have energy and a scope for vigorous declamatory singing. The poems, fine as they are, are somewhat rhetorical in style, and this is true of the music also.

Schirmers publish Enrique Soro's 'To my sister,' a somewhat facile work in the style associated with Puccini. This is not to say that the song is insincere, but that the style of its emotion is apt to seem stagey when it is not actually on the stage. The song is well-written for a high baritone. 'Jean,' a setting of Burns's 'Of a' the airts,' by Walter Nash, from the same publishers, is commonplace. Commonplace, certainly, John Beach's 'Two Poems,' by James Oppenheim, are not. They are rather the reverse, somewhat far-fetched, but they have colour, and the writer shows skill in his management of vocal and pianistic effect.

T. A.

---

ORCHESTRA

Gerrard Williams deserves much credit for the score of 'Three Traditional Scottish Tunes' (Oxford University Press), which he has arranged in such a way as to be available to a pianoforte trio, flute and string quartet, or an orchestra of strings, flutes, clarinet, cornet, and percussion. Obviously his intention has been to provide a good test-piece for competitive festivals, and in this he has succeeded, the only objection being the employment of the cornet, which, however skilfully used, cannot but be out of place in company of a small number of wood instruments. And there seems to be no reason why one should even appear to encourage the inclusion of this particular brass instrument in the small orchestra. It belongs to a family for which the Crystal Palace does all that is needed in the way of encouragement. If a single brass instrument is to be included, let it be the horn, which is more generally useful, more difficult, and blends better with strings or wood.

From G. Schirmer (New York) comes a Concerto Grosso of Pietro Locatelli, arranged for string orchestra (and soli) and pianoforte or harpsichord by Sam Franko. It is a very likeable work, which exhibits all the austere simplicity which characterises Locatelli's music. The score would be read much more easily if the solo parts had been assigned separate lines from the tutti. On p. 4 the juxtaposition is a positive nuisance to a reader.

F. B.

VIOLIN

Dr. Ernest Walker's 'Variations on a Theme by Joachim' (Oxford University Press) is a notable piece of music in which the composer, while retaining his own distinct personality, has nevertheless suggested very cleverly here and there that of the master whose themes he uses as the foundation for his Variations. There is at least one Variation which might almost be the work of Joachim himself. No doubt the close study of the Variations in E minor has helped to bring about this interesting result, but it certainly made the task more difficult—for the resemblance is purely on the surface, and one of the Variations (at 'F') seems to point to a bias for the pianoforte, for the forte chords of this instrument must inevitably destroy the effect of the violin part. But the work is extremely interesting, and I look forward to its performance, which Miss Jelly d'Aranyi (to whom the 'Variations' are dedicated) will no doubt give soon.

A 'Phantasy' for two violins and pianoforte by Edmund Duncan-Rubbra (Oxford University Press) reveals talent, energy, and enthusiasm—admirable qualities which in time should bring a good harvest. The 'Phantasy' lacks as yet a distinct individuality, but the interest never flags—and this is much.

F. B.

FULL SCORES

William Walton's Overture, 'Portsmouth Point,' made its mark at once, and the issue of the score should therefore be noted by conductors and others interested in modern music. It calls for a large force—twelve wood-wind, eleven brass, three timpani, side-drum, xylophone, cymbals and bass-drum, tambourine, and the usual strings. With its strong diatonic flavour, rhythmic life and variety, and abounding vigour and fling, 'Portsmouth Point' might easily become a popular work, given a few performances instead of the solitary hearing (usually under-rehearsed) that is the lot of so many new orchestral works. (Oxford University Press, 15*s*.).

The String Concerto Grosso has in recent years come into favour again, largely owing, no doubt, to Elgar's splendid example, the Introduction and Allegro. Rupert Erlebach has arranged Archangelo Corelli's Concerto Grosso in C minor, an attractive work in four movements, of moderate difficulty. By the way, would it not be well to add a note stating to what extent the Concerto had been 'arranged'? Editing is one thing, arranging another; and it ought to be made clear as to whether the work is an original, or an adaptation (Oxford University Press, 4*s*. 6*d*.).

From the same house come two more of the instrumental movements from Bach's Cantatas—the Allegro and Adagio which form the two opening movements of the Sinfonia to the Easter oratorio, 'Kommt, eilet und laufet.' (The third movement, curiously, is for vocal duet and chorus.) The Allegro is a typical piece of Bachian festivity, for three trumpets, drums, two oboes, bassoon, and strings. The Adagio is for solo oboe (or violin) and strings. Dr. Whittaker suggests that when both movements are played, the Adagio should be placed first (Allegro, 4*s*. 6*d*.; Adagio, 3*s*.).

Another notable addition to the string orchestra library, from the same publishers, is Antonio Vivaldi's Concerto in B minor, revised and edited by M. Esposito. This is for four violins, two violas, violoncello, and bass, with a good deal of solo work. It is, in fact, a concerto grosso (6*s*. 6*d*.).

Holst's choral ballet 'The Morning of the Year' has already been reviewed in its vocal-score form, besides being discussed after its first performance. It is necessary, therefore, to do no more than mention the publication of the full score by the Oxford University Press (25*s*.), and to give a few details as to the scoring. Although a big force is employed, it is not all indispensable, as is usual with Holst's recent orchestral works. The following instruments are 'cued in,' and may be omitted: second flute, oboe, and bassoon, third and fourth horns, trombones and tuba, timpani, cymbals and glockenspiel, and organ pedals. Further reductions may be made at a pinch, and with a little re-arranging even strings and pianoforte will suffice. The reference to 'organ pedals' above calls for a word. There is no organ part in the usual sense of the term. Only the pedals are employed, with 16-ft. and 32 ft. stops. This is a use of the organ that should be more frequent. A good organ pedal has no equal in the orchestra when gravity and sostenuto are required. Holst suggests that when no organ is available 'a good harmonium may be substituted.' But good harmoniums are few, and not many can provide enough 16-ft. tone to be effective.

CHAMBER MUSIC

It is characteristic of the present time that we should approach so eminently practical a thing as quartet playing from the theoretical point of view, and the object of Alfred Pochon's 'Progressive Method of String Quartet Playing' (G. Schirmer, New York) is, no doubt, to tell young people all about it before they start on the great adventure. Frankly, I see little use in this sort of peptonised teaching. Quartet playing is so much like marriage that the only sensible answer that can be given to those who would enter upon it unripe and unready is—Don't. Beethoven's Quartets are not a fitting training-ground for the novice. Before anyone can hope to get pleasure out of them which is not that of mere vanity, most of the laws set down by Mr. Pochon should be a second nature. I say 'most,' because some of his statements are distinctly startling and should be taken with a grain of caution. Thus Mr. Pochon would correct the erroneous tendency to stress the first quaver in by stressing the second

I utterly fail to see how one wrong accent may atone for another. He advises players to use open strings in certain cases for the sake of greater sonority. Surely there are occasions (and the example he quotes appears to me to be one of them) in which this would destroy the effect wanted by the composer, which may be one of mystery, requiring throughout the particular tone-colour of one string. This shows only one of the dangers attending a purely theoretical statement for the inexperienced to apply as best he may. But I see little use in talking about chamber music to people who apparently have to be warned against letting their mute drop noisily to the floor. And there are some obscure sentences which need to be explained if this work is meant for guileless amateurs.

The Oxford University Press publishes a Sonata for violin and pianoforte by Arthur Somervell which should delight lovers of music which flows gently and naturally. The composer suggests at times the influence of Brahms, but there is no conscious or unconscious plagiarism, and Dr. Somervell can claim with perfect justice that the mood (as well as the matter) is entirely his own. He does not give us dramatic contrasts and poignant themes. He prefers more sedate ways, which, however, give ample scope for tenderness and ingenuity.

F. B.

---

CHURCH MUSIC

The issue of 'Free Accompaniment of Unison Hymn Singing,' by the late Dr. Charles Harford Lloyd (Year Book Press), is particularly welcome at a time when serious efforts are everywhere being made to improve the standard of hymn-singing in our churches. Of the various devices used to impart variety—faux-bourdon, descants, &c.—none is more effective than an occasional verse in unison with varied organ accompaniment. Much depends, however, on the nature of the free accompaniment, and on this point organists will find Dr. Lloyd's book most helpful and suggestive. We are told that the material in this book was apparently designed 'to form the basis of a work which should be both a collection of hymn-accompaniments and also a kind of primer on the free accompaniment of unison hymn-singing.' It was entirely owing to the persuasion of Mr. A. M. Goodhart—who was at Eton during the whole period of Lloyd's precentorship and had a great admiration for his powers of improvisation—that Lloyd was induced to write down so many of these accompaniments. Some sketches were made for the Primer, but death intervened before the work had advanced far. However, organists will be grateful that some forty hymn-tunes are now available in this volume, together with the brief annotations which accompany each tune. The settings provide admirable models of widely varying character. There are some charming examples of an expressive type, and occasionally contrasted settings for different verses are given. The explanatory notes show why a particular method is adopted, and contain, in addition, much illuminating and suggestive comment. Some fine examples—including 'Nun Danket' and 'O God, our Help in ages past'—appear with a continuous crotchet movement in the pedals. 'In accompanying hymn-tunes of dignified character and slow tempo,' says the author, 'a moving bass may effectually be used to steady the time and keep the congregation together.' In others, a pedal point—sometimes inverted—is used; e.g., 'Rockingham' and 'Galilee.' There are numerous examples of canon and imitation, accompanied by some words of warning: 'The figure out of which this tune ["Innocents"] is developed is a tempting one to treat imitatively in the accompaniment. For that very reason it will be well not to abuse the opportunity. . . . It should not be forgotten that it is better to break a canon or forgo a tempting imitation if anything like parade of artifice hinders rather than helps the congregation.'

There is an admirable Preface, which contains some helpful suggestions on registration and other matters. Mr. A. M. Goodhart supplies an Introductory Note, and in an Appendix gives some additional notes on the treatment of the hymns from a recollection of various extempore performances by Dr. Lloyd at Eton.

A new Psalter—'The Parish Psalter,' by Sydney H. Nicholson—is being issued by the Faith Press. It will be published in two editions: (1.) Arranged as in the Book of Common Prayer; (2.) Arranged according to the Revised Lectionary. Its purpose is 'to secure the proper emphasis and rhythm of the words by the simplest means,' the success of the method depending upon 'the intelligence and thought of the singers rather than on a multiplicity of signs.' Those interested should send for 'Specimen Pages,' which quote fully the rules, general principles, and signs used in pointing. As a practical illustration of the method the leaflet gives the Venite (together with the Gloria), noted throughout to a simple chant. In the second verse, by the way, the first 'bar-mark' is missing.

From the S.P.C.K. comes a book of Chants for Sundays and Holy Days, arranged for the revised selection of Psalms. Choirs who sing the select Psalms now provisionally appointed for all Sundays, Festivals, and Holy Days in the year will here find all the necessary chants for any morning or evening on one page or opening, and all in related keys; any transposition required has been done by the Editor. Also, the same chant is set—with obvious advantage—to a particular Psalm whenever it occurs, almost without exception. The chants are mostly well known, and have been chosen according to their fitness in one way or another for good chanting. Realising that good chanting depends largely on a smooth melody, special care has been taken to include only those chants in which the melody is mainly of a conjunct character without wide leaps. The selection has been made by Mr. S. H. Nicholson, Mr. E. T. Cook, and the Rev. A. Ramsbotham, the last-named being responsible for the allotting of chants to Psalms. The book should prove acceptable both for its convenience and also for the discrimination shown in the choice of material.

C. Hylton Stewart has made an excellent arrangement of the old 104th tune for his setting of the hymn 'O worship the King' (Oxford University Press). The opening verse is sung to the usual harmony, verses two and four are for unison (men and boys respectively), faux bourdon settings (with some division of parts and with organ accompaniment) are provided for the third and fifth verses, and the last verse—in unison except for the closing bars and with a massive organ part—makes a fitting climax to an effective little work.

A new edition of Merbecke with adaptations for the alternative Communion Service of 1928 and set with organ accompaniment by J. H. Arnold comes from the Oxford University Press. In an interesting Introduction, Mr. Arnold points out that 'despite John Merbecke's explanation of the notes he used in setting portions of the 1549 Prayer-book to music, agreement has never been reached that he intended precise time values by his "breves, semy breves, and mynymes." In making this edition it is assumed that his "plain tune" for the Kyries, Creed, Sanctus, Benedictus, Paternoster, Agnus, and Gloria will be treated in the manner of the pure plainsong of which it is the direct descendant or adaptation. . . . It will, therefore, be understood that the rhythm is a free speaking-rhythm, not a laboured succession of rigidly equal notes. . . . The old square notation has been kept, because, while it presents no difficulties, it helps the singers to keep the rhythm free.' A simple explanation of the notation is given, as well as advice on the use of the organ, and other matters. The accompaniments are admirable, and the edition, in every respect, may be warmly recommended. G. G

An interesting old work is brought to light in Stanislaw Sylvester Szarzynski's Sonata for two violins and organ, with double-bass playing with the pedals of the latter (and, therefore, optional—or, even better, omitted). The work is dated 1706. The composer was a monk, and also a capable musician who knew his Bach. Two good fiddlers and an organist could make this Sonata an attractive item. The work is published for the Society of Ancient Polish Music by Gebethner & Wolff, Warsaw (no price given).

We have received several numbers of the Craxton-Moffat Collection of old keyboard music. There are here some delightful pieces by Purcell, Felton, Boyce, Kuhnau, Froberger, &c. The editing seems to have been well carried out. Fingering and phrasing marks are added, and also pedalling (judicious, as it ought to be in old keyboard works). A particularly interesting piece of rescue work is that of Henry Holcombe's 'The Brook.' Not many of us have even heard of Henry, whose dates are 1690-1750. Yet 'The Brook' is one of the best things in the collection—an enterprising and effective example of keyboard writing. Antonine Kammell's 'Peasant Dance' is another good example of sprightly music by an unknown composer. The whole set is worth examination. Difficulty is moderate, and the qualities required are those that most need developing in pupils—clean finger-work and a good rhythm. The pieces are published by Cramer.

The systematic practice of sight-reading is too rare among pianoforte students. The excuse may be allowed that there has been a lack of properly-graded material. The right kind of thing comes for review in 'Sight-Reading Tests for Beginners,' by Dora Pierce and Lilian Leavey. They are in two books, and begin with a few simple passages for separate hands. Two-hand work starts with slow motion by step of a second, other intervals being introduced in turn. Both clefs are used throughout. Fingering is added, being wisely limited to a few of the more necessary indications. Book 1 contains eighty-three short tests; Book 2 carries on the total to a hundred and fourteen. Much of the material could be used for ordinary technical purposes. This publication seems to be the very thing for which teachers have been (or should have been) looking (Oxford University Press).

The Oxford University Press has published for the Schubert Centenary an album of Twelve Favourite Songs, with translations by A. H. Fox-Strangways and Steuart Wilson. The set includes the 'Ave Maria,' 'Margaret at the Spinning-Wheel,' 'The Serenade,' 'The Double,' 'The Hurdy-Gurdy Man,' 'The Young Nun,' &c. The translations are already so well known and approved as to need no further word. A fine portrait of Schubert adorns the cover.

From Winthrop Rogers come two useful and attractive contributions to the development of the pianist's left hand. Alec Rowley's 'Colla Sinistra' consists of nine easy pieces for the left hand alone; the 'Six Studies' of Felix Swinstead's are rather more advanced, though still not difficult. Two are for left hand alone; the others have a simple part for right hand.

Gramophone Notes

By 'Discus'

H.M.V.

Some re-recordings of a few months ago call for a word, belated though it be. The 'Jupiter' Symphony, as played by the L.S.O. under Albert Coates, is, above all, mettlesome, the Finale especially. Coates is not a Mozart conductor, yet his headlong methods are well employed here, and one cheerfully dispenses with a trifle of polish for the sake of the fire (D1359-62), each of the four taking one movement.

It is interesting to hear 'Till Eulenspiegel' by the above performers after the recent recording of the Brussels Conservatoire Orchestra under Defauw. Coates brings out the blend of humour and drama, and his reading is strong where Defauw's seemed to be weak—at the end. This is, in fact, one of the best of recent orchestral records (D1418-19).

Mozart's Quartet in B flat (the 'Hunting') is played admirably by the Budapest Quartet save in regard to one point. The Minuetto is taken at (I think) far too slow a pace—right for dancing statelily, but wrong for purely musical purposes. After all, one of its chief purposes in a cyclic work is to provide contrast; here it is too like the slow movement.

Having committed one mistake, the players add another by taking the Trio at almost double the pace! I remember questioning a similar vagary on their part in their performance of a Schubert Quartet, where, for some unaccountable reason, they adopted a slower pace for the Trio.

Distinguished players and singers have ample latitude already; but the line ought to be drawn at such pointless eccentricities as this. As I said above, the playing is capital otherwise, and the recording beautifully clear (D1387-89).

The prime virtue about the records of Mozart's G minor Symphony (Royal Opera Orchestra, Covent Garden, and Malcolm Sargent) is animation, especially in the Finale. The playing is not conspicuous for feeling or subtlety. The tone of the strings is on the cutting side at times—in all the fortes practically. I like the roughness in the Minuet. Is there a more modern-sounding Minuet in all the classical symphonies? It shows us the Mozart that might have been, given a longer lease of life and less artificial conditions. These records make a good companion set to those of the 'Jupiter' noticed above, being no less vital and a trifle more polished (C1347-49).

I am disappointed with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra's performance of Handel's 'Largo.' It lacks variety, and the continuous pizzicato of the accompanying strings irritates by its aggressive 'plonk, plonk.' The organ part records well. Mr. Stock does better with the piece on the other side—the G minor Slavonic Dance of Dvorák, where he is all out for violent contrast. Even so, I have heard better orchestral recording; there is a slight touch of fog. But it is good enough to make us wish that another of these vivid dances had been put in place of the 'Largo' (D1432).

The other orchestral record from over the water is better. It gives us the 'Fingal's Cave' Overture, played by the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra under Rudolph Ganz. This is Mendelssohn at his best, on the whole worthily played (D1299).

The Victor Olof Sextet is better employed than such light music combinations are wont to be, in effective transcriptions of three of MacDowell's best-known pieces—'To a wild rose,' 'In autumn,' and 'To a water-lily' (B2690).

The question of pianoforte tone is raised again by the record of Backhaus's in Schubert's Impromptu in B flat and the F minor 'Moment Musical.' There is scarcely a jangled note throughout. If Backhaus can make a pianoforte sound like a pianoforte and not like a superior kind of banjo, why can't other players? This is one of the most successful of Centenary records, though I think there is a bit more fancy in the 'Moment Musical' than Backhaus brings out. But there can be little doubt that, with his beautiful clarity and excellent tone, Backhaus is without a superior as a gramophone pianist (DB1126).

The record issued a year or so ago of Dupré playing the Finale of Mendelssohn's B flat Organ Sonata was conspicuously successful. Here is the first movement and the Adagio. The latter is worth playing and hearing as a voluntary, but it doesn't seem worth recording. The opening Allegro con brio, on the other hand, is a fine piece of music that shows Mendelssohn sitting at Bach's feet to good purpose. It has a truly Bachian vigour, without being imitative in the derogatory sense of the term. Dupré makes less of a success with it than with the Finale, where his fondness for a prevailing reediness could be indulged with good results, as it suited the march-like style of the piece. In the Allegro it makes for monotony. I wish he had stuck to diapasons for most of the contrapuntal parts, reserving the reeds for the dotted-quaver chordal sections. In the latter, by the way, there appears to be too much 16-ft. manual tone. The rolling semiquaver figure on which the movement is chiefly founded is not clear save when it occurs in the higher parts. Rhythm and pace are excellent (D1433).

There are three capital operatic records. Galli-Curci and De Luca are first-rate in a couple of extracts from 'La Traviata.' This is a less familiar side of the soprano, being expressive and dramatic instead of merely showy. De Luca sings, instead of yelling as do too many of his kind (DB1165). Pertile is not free from this fault in 'Lohengrin's Narration,' though there is enough fine singing to make us overlook it (DB1107).

John Brownlee sings the Prologue from 'Pagliacci,' and again I emphasise the verb. He resists the temptation to slop over, and keeps things alive rhythmically. Only vitiated opera-goers will fail to appreciate such 'straight' singing of a number that is usually acclaimed in proportion to the distortion and bad taste of its performance. The record gives us the whole of the long orchestral introduction, well played and reproduced; it demonstrates once more the limited resources of these lesser operatic composers when unsupported by text and voice (D1385).

The recording of Delius's 'Brigg Fair,' played by the London Symphony Orchestra under Geoffrey Toye, is far more successful than that of the 'Cuckoo' piece by the same performers a short time ago. The clarity is greater, though there is still—and probably always will be in Delius records—a vagueness in the background of the quieter passages. As we often feel this even in a first-hand performance, we can hardly expect the gramophone to dispel it. The climaxes in these records are first-rate, and there is much of the true Delius glowing richness (D1442).

Ernst Viebig and the Berlin State Orchestra make the most of an old friend in the Overture to 'Martha' (C1506); and further cheerful stuff is recorded in the Ballet Music from 'Samson and Delilah' (Berlin State Orchestra; Leo Blech, D1444); a selection from Gounod's 'Faust' (C1511); and Komzák's 'Vienna by night' (C1507), the two last-named being played by Marek Weber and his orchestra. Judging from Komzák's medley, Vienna still turns to the waltz for diversion rather than to the fox-trot.

The Budapest String Quartet is better suited in the Nocturne from Borodin's D major Quartet than in some of the older classics, judging from the Schubert and Mozart examples mentioned above. The Nocturne is a very attractive piece, not strikingly original in its themes, but written with a good eye for effect, and always musicianly. There is a capital canonic section (D1441).

A pianoforte record above the average in every way is that of Arthur Rubinstein playing the Chopin Barcarolle. It is free from the rhythmic eccentricity with which so many players spoil their Chopin, and the tone is mainly good (DB1161).

Harold Darke's latest organ record pleases me less than its predecessors, partly because of his choice of work. Wesley's 'Choral Song' and Franck's Andantino in G minor do not show the composers at anything near their best. This would matter less if the recording were clearer; there is some confusion in the Wesley, and in the Franck the accompanying manual is often blurred. The St. Michael's, Cornhill, organ has hitherto shown itself so well adapted for gramophone purposes that this falling off may be peculiar to my sample record (B2730).

Schubert's 'Hark! hark, the lark,' and 'The Rosebud' call for a lighter touch than Elsie Suddaby gives them. (By the way, when will singers realise that Shakespeare wrote 'with everything that pretty is,' not 'That pretty bin'?) Miss Suddaby's other song is not a happy choice. When all is said as to the equality of the sexes, the fact remains that the 'Serenade' is not a woman's song, even in leap year. It would be no more out of place for a man to sing 'Margaret at the spinning-wheel.' With so many appropriate Schubert songs available, why choose an obvious misfit? (B2746).

Nor does there seem to be any good reason why Florence Austral should bring to light Chopin's poor song, 'The Betrothal.' (It is one of the set of seventeen published posthumously.) The accompanying song, Gordigiani's 'Ogni sabato avrete il lume acceso,' though equally unpretentious, shows the lesser man to be the better song-writer. Miss Austral's singing of it is delightfully varied and expressive, but she is not faultless in the matter of intonation (E506).

A record of Granforte and Monti in a couple of extracts from 'Aida' is unusually good, not only in regard to the actual singing and orchestral reproduction, but above all on the dramatic side. Rarely does the gramophone convey so much of this feeling of a stage performance. (When it does, you will almost invariably find that the composer is Verdi.) (DB1153.)

COLUMBIA

The loss is mine, no doubt, but I am rarely able to feel more than a languid interest in the very-much-revived 'Blue Danube' waltz. As one of the rare occasions is when listening to the record of its performance by the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, under Weingartner, true blue Danubians will gather that both playing and recording are above the normal (L2086).

There is so much delightful playing in the Catterall-Squire-Murdoch records of Tchaikovsky's Trio in A minor that one regrets to have to lead off by complaining about the low scale of power. The defect is almost certainly due to the recording, for one cannot imagine first-rate players failing in this way. The point is of special importance in the Tchaikovsky work, not only because of its great length but also by reason of its style and scope. Over and over again one feels that the composer was thinking in terms of the orchestra rather than of three solo instruments. At such moments we want power, and it is this lack of real tonal climax that makes the records somewhat monotonous.

Coming down to details: the violoncello (always the problem in regard to balance) is frequently lost. Mr. Squire's customary sweetness of tone gets little chance in a work of this kind; the need is for bite and grip. Mr. Murdoch is partly responsible for the occasional overwhelming of the violoncello; he over-hits in the ff chordal passages.

On the whole, I recommend the reader to follow this performance with the score. (The work is in the Donajowski Miniature Series, and is well worth study, apart from listening.) The performance is complete, save for a 'cut' in the final variation—one suggested by the composer himself. The fugal variation is usually sacrificed; it is good to find it retained here, if only as a reminder that Tchaikovsky could do this sort of thing better than most composers. In fact, a hearing of the Trio always strengthens one's conviction that Tchaikovsky is an under-rated composer. This fine set of variations takes a high place as an example of the form; and the Trio itself is one of the most notable of In memoriam works. (But for it, who would remember Nicholas Rubinstein to-day?) (L1942-47).

Schubert works continue to appear. Here is the Pianoforte Sonata in A, admirably played by Myra Hess. This Sonata is on the short side, and is all the better for that. It has a pleasant first movement, an expressive and simple Andante, and a lively and most engaging Finale. The pianoforte tone is not first-rate in loud passages. The Sonata is on five sides, the sixth being given to the Ballet music from 'Rosamunde,' which 'comes off' excellently as a pianoforte solo (L2119-21).

Albert Sammons is as effective as we expect him to be in two familiar Massenet pieces—the 'Meditation' from 'Thaïs,' and 'Elegie' (9415).

Although Grieg's songs show him at his best, they are strangely neglected. It is to be hoped that Dora Labbette will follow up the start she has here made with 'The Emigrant' and 'The Nightingale.' She sings them very expressively, and the sole fault is in regard to the words, which are heard only fitfully. The accompaniments are played by orchestra; as a general principle the orchestrating of pianoforte song accompaniments is a mistake. Grieg may have scored these songs; if not, the orchestrator's name should be given, if only to inform us that the scoring is not the composer's (9423).

Three records of unusual interest are labelled 'The pipes of three nations,' and give extraordinarily good reproductions of solos on the Northumbrian small pipes, the Irish Uilleann pipes, and the Highland bagpipes. The most musical is the first-named, which reminds us pleasantly of both clarinet and flute; the Irish has something of the same quality. The Highland bagpipe, with its tearing, exciting quality, has an appeal of its own. These three records contain nearly twenty tunes, and are of more than merely musical interest. If only one record is desired, I recommend the first as being the most varied. It contains two solos for each of the three pipes (4879-81).

PARLOPHONE

The main interest this month is orchestral.

Many musicians sniff at the '1812' Overture, but I rejoice in not yet having reached that stage. Here it is, conducted by Dr. Weissmann, and so successfully played and recorded that nothing better need be asked for. There is plenty of excitement (except for the superior folk, that is), yet everything is musical. The bells, as usual, are uncannily realistic. This is the third recording of the Overture that I have tried in a short time, and on the whole I give it at least as high marks as any. Perhaps on purely musical grounds it deserves an extra pip (E10712-13).

The same conductor and orchestra are responsible for a record of the Introduction to Act 3 of 'Tannhäuser,' a movement that is comparatively rarely heard. There is good playing here, barring some fogginess in the opening, which may be incidental to my sample record only. The loud brass tone is first-rate (E10711).

The Ballet Music from Gounod's 'Faust' needs, I think, a rather lighter touch than is given it by G. Cloez, of the Paris Opéra-Comique. But the playing is good otherwise, and with orchestral colour very clear and varied (E10714-15).

Rather more brilliant is the record of a Johann Strauss Fantasia, conducted by Edith Lorand, and played by the orchestra bearing her name. It may be heresy, but I prefer these snatches of Strauss Waltzes to one long one. 'The Blue Danube,' for example, may be heavenly to dance to, but it is boring qua music. Hence the justification of a pot-pourri for purely listening purposes (E10716).

Since eulogising Backhaus as a gramophone pianist I have made acquaintance with Pembauer on a Parlophone record. He runs Backhaus very close in the matter of tone, besides being a fine player. He is recorded in the brilliant 'Waldesrauschen' of Liszt, and Chopin's D flat Prelude. I prefer him in the former (perhaps because the music has more interest), but both are excellent (E10717).

Interest declines somewhat in the vocal records. Robert Burg's singing in 'O Star of Eve' and another extract from 'Tannhäuser' shows him to be guilty of scooping attack and an unsteady line, but there can be no question as to the excellence of his voice (E10721).

I prefer Gotthelf Pistor, whose singing of 'Ein Schwert verhiess mir der Vater' and 'Was gleisst dort hell im Glimmerschein,' from 'Die Walküre,' shows a fine voice and dramatic style (E10720).

Coloratura singing justifies itself only when it is beyond criticism. There must be no doubts, and no sense of effort on the part of the singer. Hence my disappointment with the record of Margherita Salvi in 'O d' amor messagera,' from Gounod's 'Mirella.' The staccato is stabbed, instead of being lightly touched off, and there is too much of it. The performance lacks the ease and clarity that this kind of thing depends on for its success. The singer is better in 'Ardon gl' incensi,' from 'Lucia di Lammermoor,' but still the result cannot compete with the best examples of florid singing. The voice has great range, with some very high notes that miss being perfectly enjoyable because of a touch of hardness (E10718).

The Irmler Choir sings what the label tells us is 'In dulci Jubilo, 14th century.' I turned it on, expecting the familiar old carol. Instead, there came a dull piece of commonplace suggestive of the 19th century. The singing is not effective, and I don't like the portamento at the end of the verse. On the other side is Mozart's 'Laudate Dominum,' with orchestra—a rather attenuated one—and soprano soloist. The lady is the best of the party. This record is disappointing in view of the progress recently made in the reproduction of choral singing (E10723).

The Musician's Bookshelf

'The History of Music.' By Cecil Gray.

[Kegan Paul, 12*s.* 6*d.*]

The fact of this volume being one of a series published under the general title of 'The History of Civilization' is significant of a change of attitude towards music. You will search the standard histories in vain for any recognition of the great function the art has played in the development of civilization. Even so recent a book as Mr. Chesterton's 'Short History of England' ignores music. It is sometimes said in excuse that historians are not musicians. Nor is Mr. Chesterton a soldier. Yet the fact does not hinder him from going very fully into military matters.

Mr. Gray's previous writings have shown that he has two qualifications not usually possessed by writers on music—an independent outlook and a live literary style. Both qualities have their dangers, especially when the job in hand is the writing of history, and Mr. Gray has not escaped them. His independance is apt to degenerate into personal bias, and his liveliness into mere smartness. We intend to review his book at more than ordinary length, first because we have found it more than ordinarily interesting, and second, because it is intended for the general public rather than for the musician, and therefore certain of its debatable conclusions ought not to pass unchallenged.

The author begins his survey with Gregorian chant and (tantalisingly but logically) stops just short of contemporary music. In place of the usual stock-taking, he ends with a discussion of æsthetics—one of the best things in the book.

His chapter on plainsong is refreshingly unlike the bald statement of facts and mode-tables that such things are wont to be. For once in a way we find a musical historian writing about plainsong with a keen and instructed sense of its beauty. His not very convincing views as to its origin—he contends that it derives neither from Hebrew nor Greek sources, but is an entirely new form of art—matter less than his enthusiasm and his ability to make the reader see wherein its beauty lies. No finer eulogy of plainsong has been written, and, warm as it is, it will be endorsed by every reader who has come under the spell of this old music. As to its origin: having rejected the usually-accepted sources, and having nothing definite to substitute, he says:

> If we accept the definition of a miracle as a phenomenon contrary to or deviating from the laws of nature, then we may justly call Gregorian chant a musical miracle, for its beauty and appeal are not to be accounted for by any known laws or principles governing musical art, but exist in spite of them, in defiance of them. Are we not almost forced to conclude that, in the words of Huysmans in his 'En Route,' 'Le véritable créateur de musique plane, l'auteur inconnu qui a jeté dans le cerveau de l'homme la semence du plain-chant, c'est le Saint-Esprit'? It is at least a simpler, more plausible, and in every way more satisfying and convincing explanation of its existence than the theory that would assign its origin to a Greek or to a Jewish music about which we know next to nothing, and care rather less.

Rash Mr. Gray, to put forward—even with that hedging 'almost'—such a theory in this sceptical and mechanised age! And why include only plainsong in this theory of inspiration? There are other examples of Church music no less perfect; and non-church masterpieces by the dozen which are sacred in all but the label. (A little slip on p. 13 has to be noted. The Dorian mode is described as being 'E to E on the white notes of the piano,' instead of D to D. The scale given by E to E is the Phrygian.)

In his discussion of the early polyphonic schools Mr. Gray has no difficulty in exposing the superficiality of the usual judgment that lumps together Flemings, Spaniards, Italians, and English, regarding them as mere satellites to the Palestrinian sun. His pages on the Spanish school should rouse interest in a department of Church music so far unexplored by editors and choirmasters. His view that Palestrina's works mark, not the culmination and model of the contrapuntal style, but a decadence and emasculation thereof, will startle some readers, but it can be upheld. Many of us have long since come to prefer the daring and vigour of the best of the English school—above all, Byrd—to the continual smoothness of the Italian. (How could critics ever have called Byrd 'the English Palestrina'?) Mr. Gray is rightly impatient with the present-day tendency to exaggerate the merits of the Tudors and Elizabethans, but he holds that even when allowance is made for such extravagance, the 15th- and 16th-century Englishmen were at least the equals of any other contemporary group of Continentals, and that above all the English school beat its rivals so far as the number of eminent names is concerned. His review of the Englishmen, however, does less than justice to Gibbons, we think.

His plea for intellect in music is sound and necessary. Even musicians share too much the public shyness of brains as an element in art. 'Why all this parti pris against intellect as such? . . . . The idea at the back of it would seem to be that art and intellect are irreconcilable, antagonistic even, that music in particular exclusively appeals to or expresses the emotions—one of the most pernicious and pestilential heresies that have ever devastated æsthetics.' This is well said.

On the 'borrowings' of Handel he is overlenient. It may be, as he says, 'one of the surest signs of a second-rate artist or an amateur to scruple to make use of suggestions made by others if they should happen to answer his purpose.' Suggestions, yes; but whole movements, no. That is a sign of something far worse than a second-rate artistic sense. Logically, Mr. Gray's principle works out thus: A scruple about incorporating in his own work movements from other composers is a sign of a second-rate artist; Handel is the only prominent composer who had no such scruple; therefore all composers other than Handel are . . . !

Handel was always the most hurried and sketchy of composers, and it is better to admit frankly that if he wanted a ready-made movement on the spot he took any one that happened to be at hand. Sometimes it turned out to be one of his own, sometimes not. It is easy to forgive him, because of the almost invariably good results, but he would have been a greater man and a better artist had he confined his adapting to his own works, as did Bach and others, almost without exception.

Bach, by the way, comes in for eulogy as fine as it is discerning. We have read no better summing-up of Bach than that on pages 156-158.

So far as Beethoven is concerned, Mr. Gray is all for the later chamber works. The 'Emperor' Concerto, the fifth and sixth Symphonies, the 'Appassionata' Sonata, and the Rasoumovsky Quartets are 'unmistakably dated.' (Not the Rasoumovskys, surely!)

> It is music that . . . belongs to a period, and speaks the same language and utters dogmatically in music the same order of ideas and emotions that Rousseau, Shelley, and other literary men of his time expressed in words—the brotherhood and equality of man, the perfectibility of human nature, and all the rest of the outworn shibboleths of that age which have no longer any meaning for us, or, when they have, repel us with their inadequacy and seeming falsity.

How short-sighted was the view so long held that the later chamber works were obscure because the composer was deaf! As Mr. Gray says, the disability, so far as composition was concerned, helped rather than hindered. And he backs up this theory by pointing out that all Beethoven's recorded complaints as to his deafness are on the score of social, not musical, disability. (To-day, when quiet and retirement are almost unattainable, spells of total deafness would benefit all brain workers.)

Schubert comes in for a good deal of disparagement, but only the out-and-out enthusiasts are likely to dissent. Liszt's well-known description of him as the most poetic of musicians is traversed. Mr. Gray is right, we think, when he says that the Liszt dictum is probably true of the composer at his best; but (he goes on):

> . . . if we are speaking of his work as a whole it would be probably nearer the truth to say, in a somewhat depreciatory sense, that he was the most musicianly of all musicians who have ever lived; the least in contact with the outside world or with anything apart from music, the most completely lacking of all great composers in the purely cerebral power which is the necessary concomitant of the highest artistic achievements, and the most dependent on the commonplace formulas and clichés which are the stock-in-trade of the professional hack musician. He, indeed, and not Mozart, is the very type of the conventional music-machine, contentedly turning out work after work, day after day, without any expenditure of mental effort, and unrestrained by any faculty of self-criticism.

The later and larger instrumental works contain much fine music, but they are 'all in varying degrees diffuse in form, slipshod in craftsmanship, and unequal in content; side by side with the most exquisite moments we find whole stretches of listless and flaccid music-making and sterile repetition.' A stiff course of contrapuntal discipline might have saved Schubert, as it has saved others; and it is known that he contemplated such a course. But Mr. Gray doubts whether he had strength of mind sufficient for the ordeal. 'There was a lack of intellectual fibre and grit about his whole personality—a flabbiness and superfluity of adipose tissue in his mind as in his body. . . .' Certainly, for advocatus diaboli in this Centenary year we need not look farther than Mr. Gray!

Schubert has often been compared to Keats. Mr. Gray puts forward Burns as a better prototype, and not without reason. The musical counterpart of Schubert he finds rather in Bellini. Both show the same lack of taste and self-criticism; both exercised considerable influence, both good and bad, on their successors; both were over-luscious and sentimental; and both were consumptive. Mr. Gray brings up the pathological side of this similarity later when discussing two other consumptives, Weber and Chopin. He speculates as to how far, if at all, the disease is 'responsible for the appearance in the work of all three of similar characteristics, both stylistic and psychological, and for the fact that Weber and Bellini are the only two composers who exercised any influence on Chopin's art, or for whose music he cherished an active sympathy.' There may be something in this, but it must not be forgotten that the anything-but-consumptive Bach was certainly a powerful influence in Chopin's development, not only as a pianist ('before giving a recital,' he used to say, 'I shut myself up for a few days and play Bach'), but also as a composer. The contrapuntal basis of much of Chopin's work is often overlooked because it is merely implicit. For example—only one of many—the Berceuse is essentially polyphonic in its conception, besides being a highly poetic adaptation of one of the severest of forms, the ground bass.

Mr. Gray is no Franckian. There is much in his adverse criticism of that composer, but he seems to miss the real cause of the composer's weakness. Of Franck's habit of stimulating his creative faculty by pounding away at other composers' music on the pianoforte we read that it is 'symbolically significant, and points unerringly to the central defect and fatal weakness of all his work, which is that it is essentially music derived from other music, and divorced from all contact with life and reality.' But we have it on the authority of one of Bach's contemporaries that John Sebastian himself was given to the same habit:

> Before improvising he generally played, from the score, a work by some other man, as if he had first to set the machine of his invention going by artificial means.

The reason why a good deal of Franck's music becomes cloying is to be found not in its derivative character. On the contrary, it derives too little from his idols, Bach and Beethoven, save in some matters of structure. The trouble is that it is too Franckian—too limited in vision, and far too chromatic. Nevertheless, Mr. Gray's list of acknowledged successes is too small; it should have included more of the organ works than the Three Chorals. Many organists do not admit them to be his best work in this field. They are overladen with emotion and chromaticism; the Six Pieces on the whole show greater strength and resource. Still, Mr. Gray is sounder in his animadversions on Franck than in those on Brahms, whom he regards as little more than a gifted miniaturist. Not many of us can be brought to look on the Symphonies as failures—even comparative. And the chamber music is not even mentioned, beyond a passing reference to the Violin Sonatas. Berlioz, on the other hand, comes in for half a dozen pages of eulogy. We wish space allowed for dispute. One point only: Like all true-blue Berliozians, Mr. Gray claims that he is a melodist. But what single tune of Berlioz's has seized the ear of musicians (to say nothing of the crowd) as countless tunes of other composers have seized them? If the answer is that Berlioz's works are too neglected for the test to be fair, the further question arises: Is not this neglect largely due to, and a proof of, the composer's weakness of invention?

Judging from this book, English music ceased with Purcell. Admit the lean times, and there are still a few English names as worthy of mention as those of Marschner, Boccherini, or Meyerbeer.

But this is only one of many respects in which the book is highly provocative. Perhaps it is too much to expect a historian of music to keep his prejudices entirely in abeyance; but Mr. Gray might almost be said to flaunt his. There are inconsistencies, too. We take one which is so vital as to undermine the whole principle on which Mr. Gray claims to work. On p. 3 he says:

> The almost exclusive preoccupation of musical historians with questions of formal and idiomatic evolution has had many dire results, and none more so than the habit it has engendered of regarding a whole school or period as leading up to one or two outstanding figures, in whom all the virtues and qualities of their predecessors are presumed to be contained.

There is truth in this, though too much may be made of it in the face of the generally-admitted fact that "the greatest genius is the most indebted man.' Anyway, it is the line on which Mr. Gray sets out to write. We rub our eyes, therefore, when we read on p. 207:

> Wagner's steady advance towards mastership is . . . a process of triumphant assimilation and expansion. He seems almost to suck the strength and vitality from the art of all his predecessors, one by one, like a vampire, leaving them pale and lifeless; he does not so much sum up the work of others, as Bach does, but rather robs them—in 'Rienzi' Meyerbeer and Spontini, in the 'Flying Dutchman' Marschner, in 'Tannhäuser' and 'Lohengrin' Weber, in 'Tristan' and 'The Ring' Liszt, in 'Die Meistersinger' Bach even, in all of them, of course, Beethoven—these are only a few of the more obvious sources from which he derives his artistic substance.

What about those 'dire results' now?

As we have hinted, Mr. Gray's smartness sometimes irritates, but often he hits the bull's-eye with an amusing shaft. For example, in the course of a sound appraisement of the three Chopins—the drawing-room idol, the Polish patriot, and the writer of the Studies, Preludes, and Scherzos ('the greatest of all')—he alludes to the Valse- and Nocturne-Chopin's attractiveness to women, and aptly calls him 'the Rudolph Valentino of music.'

Women won't like the author for this, and still less for his pronouncement on women composers:

> There is very little music in existence which is predominantly feminine in its appeal, largely because no female composers of eminence have yet appeared, or are ever likely to appear. Such as there are would seem to make it a point of honour almost to be plus royalistes que le roi, and to attempt to outdo mere man in exhibitions of strenuous masculinity.

If this does not bring Dame Ethel Smyth about his ears we shall be disappointed.

A provocative book, then, and an unequal one. But the balance is on the right side. The reader is not likely to put it down in a hurry, and long-established sets of valuations will be none the worse for being disturbed by frequent half-bricks.

We end with a word of thanks for what is perhaps the prime merit of the book—its comprehensiveness. Throughout the author keeps the promise he makes in the Preface—to study the art of music 'not as a thing apart, but in relation to other human activities and to life generally.' Hence an abundance of reference to and discussion of the kindred arts, religion, social changes, &c. Here he shows vision and an alert, well-stored mind. It may be that some lack of soundness on the purely musical side is the price we pay for merits so unusual in a history of music. If so, only short-sighted readers will quarrel with the bargain.

---

'Clara Butt: Her Life-Story.' By Winifred Ponder.

[Harrap, 12*s.* 6*d.*]

There will always be difference of opinion concerning the relative greatness of present-day singers; probably no two critics would agree as to the name of even the first half-dozen. But so far as popularity is concerned, the name of Clara Butt would indisputably come at the top of the poll, or very near it. Hence there should be many readers of this book, which is more interesting and better written than such works are wont to be. This is not saying much, it is true. But in fairness it must be admitted that the more popular the singer, the greater is the biographer's difficulty, seeing that the record soon becomes a mere chronicle of success—success almost inevitably gained by the repeated performance of works whose actual musical value is too often slight.

It is odd to read that Clara Butt's voice was at first regarded as soprano—a misunderstanding due to its enormous range. Her first teacher was herself a soprano, and finding Clara able to sing a high B with ease, gave no thought to the other end of the voice. Clara, however, had her own opinion, and used to produce low notes in a room by herself.

Success came early, with the Open Scholarship at the Royal College of Music, and never stopped. The account of Clara's singing for the scholarship, hurling Hatton's 'The Enchantress' at the examiners while they walked about the room excitedly talking, is good reading. She was a 'handful' on many occasions during her student days; not for nothing was she known in the professor's common room as 'the girl with spirit.' Parratt discovered this one day. After rehearsing at the Albert Hall for a performance due in the evening of 'Israel in Egypt,' Clara hurried across to the College to take her place with the altos in Parratt's choral class. With the rehearsal behind and the performance before her, she was naturally taking things easily. Parratt missed the usual power from the alto section, and after some pointed hints, asked, not without acidity, 'Do you think you are there for ornament, Miss Butt?' As the singer had been giving herself some credit for coming to a rehearsal at all in the circumstances (how many singers have had Royal Choral Society engagements while still students?), she banged her music down and departed, saying, 'No! I'm not here for ornament! But I know one thing. I'll never come to this class again!' And didn't. In a prolonged quarrel with Stanford the singer again came off with the honours. It is not unreasonable to assume that some of the antagonism shown by Stanford and others was due to her success with songs which they regarded with contempt—for Dame Clara has in her time sung a great deal of feeble music. It is, perhaps, idle to conjecture as to whether she would have been equally popular had she shown a more stringent taste in her choice of song. Personally, we believe that a singer endowed with so unique a blend of voice, presence, and personality would have had the crowd at her feet, no matter what she sang. A performer who achieves immense popularity with a repertory that is decidedly 'mixed' can hardly complain if such success is bought at the price of some loss of prestige among musicians. Their natural feeling is that a performer assured of an enormous public has an equally enormous responsibility in regard to the musical taste of that public. Can it be said that the influence of Dame Clara Butt on the musical taste of her day has been for good? We think not. In this respect she is far from being alone among singers, it is true. And if her admirers object to this stricture, we reply by asking if any instrumental performer of repute has ever been heard to play in public music on so low a level as certain of the Dame's most successful songs. There is only one answer.

Still, our reading of this book has given us a respect and admiration for the woman that we have never been able to feel for the singer. Her combativeness as a student, her all-round interest in life, and her indefatigability in good works—for years she used to go to sing every Monday to the mothers' meeting at a West Ham Mission; she 'opened' their new church and gave it an organ; the charities she has generously supported are too numerous to be listed; and her voice was always at the service of philanthropy, from the early days when as a young girl she sang to the patients in Bristol Infirmary—these things may fairly be set against some lapses on the musical side. And we like to read of her turning down an engagement at a big Northern Festival in order to sing for nothing to the lads of a Bristol cricket club—only one example of the kind of regal casualness in regard to money that made her leave under the dinner table at Monte Carlo a thousand pounds or so of her winnings, to be discovered late at night by a waiter.

The book has overmuch about 'Abide with me' and 'The Lost Chord,' but some interesting stories are told concerning both, especially the former. Think of the 'aspiring Sydney contralto' who chose to sing 'Abide with me' at a reception given in honour of Clara! We like, too, the story of the young officer whose gramophone was delivering 'Abide with me' in the trenches when a shell knocked him out. He was unconscious for a few minutes only (though it may have been hours for all he knew), and describing the occurrence in a letter home, he said, 'When I came to, good old Clara was still singing!'

There are twenty-four half-tone illustrations, mostly of the Dame. Of the numerous stories, some are good; the rest leave us marvelling at the ease with which the great ones of the earth are made 'helpless with laughter'—a description that occurs several times. As we said above, there should be a large public for this handsome volume, just as there has always been a huge one for its subject.

---

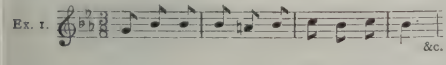
'The Celtic Song-Book, being Representative Folk-Songs of the Six Celtic Nations.' Arranged by Alfred Perceval Graves.

[Benn, 10*s.* 6*d.*]

Dr. Graves's name has long been associated with Celtic song, above all as a singularly gifted writer of words to folk-tunes. On the combined musical and literary sides it would be hard to find one better qualified to make such a compilation as this. He tells us that the idea of bringing out a volume devoted to the folk-songs of the Celtic nations (Irish, Scots, Manx Gaels, and the Cymry of Wales, Cornwall, and Brittany) was suggested by him at the first Pan-Celtic Congress at Dublin, in 1901. His object was to include the most typical and beautiful Celtic airs and the worthiest native words so far written for them, and to provide satisfactory English or French translations for the benefit of non-Gaelic readers. The six nations are represented as follows: thirty Irish, twenty Scots, ten Scotch Gaelic, twenty-two Manx, thirty-three Welsh, twelve Cornish, and seventeen Breton, with a further section of thirteen songs, mainly Breton, contributed by Théodore Botrel and F. Jaffrenou. There is an important literary side—a General Introduction, and a lengthy chapter prefatory to each section.

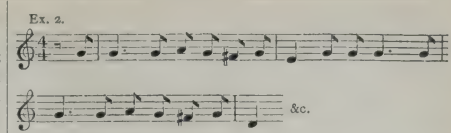
The songs are given without accompaniment. This was no doubt inevitable, but it is to be regretted. The unaccompanied singing of folk-song is right, but it is a counsel of perfection, and is extremely difficult to do well. Moreover, it is not suitable in all cases. Thus, one feels that many of the Hebridean melodies, with their free rhapsodic rhythm and absence of tonality as we know it, are most fitly presented without harmonization of any kind, and above all without the anachronistic tone of a pianoforte. But in many of the Welsh tunes the harmonic implications are so strong that it is difficult to conceive of the air as a complete entity. The probability is that a good many are fairly modern and of the 'composed' order. For example, the air 'Yn Colbagh Breck' (p. 165) has the verse in the Dorian mode and the chorus in D major. And in the Manx Cradle Song, 'Ushag Veg Ruy,' the auxiliary A natural (which occurs twice), the regular rhythm, and the whole 'lie' of the tune suggest anything but folk-origin:

Ex. 1.



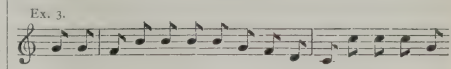
Among the Cornish songs appears 'There is a tavern in the town'—surely an interloper! But even if it originally hailed from any Celtic quarter, it has no Celtic quality. In fact, its opening phrases alone:

Ex. 2.



and even more this weak tritonic opening of the chorus:

Ex. 3.



are enough to show it up. It may have been written by a Celt who composed (after a fashion), but not by a Celtic composer—a very different thing. This little criticism apart, there can be nothing but praise for the book. It is a rich store of fine tunes, in almost every case allied to a worthy text. The various prefaces are both informative and delightfully written.

---

'Ecole du Chant.' By A. Gretchaninov.

[Oxford University Press, 10*s.* 6*d.*]

This is a well-arranged work which, apart from its technical value, is, musically, of outstanding excellence. The first part of the book contains exercises on the various intervals and exercises on breathing. The next section consists of vocalises in an order corresponding to the first part (intervals of seconds, thirds, &c.). The book concludes with a number of freely-written vocalises, not intended to illustrate any particular detail of theory or technique, but aiming at developing artistic taste and style. This section includes some beautifully expressive little pieces, while the work throughout is distinguished by its very fine pianoforte part. The text is in English, French, German, and Russian. There is a misprint on p. 12, Ex. 13, bar 2, where A should be G.

G. G.

---

'Mozart's String Quartets.' By Thomas F. Dunhill.

[Oxford University Press; two books, 1*s.* 6*d.* each.]

As an accomplished composer of chamber music, Mr. Dunhill is in his element in the two 'Musical Pilgrim' booklets. Book 1 contains an Introduction on the present position of Mozart, and discusses the early String Quartets and the first three of the set of six dedicated to Haydn. Book 2 treats of the rest of the Haydn set, and the Quartets in B flat, F, the two in D, and the Adagio and Fugue in C minor. Why is this astonishing Fugue so rarely heard, either in its original form for two pianofortes or in the string quartet version? (It exists also in an organ transcription made by Best, but its extreme difficulty is against its performance in that shape.) Mr. Dunhill takes a sensible view concerning the over-debated introduction to the C major Quartet. It is difficult to understand how musicians could ever have missed the obvious intention of this passage to ask a question to which the succeeding Allegro should provide the answer.

As to the admittedly acid false relations, they are, as Mr. Dunhill says, not nearly so harsh as Byrd had written with acceptance two centuries earlier. We part company with Mr. Dunhill, however, when he regards the Finale of the G major (K. 387) as successful structurally. The Fugal portions are admirable, and the dance-like episodes are enjoyable, but we never feel they are well coupled. There is too much material, and a lack of unity results. The books are profusely illustrated with musical examples, and, with their lucidity of thought and expression, will both delight and instruct, especially when used in conjunction with a score and/or gramophone records. (A list of records is given at the beginning of Book 1.)

---

'Behold these Daniels, Being Studies of Contemporary Critics.' By Basil Maine.
[H. & W. Brown, 5*s*.]

These twelve character sketches appeared in our columns in 1926-27. (Mr. Maine's reference to 'some' of the material having thus been published is a little grudging, surely!) They well bear re-reading—far better than we expected.

The Daniels hardly come to judgment; say, rather, to pedestals. But in most cases the eminence is deserved. Mr. Maine, being a critic himself, knows the difficulties of the work; the anti-critics don't. Portraits of Messrs. Ernest Newman, Edwin Evans, Robin Legge, H. C. Colles, and the author are included, and Mr. Compton Mackenzie writes a sprightly Preface. By the way, on p. 18 Mr. Maine, discussing Holst's 'At the Boar's Head,' says that he fails to see how comedy and counterpoint can ever be happily married. We still hold that Holst's opera showed the thing could be done (though it called for a kind of skill that its performers did not possess); but what of 'The Mastersingers' and, in a different way, the Savoy Operas? And, to continue Mr. Maine's metaphor, didn't Bach and others who used counterpoint in a light-hearted, even humorous, way long ago publish the banns?

---

The latest number in the series of booklets issued by Gerald Howe, Ltd., under the general title of 'The Beginning of Things' (2*s*. 6*d*.), is Evelyn Sharp's 'Here we go round.' It gives in an interesting manner the history of the dance, its eight chapters dealing respectively with The Horn Dancer, The Dancer of the Caves, From the Caves to the Tombs, The Armed Dance, The Ritual Dance in England, Dancing in a Circle, and Round again to the Beginning.

---

'Operatic Translations,' by H. F. V. Little, consists of the texts of well-known operatic arias, done into English, the original and the translation being interlined. They appeared first in instalments in The Gramophone, and in their reprinted form should be of service to gramophonists, and, in fact, to all who wish to know what certain standard operatic songs are about. There are two volumes, each containing forty (Gramophone Publications, 2*s*. each vol.).

---

'The Choir Schools Directory,' which first appeared in 1925, has just been issued in a revised edition. It gives full information as to Choir Schools, and also concerning certain other schools which, though attended by choristers, are not connected with the Choir Schools Association. Altogether, thirty-five schools are included. The Directory should be consulted by parents who contemplate a chorister's career for their boys. (The Hon. Secretary, Choir Schools Association, Choir House, Dean's Court, E.C.4; 1*s*. 2*d*., post free).

---

'Novice Corner: An Elementary Handbook of the Gramophone,' is a reprint of articles, &c., from the Gramophone. It contains much practical information concerning the purchase and treatment of the machine, records, needles, &c. (Gramophone Publications, Ltd., Frith Street, W.1; 1*s*. 2*d*., post free.)

---

BOOKS RECEIVED

[Mention in this list neither implies nor precludes review in a future issue.]

'J. S. Bach: A Biography.' By Charles Sanford Terry. Pp. 280. Oxford University Press, 21*s*.
'A Minstrel Friar.' By Ernest Newlandsmith. Pp. 104. W. & G. Foyle, 7*s*. 6*d*.
'The Beautiful in Music.' By Max Schoen. Pp. 142. Kegan Paul, 4*s*. 6*d*.
'Opera at Home.' Pp. 527. The Gramophone Co., 6*s*.

---

Wireless Notes

By 'Ariel'

Attacks on the B.B.C. programmes are establishing themselves in the daily press as a 'silly season' topic. The recent correspondence in the Evening Standard touched an unusually low level of mentality. Thus the choleric Major who wrote from the Junior Naval and Military Club spoke sweepingly of 'all those stupid talks which bore one to distraction,' and added the bright suggestion that the 'persons' responsible for the B.B.C. programmes should be sent to the U.S.A. for a course of instruction. He added:

> In this country we pay for the privilege of hearing these awful programmes, and get practically nothing in return. In the U.S.A. the public pay nothing and get a large number of magnificent programmes.

If the Major's wireless licence cost him (say) a quarter of what he pays for his Club membership, he might be allowed a growl on the score of expense. But a half-guinea a year is very little more than the charge of nothing made in the U.S.A. No doubt some 'magnificent programmes' are broadcast in America, but a good many listeners who have had experience of programmes there and on the Continent of Europe are emphatically in favour of those sent out by the B.B.C. Moreover, I doubt if we British, as a whole, would welcome the pronounced flavour of advertising that is a feature of U.S.A. wireless, even though it would no doubt enable the Corporation to dispense with the licence fee.

'We want entertainment, not instruction,' wails 'A Sufferer.' 'Wireless has long since ceased to be an entertainment; it has become a bore,' cries 'No longer a Listener.' Other pearls were: 'Instead of being a recreation, "listening-in" has become a weariness to the flesh.—A Home Lover.' 'Those endless "talks" on some dry-as-blotting-paper subjects, followed by some painfully classic music, are simply awful.—J. H. Simpkin'; who, however, goes on, somewhat cryptically, 'If the B.B.C. cannot give more frequently instrumental music, let us have even pianoforte music.' (Mr. Simpkin evidently thinks that the term 'instrumental music' applies only to orchestral and chamber works!) But what kind of 'pianoforte music' will suit the Simpkinses? Not anything worthy the name, we may be sure; it would be branded as 'painfully classic.' Altogether, this set of letters beat last year's Daily Mail batch in utter fatuity. No wonder the Evening Standard representative who called at Savoy Hill for the B.B.C. reply to the 'Sufferers' and 'Home Lovers' came empty away. 'We have nothing to say,' said the B.B.C. representative; 'We do not consider it necessary to reply to criticisms of the kind. Criticisms of that sort may safely be ignored.'

---

But even in the House of Commons similarly foolish criticisms have been made. In the debate on the Post Office Vote, Mr. Macpherson asked the Postmaster-General to transmit to the B.B.C. 'the general feeling of the people on this matter. They said that the public liked variety, and liked it light; and that they found the programmes intolerably didactic and usually highbrow.'

Who are 'they,' 'the public,' and 'people'? As Liberal member for Ross and Cromarty, Mr. Macpherson is well aware that, politically, the Rossians and Cromartians are divided into three main groups, Liberal, Conservative, and Labour, with more sub-divisions than can be counted.

Mr. Macpherson may be surprised to hear that the variety of political opinion is limited compared with that which prevails in matters of taste. Many faults may be found with the B.B.C. (I have a few in pickle), but their policy throughout has had one prime virtue: it has been based on an elementary fact that its critics as a whole have overlooked, namely, that in regard to taste and receptivity there is not one public, but a score. In fact, the B.B.C. rightly visualises the nation as a hydra-headed monster whose separate heads all demand different fare. Yonder red chap, with bristling moustache, fourth from the left—in private life a Major—is nourished entirely on curried tripe; his neighbour, 'Home Lover,' has a taste for nothing but the feeblest kind of musical comedy; 'Disgusted'—the horrid spectacle with no forehead and very little chin—objects to any literature that is not 'snappy' and profusely illustrated, and has no ear for any music other than that of the dance band. And so forth.

If the B.B.C. is open to criticism at all in regard to its provision for the hydra-headed, it is that the consumers of tripe (curried and otherwise) receive rather more than their fair share of consideration. The difference between them and us is that, whereas they grudge us musicians a few decent programmes a week, we don't object to their being 'entertained' pretty liberally.

Let us go back for a moment to the speech of the member for Ross and Cromarty. Mr. Macpherson, after telling the House what 'they' said and liked, went on, even more vaguely: 'The music, I am told, is chamber music, and more than the ordinary music which the common or garden man in this country liked to hear.'

You must turn this sentence over in your mind a few times in order to realise to the full the right honourable gentleman's fogginess concerning both music and the common or garden man.

On the whole, such letters as those quoted above are the best possible testimony to the work of the B.B.C. For the real 'common or garden man' is by no means so brainless as Mr. Macpherson implies; and it is certain that programmes calculated solely to suit the letter-writers would soon make the normal man scrap his set.

---

I said above that we musicians are, as a rule, open-minded in this matter of programmes; give us one or two good shows a week, and we shall not grudge the lowbrows their daily allowance of dance music, cinema organ bleatings, &c. In fact, we are too accommodating. Listening to The Three New Yorkers In Harmonized Syncopation (June 25), I felt that the B.B.C. had gone well beyond the limits of concession to vulgarity and incompetence. These singers were all off the note throughout (whether intentionally or no is beside the point), the tone was poor, the music was fatuous, and the words (such as could be identified) were inane. Certainly it was not funny. It was a performance without a single redeeming feature. Now this show was put on as a musical turn, and the question we musicians ask is: Would the B.B.C. allow so abysmal a descent in any other form of art? Would they broadcast anything analogous in literature—for example, a piece of English prose not only without any kind of merit, but actually ungrammatical, badly read, barely articulate, and delivered with a poor voice? Or a play entirely lacking in dramatic interest, written by an illiterate author, and performed by actors who had not mastered the A B C of their art? The answer is an emphatic 'No.' To the further question, Why do they broadcast a musical turn of similar quality? the answer is that they are weakly giving their support to a foolish convention. They could go near to killing this convention in a year or two by dropping all turns of the 'Three New Yorkers' type and replacing them by such capital fare as that of the three Co-optimists, heard on July 13 as 'A Surprise Item.' Here we had humour, music that was far from being despicable, and clever singing and playing. There was none of the snivelling, sliding, singing off the pitch that is so nauseating, and that probably owes its origin to performers devoid of both voice and 'ear.' The fact of the Co-optimist turn being unannounced in the Radio Times no doubt caused it to be missed by many. Is this idea of 'A Surprise' good? I do not think so. Many listeners who have to go to bed early in order to rise betimes will not care to wait up till 11 p.m. 'on spec.' If a good item is to be had, we want to know it is coming. Give us the right level of quality in the programmes, with all goods shown in the window and marked in plain figures, so to speak; we shall then need no such puerile device to stimulate our interest.

Another point on which musicians should raise their voice in protest is that of transcriptions. Now, the principle of transcription is admitted by everybody but a few purists who need not be considered. But the application of the principle needs more watching than is done by the B.B.C. The chief offenders are the very small hotel orchestras, octets, and similar combinations. Not long ago the 'Ride of the Valkyries' was played by somebody's sextet (I think it was called), and the result was a ludicrous travesty that could hardly appeal to the non-musician and would merely annoy the rest of us.

On June 22 a Fantasia on 'Tannhäuser' was relayed from the Grand Hotel, Eastbourne, played by an orchestra so inadequate that the effect was little better than that of the 'Valkyrie' extract. I suggest that these hotel programmes should be far more rigidly scrutinised than they are at present. In addition to dis-arrangements of standard orchestral works, they include a lot of poor music poorly played. (Almost invariably the solo violinist has an incessant vibrato and a sloppy rhythm, for example.) This sort of thing may—in fact, does—suit hotel patrons, torpid with much food after a day in the sun. But there is no reason why it should be thrust on the outside public. Moreover, why should the hotels and their pampered bands and conductors be given the benefit of engagements and wide advertisement when there are many hundreds of well-equipped instrumentalists badly in need of a job? I regard this relaying of hotel orchestras as a bad mistake. The question should be taken up by some powerful musical organization.

---

Here is a point for the Editor of the Radio Times to think over: When (say) Sir Henry Wood directs an orchestral concert, the programme is announced as being 'conducted by Sir Henry Wood.' When Mr. Jack Payne takes charge of the B.B.C. Dance Orchestra we are told that the performance is 'personally conducted by Jack Payne.' What is the difference between a 'personally' conducted performance and one of the mere, ordinary sort we get from Sir Henry?

Week after week that absurd 'personally' crops up on almost every page of the Radio Times. Such a fatuous distinction would hardly be made by the B.B.C. or by the Editor, so we may assume that it is there by request of Mr. Payne himself. If so, the sooner the Editor runs his blue pencil through it the better. A great corporation and its official organ ought to be able to assert itself against the vanity of a dance-band conductor.

---

Apropos of the Radio Times, I cannot refrain from alluding to a cross-heading that appeared in the issue of June 29. The subject was the 'Oxford Dictionary,' in a 'talk' by Prof. George Gordon. In the course of it the Professor gave an example of the work of the Dictionary in correcting popular errors. Unfortunately, somebody in the editorial office had headed the paragraph, 'Scotching the Vulgar Error,' and so had committed one of the most vulgar of all—for 'to scotch' means 'to cut or wound slightly.' There is nothing erudite in this. A familiar Shakespearean quotation gives the distinction in a nutshell: 'We have scotched the snake, not killed it,' says Macbeth, describing a job only partly done. It is true that this 'vulgar error' is committed by journals of all sorts, but it calls for mention in this case because of its being gratuitously thrust into an article dealing with the right use of words.

---

So much space has been taken up with the foolish complaints of the Evening Standard grousers, plus a few of my own, that I have to end without returning thanks for all the good things we have had during the past few weeks. I must confine my mention to a few that stood out. Nothing better has been heard for a long time than the concerts given on June 22 and 23 by the Société des Instruments Anciens. Here we had programmes of unique interest, both musical and historical, beautifully performed, and broadcast to perfection. So good was the transmission, in fact, that one speculated whether it was due to the special character of the instruments. If so, the B.B.C. may do much to bring about a revival in the making and playing of some delightful instruments that have been regarded as obsolete. Composers appear to have arrived at the end of their tether; such a revival will give them a new and exquisite set of timbres to play with, and may lead to some really fresh and original works.

---

The orchestral concert conducted by Godfrey Brown on July 13 had more than ordinary interest and merit. The Haydn Violoncello Concerto in D, played by Arnold Trowell, was a delight; Harty's 'With the Wild Geese' was as effective as usual, and a capital novelty was the Negro Rhapsody of Rubin Goldmark's. Another first-rate orchestral concert was that of July 4, conducted by Eugène Goossens, with Myra Hess in the Franck Symphonic Variations, and a welcome re-hearing of the conductor's own 'Sinfonietta.'

---

Amidst a desert of bad singing, the performances of Maggie Teyte on July 17 were a refreshment. This singer has been rarely heard in England for a long time. Let us hope the B.B.C. will give us every available opportunity of hearing her show that it is possible to be expressive without wobble, rhythmically free without letting a song fall to pieces, and to sing high notes with perfect intonation and ease of production. The pianoforte soloist, Marcelle Meyer, and the accompanist, George Reeves, were worthy companions in a really distinguished recital.

---

Occasional Notes

Last year we said hard things about the Daily Express community singing concerts, not because we dislike that form of musical activity (we don't), but because we felt it to be our duty to combat the exaggerations and mis-statements with which the enterprise was launched.

The Daily Express National Piano-Playing Contest, particulars of which have just been announced, is far more worthy of support by musicians, on several grounds. It will serve as a stimulant to three departments of the musical world that are in need of such help—the teaching profession, the pianoforte-makers, and, in a lesser degree (though perhaps considerably in the long run), the publishers of serious instrumental music.

The Daily Express has wisely sought the aid of a powerful advisory committee and distinguished composers and judges. It may be objected with reason that the pianoforte is less important than the organizers of the contest say it is. But nobody supposes that the Daily Express is concerned solely (or even largely, perhaps) with purely musical considerations. It is just now engaged in an exciting circulation race with the Daily Mail, and, as the aid of music (Heavenly maid!) is presumed to be worth having, the choice inevitably falls on the instrument that itself beats all others in circulation. Frankly, we don't like this use of music; but the present time is not one in which musicians can afford to sniff at any scheme that will give an impetus to the study of any branch of the art. So we hope the scheme will be as successful in producing good players as it certainly will be in providing work for teachers.

---

It is now 'up to' the Daily Mail. Something must be done to retain a circulation lead that becomes smaller each month. Sweet peas and standard bread cut little ice compared with such a scheme as this of the Daily Express. We suggest a Daily Mail violin-playing contest. The instrument has almost as many devotees as the pianoforte, and most musicians would agree that the musical future of the country would gain more from an intensive campaign on behalf of string-playing than from any other kind of performance. The Daily Mail might do even better by a mammoth scheme that shall embrace all the violin family, with an especially fat prize for the viola class. As an alternative to a string-playing contest, one for solo singers might be considered. Here is the biggest field of all. We can understand the reluctance of the Daily Mail to play the part of a mere follow-my-leader (in this case—pursuer); but for the sake of the musical profession we hope they won't be too proud. Anyway, we are sure there will be no false pride among music-teachers. They will bless the happy chance that leads newspaper-millionaires to scatter a few thousands in their direction.

---

However, the Daily Mail is not without musical activity just now. Its yacht 'Ceto' is touring the coast, inflicting concerts on the shore-folk. It does not seem to have occurred to the Daily Mail that the broadcasting, per 'super-loud-speaker,' of music which may be heard two miles off may cause far more annoyance to some folk than pleasure to others. (A two-miles radius was proudly announced in the Daily Mail of July 20.) Within that area there must be a good many people who, for some absurd reason—sickness, work, need of rest, and so forth—would prefer to be without that super-loud-speaker. Have they no right to consideration? In this matter, what is the difference between the Daily Mail and the selfish people who annoy their neighbours by turning on their loud-speakers in the back garden, or who murder sleep for dozens of families around by hiring a jazz-band to play, with windows open, till the small hours? However, the circumstances are not without their comic side. At the time of writing the Daily Mail regularly contains on one page articles and letters protesting against the unnecessary noisiness of modern life; on another page is an account of the preceding day's doings of the 'Ceto,' with its super-loud-speaker warranted to hit everything within a range of two miles. One other point is raised by this new form of newspaper tyranny. How do concerts and other pier and beach performances (to say nothing of music lessons) fare against the stridencies of the 'Ceto'? Must all local musical activity be suspended in an entire district in order that an already too-widely-read newspaper may boost itself? We believe a legal remedy exists. Have not tradesmen been restrained by law from using stentorphones and other loud-speaking devices as a means of drawing attention to their wares? We hope a public-spirited resident of one of the afflicted seaside resorts will apply for an injunction against the 'Ceto' as a nuisance of an unusually inconsiderate type.

---

The poor quality of music played by some military bands has lately led to complaints. No wonder, if there are many bandmasters like Lieut. W. J. Dunn, who has recently taken over the direction of the Royal Horse Guards Band. The Melody Maker for June contained an article entitled, 'Lt. Dunn's Maxim: "Play to please."' To please whom? Let the Lieutenant supply the answer:

> If the public pays the piper the public has the right to call the tune. Whatever may be my personal views about musical standards, it is my duty to the public to give what it demands. To foist or force my own musical ideas on the public, so far as programme building is concerned, is perilously near moral dishonesty.

---

If there were only one musical public, this might be accepted. But there are several, and as all alike pay their share of the piper's fee, all alike have a right to consideration. Lieut. Dunn clearly thinks that the only section of the public to be considered is the one most deficient in taste and musical intelligence. The reference to 'moral dishonesty' is bunkum. If Lieut. Dunn's musical standards are as high as he implies, the 'moral dishonesty' lies in sacrificing them to easy popularity. There will always be a proportion of people whose idea of band music rises no higher than a fox-trot and 'The Policeman's Holiday'; are they the only members of the public to be considered? Is it 'honest,' morally or financially, to disregard the minority who like something better (assuming them to be a minority, which is by no means certain)?

Every conductor, whether of symphony orchestra or military band, has to consider his public; Lieut. Dunn must not imagine that he is the first to discover the necessity. But every conductor (except the Lieutenant, apparently) knows also that the thing may be done without a complete surrender of artistic standards.

---

However, we imagine that Lieut. Dunn is not really as bad as his word. There must be limits of vulgarity at which even he would shy. Would he refuse, if his audience asked him to descend beyond those limits? If not, he is not true to his principle of giving people what they want. Moreover, is he consistent in his present application of that principle. If he receives from a handful of listeners a request for rubbish we may assume that he will play it. But supposing a second handful comes, asking for good music, may we assume that they, too, will be served? We may assume nothing of the sort, for the familiar reason that when conductors and performers of the Dunn type are asked by one or two people to play rubbish, the one or two people are regarded as 'the public'; whereas a larger number asking for good music are lightly dismissed as 'one or two high-brows.' As Lieut. Dunn professes to be so eager to give his public what it wants, we suggest that he should (1) make a rough analysis of that public; (2) find out, by means of plebiscite programmes, what it really does want; (3) bear in mind that in this matter, as in most others, the noisy grousers and 'requesters' as a rule represent only a small proportion of folk; and (4) when he has thus discovered that his public is mixed, he should remember that his duty is to all of them, instead of to the unmusical alone. We do not remind him that he owes something also to the art itself; his pronouncement shows that he recognises no such debt.

---

The Melody Maker sums up an article full of false reasoning and superficial views by describing Lieut. Dunn as 'a wise fellow.' Adopting the same familiar methods, we say he is a weak fellow, and (since he himself has dragged in the question of honesty) we describe his easy-going policy as dishonest both to his art and to his public.

By a queer coincidence, the page on which the article appears is eked out by a few aphorisms, one of which tells us that 'Many an enterprising bandmaster has paid the price of individuality.' Lieut. Dunn will never be penalised in that way.

---

The news is old by now, but for the sake of record we mention that the prize of £2,000 put up by the Columbia Graphophone Company for the best orchestral work in memory of Schubert has been won by Kurt Atterberg, conductor of the Stockholm Orchestra. Five hundred compositions were entered from twenty-six countries. Mr. Atterberg's work is a Symphony in C. It will be performed in London during the Schubert Week in November. Second and third prizes were won by Franz Schmidt, of Vienna, and the Polish composer Czeslav Marek.

The Columbia Company intends to follow up its Schubert Centenary munificence by offering an annual prize of £1,000 for the next ten years as a reward for the most constructive service rendered to the cause of music during the preceding twelve months. The prize may be won by any individual, society, or organization.

---

BRITISH AND AMERICAN MUSIC EDUCATIONISTS' FIELD DAY

Though arranged at very short notice, this event proved to be astonishingly successful. Throughout the day the attendance was larger than had been expected—so much so that at the last moment the meeting-place of the afternoon session had to be changed from the Oxford University Press headquarters to Stationers' Hall, which in its turn proved to be barely large enough.

At the morning session at Æolian Hall discussions took place on 'School Orchestras,' the subject being opened by the Chairman, Mr. F. H. Shera, in a thoughtful paper. The discussion brought forth capital speechlets from Dr. Arthur Somervell, Mr. Kirkham Jones (who gave interesting data concerning the violin classes in London elementary schools), and Mrs. Francis E. Clark, from whom we heard of the practical side of the school orchestra movement in America. It was clear that the Old Country lags behind the U.S.A. in this branch of school music. The economic factor was stressed by the English speakers, but it exists (though less acutely) across the water. Mrs. Clark showed how it is overcome by concerts, donations, purchase of instruments on easy-payment system, &c.

Mr. Percy Scholes opened up the next topic—'Musical Appreciation Work.' Animated debate followed, and though probably nobody's convictions were changed, helpful sparks were struck out by the clash of opinion. The two points on which there seemed to be general agreement were that (1) a prime aid to appreciation was sight-reading (we need hardly say that this came from Mr. Walter Harrison, of the Tonic Sol-fa College), and (2) the best way to appreciate music was to make it. In a word, the need is for less talking and more doing. Teachers, it was felt, are tempted to shirk the spade-work of teaching for the easier and more superficially attractive 'appreciation' class. Prof. H. C. Macdougall, of Wellesley College, Mass., took the chair at this debate.

There were breaks for informal discussion, and for an exhibition in the Audiographic Galleries. Altogether, a very good morning session.

In the afternoon the ball was set rolling by Dr. Ernest Bullock with a paper on 'The Training of Children's Voices.' An address closely packed with sound sense led to a good debate. (Unfortunately, we were not always able to catch the names or the words of the participants. The seating arrangements were those of an ordinary meeting, the result being that a debater in the front of the hall, or even midway, was imperfectly heard by those behind. We hope this point will be remembered at future gatherings.) Dr. Bullock took the company with him in his contention that good speech is the best approach to good singing. Some of us felt, however, that methods suitable for the type of boy that would be admitted to the Abbey Choir might do less well for rougher material. Choirmasters in villages and poor town parishes often have to do a good deal of actual suppression of raucous noise before being able to enter on constructive work of any kind.

Miss Mabel Chamberlain followed with a paper on 'The Teaching of Sight-Singing,' in which she made a convincing plea for more systematic work in this field. She put in a good word for Tonic Sol-fa. Mr. Harrison thought sight-singing had declined during the past twenty years, and ascribed the falling-off to the substitution in some schools of the Staff for the Sol-fa notation. Mr. Cyril Winn made a good point by insisting on the importance of small-group reading in preference to reading by the entire class. (Is individual sight-singing practised in many schools? At the Ballymena Competition Festival this year we heard some astonishing sight-reading by individual children, the average marking in a large class being well over 90 per cent.) The discussion showed a welcome recognition of the importance of the subject, but we didn't feel that it had gone far enough in the really crucial matter of how to teach sight-singing. The experience of adjudicators seems to indicate that very few teachers and conductors know how to set about this most difficult of tasks. We hope that at next year's Conference Miss Chamberlain or some other adept will take the field, armed with Staff and Sol-fa modulators, and get right down to a job that, in our experience, is usually shirked.

Following tea (hospitably provided by the Oxford University Press), Mr. Forbes Milne gave a paper on 'The Choice of Songs for School Use.' This lacked only one thing—a small class of children on the platform to sing samples. Mr. Leslie Bennett sang a group of songs, but we felt that not all were suitable for school use—e.g., the miniatures from the Rowley-Asquith cycle. Per contra, the more a song is fitted for use by a crowd of children, the less its effect when sung by an adult soloist.

Mr. Milne's choice ranged wide, and showed that the youngsters of to-day are well catered for. Some suggested songs raised doubts as to the accompaniment. How many schools can provide a pianist able to tackle Schubert's 'Erl-King'? Apropos of this song, Mr. Milne, in speaking of translations, mentioned a version in which the adaptor had confused the characters, giving the Erl-King's music to the child, and vice versâ! Returning to the question of difficult accompaniments, are not modern school songs too exacting in this way? Once more we go to the Competition Festival for evidence; over and over again we have known the children's excellent singing ruined by the inability of the teacher to manage the pianoforte part. Even the official accompanist has been known to boggle at it. Here is a practical point that composers and publishers should not overlook.

After so much paper-reading and discussion of a practical nature, we welcomed two really eloquent speeches from Mr. Hugh Roberton and Mrs. Clark. America has energy, wealth, enterprise; we on this side have an old culture and a tradition of taste which it is our privilege to share. This was the gist of two warm-hearted ovations.

The evening was given up to a dinner at Verrey's Restaurant, about a hundred and thirty being present. Sir Hugh Allen took the chair, and the company was thoroughly representative of the musical and educational worlds. Speeches were rather too many (was there ever a public dinner when they were not?). Sir Hugh, who spoke of 'Music in Education,' was in capital form, wise and witty by turn. The other speakers were Mr. Percy Scholes ('On Keeping Up with America'), Mrs. Francis Clark ('On Keeping Up with Ourselves'), Mr. Herbert Wiseman ('What is and what might be in the Elementary and Secondary Schools'), Dr. R. S. Thatcher ('What the Public Schools are doing'), Mr. Arundel Orchard ('Music in Australia'), Mr. Harvey Grace ('The Musical Competition Festival'), and Mr. T. B. Hawkin, of the English-Speaking Union. Sir Richard Terry proposed, and Mrs. Philip Snowden seconded, a resolution to the effect that a week's joint British and American conference should be held in Switzerland next year.

It was curious to note at the dinner, and, indeed, throughout the day, the national traits shown by the speakers. The British were inclined to depreciate the efforts of their own country, usually in a semi-humorous vein. The Americans were generally in deadly earnest; one could almost see an aura of 'uplift' round them. But on both sides there was abundant enthusiasm and good-fellowship. The Field Day in every respect was a feather in the cap of the three energetic organizers—Mr. Percy Scholes, Mr. Charles Hicks (of the Æolian Company), and Mr. Hubert Foss.

We understand that arrangements are already being made for next year's conference in Switzerland. Certainly a single day proved to be hopelessly short measure. Every debate had to be closured long before subject, speakers, or hearers were exhausted. (There was a general readiness to hold forth, save during a few shy moments at the start of the morning session, before folk had got warmed up.)

The air of informality was a helpful factor throughout. The end of a crowded day left us convinced that the event had in it the makings of a large-scale 'get-together' that will very materially benefit both musical education and Anglo-American relations.

THE WORSHIPFUL COMPANY OF MUSICIANS

The Schubert Commemoration Banquet (Carpenters' Hall, July 10) was attended by a large and unusually distinguished company that included the Master (Dr. G. J. Bennett), the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress, Baron Georg Frankenstein (the Austrian Minister), the Duchess of Atholl, the Bishop of Worcester, Miss Geisler-Schubert (a descendant of the composer), &c. The immortal memory of Schubert was honoured by the company standing while the theme from the slow movement of the 'Death and the Maiden' Quartet was played—an impressive tribute.

The musical programme was in the hands of the Spencer Dyke Quartet, and Messrs. Haydn Draper, Frank Probyn, E. Dubrucq, and Claude Hobday, who played several movements from the Octet; and Miss Bertha Steventon and Mr. Stuart Robertson, who sang groups of songs.

Teachers' Department

Enid Grundy's 'The Happy Pianist' contains more sound practical sense in its modest seventy pages than many a ponderous treatise. The author writes mainly for the 'amateur-with-little-time, who is the life, soul, and sustenance of music in England.' But this does not rule out other classes of readers. On the contrary, the great army of pupils and teachers will benefit from it. The pupil especially will learn much about the art of practising; and the teacher will be reminded of the need of giving instruction as to the wise disposal of the practice-hour. The sixteen chapters cover the technical ground very completely. The importance of sight-reading is rightly insisted on. It is good to see the repeated injunction to listen. We are constantly being astounded by the imperturbability with which many quite well-equipped players will hold on to a wrong bass, or muddle a passage with the pedal, or commit other flagrant crimes that simply could not happen if their ears were as busy as their eyes and fingers. Above all in this book we like the friendly air and the note of enthusiasm. In short, its title might well have been '"The Happy Pianist," by A Happy Author' (Oxford University Press, 2*s.* 6*d.*).

Few things in music are more ambiguous than the slur. Hence the value of Tobias Matthay's booklet, 'The Slur or Couplet, in all its variety, its interpretation and execution.' Originally a lecture, it loses little, if at all, by publication, thanks to the lavish use of music-type (there are nearly a hundred illustrations). No one can wish for a more complete exposition of a feature which, though small, is a vital factor in interpretation (Oxford University Press, 4*s.*).

A very clear and well-graded method of teaching the time-names and reading from the Staff is that in the Nelson Music Practice Junior Pupils' Book (Nelson, 1*s.* 6*d.*).

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

Questions must be of general musical interest. They must be stated simply and briefly, and if several are sent, each must be written on a separate slip. Our 'Answers to Correspondents' Column closes on the 14th of the month. We cannot undertake to reply by post.

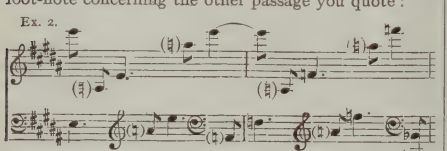
R. R. G.—In Beethoven's 'Hammerklavier' Sonata the tenor in the passage you quote should be B natural :

Ex. 1.

In his edition of the Sonatas, Casella has a lengthy foot-note concerning the other passage you quote :

Ex. 2.



He shows convincingly that the A's should all be natural, though not so marked by Beethoven. In the other passage you quote the weight of critical opinion favours G sharp.

Clarone.—(1.) The 'Bach trumpet' is straight instead of being bent back, and has two pistons. The modern example seems to have been introduced by Kosleck, of Berlin, for use in the performance of the B minor Mass under Joachim at the unveiling of the Bach statue at Eisenach in 1884. The English trumpeter Morrow improved it by altering the bore and bell from the post-horn type to that of the real trumpet. Morrow's trumpet is in A, straight like Kosleck's, has two pistons, and is 58½-in. in length. We take these particulars from the new 'Grove.' (2.) The difference between the slide cornet and slide trumpet is not merely nominal. We do not know the instrument called 'cornet trombone.' A 'soprano slide trombone' is obviously a trombone of high pitch. But in orchestration the three trombones written for are usually alto, tenor, and bass, or two tenors and bass. Berlioz says that the soprano trombone was unknown in France in his day, though it was used in some parts of Germany. The great composers have rarely employed it. Berlioz adds that Gluck has written for it in 'Orfeo,' under the name of 'cornetto.' Perhaps this fact accounts for the confusing term 'cornet trombone' of your inquiry.

S. R.—How are you to become a good sight-reader on the pianoforte? We don't know your technical attainments, so we cannot do more than advise you to play at sight as much music as you can obtain that is technically within your power. It is important to choose music that is not too difficult, because the essence of good sight-reading is the ability to keep going. Never mind mistakes. Maintain the right tempo. Examine key- and time-signature before you start. (How obvious! Yet how many sight-readers forget it!) If a preliminary glance through is possible, make the most of it, and note mentally any changes of key, time, or clefs, awkward turnover places, or other snags. On p. 706 of this issue appears a review of a couple of books of sight-reading studies, the second of which may be useful to you. A further set by Dr. Borland is shortly to be published for Trinity College of Music by Messrs. Hammond.

E. Allen.—(1.) We have no copy of the Henschel work at hand, and therefore cannot answer your question. But, so far as we can understand the point without seeing the music, we should say that the oboe counter-theme should be played as if it were on equal terms—no more and no less—with the melody in the pianoforte part. This means that both you and the pianist had better think twice before indulging in the rubato you mention. In the rest of the work one of you plays second fiddle, so to speak; here you are both firsts, each with a tune of his own. So make them fit. (2.) We understand that the information you need as to the cutting and paring of reeds is to be found in Barratt's 'Method for the Oboe' (Lafleur, 21*s.*).

Review.—(1.) You wish to become a reviewer, and you ask as to the procedure to adopt. You say you are willing to do reviewing for any journal at 2*s.* 6*d.* a week. That statement alone, it seems to us, is sufficient to rule you out. You ask if you must offer yourself to some musical journals. We believe most of our contemporaries are already overstocked with reviewers, so there is not much scope for an inexperienced hand. And even if there were, half-a-crown a week is a very small help to your exchequer in these days. (2.) Concerning grants of money or books to needy students at the University you mention, you had better inquire of the authorities there.

E. L.—(1.) We know of no analytical notes, or synopsis, or any book dealing with 'Israel in Egypt.' But surely you do not need such helps towards understanding so simple and straightforward a work. (2.) Some or all of the following numbers are frequently omitted in 'Israel in Egypt': 4, 11, 13, 14, 19, 20, 24, 25, 26, 27, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34. (3.) The first nine measures in the chorus 'And their cry,' marked 'solo,' are usually sung by a quartet or semi-chorus. (4.) The baritone solo,' Roll on, thou dark and mighty ocean,' is published by Paxton.

H. W. F.—(1.) We agree that the National Anthem seems to call for a plain diatonic harmonization. We do not know the well-known conductor's version which you describe as 'ultra-sugary, chromatic, and utterly hateful.' The eminence of the conductor has no bearing on the point, because he may be a first-rate conductor but a very poor composer and arranger. (2.) We agree also with your view that Stanford's 'Devon, Oh, Devon' is frequently 'gabbled at such a rate that not only are the words lost but the actual music ruined.'

Firenze.—Likely publishers to whom you might send your dances are : Messrs. Francis Day & Hunter, 138-140, Charing Cross Road, W.C.2; the Lawrence Wright Music Co., 19, Denmark Street, W.C.2; Messrs. B. Feldman, 125, Shaftesbury Avenue, W.C.2; Messrs. Keith Prowse, 42-43, Poland Street, W.1.

(Continued on page 727.)

Four Hymn Tunes

ARRANGED WITH DESCANT BY
H. A. CHAMBERS

SET 2

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED: NEW YORK: THE H. W. GRAY CO., SOLE AGENTS FOR THE U.S.A.

DAY OF REST

7.6.7.6. D.

J. W. ELLIOTT

LOVE DIVINE

8.7.8.7.

J. Stainer

LUDBOROUGH

L.M.

T. R. Matthews

ST. AGNES

10.10 10. 0.

J. Langran

(Continued from page 720.)

Interested.—(1.) For the pronunciation of musical terms try 'A Pronouncing Pocket-Manual of Musical Terms,' by Th. Baker (Chester, 2*s.*). (2.) The commas that occur from time to time in such passages as you mention indicate a slight break, similar to that of a singer when taking breath. (3.) The two notes you quote are (i.) a hemidemisemiquaver, and (ii.) a hemi (or perhaps we should say, with Mr. Mantalini, a demi) of No. i. But such notes are rarely used, and, in fact, need not be used. They are easily avoided by choosing a time-unit that will make them unneccessary.

Exile.—For information on plainsong take Burgess's 'The Teaching and Accompaniment of Plainsong' (Novello). Helmore's primer, 'Plainsong' (Novello), is still very readable and instructive, though a good deal of its information has been superseded by the researches of the Solesmes Benedictines. For the accompaniment of plainsong you cannot do better than study J. H. Arnold's 'The Accompaniment of Plainsong' (Oxford University Press).

R. S. P.—(1.) Write to Mr. C. Kennedy Scott, 57, Addison Road, W.14, and ask if you can arrange for attendance at some of his rehearsals as a student of choral training and conducting. (2.) We recommend as books on the subject: Coward's 'Choral Technique and Interpretation' (Novello); Herbert Antcliffe's 'The Chorus-Master' (Paxton); and No. 2 of Paterson's Festival Booklets, by Hugh S. Roberton.

E. V. S.—The well-known and oft-arranged Adagio of Mozart's, beginning:

is the slow movement from the Clarinet Concerto in A (K. 622). It was composed in 1791, at Vienna.

A. B. (Lincoln).—We do not think you stand a good chance of a position in a Cathedral choir with what appears to have been a somewhat slender training on the vocal side. If you were a real bass instead of a bass-baritone your chances might be better. Moreover, your Nonconformity is pretty certain to be a bar.

Delos.—The triplet and quintuplet should be played as you have written them, but the exact relationship can hardly be shown on paper. Practise the two separately until your fingers play them mechanically when they are combined. (Don't shy at that word, 'mechanically'; this is a case where the ease and certainty of machinery are to be aimed at.)

S. A. B.—We should play Debussy's 'Dr. Gradus ad Parnassum' at about crotchet = 112 to 120. Note that extreme pace would give the wrong effect: the direction is 'modérément animé.' More important than speed is clearness, strict time, and a touch of dry precision, in keeping with the character of the Doctor.

H. E.—We can discover no English book on Clara Schumann. Breitkopf & Härtel publish 'Clara Schumann: Ein Künstlerleben,' in two volumes, by Litzmann (2 vols.), but apparently no English version is to be had. The same firm also publishes two volumes of correspondence between Clara Schumann and Brahms.

Smith-Stn.—We do not think the old book you mention would be worth much. But you had better drop a line to Mr. Harold Reeves, 210, Shaftesbury Avenue, London, W.C.2, giving a full description, with information as to its state of preservation.

M. E.—There is no standard rate of pay for orchestrating and copying music, or copying and transposing band parts. The type of work and the standing of the copyist govern the charges.

G. H.—Emphatically Chopin's Etudes are not for a beginner! They are, as your friends say, 'grand practice,' but you must do a lot of other grand practice before attempting them.

J. A. G. (Nigeria).—(1.) The three diplomas you mention are of little value. (2.) There are no academical robes in connection with Trinity College diplomas.

Anxious.—The theme about which you inquire is an incorrect version of the main tune of the slow movement in Beethoven's 'Pathetic' Sonata.

Tolchard.—Messrs. Thomas Cook, Berkeley Street, W.1, will give you particulars as to forthcoming German Musical Festivals.

In reference to 'E. A. R.'s' inquiry as to the likeliest medium for cinema musicians' advertisements, various correspondents kindly write to say that the Stage and Era are the best. Mr. F. Carter, Musical Director of Huddersfield Picture House, adds that if 'E. A. R.' wants a post he ought in the first place to visit the local Branch Secretary of the Musicians' Union in his district, from whom he will obtain all the necessary information. By becoming a member his name would be placed on the Branch list of musicians available for permanent posts, or for deputising.

In reference to the inquiry from 'W.' last month as to works for pianoforte and organ duet, Mr. Arthur G. Colborn kindly writes to recommend Pietro Yon's 'Concerto Gregoriano' (Fischer Bros., New York and Birmingham). He adds that J. W. Clokey, a rising young American composer, has just published a 'Symphonic piece' for the same combination; and a 'Grand Aria' by Demarest also appears in American programmes. We hope to give further information next month.

Church and Organ Music

ROYAL COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS

PASSED ASSOCIATESHIP, JULY, 1928

Brough, J. S., Boston.
Brown, A. F., Salisbury.
Bullen, G. E., Welwyn Garden City.
Carre, J. H., London.
Chapman, A. E., Burgess Hill.
Christopher, C. S., Birmingham.
Christy, T., South Shields.
Cole, W. C., London.
Collingridge, H., Manchester.
Constable, W. G., Tonbridge.
Dean, Miss M. I., Canterbury.
Egan, P. M., Thurles, Co. Tipperary.
Emery, W. H. J., Salisbury.
Fitch, P. A. W., London.
Gabb, W. H., London.
Hawkridge, D. L., London (Sawyer Prize).
Hingeley, H. S. T., Coventry.
Hedges, C. C., London.
Judd, Miss M. E., Brackley.
King, H. W., London (Lafontaine Prize).
Leaver, N. J., Guildford.
Lee, Miss M., New Mills, Yorks.
Long, J. H., Deddington, Oxon.
Loynd, G. M., Nelson, Lancs.
Morley, F., Derby.
Passey, T., Widnes.
Reed, W. J., London.
Rhodes, N., Manchester.
Roberts, Miss G., Neath, S. Wales.
Robinson, H. A., Manchester.
Rooke, A., Huddersfield.
Spencer, L., Manchester.
Stark, A. W., Old Beaconsfield.
Swanton, F. C. J., Dublin.
Waine, F., Croydon.
Walton, K. E., Coulsdon.
Whitehall, W. H., Liverpool.
Wilson, F. B. P., London.
Winney, G. T., London.
Wolfenden, W. H., Ashton-under-Lyne.
Wright, G. P., Middlesbrough.

PASSED FELLOWSHIP, JULY, 1928

Marriott, F. W., London.
May, H. C., Jersey, C.I.
Mitchell, C. J., St. Albans.
Stubington, H., Wotton-u-Edge, Glos. (Turpin Prize).
Sykes, J. A., Bristol.
Tubbs, W. J., London.
Verney, G. C., Dorking.

Alan W. Shindler, Registrar.

FELLOWSHIP PAPER-WORK

Counterpoint.—Much of the work seemed to be inspired more from a harmonic than from a melodic point of view. The inclusion of a few crotchet passing-notes does not necessarily suffice to form a good melodic part. An occasional point of imitation should not be overlooked.

Fugue.—This work was disappointing. Very few of the candidates made use of the really effective forms of Stretti of which the Subject admitted. The imitations were far too free, with little attempt to imitate at all strictly the opening notes of the theme, some doing no more than reproduce its rhythm. The strong effect in contrapuntal writing of answering a perfect interval by a perfect interval seemed to be lost sight of.

Questions.—These were generally well done, but in many cases the answers were far too diffuse. The candidate should practise conciseness. The time spent in over-elaborating these answers could with advantage have been devoted to the other parts of the paper.

Instrumentation.—Many of the Instrumentation settings were well done, but in some other cases the candidate seemed invariably to choose the most unsuitable instrument, or group of instruments. It is quite possible to write instrumentation which looks well, and which can be played, and yet sounds absolutely dull and ineffective. The remedy for this seems to be a diligent study of full scores, together with a close observance of the aural effect of the various instruments, singly and combined.

String Quartet.—Apart from occasional confusion in accompanying the quaver passages in bars 8 to 11, this was done very well.

Composition.—This was one of the bright spots of the paper work. Some of the settings made excellent music—with a laudable avoidance of hymn-like squareness, and with a feeling for climax in the melody. The pianoforte accompaniment, so often a weak feature, showed generally a decided improvement.

George J. Bennett (Chairman).
C. H. Kitson.
F. G. Shinn.

FELLOWSHIP ORGAN-WORK

The examiners wish to call attention to the faults in tempo and rhythm as shown in the recent examination. As to the tempo adopted by the candidates, it is of course a fact that opinions differ widely on the subject, especially in the case of Bach. It may be said that the majority of the candidates adopted a reasonable tempo, but a few of them played their pieces much too quickly, and their technique was not equal to the demands made upon it. The Stanford Chaconne suffered severely with regard to tempo. It is a piece that calls for sensitive treatment and delicate modifications of movement. But it was often played too slowly throughout, and in the middle sections, rhythm entirely disappeared through heavy rallentandos. The result was a complete absence of continuity. The Haydn Allegretto was taken too fast in some cases. Candidates should remember that a double-bar does not mean a break in the tempo. A fault often noticeable in the Bach was an excessive staccato—a habit which seems to be growing, no doubt as a reaction from the unvarying legato of former times. In the tests the tempo was very often unsatisfactory, and nearly always too slow. Candidates should get into their heads the pace demanded by metronome marks given.

In the Harmonization and Extemporisation tests there was the old inability to get away from the tonic key, and great reluctance to use the chord of the 6th.

Alan Gray (Chairman).
Henry G. Ley.
Stanley Marchant.

ASSOCIATE PAPER-WORK

In the strict counterpoint there should be a better appreciation of the effect of the whole line of the added part or parts; often the bars seemed to have little connection with one another, or were spoiled by an angular and disjunct piece of melody. The minor mode troubled some candidates, the sixth of this scale (major or minor) being especially a stumbling-block. Attempts at modal treatment were not very successful. Some vigour was shown in the free counterpoint solutions, but candidates must remember that points of imitation do not justify crude harmony; occasional rhythmic imitation would often have been more musicianly than the direct copy of a melodic figure.

There was a distinct improvement in writing a pianoforte accompaniment to a given melody; it was more independent, and the pianoforte idiom was better understood. There is still a tendency to crowd in too many notes, and add fussy and pointless detail.

The ear-tests were less well done than usual; the time of the melodic test was often mistaken, and the chords were frequently placed wrongly and were sometimes quite inaccurate.

The added melody and added bass were satisfactory on the whole; failures were generally due to a pointless meandering.

The four-part harmonization of a given unfigured bass was fair; there is still too much block harmony, with too little feeling for effective part-writing.

In answering the questions, some candidates compared the 'break' in a boy's voice with the breaking of a boy's voice, and their answers were medical rather than musical. A glowing and flowery rhapsody on the beauties of the music is not a 'brief description of Brahms's "Requiem."' Neither the exposition of a Fugue nor of a Sonata was always understood or described clearly.

P. C. Buck (Chairman).
E. T. Sweeting.
T. Keighley.

ASSOCIATESHIP ORGAN-WORK

We are able to report a considerable improvement upon the work of the previous examination. There was greater facility and ease in the playing of the pieces, and good judgment was shown in choice and control of the stops. The tests also were better done. Candidates should guard against undue haste in rapid passages. The Guilmant Sonata suffered most in this respect, and was often played more quickly than indicated and far more quickly than it could be adequately interpreted. This was undoubtedly responsible for many blunders in notes and distortions in rhythm and phrasing. It must be remembered that brilliance depends at least as much upon accuracy as upon pace.

In the quieter movements there was often a noticeable lack of good legato playing and careful phrasing. Sound musicianship was on the whole rather the exception than the rule. The sight-reading was particularly disappointing and immature. Candidates frequently gave the impression that they were unable to manage the organ and at the same time read the music before them. It is absolutely necessary in a searching examination such as this that those who present themselves should give a reasonably adequate performance of pieces and tests alike.

E. Stanley Roper (Chairman).
G. D. Cunningham.
G. Thalben Ball.

THE ORGAN AND BROADCASTING

By Corbett Sumsion

Ordeal by microphone is in the nature of an acid test. We who listen know that the microphone habit is not quickly acquired. The lecturer loses something of his habitual assurance, and the public speaker much of his ease. The comedian and variety artist are in so bad a case that they need a dose of applause at the end of each item to buttress their exhausted frames. Over all of these the organist has this immense advantage, that whenever he plays, and wherever, his audience is always invisible; he may be conscious of people in the building, but he is not so vividly aware of them as is the lecturer, the orator, the actor, or the singer, each accustomed to derive a positive stimulus from applause.

This is, perhaps, the reason for the high level of performance maintained by broadcasting organists. True, we still have to suffer fractures of rhythm due to changes of registration, but a certain type of player will never successfully negotiate this pons asinorum. If he could only hear himself . . . ! Apart from this there is little to criticise. The programmes are both comprehensive and well planned, and contain very little second-rate stuff.

Yet there is room for improvement in registration. Sir George Martin could often be seen strolling round St. Paul's during service, listening with critical attention to the effects of his instrument in various parts of the building, and most of us have followed his wise example. My private opinion is that a course of listening should be embodied in every student's curriculum, for it brings into play the critical faculty, and one learns at least what NOT to do. May one make this strong suggestion to the organist who is to broadcast, that he listen with all his critical attention to other men at the microphone?

The cathedral organ, the large parish church organ, and the cinema organ, with, occasionally, a town hall organ, cover the whole field: and it is patent that each has its pitfalls. It is, perhaps, doubtful if the various problems of registration will be successfully dealt with so long as the organist is playing to an audience in situ simultaneously with an ethereal host. Dr. Darke seems to have done so; indeed, he enjoys this prominence, that his are the only pedals which we are tolerably sure of hearing. One assumes the reason to be his use of 8-ft. pedal stops to an unusually great extent; but then other people may not use them for the best of reasons—that they are not there. A second cause of the success of his recitals is probably the lack of echo in the building; it is quite certain that the cathedral recital is handicapped by this possession, though it may be an asset responsible for much of the glamour which characterises the cathedral service. Dr. Darke's full organ, too, comes through with a definition which contrasts notably with the inextricable jumble of sound that reaches the listener from other instruments. Practice, or experience, makes perfect, and one may safely assume that Dr. Darke has made a comprehensive study of the requirements, and has discovered what does and what does not 'come off.'

One may with equal safety assume that a great many other players have not done so, and one hopes that the day is not far distant when it will have become a platitude that 16-ft. Pedal tone is quite inaudible alone, that Mixtures spell confusion, and that 8-ft. manual stops, together with a suitable 4-ft. and/or 2-ft., are the ideal. One is surprised at the small number of trios played; surely they are not all without other than a technical interest? May one also put in a plea for broad phrasing and less of the unbroken legato? This plea, however, is addressed to church players only.

The cinema organist has apparently foresworn the display of any such trait as legato playing, presumably in the fear that he might be mistaken for a renegade. And here one sees how wide a gulf separates the cinema player from the man whose outlook is based on the Cathedral tradition. Mr. Reginald Foort is possessed of a fine technique—as, indeed, are nearly all concert-players; appreciably ahead, I am inclined to admit, of the average best of church organists—and I was astonished to learn that his organ is only two-manual. But it seems to me that the reluctance of his left hand to hold a chord when it decently may becomes something of a nightmare of fidgettiness after a short time. I was also astonished to observe from a photograph in the Radio Times what a number of stops he has at command in his New Gallery Cinema organ: there have been half-hours when I almost feared his only solo stop was a mongrel derived from the mating of a vox humana with the glass of water and the straw with which certain intrepid optimists essay to imitate bird-calls. I should very much like to hear many of his other stops. For the rest, one can only contrast the physical labours which he achieves with the leisurely calm of a cathedral loft, and wonderingly acclaim the extent of his répertoire and the white-heat of his zeal. A great lesson to us votaries of the sacrosanct legato and its implications! How eagerly we embraced the opportunity for stretching our legs during a sermon, even though our playing periods were comparatively short!

One regret: A very certain thrill accrues to the player, and to the listener in only slightly less degree, from the sheer volume of sound upon which a large organ rides to a climax. Unfortunately, this thrill is completely lost over the ether. Further, the listener's ear is often so continuously strained to catch the pedal line that his enjoyment of broadcast organ recitals is at best a fractional one. Let us hope that Sir Oliver Lodge, or some similar genius, will shortly provide a remedy akin to that applied by the gramophone companies to this very defect.

CONFERENCE OF CHOIRMASTERS AND CLERGY

An open discussion of exceptional interest was held on Saturday, July 7, at Southwark Cathedral Chapter House, on 'The Church Service—the Musical Ideal.' The Bishop of Woolwich presided, and opened the proceedings with an address of welcome. Despite the attractions of the countryside on such a brilliantly fine summer's day, there was an attendance of more than two hundred persons—about half of these being members of the London Society of Organists, the other half consisting of parish priests and interested members of the general public.

THE REV. T. P. STEVENS mentioned the events which had led up to the convening of the meeting, and the part which he had taken, as editor of the Diocesan Gazette, in publishing a report of a meeting held in the Chapter House towards the end of last year, at which dissatisfaction with the present state of Church music had been expressed. He went on to refer to the value of congregational singing. A few weeks ago he had visited Beauvais, and had found congregational singing in the Cathedral there a reality. The Mass was sung to simple plainchant, conducted by a priest with unostentatious movements of the hand, with complete success.

Mr. Frederic Leeds spoke in defence of professional choirs and of the use of music of such a type that congregations could not join in. Congregations, he said, derived much more benefit from listening to, than from attempting to join in, the singing. Unless people were properly trained, they could not expect to be able to sing. He thought that candidates for the sacred ministry ought to receive musical training, especially in the singing of their part of the services. Much had been said recently about the impression made by the music upon the passer-by who casually entered a church. But surely it was the regular worshipper at any given church for whom we must cater. One could not expect to drop in anywhere and always find familiar music in which one could join.

Mr. Martin Shaw remarked that the basis of a satisfactory settlement of the present difficulties must be compromise. There was a place for singing by the choir only—provided it be a good choir with a proper balance of parts—and sometimes the choir should be silent and let the congregation sing alone. Such simple items as the hymns were capable of varied treatment—some verses being sung by choir only (unaccompanied), some by congregation only, some by all in unison and with organ, some with descants, &c.—to the delight of all. As for the Psalms, if Anglican chants were regarded as unsatisfactory, and it was not practicable, for some reason, to use the plainsong tones, there remained the alternative method of reading the Psalms aloud and not singing them. This method should more often be adopted.

Capt. Francis Burgess said that some speakers talked of congregational singing as if it were a new thing. It existed—and the problem was satisfactorily solved—in the 5th century. There were four classes of plainchant: a very easy kind for the clergy (laughter), a somewhat more difficult kind for congregations, a still more difficult kind for choirs, and a very difficult and ornate kind for Cantors or soloists. Once upon a time, very long ago, there was a 'passer-by' who casually dropped in when the Psalms were being sung in a church (and being so long ago they were doubtless sung to plainchant). He was so much impressed that he became a convert to Christianity. This was St. Augustine. We had been told that the ability to sing could not be acquired naturally, but only after much instruction. This was surely just professional propaganda! (Laughter.) If this were unfortunately true, the singing master would have many more pupils. But it was not true. Nine persons out of ten had a fair singing voice by nature, and others could acquire it, excepting only mentally defective persons. The effect of singing by a large congregation was inspiring and uplifting in a manner which could hardly be described. In spite of individual imperfections, congregational singing could be a very high form of art indeed.

The Rev. W. P. T. Atkinson pointed out the need for Church music, including hymns, always to be chosen with careful regard to the Church's seasons and to the character of the Feast or service. All the music must fit perfectly into the liturgical scheme of things, the ceremonial, &c. Organist and priest should confer, so that all details might be worked out and settled in advance by mutual agreement, and carefully carried out according to plan.

Mr. E. T. Cook said he had hoped that Mr. Martin Shaw would give particulars of music which he could recommend as suitable. Much music at present in vogue was unworthy, and many persons and choirmasters were asking what suitable music existed which they could use instead. He (Mr. Cook) personally would like universal plainsong, with some of the polyphonic music of the 16th century. But there were places of worship where these ideals would be impossible of attainment. Good music of a simple type should be used. He also advocated choirs of women where, as was so often the case, boys were hard to get.

Mr. Coldrey said that he felt it to be his duty, as the seconder of the resolution of last November censuring the music of many of our churches, to explain that a declaration of war on organists in general had not been the intention. Music of an unsatisfactory type still persisted in many a church, whereas it had been given up as unworthy in every cathedral in the country. Nevertheless, ordinary parish churches should not seek to imitate the cathedral service. Simple music in which congregations could take their part was needed. Hymn-tunes in some collections were set too high to suit any voices except trained trebles; in the 'English Hymnal' tunes rarely went higher than D, which was high enough for most congregations.

Mr. Godfrey Sceats gave some experiences of congregational singing, and of the services generally, in French churches, from some of which he said we could learn much. Referring to the Te Deum, he said that the traditional setting—coeval with the words—was a little severe, and had never quite come to its own in the Church of England, but it yielded remarkably well to study and could, he knew from experience, be sung and valued by congregations.

Prof. Rogers, of King's College, London, said that the men studying under his guidance for the priesthood were all taught to sing. Only one in ten, as a rule, lacked musical ability. He invited any interested persons present to attend a service at King's College, and said he would welcome criticism and advice. The hymn-tunes had often to be transposed down for men's voices only, although they used the 'English Hymnal,' in which the pitch was not so high as in some other collections.

Several other speakers contributed to the discussion, which was resumed after an interval for tea and continued until half-past six.

---

National Federation of Old Cathedral Choristers' Associations

The annual Festival took place at Liverpool on June 15, 16, 17, about a hundred and forty members being present. The Festival opened with a reception by Messrs. Rushworth & Dreaper, who afterwards generously entertained the company at supper. Mr. Harry Goss-Custard then gave an informal recital on the Cathedral organ. On Saturday, a reception and lunch were given in the Town Hall by the Lord Mayor, Miss Margaret Beavan. Many other musical, social, and sight-seeing events made up a most enjoyable Festival.

---

St. Anne's, Soho

Mr. Eric Warr has been appointed organist and choirmaster at St. Anne's, Soho. Mr. Warr was a chorister at Manchester Cathedral under Mr. Sydney Nicholson, afterwards, at the age of fifteen, becoming organist at St. Andrew's, Manchester. He gained a music scholarship at Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, in 1923, and the Stewart of Rannoch Scholarship in 1924, both of which he held for five years. He took his Mus. Bac. degree in 1926, and at the R.C.M. was awarded the George Carter scholarship for composition and organ.

---

'There is nothing in the world like a boy treble. It beats all the women that ever were born. Little devils! And they don't know it!' So said the Prime Minister at a meeting of the Westminster Abbey Special Choir. The remark serves to remind us of the valuable work the gramophone has done in showing the public generally what an exquisite instrument a well-trained boy's treble voice is. There must be many thousands, especially among non-churchgoers, to whom such gramophone records as that of young Lough singing 'Hear my prayer' came as a revelation. Incidentally, the gramophone must have led to awkward questions on the part of congregations at churches where the boys' singing is bad. 'If Tommy Lough can sing like that, why need our Tommy Brown produce mere noise?' Tommy Brown needn't, of course. He may never be able to sing like a Lough (mainly because the excellences of the Temple solo boy were not confined to mere voice), but without great difficulty he can be taught to use his voice in a musical way. Probably a set of three or four gramophone records demonstrating the commonest fault in boys' singing—the forcing-up of the chest register—and the simple exercises needed for its cure, would have sufficient sale to make the enterprise worth while. No voice responds more readily to treatment than that of the normal intelligent boy.

The public is mistaken in supposing that good boys' singing can be produced only from specially chosen material. There are many poor town and village churches where, thanks to the presence of a choirmaster blessed with plenty of tact and patience and a little skill (notice the proportions!), delightful boys' singing is the rule. Contrariwise, there are affluent churches with highly-paid organists (who are only nominal choir-trainers) and an ample supply of good natural material, where the singing is raucous and shrill. Now that the gramophone has shown congregations what's what, so to speak, they should ask their choirmaster for it, and see that they get it. (They must also be prepared to pay for it.)

The fortieth Festival of the Canterbury Diocesan Choral Union was held in Canterbury Cathedral at the latter end of June, when forty-one choirs, totalling over a thousand voices, took part. The music included a setting of the Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis, written for the occasion by Dr. Charlton Palmer, and three anthems—Gretchaninov's 'Holy, Holy,' Elgar's 'Light of the World,' and a selection adapted from Mozart's twelfth Mass. A notable new feature in a fine service was a procession in which the alternation of harmonies by the Cathedral choir, unison by the massed choirs and large congregation, and organ interludes, produced a wonderful effect. The Rev. C. P. Banks conducted, and the organ was played by Dr. Charlton Palmer.

The York Diocesan Musical Festival was held in York Minster in two sections, one for town choirs and one for country, about forty of the latter taking part. The two anthems were Boyce's 'Blessing and Glory' and Stanford's 'Oh, for a closer walk with God,' and the Canticles were sung to Gregorian Tones with faux-bourdons by Byrd. Large congregations attended, and the work of the combined choirs reached a high standard. Dr. E. C. Bairstow conducted, and Mr. J. L. Slater, deputy organist at the Minster, was at the organ. An address was given by Mr. Sydney Nicholson, who spoke concerning his Church Music School scheme.

At Westbourne Church, Glasgow, at a recital given by Mr. A. M. Henderson, the Westbourne Choir sang Henschel's 'Tantum Ergo Sacramentum,' for six-part choir and organ, and Dvorák's 'Sanctus,' for soprano solo and male-voice choir, from the Te Deum, Op. 103, two ancient hymns by Vulpius and Schicht, arranged by Henry G. Ley, and two pieces for unaccompanied choir by Ippolitov-Ivanov and Balakirev. Mr. Henderson played the Toccata from Widor's fourth Symphony, Chorale Preludes by Bach, Rheinberger, Stewart, and Goodhart, Mendelssohn's second Sonata, &c.

Messrs. Rushworth & Dreaper have just installed an organ at Fettes College, Edinburgh—a three-manual of thirty stops and twenty-three foot- and finger-pistons. Two opening recitals were given by Mr. W. Greenhouse Allt, his programmes including Bach's E minor Prelude and Fugue, Stanford's Fantasia and Toccata in D minor, Elgar's 'Imperial' March, Reger's Toccata in D minor, Chorale Preludes by Bach, Wood, Alan Gray, Darke, Brahms, &c.

As a sequel to the reconstruction of the Brighton Aquarium, the organ has been purchased for £42, and placed in St. Julian's Parish Church, Kingston Buci, near Brighton. The instrument was dedicated on July 11, when Mr. Guy Michell gave a recital, playing Pierné's 'Trois Pièces,' a Bach Fugue, Karg-Elert's Prelude on 'Nun danket,' &c. The organ has been renovated by Messrs. Morgan & Smith, of Hove, and has two manuals and nineteen stops.

A vocal and instrumental recital was given at Boston Parish Church on June 21, in aid of the Restoration Fund. Miss Dorothy Silk sang some Purcell and Bach, and took the solo in Mendelssohn's 'Hear my prayer' and Brahms's 'Ye now are sorrowful.' Dr. G. J. Bennett played organ solos and accompanied, and violoncello solos were given by Mr. Collin Smith. Dr. Bernard Jackson conducted. The Fund benefited by £82.

Mr. Lynnwood Farnam's many friends on this side of the water will be interested to hear that he will, during the autumn, commence a series of forty Bach recitals at the Church of the Holy Communion, New York. The programmes will include the whole of Bach's organ works. The Chorale Preludes will very largely be played in such a way as to coincide with the Festival or season for which they were composed.

A hymn-singing Festival was held at St. James's Church, Whitehaven, on June 28, when there was a large attendance of choirs from all parts of the Deanery. Mr. Sydney Nicholson conducted, and in the course of the proceedings alluded to his scheme for a School of Church Music.

Mr. Ralph Downes, late organ scholar at Keble College, Oxford, has been appointed organist of Princeton University, U.S.A., and sails at the end of August. A magnificent organ, containing about ninety speaking stops, has just been erected in the Chapel, itself a new and handsome building.

Messrs. Rushworth & Dreaper have recently built an organ for St. Machar's Cathedral, Aberdeen—a three-manual of thirty-nine stops and over twenty pistons.

RECITALS

Mr. M. Courtenay Boyle, St. Mary's Parish Church, Slough—Prelude and Fugue in D, Bach; 'Visione,' Rheinberger; Rhapsody in E, Howells.

Mr. S. Carlton Chantler, St. Katharine's, Uitenhage, S. Africa—Fugue in D minor and Prelude and Fugue in E minor, Bach; Fantasia on 'The King of Love,' F. H. Wood.

Rev. Stanley Mann, St. Luke's, Belfast—Sonata No. 3, Mendelssohn; Two Chorale Preludes, Alan Gray; Choral Fantasia on 'Darwell's 148th,' Darke; Allegretto, Wolstenholme; Concert Overture in C minor, Hollins.

Mr. W. Edward Kirby, All Saints', Clifton—Overture to 'Saul,' Handel; Toccata in F, Bach; Prelude, 'The Dream of Gerontius,' Elgar; 'In an old abbey' and Pæan, Harwood.

Dr. Hayward Scott, St. Mary's, Long Sutton—Fantasy Prelude, Charles Macpherson; Sonata No. 1, Guilmant; Fantasy on 'Babylon's Streams,' Harris.

Mr. Leonard J. Castle, St. Lawrence Jewry—Overture to 'Athalia,' Handel; Pièce Héroïque, Franck; Prelude and Fugue in E minor, Raff.

Mr. Herbert Hodge, St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, E.C.—Sonata in E flat and Prelude and Fugue in A minor, Bach; Fantasia in C minor, Berens; Finale (Sonata No. 5), Rheinberger; Concerto No. 6, Handel.

Mr. Edgar H. Daniels, Parish Church, Pontypridd—Sonata No. 2, Mendelssohn; Fugue à la gigue, Bach; Spring Song, Hollins; Allegro Vivace (Sonata No. 1), Guilmant.

Mr. Guy Michell, St. Anne's, Brighton—Overture, 'Occasional' Oratorio; Allegretto in B minor, Vierne; 'St. Anne' Fugue, Bach; Chorale Prelude, 'Now thank we all our God,' Karg-Elert.

Mr. C. S. Richards, Hexham Abbey—Symphony No. 5, Widor; Allegro (Symphony No. 2), Borodin; 5/4 movement and Finale ('Pathetic' Symphony), Tchaikovsky.

Mr. Henry Riding, St. Mary-the-Virgin, Aldermanbury, E.C.—Introduction, Air, and Variations, F. E. Gladstone; Voluntary in A, Battishill; Triumphal Hymn, Bossi; Album Leaf, Ellingford; Minuet and Trio, Sterndale Bennett.

Mr. John Pullein, St. Mary's Cathedral, Glasgow—Two Chorale Preludes, Bach; Sonata No. 8, Rheinberger; 'Song of May,' Jongen; Installation March, Stanford.

Mr. J. M. Preston, St. George's, Jesmond—Prelude and Variations (Symphony No. 8), Widor; Double Fugue on 'Lauda Sion,' H. Cuypers; Passacaglia, Bach; Sonata No. 1, Mendelssohn; Fugue in F, Krebs.

Mr. W. J. Lancaster, Bolton Parish Church—Prelude and Fugue in B minor, Bach; Intermezzo No. 4, Brahms; Concerto No. 4, Handel.

Mr. N. S. Wallbank, Lancaster Parish Church—A Bach programme: Two Chorale Preludes, Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Adagio in A minor, Fugue alla Gigue.

Mr. H. Percy Richardson, St. Chad's, Far Headingley, Leeds—Choral No. 3, Franck; Postludium alla Toccata, Karg-Elert; Fantasia and Fugue in C minor, Bach; Scherzo in E, Gigout; Ronde ('Fire-Bird' Music), Stravinsky.

Mr. Herbert F. Ellingford, St. George's Hall, Liverpool—Evening Song, Bairstow; Variations de Concert in E minor, Bonnet; Caprice de Concert, Stuart Archer; Sonata No. 3, Guilmant; Sonata No. 3, Bach.

Mr. Arthur E. Watts, St. Lawrence Jewry—Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Bach; First movement (Symphony No. 5), Widor; Prelude on Dundee,' Parry; Spring Song, Hollins.

Dr. Herman Brearley, Middleton Parish Church—Fantasia and Fugue in G minor, Bach; Minuet and Trio in E flat, Mozart; Pastorale, Ravel.

Mr. Ralph Downes, Christ Church Cathedral, Oxford—Four Variations on a Chorale, Pachelbel; Prelude and Fugue in A, Bach; Sonata No. 7, Rheinberger; Fugue in F sharp minor, Buxtehude; Symphony No. 3, Vierne; 'Symphonie de l'Agneau Mystique,' de Maleingreau.

Mr. W. Stamp, St. Clement Danes, Strand—Suite Gothique, Boëllmann; Villanella, Ireland; Chorale Prelude on 'Rhosymedre,' Vaughan Williams; Sketch No. 4, Schumann; Prelude and Fugue in E minor, Bach.

Mr. Maughan Barnett, Town Hall, Auckland, N.Z.—Prelude and Fugue in D minor ('Fiddle' Fugue), Bach; Sonata No. 1, Harwood; 'Pensées du soir,' Ellingford; Grand Chœur, Guilmant.

Mr. Ambrose Porter, Middleton Parish Church—Fantasia in F, West; An Easter Meditation, Porter; Sonata in C minor, Howells; Prelude, 'Kyrie, God the Holy Ghost,' Bach.

---

APPOINTMENTS

Mr. Maitland Farmer, choirmaster and organist, St. Luke's, Redcliffe Square, S.W.

Mr. W. Harry Gabb, choirmaster and organist, Christchurch, Gipsy Hill, S.E.

Mr. W. J. Hunt, choirmaster and organist, St. Mary's, Haydon Bois, Essex.

Dr. H. L. Read, choirmaster and organist, Bowdon Parish Church, Cheshire.

Mr. Daniel H. Rogers, choirmaster and organist, Winchmore Hill Baptist Church.

Mr. H. Stubington, choirmaster and organist, St. Andrew's Parish Church, Presteigne, Radnorshire; and music master, Presteigne County School.

The Amateurs' Exchange

Under this heading we insert, free of charge, announcements by amateur musicians who wish to co-operate with others.

Lady pianist (advanced) wishes to meet vocalist for mutual practice. Evenings only. Tufnell Park district.—E. E. C., c/o Musical Times.

Experienced first-class leader wanted for trio. W.10 district.—R. D., c/o Musical Times.

Pianist wishes to meet advanced violinist for mutual practice of classical music. 'Cellist available for occasional trio. Wimbledon.—Piano, c/o Musical Times.

Mezzo-soprano ballad singer wishes to meet accompanist for practice.—101, Belvedere Road, Upper Norwood, S.E. (near Crystal Palace).

Lady vocalist, L.R.A.M., wishes to meet pianist for mutual practice. Must be good sight-reader.—N. Robinson, 14, Belsize Crescent, N.W.3.

Lady pianist wishes to meet 'cellist or violinist to play together for mutual pleasure. Croydon district.—B. L. E., c/o Musical Times.

Baritone singer wishes to meet advanced accompanist for mutual practice. Mornings, and West Central district preferred.—Canto, c/o Mr. Clifton Cooke, 26, Guilford Street, W.C.1.

Letters to the Editor

WESTMINSTER SINGERS

Sir,—Unfortunately, I was in the depths of the country when your June issue came out, and was not able to obtain a copy. In the July number there is some reference to a criticism by your Toronto correspondent on the Westminster Glee Singers, and also some remarks on the name and origin of the Westminster Singers and the similarity of the two titles.

May I, as a personal friend of Mr. Branscombe and as an old member of the 'Glee Singers,' point out that they are not 'a recently formed body,' &c., the first tour having been undertaken in the year 1900, the party including several adult members of the Abbey choir, also Madame Marie Hooton and Mr. W. Sterndale Bennett, the boys being the pick of those at Mr. James Bates's 'London College for Choristers,' amongst which were his sons Harold and Arthur.

This company toured every English-speaking part of the globe, and the name 'Westminster Glee Singers' is a household word in South Africa, India, and Australasia, and, contrary to the implication of your article, it would be the Westminster Singers who would be mistaken for the 'Glee Singers,' should they ever sing out of the confines of Great Britain.

I do not know what was said in the Toronto critic's notes about the singing and programmes of the company, but in the past Edward Branscombe has set out on these tours (this is the fourth world tour) with such high ideals as to the presentation of glees, madrigals, and part-songs that he has lost money for months on end until he gradually saw the necessity for making the programmes more acceptable to uncultivated ears by putting in some examples of the lighter side of vocal music.

He does not trade on the word 'Westminster,' his programmes give the name of the particular choir in which his people have sung, retaining the old title for the collective party.

If you have not had many other letters on this subject I should be glad if you would print this in fairness to Mr. Branscombe (who is touring with the party) and the many friends and well-wishers of the Westminster Glee Singers in England.—Yours, &c.,

H. Vincent Collier.

77, Bramley Road, W.5.

[It is not for us to settle the claims of the rival parties. Nevertheless, we cannot but ask the obvious question: If (as Mr. Collier says above)

Mr. Branscombe 'does not trade on the word "Westminster,"' why did he adopt it twelve years after it had been registered and used by another party of singers?—Editor.]

'IMPROVING' THE CLASSICS

Sir,—An arrangement, a transcription, or a re-harmonization when conceived by a creative mind is, as Godowsky points out, an entity which in its own worth may prove a masterpiece, and may even surpass the composer's original work.

On the other hand, it may be dull, clumsy, and generally inept (1). In your reply to my letter you cite examples of the latter species, assume quite gratuitously that I like them, and then accuse me of lack of musicianship.

I am concerned with Godowsky's version of the 'Moment Musical'; you introduce a laboured effort by Ornstein (2); so far from liking it, I was unaware of its existence until you drew attention to it. I mentioned Roger Quilter's arrangement of 'Drink to me only,' which, ironically enough, was highly praised in the Musical Times some time ago; you concentrate attack on Cyril Scott's version—a very different matter (3).

I spoke of Cyril Scott's 'Cherry Ripe,' which is generally admitted to be his most successful essay in this line; you ignore this and poke fun at 'All through the night' (4).

I submit, Sir, that this treatment is unfair, and gives a distorted view of an important subject.

Were the views expressed in my last letter entertained only by barbarians devoid of musicianship and a sense of style (myself, for example), discussion would be pointless.

Allow me, therefore, to quote Mr. Ernest Newman in the Sunday Times of April 22: 'After all, Schubert, untouched and untouched-up, is always available for us when we want him; so why not, meanwhile, spend ten minutes enjoying Godowsky? As his fine transcriptions of the Bach unaccompanied violin and 'cello Suites prove, he has a remarkable faculty for drawing out of another man's work something that was not formally expressed by the man, but is really latent in the work' (my italics) (5).

The point which so many people are either unable or unwilling to grasp, is that Godowsky's arrangement of the 'Moment Musical' and other works is in the nature of a variation so 'free' as to constitute an original work which must be judged as such—not by preconceived notions of musical morality.

I admit, however, that the word 'arrangement' is unsatisfactory in that it is frequently confused with 'transcription.' A better term would be 'Moment Musical,' as seen by Godowsky, or whoever else it may be.

Masterpieces such as Chopin Waltzes or Etudes are not likely to be supplanted either by Godowsky or anyone else. Even a masterpiece, however, loses interest when repeated remorselessly month after month, and I suggest that Godowsky, in providing us with alternative versions of these works, has performed a valuable service (6). Incidentally, his fifty-three studies on Chopin Etudes, combining, as they do, amazing resource, invention, and technical mastery, probably represent the culminating point in the development of the étude.

Turning to transcription, you state, 'many hold the view that a transcription should respect the harmonic scheme and style of the original.' Obviously a real (strict) transcription is, or should be, an attempt to transfer a work from one medium to another as accurately as circumstances may permit. Hence, the promiscuous introduction of extraneous matter is a procedure which should be condemned as dishonest and misleading. But the principle of so-called 'free transcription' is akin to that of the 'arrangement,' wherein it is so self-evident that the composer is giving free play to his imagination that a charge of 'harmonic alteration' is pointless. Clearly, a piece such as Rachmaninov's 'Liebesfreud' is primarily in the nature of a variation or fantasia on the original, and only incidentally a transcription.

'Free transcription' is undoubtedly a vague, colourless term, and for works of an extended and elaborate character such as this I suggest Godowsky's phrase, 'symphonic metamorphosis,' as being more appropriate.

You assert that 'nobody plays similar tricks with literary classics.' Is this true? Are not novels dramatized, dramas novelized, and both cinematised? 'Peter Pan,' during its production as a film, was submitted reel by reel to the author, who expressed himself as completely satisfied, despite its very 'free' treatment.

'Why,' asks Godowsky in his prefatory remarks on transcriptions, &c., 'should musicians be denied the privileges of comment, criticism, dissertation, discussion, and display of imaginative faculties when transcribing, arranging, or paraphrasing a standard work? Why should the literary man alone enjoy all the prerogatives? Shakespeare built his plays upon borrowed themes, and Molière said: "Je prends mon bien où je le trouve"' (7).

Coming to the question of re-harmonization of folk-songs and old tunes, it is regrettable that this subject is generally approached from a sentimental rather than a scientific standpoint. Composition as it is understood to-day is something more than a mono-melodic line, and neither antiquity nor simplicity can be regarded as satisfactory substitutes for harmony and polyphony. I am well aware that 'ability to plaster a simple old tune with luscious chords is very far from being a sign of progressiveness,' but I regard as equally undesirable the methods of most editors and arrangers, whereby good thematic material is completely anæsthetised by a repellent compound of diluted Mendelssohn and what Ernest Newman describes as 'the second lesson of a correspondence course on vamping.

On this point Cyril Scott has some pertinent remarks in his 'Philosophy of Modernism': 'The five-finger exercise species of accompaniments which delighted our forefathers can only strike us moderns as deplorable defilements of many a pleasing melody placed over them. That which is calculated to appear so unobtrusive becomes the very opposite by its excessive triviality. People forget that at the present day a melody in itself is insufficient to hold the pleasurable attention of serious musicians. It may be sufficient to hold the attention of the butcher's boy, but has no place in the concert hall. If this were not a fact, Donizetti would still be modern, or, at any rate, productive of pleasure instead of tedium.'

No objection is raised to the incorporation of folk-tunes into a symphonic structure by, let us say, Tchaikovsky, Dvorák, or Delius in his 'On hearing the first cuckoo in spring'; why, then, should pianists be content with the efforts of 'arrangers' as opposed to composers, such as Grieg in his Op. 66, or Roger Quilter in 'Drink to me only'?

Finally, the position of composers and performers in this connection has been so well expressed by Godowsky in the preface to his Schubert song transcriptions that I beg leave once more to quote therefrom: 'It is so easy for the critic to strike an attitude of authority when entrenched behind the power and influence of a publication. The poor artist is like a defenceless soldier facing a machine-gun. It is so easy to disseminate and propagate opinions which readily find an assenting echo owing to the safety in stagnant conventionality and moss-grown tradition' (8).—Yours, &c.,

Clinton Gray-Fisk.

32, Dorset Square, N.W.1.

[Mr. Gray-Fisk's letter arrived too late for insertion in our June number, and, as we explained last month, it had to be held over till the present issue. We take his points in their order, having numbered them in the letter for ease of reference.

(1.) That an arrangement, &c., may, so far as merit goes, be anything, from a masterpiece to an ineptitude, is obvious. For example, we hear from a reliable critic that Godowsky's Bach arrangements are masterly, but we regard his version of the Schubert 'Moment Musical' as inept.

(2.) Our quotation from Ornstein's travesty of the Schubert piece was in type before Mr. Gray-Fisk's letter reached us—a fact which we made clear in our comments.

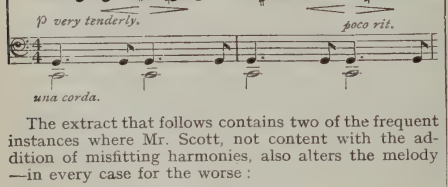
(3.) Mr. Gray-Fisk says that Quilter's arrangement of 'Drink to me only' was highly praised in the Musical Times. Quilter has published three treatments of this tune, and we cannot be sure as to which version allusion is made. Assuming it to be the most recent—an arrangement for pianoforte solo—we find the M.T. reviewer (not the present writer) saying in September, 1927:

> '. . . an arrangement, for pianoforte solo, by Quilter, of "Drink to me only with thine eyes," in which Colonel Mellish's tune takes on the gestures and accents of a typical Quilter song. The thing is rather a pièce d'occasion, and like many similar impromptus and extemporizations, is unfitted for the test of print and frequent performance. The arrangement has distinction of workmanship, however, as this composer's music generally has, and even those who find its flavour too luscious for their taste, will admit the skill with which the dish is cooked and served. Every note is in its right place, and the whole thing is thoroughly effective.'

There is high praise for the workmanship, but for little else. Quilter's accompaniment to this song the present writer described as 'a trifle oversweet' (Musical Times, November, 1921), and we should apply the same term to his arrangement for violin and pianoforte.

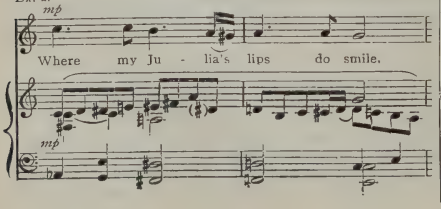
(4.) We concentrated our attack on Cyril Scott's version of 'Drink to me only' because it was the first example of his series to come to hand; we could find no copy of 'Cherry ripe.' As Mr. Gray-Fisk's commendation of the Quilter-Scott arrangements was general—he spoke of 'old tunes such as,' &c.—we were acting quite fairly in pillorying any one of them. However, we are delighted to take up the argument on the ground chosen by Mr. Gray-Fisk, and we have therefore obtained a copy of 'Cherry ripe.' Having got it, we are embarrassed by the wealth of evidence that it provides for our case; space for quotation being limited, choice is difficult. Let us lead off with the Introduction (marked 'Lingeringly'—though most normal musicians will prefer to get it over):

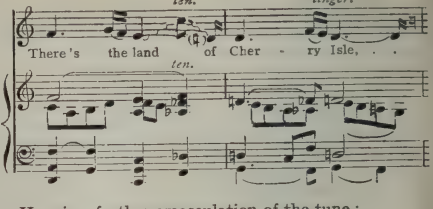
Ex. 1.



The extract that follows contains two of the frequent instances where Mr. Scott, not content with the addition of misfitting harmonies, also alters the melody—in every case for the worse:

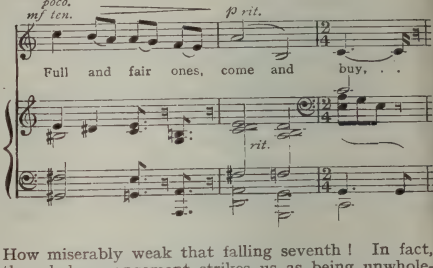
Ex. 2.





Here is a further emasculation of the tune:

Ex. 3.



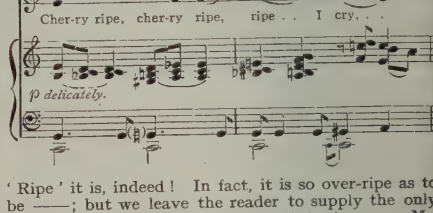
How miserably weak that falling seventh! In fact, the whole arrangement strikes us as being unwholesome, overloaded, and artificial. The life is taken out of the tune by the use of too many chords, and many of them are far-fetched and clumsily used, e.g., the D flat chord in bar 3 of Ex. 2. Portamento marks abound, and repeatedly the term 'linger' occurs—a direction that most singers are far from needing; a more useful instruction would be 'get on with it.'

If Mr. Scott wished to do a good turn to this delightful old song he should have restored the original text. Instead, he has followed the unimaginative editors who seem to be unable to touch a poem without spoiling it. Herrick wrote:

> 'Where my Julia's lips do smile,
> There 's the land, or Cherry Isle,
> Whose plantations,' &c.,

—which is both sensible English and a pretty fancy. 'There 's the land of Cherry Isle' is neither. And the feeble line, 'Where the sunbeams sweetly smile,' is not Herrick's. The punctuation, too, is altered without justification. We apologise for taking up so much space with this song, but as Mr. Gray-Fisk brings it forward as a good example of the kind of tinkering he champions, we must, in self-defence, be comprehensive. We take leave of 'Cherry ripe' with a final quotation:

Ex. 4.



'Ripe' it is, indeed! In fact, it is so over-ripe as to be ——; but we leave the reader to supply the only fitting adjective. We are content to turn on Mr. Scott his description, and call his arrangement a 'deplorable defilement of a pleasing melody.'

(5.) Mr. Newman's opinion on any subject has our respect. We do not know whether his reference to the Schubert-Godowsky transcriptions includes the 'Moment Musical' that led to this correspondence. If it does, it merely shows that Mr. Newman likes something that we detest.

(6.) Certain classics are overplayed, as our correspondent says, but we differ as to the remedy. Instead of re-hashing them, why not give them a rest, and do a bit of exploring amongst the large amount of admittedly fine music that is neglected?

(7.) We repeat that 'nobody plays similar tricks with literary classics'—that is to say, nobody, e.g., paraphrases Shakespeare in a manner analogous to the musical examples under discussion. The dramatization of novels is usually done by, or in co-operation with, the author of the novel concerned. In the cinematizing of a novel only the story is taken; the genius of the writer usually shows itself almost entirely on the purely literary side, and very little in the narrative (Dickens is an outstanding example of this).

(8.) We are not lacking in admiration of Godowsky as a great pianist who is also a great musician. Nevertheless, we hold that many of the chromatic and complex transcriptions of folk-song and other standard tunes of the type praised by Mr. Gray-Fisk show as much 'stagnant conventionality' as any other overdone phase of music; already some of them show signs of becoming as 'moss-grown' as the methods of Spohr—a composer with whom Mr. Cyril Scott and others of our chromatic 'moderns' have far more in common than they imagine.—Editor.]

THE ETHICS OF BORROWING

[We have received from Dr. Eaglefield Hull a long letter, which purports to be an answer to the letter of Mr. Percy Scholes that appeared in our July number. Dr. Hull's letter, however, contains so many disputable points and actual mis-statements, and is so irrelevant to the issue raised by Mr. Scholes, that its publication would merely revive the controversy. We are therefore returning it to Dr. Hull for reconsideration with a view to inserting it in our next number.—Editor.]

A 'STUDY' ORCHESTRA

Sir,—In your June number two years ago you were good enough to print a letter from me in which reference was made to a little orchestra organized for the private study of the Beethoven Symphonies and other worth-while orchestral works.

What measure of progress has been made since then will be suggested by the enclosed programme given before a small invited audience, as a sort of finale for the season's work.

It may be of some interest for me to say that we find our present combination of twenty-two strings, four pairs of wood-wind, and two horns quite effective and satisfactory, the ensemble providing a body of tone of considerable orchestral colour and sonority. Of course, we miss the trumpets and trombones on occasion, and, more often, the kettle-drums, but these are not convenient in a small room, and are not essential in practice.—Yours, &c.,

A. E. White.

508, Holly Lodge,
1210, Jervis Street, Vancouver, B.C., Canada.

[The idea of a small amateur orchestra got together for the purpose of studying, rather than publicly performing, the classics is a good one. The programme referred to by Mr. White consisted of the 'Magic Flute' Overture, a selection from 'Hansel and Gretel,' Schubert's Overture in B flat (a little-known work written in the composer's nineteenth year), and Beethoven's No. 8.—Editor.]

A PLAYER-PIANO CLASS AT FESTIVALS?

Sir,—Surely the number of one-armed pianists is so small that it could not be worth while for any Festival to include in its syllabus a class for them, however much it may sympathise with them. Syllabuses are so crowded that there is rarely room for a new class; but in view of the increasing number of people who now play some form of player-piano, the big Festivals might consider introducing a class for them. This would probably bring in a fair number of older people who have never acquired a good finger technique, but have taken to the pianola comparatively late in life, and are getting a tremendous amount of pleasure out of their hobby. With some special arrangement for practice on the instrument selected (dealers would probably help by lending one), there is here the making of a first-class, exciting competition. Ernest Newman, in the old Piano-Player Review fifteen years ago, suggested the idea. So many more instruments are in use nowadays, and such good reproductions of excellent interpretations are to be had for study, that there must be sufficient pianolists to make a start worth while. Which Festival will lead the way?—Yours, &c.,

W. R. Anderson.

London.

TONIC SOL-FA IN SCHOOLS

Sir,—May I, as an elementary schoolmaster of twenty-five years' experience, thank you for the position you have taken in your 'Occasional Notes' for July?

As a boy of eight years of age, I was able to read at sight very difficult passages. I have grave doubts if my ability would have been anything like so great if I had been taught Staff notation. Again, through the influence of my father, I was allowed to sing in Dr. McNaught's choir in the senior concert at the Crystal Palace, at the Tonic Sol-fa Jubilee, when I was ten years old, and I still have the notes of the 'Ear-Test' (I copied all the parts and played them when we got home) given to the five thousand working people who formed the choir. True, it was only an ordinary hymn-tune, but it appeared to stagger the huge audience when the choir stood up and sang it through at first sight. And although it is many years since Tonic Sol-fa was my only means of getting music—I have been a Church organist for over thirty years—I still think in terms of that system, which so clearly shows the inter-relationship of keys and the significance of the intervals of the scale. Transposition, playing from ear, improvisation—all those matters which are musicianly as opposed to scholarly—are (relatively) easily achieved by this despised system. Every choirmaster will agree that his 'safe' readers are Sol-faists, and many a business-man-organist has envied me the power to 'play the voice parts' from Tonic Sol-fa. One grips the whole process of the composer's thought so easily with 'this d r m business'! And, of course, in my school work, where at the most one has two lessons per week, totalling ninety minutes, the system which so easily gave the working man of fifty years ago the Open Sesame to the treasures of music is the only one possible if anything worth doing is to be done in the elementary school.—Yours, &c.,

F. H. Lill.

297, Wanstead Park Road,
Ilford, Essex.

'TURKOMAN MUSIC'

Sir,—It was with pleasure that I saw a review of the joint work of Uspensky and Belaiev on 'Turkoman Music' in your July issue. May I remark, however, that from the English title which your reviewer gives this work, one would not suspect (except for the fact that it was published at Moscow) that it was in Russian, and therefore beyond the reach of most Britishers.

One point that is of interest to British folk (it was missed by the reviewer) is that Prof. Belaiev pays a big compliment to our own musico-orientalist, Dr. Henry George Farmer, whose ideas and writings the learned Professor borrows, with acknowledgment.

May I also take this opportunity to ask information about a work by Dr. Farmer—'The Organ of the Ancients: From Eastern Sources,' highly praised by Canon Galpin in the new Grove's 'Dictionary'? It is mentioned as being in the press in 1926, but I have been unable to trace its publication.—Yours, &c.,

ORIENTALIST.

ARMCHAIR v. CONCERT-HALL

SIR,—Permit me to endorse the remarks of a 'Mere Listener' in the Musical Times June issue, where, in the wireless notes, he expressed the view that probably the concert-hall is not the best medium for listening to music.

My own experience, both in regard to symphonic and chamber music, is that when personally attending a performance, the movements of the players and the full lighting and general atmosphere of the hall, tend to distract attention from the actual musical sounds.

All music of a high level requires an 'attitude of mind,' and the average concert-hall atmosphere, it must be admitted, is not conducive to this. It appears to me that the best way of listening is to be in a position of absolute physical comfort, in a quiet and softly-lit room, with a pair of head-phones as the medium. To the confirmed concert-goer, this will seem the last word in eccentricity, but in reality it is a great aid to concentration. I can imagine the critics scorning wireless transmissions as being nothing like the original performance, but without exaggeration it is quite true to say that the B.B.C. technical staff has made very great progress during the last three years, and the transmissions to-day are of a consistently high level, the orchestral timbres and bass instruments coming through with great clarity, and in the matter of chamber music the effect is that of being in the studio with the players. Unfortunately, many people do not know of the first-class reproduction which is now broadcast, and therefore do not trouble to obtain receiving apparatus worthy of the music—hence the banal sounds often to be heard from cheap loud-speakers.

Speaking purely from the appreciation standpoint, I find that wireless, properly and efficiently used, is the listening medium par excellence.—Yours, &c.,

13, Cornwall Road, Coventry. J. HATCHER.

DAILY EXPRESS NATIONAL PIANO-PLAYING CONTEST

SIR,—The Grades in the above are of four degrees, namely, A, B, C, and D, the first for candidates of eighteen years and upwards, and the latter from eight years to eleven.

Though the contest is likely to encourage the art of pianoforte-playing, the grading is far from ideal. This contest is open to every person of British nationality, and among them are numerous professionals, diploma-holders of the R.A.M., R.C.M., T.C.L., &c., who have a very great advantage over the amateur if they enter for this contest. I consider that all qualifications should have to be stated on forms of entry, otherwise it will be farcical.

I should be extremely interested to know the opinions of fellow-readers of the Musical Times on this subject, although for some little time I have been expecting the Editor himself to make some comment upon this contest in his columns.—Yours, &c.,

'Glendale,' South Lane, New Malden, Surrey. LESLIE A. W. SHEPHERD.

THE HARD CASE OF THE WOMAN COMPOSER

SIR,—Owing to the fact that my last book has sometimes been handed over by editors to their musical critics (inevitable, perhaps, yet rather like clapping the judge's wig on the defendant's head!), I have come across more than one instance of what I will venture to call not digging deep enough into the question I raised.

Musical specialists are fond of adducing women's success in literature as triumphant proof that my contention as to what happens in the music world is all moonshine. But, as I have pointed out in those pages, nothing can prevent a woman from writing a book, and once she has found a publisher nothing can prevent the public from reading that book. Songs (to answer, in passing, a remark I saw in that Musical Times review) are almost as easily launched—which is why women have been able to make their songs known—but as regards the larger forms of the art, music depends entirely on the good offices of conductors and committees. And these can, and do, withhold from the public the chance of hearing works they see no good reason for producing.

There is nothing like a concrete example. In this, my jubilee year, my Mass will be heard some four or five times. Now will you tell me, Sir, how it was possible for the public (who, as Dr. Johnson remarked, are the only people that matter) to form a judgment on this work during the thirty-three years in which not a single conductor in England could be persuaded to produce it?

Or take another typical instance—of to-day. At Southwark Cathedral you may listen to every modern English composer—with one exception! Frequenters of these fine concerts have often asked me why nothing of mine is ever done there. I do not know; but there is the fact!

One word more. Having by chance stepped into the world of letters, it is only natural, given human nature, that certain of the musical faculty should point to any literary success I may have had as obvious proof that letters and not music is probably my true bent. Be it so! I do not even ask such to make the mental effort indicated above, of realising that a non-performed composer and a writer of books are in a slightly different situation as regards the public, and that the latter requires the goodwill of one person only—a publisher!

All I humbly ask is that, in future, when an English female composer of talent comes along, she should fare neither better nor worse than our men—say, Bax, Vaughan Williams, Holst, or anyone else. That is, when they have emerged from the dark, fierce, lonely struggle that is the lot of all individual thinkers (in England this will happen when they are about forty), let their work be neither incarcerated nor besmeared with sex-labelled patronage, but be accepted fairly and squarely, and flung upon the tide, such as it is, of English music.—Yours, &c.,

ETHEL SMYTH.

[We began our notice by admitting that there are grounds for Dame Ethel Smyth's complaints; but we added that the grounds are less than she imagines, and we supported this view by arguing that no musical composition by a woman had ever been shelved because of her sex. Further, we still hold that every example of neglect of Dame Ethel's larger works could be paralleled by instances of neglect of equally good work by male composers. Dame Ethel's point as to the difference between a composer and a writer of books is a good one. As to the Mass, we find it hard to believe that any conductor would 'withhold' from the public a work which the public showed anxiety to hear.—EDITOR.]

RECONSTITUTION OF THE I.S.M.

SIR,—I have read your leading article on this subject in the July Musical Times with much interest.

As an amateur I have been particularly struck by that portion headed, 'The Society and the Amateur.' Enthusiastic amateurs—and I claim to be one—are quite as much interested in forming an educated public opinion in musical matters as are professional musicians, and I think it is a matter for regret that the Society does not as yet see its way clear to admit them to membership in even a modified form. I agree with you, Sir, when you say that the union of the experience of the professional with the enthusiasm of the amateur is so important as to call for a more definite step on the Society's part in the near future than that of waiting for the formation of a purely amateur organization corresponding in size and scope to the purely professional society—which would mean waiting a very long time!

I am not sure I agree that the best method to be pursued would be to affiliate organizations such as choral societies to the I.S.M. I feel that more could probably be done by admitting individuals to some form of membership, all of whom would be enthusiasts or they wouldn't want to belong to the Society, and many of whom are not members of such societies as you mention, but who would be glad to join an organization like the I.S.M., being in entire sympathy with its objects. I should have thought such members would be a source of strength.

Your remarks about Dr. Malcolm Sargent's advocacy of a more definite fusion of the amateur and professional elements are most interesting. I know Dr. Sargent very well (we amateurs of Leicester and district owe him a very deep debt of gratitude for what he has done for us), and the fact that he advises this close co-operation between professional and amateur is encouraging, for no one in my experience can carry such co-operation into practice more successfully than he.

I am writing in the hope that others may take up the subject and perhaps put forward some scheme of a practical nature which the I.S.M. will feel they can accept as helping us all forward towards the goal we are striving to reach.—Yours, &c.,

Hampton Lodge, Stoneygate, Leicester. L. V. WYKES.

WOBBLING B.B.C. SINGERS

SIR,—May I be permitted to pipe in another true note with that of your correspondent Mr. E. A. Shaw?

Is this perpetual tremolo a vice, or a disease, or 'swank'? If a vice, it should be stamped out at once. If a disease, there are surely many Mus. Doc.'s who should hail it as fine material for prophylactic team work. If 'swank,' that can be remedied by not engaging those artists whose singing voices are perpetually broken with (?) emotion.

Speaking as a medical man, I say that this disease, if disease it be, is getting serious. Is it a form of musical Paralysis Agitans, Imported Ague, of Habit Spasm? That it is 'nothing more than the natural vibration of the singing voice, intensified by the mechanism of transmission and reception,' is 'all my eye and Betty Martin.' And we are not all Horse Marine receptionists.

If the disease is infectious, what will happen to our English chorus singers? And if it spreads to the orchestra, and principal oboe starts to fix a vibrating shutter to the bell of his instrument before playing an obbligato in a Bach Cantata, then—but, oh! Mr. Editor, it is too awful to think of.—Yours, &c.,

COUNTRY DOCTOR.

THE FIRST BALLAD OPERA: ALLAN RAMSAY'S 'THE GENTLE SHEPHERD'

SIR,—In my article under the above heading in the June issue of the Musical Times, I endeavoured to show that Allan Ramsay's 'Gentle Shepherd' (1725) may be regarded as the first of ballad operas. This view is also held by Mr. Jeffrey Mark, in the article on 'Ballad Opera' in the new 'Grove' (vol. 1, p. 206), who writes as follows: 'Actually in point of time, "The Gentle Shepherd" of Allan Ramsay, which appeared three years before "The Beggar's Opera," must take place as the first ballad opera. This is a Pastoral Play with the lyrics adapted to well-known Scotch tunes.' This view is also supported by the late Frank Kidson in the new 'Grove' (vol. 2, p. 365), under the article 'Gentle Shepherd.'

I now learn from my old friend Mr. W. J. Lawrence, one of the greatest living authorities on the history of the drama, that this view is untenable, and that Gay must be accorded the credit of the first ballad opera. Mr. Lawrence writes: 'Neither "Patie and Roger" nor "The Gentle Shepherd" when first published had any songs; they were merely Pastorals, and not intended for the stage. "The Beggar's Opera" was performed at Haddington, Edinburgh, in October, 1728, by a boys' troupe, and, at the request of the boys, Allan Ramsay, in emulation of Gay, added songs to his Pastoral, when the boys acted it in January, 1729.'

As stated in my previous article, 'The Gentle Shepherd,' with songs added, was acted by 'a set of young gentlemen' at Taylors' Hall, Edinburgh, as an afterpiece to 'The Orphan,' on January 22, 1729, for which Ramsay supplied an Epilogue.

Mr. Lawrence adds that the third edition of the 'Gentle Shepherd' (1729) has no songs. As a fact, the songs had been first published in vol. 2 of the 'Tea-Table Miscellany.'

Thus, although Ramsay gave a lead to the genre which culminated in ballad opera, yet the credit for producing the first ballad opera must be accorded to John Gay, with his 'Beggar's Opera,' which had its première on January 29, 1728, at the theatre in Lincoln's Inn Fields.—Yours, &c., W. H. GRATTAN FLOOD.

AN OBITUARY SLIP

SIR,—From my youth upwards I have been a constant reader of the Musical Times, from which I have received interesting and profitable information. One of its strong points is accuracy. I am, therefore, the more surprised that you have included an Obituary notice of a successor of mine at the fine old Parish Church of Grinton, wherein a correspondent speaks of me as one who has departed this life. It is true that I have retired from all professional duties, but I am still a reader of the Musical Times.—Yours, &c.,

56, Woodlands, Golders Green, N.W.11. W. CRESER.

[The obituary notice was contributed by a relative of the deceased, and was printed substantially as it was received. The reference to Dr. Creser as 'the late' escaped our notice. We make our sincere apology to the Doctor for the slip.—EDITOR.]

ORGANISTS' LONG SERVICE

SIR,—In the June number of the Musical Times you had an interesting article on the length of service of our Cathedral organists, in which the name of my father, Dr. Henry Edmund Ford, late organist of Carlisle Cathedral, appeared, with a period of service of sixty-seven years.

Perhaps the following facts might also interest your readers. My father was taught by Dr. Ralph Banks, organist of Rochester, who served there for fifty-one years. During the last two or three years of Banks's life my father acted as his assistant, and, after his death, as deputy organist for a short time until Dr. J. L. Hopkins was appointed. My father was then appointed organist of Carlisle in February, 1842, at the age of twenty, and died in November, 1909, after holding the post for sixty-seven years and eight months.

Thus the two organists, master and pupil, served consecutively in the two Cathedrals of Rochester and Carlisle for a period of over a hundred and eighteen years.—Yours, &c., H. D. FORD.

Thursby, Carlisle.

MISUSE OF A DIPLOMA

Sir,—I beg to draw your attention, if I may, to the following matter.

I was recently passing a local cinema, and noticed an L.R.A.M. Pianoforte (Performer's) Diploma exhibited at the entrance. I read that the holder of the diploma (a blind pianist) was to take part in the programme. Out of curiosity I went in to hear him.

Following a pseudo-extemporisation built largely on the introduction to the Beethoven Pianoforte Sonata, Op. 13 (itself introduced by a deafening 'drum-roll,' which even Beethoven, with his wonderful force of expression, must have forgotten), an announcement was made by the pianist: He would play and sing a fox-trot—one of his own composition.

I did just catch the words of the first line as I fled from the theatre: 'You know as well as I do'!

Whilst realising the boon of such employment to a blind man, is there no ruling to prevent such gross misuse of the signature of the Principal of the Royal Academy of Music, which, of course, was to be seen on the diploma exhibited?

May I add that the announcement in your columns of the reconstitution of the I.S.M. is a most welcome one? May all members of the music profession realise the importance of 'a society that will both safeguard its interests and assist in the advancement of the art.'—Yours, &c.,

'Royal Collegian.'

THE NATURE OF HARMONY

Sir,—I have been much interested by Dr. Shirlaw's articles on the major and minor scales, and in the discussion which they have evoked. In his article of January last, Dr. Shirlaw, speaking of the problem of the minor harmony, or scale, says that 'the better it is understood, the more improbable does its solution become, and the more probable does it appear that the features of this musical Sphinx will look out on the future, as on the past, inscrutable, eternally baffling.' Two months later he speaks of the 'mysterious "downward construction" of the minor harmony that has so long baffled every musician and scientist who has investigated the problem,' seeming, thereby, to suggest that he has arrived at its solution.

I am not entering into the discussion, but I should like to draw attention to a writer of last century who has anticipated the line Dr. Shirlaw takes, and who has worked it out with much definiteness. I refer to a book of a somewhat unusual kind—'The Scientific Basis and Build of Music,' by Dougald Carmichael Ramsay; edited by the Rev. John Andrew, and published by Marcus Ward & Co., Ltd., London, 1893. Mr. Ramsay died in 1891, in his seventy-third year.

A passage headed 'Nature's "Inverse Process" for the Minor Genesis' will be found apposite and illuminating, though of necessity it must be much condensed. Taking f as the true generator of the scale of c, the subdominant chord comes out as *f*1, *c*3, *a*5. This process Ramsay repeats for the tonic chord and for the dominant chord, counting from *c*3 and *g*9 respectively, the full process being as under:

*f*1, *c*3, *a*5, *g*9, *e*15, *d*27, *b*45.

'Thus,' he says, 'is evolved the true major scale.'

Proceeding, Ramsay asks, 'How are we to get the true minor scale?' After a reference to Nature's economical employment of 'one system of proportion in two different ways,' by which is revealed to us the 'inverse process for the discovery of the minor scale of notes,' he tells us that this process is 'by the primes and method which produce the key of C itself'—that is, we must start from *b*45, 'the last-born of the notes for the major scale,' and divide, as we had formerly multiplied, by 3 and 5. 'Making *b*45 our unit, as *f*1 was our unit for the major, let us divide by 3 and 5 for a root and middle to b, as we multiplied by 3 and 5 for a top and middle to f.' This, Ramsay shows, will give us the minor chord e g b. Following this same procedure, and dividing *e*15 by 3 and 5, we obtain the minor chord a c e. Going through the process a third time, we have the lowest of the three minor chords—d f a.

But the d of this last triad calls for special notice. *a*5 divided by 3 gives *d*1⅔. To make it easy to compare this with the major *d*27, Ramsay multiplies 1⅔ four times by 2 to bring it up to the level of *d*27, and we then 'find this strange fact, that is it a little lower than the major d. The two d's are at the centre of the dual system, but the centre of the system is neither in the one d nor in the other, but at an invisible point between them, like the centre of gravity in a double star; for the minor d is pushed a little below the centre, and the major d is pushed a little above the centre of the two modes of the system.'—Yours, &c.,

29, Hillhead Street, Glasgow, W.2. J. K. Findlay.

HE TOOK US SERIOUSLY!

Sir,—The July Musical Times rebukes the Dominant for its jocular tone in writing about music. Is humour then unconscious of itself? I buy the Musical Times each month for the sake of its piquantly witty treatment of musical subjects. Moreover, I suggest that the trouble with musicians is that they treat music too seriously for its nature. Blitheness of spirit is the measure of music's vitality. Let the serious man go to his banks and his bonds, but the musician belongs to Bohemia.—Yours, &c.,

Belfast.

[When, tongue in cheek, we advised the Dominant to behave with due gravity when discussing so serious a topic as music, we hardly dared hope that a reader would walk into the trap! Out of consideration for our correspondent's feelings we suppress his name and address, and we hope his supply of 'blitheness of spirit' will enable him to join in the laugh against himself.—Editor.]

A PROGRAMME WANTED

Sir,—Can any of your correspondents recall the programme played by Mr. Lemare upon the four-manual organ at Trinity College, alluded to in your recent issue?—Yours, &c.,

Marple. W. Frost.

MEMORISING CHORAL WORKS

Sir,—At the risk of being stupidly statistical, I should like to put to your readers a problem which has been worrying me for some time. I am a member of a choral society giving two concerts each season. For each concert we have about fourteen rehearsals lasting an hour and a half each, i.e., about twenty-one hours of rehearsal. The concert lasts two hours, but when the time occupied by orchestra, soloists, and interval is deducted the singing time of the choir is only about forty-five minutes. In other words, for each minute of singing by the choir there are twenty-seven minutes of rehearsal. Now why do we never know that music by heart? Is it because we do not try, or because a ratio of twenty-seven minutes of rehearsal to one of performance is insufficient? Do amateur choral societies ever make the effort to memorise their music? If so, what is their method? Do they work on a definite plan? Do they find the mental effort a strain on their weaker members? Do they find their singing is improved and is better appreciated? Do they find a ratio of twenty-seven to one is sufficient? And, above all, do they ever break down?

As I contemplate advocating at our annual general meeting that we should only sing at concerts the music we know by heart, I should be grateful for any experiences of your readers in this connection.

There is no question, I suppose, that a choir which watches its conductor with both eyes without spectacles is likely to sing better than a choir with one eye on the music and one on the conductor.—Yours, &c.,

Pantiles, E. R. Scovell.
Beaconsfield.

CONDUCTOR WITH BACK TO ORCHESTRA

Sir,—If not too late I should like to comment on the mention (May issue, p. 437) of an illustration showing Johann Strauss conducting with his back to the orchestra. I believe Jullien, who conducted Promenade concerts in London in 1857, was one of the first to adopt this practice. I remember Jules Rivière (the founder of the firm of Rivière & Hawkes) following the same method as conductor at Llandudno about 1890. He had a red velvet armchair with his initials in gold on the back, in the middle of the orchestra. He was the composer, by the way, of—in 'Babil and Bijou,' a great popular success of 1872. I remember hearing the tune sung: it is now, I suppose, quite forgotten by the younger generation.—Yours, &c.,

R. H. Whall.

RAMSAY AND GAY

Sir,—Dr. Grattan Flood's article is very interesting, but I think it should be pointed out that the first edition of 'The Gentle Shepherd' does not contain the songs. Even in the 1729 edition the songs are absent. A note therein reads: 'N.B.—The proper Places of the Songs printed in the Second Volume of the Tea-Table Miscellany, made for the Pastoral when acted by some young Gentlemen, are all noted at the Foot of the Page.' The question arises—Are these songs in the first edition of the second volume of the 'Tea-Table Miscellany,' presumably published in (and possibly dated) 1725? The only known copy of the first edition of the first volume went recently to America; the only known copy of the first edition of the third volume is in the collection of Mr. Andrew Gibson, of Belfast (Ramsay's latest and greatest biographer); but where is there a copy of the first edition of the second volume, to settle questions of date and content? It is curious to note that 'The Gentle Shepherd' has never been printed correctly according to the explicit instructions of the author, who requests the excision of certain lines rendered redundant by the introduction of the songs. Access to the unlocated second volume of Ramsay's 'Miscellany' might indicate that 'The Gentle Shepherd' had been acted with the songs even earlier than January 22, 1729.—Yours, &c.,

Davidson Cook.

SONG FOUND

Sir,—I notice in your June issue you invite readers to assist in tracing a song beginning 'My father has forty bright shillings.' It seems to be of rare occurrence in the old song books, but I find it in the second edition of 'The Scots Nightingale,' 1779, p. 239. A copy of the song is appended. It may be in the first edition of the book, but British Museum and all other copies known to me are like my own—'Second edition.' Yours, &c.,

Davidson Cook.

'My father has forty good shillings,
Ha! ha! good shillings,
And never had daughter but I;
My mother she is right willing,
Ha! ha! right willing,
That I shall have all when they die.

'And I wonder when I'll be marry'd,
Ha! ha! be marry'd,
My beauty begins to decay;
It 's time to catch hold of somebody,
Ah! somebody!
Before they all run away.
And I wonder when I'll be marry'd.

'My shoes they are at the mending,
My buckles they are in the chest;
My stockings are ready for sending,
Then I'll be as braw as the rest.
And I wonder, &c.

'My father will buy me a laddle,
At my wedding we'll have a song;
For my uncle will buy me a craddle,
To rock my child in when it 's young.
And I wonder,' &c.

ERRATA

Dr. A. T. Froggatt writes to point out that in line 6 of his letter on 'The Nature of Harmony,' in our July number, in the sentence, 'it would be as reasonable to deny that c-e on the pianoforte is not a major third,' &c.,' the word 'not' crept in by mistake.

And here is another slip: In his letter on 'A Beethoven Dissonance,' Dr. E. T. Sweeting wrote 'bald and arid use of a thirteenth and eleventh,' not 'bald and acid.' We apologise to both correspondents.

Sixty Years Ago

From the Musical Times of August, 1868:

The admissions to Herr Hagemeyer's concert, on July 1, arrived at our office on the 2nd. We scarcely see the necessity for the concert-giver to tell us why the faculty of music was bestowed upon mankind, on the fly-leaf of his programme; nor do we find that his desire to 'promote musical progress' is carried out in the selection of compositions at his Concert. Young students should have good music placed before them; and if Herr Hagemeyer be desirous, as he says, of soliciting the co-operation 'of all persons interested in the progress of musical education,' he must bear to be told that presenting two tickets of admission to every purchaser of his 'Grand Valse de Concert' is scarcely an effectual method of furthering his object.

Exeter Hall. A Monthly Magazine of Sacred Music. No. 6, vol. 2. July.

The contents of this number, musically speaking, are quite equal to those we have already seen; but we must protest against the principle of making a pianoforte piece sacred by christening it with a religious title. The 'Meditation' called 'The Sabbath Eve,' by Mr. H. Parker, is a graceful little melody, which may fairly take its place amongst the unpretentious pianoforte pieces of the day; but it has no more to do with Sunday evening than with Monday morning, or Tuesday afternoon; and we feel it a duty to raise our voice against appealing to the taste of those persons who would shrink from playing a heavenly slow movement of Mozart or Beethoven on Sunday, and contentedly linger over Mr. Parker's 'Meditation,' because it is published in a sacred magazine, and entitled 'The Sabbath Eve.'

'Tre Pol and Pen,' the Cornish Annual for 1928, contains an interesting article by Dr. Ralph Dunstan on 'Cornish Christmas Carols.' Sir Arthur Quiller Couch, Compton Mackenzie, and other well-known writers, contribute stories and articles, the result being a florin's-worth calculated to appeal to many besides natives of 'the Delectable Duchy' (London Cornish Association, 'Penquite,' Wharncliffe Road, S.E.25).

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

There were several interesting features in the programme of the chamber concert given in the Duke's Hall on Wednesday, June 20. Miss Helen Gaskell, the talented young oboe player, a pupil of Mr. Leon Goossens, with Miss Dorothy Manley at the pianoforte, gave an excellent performance of 'Les Deux Faunes du Bois des Pins Bleus,' by Jean le Poidevin, a student. It is a legend of Guernsey, and is both quaint and effective. Miss Lesley Duff has a very pretty voice, and sang with much charm three songs—'City of Chow,' 'Drifting,' and 'Trysting Time,' from 'A Lute of Jade.' The composer, Kathleen Tapley, is also a student, and shows promise. It was, however, a distinctly original effort, the accompaniment being for two violins, viola, 'cello, and oboe. Miss May Davies has a good voice, and she sang Saint-Saëns's 'La Cloche' very well indeed. A male string quartet gave a fine performance of the first and second movements of Debussy's Quartet, Op. 10. A Quartet in G minor, Theme and Variations, by Ethel Winfield, a student, though not profound was charming, and this again was well played by a mixed quartet.

The opera week (July 9 to 14) at the New Scala Theatre was a great success. To present three operas in one week (seven performances)—'Carmen,' 'Madame Butterfly,' and 'The Mastersingers'—is no mean feat for any recognised organization, but for students it was a great adventure, and in theatrical parlance all three 'got across.' The orchestral playing was throughout of an exceptionally high standard, and Mr. Julius Harrison is to be heartily congratulated. From my point of view, the best playing was in 'Carmen.' I heard some criticism about the tempi, but 'Carmen' to be effective must be taken fast, and the playing and the distinct diction under these circumstances was a triumph for everybody concerned. The Academy is fortunate in possessing two Carmens and two Sachses, all four being first-rate artists. Miss Valetta Iacopi and Miss Olive Darby are both good actresses, and the former gave an especially full-blooded interpretation. Mr. Edgar Elmes will have gained infinite benefit by playing Hans Sachs in public. He has a good voice, and although he lacks dignity dramatically, it will come. Mr. Arthur Fear's Hans Sachs is well known; it is quite an extraordinary conception for so young an artist. He was also a properly truculent Escamillo, and sang the Toreador song with point. In 'Butterfly,' he made the thankless part of Sharpless something quite good by his singing and personality. Miss Jean Kemp was a charming Cio-Cio-San, and the same remark applies to Miss Lesley Duff's Micaela. Both these young artists have not only pretty voices, but sing well. The weak spot was in the tenor department, but tenors are notoriously difficult to find, and, apparently, especially so nowadays. The Apprentices in 'The Mastersingers' were a joy. They were a thoroughly mischievous lot, and not mere stage hands. The Mastersingers were vocally above the average, and on Saturday night it is of interest to record that with the exception of David, the principals were all pupils of Mr. Thomas Meux, who was a well-known Mastersinger in the days of Dr. Hans Richter.

Mr. Robert Radford has been appointed Professor of Singing at the Academy. I congratulate him and the institution. F.

The following awards have been made: Cuthbert Nunn prize (composition) to Dorothy Maud Smith (London); Alfred J. Waley prize (violin) to Sidney A. Griller (London), Adna Ryerson being highly commended, and Jacqueline Townshend commended; Matthew Phillimore prize (male pianists) to Eric Brough (London); Sir Edward Cooper prize (ensemble playing) to Jack O'Brien (1st viola), Sidney A. Griller (2nd violin), Philip Burton (viola), and Stephen Blythe ('cello), Herbert Powell, John Hamilton, Adolph Borsdorf, and Kathleen Jacobs being highly commended; Charles Lucas prize (composition) to Ethel M. Winfield (Cowes, I.O.W.), Marjorie Corker being commended; Walter Macfarren prize (female pianists) to Margaret Good (London), Muriel Warne being very highly commended; Walter Macfarren prize (male pianists) to Frank Britton (London); Julia Leney prize (harp) to Hope Hanson (Birkenhead); Janet Duff Greet prize (female pianists) to Muriel G. Crowther (London); Frederick Westlake Memorial prize (female pianists) to Hilda Bor (London), Inez Tognolini being highly commended; Albanesi prize (pianoforte) to Hilda Bor (London), Frank Britton being highly commended; Gilbert R. Betjemann Memorial prize (all voices) to Miss Lesley Duff (London), Freda E. Townson being highly commended, and Phyllis Edmundson commended; Swansea Eisteddfod prize (baritones) to Arthur Fear (Blaina, Mon.); Parepa-Rosa prize (tenors) to Roland T. Dickinson (Hednesford); Cecil Martin prize (elocution) to Rachel Ezekiel (Calcutta), Betty Sheard being highly commended.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC

The last weeks of the term, aided and abetted by the weather, have been ardent indeed, the air being thick with concerts, examinations, and meetings, besides performances in the Opera Theatre; three orchestral concerts and two additional performances of 'A Midsummer Night's Dream' (with Mendelssohn's music) are a fair sample of the work of the last fortnight.

The second Patrons' Fund Rehearsal of the term introduced four compositions, three of them being new, by British composers. Of these the most important, in scope and intention was a Symphony by Barclay Wilson, to which the composer has given the name of 'Venta Belgarum' (the old name of Winchester); this work, of which the first two movements were played, suggests an impression of Winchester and its associations. Two short Overtures, one 'a light Comedy Overture,' by Frederic Jackson, the other 'To the West Country,' by Ivor R. Foster, showed character and ingenuity. The fourth item presented, a Pianoforte Concerto by Gordon Jacob, is a recent work by that composer, and being short, and scored for an orchestra of strings only, looks like becoming part of the modern pianist's répertoire. It was played with success by John Edwards.

The Union of past and present students of the College held its annual At Home on June 28, when over five hundred members foregathered to enjoy one another's company, as well as listen to music serious and frivolous. The former comprised clarinet solos by Mr. J. Thurston, songs by Miss Joan Elwes, and pianoforte duets by Mr. Herbert Fryer and Mr. Arthur Benjamin. The lighter side of life was represented by Mr. W. H. Reed as a lecturer on music through the ages, producing dreadful noises from impossible instruments.

Lord Blanesburgh presided at the annual meeting of the Corporation on July 16, and after the formal business presented the Chappell, Challen, Tagore, and Hopkinson Medals to the winners. Lord Blanesburgh paid a tribute to the memory of the late Albert Visetti, the last original member of the Board of Professors, who died on July 10; and he referred to the unusually distinguished list of appointments recently gained by members of the College, namely: Conductor of the Bach Choir, Dr. Adrian C. Boult; Conductor of the Royal Choral Society, Dr. Malcolm Sargent; Professor of Music, Sheffield University, Mr. F. H. Shera; Musical Adviser to the London County Council, Prof. Percy Buck; Government Inspector of Schools, Dr. P. A. Browne; Organist, Gloucester Cathedral, Mr. Herbert W. Sumsion; Organist, Coventry Cathedral, Dr. Harold W. Rhodes; Organist, Norwich Cathedral, Mr. H. D. Statham; Director of Music, Harrow, Dr. R. S. Thatcher; Director of Music, Charterhouse, Mr. T. P. Fielden; Director of Music, Malvern College, Mr. J. A. Davison.

The Chairman also made the interesting announcement that the new British opera in preparation under the auspices of the Ernest Palmer Opera Study Fund was by Dr. R. Vaughan Williams, on the subject of Falstaff and the Merry Wives.

THE ASSOCIATED BOARD

The thirty-ninth annual meeting of the Associated Board of the Royal Academy of Music and the Royal College of Music was held at the Royal Academy of Music, York Gate, Marylebone Road, N.W.1, on July 5. Mr. Ernest Mathews took the chair.

It was announced with regret that Mr. Ernest Mathews has intimated his wish to resign the office of Chairman after the annual meeting. During the proceedings the following letter from H.R.H. The Prince of Wales, the President of the Associated Board, was read :

St. James's Palace, S.W.1.
June 15, 1928.

'Dear Mr. Mathews—I hear with regret that you are resigning the Chairmanship of the Associated Board of the Royal Academy of Music and the Royal College of Music in July.

'As President of the Associated Board, I would like to say how much we are indebted to you for the unremitting service you have given to its best interests, which are those also of music generally in this country.

'Yours truly,

(Signed) Edward P.'

The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, the secretary read the Report for the year. The number of candidates in Great Britain and Ireland was 8,500 in the Local Centre Examinations, and 46,482 in the 'School' Examinations. The exhibitions offered by the Board in Great Britain and Ireland during the year were gained by Mary M. P. Sandiford, Liverpool (pianoforte) ; Joan M. Gilbert, Eastbourne (pianoforte) ; Nora A. Richardson, Dublin (violin) ; Ralph E. Sanders, Southend-on-Sea (violin) ; James H. Phillips, Kingston-on-Thames (violoncello) ; Gwynne Edwards, Taunton (organ). Exhibitions were also awarded in the Dominions and Colonies as follows : in Australia, Nancy White, Ipswich (pianoforte) ; Elaine Pennifold, Sydney (violin) ; Beatrice Ainsworth, Sydney (pianoforte) ; in New Zealand, Hugh M. M'Cutcheon, Gore (violin) ; Helen F. C. Hart, Wellington (pianoforte) ; Frances MacClean, Carterton (pianoforte) ; in Canada, Fred Grinke, Winnipeg (violin) ; Smyth Humphreys, Chilliwack (violin) ; Molly Mooney, Port Arthur (singing) ; and in Malta and Gibraltar, Maria Melignani, Malta (pianoforte). Twenty-nine exhibitions previously gained have been renewed, three for a further period of two years and twenty-six for one year.

The Chairman, in moving that the Report and Balance Sheet be received and adopted, referred to his impending resignation, explaining that he considered his age and shortness of sight were disqualifications for the position of Chairman of the Board, and he therefore felt it necessary to give up the position. He warmly commended the appointment of Col. Raymond W. ffennell as his successor as being an excellent business man, always looking on points that came before him in the right spirit. He then referred to the deaths during the year of Dr. Eaton Faning, a former examiner and Member of the Board, and of Sir Herbert Brewer, Dr. T. Haigh, Mr. George Leake, and Mr. Cuthbert Whitemore, who were also examiners of the Board.

With regard to the entries of the year, these were about the same as in the previous year in the Local Centre Examinations, rather less in the 'School' Examinations, while the Elocution Examinations showed an increase. The small total reduction was probably to be attributed to the aftermath of the coal strike and general strike. He then referred to the large number of prizes offered by private donors in many of the centres, and emphasised the value of these in helping on the work, and their importance as showing the interest taken in it by a number of people in all the various districts. He attributed the large increase in the number of prizes to the development of the system of holding public distributions which has taken place during the last three or four years. He also spoke of the good effect of the public distributions, and expressed the hope that in the future Members of the Board, or others, who went down to speak at the distributions might get into even closer touch than in the past with the teachers in the centres they visited.

Col. Raymond W. ffennell seconded the motion, and the Report and Balance Sheet were unanimously adopted.

Votes of thanks to the hon. local representatives, examiners, and to Mr. Ernest Mathews terminated the proceedings.

The following annual Exhibitions, which entitle their holders to free tuition of the Royal Academy of Music and the Royal College of Music, have been awarded : Dorothy K. Peacock, London (pianoforte) ; Edith M. Wright, Bangor (pianoforte) ; and Megan Lloyd, Cardiff (violoncello), at the R.A.M. ; and Violetta Yuill, Brighton (pianoforte), Rosemary Coppock, London (violoncello), and Margaret M. Reckless, Nottingham (violin), at the R.C.M.

MANCHESTER UNIVERSITY : FACULTY OF MUSIC

The following candidates were successful at the examinations held in June :

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Mus. D.—Norman Andrew. | | |
| Mus. B.— | First Year : | H. E. Maddox. |
| " | | Alfred Thompson. |
| | Second Year : | P. W. de Courcy-Smale. |
| | Third Year : | None. |

Examiners : Dr. T. Keighley, Dr. A. W. Wilcock, and Dr. A. W. Wilson.

Thomas Keighley,
Secretary to the Faculty.

THREE 17TH-CENTURY POET-PARSONS AND MUSIC

On March 27, Dr. E. W. Naylor read a paper on the above subject at the meeting of the Musical Association, which was illustrated by several pieces of the period, including a Suite for violin (Mr. Wynne Reeves) and pianoforte (Dr. Naylor) and songs by Mrs. Shuldham Shaw. The three poets in question were Thomas Traherne, George Herbert, and Robert Herrick. The lecturer said that Traherne, almost unknown as yet, was quite unknown until twenty-two years ago, when his work was first published from the original MSS. He was at Brazenose, Oxford, in 1652, afterwards a country parson near Hereford, and died in 1674, barely forty years of age. The subjects of his poetry were religious and mystic. There was little relating to music in the mass of gorgeous verse he had given us, but that little was good.

Herbert's case was an interesting one, and unusual, for he was a practical musician, singer and player, well conversant with both chamber music for voices, viols, and lutes, and the Church music of the period. He, like Traherne, died as a country parson at forty years of age. He made his mark as an undergraduate at Trinity College, Cambridge. He was a courtier as well as a scholar. The death of King James, his mother's death, and his own poor health seemed to have changed his mind. He became a truly well-doing and well-meaning village clergyman, writer of mystico-religious poetry, and practiser of music in a quiet way. Dr. Naylor quoted a number of allusions to music in Herbert's verse, e.g. :

'I knew the ways of Pleasure, the sweet strains,
The lullings and the relishes of it;
The propositions of hot blood and brains.'

The words 'strains,' 'relishes,' and 'propositions' were well understood by Herbert as a practical musician, and conveyed definite ideas to his contemporaries. In the short poem, 'Easter,' there was interesting use of the habit of his day with regard to the standard of musical pitch. Speaking of the lute, made of strips of wood and furnished with many strings of gut, he says:

'The Cross taught all wood to resound His Name
Who bore the same;
His stretchèd sinews taught all strings what key
Is best to celebrate this most high day.'

There had been various standards of pitch in use during our own times, but in Herbert's day the variation in pitch was extravagantly wide. The difference between Mersenne's Church pitch and his chamber pitch was about a perfect fourth. Greater height still was to be found, but this was quite enough as an illustration of Herbert's verse, which speaks of stretching the strings to the high pitch suitable for a high day, i.e., Easter.

Robert Herrick, unlike Traherne and Herbert, lived to be an old man, dying in 1674 at the age of eighty-three. Like Herbert, he was a Cambridge man, and had courtly habits. Several of his poems were written for royal occasions and set to music by well-known composers of the day, e.g., Laniere and Henry Lawes. He also seems to have known Dr. Wilson, of Oxford, and William Lawes, besides the French lute-player, Gautier. The lecturer quoted a number of musical allusions in Herrick's poetry, upon which he expatiated, concluding with the lines, 'Upon Mr. William Lawes, the rare musician':

'Should I not put on blacks, when each one here
Comes with his cypress, and devotes a tear?
Should I not grieve, my Lawes, when every lute,
Viol, and voice is, by thy loss, struck mute?
Thy loss, brave man! Whose numbers have been hurled,
And no less praised than spread throughout the world:
Some have thee called Amphion; some of us
Named thee Terpander, or sweet Orpheus;
Some this, some that; but all in this agree,
Music hath both her birth and death with thee.'

CHALIAPIN AT COVENT GARDEN

The latter part of the Covent Garden opera season was distinguished by Chaliapin's appearances in 'Faust' and in 'Boris Godounov.' Neither work was perfectly performed, but considering the circumstances of present-day opera in London, we counted ourselves fortunate in seeing anything so stimulating.

How long is it since 'Faust' caused anything but a yawn? This 'Faust' was enthralling. The complaint was made that Chaliapin stood outside the general picture—made a picture by himself and recked nothing of the rest. This is hardly fair. One can believe that if Chaliapin had had the choosing of the cast and the opportunity of rehearsing for a couple of months there would have been more homogeneity. But we had, after all, a simply incomparable Mephistopheles, whose power and vitality fascinated the attention.

He acted and sang with much freedom and fantasy, and it was lucky that so brilliant a conductor as Mr. Eugène Goossens, who was both firm and flexible, was in charge. Sometimes Chaliapin seemed to be improvising, as after the duel, when he caught up his cloak on the point of his sword and went off twirling it in the air—a gesture of truly devilish nonchalance. No one else seems more than half alive when Chaliapin is on the stage. The man is, of course, a born actor of the rarest genius. Dramatic art of this order is almost unknown in opera, and many do not, in consequence, appreciate the nature of the show set before them.

Mr. Joseph Hislop sang as Faust with much charming quality of tone. But he once or twice admitted an ugly fortissimo high note that was out of keeping with his generally beautiful line. His Faust seemed a little depressed in spirits. Such a Mephistopheles was, no doubt, an embarrassing genie to have at one's elbow. The Marguerite, Madame Maryse Beaujon, was coolly accomplished. Madame Bourguignon did capitally; and the Valentine, Mr. John Charles Thomas, won a marked success with some first-rate singing.

'Boris' was sung in Italian, except by Chaliapin. Vincenzo Bellezza conducted. The opera remains a wonder—all but the tiresome Polish scene, which might as well have been left out. What would not be the effect if the drama could be played swiftly without the wet blanketting of seven or eight intervals for scene-shifting? Some of the subsidiary parts were well done, notably Pimen and Shuisky. The production wanted finish, however—except when Chaliapin was on the stage.

His Boris is the experience of a lifetime. Vocally he resorts more to parlando than in the ever-memorable Drury Lane performances in 1913-14, and it may well be that the volume of his voice is not what it was. But on the night of 'Boris' that simply did not matter; for his representation still remained the summit of art as known to the modern opera stage. If he did not sing more it was, so one felt, because more would have been too much. He sang enough; and, above all, in a way that made singing seem a true form of dramatic expression—every bit as natural as blank-verse declamation, for instance. In the Tsar's three scenes Chaliapin left impressions of a tragic beauty that memory will hoard up as a miser his treasures.

C.

ORGANISTS' LONG SERVICE ROLL OF HONOUR

To be appointed organist of an important parish church at the early age of fourteen, and 'to walk in the same all the days of his life' until death came with its Ite Missa est at the patriarchal age of ninety-five, is the (ne plus ultra?) record of Charles Bridgeman (see No. 106), who was personally responsible for the organ duties at All Saints', Hertford, for the long period of eighty-one years. What surprising changes, both musical and ecclesiastical, he must have experienced during that time!

Miss Liscette Rist's record at All Hallows', Barking (see No. 169), is rendered doubly honourable from the fact that during the whole of her forty years' organistship she evinced her love for suffering animals by personally superintending the throwing down of sand and gravel on the steep road leading down from Tower Hill to the Docks, in order to prevent horses from slipping. In 1875, a Miss Sankey, of Canterbury, bequeathed to Miss Rist a legacy of £100, the interest of which was to be expended on this work of mercy.

The sisters Mounsey (Nos. 95 and 154) each retired from active duty on a full salary, so that, in this way, Mrs. Wm. Bartholomew was organist of St. Vedast, Foster Lane, for fifty-four years, and her sister Elizabeth achieved at St. Peter's, Cornhill, a total tenure of seventy-one years. Miss Eliza Wesley (No. 194) also retained her salary as organist of St. Margaret Pattens for nine years until her death on May 14, 1895. She can therefore be credited with a tenure of forty-nine years. Both Mrs. Jenner, of Enford (No. 139)—a relative of mine—and Mrs. Skelton, of Downend (No. 176) were unpaid organists, but they scarcely missed a service during their long periods of office.

Miss M. J. Cope (see No. 113), who retired from active duty last year, is still a regular worshipper at Holy Trinity, Kingsway, the church she served so faithfully and well for sixty-three years. On the other hand, during the compilation of the following list, the Musical Times obituary column in the June issue included two names given below (see Nos. 147 and 166.) Each of these organists—like a gallant soldier—died at his post, at a ripe old age, full of long years of useful and honourable service. 'So time passes away, and we are gone,' for there is no getting over the inexorable truism, Vita brevis, Ars longa.

But it is pleasant to observe how many organists of to-day are still 'going strong' after more than forty years' duty in the same appointment. It has been remarked of several of these that 'he looks as though he were good for forty or fifty years more.' Evidently, then, the work of an organist, strenuous as it often is, must be conducive to health, long life, and happiness. A cheery outlook for the present 'hard times.' May I be allowed to thank many readers of the Musical Times for furnishing me with some of the particulars given below?

I have still quite a large number of names, &c., 'to go on with' for next month's list, but I still ask for more. Letters or postcards—written as legibly as possible—should be sent not later than the end of the first week in every month to Dr. C. W. Pearce, 'The Paddocks,' Ferndown, Wimborne, Dorset.

ORGANISTS' LONG SERVICE ROLL OF HONOUR

LIST II.—CATHEDRAL, COLLEGIATE, PAROCHIAL, AND OTHER ORGANISTS

| No. | Name | Appointment | Years of Tenure |
|---|---|---|---|
| 87 | Agutter, Benjamin, Mus.D., Cantuar. | St. Peter's, Streatham, London, 1867-1907 | 40 |
| 88 | Allen, John | St. Mary Redcliffe, Bristol, 1772-1816 | 44 |
| 89 | Allen, Miss Mary | St. Andrew Undershaft, London, 1790-1836 | 46 |
| 90 | Attersoll, Walter, A.R.C.O. | All Saints', South Lambeth, London, 1885 (at present) | 43 |
| 91 | Ayrton, William | Ripon Cathedral, 1690-1730 | 40 |
| 92 | Bambridge, George Edmund (Vice-President, R.C.O.) | St. Luke's, Westbourne Park, London, 1864-1914 | 50 |
| 93 | Bambridge, William Samuel, Mus.B., Oxon. (cousin of preceding) | Marlborough College (Wilts), 1864-1914 | 50 |
| 94 | Barrow, William Henry, Mus.D., Dublin | St. George's, Leicester, 1875 (at present) | 53 |
| 95 | Bartholomew, Mrs. William, née Ann S. Mounsey (an intimate friend of Mendelssohn) | St. Vedast's, Foster Lane, London, 1834-82 | 48 |
| 96 | Barton, Miss Annie | St. Helen's, Bishopsgate, London, 1868-1922 | 54 |
| 97 | Bennett, Thomas | Chichester Cathedral, 1803-48 | 45 |
| 98 | Best, William Thomas | Corporation Organist, St. George's Hall, Liverpool, 1855-95 | 40 |
| 99 | Biggs, Walter Lyle | St. Peter-le-Bailey, Oxford, 1882 (at present) | 46 |
| 100 | Bird, George | Parish Church, Walthamstow, 1829-94 | 65 |
| 101 | Bird, Henry Richard, F.R.C.O. (son of preceding) | St. Mary Abbots Parish Church, Kensington, 1872-1915 | 43 |
| 102 | Bishop, Ernest Brian | Parish Church, SS. Peter & Paul, Kettering, 1879-1927 | 48 |
| 103 | Blake, George William (now retired) | St. Martin's, Salisbury (Wilts), 1887-1928 | 41 |
| 104 | Boddington, Charles J. C., A.R.C.O. | St. Andrew's, Stoke Newington, London, 1883 (at present) | 45 |
| 105 | Bregazzi, James Vincent | St. Charles's (R.C.) Church, Hull, 1857-1900 | 43 |
| 106 | Bridgeman, Charles | Parish Church of All Saints, Hertford, 1792-1873 | 81 |
| 107 | Brown, Edward, Mus.D., Oxon. | St. James's, Barrow-in-Furness (Lancs), 1871 (at present) | 57 |
| 108 | Bunnett, Edward, Mus.D., Cantab. | Corporation Organist, St. Andrew's Hall, Norwich, 1880-1922 | 42 |
| 109 | Cambridge, Frederick, Mus.B., Dunelm. | Parish Church, Croydon (Surrey), 1868-1911 | 43 |
| 110 | Camidge, John | St. John's Minster, Beverley, 1876 (at present) | 52 |
| 111 | Chambers, John Taylor | Parish Church, Thornbury (Glos.), 1864-1924 | 60 |
| 112 | Cooper, Mrs. George, née Elizabeth Kingston Probyn (stepmother of George Cooper, of St. Paul's, &c.) | St. Bartholomew-the-less, Smithfield, conjointly with St. Stephen's Walbrook, London, 1825-68 | 43 |
| 113 | Cope, Miss Mary Julia (now retired) | Holy Trinity Church, Kingsway, London, 1864-1927 | 63 |
| 114 | Couldrey, Frederick Knight | St. Helen's, Abingdon (Oxon.), 1864-1924 | 60 |
| 115 | Couldrey, Thomas (grandfather of preceding) | St. Helen's Abingdon (Oxon.), 1814-64 | 50 |
| 116 | Cozens, Fred C. | St. Stephen's, Coleman Street, London, 1864 (at present) | 64 |
| 117 | Cruickshank, William Augustus Campbell, Mus.B., Oxon. | Parish Church, Burnley, 1880 (at present) | 48 |
| 118 | Dancey, Harry, Mus.B., Dunelm. | Parish Church, Putney (All Saints'), 1877 (at present) | 51 |
| 119 | Davis, Henry Edward | St. Edmund-the-King, Lombard Street, London, 1779-1832 | 53 |
| 120 | Day, Lewis Framingham | Parish Church, Burton-on-Trent, 1853-96 | 43 |
| 121 | Duncombe, William | St. Dunstan-in-the-West, Fleet Street, London, 1764-1814 | 50 |
| 122 | Edwards, Henry John, Mus.D., Oxon. | Parish Church, Barnstaple (Devon), 1886 (at present) | 42 |
| 123 | Eyre, Alfred James, F.R.C.O. (organist of the Crystal Palace, 1880-94) | St. John the Evangelist, Upper Norwood, 1879-1919 | 40 |
| 124 | Fletcher, Frank Edward, Mus.B., Toronto, F.R.C.O. | Christ Church, Folkestone (Kent), 1886 (at present) | 42 |
| 125 | Gates, John | St. James's, Garlickhithe, London, 1744-93 | 49 |

| No. | Name | Appointment | Years of Tenure |
|---|---|---|---|
| 126 | Gaul, Alfred Robert, Mus.B., Cantab. ... ... | St. Augustine's, Edgbaston, Birmingham, 1868-1913 ... ... ... ... ... ... | 45 |
| 127 | Gibbs, Joseph (violin composer) ... ... ... | ——— Church, Ipswich, 1748-88 ... ... | 40 |
| 128 | Giles (or Gyles), Nathaniel, Mus.D., Oxon. ... | St. George's Chapel Royal, Windsor, 1585-1633... | 48 |
| 129 | Gmür, Theo ... ... ... ... ... | SS. Peter & Paul (R.C.) Church, Cork, 1880 (at present) | 48 |
| 130 | Goss-Custard, Walter (father of Reginald and Henry) ... ... ... ... ... ... | Christ Church, St. Leonard's (Sussex), 1865-1907 | 42 |
| 131 | Greaves, Jeremiah James ... ... ... | Parish Church, Preston (Lancs), 1849-90 ... | 41 |
| 132 | Greenish, Arthur James, Mus.D., Cantab. (now retired) ... ... ... ... ... | St. Saviour's, South Hampstead, London, 1882-1927 ... ... ... ... ... ... | 45 |
| 133 | Gregory, George Herbert, Mus.B., Oxon. ... | Parish Church of St. Botolph, Boston (Lincs), 1875-1918 ... ... ... ... ... | 43 |
| 134 | Guilmant, Alexandre Felix ... ... ... | S. Trinité, Paris, 1871-1911 ... ... ... | 40 |
| 135 | Heath, John ... ... ... ... ... | Rochester Cathedral, 1614-68 ... ... ... | 54 |
| 136 | Henshaw, William, Mus.D., Dunelm. ... ... | Durham Cathedral, 1813-62 ... ... ... | 49 |
| 137 | Howe, Timothy ... ... ... ... ... | Carlisle Cathedral, 1693-1734 ... ... ... | 41 |
| 138 | Hoyte, William Stevenson, Mus.D., Cantuar. ... | All Saints', Margaret Street, London, 1868-1917 | 49 |
| 139 | Jenner, Mrs. Robert (née Ada Mary Cusse) ... | All Saints', Enford, Marlborough (Wilts), 1878-1920 ... ... ... ... ... ... | 42 |
| 140 | Jordan, Charles Warwick, Mus.D., Cantuar. ... | St. Stephen's, Lewisham, London, 1866-1907 ... | 41 |
| 141 | Judd, John Harman ... ... ... ... | Christ Church, Southgate, London, 1864-1924 ... | 60 |
| 142 | King, Alfred, Mus.D., Oxon. ... ... ... | Corporation Organist, The Dome, Brighton, 1878-1925 ... ... ... ... ... ... | 47 |
| 143 | Langran, James, Mus.B., Oxon. ... ... ... | Parish Church of All Hallows, Tottenham, 1869-1909 ... ... ... ... ... ... | 40 |
| 144 | Lawson, Joseph William ... ... ... ... | St. Mary Redcliffe, Bristol, 1862-1908 ... ... | 46 |
| 145 | Lee, W. ... ... ... ... ... ... | Mount Pleasant (Presbyterian) Church, Liverpool, 1876 ... ... ... ... (at present) | 52 |
| 146 | Livesey, Francis James, B.A., Cantab. ... ... | St. Bees' Priory Church, Cumberland, 1887 (at present) | 41 |
| 147 | Love, James ... ... ... ... ... | Parish Church, Falkirk, Scotland, 1877-1928 ... | 51 |
| 148 | Lowe, Edward ... ... ... ... ... | Christ Church Cathedral, Oxford, 1630-82 ... | 52 |
| 149 | MacKorkell, Charles ... ... ... ... | All Saints', Northampton, 1839-79 ... ... | 40 |
| 150 | Manders, Benjamin ... ... ... ... | Parish Church, Peterborough, 1876 (at present) | 52 |
| 151 | Manson, Thomas ... ... ... ... ... | Parish Church, Lanark, Scotland, 1881 (at present) | 47 |
| 152 | Mason, Richard ... ... ... ... ... | St. Augustine's, Liverpool, 1877 ... (at present) | 51 |
| 153 | Maxfield, William Henry, Mus.B., Toronto, F.R.C.O. ... ... ... ... ... ... | St. John's, Altrincham, near Manchester, 1884 (at present) | 44 |
| 154 | Mounsey, Miss Elizabeth (sister of Mrs. W. Bartholomew, No. 95) ... ... ... ... | St. Peter's, Cornhill, London, 1834-82 ... ... | 48 |
| 155 | Mudd, John ... ... ... ... ... | Peterborough Cathedral, 1592-1639 ... ... | 47 |
| 156 | Ormrod, Thomas ... ... ... ... ... | Trinity (Wesleyan) Church, Southport (Lancs), 1876 ... ... ... ... (at present) | 52 |
| 157 | Parratt, Henry (brother of Sir Walter) ... ... | Parish Church, Huddersfield, 1862-1905... ... | 43 |
| 158 | Parratt, Thomas (father of preceding) ... ... | Parish Church, Huddersfield, 1812-62 ... ... | 50 |
| 159 | Philpott, Basil H. ... ... ... ... ... | Chapel Royal, Hampton Court Palace, 1886 (at present) | 42 |
| 160 | Plant, Arthur Blurton, Mus.D., Oxon. (died suddenly after a choir practice on Friday evening, June 19, 1914) ... ... ... | | |
| 161 | Preston, Thomas, sen. ... ... ... ... | St. Paul's, Burton-on-Trent, 1874-1914 ... ... | 40 |
| 162 | Pringuer, Henry Thomas, Mus.D., Oxon. ... | Ripon Cathedral, 1690-1730 ... ... ... | 40 |
| 163 | Purkis, John (blind) ... ... ... ... | St. Mary's, Stoke Newington, London, 1879-1920 | 41 |
| 164 | Pyne, James Kendrick (father of Dr. Kendrick Pyne, of Manchester) ... ... ... ... | St. Clement Danes, London, 1804-49 ... ... | 45 |
| 165 | Reay, Samuel, Mus.B., Oxon. ... ... ... | Bath Abbey (Somerset), 1839-93 ... ... ... | 54 |
| 166 | Reed, Henry (died at his organ during Evensong on Sunday, May 13, 1928) ... ... ... | Parish Church, Newark-on-Trent, 1864-1904 ... | 40 |
| 167 | Riding, Henry, F.R.C.O. ... ... ... ... | Staveley Church, near Kendal, 1863-1928 ... | 65 |
| 168 | Rimmer, Thomas ... ... ... ... ... | Parish Church, Chigwell (Essex), 1880 (at present) | 48 |
| 169 | Rist, Miss Liscette ... ... ... ... | Parish Church, Hendon, 1874 ... (at present) | 54 |
| 170 | Rogers, Jeremiah (an intimate friend of E. J. Hopkins) ... ... ... ... ... | All Hallows', Barking-by-the-Tower, London, 1840-80 ... ... ... ... ... ... | 40 |
| 171 | Rogers, Nelme ... ... ... ... ... | Parish Church, Doncaster (Yorks), 1835-79 ... | 44 |
| 172 | Rogers, William Edwin ... ... ... ... | St. Mary Redcliffe, Bristol, 1727-72 ... ... | 45 |
| 173 | Rolfe, — ... ... ... ... ... ... | Parish Church, Whitchurch (Shropshire), 1877 (at present) | 51 |
| 174 | Seal, Charles, Mus.B., Oxon. ... ... ... | St. Mildred's, Bread Street, London, 1830-70 ... | 40 |
| 175 | Skelding, Denei ... ... ... ... ... | Parish Church, Macclesfield (Lancs), 1873-1927 ... | 54 |
| 176 | Skelton, Mrs. Henry, née Annie Grace (eldest sister of Dr. W. G. Grace, the cricketer) ... | Emmanuel Church, Clifton, Bristol, 1874-1925 ... | 51 |
| 177 | Sleeman, John W. P. ... ... ... ... | Christ Church, Downend, Bristol, 1849-1900 ... | 51 |
| | | St. John the Baptist, Bristol, 1873 (at present) | 55 |

| No. | Name | Appointment | Years of Tenure |
|---|---|---|---|
| 178 | Smith, George Henry, Mus.D., Oxon. (now of St. Augustine's, Hull) | All Saints', Sculcoates, Hull (Yorks), 1882-1927 | 45 |
| 179 | Smith, Joseph Enos | St. Mary's Parish Church, Rushden, 1875 (at present) | 53 |
| 180 | Smith, Martin | Gloucester Cathedral, 1740-82 | 42 |
| 181 | Starkey, Law | Greyfriars' Parish Church, Dumfries, Scotland, 1882 (at present) | 46 |
| 182 | Steane, Charles Thomas (died at his organ during Evensong, Thursday, March 14, 1912) | St. James the Less, Liverpool, 1868-1912 | 44 |
| 183 | Steggall, Charles, Mus.D., Cantab. | Lincoln's Inn Chapel, London, 1864-1905 | 41 |
| 184 | Stimpson, James | Corporation Organist, Town Hall, Birmingham, 1842-86 | 44 |
| 185 | Sutcliffe, Charles Thomas, Mus.B., Dunelm. | St. Catherine's, Barton-upon-Irwell (Lancs), 1884 (at present) | 44 |
| 186 | Tomkins, Thomas | Worcester Cathedral, 1596-1656 | 60 |
| 187 | Tozer, Ferris, Mus.D., Oxon. | Parish Church, Heavitree, Exeter, 1882 (at present) | 46 |
| 188 | Vernham, John Edward | St. Paul's, Knightsbridge, London, 1879-1921 | 42 |
| 189 | Vipond-Barry, William Henry | St. Bartholomew's, Dublin, 1883... (at present) | 45 |
| 190 | Warriner, John, Mus.D., Dublin | St. Matthew's, Denmark Hill, London, 1887 (at present) | 41 |
| 191 | Weber, Frederick | German Chapel Royal, St. James's Palace, 1838-90 | 52 |
| 192 | Weekes, Samuel, Mus.D., Dublin | Baptist Church, Plymouth (Devon), 1876 (at present) | 52 |
| 193 | Werner, Louis | Holy Cross (R.C.) Church, Belfast, 1879 (at present) | 49 |
| 194 | Wesley, Miss Eliza (daughter of Samuel Wesley and sister of Dr. S. S. Wesley) | St. Margaret Pattens, Rood Lane, London, 1846-86 | 40 |
| 195 | Westrop, Henry John (baptised at Lavenham, July 26, 1812, with the single Christian name, Henry) | St. Edmund-the-King, Lombard Street, London, 1833-79 | 46 |
| 196 | Wharton, Rev. George, M.A., Oxon. | Radley College, Oxon., 1862-1914 | 52 |
| 197 | Whitaker, John | St. Clement's, Eastcheap, London, 1801-47 | 46 |
| 198 | Worgan, John, Mus.D., Cantab. | St. Andrew Undershaft, London, 1749-90; conjointly with 32 years (from 1758) at St. Botolph, Aldgate | 41 |
| 199 | Young, Charles (father-in-law of Dr. T. A. Arne) | All Hallows', Barking-by-the-Tower, London, 1712-58 | 46 |

C. W. Pearce.

RHEINBERGER ON ORGAN MUSIC

By Andrew de Ternant

Josef Rheinberger, in the course of a conversation on organ music with the present writer, said that much nonsense had been published in Germany and foreign countries concerning the selection he had made for the instruction of his own pupils. It had been frequently stated that this was entirely limited to the organ works of Bach, Mendelssohn, and himself. The majority of foreign writers on music seemed to be unaware of the fact that he was a German professor of the organ, and that the largest number of his pupils were young men and women of his own nationality. He accepted only advanced pupils. He had a fair number of foreign organ pupils, mainly English and American, during his career as a professor, but he had given them no encouragement to come to him. The principal reason was the language question. Many with only a very imperfect knowledge of German had wished to come to him, and if he had accepted them it would have taken too much time for teacher and pupil to understand each other. In the case of the Dutch there was little or no difficulty, because the languages of the German and Hollander were nearly similar, and the majority of the Dutch had been properly instructed in High German before leaving the municipal or private schools at Amsterdam or Rotterdam. He had always recognised the fact that there were competent teachers of the organ all over the civilised world. The French teacher of the organ naturally selected pieces for his pupils by composers of his own nationality, in addition to the great German masters. The English and American teachers followed their example with works composed by their own countrymen.

This was not only reasonable, but honourable and patriotic in every sense of the term. But why should it so often be said that Rheinberger only selected for his pupils the works of Bach, Mendelssohn, and himself? The misinformed writers seemed to have been unaware that the majority of his pupils rarely remained with him beyond one short year, and the proper study of Johann Sebastian's organ works alone would occupy at least five years. The organ teacher, like the teacher of any other subject, was the victim of circumstance, and had to do the best he could with the limited time at his disposal. Rheinberger went on to say that he had never forced his own organ pieces on any of his pupils (though he was by no means ashamed of them), and, if he had shown a preference for Bach and Mendelssohn it was because these two great Saxons were the most representative composers of the organ of the 18th and 19th centuries. An organist properly equipped with the works of these composers could undertake with limited study the works of other composers, including (he sarcastically added) 'those of Rheinberger.' Here he commented on the publication of his first Organ Sonata, in C minor,

Opus 27. He sincerely believed that it was owing to the practical encouragement of his pupils of that period that he was able to surmount the difficulties of publication of his other works of a similar kind. The professional and amateur organists purchased very few copies at the commencement, but his pupils, all unknown to him, made up for this lack of patronage. A poor girl, the daughter of a schoolmaster at Pappenheim (in Bavaria), who subsequently died from consumption at her lodgings at Munich, showed her appreciation of her organ teacher by purchasing one copy per week of the first Organ Sonata. She generally obtained it on order from obscure music-sellers in the suburbs of Munich, so as not to be found out. After her death, her parents found in a box in her room no fewer than forty-five new copies of the Sonata. A youth of seventeen years, the son of a village blacksmith, gave up the idea of purchasing a new winter overcoat in order to buy as many as possible new copies of the same work. Rheinberger confessed that he first became known across the Atlantic through one of his pupils, a German-born youth of Philadelphia, who sent copies to his organist friends and acquaintances. In one instance the young man forgot to subscribe his name before posting the packet, and Rheinberger shortly afterwards received from a distinguished American organist a letter of thanks for the Sonata he had not himself sent. Rheinberger said the three cases mentioned were typical, and not only isolated examples. There were very many more generous and self-sacrificing pupils, including several who were never found out. Rheinberger had the reputation of being a severe teacher, but his pupils dearly loved him, and he acknowledged that he owed them a debt of everlasting gratitude for making him so widely known as a composer of organ Sonatas.

Rheinberger's opinion of modern French organ music was not highly favourable, but he was far from condemning the use of it. In fact, he believed that the French works were valuable additions to the organist's repertory. We must, he said, remember that about two-thirds of those attending organ recitals were business people and hard-working men and women. Certainly not more than ten per cent. were serious students of organ music. In small towns, and especially villages, the percentage was considerably less. To invite mixed audiences to organ recitals to listen always to programmes made up entirely of the serious type of work was a mistake. When he was a young organist he was frequently warned by the incumbent of his church to be careful in the selection of the programmes of his recitals. Concert managers and the indispensable business agents had practically the same views as the Catholic priest (and, he believed, Protestant pastor also), but they were more brusque in making known their opinions on the subject.

There was, said Rheinberger, one thing to be said in favour of French organ pieces. The majority he had seen were composed by organists for organists. The themes were sometimes trivial, and unworthy of the dignity of the organ, but they were well laid out for the instrument. This was not always the case with South German organ composers of the lighter school. Some composers seemed to have had in mind the barrel organ instead of the imposing three-manual keyboard. He could not plead 'not guilty' of using transcriptions as a young organist; but he believed that we had reached a period of musical advancement when the organist should, along with the pianist, be independent of such adaptations. The majority of pianists of distinction made up their programmes with works entirely composed for their instrument. Why should not organists be in the same position? Like many musicians, professional as well as amateur, he often wondered why so few really great composers had ignored the organ as a solo instrument. He was not certain of Mozart's skill in that direction, but organ Sonatas by Haydn, Beethoven, and Schubert would doubtless have overshadowed those by Mendelssohn and himself. The great composers of the past, however, were not entirely to blame. The publication of such works was far from remunerative. To the majority of amateurs the organ was, unlike the pianoforte, not an easily accessible instrument, and in the period of Haydn, Beethoven, and Schubert, that curious makeshift and substitute the harmonium, and its sister the so-called American organ, were unknown. Rheinberger here showed that he could understand the outlook of the practical musical publisher, for the composer, like the author, had to recognise the fact that his only way of reaching the purchasing public was through the dealers.

Rheinberger had had many conversations with musical publishers on the question of the publication of organ music. During the last half of the 18th and first half of the 19th centuries an enormous quantity of organ music had been printed and published in European countries, which had now entirely vanished. Some of the composers had published more than a hundred different organ pieces. Surely some gems were to be found in this now forgotten heap. He believed that a splendid 'Anthology of A Thousand Pieces' could be selected and edited for publication, even if no composer was represented by more than three numbers. It was the destiny of many composers, as well as literary men, to be known to posterity by only one or two works, though some had been exceedingly prolific.

Rheinberger said his favourite novels were the Abbé Prévost's 'Manon Lescaut' and Daniel Defoe's 'Robinson Crusoe,' but German translations of these writers' other works did not exist. Many Frenchmen had told him that Prévost's hundred other novels were not worth reading, and were known only to antiquaries. The Englishmen he had questioned had read only 'Robinson Crusoe' of Defoe. What had happened in literature had also been the case — but to a greater extent — in music, because music was kept alive only by constant performance. Rheinberger added that he knew for certain that many collectors in Germany made a speciality of old organ music, and indeed several had offered to place their collections on loan for selection if such a scheme could be undertaken. He (Rheinberger) had even offered to take a hand in the selection and editorship; but not a single publisher—and he had consulted several—would give the slightest consideration to such an Anthology, which should appeal to organists of all nationalities and become a vast international repository of organ-music. This desirable compilation would place the organist-recitalist on an equality with the pianist-recitalist in arranging the programmes of recitals.

There still existed, said Rheinberger, a prejudice against the recitals of organists; they were not considered 'fashionable' in the same sense as were those of violinists and pianists. There were no records to show us that an organist awakened the same enthusiasm as, say, Paganini or Liszt in a European tour of recitals. The majority of organ recitals were given in churches, and this prevented audiences from showing their appreciation by applause and the throwing of floral tributes, although the last-mentioned custom was not unknown in Spain. Rheinberger's friend, Sarasate, had told him that on two occasions he had witnessed the throwing of bouquets and garlands of flowers up into the organ-loft at Seville Cathedral. The clergy made no protest. But this was the exception and not the rule. Rheinberger pointed out, too, that the aristocracy rarely attended organ recitals, the few who did, so far as his experience went, either treating them as 'solemn affairs' or making audible comments that were by no means appreciative.

Rheinberger said he much regretted that he had had few opportunities to travel outside Germany and Austria. As a young man he was tied down by his teaching connection, private lessons, and as Professor at Munich Conservatorium. When he became older, ill-health stood in the way. He would have liked to hear some of the most distinguished French and English organists in their own surroundings. The Bavarian Cardinal Archbishop at Munich Cathedral once, in his presence, asked Camille Saint-Saëns to play the organ. The Frenchman pleaded at first that he had not done so for a long time, and, added Rheinberger, drily, his performance showed that he was not telling a falsehood. Rheinberger went on to say that it was far from his intention to judge French organists as a body by this incident. His friend, Hans von Bülow, had told him that W. T. Best was the 'Liszt of the organ.' Bülow frequently visited England, and anyone who had any personal knowledge of him could state without fear of contradiction that he never flattered anyone in his life. Further, he was the most bitter musical satirist that ever lived, Voltaire's remarks on his literary contemporaries being mild in comparison with Bülow's mordant wit.

London Concerts

R.A.M. OPERA WEEK

The ambitious effort of the Opera Class (Scala Theatre, July 9-14) was most successful in the departments where success matters most, so far as students' performances are concerned, i.e., ensemble, orchestral playing, and musicianship. The operas were 'Carmen' (two performances), 'Madame Butterfly' (three), and 'The Mastersingers' (two). The cast was changed for each performance—an excellent plan in every way. The experience and training are spread over the whole class; and on musical and general grounds it is a wholesome experience for the principals at one performance to take a turn in the chorus at the next.

The faults of the principals were almost all of the inevitable sort—inexperience and diffidence especially. We refrain from individual mention; the list is too long, and the day too early for detailed criticism. The chief failure was in the matter of ability to 'get over' against the orchestral part, especially when singing quietly. Few of the soloists seemed to realise the need for an extra pinch of grip and definition at such moments. They may say in reply that the orchestra was too loud, but they may take it from us that had Mr. Harrison scaled the orchestral power down to suit the soloists generally, the vitality of the purely musical side would have suffered.

Of the performances we attended that of 'The Mastersingers' seemed to be the best, though probably that impression was due to the musical interest being so continuous as to make the work almost fool-proof so far as the dramatic side was concerned. You have but to sing and play the notes of this masterpiece in order to achieve a very considerable measure of success. Still, they want singing and playing of no mean order, and certainly the performance did the Class immense credit.

Honours go all round, then, with an especial three-times-three for Mr. Julius Harrison, whose watchful and resourceful conducting secured not only first-rate orchestral playing, but a high degree of excellence in general ensemble.

BRUCE SIMONDS

It was a happy accident that the pianoforte recital by Bruce Simonds on July 4 and the First Field Day for Music Educationists, British and American, occurred within a few days—for, while it is rudimentary that one swallow does not make a summer, it is undeniable that those who were fortunate enough to be at the first of the above-mentioned functions attended the second with a redoubled assurance that all was well with the growing fortunes of American music.

Bruce Simonds is a pianist of whom any nation might be proud. Not only are his executive attainments of the highest order, but his power of communicating the thought of music to his audience is commanding and, in not a few respects, unique. Beginning with Bach's Caprice 'on the departure of his beloved brother,' the Fugue was played with remarkable insight and with deft touches of humour. Beethoven's Sonata, Op. 101, followed, and at once revealed the mental stature of the player. The whole work was played in the true spirit of Beethoven's 'third period,' and evoked, as was inevitable in the circumstances, prolonged and enthusiastic applause. Perhaps Ravel's 'Gaspard de la Nuit' gave Mr. Simonds the best opportunity to display his great powers of thought and invention. In tone, style, and intellectual grip the interpretation of these pieces will always remain a fragrant memory to those who heard them.

In brief, Bruce Simonds is a benefactor to his race. He has reminded us of the kinship between ourselves and our brethren across the Atlantic, and the reminder is as opportune as it is delightful. For years untold, great artists have come to us from the Old World. If Mr. Simonds may be regarded as a sample, we shall presently have to welcome equally great exponents of music from the New. They will be received with open arms. Yet we would warn our American friends of the obvious dangers attending the prodigiously high standard they have set in the person of Bruce Simonds.

E. F.

PAUL ROBESON

Mr. Paul Robeson, the negro actor and singer, gave a recital of plantation hymns at Drury Lane Theatre on July 3. The musical interest of these so-called 'spirituals,' of which we hear far too much, is extremely limited; and yet there was no denying the uncommon and moving effect created by this accomplished artist.

Mr. Robeson is a fine singer. He gives the impression of using his resonant bass voice by the light of nature, and yet all is right. He is a big fellow with a capacious chest. Like Chaliapin, he takes in the requisite amount of breath by instinct, as it were, and makes singing appear as natural a mode of expression as speech. Of course, the music called for no great volume of tone, nor for any taxing legato over a wide range. But with a voice like that Mr. Robeson could do anything he wanted to. The taste and spirit of his performances could not have been excelled.

The audience giggled at some of the quaint renderings of Biblical stories contained in the songs, but Mr. Robeson himself never for a moment guyed the simple faith of his countrymen. His humour was a quiet twinkle; generally his expression was mildly pathetic. His platform manners were, like his vocal technics, exemplary. The recital set a standard for the performance of 'spirituals,' which decidedly should never be attempted by white singers, who only make them ridiculous.

The little coloured pianist performed more antics than were called for—antics which Mr. Robeson's dignity put in their place. C.

TURINA

The appearance of the Spanish composer Señor Turina gave an additional lustre to the last concert of the Anglo-Spanish Society. And, for once in a way, the composer was not—as often happens—playing (or conducting) something with which we were all familiar. The programme held one or two items of unusual interest, and at least one performance surpassed our expectations. I refer to the group of songs contributed by Madame Josefa Regnard, a singer ideally adapted to the interpretation of Turina's music. Already in the Sanluqueña poem the composer's bias for a style based on psychological observation as much as on picturesque portraiture was evident. In the 'Hymn to Seville' this became even clearer, and the singer realised to perfection the elements which to us were so intensely foreign and attractive. Madame Regnard's voice would have been pronounced hard and, perhaps, lacking in sympathy if she had been singing Schumann or Schubert. In Turina's music it matched to perfection an art which has the brilliance and the hardness of southern light. It was altogether a refreshing and unusual experience for which we felt indebted to the organizers as much as to the performers. F. B.

DETMAR DREISSEL

The recital of M. Detmar Dreissel at Grotrian Hall deserved notice chiefly on account of the inclusion in the programme of Henry Eccles's Sonata for violin and pianoforte. It is curious how completely Sonatas of such worth as those of Humphreys, Vincent, and Collett have escaped the eagle eye of the violinist. All the more honour then to M. Dreissel, who played the Eccles work as if he really liked it and understood it. For, of course, it is no use tackling this music unless one is sincerely and deeply enamoured of its idiom, and pretends for the time being that it is the most beautiful thing on earth. This music will never yield up its charm to a lukewarm lover. The rest of the programme was of a somewhat pedestrian order, and the violinist's style, neat enough in other ways, suffered from a portamento which in a little Schumann piece became almost unendurable. F. B.

FREE CHURCH CHOIR UNION

The thirty-fifth annual Festival of the above Union was held at the Crystal Palace on June 30, when a highly successful concert was given by a choir and orchestra of about four thousand performers under the direction of Mr. Frank Idle. The programme was varied and interesting, and comprised works by Handel, Tchaikovsky, Sullivan, Gounod, West, &c. The whole performance, apart from an occasional touch of hesitation, reflected the greatest credit upon both performers and conductor, and was most heartily appreciated by a very large audience. The unaccompanied items by Tchaikovsky and Lee Williams were given with delightful delicacy, and made such an appeal to the audience that they had to be repeated. Mr. John E. West and Mr. H. A. Chambers were called to bow their acknowledgments after the performance of their respective anthems. Miss Bella Baillie, who took the place of Miss Carrie Tubb, who was indisposed, gave great pleasure by her singing of solos by Handel and Coleridge-Taylor. Mr. Allan Brown presided at the organ in the absence of Mr. Arthur Meale. C. J. M.

Music in the Provinces

Barnstaple.—The annual concert of the Bickington Choral Society was held at the Foresters' Hall on June 26. Under the direction of Mr. R. G. F. Beale 'A Tale of Old Japan' was performed with a success beyond the reach of most village choral societies. Boys from Ellerslie School assisted in the choir.

Birmingham.—On June 27 the Birmingham Catholic Choir, under the direction of the Rev. Robert Eaton, gave Parry's 'The Pied Piper of Hamelin,' with pianoforte accompaniment, and Byrd's 'O praise the Lord, ye Saints above.' At the Midland Institute, on the same evening, an interesting chamber concert was given by four young string players, led by Mr. Herbert Downes, in company with two pianists—Miss Winifred Firth in Chausson's Quartet and Miss Alice Claxton in Brahms's Quintet.

Harrogate.—Mr. Basil Cameron's capacity for making unhackneyed works fit into popular and interesting programmes has been well exemplified in the course of recent symphony concerts. Four successive programmes included Cherubini's 'Water Carrier' Overture, a Suite of Purcell pieces arranged by Hurlstone, Stanford's Variations on 'Down among the dead men,' for pianoforte and orchestra, Haydn's Overture, 'L'Isola disabitata,' Rubinstein's fourth Pianoforte Concerto, Stanford's Ballade in G minor, and Peter Warlock's 'Capriol' Suite.

Reading.—The new musical director at Reading University, Mr. W. K. Stanton, recently made his first appearance as conductor of the University Choral and Orchestral Society. The occasion was of double importance, for the works performed were Beethoven's seventh Symphony and Vaughan Williams's 'A Sea Symphony.' This exacting programme was carried out with great credit by all concerned.

Tunbridge Wells.—The orchestral concert given at the Opera House on the afternoon of June 12 was considered to be the best ever heard at Tunbridge Wells. Forty-one members of the London Symphony Orchestra and eleven local players, led by Mr. W. H. Reed and conducted by Mr. George Austin, gave a programme that included Strauss's 'Don Juan,' the 'Unfinished' Symphony, and a number of Wagner excerpts.

Competition Festival Record

Cleethorpes.—This Festival, founded in 1909 for the counties of Lincolnshire, Yorkshire, Nottinghamshire, Derbyshire, and Lancashire, has now grown to respectable dimensions, with its five days (June 26-30), three halls, ninety-six classes, and nearly a thousand entries. The syllabus covers the usual variety of competitions, junior and senior, and provides a number of standard tests of good educational value. Ladies' choirs sang Holst's 'The Swallow' and Coleridge-Taylor's 'From the green heart of the waters,' male choirs Elgar's 'After many a dusty mile' and Dunhill's 'It was a lover,' and mixed choirs Byrd's 'Lullaby' and Parry's 'There is an old belief.' The winners were respectively Bramley Ladies' Choir (Mr. G. A. Holgate), Shiregreen Male-Voice Choir (Mr. W. E. Poppleton), and Bradford Philharmonic Society (Mr. E. S. Hird). Among the most distinguished of the soloists was Miss N. Hollingworth, who besides singing well, as winner of the junior class, won full marks for sight-reading.

Kildwick.—The third annual Festival of the Kildwick and Farnhill Institute, on June 30, was a success in spite of its being held in the open, and at times somewhat boisterous, air. Bradford Vocal Union (Mr. George Norman) was first of seven choirs in the mixed-voice section, and Steeton Glee Union (Mr. Hume Wrathall) was first of six in the male-voice section.

Leamington.—The record of this Festival since its foundation in 1911 is one of steady advance to a high position of importance. Owing to its ease of access from Birmingham, the Festival enjoys a good press, and it has been remarked that in the view of Midland choirs Leamington is now their chief meeting place. Some fine choral competitions were the outcome of this year's Festival (June 16, 21, 22, and 23). In the chief classes the first prizes went to Romilly Male-Voice Choir from Barry (Mr. W. W. Williams), Mrs. Palmer's Ladies' Choir from Bedford, and Mrs. Palmer's Mixed Choir. Second places were taken respectively by choirs from Leamington, London, and Leicester (Oriana). The London choir was Mr. Frank Odell's South-West Choral Society, which had come out top in other female-voice and mixed-voice classes. Included among the competitive displays of the Festival was some excellent folk-dancing.

Matlock.—At the competitions held on June 22 and 23 the Matlock Prize Choir (Mr. L. G. Wildgoose) took the first prizes for mixed-voice and female-voice choral singing, and was second to Leicester City in the male-voice class.

Music in Wales

Harlech.—This great Festival of North Wales is particularly dependant upon the weather for its success, as it is held in the roofless ruins of Harlech Castle. This year, in spite of the huge awning over the vast open space, the combined effect of wind and rain made it exceedingly difficult for the orchestra to carry on, though the ardour of the choralists refused to be daunted by adverse conditions. The work of the morning and afternoon sessions consisted of hymn-singing by choir and audience together, of choral singing by individual and combined choirs, solo items by young local singers, as well as by professional soloists, and orchestral numbers. Schubert's 'God in the thunderstorm' was sung by the Twrog Choral Society, Dr. Joseph Parry's 'Ffarwel i ti, Gymru Fach' (Farewell to thee, dear Wales), by the Ruthin Choir, Dr. Hopkin Evans's 'Da yw Moliannu yr Arglwydd' (Good it is to praise the Lord) by Trawsfynydd Choir, and Mendelssohn's 'Come, let us sing,' by Blaenau Festiniog Choral Society. The full choir, consisting of about two thousand singers, gave Bach's 'Jesu, Priceless Treasure,' under the conductor-in-chief, Dr. Hopkin Evans. In the evening 'The Creation' was given, the soloists being Miss Elsie Suddaby, Mr. Myrddin Jones, and Mr. Horace Stevens. The centenary of J. D. Jones, a schoolmaster-musician of Ruthin, was commemorated by singing some of his hymn tunes. Dr. J. Lloyd Williams, a well-known musical historian and folk-song collector, was the afternoon president, and gave an address in which he compared past and present musical conditions in Wales.

At a recital given by pupils of Mr. Claude Hughes, at Calgary, Canada, recently, a very successful item was Colin Taylor's setting of 'John Gilpin' for treble voices, sung by the boys of the pro-Cathedral, accompanied by pianoforte, four violins, castanets, and tambourine.

Mr. Joseph Hislop has received from the King of Sweden the decoration of the Knighthood of the Royal Order of Vasa (First Class).

Musical Notes from Abroad

HOLLAND

The first month of the season at the Scheveningen Kursaal has not only been one of more than ordinary interest, but it has suggested a decided move forward in the policy of the authorities. No longer are we to be treated to classics and standard works alone, but seldom-heard works, and even some which are in the nature of novelties, are appearing in the programmes. Three dances from Manuel de Falla's ballet 'El Sombrero de tres Picos' figured in the first programme of the season, along with the unfamiliar 'The Sirens' symphonic poem of Glière. The latter is not strong as programme music, but is pleasantly and obviously descriptive. Chausson's 'Viviane' is another unfamiliar work of the same æsthetic standard, pleasant but of no great significance, yet welcome at such a series because of its lightness of treatment. A group of songs and the Overture to the third Act of his 'musical tragedy,' 'Island Saga,' by Georg Vollerthun, written with a full knowledge of modern technique, were not worth the trouble of production except for the sake of the composer, who conducted them and probably gained useful experience. Prof. Schneevoigt is bringing forward a considerable amount of Scandinavian music this season, and already we have heard the first Symphony and 'The Swan of Tuonela' by Sibelius, a Berceuse of Järnefelt's, a Swedish Wedding March by Söderman, besides a fair amount of popular music by Grieg.

Herr Neumark, to whom we usually look for a fair quota of unfamiliar music, has scarcely got into his stride in this matter yet, the only item in his programme which calls for notice being the very successful first appearance of Amparo Iturbi, the sister and pupil of José Iturbi. She played the solo part of Franck's Variations Symphoniques with a happy combination of power and delicacy and a very fine sense of rhythm. The success of the young Russian violinist, Nathan Milstein, was so great at his first appearance that he was immediately re-engaged for the following Sunday, Mr. Sam Swaap, who had been announced to appear, stepping down in his favour. His technique at present is far in advance of his musical development, while his personality strikes one as somewhat weak. If he can get over this he should become a great artist. The Budapest Philharmonic has been here for a single concert, and the methods of Dohnànyi and his players have inspired useful comparisons with Dutch conductors and orchestras.

Both Amsterdam and Utrecht have had Summer Music Feasts, consisting of series of orchestral concerts. At Amsterdam the conductors were Cornelis Dopper, Fürtwangler, Darius Milhaud, and other visitors, and at Utrecht the orchestra was directed by its own highly-talented conductor, Evert Cornelis. At both Festivals a strong feature was made of music written in the last two or three decades, a single concert at Utrecht comprising works by Stravinsky, de Falla, and Lili Boulanger. 'Faust et Helène,' by the last-named, won a large measure of appreciation for its fine expression of the tenderer emotions. Another work of propaganda for modern music is a series of chamber concerts given by the Amsterdam Music Lyceum, at which the composers Milhaud, Honnegger, Maurice Jaubert, Marcel Delannoy, and Alexandre Tcherepnin, and a number of popular artists with modern repertories and modern methods, are appearing.

The Maatschappy tot Bevordering der Toonkunst, with its forty choral societies and seventeen music schools in different towns in Holland, will next year keep its first centenary. To celebrate this it is proposed to organize two Festival concerts at Amsterdam under Mengelberg, a Historial Exhibition in the City Museum which will show the development of the Toonkunst and its sister societies, a competition for a work for mixed choir and orchestra, and to issue a Memorial Book and Memorial Medal.

Herbert Antcliffe.

MILAN

With the closing of La Scala, the Opera Reale of Rome, and the San Carlo of Naples, the most vital part of the nation's musical life has come to an end for this season. A review of the work done reveals that here, as elsewhere, Verdi, Puccini, and Wagner stand out alone, with, perhaps, Strauss in the fourth place. New works have not been too abundant, and of what there have been, the only operas that would appear to have any chance of a career are 'Fra Gherardo,' of Pizzetti, 'Sly,' of Wolf-Ferrari, Zandonai's 'Guiliano,' and 'Dafni,' by Mulé. These four constitute the most solid of the year's productions. The first two had their premières at La Scala, 'Dafni' at the Opera Reale, and 'Guiliano' at the San Carlo.

While opera-giving has ceased at the bigger theatres, quite a number of secondary but still important seasons have been running—notably at Venice, at Verona (in the Arena), and at Bergamo, and at a number of smaller provincial towns in the south, but these of course are of little interest to the foreign reader.

At Venice, the American soprano Leonora Corona was the protagonist in 'Tosca,' with Beniamino Gigli as the painter. Reports speak well of the performance on all sides, and of the splendid conducting of Bamboschek. A company deserving of the highest praise is the Compagnia dell' Opera Comica e Lirica, which at Livorno has succeeded in packing the theatre for every performance. The secret would appear to lie in the excellent ensemble. None of the principals are artists of the first grade, nor is the orchestra composed of brilliant musicians, but their part, like that of the chorus, is excellent in its discipline. Maestro Annovazzi is the director, and probably he is responsible for the standards achieved. The operas presented are mostly by Donizetti, with Pergolesi's 'La Serva Padrona' thrown in. This latter is a perfect object-lesson in economy, and has been the occasion of full houses every night. 'Don Pasquale,' 'L'Elisir d'amore,' and 'La Sonnambula' complete the répertoire, and the artists are headed by Dina Fiumana, Michele Raggini, Lombardo, and Concetto Paterna. Last in the list of the month's activities comes a performance of 'Otello' at Trento. This was the first time the opera had been given at Trento since 1888, a year after its Scala première. Much hard labour was expended to make it a success; new scenery, lighting, and costumes went towards creating greater perfection from a spectacular point of view than was the case musically speaking. The playing of the orchestra under Zeetti revealed the limited capacities of the instrumentalists, and Salazar (Otello), Alda Fedeli (Desdemona), and Guicciardi (Iago) did as well as could be expected.

THE SCALA CONCERTS

The ten concerts of the season, among which are included those of the Berlin Sing-Akademie, have now been concluded—with, one might say, a sigh of relief. The city has been suffering under a temperature running up as high as 94, but no good Milanese will sacrifice his concert. The last programme was not notable for quality, as, outside the fifth Symphony, there was almost nothing of interest. There was for the umteenth time 'L'après-midi d'un Faune,' and the rest was operatic music, and that most uninteresting 'Scarlattiana' of Casella's. Antonio Guarnieri conducted. More to the point was the previous concert, directed by the Belgian Desiré Defauw. His music included the first performances at Milan of Holst's 'Uranus' and 'Mercury,' and Sibelius's Concerto for Violin. Ferencz von Vecsey was the soloist. The Holst was well received, but the Sibelius seemed to be preferred. We also had the D minor of Franck, quite the finest thing on the programme. Respighi's 'I Pini di Roma' made good hearing, but has a too suave smack to satisfy completely. Stravinsky's 'Fire-bird' is appearing too frequently on programmes here, and consequently is not as fresh as could be wished. Of the other events, greater interest lay in Panizza's concerts. He gave a splendid reading of Strauss's 'Death and Transfiguration.'

At the Dal Verme, second theatre at Milan, the Cossacks of Kubany gave two concerts, and managed to sustain a live interest throughout their performances. This little body gave every indication of having been well drilled, and at all times maintained an excellent intonation and tone-colour. Most noticeable were the basses, that to Latin ears seemed very profound. Italian bass voices, it may be remarked, are seldom very deep, as the operatic training that holds in this country demands at least an F sharp above, with the result that very seldom do they sing lower than G. Vladimir Drigailo was the conductor, and got some work from his people that might better be described as instrumental. They gave nothing new, and nothing better than the Volga Song. In sacred music the standard was at its lowest.

Charles d'If.

VIENNA

SCHUBERT CELEBRATIONS

Franz Schubert and Richard Strauss are the two names that govern the musical life of Vienna's late musical season this year. Under the collective title of 'Vienna Festival Weeks,' we witness a conglomeration of more or less musical amusements which borrow their artistic justification from the Schubert Centenary on one side and from Richard Strauss's sixty-fourth birthday on the other, while the actual purpose of the venture, more or less frankly admitted, is the furtherance of tourism.

To give a full account of all that is summed up under the name of Schubert celebration would fill columns of this paper. Suffice it to say that Schubert music is being played, sung, and danced in these days in every nook and corner of the city—in the courtyard of Schubert's birthplace and of every one of his dwelling-places, in front of the city hall and on every plaza, in the Church where Schubert toiled as organist, in every public school, and, of course, in most concert-halls of the city. The Philharmonic Orchestra, the most prominent instrumentalists and vocalists of the city, and, on one occasion, a 'monster chorus' of four thousand singers, participate in these 'festivities,' which are often enough more praiseworthy in their aims than in their qualities. Schubert expositions, Schubert lectures, and even a Schubert trotting match (with singers from the Staatsoper participating) are a few of the events more or less distantly related to music and intended to 'popularise' a composer whose life-work is less known to the general populace in its original form than in mutilated concoctions compiled by resourceful operetta manufacturers. One of these, 'Lilac Time,' is once more current in a Vienna theatre, and, profiting from the popularity of Alfred Piccaver—the Staatsoper tenor who now impersonates the leading rôle—is producing royalties a fraction of which would have benefited Franz Schubert more than all the dubious posthumous celebrations. A veritable Schubert fever is shaking the Austrian metropolis; and yet all this is only a prelude to the Schubert celebration to be expected in the fall of this year, and a huge Sängerfest will serve as an intermezzo next month.

'STAR OPERA' AND 'ENSEMBLE OPERA'

The absence from Vienna of the Staatsoper's company during its Paris season turned our national opera house into an arena for visiting singers and guest companies. What was with some self-aggrandisement announced as a company from the Paris Opéra-Comique, introduced two excellent tenors in the person of Jean Lapelletrie and José Rogatschewsky. Ninon Vallin's Carmen proved a welcome relief from the 'psychological' conception of the much-abused rôle current in the German theatres. Yvonne Gall pleased less with her over-coquettish Tosca, so antipodic to the over-realistic impersonation of Jeritza to which Vienna is accustomed. Conductor Razigade, though not from Paris, presided firmly over the performances, which enlisted, apart from the aforesaid artists, mostly singers of a provincial standard. Equally provincial was the character of a 'polyglot' season in which Baklanov and Fleta were present to lend star-glories to a conglomerate of minor Staatsoper singers; orchestra and scenery were borrowed from the Vienna Volksoper to replace the Staatsoper's apparatus then on exhibit at Paris. The outstanding feature of these performances was not so much the great art of Baklanov, long familiar here and hardly impaired by growing age, as the failure of Miguel Fleta both as singer and actor.

No more forcible contrast could be imagined to these haphazard performances than the three guest productions given here by the company of the Cologne Opera. The Fleta-Baklanov season was 'star opera' at its worst—the Cologne company gave us models of "ensemble opera' with all its virtues and shortcomings. The virtues were an impeccable artistic discipline, the blending of forces into one complete, harmonious unit. Such perfect subordination under the guiding will of a fine conductor and a great stage director is, on the other hand, naturally conditional upon a certain lack of personality with each individual performer. The Cologne singers are throughout fine, earnest artists, but neither histrionically nor vocally of outstanding excellence. Hans Strobach was the very capable scenic supervisor of an atmospheric performance of 'Pelléas et Mélisande' and of a brilliantly dashing (though, according to Viennese ideas, somewhat too vigorous) performance of 'Così fan tutte'; and Fritz Rémond, general intendant of the Cologne Opera, was the stage director of a monumental performance of Handel's 'Julius Cæsar.' Eugen Szenkar (like most 'German' conductors an Austrian by birth and musical education) excelled as conductor in all three operas. His Cologne orchestra lacked, perhaps, some of the sensuous charm of the Vienna Philharmonic, but did marvellous work, enhanced by the fine acoustics of the Vienna Opera.

Paul Bechert.

Obituary

We regret to record the following deaths:

Albert Visetti, in London, on July 10, in his eighty-third year. Of English parentage on his mother's side, he was born at Salona, in Dalmatia. His father intended that he should enter the medical profession, and accordingly sent him to study medicine at Padua University. Music soon claimed him, however, and he proceeded to Milan Conservatoire, where he became acquainted with Verdi. His success at the Conservatoire was brilliant, and he followed it up by distinguishing himself as conductor and pianist at Nice. A period at Paris followed, and in 1870, on his house being burned down by the Communards, he moved to London, and became a naturalised British subject. Save for a few tours abroad, the rest of his life was spent in this country. He is best known to the present generation as a teacher of singing at the Royal College of Music, with which institution he had been identified from the first, having been on the staff of its forerunner, the National Training College of Music. For twelve years he was conductor of the Bath Philharmonic Society. As a composer he was best known by the song 'La Diva,' written for Patti, who was only one of the many famous singers numbered among his pupils.

William Henry Gater, at Dublin, on June 21, aged eighty. Born at Dublin, on August 8, 1848, he received lessons on the organ from Sir Robert Stewart, and was organist of Christ Church, Bray, from 1871-73, also acting as organist of the Exhibition Palace, Dublin, from 1872-73. Entering Trinity College in 1874, he graduated Mus. Bac. in 1876, B.A. in 1881, proceeding to Mus. Doc. in 1886. From 1873 to 1876 he was organist of St. Andrew's, Dublin, and then took over the organ of St. Stephen's Church, a post which he held for over fifty years. Dr. Gater composed much Church music, including a setting of Psalm 66, as well as a cantata, 'The Passions.' In 1888 he obtained the Wrexham Eisteddfod Prize. As Grand Organist of the Dublin Freemasons he was well known. Though blind, he was a fine executant, and for a time was examiner for the R.I.A.M.; he was also for many years choirmaster of the East Meath Diocesan Choral Association.

Leonard C. Venables, in London, aged eighty. He was for long a prominent figure in Tonic Sol-fa circles, having been a co-worker with John Curwen in the pioneer days of the movement, and later serving for many years on the administrative side of the Tonic Sol-fa College. He conducted the Tonic Sol-fa Festival on many occasions. As author he will be remembered for his various publications on ear-training, sight-reading, &c., and above all, perhaps, for his admirable book, 'Choral and Orchestral Societies,' in which the musical and management sides are blended with unusual success. The South London Institute of Music was directed by him from the first, and one of the oldest and most successful of operatic societies—the South London—enjoyed the benefits of his conductorship until the close of his life. The recent celebration of the sixtieth year of professional work was made the occasion of a striking demonstration of esteem.

Charles Barlow Ingham, at Mayfield, Sussex, on June 15, aged eighty-seven. He founded the Moira House School for Girls, at Croydon, in 1875, later moving it to Bournemouth, and finally to Eastbourne. A pioneer in educational matters, he was one of the first to recognise the value of the Dalcroze method, and with his son, Mr. Percy Ingham, was mainly responsible for the establishment in this country of the Dalcroze Eurhythmics. In 1902 he published, through Novello's, his 'Education in Accordance with Natural Law.'

Marie Novello, in London, on June 21. She was born at Maesteg, South Wales, and early in life was a first-prize winner in the principal pianoforte solo class at the National Eisteddfod. Mainly through the interest of Madame Novello-Davies she went to Vienna to study under Leschetitzky. Subsequently she was a successful recitalist in London, and also toured considerably.

Frederick William Norcup, suddenly, at Peterborough, on June 18, aged fifty-six. He was sometime lay-vicar of Westminster Abbey, and was son-in-law to the late Sir Frederick Bridge, whose daughter he married in 1914.

Miscellaneous

Society of Women Musicians

Features of the very successful season just ended have been a recital by Miss Myra Hess, a performance of madrigals and part-songs by the singer-members (who have been formed into a choir by Miss Alice Hare), and a programme of new works by women composers, in celebration of the Society's sixteenth birthday on July 7, when first performances were given of Fiona McCleary's Sonata for violin and pianoforte, a Rhapsodic Impression for violin, viola, and pianoforte by Katharine Eggar, and works by Rebecca Clarke and Dorothy Howell.

Mariani's Italian marionettes are coming to the Scala Theatre again, on August 13, for a seven weeks' season. Many novelties will be produced, and there will be standard operas in condensed form, musical comedies, humorous sketches, ballets—something for everybody, in fact.

Mr. Hugh S. Middleton, organist of Ely Cathedral, has been elected to an honorary Fellowship of Peterhouse College, Cambridge.

SUMMER SCHOOL CLASSES FOR CHORAL TRAINERS

We have received from the British Federation of Musical Competition Festivals particulars of two Summer Schools organized under their auspices mainly for the benefit of choral trainers and conductors. The first will be held at the Training College, College Road, Norwich, from August 27 to September 1, directed by Mr. Herbert Wiseman. The secretary is Mr. W. H. Aldrich, The Chase, Diss, Norfolk. The second will take place on September 10-17, at St. Peter's Training College, Peterborough. Mr. T. Maskell Hardy and Mr. Alan Stephenson will be in charge, and the secretary is Captain D. V. Gedge, 19, St. Andrews Road, Bedford.

It may not be too late to remind readers that the Summer School organized by the Federation of British Musical Industries is held at Oxford from August 1-15, when the instructors on the vocal side will be Mr. Hubert Middleton and Mr. Field Hyde. Particulars from the Federation Offices, 117-123, Great Portland Street, W.1.

CONTENTS.

| | Page. |
|---|---|
| Poetry, Song, and Schubert.—I. By Mrs. Frank Liebich | 689 |
| On Making Melody. By Alexander Brent-Smith | 691 |
| The Perspectives of Musical Style. By Leonid Sabaneev | 694 |
| Ad Libitum. By 'Feste' | 696 |
| New Light on Late Tudor Composers. XXXVI.—Richard Carlton. By W. H. Grattan Flood | 699 |
| 'The Music Meeting' | 700 |
| Honorary Degree Conferred on Mr. J. A. Fuller-Maitland | 701 |
| Famous Victorians in a Toy Symphony (illustrated) | 701 |
| New Music | 702 |
| Gramophone Notes. By 'Discus' | 706 |
| The Musicians' Bookshelf | 709 |
| Wireless Notes. By 'Ariel' | 714 |
| Occasional Notes | 716 |
| British and American Music Educationists' Field Day | 718 |
| The Worshipful Company of Musicians | 719 |
| Teachers' Department | 719 |
| Answers to Correspondents | 720 |
| Church and Organ Music | 727 |
| Royal College of Organists: Examiners' Reports, &c. | 727 |
| The Organ and Broadcasting. By Corbett Sumsion | 728 |
| Conference of Choirmasters and Clergy | 729 |
| The Amateurs' Exchange | 732 |
| Letters to the Editor | 732 |
| Sixty Years Ago | 739 |
| Royal Academy of Music | 740 |
| Royal College of Music | 740 |
| The Associated Board | 741 |
| Manchester University: Faculty of Music | 741 |
| Three 17th-Century Poet-Parsons and Music | 741 |
| Chaliapin at Covent Garden | 742 |
| Organists' Long Service Roll of Honour. List II.—Cathedral, Collegiate, Parochial, and other Organists | 742 |
| Rheinberger on Organ Music. By Andrew de Ternant | 745 |
| London Concerts | 747 |
| Music in the Provinces | 748 |
| Competition Festival Record | 748 |
| Music in Wales | 749 |
| Musical Notes from Abroad | 749 |
| Obituary | 751 |
| Miscellaneous | 751 |
| Summer School Classes for Choral Trainers | 752 |

MUSIC.

Four Hymn-Tunes. Arranged with Descant.
By H. A. Chambers 721

EXTRA SUPPLEMENT given with this number:
'O worship the King.' Anthem for Harvest and General Use.
By Ernest Bullock.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

To insure insertion in their proper positions, Advertisements for the next issue should reach the Office, 160, Wardour Street, London, W.1, not later than

TUESDAY, AUGUST 21 (First Post).

DURING THE LAST MONTH

Published by NOVELLO & CO., Limited

ALCOCK, W. G.—"Thou Who dost rule." (A prayer for sailors.) Hymn. 2d.

BACH, J. S.—Chorale ("Jesus, bleibet meine Freude"), for Organ, arranged by John E. West. (No. 69, West's Organ Arrangements.) 1s. 6d.

BLAIR, HUGH.—"The Lord is my Shepherd." Two-part Anthem for Soprano Voices. (No. 70, Novello's Chorister Series.) 3d.

BRAHMS, JOHANNES.—"In silent night." (German Folk-Song.) Re-arranged for Men's Voices (T.T.B.B.). (No. 607, The Orpheus.) 3d.

BROOKE, BYRON. — Cradle Song for Violin or Violoncello and Pianoforte. 2s.

FOUR HYMN-TUNES. (Set 2.) Arranged with Descant by H. A. Chambers. (No. 1026, The Musical Times.) 3d.

HARWOOD, BASIL. — "In Exitu Israel." For Organ. (No. 21, Original Compositions for the Organ, by Basil Harwood.) 2s.

HIGGINBOTTOM, J. B. — Vesper and Four-fold Amen. 1d.

LONGFIELD, J. A.—"Jesus, Thy boundless love to me." Sacred Song in two keys (E flat and G). 2s.

MANN, F. G.—"Crossing the Bar." For S.A.T.B., and T.T.B.B. 4d.

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW, No. 434, contains the following music in both notations. "The hunt is up." (Unison). Early English, arranged by H. A. C.; and "The marriage of the frog and the mouse" (Unison). Early English. 2d.

SCHOOL SONG SERIES.—Published in two forms. A. Voice Parts in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations, with Pianoforte Accompaniment (8vo). B. Voice Parts only, in Tonic Sol-fa Notation.

| | | A. | B. |
|---|---|---|---|
| No. 1494. | "Bumpety bump." (Unison.) Cecil Sharman | 2d. | — |
| ,, 1495. | "Lilies are white." (Unison.) Cecil Sharman | 2d. | — |
| ,, 1496. | "Over the hill to the town." (Unison.) George Rathbone | 2d. | — |
| ,, 1497. | "The Spindle Tree." (Unison.) George Rathbone | 2d. | — |
| ,, 1498. | "My Carpet." (Unison.) George Rathbone | 2d. | — |
| ,, 1499. | "The Erl-King." (Unison.) Franz Schubert | 3d. | — |

SEWELL, The Rev. C. W. H., and C. E. SPOONER.—Hymn and Carol Tunes. 9d.

THORNE-BAMBER, L.—

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| "A summer's morn." | Song. | 2s. |
| "O flower." | Song. | 2s. |
| "Spring-Tide." | Song. | 2s. |
| "'Twas you." | Song. | 2s. |

TONIC SOL-FA SERIES:

No. 2564. "Stars of the summer night." Part-Song for S.A.T.B. W. A. C. Cruickshank 2d.

PUBLISHED FOR THE H. W. GRAY CO., NEW YORK

COX, P. N.—"Hide me under the shadow of Thy wing." (Response for S.A.T.B.) (No. 830, Church Music Review.) 10 cents (6d.).

(Continued on page 754.)

SCHEHERAZADE

Here is a work by Rimsky Korsakov: the stories of the "Arabian Nights" told musically. Listening to them in this form accentuates their rich and colourful atmosphere, and played by the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra the work is a sheer joy.

No one who possesses a gramophone should be without this recording. There are five 12-inch double-sided records, which can be obtained separately at 6/6 each, or complete in an album together with notes on the music, price £1 : 12 : 6.

D1436.—1st movement—The Sea and the Vessel of Sinbad. D1437.—2nd movement—The Tale of Prince Kalender. D1438.—Continuation of 2nd movement, and on the reverse side the 3rd movement—The young Prince and the young Princess. D1439.—Continuation of 3rd movement, and on the reverse side the 4th movement—The Festival at Bagdad. D1440.—Continuation of 4th movement, and on the reverse side—The Vessel is wrecked.

"His Master's Voice"

THE GRAMOPHONE COMPANY, LIMITED
Oxford Street, London, W. 1

DURING THE LAST MONTH—continued from p. 752.

GOLDSWORTHY, W. A. — Fugato for Organ. (No. 421, St. Cecilia.) 75 cents (3s.).

LUCKE, K. E. — "The Procession," for Organ. (No. 457, St. Cecilia.) 75 cents (3s.).

MACKINNON, H. A. — "I sing of a maiden." Carol for Mixed Voices. (No. 942, Church Music Review.) 10 cents (6d.).

PEELE, D.—Four Chime Preludes for Organ. (No. 448, St. Cecilia.) 75 cents (3s.).

—— Sixth Nocturne for Organ. (No. 439, St. Cecilia.) 75 cents (3s.).

—— Introduction and Fugue in B flat for Organ. (No. 436, St. Cecilia.) 75 cents (3s.).

JUST PUBLISHED

PART-SONGS for MIXED VOICES

By C. LEE WILLIAMS

A HARNET ZET IN A HOLLOW TREE

A TRADITIONAL BALLAD. Price 4*d.*

THE CURFEW TOLLS THE KNELL OF PARTING DAY

WORDS BY THOMAS GRAY

Price 3*d.*

THE DESPAIRING LOVER

WORDS BY WILLIAM WALSH.

Price 3*d.*

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

ASSISTANT-ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER wanted for All Saints' Church, Putney. Must be young and accustomed to Gregorian Chants and Choral Celebrations. Apply to Mr. Harry Dancey, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., 32, Clarendon Road, Putney, S.W.15.

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL, OXFORD. There is a vacancy for an Alto Singer. Salary to commence at £130 a year, with a pension at the age of 60. Candidates must be Communicant Members of the Church of England. Applications should be sent, stating age and experience, with three testimonials, to the Organist, Christ Church, Oxford, not later than September 10, 1928.

SOLO and CHORUS MEN SUPPLIED for Church work, Weddings, &c. Apply, G. Hugh Weedon, 487, Green Lanes, Harringay, N.4. Phone: Holborn 6966.

FOR SALE, Library of Organ Music containing 320 first-class items, all in excellent condition. £5 10*s.* List on application. Challinor, 14, High Street, Ilfracombe.

APOLLO ORGAN. Two-Manual Pedal, electrically blown, practically new. Collingwood, 6, Ashford Road, Maidstone.

POPULAR HARVEST ANTHEMS.—Composed by EDWARD S. CRASTON, MUS. BAC. "Thou Crownest the Year." 4*d.* "The Glorious Majesty of the Lord." 2*d.* London: Novello & Company, Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

TRADITIONAL METHOD OF ITALIAN SINGING TAUGHT, as taught by Garcia. Vacancies for pupils. Schools and pupils visited, lessons arranged in Town. Terms moderate. Box 6, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

IMPORTANT TO COMPOSERS.—Send stamp for our latest prospectus on music publishing. The Norman Reed Music Company, 133A, Charing Cross Road, London, W.C.2.

TWELVE

INTROITS OR SHORT ANTHEMS

SET 2.

| No. | | |
|---|---|---|
| 1. | GIVE EAR UNTO MY PRAYER | JACQUES ARCADELT |
| 2. | WE WAIT FOR THY LOVING-KINDNESS | PHILIP ARMES |
| 3. | THE SACRIFICES OF GOD | HUGH BLAIR |
| 4. | ALMIGHTY GOD, WHO HAST ME BROUGHT | THOMAS FORD |
| 5. | SET YOUR AFFECTIONS | ALFRED R. GAUL |
| 6. | O GOD, WHOSE NATURE AND PROPERTY | ALAN GRAY |
| 7. | REND YOUR HEART | F. A. GORE OUSELEY |
| 8. | COME, LET US WORSHIP | PALESTRINA |
| 9. | BEHOLD, GOD IS MY HELPER | JOHN STAINER |
| 10. | I WILL LAY ME DOWN IN PEACE | ARTHUR S. SULLIVAN |
| 11. | O GOD OF BETHEL | CHRISTOPHER TYE |
| 12. | BLESSED ARE THEY | S. S. WESLEY |

PRICE ONE SHILLING

Each Introit may be had separately

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

"Such settings as these cannot do otherwise than tend to popularise the Church Service."—Musical Standard, June 6, 1891.
"Good, effective, easy, and dignified."—Musical Times, April 1, 1891.
"Admirably adapted to meet the requirements of the majority of choirs and congregations." "Deserve extensive recognition and use."—Musical News, September 4 and 25, 1891.
Also recommended by the Guardian, Church Times, &c., &c.

POPULAR CHURCH MUSIC
BY
J. H. MAUNDER

| HARVEST ANTHEMS. | Staff Notation. | Tonic Sol-fa. |
|---|---|---|
| Sing to the Lord of Harvest ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| While the earth remaineth ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Blessed be the Name of the Lord ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| SERVICES | | |
| SERVICE IN G ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2s. | 1s. 4d. |
| Or, separately:— | | |
| Te Deum ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Benedicite, omnia Opera ... ... ... | 3d. | 3d. |
| Benedictus ... ... ... ... ... | 3d. | 3d. |
| Jubilate ... ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Office for the Holy Communion ... ... | 10d. | 8d. |
| Pater Noster from the above ... ... | 3d. | 3d. |
| Amen ditto ... ... ... | 1½d. | 1½d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| SERVICE IN CHANT FORM (No. 1) ... ... ... | 1s. 4d. | 10d. |
| Or, separately:— | | |
| Te Deum, &c., with Kyrie ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Office for the Holy Communion ... ... | 8d. | 6d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Te Deum in B flat... ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in C (partly Unison) | 4d. | 2d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in D ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| ORGAN. | | |
| Voix Seraphique (for Recitals)... ... ... ... | 2s. 6d. | — |
| CHURCH CANTATA. | | |
| Penitence, Pardon, and Peace (for general use) ... | 2s. | 1s. 4d. |

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

POPULAR ANTHEMS FOR HARVEST
BY CALEB SIMPER

57 Separate Anthems which have run into over 2,500 Editions.
Special List on application.

GEORGE BELCHER

| | |
|---|---|
| A handful of corn ... ... ... ... ... | 4d. |
| I will greatly rejoice in the Lord ... ... ... | 4d. |
| Serve the Lord with gladness ... ... ... | 4d. |
| The finest of the wheat ... ... ... ... | 4d. |
| Thou crownest the year with Thy goodness ... | 4d. |

ARTHUR BERRIDGE

| | |
|---|---|
| All things praise Thee, Lord Most High ... ... | 4d. |
| Lord of the harvest ... ... ... ... ... | 4d. |
| O thank the Lord ... ... ... ... ... | 4d. |
| Praise waiteth for Thee ... ... ... ... | 4d. |
| The God of harvest praise ... ... ... ... | 4d. |
| The joy of harvest ... ... ... ... ... | 4d. |
| Thee, Lord of harvest, we adore ... ... ... | 4d. |

REV. E. VINE-HALL

| | |
|---|---|
| Come, ye thankful people, come ... ... ... | 4d. |
| O praise God in His Holiness ... ... ... | 4d. |
| Thou visitest the earth ... ... ... ... | 4d. |
| While the earth remaineth ... ... ... ... | 4d. |

The publishers very heartily commend these Anthems to all Choirs needing bright and tuneful works for the approaching Festival. They are well harmonized, without any great technical difficulties, and are full of interest.

All Anthems also in Sol-fa at 3d. each.

Send for a Selection on appro.

A. WEEKES & Co., LTD., 13 & 14, HANOVER STREET, LONDON, W.1.

OVER EIGHT MILLION COPIES OF CALEB SIMPER'S Compositions in Church Music now sold.

F.R.C.O. writes: "I have used your Anthems, &c., for very many years, and always found Choirs interested in the graceful tunefulness of the music."

NEW HARVEST ANTHEMS, Etc.
COMPOSED BY CALEB SIMPER.

| | |
|---|---|
| *RIPENED GRAIN. New ... ... ... ... ... | 9th Edit. 4d. |
| Exceptionally interesting. Strong, sonorous choruses. | |
| *LORD OF THE HARVEST ... ... ... ... ... | 15th Edit. 4d. |
| Very effective Solos and irresistible Choruses. | |
| *REJOICE WITH THANKSGIVING ... ... ... ... | 11th Edit. 4d. |
| *RENDER THANKS AND PRAISE ... ... ... ... | 12th Edit. 4d. |
| *REJOICE IN ALL THE GOOD THINGS ... ... ... | 14th Edit. 4d. |
| Contains imitative parts and rich modulations. | |
| *SING FORTH HIS PRAISE... ... ... ... ... | 12th Edit. 4d. |
| *BE THANKFUL UNTO HIM ... ... ... ... | 11th Edit. 5d. |
| *A BOUNTEOUS HARVEST ... ... ... ... ... | 5th 1000 4d. |
| *LET EVERY THING PRAISE THE LORD ... ... ... | 7th Edit. 4d. |
| THY BOUNTEOUS GIFTS ... ... ... ... ... | 11th Edit. 8d. |
| Short Work. Solos and Choruses. Occupies about 18 minutes. | |
| NEW NO. 11 VOLUNTARY BOOK ... ... ... | 12th Edit. 2s. |
| NEW NO. 12 VOLUNTARY BOOK ... ... ... | 6th Edit. 2s. |
| Seventeen pieces in each on Two Staves with Pedal part indicated. | |

*Those marked * are also issued in Tonic Sol-fa.*

London: A. WEEKES & Co., 14, Hanover Street, Regent Street, W.1.
Chicago, U.S.A.: CLAYTON F. SUMMY Co., 429, S. Wabash Ave.

These Compositions are exceptionally Melodious, Interesting, and effective. Have attained world-wide appreciation.

POPULAR HARVEST ANTHEMS
COMPOSED BY EDWYN A. CLARE.

| | |
|---|---|
| *Thou Crownest the Year ... ... ... ... ... | 31st 1000 4d. |
| *Sing unto God with Thanksgiving ... ... ... | 37th 1000 6d. |
| *How great is His Goodness ... ... ... ... | 27th 1000 4d. |
| *The Fruit of Thy Works ... ... ... ... | 25th 1000 6d. |
| *He gives us Fruitful Seasons ... ... ... ... | 12th 1000 6d. |
| *The Eyes of all wait upon Thee ... ... ... | 72nd 1000 4d. |
| Sung at a Festival of 1,500 voices at Newcastle-on-Tyne. | |
| Fear not, O Land ... ... ... ... ... ... | 11th 1000 4d. |
| *Sing Praises to His Name ... ... ... ... | 15th 1000 4d. |
| O Lord, how manifold are Thy Works ... ... | 10th 1000 6d. |
| Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem ... ... ... ... | 51st 1000 4d. |
| Sung at Choral Festivals, Wem and Downpatrick Cathedral. | |
| *All Thy works shall praise Thee ... ... ... | 5th 1000 4d. |
| *The blessings of Peace ... ... ... ... ... | 5th 1000 4d. |
| Favourite MAGNIFICAT and NUNC DIMITTIS in D ... | 31st 1000 6d. |
| Full of flowing melody. Sung at a Choral Festival. | |

*Those marked * may also be had in Tonic Sol-fa.*

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.
New York: THE H. W. GRAY Co., Sole Agents for the U.S.A.

New Numbers in the "YORK SERIES."

ALLELUIA HAIL WITH GLADNESS.
J. LAMONT GALBRAITH.
Cantata. Price 2*s.* net.

CROWN OF LIFE.
NOEL HANNENFORD.
Cantata. Price 2*s.* net.

THE SHEFFIELD CATHEDRAL DESCANTS.
(24 Settings of Popular Hymn Tunes.)
By T. W. HANFORTH.
Price 6*d.*

BANKS & SON, MUSIC PUBLISHERS, YORK.

HARVEST ANTHEM
ALL THY WORKS PRAISE THEE
BY T. MEE PATTISON
Tenor or Treble Solo and Two Choruses.
Price 3*d.*

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NOVELLO'S EDITIONS

A SELECTED LIST OF SACRED SONGS

Price Two Shillings, except where otherwise stated.

Abbreviations: (S) Soprano; (M-S) Mezzo-Soprano; (C) Contralto; (T) Tenor; (Bar) Baritone; (B) Bass.

| | Range of Lowest Key. |
|---|---|
| FRANZ ABT | |
| Ave Maria (O Lord most Holy). E (S or T) ... ... (1/6) | E—G♯ |
| THOMAS ADAMS | |
| Nearer my God to Thee. E flat (C or B); F (S or T) ... | B♭—E♭ |
| Radiant Morn, The. D (M-S, C, or Bar) ... ... ... | C♯—E |
| Rock of Ages. E (C or Bar); G (S or T) ... ... ... | B—E |
| IVOR ATKINS | |
| Virgin's Lullaby, The. G minor (M-S) ... ... (1/6) | D—F |
| EDGAR L. BAINTON | |
| Song of the Virgin Mother, A. D (M-S) ... ... ... | D—F |
| JOSEPH BARNBY | |
| Elizabeth's Song. G minor (C or M-S) ... ... ... | D—E |
| Soft southern breeze. B flat (Bar); D flat (T) ... ... | D♭—F |
| When I view the Mother holding (Christmastide). D (C or M-S) ... ... ... ... ... ... (1/6) | D—D |
| JOHN F. BARNETT | |
| Rock of Ages, The. E minor (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... | B—F♯ |
| JULIUS BENEDICT | |
| I mourn as a dove. A (S) ... ... ... ... ... (1/6) | D♯—A |
| Lord is very pitiful, The. F (T) ... ... ... (1/6) | E—G |
| O thou afflicted. D flat (C) ... ... ... ... (1/6) | A♭—D♭ |
| W. STERNDALE BENNETT | |
| His salvation is nigh them that fear Him. G (Bar); B (T) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... (1/6) | D—E |
| O Lord, Thou hast searched me out. F (C) ... ... (1/6) | C—D |
| Whosoever drinketh of this water. E (B) ... ... (1/6) | B—E |
| A. HERBERT BREWER | |
| Virgin's Cradle Song, The. F (M-S) ... ... ... ... | D—F |
| GERARD F. COBB | |
| It came upon the midnight clear (Christmastide). D (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | D—E |
| WILLIAM COENEN | |
| Beyond. D flat (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... ... ... ... | D♭—F |
| Come unto Me. D (C or B); F (M-S or Bar); G (S or T) | C—D |
| Father, forgive them (Lent). F minor (S or T) ... ... | E—F |
| I shall see Thee again. F (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... | E—F |
| Thou wilt remember us. C (C or B); D flat (Bar or M-S); E flat (S or T) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | B—E |
| ANTONIN DVOŘÁK | |
| Inflammatus et Accensus (Latin words only). D minor (C) | A—E |
| EDWARD ELGAR | |
| Angel's Song, The. C (M-S) ... ... ... ... ... (1/6) | D♯—E |
| As a Spirit didst thou pass. E flat (T) ... ... ... | F—A |
| PERCY E. FLETCHER | |
| Hark! hark! my soul! C (C or B); E flat (S or T) ... | A—D |
| MYLES B. FOSTER | |
| O for a closer walk with God. C (M-S or Bar); D (S or T) | C—E |
| ALFRED R. GAUL | |
| Eye hath not seen. G (C); B flat (M-S) ... ... ... (1/6) | B—D |
| Ruth (Entreat me not to leave thee). B flat (M-S or S) (1/6) | C—F |
| CHARLES GOUNOD | |
| Angel hosts descending. F (S or T) ... ... ... ... | C—G |
| Holy Vision, The. D minor (S or T) ... ... ... ... | D—F♯ |
| Jerusalem. A minor (S or T) ... ... ... ... ... | E—B |
| Nazareth. E flat (C or Bar); F (S or T) ... ... (1/6) | B—F |
| Power and Love. A (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... ... | E—F♯ |
| There is a green hill. D (C or B), E (M-S or Bar); F (S or T)... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | C♯—D |
| CARL H. GRAUN | |
| Lo! the heaven-descended prophet. B flat (S) ... ... | E♭—C |

| | Range of Lowest Key. |
|---|---|
| ROBERT KING (Arranged by H. A. Chambers.) | |
| Come, O Thou Traveller unknown. D (C or B); F (M-S or Bar) | C—F |
| CHARLES H. LLOYD | |
| O Father all-creating (Weddings). E (S or T) ... ... | E—G♯ |
| ALEXANDER C. MACKENZIE | |
| Cross and Crown. B flat (S or T) ... ... ... ... | C—G |
| Dormi Jesu (The Virgin's Cradle Hymn) (Latin words only). E (C or M-S) | E—E |
| For lo, the winter is past. B flat and C (T)... ... ... | E—G |
| Lord is my Shepherd, The. G (S) ... ... ... ... | E—G |
| EDWARD J. MARGETSON | |
| Far from my heavenly home. E flat (C or Bar); G (S or T) | B♭—E♭ |
| JOHN H. MAUNDER | |
| O lovely flowers (Harvest). G (C or Bar); A (S or T) ... | B—G |
| BERNHARD MOLIQUE | |
| Pour out thy heart before the Lord. A flat (T) ... (1/-) | E♭—A |
| ALICE A. NEEDHAM | |
| Far from my heavenly home. C minor (C or Bar); D minor (M-S) | C—F |
| HORATIO W. PARKER | |
| Come, Holy Ghost (Whitsun). D (S) ... ... ... | D—G |
| Lo, now the shades of night. A flat (C) ... ... ... | A♭—E♭ |
| Declining now the sun's bright wheel. E flat minor (Bar) | B♭—E♭ |
| C. HUBERT H. PARRY | |
| Ballad of Meshullemeth, The. E flat (C) ... ... ... | B♭—F |
| God breaketh the battle. G (T) ... ... ... ... | D—A |
| Lady! thou Queen of Israel. E flat (S) ... ... ... | D—A♭ |
| Lord is long-suffering, The. (C or M-S) ... ... ... | D—E |
| D. PUGHE-EVANS | |
| Lead, Kindly Light. E flat (C or Bar); F (M-S); G (S or T) | C—E♭ |
| Return unto thy rest. E flat (C or Bar) ... ... ... | B♭—E♭ |
| HENRY PURCELL | |
| Now that the sun (Evening Hymn). E flat (C); G (S) ... | B♭—E♭ |
| J. JOACHIM RAFF | |
| Twilight is gently falling, The (Ave Maria). E flat (S or T) | E♭—A♭ |
| ROLAND ROGERS | |
| Lead, Kindly Light. F (C or Bar) ... ... ... ... | A—F |
| FRANZ SCHUBERT | |
| Litany for All Souls' Day. E flat (C or Bar) ... (1/6) | C—E♭ |
| JOHN STAINER | |
| My Maker and my King. D (S) ... ... ... ... (1/6) | C♯—F♯ |
| ALESSANDRO STRADELLA | |
| O God, have mercy (Pietà Signore). D minor (S or T) ... | D—G |
| ERIC H. THIMAN | |
| Birds, The. C (M-S or Bar); D (S or T) ... ... ... | D—F |
| God of Love my Shepherd is, The. F (C or Bar); A flat (M-S) | A—D |
| In the bleak mid-winter. D (C or Bar); F (S or T) ... | A—E |
| Jesus the very thought of Thee. B flat (C or Bar); D (M-S) | B♭—D |
| My Master hath a garden. F (M-S or Bar); G (S or T) (1/6) | C—F |
| HERBERT W. WAREING | |
| Jesu, Lover of my soul. E flat (M-S or Bar) ... ... | B♭—F |
| H. LANE WILSON | |
| Lord is my Shepherd, The. E flat (C or Bar); F (M-S); A flat (S or T) | B♭—E♭ |

For songs by Bach, Handel, Mendelssohn, &c., see separate lists and catalogues.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

THE ENGLISH COUNTRY DANCE

GRADED SERIES

CONTAINING THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DANCES TOGETHER WITH THE TUNES

BY

CECIL J. SHARP

VOL. 1.
BRIGHTON CAMP.
*GALOPEDE.
*NANCY'S FANCY.
*THE BLACK NAG.
*GATHERING PEASCODS.
*RUFTY TUFTY.

VOL. 2.
RIBBON DANCE.
GODDESSES.
*THE MARY AND DOROTHY.
*IF ALL THE WORLD WERE PAPER.
PICKING UP STICKS.
*HASTE TO THE WEDDING.

VOL. 3.
BONNETS SO BLUE.
THE MAID PEEPED OUT AT THE WINDOW.
CHRISTCHURCH BELLS.
*HEY, BOYS, UP GO WE.
*SELLENGER'S ROUND.
THE MERRY, MERRY MILKMAIDS.

VOL. 4.
SAGE LEAF.
EPPING FOREST.
CHILDGROVE.
*THE OLD MOLE.
HIT AND MISS.
NEWCASTLE.

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS EACH VOLUME.

* The Dances marked with an asterisk may be had for Brass or Military Band.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

TWELVE COUNTRY DANCE TUNES

COLLECTED BY

CECIL J. SHARP

ARRANGED FOR

BRASS OR MILITARY BAND

By GORDON JACOB

IN THREE SETS

PRICE ... ... 4*s.* 6*d.* EACH.

Separate Parts, 3*d.* each.

SET 1.
THE BUTTERFLY
GALOPEDE.
HASTE TO THE WEDDING.
NANCY'S FANCY.

SET 2.
GATHERING PEASCODS.
RUFTY, TUFTY.
HEY BOYS.
THE BLACK NAG.

SET 3.
IF ALL THE WORLD WERE PAPER.
THE OLD MOLE.
SELLENGER'S ROUND.
THE MARY AND DOROTHY.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

JOHN SEBASTIAN BACH

48 PRELUDES AND FUGUES

(THE WELL-TEMPERED CLAVIER)

A NEW EDITION, EDITED BY

HAROLD BROOKE

IN TWO PARTS

Price Four Shillings each

Or, Complete, Cloth, Price Twelve Shillings and Sixpence

ANALYSIS

FOR THE USE OF STUDENTS

BY

FREDERICK ILIFFE

Price Four Shillings and Sixpence; Paper Boards, Five Shillings and Sixpence

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NATIONAL SONGS

WITH

DESCANTS

SET I. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 271

THE BAY OF BISCAY (English)
A HUNTING WE WILL GO (English)
JOHN PEEL (English)
ALL THROUGH THE NIGHT (Welsh)
SCOTS, WHA HAE (Scottish)
THE OAK AND THE ASH (Scottish)
EARLY ONE MORNING (English)
OH, DEAR! WHAT CAN THE MATTER BE? (English)
THE BRITISH GRENADIERS (English)
THE ASH GROVE (Welsh)
GOOD KING WENCESLAS (Traditional)
THE FIRST NOWELL (Traditional)

SET II. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 275

COME LASSES AND LADS (English)
WI' A HUNDRED PIPERS (Scottish)
DAVID OF THE WHITE ROCK (Welsh)
THE YOUNG MAY MOON (Irish)
THE GOLDEN VANITY (English)
THE FLIGHT OF THE EARLS (Irish)

SET III. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 276

MEETING OF THE WATERS (Irish)
THERE'S NAE LUCK (Scottish)
DRINK TO ME ONLY WITH THINE EYES (English)
LET ERIN REMEMBER (IRISH)
THE BAILIFF'S DAUGHTER OF ISLINGTON (English)
THE BELLS OF ABERDOVEY (Welsh)

SET IV. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 307

THE CAMPBELLS ARE COMIN' (Scottish)
IN DERRY VALE (The Londonderry Air) (Irish)
THE AGINCOURT SONG (English)
ANNIE LAURIE (Scottish)
AUTUMN'S GOLDEN LEAF (English)
SILENT, O MOYLE (Irish)
MINE EYES HAVE SEEN (American)
OFT IN THE STILLY NIGHT (Irish)
I SAW THREE SHIPS (Traditional)
SHEPHERDS! SHAKE OFF YOUR DROWSY SLEEP (Traditional)

(PRICE EIGHTPENCE EACH SET)

(Each Song can be had separately.)

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

ORGAN MUSIC

SUITABLE FOR PERFORMANCE AT CINEMAS, ETC.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| J. BENEDICT | | |
| Variations on Arne's "Where the bee sucks" ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| DUDLEY BUCK | | |
| At Evening ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| WALFORD DAVIES | | |
| Solemn Melody ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| EDWARD ELGAR | | |
| Contrasts (The Gavotte) ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| PERCY E. FLETCHER | | |
| Fountain Reverie ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| Matinale ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| EDWARD GERMAN | | |
| Morris Dance (Henry VIII.)... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Shepherds' Dance ,, ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Torch Dance ,, ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| R. G. HAILING | | |
| Chanson de Joie... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| KING HALL | | |
| Canzone ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| ALFRED HOLLINS | | |
| Allegretto Grazioso ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Barcarolle... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Berceuse ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Evening Rest ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| In Springtime ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Intermezzo in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Maytime (Gavotte) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Minuet ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Morning Song ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Spring Song ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| EDWARD J. HORSMAN | | |
| The Curfew ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| BERNARD JOHNSON | | |
| Pavane in A ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| S. KARG-ELERT | | |
| Harmonies du Soir ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| EDWIN H. LEMARE | | |
| Andantino in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Chanson d'Été ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Elegy in G ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Intermezzo in B flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Madrigal ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Minuet Nuptiale ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Pastorale in E ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Reverie in E flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| Romance in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| J. A. MEALE | | |
| Chanson d'Espoir ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| J. RAFF | | |
| Cavatina ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| SCHUBERT | | |
| Ave Maria ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Serenade ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| BERTHOLD TOURS | | |
| Allegretto Grazioso ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Menuetto ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| TSCHAIKOWSKY | | |
| Chanson Triste ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Chant sans Paroles ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Andantino (Symphony No. 4) ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| ERIC WEBSTER | | |
| Berceuse ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| H. DAVAN WETTON | | |
| Andantino in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| H. A. WHEELDON | | |
| Cantilene ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 6 |
| Canzona ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| W. WOLSTENHOLME | | |
| Canzona ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 6 |
| Romanza and Allegretto in E flat ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

TWENTY SHORT AND EASY PIECES

FOR THE ORGAN

SET VI.

| No. | | |
|---|---|---|
| 1. | ADAGIO FROM SEXTETT (OP. 81) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | BEETHOVEN |
| 2. | ALLEGRO GRANDIOSO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | HUGH BLAIR |
| 3. | LARGO IN E FLAT... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | E. BUNNETT |
| 4. | MODERATO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | GEORGE CALKIN |
| 5. | BERCEUSE ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | CÉSAR CUI |
| 6. | ADAGIO IN D ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | OTTO DIENEL |
| 7. | POSTLUDE ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | EDMONDSTOUNE DUNCAN |
| 8. | IMPROMPTU IN A ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | A. M. GOODHART |
| 9. | WEDDING MARCH ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | A. GUILMANT |
| 10. | MARCH FROM "ODE ON ST. CECILIA'S DAY"... ... ... ... ... | HANDEL |
| 11. | LIEDER OHNE WORTE, No. 9 ... ... .. ... ... ... | F. MENDELSSOHN-BARTHOLDY |
| 12. | ALLEGRO IN C ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | GUSTAV MERKEL |
| 13. | ANDANTE ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | REISSIGER |
| 14. | POSTLUDE IN F ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | J. VARLEY ROBERTS |
| 15. | PRELUDE ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | B. LUARD-SELBY |
| 16. | PRELUDE IN A ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | HENRY SMART |
| 17. | ANDANTE CON MOTO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | CHARLES STEGGALL |
| 18. | ALLEGRETTO GRAZIOSO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | BERTHOLD TOURS |
| 19. | COMMUNION IN B FLAT ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | FERRIS TOZER |
| 20. | CON MOTO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | JOHN E. WEST |

PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS.

Cloth, Six Shillings.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NOVELLO'S MUSIC FOR SMALL

| | Full Orchestra. | Small Orchestra. | Full Score. | Piano Conductor. | Violin Conductor. | Piano Solo. | Violin and Piano. | Violin 1mo. | Violin 2do. | Viola. | 'Cello and Basso. | 'Cello. | Basso. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Austin, E., Sweet Night ... ... | ... | 2/- | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 4d. | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... |
| Bendall, Pas Seul ... ... | ... | 7/4 | ... | ... | ... | 1/6 | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. |
| Bennett, Eventide Melody ... | ... | 4/4 | 4/- | ... | ... | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 4d. |
| Blair, Serenata ... ... | ... | 5/4 | ... | ... | 8d. | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. |
| Brewer, Auf Wiedersehen ... | ... | 4/4 | ... | ... | 8d. | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | ... | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. |
| Campbell, Nocturne ... ... | ... | 7/4 | ... | 1/6 | ... | ... | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 4d. | ... | 8d. | 4d. |
| Carse, Barbara Allen Variations | ... | 6/- | ... | 2/3 | ... | ... | ... | 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | ... | ... |
| „ Gavotte in G ... ... | ... | 5/4 | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| Coleridge-Taylor, Waltzes, Four | ... | 19/5 | ... | ... | ... | 4/- | 4/6 | 2/3 | 2/3 | 2/3 | 2/3 | ... | ... |
| „ Hiawatha (Selection from Wedding-Feast)... | ... | 23/9 | ... | 2/3 | ... | ... | ... | 2/3 | 1/6 | 1/6 | ... | 1/6 | 1/6 |
| „ (Nero Music. Prelude, 2nd Entr'acte | 17/- | ... | ... | 3/- | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. |
| „ Intermezzo ... ... | 7/4 | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 4d. |
| „ Finale, 1st Entr'acte | 18/2 | ... | ... | 2/3 | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 1/6 | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. |
| „ Eastern Dance ... ... | 11/8 | ... | ... | 1/6 | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. |
| „ Novelletten, Nos. 1, 2, & 3 ea. | 3/8 | 4/- | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. |
| „ „ No. 4 ... ... | 6/2 | 4/- | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | ... | 8d. | 8d. |
| Cowen, English Dances, Four ... | 22/2 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4/- | 4/6 | 2/3 | 2/3 | 2/3 | 2/3 | ... | ... |
| „ February (Months, No. 2)... | 6/4 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 3/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 4d. | ... | 8d. | 4d. |
| „ May ( „ „ 5)... | 4/- | ... | ... | ... | ... | 3/- | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | 8d. | 4d. |
| „ June ( „ „ 6)... | 4/8 | ... | ... | ... | ... | | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | ... |
| „ September ( „ „ 9)... | 10/- | ... | ... | ... | ... | 3/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. |
| „ November ( „ „ 11)... | 11/10 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 3/- | ... | 1/6 | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. |
| „ December ( „ „ 12)... | 7/8 | ... | ... | ... | ... | | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. |
| „ Menuet d'Amour ... ... | 5/8 | ... | 5/6 | ... | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| Davies, Solemn Melody (str. & org.)... | ... | 2/4 | 3/- | ... | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. |
| Dunhill, Chiddingfold Suite... ... | ... | 9/9 | 7/6 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/3 | 2/3 | 2/3 | ... | 1/6 | 1/6 |
| Elgar, Chanson de Matin ... ... | ... | 4/- | 4/- | 8d. | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. |
| „ Chanson de Nuit ... ... | ... | 3/8 | 4/- | 8d. | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. |
| „ Pleading (Solo parts extra) ... | ... | 3/4 | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... |
| „ Serenade (Wand of Youth) ... | ... | 2/4 | ... | 1/6A | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| „ Canto Popolare ... ... | ... | 6/4 | 4/6 | ... | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 4d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| Fletcher, Bagatelles (strings only) ... | ... | 3/6 | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 1/6 | ... | ... |
| „ The Toy Soldiers' March... | ... | 8/- | ... | ... | 8d. | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| „ Valse Lyrique ... ... | ... | 9/6 | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| Gounod, There is a green hill ... | 4/8 | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... |
| Handel, Dance of Sailors ... ... | 7/8 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 1/6 | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| Haynes, Westwood Gavotte ... ... | ... | 6/4 | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| Holbrooke, Souvenir de Printemps ... | ... | 4/4 | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| Ireland, Bagatelle ... ... ... | ... | 7/8 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| Johnson, Elves (Faerie Suite, No. 1)... | ... | 8/- | ... | 1/6 | ... | 3/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. |
| „ Pavane in A ... ... ... | ... | 6/8 | ... | 8d. | ... | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| Kreuz, Conversation Amoureuse ... | ... | 6/10 | ... | 1/6 | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 1/6 | ... | ... |
| Lemare, Andantino ... ... ... | ... | 5/8 | ... | 1/6 | ... | ... | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| „ Chant sans Paroles ... ... | ... | 5/- | ... | ... | 8d. | 2/- | 2/- | 4d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. |
| „ Menuet Nuptiale ... ... | ... | 4/4 | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| Mackenzie, Benedictus ... ... | 4/8 | ... | 7/6 | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 8d.A | A | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| Purcell, Gordian Knot Untied, 1st and 2nd Suites ... each | ... | 2/8 | 4/- | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| „ Suite ... ... ... | ... | 2/8 | 1/6 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| „ The Virtuous Wife (Incidental Music) | ... | ... | 4/- | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| Rameau, Gavotte ... ... ... | 6/- | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| Rawlinson, Serenade ... ... ... | ... | 3/8 | ... | ... | 8d. | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| „ Aubade ... ... ... | ... | 6/- | ... | ... | 8d. | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| Reed, Serenade (Suite Venitienne) ... | ... | 4/8 | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| Roeckel, Graceful Dance ... ... | 6/8 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| Rowley, Andante Religioso in $\frac{7}{4}$ time | ... | 2/8 | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. |
| Waddington, Intermezzo ... ... | ... | 7/4 | ... | 1/6 | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. |
| Wareing, Summergold Gavotte ... | 7/4 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| Wendt, Air de Ballet ... ... ... | 7/4 | ... | ... | 1/6 | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. |
| West, Intermezzo ... ... ... | ... | 5/- | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| „ Marjorie Gavotte ... ... | 5/8 | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |
| „ Maypole Dance... ... ... | 14/- | ... | ... | 2/3 | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. |
| Wolstenholme, Allegretto in E♭ | 6/- | ... | ... | ... | ... | 2/- | 2/- | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... |

N.B.—Parts marked A, B, C, D, E, or F, are printed together.

ORCHESTRAS. Suitable for CINEMAS, &c.

| Oboi. | Clarinetti. | Fagotti. | Corni 1 & 2. | Corni 3 & 4. | Trombe. | Cornetti. | Tromboni 1 and 2. | Trombone 3. | Euphonium. | Tuba. | Timpani. | Cassa. | Piatti. | Side Drum. | Triangle. | Tambourine. | Harp. | Solo-Corne or Euphonium. | Organ or Harmonium. | Harp or Piano. | Bells. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | 8d. | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | 8d. | ... | ... |
| ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | 4d.A | ... | ... | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 1/6 | 2/3 | 1/6 | 1/6 | ... | 1/6 | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 1/6 | 2/3 | 2/3 | 2/3 | ... | 1/6 | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 1/6 | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d.A | A | A | A | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d.B | B | 4d. | B | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | .. |
| †8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 8d.A | 8d.B | B | A | 4d.C | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | C |
| ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d.A | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d.A | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 1/6 | 3/- | 1/6 | 1/6 | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | 8d.A | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | 4d.A | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. | ... | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | 4d. | ... | 4d. |
| 4d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... |
| ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... |
| ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... |
| 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... |
| ... | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... |
| ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d.B | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | 8d. | ... | B | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d.C | C | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 1/6 | ... |
| D | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d.E | ... | E | 4d.F | F | ... | ... | F | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | 8d. | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | 4dA. | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | 4d.A | ... | ... | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d.A | ... | ... | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | 4d.A | ... | ... | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d.A | ... | ... | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... |
| ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | 4d.A | ... | ... | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | 4d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 4d. | 8d. | 4d. | 8d. | ... | ... | 4d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | 4d.A | ... | ... | ... | A | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 1/6 | 1/6 | 1/6 | 8d. | ... | ... | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | 8d. | 8d.A | ... | ... | ... | A | 8d | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |
| 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | 8d. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |

† Oboe has the Melody. X Flute has the Melody. § May be had as a complete Suite.

SOLOS FROM THE CHURCH CANTATAS

BY

JOHN SEBASTIAN BACH

In Twelve Books—each Book, One Shilling and Sixpence

FIRST SET

SOPRANO

Air — WITHIN MY HEART OF HEARTS ("A Stronghold Sure").
Air — OUR JESUS HATH FOR AYE ("God goeth up").
Air — MY HEART EVER TRUSTING ("God so loved the world").
Air — O GRANT US, MIGHTY LORD ("Jesus, now will we praise Thee").
Air — SIGHING, WEEPING ("My spirit was in heaviness").

ALTO

Air — THOU, WHOSE PRAISES NEVER END ("Bide with us").
Recit. — THE FATHER HATH APPOINTED HIM ("God goeth up").
Air — MY SPIRIT HIM DESCRIES ("God goeth up").
Air — INTO THY HANDS ("God's time is best").
Air — REJOICE, YE SOULS, ELECT AND HOLY ("O Light Everlasting").

TENOR

Air — LORD, TO US THYSELF BE SHOWING ("Bide with us").
Recit. — WHY HAST THOU THEN ("My Spirit was in heaviness")
Air — FAST MY BITTER TEARS " " "
Air — REJOICE, O MY SPIRIT " " "
Recit. — THE MIGHTY GUARDIAN ("Thou Guide of Israel").
Air — HIS FACE MY SHEPHERD " " "
Air — AND WHY ART THOU, MY SOUL ("When will God recall")

BASS

Recit. — HE COMES, THE LORD OF LORDS ("God goeth up").
Air — 'TIS HE, WHO ALL ALONE ("God goeth up").
Recit. — IT IS NOT MINE ("God so loved the world").
Air — ON MY BEHALF " " "
Recit. — YEA, THIS THY WORD ("Thou Guide of Israel").
Air — WHOM JESUS DEIGNS " "
Air — YET SILENCE ("When will God recall").

SECOND SET

SOPRANO

Air — OPEN WIDE, MY HEART ("Come, Redeemer").
Air — FATHER, WHAT I PROFFER ("Give the hungry man thy bread").
Air — COME, VISIT, YE GLOWING ("How brightly shines").
Air — I HAVE WAITED FOR THE LORD ("If thou but sufferest").

ALTO

Air — GOD'S ENSAMPLE THUS TO FOLLOW ("Give the hungry man thy bread").
Air — JESUS SLEEPS ("Jesus sleeps, what hope remaineth").
Recit. — INCLINE THINE EAR ("Lord, rebuke me not").
Air — THE LORD HATH HEARD ("Lord, rebuke me not").
Air — ALL EARTHLY POWERS FROM GOD INHERIT ("Praise thou the Lord").

TENOR

Recit. — THE SAVIOUR NOW APPEARETH ("Come, Redeemer").
Air — COME, JESU, COME ("Come, Redeemer").
Air — WHAT VOICE IS WITH THE TEMPEST ("From depths of woe").
Air — TUNEFUL HARPS AND VOICES ("How brightly shines").
Air — THOU ART MY GOD ("Lord, rebuke me not").

BASS

Air — THE PASCHAL VICTIM HERE WE SEE ("Christ lay in death's dark prison").
Air — DO THINE ALMS ("Give the hungry man thy bread").
Air — WITH JESUS WILL I GO ("Wailing, crying").
Recit. — AH; WHEN ON THAT GREAT DAY ("Watch ye, pray ye").
Air — BLESSED RESURRECTION DAY " "

THIRD SET

SOPRANO

Recit. — O LORD, HEAR ME WHEN I CALL ("Lord, rebuke me not").
Air — HOW LONG, O LORD " "
Air — O PRAISE THE LORD ("O Praise the Lord").
Recit. — O JESU, OUR REDEEMER ("There is nought of soundness").
Air — HEARKEN WHEN WITH TREMBLING ACCENTS " "
Air — THOUGH REVILING TONGUES ASSAIL ME ("Watch ye, pray ye").

ALTO

Air — BE WELCOME, THOU GREAT ANGEL ("O teach me, Lord").
Air — AH, TARRY YET ("Praise our God").
Air — GOD IS EVER SUN AND SHIELD ("The Lord is a sun and shield").
Recit. — BE STEADFAST IN AFFLICTION ("Wailing, crying").
Air — PAIN AND SORROW WORK SALVATION " "

TENOR

Recit. — LORD, WHY SO FAR AWAY ("Jesus sleeps").
Air — IN BILLOWS THE RIVERS OF BELIAL ("Jesus sleeps").
Recit. — O HAPPY TOWN, O FAVOURED LAND ("Praise thou the Lord").
Air — O BLEST ARE ALL THAT FEAR HIM " " "
Recit. — REJECT IT NOT ("Sages of Sheba").
Air — SAVIOUR, TAKE ME FOR THINE OWN ("Sages of Sheba").
Air — UPLIFT YOUR HEADS ON HIGH ("Watch ye, pray ye").

BASS

Air — GOD, WHOSE POWER ("Let songs of rejoicing").
Recit. — ALTHOUGH AN HOST ENCAMP ("Lord, rebuke me not").
Air — O LORD, THY MERCY " "
Air — FARE YE WELL ("O teach me, Lord").
Recit. — THESE THINGS THAT ISAIAH OF OLD ("The Sages of Sheba").
Air — GOLD OF OPHIR IS BUT VAIN " "
Air — AH, WHERE SHALL I SUCCOUR ("There is nought of soundness").

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

INSTRUCTION BOOKS FOR THE VOICE

GUSTAV GARCIA
A GUIDE TO SOLO SINGING
Price 3s.; Paper Boards, 4s.

H. H. HULBERT
BREATHING FOR VOICE-PRODUCTION
Price 3s.; Paper Boards, 4s.

AGNES J. LARKCOM
THE SINGER'S ART
Price 1s. 6d.

RICHARD MANN
A MANUAL OF SINGING
Price 1s. 6d.

MARGARET NICHOLLS
SCHOOL CHOIR TRAINING
Price 3s.

ALBERTO RANDEGGER
SINGING
Price 6s.; Paper Boards, 7s.

J. STOCKHAUSEN
METHOD OF SINGING
Price 6s.; Paper Boards, 7s.

D. C. TAYLOR
SELF-HELP FOR SINGERS
Price 2s. 6d.; Paper Boards, 3s. 6d.

VOCAL EXERCISES FOR ALL VOICES
WITH MARKS OF EXPRESSION AND PHRASING.
BY
ALBERTO RANDEGGER

MARCO BORDOGNI
TWENTY-FOUR VOCAL EXERCISES
For Mezzo-Soprano
Price 2s. 6d.

CONCONE
50 Lessons for the Medium Part of the Voice.
25 Lessons. A Sequel to the Fifty Lessons for the Medium Part of the Voice.
15 Vocalises. A Sequel to the Twenty-five Lessons for the Medium Part of the Voice.
Ditto. For Mezzo-Soprano or Contralto.
40 Lessons for Contralto.
40 Lessons for Bass or Baritone.
Price 2s. 6d. each.

AUGUSTE PANSERON
FORTY MELODIC AND PROGRESSIVE VOCAL EXERCISES
For Soprano and Tenor
IN TWO PARTS.
Part I. Containing Nos. 1 to 26. Part II. Containing Nos. 27 to 40.
Price 3s. each Part.

FORTY-TWO MELODIC AND PROGRESSIVE VOCAL EXERCISES
For Contralto, Baritone, or Bass
IN TWO PARTS.
Part I. Containing Nos. 1 to 29. Part II. Containing Nos. 30 to 42.
Price 3s. each Part.

FIFTY VOCALISES FOR TWO VOICES
Soprano and Mezzo-Soprano, or Tenor and Soprano, or Tenor and Baritone.
IN TWO PARTS.
Part I. Containing Nos. 1 to 30. Part II. Containing Nos. 31 to 50.
Price 3s. each Part.

PROGRESSIVE STUDIES FOR THE VOICE
WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT
BY
GEORG HENSCHEL

PART I. STUDIES IN SUSTAINED SINGING | PART II. STUDIES IN FLORAL SINGING
Each Part published for High, Medium, or Low Voice.
Price 4s. each.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

A MODERN SCHOOL FOR THE VIOLIN

BY

AUGUST WILHELMJ AND JAMES BROWN

THE purpose of this Work is to provide, in one systematic and comprehensive scheme, all that is necessary for the acquirement of the Art of Modern Violin Playing.

"A Modern School for the Violin" consists of Six Books devoted to Daily Technical Practice, Six Books of Studies for Violin alone, and a number of Pieces with Pianoforte Accompaniment, the Violin parts being specially edited for the purposes of teaching.

SECTION A.—TECHNICAL PRACTICE. IN SIX BOOKS.

The foundation of "A Modern School for the Violin" is laid by means of a series of Six Books dealing exclusively with the important subject of DAILY TECHNICAL PRACTICE. The First Book of Technical Practice (Book 1A) is limited to the 1st Position; the Second Book (2A) to the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Positions; the Third Book (3A) to the first five Positions; and so on. Bowings and other technical devices are introduced in a similarly progressive manner throughout. Each Book of Technical Practice is divided into "Lessons" (or Chapters), and each Lesson contains a number of short repeating Exercises on some definite point of Violin Technique—as Fingering, Bowing, &c., with the needful explanations. Included in each Book will be found a complete set of Scales and Arpeggi, arranged according to the particular stage of advancement reached.

Taken as a whole, this section is intended to facilitate, and to insist on, a thorough, steady, and continuous progress in the mastery of the Instrument, this being the only possible means of preparing the groundwork for artistic achievement with all its lasting delights.

SECTION B.—STUDIES. IN SIX BOOKS.

Section B is formed of a series of original and selected Studies, in Six Books. Each Book of Studies (Section B) is carefully co-ordinated, in respect of difficulty and range of subject, with the correspondingly numbered Book of Technical Practice (Section A). Thus the First Book of Studies (1B) is written in the 1st Position; the Second Book (2B) in the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Positions; the 3rd Book (3B) in all Positions up to and including the 5th; and so on. It should further be explained that the two Sections are designed to complement one another, and that the "School" must be practised, not in single Books of Technical Practice and Studies alternately, but in pairs. Thus, Books 1A and 1B are to be taken concurrently, then Books 2A and 2B, 3A and 3B, and so on, and the appropriate pairs are now issued bound together in cloth (see Cloth Bindings below).

| | | s. | d. | | | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1A. | TECHNICAL PRACTICE (1st Position) | 3 | 0 | 1B. | STUDIES ... ... ... (1st Position) | 3 | 0 |
| 2A. | DITTO (1st, 2nd, and 3rd Positions) | 3 | 0 | 2B. | DITTO ... (1st, 2nd, and 3rd Positions) | 4 | 0 |
| 3A. | DITTO ... (1st to 5th Position) | 4 | 6 | 3B. | DITTO ... ... (1st to 5th Position) | 4 | 6 |
| 4A. | DITTO ... .... (all Positions) | 4 | 0 | 4B. | DITTO ... ... ... (all Positions) | 4 | 6 |
| 5A. | DITTO ... ... ... Do. | 4 | 0 | 5B. | DITTO ... ... ... Do. | 4 | 6 |
| 6A. | DITTO ... ... ... Do. | 4 | 6 | 6B. | DITTO ... ... ... Do. | 4 | 6 |

CLOTH BINDINGS.

| | | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Book 1. | (1A and 1B, bound together) in Cloth ... ... ... ... | 7 | 6 |
| ,, 2. | (2A and 2B, bound together) Do. ... ... ... ... | 8 | 6 |
| ,, 3. | (3A and 3B, bound together) Do. ... ... ... ... | 10 | 6 |
| ,, 4. | (4A and 4B, bound together) Do. ... ... ... ... | 10 | 0 |
| ,, 5. | (5A and 5B, bound together) Do. ... ... ... ... | 10 | 0 |
| ,, 6. | (6A and 6B, bound together) Do. ... ... ... ... | 10 | 6 |

PIECES.

In completion of the scheme of "A Modern School" a number of Pieces are published, in a form designed to fulfil the requirements of Violin Teachers and Students. In each number the Violin part is furnished with complete Fingerings and Bowings, besides remarks as to the methods of rendering, &c.

| | | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| No. 13. | TWELVE FOLK DANCES FROM DENMARK (1st Position) | 3 | 0 |
| No. 14. | SONATA IN G MINOR. G. TARTINI (All Positions) | 3 | 0 |
| No. 15. | OVERTURE TO SAMSON. G. F. HANDEL (1st, 2nd, and 3rd Positions) | 3 | 0 |
| No. 16. | SONATINA IN D. FRANZ SCHUBERT (1st, 2nd, and 3rd Positions) | 3 | 0 |
| No. 17. | EIGHT HYMN TUNES. VARIOUS COMPOSERS (1st Position). | 2 | 0 |
| No. 18. | STYRIAN DANCES (LANDLER) (Op. 165). JOSEF LANNER (1st to 5th Position) | 3 | 0 |
| No. 19. | PRELUDE AND FUGUE IN G MINOR. J. S. BACH (Advanced) | 3 | 0 |
| No. 20. | SONATA IN G (No 8). JOSEPH HAYDN (1st to 6th Position) | 3 | 0 |
| No. 21. | CONCERTO IN A MINOR. J. S. BACH (1st to 6th Position) | 3 | 0 |
| No. 22. | CONCERTO IN A MINOR. PIERRE RODE (Op. 9). (All Positions) | 3 | 6 |
| No. 23. | TWELVE CAROLS ... ... ... (1st Position) | 3 | 0 |
| No. 24. | SONATA IN A (KÖCHEL, No. 305). W. A. MOZART (1st to 5th Position | 3 | 0 |
| No. 25. | RÊVERIE. HENRI VIEUXTEMPS (Op. 22, No. 3). (Advanced) | 3 | 0 |
| No. 26. | FOUR LITTLE PIECES (From Op. 8). IGNAZ PLEYEL (1st Position) | 3 | 0 |
| No. 27. | SARABANDE AND TAMBOURIN. JEAN-MARIE LECLAIR (1st to 5th Position) | 3 | 0 |
| No. 28. | BOURRÉE AND GIGUE. J. S. BACH (1st and 3rd Positions) | 2 | 0 |
| No. 29. | BALLADE AND POLONAISE. HENRI VIEUXTEMPS (Op. 38). (Advanced) | 3 | 0 |

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NOVELLO'S
POPULAR PIANOFORTE ALBUMS
FOR YOUNG PERFORMERS.

HUBERT BATH
DOLL'S-HOUSE SUITE
Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

FRANCESCO BERGER
EIGHTEEN LITTLE PIECES
Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

J. D. DAVIS.
FOUR LITTLE PIECES
Price Two Shillings.

EDMONDSTOUNE DUNCAN
HAPPY THOUGHTS
Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

ARNOLD KRUG
TEN LITTLE PIECES
Op. 109.
In two Books. Price Two Shillings each.

ARNOLD KRUG
SCENES FROM FAIRY-LAND
In two Books. Price Two Shillings and Sixpence each.

TH. KULLAK
TWENTY-FOUR PIECES
Opp. 62 and 81.
In four Books. Price One Shilling and Sixpence each.

MAX MAYER
BAGATELLES
Price Four Shillings.

MENDELSSOHN
SIX CHRISTMAS PIECES
Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

ERNEST NEWTON
WOODLAND DANCES
Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

ERNEST NEWTON
ROMANY LIFE
Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

HUBERT G. OKE
THREE PIECES
Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

SCHUMANN
PIECES FOR THE YOUNG
Part I., Price 1*s.* 6*d.* ; Part II., Price 1*s.* 6*d.*

SCHUMANN
THREE PIANOFORTE SONATAS
(Part III. of Pieces for the Young).
Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

CLEMENT M. SPURLING
SIX SHORT AND EASY PIECES
Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.

CLEMENT M. SPURLING
OUR VILLAGE IN SUMMER
Price Two Shillings.

E. A. SYDENHAM
SIX SHORT AND EASY PIECES
Price Two Shillings.

TSCHAIKOWSKY
CHRISTMAS ALBUM
In three Books. Price One Shilling and Sixpence each.

FRANCESCO BERGER
FIRST STEPS AT THE PIANOFORTE
PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

PROGRESSIVE STUDIES

FOR THE PIANOFORTE.

EDITED, ARRANGED IN GROUPS, AND THE FINGERING REVISED AND SUPPLEMENTED BY

FRANKLIN TAYLOR

THIS Collection of Studies is intended to illustrate the various elements of a complete course of pianoforte technique, and to provide students with the means of attacking and overcoming the different special difficulties which have to be encountered. With this view, the Studies have been arranged in groups, those in each group being placed in progressive order, and having reference to some one particular difficulty. The greater part of the Studies themselves have been selected from the standard works of the most eminent Study-writers, and with these are included numerous others, which, though of equally great practical utility, have hitherto been less generally accessible.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 1. | FIVE-FINGER STUDIES... ... ... | Part I |
| 2.* | ,, ,, ... ... ... | ,, 2 |
| 3. | SCALES ... ... ... ... | Part I |
| 4. | ,, ... ... ... ... ... | ,, 2 |
| 5. | BROKEN CHORDS... ... ... ... | Part I |
| 6. | ,, ,, ... ... ... ... | ,, 2 |
| 7. | ,, ,, ... ... ... ... | ,, 3 |
| 8. | ,, ,, ... ... ... ... | ,, 4 |
| 9. | ,, ,, ... ... ... ... | ,, 5 |
| 10. | LEFT HAND... ... ... ... ... | Part I |
| 11. | ,, ,, ... ... ... ... | ,, 2 |
| 12. | ,, ,, ... ... ... ... | ,, 3 |
| 13. | ,, ,, ... ... ... ... | ,, 4 |
| 14.* | ARPEGGIO ... ... ... ... | Part I |
| 15. | ,, ... ... ... ... ... | ,, 2 |
| 16. | ,, ... ... ... ... ... | ,, 3 |
| 17. | VELOCITY ... ... ... ... ... | Part I |
| 18. | ,, ... ... ... ... ... | ,, 2 |
| 19. | ,, ... ... ... ... ... | ,, 3 |
| 20. | ,, ... ... ... ... ... | ,, 4 |
| 21. | ,, ... ... ... ... ... | ,, 5 |
| 22. | ,, ... ... ... ... ... | ,, 6 |
| 23. | ,, ... ... ... ... ... | ,, 7 |
| 24. | FIGURES IN SEQUENCE ... ... | Part I |
| 25.* | ,, ,, ... ... | ,, 2 |
| 26. | BROKEN THIRDS, SIXTHS, AND OCTAVES ... ... ... ... ... | Part I |
| 27. | BROKEN THIRDS, SIXTHS, AND OCTAVES ... ... ... ... | ,, 2 |
| 28. | SHAKES ... ... ... ... ... | Part I |
| 29. | ,, ... ... ... ... ... | ,, 2 |
| 30. | ,, ... ... ... ... ... | ,, 3 |
| 31. | DOUBLE NOTES ... ... ... ... | Part I |
| 32. | ,, ,, ... ... ... ... | ,, 2 |
| 33. | ,, ,, ... ... ... ... | ,, 3 |
| 34. | ,, ,, ... ... ... ... | ,, 4 |
| 35. | OCTAVES ... ... ... ... ... | Part I |
| 36.* | ,, ... ... ... ... ... | ,, 2 |
| 37. | CHORDS ... ... ... ... ... | Part I |
| 38. | ,, ... ... ... ... ... | ,, 2 |
| 39.* | STACCATO | |
| 40. | REPETITION ... ... ... ... | Part I |
| 41.* | REPETITION AND TREMOLO ... ... | ,, I |
| 42. | ,, ,, ... ... | ,, 2 |
| 43.* | PART-PLAYING ... ... ... ... | Part I |
| 44. | ,, ,, ... ... ... ... | ,, 2 |
| 45.* | ORNAMENTS ... ... ... ... | Part I |
| 46. | ,, ... ... ... ... | ,, 2 |
| 47. | ACCOMPANIED MELODY ... ... | Part I |
| 48. | ,, ,, ... ... | ,, 2 |
| 49. | EXTENSIONS AND SKIPS ... ... | Part I |
| 50.* | ,, ,, ... ... | ,, 2 |
| 51. | RHYTHM ... ... ... ... ... | Part I |
| 52.* | ,, ... ... ... ... ... | ,, 2 |
| 53. | EXERCISES FOR THE WEAKER FINGERS. By J. A. O'NEILL. | |
| 54. | WRIST STUDIES (Handgelenksübungen). By ARNOLD KRUG. | |
| 55. | EXERCISES FOR FACILITATING INDEPENDENCE OF THE FINGERS (Übungen für die Selbständigkeit der Finger). By ARNOLD KRUG. | |
| 56. | PRELIMINARY STUDIES IN PLAYING POLYPHONIC MUSIC (Vorübungen für das polyphone Spiel). By ARNOLD KRUG. | |

* These Books contain Studies composed by Mr. Franklin Taylor specially for this Series.

FIFTY-SIX BOOKS, PRICE TWO SHILLINGS EACH.

FROM THE ABOVE:

SELECTED PIANOFORTE STUDIES

PROGRESSIVELY ARRANGED BY

FRANKLIN TAYLOR

THE present collection of Studies is designed to provide teachers with a short course of Pianoforte Technique adapted to the needs of the average pupil, the intention being to spare the teacher the labour of choosing a sufficiently varied selection from the large mass of material existing, and at the same time to ensure that the different departments of technique shall be undertaken in the order which experience has proved to be the most beneficial.

The Studies are grouped in two Sets, and are so arranged that the different Books in which they are contained may be taken in consecutive order, but pupils who are already further advanced than the elementary stage represented by Set I. may commence at once with Set II., which will be found to be complete in itself, and to illustrate all the essential elements of technique.

Where additional studies are desired, or studies on certain subjects which are not touched upon in this series, the larger collection published under the title of "Progressive Studies" (from which the present examples have been selected), is of course available.

IN TWO SETS (EIGHT BOOKS), PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE EACH BOOK

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NOVELLO'S ELEMENTARY MUSIC MANUALS

No.

1.—PART-WRITING FOR BEGINNERS, by J. W. Ivimey. The Rules tabulated are for the guidance of beginners in the Art of Part-writing. Many of them change from rules to recommendations, when the students become more advanced. Bound in linen covers. Price 8d.

2.—LESSONS IN HARMONIZING MELODIES, by Cuthbert Harris. Many elementary students of harmony can satisfactorily add parts to figured basses, but are unable to harmonize even simple melodies. This book gives minute instruction which any student can understand. Part I. Price 2s. 6d.

3.—AN ELEMENTARY MIXED-VOICE SIGHT-SINGING COURSE (Staff Notation through Tonic Sol-fa), by George Lane. The Exercises are written in the Treble and Bass Clefs, in order that the Book may be used by Male and Female voices in one class. Suitable for Evening Continuation Schools. Part I. Price 8d.

4.—AN ELEMENTARY MIXED-VOICE SIGHT-SINGING COURSE (Staff Notation through Tonic Sol-fa). by George Lane. Part II. Price 8d.

5.—HINTS TO YOUNG VIOLINISTS, by C. Egerton Lowe. Price 1s. 6d.

6.—LESSONS IN HARMONIZING MELODIES, by Cuthbert Harris. Part II. Price 2s. 6d.

7.—ADDITIONAL EXERCISES IN HARMONIZING MELODIES, by Cuthbert Harris. Price 8d.

8.—HINTS ON PIANOFORTE TEACHING (chiefly to Boys), by E. D. Rendall. Price 2s. 6d.

9.—SCHOOL CHOIR TRAINING, by Margaret Nicholls. A Practical Course of Lessons on Voice Production for the guidance of Teachers of Class Singing. Price 3s.
(The Appendix, published separately: Hints on Part-Singing and Exercises, 3d.; Sol-fa, 3d.)

10.—THE COMPOSITION OF SIMPLE MELODIES, by Robert T. White. Price 2s. 6d.

11.—PHYSICAL EXERCISES IN THE INFANT SCHOOL, by Margaret A. Hughes. Price 4s. 6d.

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

TECHNIQUE AND EXPRESSION IN PIANOFORTE PLAYING BY FRANKLIN TAYLOR.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

In the course of my experience as a teacher of the pianoforte, an experience extending over many years, certain ideas have from time to time suggested themselves to me which have proved useful—to myself, as enabling me to express more clearly that which I desired my pupils to understand, and to my pupils, as tending to facilitate their comprehension of the various difficulties they have had to encounter, at the same time leading them to perceive the most practical means of overcoming them, and thus accelerating their general rate of progress.

These suggestions relate to both the mechanical and intellectual sides of the study of pianoforte-playing, or briefly, to Technique and Expression, the chief matters implied by the first of these terms being the production of various qualities of tone, the choice of suitable fingering, and the best methods of attacking certain difficulties; while the second, which may perhaps be more aptly designated the means of expression, includes rhythm, phrasing, variety and gradation of tone, the use of the pedals, et cætera.

WITH NUMEROUS MUSICAL EXAMPLES FROM THE WORKS OF THE GREAT MASTERS.

Price, Cloth Gilt, Seven Shillings and Sixpence Net.

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

Parcels of Piano or Organ Music.

Having just purchased a Music Library in which a very large selection of Piano and Organ Music is included, we have decided to make the following offer to readers of the Musical Times:—We will send a Bargain Parcel of 12 pieces of Piano or Organ Music for 3*s*. (Piano) or 4*s*. (Organ), post free in U.K. State whether Piano or Organ is desired. Every parcel will give satisfaction. Lists of the Music are not available.

Quote Offer 122/BP.

FOYLE'S MUSIC DEPT.,
119, Charing Cross Road, London, W.C.2.

FOREIGN MUSIC

If you have any difficulty in obtaining Foreign Music, we invite you to send your inquiries to us. Our Foreign Department holds a large and comprehensive stock of foreign editions, including those of André, Choudens, Costallat, Durand, Heugel, Hug, Hamelle, Leduc, Lemoine, Schlesinger, Simon, Zimmermann, and many others of equal note.

Certain catalogues and list are available, and will be sent on application.

The comprehensive nature of our stock will be judged by the following list:

PIANOFORTE

Solos, duets, &c., transcriptions and arrangements of all kinds.

VOCAL

Operatic, concert, and classical solos, duets, glees, exercises, vocal scores of operas, oratorios, &c., and orchestral parts.

ORGAN

Original compositions, transcriptions, and arrangements, in volumes and separately.

HARMONIUM

Duos, trios, quartets, transcriptions, &c.

INSTRUMENTAL

Solos, duets, trios, quartets, &c.

ORCHESTRAL

Scores and parts, miniature scores, pianoforte arrangements, studies, exercises, &c., for all instruments.

Inquiries for little-known or unknown works will be welcomed, and any compositions not in stock can be obtained at short notice.

When writing please state which of the above sections is of interest to you.

SCHUBERT CENTENARY

Messrs. Novello have in stock certain of the 21 folio volumes of Schubert's works, forming the Complete Edition as published by Breitkopf & Härtel. List and prices will be sent on application.

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

CHAPPELL & Co.'s
LATEST SONG SUCCESSES

FOR ALL VOICES

BIRD SONGS AT EVENTIDE
G (D-E), B flat ... ... ... Eric Coates

BIRDS IN THE NEST
D (B-E), F ... ... ... Nicholas Choveaux

LITTLE LADY OF THE MOON
E flat (B flat-E flat), F, G ... ... Eric Coates

I THINK OF YOU, MY SWEET
F (C-D), A flat ... ... ... Haydn Wood

BELOVED, I SHALL WAIT
D flat (C-D flat), E flat, F ... ... Guy d'Hardelot

FLOW'R OF THE DESERT
C (C-E), D ... ... ... ... Hermann Löhr

SUNDAY
D (A-D sharp), F ... ... ... Molly Carew

A GARDEN IS A LOVESOME THING
A (C sharp-D sharp), C ... ... Teresa del Riego

ONE HOUR
D (B-D), F, G ... ... ... Ernest Longstaffe

TREES
C (A-E), D, F ... ... ... Oscar Rasbach

FOR SOPRANOS AND MEZZOS

THE TIME OF ROSES
C mi. (D-E), D mi., E mi. ... Roger Quilter

LOVE, THE JESTER
F mi. (B-F) G mi., A mi. ... Montague Phillips

SUN-FLAKES
F (C-F), G ... ... ... Montague Phillips

THE FIDDLER OF JUNE
B flat (B flat-F), C, D ... ... Leslie Elliott

FOR BARITONES AND BASSES

THE HAPPY MAN
B flat (A-D), C ... ... Thomas F. Dunhill

ARCHIE OF THE ROYAL AIR FORCE
E flat (B flat-E flat), F ... ... Ernest Longstaffe

HINTON AND DINTON AND MERE
C (C-D), D ... ... ... John C. Holliday

THE PRIDE OF TIPPERARY
C (C-D), D, F ... ... ... A. Lochhead

The compass of the first key is given in brackets.
Price 2/- net each (by post 2/1).

CHAPPELL & CO., Ltd., 50, New Bond Street, London, W.1.
AND MAY BE HAD OF ALL MUSIC SELLERS

THE CHESTER MUSIC LENDING LIBRARY

THE MOST COMPREHENSIVE LIBRARY OF

MODERN MUSIC

IN EXISTENCE.

CONCERTOS. VOCAL SCORES. PIANO SCORES. SONGS. PIECES FOR SOLO INSTRUMENTS WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT. PIANO SOLOS. PIANO DUETS.

Also a

CHAMBER MUSIC SECTION

which includes the CLASSICS.

A subscriber writes:

"I would like to thank you for the courtesy shown and for the great benefit and usefulness obtained from the Library."—W. E. D.

Full details, terms, &c., will be forwarded on application to:

J. & W. CHESTER, Ltd., 11, Gt. Marlborough St., London, W.1.

London:—Printed by Novello and Company, Limited, at Novello Works, Soho, and published at 160, Wardour Street, Soho, W.1. Wednesday, August 1, 1928.

The Musical Times | EXTRA SUPPLEMENT. | August 1, 1928
No. 1154 | NOVELLO'S OCTAVO ANTHEMS | Price (4d.)

O WORSHIP THE KING

ANTHEM FOR HARVEST AND GENERAL USE

WORDS BY SIR R. GRANT

MUSIC BY

ERNEST BULLOCK

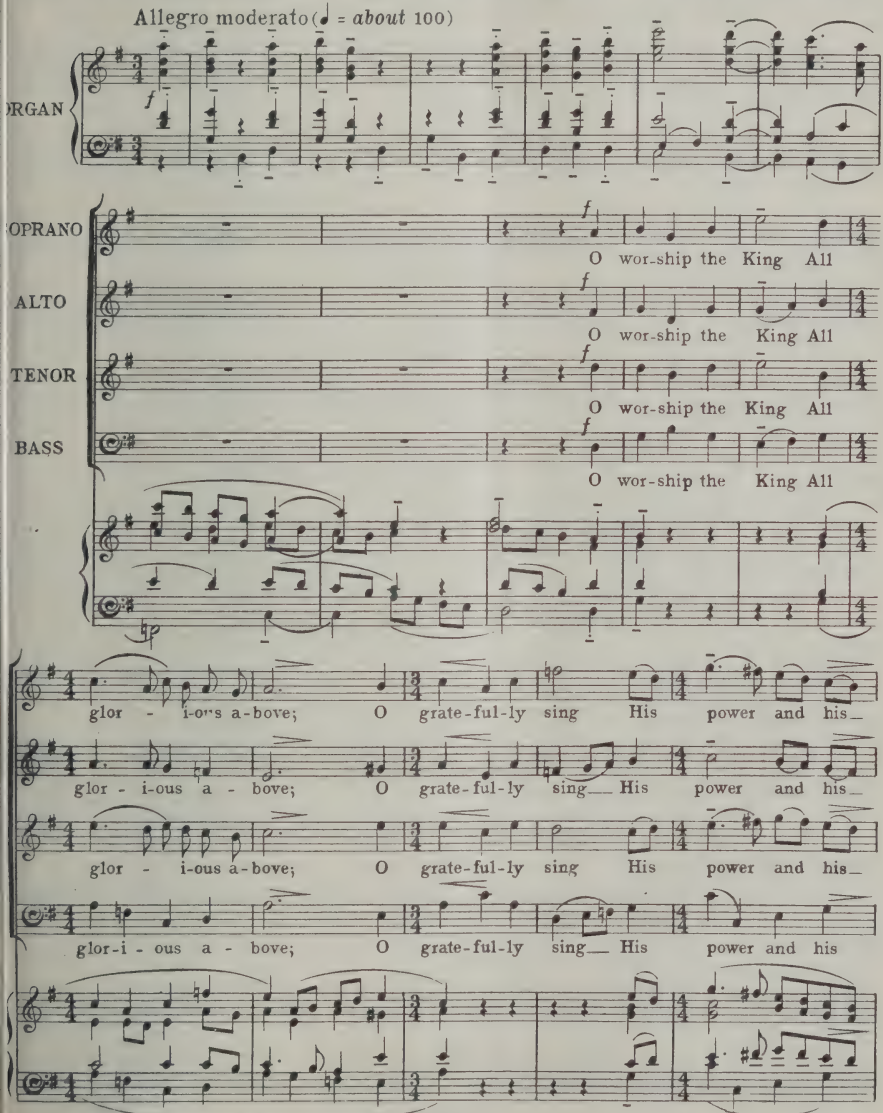
London: NOVELLO & COMPANY, Limited; New York: The H. W. GRAY Co., Sole Agents for the U.S.A.



Allegro moderato (♩ = about 100)
ORGAN
SOPRANO
O wor-ship the King All
ALTO
O wor-ship the King All
TENOR
O wor-ship the King All
BASS
O wor-ship the King All
glor - i-ous a-bove; O grate-ful-ly sing His power and his glor - i-ous a - bove; O grate-ful-ly sing His power and his glor - i-ous a-bove; O grate-ful-ly sing His power and his glor-i - ous a - bove; O grate-ful-ly sing His power and his

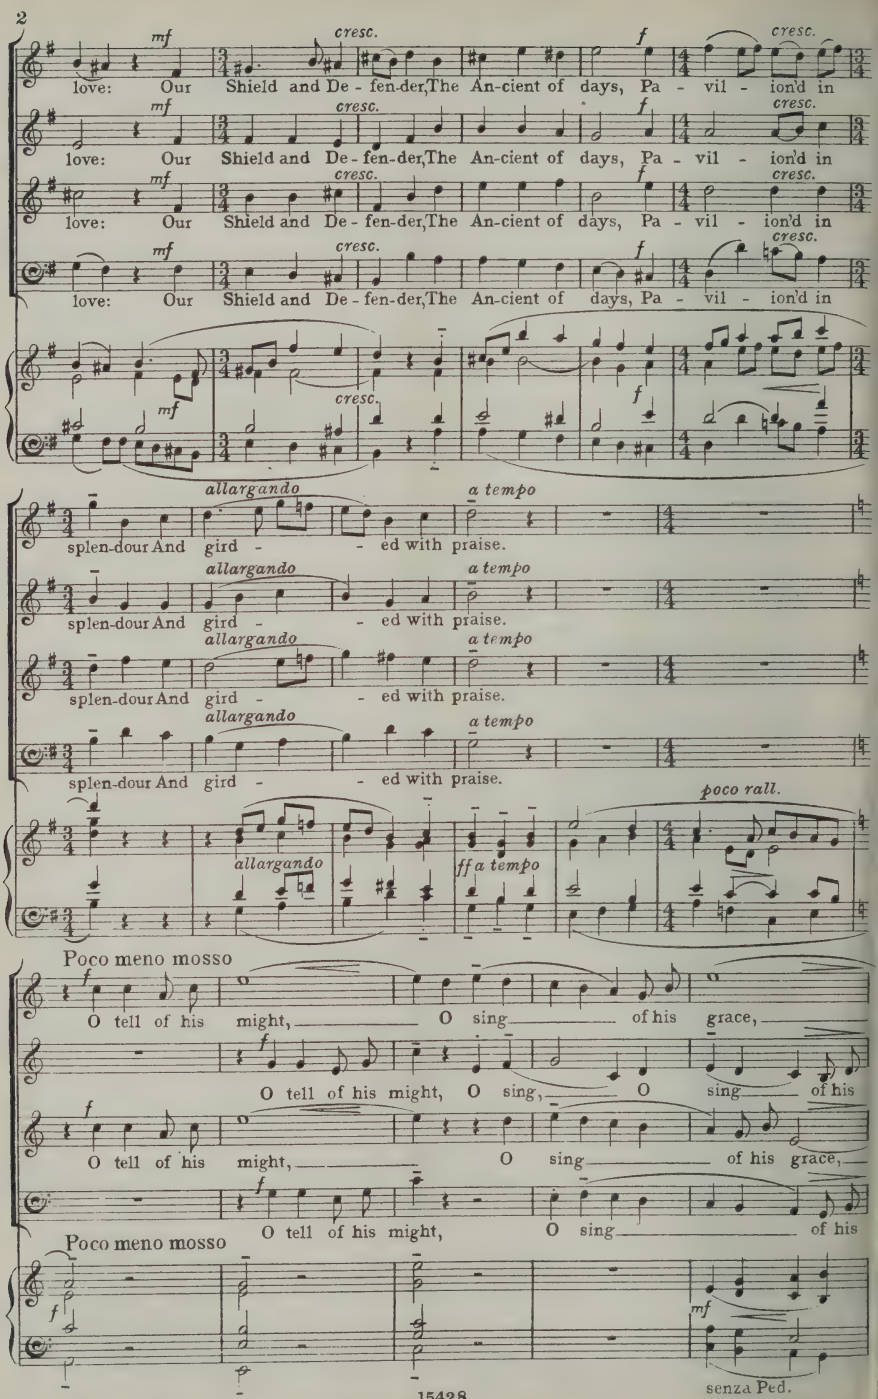
MADE IN ENGLAND.



mf
cresc.
f
cresc.
love: Our Shield and De - fen-der, The An-cient of days, Pa - vil - ion'd in allargando
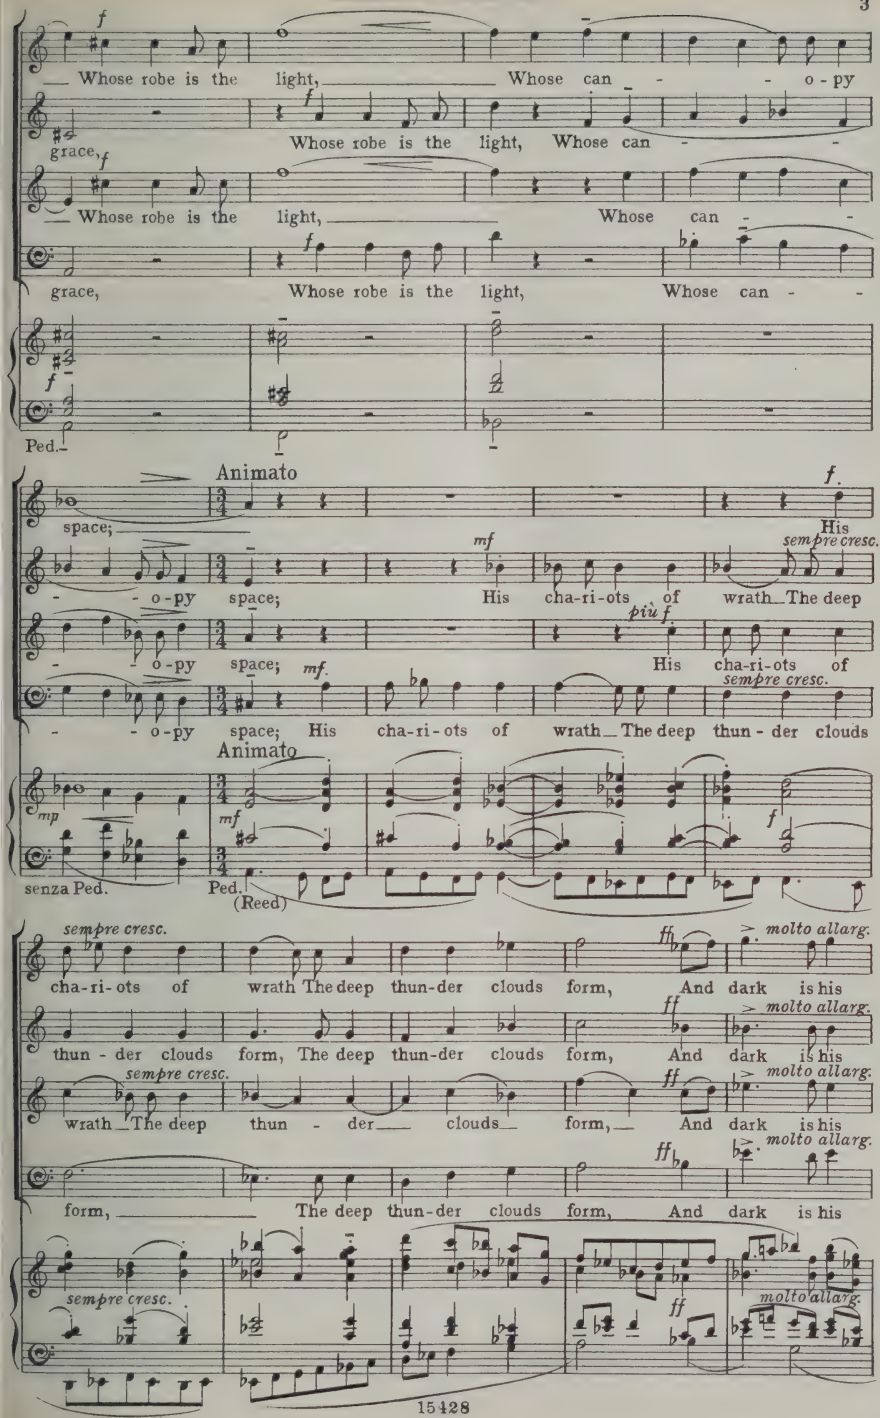
a tempo
splen-dour And gird - - ed with praise.
ff a tempo
poco rall.
Poco meno mosso
O tell of his might, O sing of his grace,
O tell of his might, O sing, O sing of his
mf
senza Ped.



Whose robe is the light, Whose can - - - o - py
grace, Whose robe is the light, Whose can - - Whose robe is the light, Whose can - - grace, Whose robe is the light, Whose can - -
Ped.
Animato
space;
His
- - o-py space; His cha-ri-ots of wrath The deep
- o-py space; His cha-ri-ots of
- - o-py space; His cha-ri-ots of wrath The deep thun - der clouds
senza Ped.
Ped.
(Reed)
cha-ri-ots of wrath The deep thun-der clouds form, And dark is his thun - der clouds form, The deep thun-der clouds form, And dark is his wrath The deep thun - der clouds form, And dark is his form, The deep thun-der clouds form, And dark is his molto allarg.

e marcato
a tempo
path On the wings of the storm.
e marcato
a tempo
path On the wings of the storm.
e marcato
a tempo
path On the wings of the storm.
e marcato
a tempo
path On the wings of the storm.
e marcato
ff a tempo
rall.e dim.
Tenor & Bass Full. Moderato
mf
The earth—with its store Of won - ders un-told,
Moderato (♩ = about 88)
mf
mp
(Reed off)
mp
mf
Al-migh - ty, Al - migh - ty, thy power Hath found - ed of old;
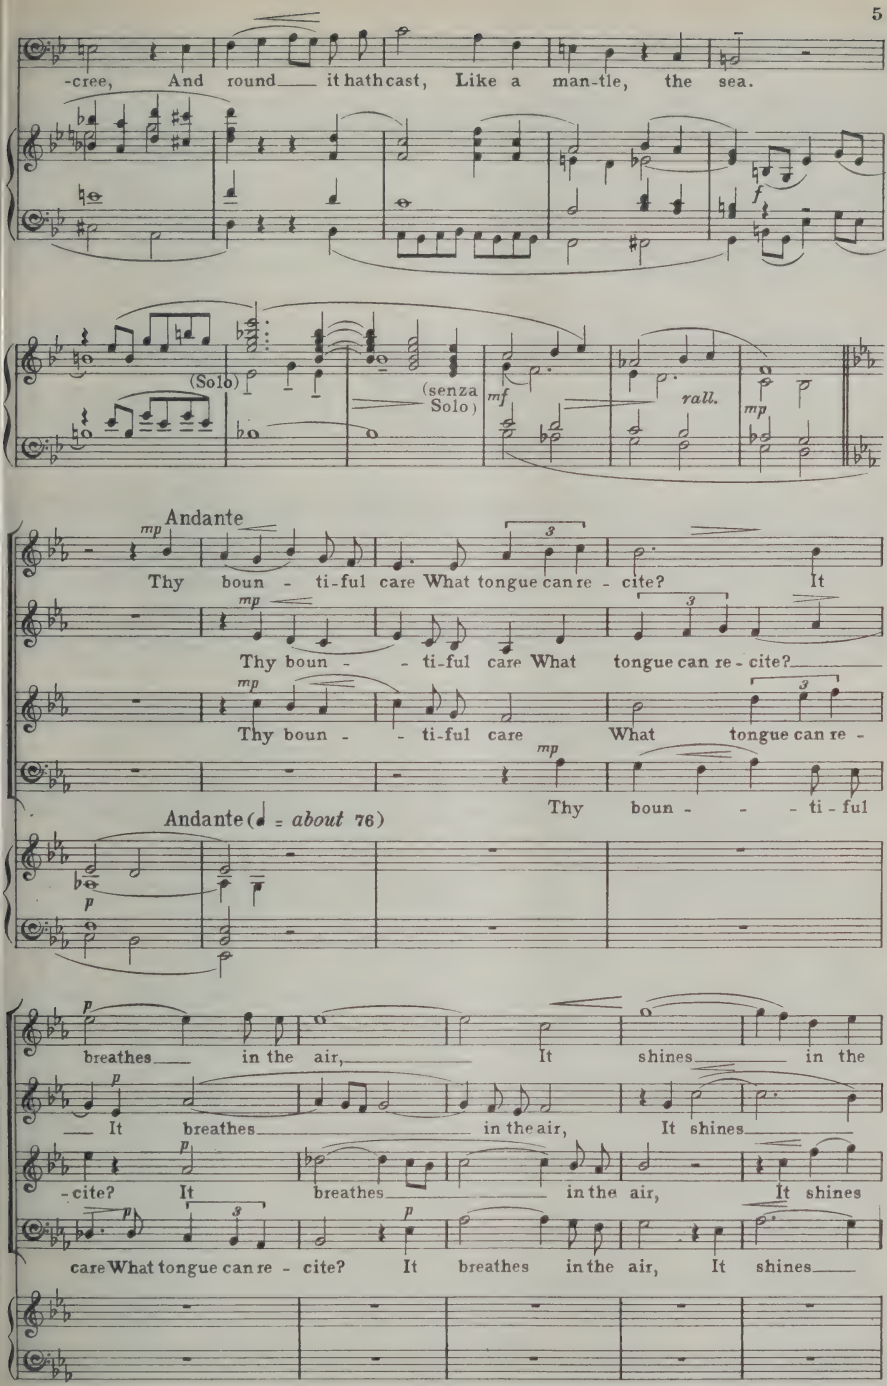
mf
Hath stab-lish'd it fast By a change-less de-
mp
mf
mf



-cree, And round it hath cast, Like a man-tle, the sea.
(Solo)
(senza Solo)
rall.
Andante
Thy boun - ti-ful care What tongue can re - cite? It
Thy boun - - ti-ful care What tongue can re - cite?
Thy boun - - ti-ful care What tongue can re -
Thy boun - - - ti - ful
Andante (♩ = about 76)
breathes in the air, It shines in the
It breathes in the air, It shines
-cite? It breathes in the air, It shines care What tongue can re - cite? It breathes in the air, It shines mp legato

light; It streams from the hills, It de-scends to the plain,
in the light; It streams from the hills, It de-scends to the plain,
in the light; It streams from the hills, It de-scends to the plain,
mp legato
in the light; It
pp pp (Sw.)
pp
Ped. 8ft
p
And sweet-ly dis-tils In the
And sweet-ly, sweet-ly dis-tils In the
And sweet-ly dis-streams from the hills, It de-scends to the plain, And
mp
dew, in the dew and the dew and the rain, In the dew and the -tils In the dew, in the dew and the sweet-ly dis-tils In the dew and the sempre pp

rain.
rain.
rain.
rain.
mp Sw.
p Gt.
senza Ped.
cresc.
mf
mp
f
Gt.
Tempo I
O meas-ure-less Might, In-ef-fa-ble Love! While an-gels de-
Tempo I
ff
f
Ped. 16 ft
-light To hymn Thee a - bove, Thy ransomed cre - a - tion, Though fee-ble their mf
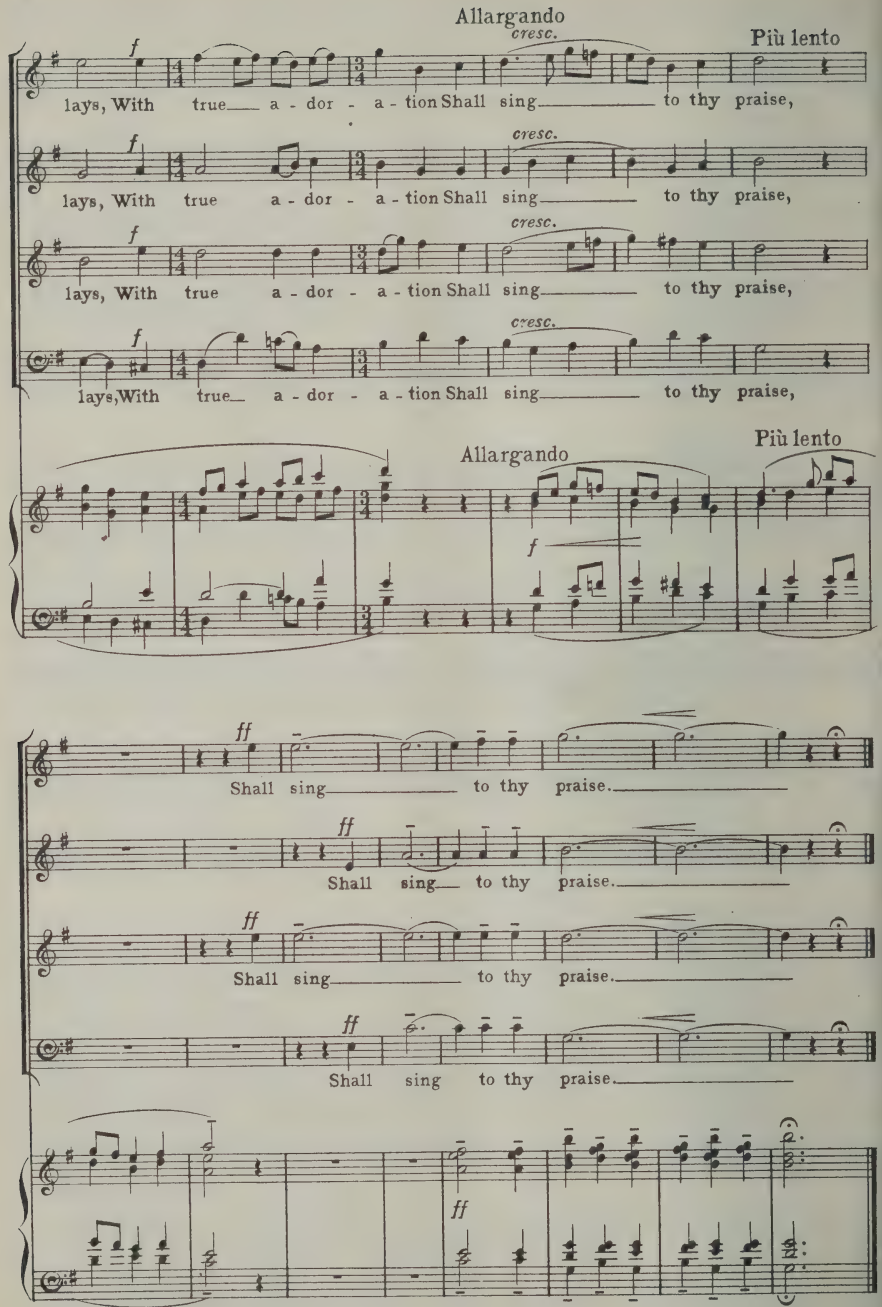
cresc.



Allargando
Più lento
cresc.
f
lays, With true a - dor - a - tion Shall sing to thy praise,
lays, With true a - dor - a - tion Shall sing to thy praise,
lays, With true a - dor - a - tion Shall sing to thy praise,
lays, With true a - dor - a - tion Shall sing to thy praise,
Allargando
Più lento
ff
Shall sing to thy praise.
Shall sing to thy praise.
Shall sing to thy praise.
Shall sing to thy praise.

Novello & Company, Ltd. Engravers & Printers. 15428

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

FOUNDED IN 1844

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH

No. 1,027—Vol. 69. Registered at the General Post Office for Canadian Postage.

SEPTEMBER 1 1928

Price 6d.; Postage, 2d.

Annual Subscription, post-free, 7s. 6d.

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

(Season, 1928-1929.)

There are now VACANCIES in the CHOIR for SOPRANOS, CONTRALTOS, TENORS, and BASSES. Applicants should have STRONG VOICES OF GOOD QUALITY, and must be prepared to pass an examination in SIGHT-READING. Address, The Secretary, Royal Choral Society, Royal Albert Hall, S.W.7.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, LONDON, N.W.1

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patrons:
HIS MAJESTY THE KING
HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN
H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AND STRATHEARN, K.G.
H.R.H. THE PRINCESS LOUISE (Duchess of Argyll)

President:
H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AND STRATHEARN, K.G.

Principal:
JOHN B. MCEWEN, M.A., D. Mus., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M.

MICHAELMAS TERM
BEGINS 17TH SEPTEMBER.

VACATION COURSE FOR TEACHERS.
PIANOFORTE,
CLASS-SINGING,
AURAL TRAINING, and
MUSICAL HISTORY and APPRECIATION.
SEPTEMBER 11th to 14th, 1928.

STUDENTS' ORCHESTRA.
Conducted by SIR HENRY J. WOOD, D. Mus., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M.

CONDUCTORS' COURSE.
FOR THE TRAINING OF CONDUCTORS.

OPERA COURSE.
FOR THE TRAINING OF OPERATIC SINGERS.

SCHOLARSHIPS.
SEVENTY-TWO SCHOLARSHIPS AND EXHIBITIONS.

L.R.A.M.
Examinations held during the Summer, Christmas, and Easter Vacations.

PROSPECTUSES, ENTRY FORMS, and all other information from

A. ALGER BELL, Secretary.

GLASGOW
ATHENÆUM SCHOOL OF MUSIC

SESSION 1927-28

The Session consists of Three Terms: September 12 to December 3, December 5 to March 10, and March 12 to June 8.

Complete Musical Curriculum. Day and Evening Classes. Single Subjects taught.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from:

STUART S. FORSYTH, Secretary,
ATHENÆUM BUILDINGS, GLASGOW.

The Royal College of Organists

THE SOLO-PLAYING TESTS for the next F.R.C.O. EXAMINATION are:

Prelude and Fugue in C minor, J. S. Bach. (Novello, Book 7, p. 64; Augener, p. 168; Peters, Vol. 2, No. 6.)

Choral Prelude, "St. Mary's," Charles Wood, No. 1 of 16 Preludes, Vol. 1. (Stainer & Bell.)

Larghetto from the Quintet, Op. 108, Mozart. Arrangements for the Organ by W. T. Best, No. 20, p. 247. (Novello.)

The 10 selected pieces and the book set for the Essay for the January, 1929, A.R.C.O. Examination, are the same as those set for July, 1928.

All Candidates for the next Examinations must send in their names for Fellowship by December 6th, for Associateship by December 13th. In the case of NEW MEMBERS, proposal forms, duly filled up, must be sent in before November 29. No names will be entered after the above dates.

For the convenience of members, past examination papers have been bound in one volume: Fellowship and Associateship Organ Work, January, 1913, to July, 1927; Paper Work, July, 1924, to July, 1927. Price 4s., to be obtained by members only.

Regulations, List of College Publications, Lectures, &c., may be had on application.

Examples indicating the character and approximate difficulty of the NEW TESTS, set for the first time at the July, 1924, Examinations, may be obtained at the College.

Associateship or Fellowship, 6*d.* each (post free).

N.B.—The College is open daily from 10 to 4.

H. A. HARDING, Hon. Secretary.

Kensington Gore, S.W.7.

The Royal College of Music

PRINCE CONSORT ROAD, SOUTH KENSINGTON, S.W.7

Patrons: { HIS MAJESTY THE KING
HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

Director: SIR HUGH P. ALLEN, K.C.V.O., M.A., D.Mus., D.Litt.

CHRISTMAS TERM

THE CHRISTMAS TERM will commence on Monday, September 17th, 1928.

Entrance Examination on or about September 12th.

The new Edition of the Prospectus may be obtained post free on application to the College.

COMPLETE MUSICAL EDUCATION
is provided by Teachers of the highest eminence.

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT
Classes are held for pupils under sixteen, whose time is also occupied by their general education.

SPECIAL CLASSES ARE HELD FOR:
Score Reading, Conducting, Training of Teachers, Musical Criticism, and Ballet.

OPERATIC CLASSES
The College possesses a fully equipped College Opera Theatre for an audience of 600.

SCHOLARSHIPS, EXHIBITIONS
Upwards of 70 Scholarships and Exhibitions are provided from a permanent endowment fund.

ENSEMBLE CLASSES
There are Vocal and Instrumental Ensemble Classes, and Pupils sufficiently advanced in this work are given the opportunity of putting their knowledge into practice at College Concerts.

A.R.C.M.

Examinations for Associateship of the College (A.R.C.M.) are held three times a year, in December, April, and September.

Full particulars obtainable from the Registrar.

CLAUDE AVELING, Registrar.

WIGMORE HALL STUDIOS.—These splendidly appointed Studios are the recognised centre of the best musical activities in London. Forty-five rooms. Grand Piano in every room. Lift, telephone, and every comfort and convenience. Low inclusive rates. One morning or afternoon per week the minimum time arranged for. Apply, 38, Wigmore Street, W.1

Guildhall School of Music

(Founded in 1880 by the Corporation of London, and managed by the Music Committee)

VICTORIA EMBANKMENT, E.C.4

PRINCIPAL: SIR LANDON RONALD, F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M., &c.

AUTUMN TERM begins September 17.

PRIVATE Lessons in any single Musical Subject, and STAGE TRAINING in Elocution, Gesture, Dancing, Opera; Classes in Conducting, Fencing, French Classical Drama.

Complete Musical Education at inclusive fees, £12 12s. and £14 14s. Opera Class, Saturdays. Special Training Course for Teachers (approved by Teachers' Registration Council).

Prospectus and Syllabus of Local Centres and Schools Examinations (open to general public) free.

H. SAXE WYNDHAM, Secretary.

Telephone: Cent. 4459; and City 5566.

96 & 95, WIMPOLE STREET, W.1

TOBIAS MATTHAY PIANOFORTE SCHOOL

Instruction under his teachers, and under his own supervision.

Open to Professionals and Amateurs, and also to Children.

The Staff consists of thirty-nine senior Professors of thorough experience and platform reputation, all trained by the founder.

Special Short Courses for Teachers during term and vacation.

LECTURE-LESSON CLASS by Mr. MATTHAY on the practical teaching of Technique and Interpretation, diagnosis and correction of faults, musical analysis and synthesis, &c., alternate Wednesday evenings.

COMPLETE TRAINING COURSE FOR TEACHERS
(Approved by the Teachers' Registration Council)

This ONE-YEAR Course may be joined at the beginning of ANY TERM.

For further particulars please apply, MRS. MARION COLE, Secretary.

ROYAL MANCHESTER COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Founded 1893. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1923

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF YORK, K.G.
Principal: DR. ADOLPH BRODSKY
Registrar: STANLEY WITHERS, M.A.

Students are requested to enter upon a complete course of Musical instruction, and are not admitted for a shorter period than one year.

Fee for the year, £36. Special fee for Organ Course, £30, and for Wind Instrument Course, £18.

Systematic Course for the training of Teachers, approved by Teachers' Registration Council.

The Prospectus with Scholarship information, Diploma Regulations, and Entry Forms, on application.

BATTERSEA POLYTECHNIC

LONDON, S.W.11.

PRINCIPAL:
G. F. O'RIORDAN, B.Sc. (Eng.), M.I. Mech.E., M.I.A.E.
HEAD OF MUSIC DEPARTMENT:
W. HERBERT HICKOX, Mus. D., F.R.C.O., F.G.S.M.

CLASSES IN THEORY OF MUSIC, HARMONY, and COUNTERPOINT.

UNIVERSITY COURSES for DEGREES and HIGHER EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and L.G.S.M., Associated Board of the R.A.M. and R.C.M.

Class and Private Lessons in MUSICAL APPRECIATION and AURAL TRAINING, SOLO and SIGHT SINGING, PIANOFORTE, VIOLIN, VIOLA, VIOLONCELLO, and DOUBLE-BASS.

ORCHESTRA and CHORAL CLASS.

Lessons on CONCERT ORGAN (Reconstructed and Modernised). Preparation for R.C.O. Examinations.

SPECIAL CLASSES FOR TEACHERS. (Recognised by the London County Council).

Next term begins Monday, September 24th, 1928.

Particulars of all Classes on application to the Principal.

The Tonic Sol-fa Association

The Monthly Meetings will be resumed on Saturday, October 20th, 7 p.m., at the King's Weigh House Club, Thomas Street, London, W.1. Admission Free. Full particulars from the Secretary, Mr. T. H. Warner, L.T.S.C., 82, Ashgrove Road, Goodmayes, Essex.

Manchester School of Music

Founded by J. A. CROSS (1892)

Late Principal (1897-1925): ALBERT J. CROSS, A.R.A.M.
Director: LEOPOLD H. CROSS, M.A.

The oldest Institution in Manchester devoted solely to the interests of Music.

All branches of Music taught. Day and evening Private Lessons. Opera Class. Full Orchestral Class. Intermediate and Elementary String Orchestras. Classes for Ensemble Playing, Elocution, Choral Singing, Harmony, Aural Training, &c.

Students prepared for all Royal Academy and Trinity College Exams.

Single Subjects taught. Prospectus from the Secretary, 16, Albert Square.

BIRMINGHAM & MIDLAND INSTITUTE

SCHOOL OF MUSIC

Visitor ... Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M., Mus. Doc., LL.D
Director ... GRANVILLE BANTOCK, M.A., D. Mus. (Ed.).

SESSION 1927-1928

The Season consists of AUTUMN TERM (September 22 to December 20); WINTER TERM (January 14 to April 11); SUMMER TERM (April 20 to July 4).

Instruction in all branches of Music. Students' Orchestra, Chamber Music, Students' Rehearsals, and Concerts.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from—
H. M. FRANCIS, Secretary.
Paradise Street, Birmingham.

THE LONDON SCHOOL OF SINGING

New Address: 2, Gray Street, Duke Street, W.1 (near Selfridge's)
President: A. NETTLEFOLD
Principal: DAVID GODELL

Instruction in all Vocal Subjects. A thorough musical education if desired.

Special Voice-curing Courses for all vocal defects, caused by over-strain and incorrect production.

Practice with Accompaniste can be obtained at the School at a moderate fee.

Particulars from Secretary, Miss M. HEATH. Mayfair 3819.

LONDON SOCIETY OF ORGANISTS

FOUNDED 1913

PRESIDENT FOR 1928: J. PERCY BAKER, Mus. B.

Organists, Assistant-Organists, are eligible. Register of vacant appointments. All particulars on application to the Hon. Secretary. De Crespigny House, Denmark Hill, S.E.5.

ARE YOU SATISFIED WITH YOUR PIANO PLAYING?

AND CAN YOU IMPROVISE AT THE KEYBOARD, PLAY FROM MEMORY, AND READ READILY AT SIGHT?

If not, you are not making full use of your abilities—your methods are faulty. I can train you by means of an original Postal System—in your own home and in your leisure time to revolutionise all your playing, to learn Improvisation, play by ear, from memory, to read at sight, and to gain real enjoyment from your Piano.

The Lessons are arranged for you personally, are illustrated from life, and are sent at intervals to suit your convenience, by post.

Send a post-card to-day for my booklet, "The Piano and its Possibilities," which gives you a full description of my System, with a form for free advice and opinion on your case.

The book is sent free, and post free, and is a lesson in itself.

MR. H. CRAWFORD, KINGSLEY GREEN, HASLEMERE.

DEGREES IN MUSIC

Oxford Preliminary Arts, and Durham Matriculation, Also B.A. and B.Sc.

EXPERT TUITION BY CORRESPONDENCE.

For terms, testimonials, &c., address,
Mr. J. CHARLESTON, B.A.,
14, ELSHAM ROAD, KENSINGTON, W.14.

BANISH NERVOUSNESS

Tobias Matthay

Alfred Cortot

Serge Koussevitzky

Vaclav Talich

Myra Hess

Irene Scharrer

Harold Bauer

Katharine Goodson

Harriet Cohen

Leff Pouishnoff

Stewart Macpherson

Ivor Newton

Adrian Boult

Maurice Cole

Percy Scholes

recommend the

MACKINNON COURSE

BY MEANS OF

Mackinnon's Musical Memory

READ WHAT CORRESPONDENTS SAY:

A Teacher writes:—"I am able once again to trust my musical memory in a way I never dreamed possible."—19.6.28.

A Violinist writes:—"Your lessons have given me much more confidence than I had before. I memorised a piece by your method to play at a musical competition, and came in first out of fifteen."—20.6.28.

An Amateur writes:—"I have had several opportunities lately of playing before my friends, and each time noticed that the old nervousness and fear had gone."—10.3.28.

A successful L.R.A.M. candidate writes:—"The lesson on nervousness was of more help to me than I can say. I also find that since taking your course I can learn pieces in an amazingly short time."—29.4.28.

COMPLETE IN SIX POSTAL LESSONS FOR £3 : 3 : 0

SEND FOR FREE BOOKLET

(FIX COUPON INSIDE ENVELOPE).

To MISS LILIAS MACKINNON, 1, Paultons Square, London, S.W.3.

Without any obligation on my part please send me your free booklet giving particulars and guarantee.

Name.....

Address.....

(S.1.) .....

The Pianist's Hands

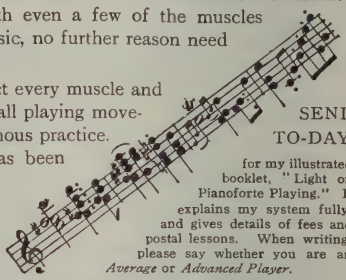
The Times says: "The excellence of Mr. Macdonald Smith's methods has been abundantly proved."

PREVALENT among pianists is the idea that you cannot play well unless you have a special sort of hand; this is a mistake. It is obvious, however, that the hands must be in perfect condition, otherwise the many technical difficulties to be overcome will be found insuperable. For a pianist every single muscle of the hands and arms must move the instant it is required to do so, and if this fails to be the case with even a few of the muscles brought into play in any complicated passage of music, no further reason need be sought to account for failure.

Let the "From Brain to Keyboard" System perfect every muscle and nerve in your hands and give you instant control over all playing movements without any of the usual drudgery and monotonous practice. Why not learn something about the System that has been used by many of our eminent musicians.



SEND TO-DAY for my illustrated booklet, "Light on Pianoforte Playing." It explains my system fully, and gives details of fees and postal lessons. When writing, please say whether you are an Average or Advanced Player.

From Brain to Keyboard

Macdonald Smith's System of Pianoforte Playing.

M. C. MACDONALD SMITH, 94, GOWER STREET, LONDON, W.C.1

SIGHT-READING
AND MEMORY-PLAYING

Perfect memorising can be taught and your ability to read at sight increased in an extraordinary manner and in an incredibly short space of time by the Master-Method of Memory-Playing.

Read what this pupil writes of her own experience after only a short course of the Master-Method System.

The White Cottage, Highfield Avenue,
Golders Green, N.W.11.

Your lessons have opened an entirely new and delightful study for me, for until now I have not been able to memorise the easiest piece of music. I find that besides learning to remember what I play, I read with much more ease, due no doubt to the concentration you have so much insisted on. I have always been rather careless in my reading, depending on the effect of a difficult passage rather than the true notes, but I do not feel I want to be careless now.

(Signed) Mrs. M. P. HEWETSON.

If you cannot always trust your memory—if your sight-reading is weak—write to day for my Free Book, "The Master-Method of Memory-Playing," which is sent free and post free and without the slightest obligation. It gives full particulars of the simple Master-Method System of postal instruction by which thousands have benefited beyond their own belief. A post-card will do. State whether you play the piano, violin, 'cello, or organ, and whether a moderate or advanced player.

MR. REGINALD FOORT, F.R.C.O.,
194, BEACON HOUSE, HEMSTAL ROAD, LONDON, N.W.6.

MASTER-METHOD OF MEMORY-PLAYING

MEANS BETTER

SIGHT-READING

"Controlled Relaxation and Weight Touch"

As applied to

PIANOFORTE PLAYING

A Course of 12 Correspondence Lessons for Home Study.

THIS method, introduced by CHARLES A. GILLETT after many years' close analysis of the actual playing of many of the greatest pianists, has never failed to bring results. To study and practise this system is an inspiration to all ambitious pianists.

Those whose desire is to attain the highest artistic standard should study this most modern teaching.

Write

TO-DAY for FREE EXPLANATORY BROCHURE

The Secretary,

The Charles A. Gillett Pianoforte School

11, SOUTH MOLTON STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

PERSONAL LESSONS DAY AND EVENING

MODERN CORR. COLLEGE

Principal: Arthur McAlister, B.A. CANTAB.

MATRIC. — DURHAM: LONDON: DUBLIN. SUCCESSES ... 157.

MUS. BAC. — THE Guarantee Course for the complete Degree has become very popular. For ONE FEE, which can be paid by Monthly Instalments, Tuition is given until the Degree is gained. If the Course is interrupted the student is under no liability.

A.R.C.O., F.R.C.O. — For ONE FEE Tuition is given until both Diplomas are gained. The Courses include Form, Musical History, Voice Culture. F.R.C.O.—Failed 7 times. A student after failing 7 times joined the M.C.C., and he was then successful. A.R.C.O.—A student after failing 4 times joined the M.C.C. and passed after a course of ten lessons.

A. MUS. T.C.L. — This is entirely Theoretical, and forms an excellent preliminary to Mus. Bac. One of our Students gained an average of 82% at a recent Exam. L.Mus. T.C.L.—A student of the M.C.C. gained 95% Orchestration, and then passed 1st Mus. Bac. at the FIRST ATTEMPT.

A.T.C.L. — Art of Teaching ... ... ... ... ... ... 93%

L.R.A.M.) A.R.C.M.) (Pf.) — The Course for L.R.A.M. includes Form: Art of Teaching: Phrasing: Touch: Fingering: Pedalling. A student writes: "I gained 81% for Form and Art of Teaching. At a previous Exam. (under other tuition) I gained 66%." A.R.C.M. writes: "I obtained 123 out of 126 for Special Paperwork."

A.R.C.M. — (Musical Appreciation.) 4. All at first ATTEMPT.

L.R.A.M. — (Singing.) "I was complimented by the Examiners for my paper on Vocal Physiology."

A.R.C.M. — (Singing.) "Your Course may be summed up in one word, MODERN."

L.R.A.M. — (Voice Culture and Class Singing.) "The questions were quite easy to answer owing to your suggestions and training generally."

TUITION IN SINGLE SUBJECTS. — Harmony: Orchestration: Fugue: Art of Teaching: Composition: Form: Counterpoint: Essay: History.

REVISION COURSES. — ALL EXAMINATIONS.

PLEASE STATE EXAM. OR SUBJECT.

MODERN CORR. COLLEGE

SHERWIN ROAD, NOTTINGHAM.

STEINWAY STUDIOS

COMFORTABLY FURNISHED
ELECTRIC LIGHT
CENTRAL HEATING
TELEPHONE LIFT
NEW STEINWAY PIANOS

Full particulars from

STEINWAY & SONS
THE NEW STEINWAY HALL,
1 & 2, GEORGE ST., CONDUIT ST., LONDON, W.1
'PHONE: MAYFAIR 6641-5.

PIANOS

BY

Bechstein, Bord, Schiedmayer,
Chappell, Rogers, Gors, & Kallmann

and other celebrated makers

The Profession most cordially invited to inspect our large and varied stock of New and Second-hand Pianos. Cash, Hire, or Hire-purchase. Pianos taken in exchange.

Apply for lists:

CHAS. STILES & CO.
74-76, SOUTHAMPTON ROW
LONDON, W.C.1.
'Phone: MUSEUM 0439.

CHAMBER MUSIC and INSTRUMENTAL SOLOS

(Piano, Violin, VIOLA, also 'Cello.)

Graded and complete descriptive Guides to Music for every conceivable combination.
Send postcard for FREE booklet giving details of catalogues available.

EDWARD WM. ORGAN,
N DEPT.,
ACOCKS GREEN, BIRMINGHAM, ENG.

PIANO REPAIRS. "WIGMORE HALL FINISH"

denotes a standard not obtainable elsewhere.
THE MOST HIGHLY SKILLED WORKMANSHIP.
THE FINEST MATERIALS (regardless of cost).
PERFECT SATISFACTION.

WIGMORE HALL AND PIANO GALLERIES, 32-40, Wigmore Street, W.1.

THE NEW SCHOOL OF MUSIC

26, WESTBOURNE GROVE, W.2
Tel.: PARK 7249

Patrons:
THE COUNTESS OF LAUDERDALE
THE LORD BLANESBURGH, G.B.E.
LADY NEISH
Directors:
G. R. GALSWORTHY, A.R.C.M. J. M. SYMONS, M.C., A.R.C.M.
MISS M. E. GALSWORTHY, A.R.C.M.

Day and Evening Tuition in Singing, Piano, Strings, Wind Instruments, &c., and Theory, Composition, Ear-Training, Sight-Reading, Memorising, Elocution, &c.

ORCHESTRAS AND CHORUS
OPEN TO NON-STUDENTS

PREPARATION FOR R.A.M. and R.C.M. EXAMINATIONS

Prospectus on application to the Secretary.

"MASTERY OF THE KEYBOARD"

SIGHT-READING LESSONS

COMPLETE COURSE OF SIX POSTAL LESSONS

The Times: "Deals with the subject systematically from the first stage."
Music: "Goes fully and thoroughly into his subject from every possible standpoint. Cannot fail to be of service."
A PUPIL FROM CHINA WRITES: "My master is a gifted pianist, a minor genius, but he has not the least idea how he sight-reads, and cannot explain."
AFTER SECOND LESSON: "Your course has so far quite revolutionised my playing, and even now I am finding pieces far easier to sight-read."

GEORGE DENHAM, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.,
41, AVONDALE ROAD, S. CROYDON,
and WEEKES'S STUDIOS, 14, HANOVER ST., W.1
('Phone: Croydon 2703)

JOIN THE ORGAN CLUB

(ACTING-PRESIDENT: DONALD PENROSE, Esq.)
AND VISIT
HOLY TRINITY, UPPER TOOTING,
SEPTEMBER 15.
OCT. 20—A COMPTON CHAMBER ORGAN near London.
NOV. 10—ST. PETER'S, EATON SQUARE.
Further attractive visits to follow.

Entrance Fee, 2s. 6d. Annual Subscription, 10s. 6d.

For full particulars apply Hon. Sec.,
28, HILLMORE GROVE, SYDENHAM, S.E.26.

THE ROTUNDA

PRICE 2s. net. A Journal for Organists, Organ Amateurs, and Organ Builders PRICE 2s. net.

Vol. II. : No. 2. Published in April.

THE ORGAN OF ST. ANNE'S, SOHO, LONDON
(The Rev. A. Freeman)
IDEALS (Ernest Austin)
TEACHING THE YOUNG IDEA
(W. L. Comley, Mus.Bac.)
THE ORGAN AND THE MODERN IDIOM
(Dr. A. Eaglefield Hull)
REVIEWS OF MUSIC, &c., &c.

Vol. II. : No. 3. Ready in September.

THE ORGAN OF THE SHELDONIAN THEATRE, OXFORD MIXTURES AND MUTATIONS
(W. L. Sumner, B.Sc.)
THE VICTORIAN AGE AND THE ORGAN
(Ambrose P. Porter, Mus.Bac.)
THE ORGAN IN THE ORCHESTRA
(Eric Blom)
REVIEWS OF MUSIC, &c., &c.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION, 4*s.* (or 4*s.* 6*d.* by post).
234, Ferndale Road, Brixton, London, S.W.9

Trade supplied at the Publishing Office of "MUSICAL OPINION"

ANOTHER

ANNIVERSARY TRIP

TO

LIVERPOOL CATHEDRAL

HAS BEEN ARRANGED FOR

Saturday, October 27th,

WHEN

Mr. H. GOSS-CUSTARD, Mus. Bac. Oxon.

Will give a Special Recital on the great 5-manual Organ.

The time of the special train, and other particulars, will be announced later.

FARE: 10s. RETURN

RESTAURANT AND DINING CAR ON TRAIN

Tickets from the Manager:

234, FERNDALE ROAD, S.W.9

BOOK EARLY.

Leeds Triennial Musical Festival

OCTOBER 3rd, 4th, 5th, and 6th, 1928.

CONDUCTORS:
SIR HUGH P. ALLEN, C.V.O., M.A., D. Mus.
SIR THOMAS BEECHAM, Bart.

CHORUS MASTER: MR. NORMAN STRAFFORD.

FESTIVAL ORGANIST: MR. H. PERCY RICHARDSON

CHORUS PIANIST: MR. HERBERT BARDGETT.

PRINCIPALS:
Miss FLORENCE AUSTRAL, Miss DORA LABBETTE, Miss DOROTHY SILK, Miss ELSIE SUDDABY, Miss MARGARET BALFOUR, Miss MURIEL BRUNSKILL, Miss LOTTIE BEAUMONT, Mr. WALTER HYDE, Mr. PARRY JONES, Mr. STEUART WILSON, Mr. NORMAN ALLIN, Mr. KEITH FALKNER, Mr. PERCY HEMING, Mr. DENNIS NOBLE, Mr. HAROLD WILLIAMS.

SOLO PIANISTS: Miss MYRA HESS, Miss DOROTHY HESSE, and Miss KATHLEEN FRISE SMITH.

SOLO VIOLIN: Miss MAY HARRISON.

SOLO VIOLONCELLO: Miss BEATRICE HARRISON

THE LONDON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Chorus of 300 voices chosen from singers in Leeds and the West Riding of the County of Yorkshire.

Plans are now open for booking. All classes of seats.

For further detailed particulars see programme, which can be had free, on application to the Chief Music Sellers, or to CHARLES F. HAIGH, FESTIVAL OFFICES, TOWN HALL, LEEDS.
Tele. 24531.

Muswell Hill Congregational Church, N.10

FRIDAY, 21st SEPTEMBER, at 8 p.m.

OPENING OF NEW THREE-MANUAL WALKER ORGAN.

RECITAL By HERBERT W. SUMSION, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., Organist of GLOUCESTER CATHEDRAL and Conductor-in-Chief of the THREE CHOIRS FESTIVAL, 1928.

Southend & S.E. Essex Musical Festival

ANNUAL PUBLIC COMPETITIONS will be held at SOUTHEND-ON-SEA on

NOVEMBER 8th to 17th, 1928.

Pianoforte, Solo Singing, Choirs, Organ, Strings, Elocution, and Country Dancing Classes.

ENTRIES CLOSE on OCTOBER 6th, 1928.

SYLLABUS and full information on application to the Hon. Secretary, 112, Westbourne Grove, Westcliff-on-Sea, Essex.

The London Oratorio and Concert Association.

FOUNDED 1912.

THE ASSOCIATION exists for the purpose of bringing Secretaries of CHORAL SOCIETIES, OPERATIC AND MUSICAL SOCIETIES, Etc., into direct communication with capable and reliable Artists, without the intervention of an Agent, and is based on the co-operation of its members. Choral Societies engaging a quartet of soloists for any work, can have the advantage of preliminary rehearsal of the principals by the musical director.

Musical Director: Mr. Hubert Bath.

For Prospectus and List of Artists, address Secretary,

26, GUILFORD STREET, RUSSELL SQUARE, LONDON, W.C.1.

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED

LYRICS SET TO MUSIC, MELODIES HARMONIZED, MUSIC TRANSPOSED AND COPIED, BAND PARTS WRITTEN, MSS. PREPARED FOR PUBLICATION BY A MASTER HAND, ACCOMPANIMENTS OF DISTINCTION WRITTEN TO SONGS.

For terms, write, A. CARRINGTON BRIGGS, Glenholme, Hessle High Road, Hull, Yorks.

THE NORTHERN CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE

PRINCIPAL:
ALBERT JOWETT, Mus. Bac., Oxon.

COMPLETE COURSE IN COMPOSITION

Mr. Jowett announces to readers of the Musical Times this important Course in Composition. A most notable success was the celebrated Composer and Pianist WM. BAINES, who was entirely trained by Mr. Jowett.

THE COLLEGE ALSO OFFERS COACHING FOR ALL IMPORTANT EXAMINATIONS, MUS. BAC., L.R.A.M., ETC.

SPECIALIST TEACHING IN SINGING, VOICE-PRODUCTION, ETC. PERSONAL TUITION IN LEEDS, NEWCASTLE, AND HARROGATE.

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED. LYRICS SET TO MUSIC.
ACCOMPANIMENTS FOR SONGS, MELODIES HARMONIZED.

A well-known Song Composer advises in all matters relating to Song Writing.

NORTHERN CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE,
HEATHFIELD, MOORLAND DRIVE, HARROGATE ROAD, LEEDS.

SINGERS AND TEACHERS OF SINGING

ARE INVITED TO CONSULT

MR. HAROLD WHITEHALL

Upon an aspect of their work in which he specialises; namely, the

INHERENT POWER OF MIND OVER VOICE, and its conscious and systematic application, in detail, to vocal technique.

For appointment (September 14th, onward) write early,
c/o WEEKES'S STUDIOS, 14, HANOVER ST., LONDON, W.1.

Can you 'IMPROVISE' at the Keyboard?

Improvisation or composing at the keyboard, also playing music (which you have heard) by ear, and without the aid of any written music—can be learnt by ANYONE of average intelligence. By means of a short Postal Course I guarantee to teach YOU to do this, to improve your technique, play at sight, and memorise music without any drudgery.

My booklet, "The Piano and its Possibilities," is sent FREE on receipt of a post-card.

MR. H. CRAWFORD, KINGSLEY GREEN, HASLEMERE.

WANDSWORTH MALE-VOICE CHOIR

Conductor—ARTHUR R. SAUNDERS, F.R.C.O.

THE TWENTY-SIXTH SEASON will commence on September 15, 1928.

There are vacancies for Altos and Tenors. The Secretary, GEO. HEATH, 11, Grosvenor Gardens, East Sheen, S.W.14, will be pleased to supply particulars to any gentlemen interested.

Rehearsals on Thursday evenings at Memorial Hall, Wandsworth.

UNIVERSITY OF MANCHESTER.

FACULTY OF MUSIC.

The Prospectus containing full information as to the Courses of Study for the Mus. B. and Mus. D. Degrees will be forwarded on application to the Registrar. The Hargreaves Scholarship, of the value of £30 per annum (renewable for a second year), is awarded on the results of the 1st Mus. B. Examination. The Session commences on Thursday, October 4th.

CORRESPONDENCE COACHING for EXAMINATIONS.

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING

MUS. DOC., LOND., L.R.A.M.

Special Courses as follows:—

(1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work. Xmas, 1928; April, 1929
(2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work. .. .. .. ..
(3.) Touch, and Technique (for Pianoforte Diplomas)
(4.) Trinity College Diplomas. Jan. and April, 1929
(5.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Jan. and July, 1929
(6.) Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc. (London and Durham)
(7.) Separate Subjects

NUMEROUS SUCCESSES

Candidates entering for the first time, and also those who have failed to pass any examination, should write to
DR. SPRANKLING, 46, Clarendon Road, Redland, Bristol. Telephone: Bristol 3033.

PAPER WORK BY MUS. B., F.R.C.O.

OVER 1,100 SPECIMEN WORKINGS

"Your lessons and ideas splendid."
"Your excellent models make my attempts look cold."

SUCCESSES (with those for January, 1928) include 3 F.R.C.O. (1 for Jan., 1928). 3 A.R.C.O. 2 L.R.A.M.

2s. 6d. per lesson and postage.

"E. B.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1

FERD. KUECHLER'S

(Teacher at the Leipsic Conservatory)

COURSE of VIOLIN INSTRUCTION

is a

TRIUMPH

of practical teaching

TO KNOW IT IS TO RECOMMEND IT

Send for a specimen copy from the publishers, or ask your music-seller to let you have one on approval.

HUG & Co

MUSIC PUBLISHERS.
LEIPSIC

THE CLIFTON COOKE COMPETITIONS

Instituted 1913, for the purpose of discovering talented and promising Singers, Pianists, and Reciters desiring to use their gifts professionally, either as Performers or Teachers, to whom a first-class course of training would not be otherwise accessible.

£250 FREE SCHOLARSHIPS

IN SINGING, PIANO, and ELOCUTION, Cup, Medals, and Cash Prizes. Open Competition for the trained and untrained, October 27th, November 3rd and 10th. Adjudicators: Mr. Charles Webber, Conductor, British National Opera Co.; Mr. Fred Cutchee, Miss Florence Ager, and Miss Phyllis Windsor. Results at Lecture-Recital, King George's Hall, W.C.1, Wednesday, Nov. 14th, at 7.30 p.m. Prospectus, Secretary, 26M, Guilford Street, W.C.1.

Oratorios for Christmas and Easter at Bargain Prices.

Having at present a large stock of the Oratorios mentioned above—all second-hand in good condition—we offer them at bargain prices. Ask us to send Oratorio Bargain List 122.

FOYLE'S MUSIC DEPT.,
119-125, Charing Cross Road, London, W.C.2.

To Pianists—and Others

By F. SHARP

"Consider technical exercises as the daily physical exercise which is necessary to keep you in health."

ROBERT SCHUMANN.

THERE is something ironic in this exhortation of Schumann's. The irony lies in the fact that the Master himself spoilt his technique by injudicious self-invented exercises. But the soundness of his advice is, naturally, beyond question.

This is the age of physical jerks. They can be practised at home with a hand-book in perfect safety, and for every defect there is some one who can be relied upon to suggest a remedy. An intimate knowledge of anatomy should, of course, be the basis of all physical exercises, and this applies in no small degree to the hand, with its delicate construction, its network of veins and nerves.

Circumstances over which no one has any control have made it almost impossible for me to touch the piano this winter, and I was discouraged about my fingers, because, though I do not play a great deal nowadays, I like to be able to when called upon, without making a mess of it. To be able to forget about technique is as necessary as it is to be well dressed in order not to feel conscious of one's clothes. I was trying to invent some exercises when I discovered the Cowling system. This proved to be exactly what I wanted. I wish I had known of it years ago. Good silent exercises that don't get on my nerves or any one else's. For the student, in whatever school he is studying, they must be a priceless boon. For professionals or amateurs, temporarily parted from their instruments (and the system is designed for violinists and 'cellists as well), the difficulty of keeping their hands in perfect condition is solved. It can be done in the train, in the hotel, in bed, anywhere you like, in fact.

The system is based on scientific knowledge, and works out to a logical conclusion. A diagram of the hand assists the intelligence as to the why and wherefore of an exercise, and ten to twenty minutes a day is all that need be given to it. I think everyone should do these exercises to keep his or her hands supple, and ward off possible rheumatism. I recommended some of them, the other day, to a sufferer from dead fingers, and the effect on the circulation was remarkable.

I cannot enter into any more details without divulging secrets, but I hope to have said enough to impress you with the advisability of having the Cowling system as a supplement to study, to avoid that worst drudgery of practice, the noisy reiteration of scales and exercises designed solely to keep the fingers supple. The time thus saved can be more interestingly spent in the pursuit of touch, rhythm, and interpretation.

Thank you, Mr. Cowling.

Note.—A photographically illustrated brochure, giving full particulars of this remarkable method, will be sent gratis and post free on application (stating if a teacher) to Secretary T, Cowling Institute, 71, Albion House, New Oxford Street, London, W.C.1.

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES

MISS LYDIA JOHN
(A.R.A.M., L.R.A.M.), CONTRALTO.

Lecture-Recitals of Folk-Songs, Elizabethan Songs, &c.
Professor of Voice-Production and Singing.
Pupils prepared for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c., Scholarships and Festivals.
28, ALBION ROAD, LONDON, N.W.6.
Lessons given at above address or West-End Studio, Cricklewood Conservatoire of Music, N.W.2; and Highbury Conservatoire, N.5, &c. Primrose 3869.

HAROLD KNOWLTON
TENOR.
Soloist, St. Paul's Cathedral.
Shirley, Park Road, Crouch End, N.8. Mountview 5289.

EDWARD REACH
TENOR,
AVAILABLE FOR ORATORIO, CONCERTS, ETC.
Streatham 7888. 12, Maybury Street, London, S.W.17.

VERNON HARRISS
L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Gold Medalist. BASS.
Oratorio, Concerts. Vocal Coach and Adjudicator.
Senior Music Master, Downside School, near Bath.

FRANK POULTON
BASS-BARITONE.
(Performer's Diplomas in Singing of L.R.A.M. and L.G.S.M.)
Available for
Oratorio, Choral Concerts, Dinners, Smokers, Lecture-Recitals.
Engagements in recent years in London and Provincial Towns include the following:
"Messiah," "Creation," "St. Paul," "Elijah," "Redemption," "Passion Music," "Holy City," "Last Judgment."
"Merrie England," "Rebel Maid." "Hiawatha,"
"Tale of Old Japan," "Acis and Galatea," "Songs of the Sea," "Songs of the Fleet."
"He sang in a polished and expressive manner."—"REDEMPTION" (Luton)
"His enunciation left nothing to be desired."—(Manchester).
"His rendering throughout was faultless."—"REBEL MAID" (Isleworth).
"He excelled in the dramatic numbers."—"ELIJAH."
33, Hounslow Avenue, Hounslow, Middlesex.
'Phone: Hounslow 1536.

MISS IRENE BRETTELL
PUPIL OF PROF. SEVČIK.
Teaches his Violin Method. Ipswich visited weekly.
Studio, Berners Street, W.1. Apply, 352, Camden Road, N.7.

MR. J. C. BRYDSON, MUS.B.,
SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE TUITION.
Fees from 10*s.* 6*d.* for 10 lessons, according to Course.
"Balcary," KEGWORTH, near Derby.

VOICE-PRODUCTION AND SINGING.
ALBERT GARCIA
CARRIES ON THE TRADITIONS OF HIS GRANDFATHER, THE LATE MANUEL GARCIA.
STUDIO: 59, QUEEN'S ROAD, N.W.8.

TO COMPOSERS
NICHOLAS GATTY
MUS. DOC. CANTAB.
is prepared to undertake the revision and arrangement of MSS., and to advise on any matter concerning composition and orchestration.
For terms, &c., apply, 12, Upper George Street, W.1.

ARTHUR MANGELSDORFF
SOLO PIANIST
RUSSIAN MUSIC
CONCERTS AND RECITALS
TALKS AT THE PIANO
For terms, apply to
ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

ELIZABETH LEVY
L.R.A.M., GOLD MEDALLIST.
PIANO LESSONS (TOBIAS MATTHAY'S METHOD) and Harmony taught by her at pupils' houses or her Studios, Weekes, 14, Hanover Street, W.1., and 27, Buckingham Mansions, N.W.6. Phone: Hamp. 3972.

MISS MARY LINDSAY
L.R.A.M. (Teacher's Diploma).
Gives lessons in Voice Production and Singing.
Moderate Terms.
26, Onslow Square, S.W.7. Tel.: Kensington 3627.

MISS PITT SOPER F.R.A.M.
Professor of Singing, Royal Academy of Music, London.
Prepares Candidates for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Examinations (Teachers and Performers).
For particulars, apply Wigmore Hall Studios.

WILLIAM SANDS
ORGANIST AND DIRECTOR OF THE MUSIC, REDDITCH PARISH CHURCH
RECITALIST AND ACCOMPANIST.
For vacant dates, terms, &c., apply to
The Oaks, Mount Pleasant, Redditch, Worcs,
or, 4, Valley Road, Shortlands, Kent.

E. SIMS-HILDITCH
LECTURER AND ADJUDICATOR
Address, 37 Victoria Street, Crewe.

MISS MARY WILSON, F.R.A.M.
Professor of Singing at the Royal Academy of Music, London,
Receives pupils for Voice Production and Singing. Prepares candidates for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Diplomas as Teacher or Performer. Also gives SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS to candidates entering for the L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Singing Teachers' Diplomas.
Particulars on application.
Address: 10, Harley Street, London, W.1. Phone: Langham 3909.

GEORGE A. ARMSTRONG, Mus. Bac., A.R.M.C.M., L.Mus. T.C.L. Correspondence Lessons in all subjects. Preparation for diplomas. 131, Warbreck Drive, Blackpool, N.S.

CAPTAIN PERCY BAKER, M.C., F.R.C.O., L. Mus. T.C.L. (Author of "Compend of Musical Knowledge," "Studies in History and Form," &c.). Specialist in Tuition by post for T.C.L. and R.C.O. Essay Models, Sight-Reading Courses, Study Aids, 9*d.* Studies in Modulation, 3*s.*
Send for interesting Pamphlets on Methods.
HAZELDENE, TEWKESBURY.

MR. J. PERCY BAKER, Mus. B., Dunelm., F.R.A.M., gives Postal Tuition and prepares for Examinations. Personal Lessons (Pianoforte and Theory), at 14, Hanover Street, W.1. Address, 12, Longley Road, Tooting Graveney, S.W.17.

MISS J. BLAKE, A.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. (Teacher of Singing), prepares pupils L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Exams., as Teacher or Performer. Highest recommendations. Studio, 139, New Bond Street, W.1.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:—
(1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work.
(2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work.
(3.) Interesting Courses of Study in Rudiments, Harmony, Form, &c.
L.R.A.M. Exams. 1910-28... 334 Correspondence Pupils successful.
A.R.C.M. Exams. 1914-28... 90 " " "
MR. E. H. BIBBY, Mus. Bac., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Waterloo Buildings, Piccadilly, Manchester.

In response to many requests, MR. BIBBY begs to announce that he has prepared the following additional CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:
(1.) The "Mus. Bac." Degree.
(2.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Paper Work.
(3.) A.T.C.L. and L.T.C.L. Paper Work. (25 Successes.)
(4.) The Associated Board Examinations in Rudiments, Harmony, and Counterpoint. (21 Successes.)
(Address as above.)

MR. BIBBY also gives PERSONAL Lessons in Manchester. Complete Preparation (Practical and Paper Work) for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L., &c. Address as above.

ALLAN BROWN, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., L. Mus. T.C.L. (Organist and Musical Director, Kingsway Hall), 298, Balham High Road, S.W.17. Telephone: Battersea 0916.

Special preparation for F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O. Also L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. ORGAN EXAMINATIONS.

SINGLE LESSONS and PRACTICE on facsimile R.C.O. inst. Also large four-manual organ. Pieces registered and phrased.

RECENT SUCCESSES IN ORGAN WORK:

| | |
|---|---|
| 1 A.R.C.M., 1920. | 1 L.R.A.M., 1919. |
| 1 L.R.A.M., 1924. | 4 A.R.C.O., 1921. |
| 1 A.R.C.M., 1928. | 3 A.R.C.O., 1922. |
| 2 F.R.C.O., 1922. | 5 A.R.C.O., 1923. |
| 6 F.R.C.O., 1923. | 4 A.R.C.O., 1924. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., 1925. | 8 A.R.C.O., 1925. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., 1926. | 7 A.R.C.O., 1926. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., 1927. | 8 A.R.C.O., 1927. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., 1928. | 9 A.R.C.O., 1928. |

"Hints for R.C.O. Candidates" to be obtained from the Publishers, Reid Bros., 26, Eastcastle Street, Oxford Circus, W.1. 2/8 post free.

POSTAL TUITION by F.R.C.O., F.T.C.L. (Registered Teacher). Any Exam. One guinea ten lessons. Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, &c. Courses in History, Choir-Training, Aural Tests, Analysis, R.C.O. exams. Recent successes, F.R.C.O., July, 1927; A.R.C.O., January, 1928. Address: BM/JRMB, London, W.C.1.

MR. JOHN COATES begs to announce that he is prepared to give a limited number of Singing and Interpretation Lessons at the Grotrian Hall Studios, Wigmore Street, or at his private address, The Coterie, Northwood, Middlesex.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., PIANOFORTE.—Special Coaching by Arthur Ellershaw, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

CLARINET.—ALAN FRANK (pupil of Chas. Draper) open for pupils, at moderate fees, and engagements. 28, Telford Avenue, S.W.2. 'Phone: Streatham 3456.

FREDERICK GREEN, Mus.B., F.R.C.O., &c. Voice Specialist, Vocal Coach, and Adjudicator. Prep. for A.R.C.M. and L.R.A.M. 1, Newington, Liverpool.

FREDERICK C. HAGGIS, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., L.T.C.L., specialises in VOICE-TRAINING and SINGING. Pupils are offered, in addition to private tuition, exceptional advantages in Class-Singing, for the further study of Sight-Singing, Ear-Training, and Interpretation. Address: 14, Hanover St., W.1.

DR. CUTHBERT HARRIS, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE TUITION. 413 Successes in Mus. D., Mus. B., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.O., and the paper-work requirements for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Diplomas in pianoforte playing. For terms, &c., apply to 58, Avondale Road, Gorleston-on-Sea.

DR. CHASTEY HECTOR, D. Mus. Oxon., 1922, L.R.A.M., instructs Candidates personally or by post, for Degrees and Diplomas in Music. "The Downs," Old Shoreham Road, Hove, Sussex.

MISS H. HEALE COACHES for all EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC (at private residence or at West-End Studio), in Pianoforte, Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, Form, Orchestration, "Teaching," Modulation, Transposition, &c. For Terms, &c., apply, Dunraven House, 41, Albert Bridge Road, S.W.11.

HERBERT HODGE, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., Organist and Choirmaster, St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, London, has, since 1908, made a speciality of coaching Candidates for the Organ Playing Examinations of the Royal College of Organists, and can arrange a private course of instruction (or single lessons) to organists visiting London.

SUCCESSES IN ORGAN PLAYING SINCE 1910:

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1910 | ... | 8 | 1919 | ... | 11 |
| 1911 | ... | 10 | 1920 | ... | 7 |
| 1912 | ... | 20 | 1921 | ... | 9 |
| 1913 | ... | 18 | 1922 | ... | 15 |
| 1914 | ... | 25 | 1923 | ... | 15 |
| 1915 | ... | 25 | 1924 | ... | 7 |
| 1916 | ... | 18 | 1925 | ... | 14 |
| 1917 | ... | 2 | 1926 | ... | 11 |
| 1918 | ... | 3 | 1927 | ... | 12 |

5, Streatham Place, S.W.2. Telephone: Streatham 2195.

DR. A. G. IGGULDEN, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE COACHING. Latest Successes: Durham, Sept., 1927, Mus. Doc., 3 Final Mus. Bac., and three 1st Mus. Bac. passes. Also in 1927—4 Mus. Doc. and 3 Mus. Bac. Exs., after prelim. course in composition. 200 successes at Durham alone, besides R.C.O. Diplomas. The Durdans, Reigate.

MR. C. E. de M. LEATHES, M.A., MUS. BAC., F.R.C.O. Tuition in Piano, Harmony, Composition, &c. Pupils successfully prepared for all examinations. 12A, Lisgar Terrace, Kensington, W.14. Telephone: Fulham 4826.

DR. ORLANDO A. MANSFIELD, MUS. DOC., University of Toronto; F.R.C.O., F.A.G.O., &c., Sirsa House, Cheltenham. Correspondence Lessons; Revision of MSS. Scoring, editing, and arranging. Examination pieces analysed and annotated.

MISS F. HELENA MARKS, Author of "The Sonata: Its Form and Meaning" prepares for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and all other examinations, Pianoforte, Harmony, "Form and Teaching," &c. Personal or Correspondence Lessons in all Paper-Work subjects, including those for L.R.A.M., "Aural Training and Sight-Singing," and A.R.C.M. in "The Teaching of Musical Appreciation," &c. Pupils received and visited for the Pianoforte. Many recent successes L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c.
10, Matheson Road, London, W.14.

DR. H. H. L. MIDDLETON, Mus.Doc., F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Specialist in Pianoforte Playing, Touch, Technique, and Interpretation. Thirty years' experience in preparing for examinations. More than 1,000 of Dr. Middleton's pupils have gained Degrees and Diplomas. Address: Weekes' Studios, 14, Hanover Street, W.1.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L. Exams. Correspondence lessons in Harmony, Form, Teaching, &c. 29 pupils' successes. Moderate terms. Arthur W. Morrison, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c. 39, Clarendon Road, Fulwood, Sheffield.

DR. PERCY WOOD, Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O. SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:

(1) Elementary Harmony and Counterpoint.
(2) F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O.
(3) A.R.C.M. (Theory of Music).
(4) Mus. Bac. Degree.

Several recent successes in all these examinations.

R.C.O. EXAMINER says: "Your system is undoubtedly an excellent one."

SUCCESS GUARANTEED—given any pupils with the requisite musical ability for the examination in view.

328 A.R.C.O. Successes since 1909.
195 F.R.C.O. " " "

RECENT SUCCESSES IN PAPER WORK:

| | |
|---|---|
| 2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1918. | 2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1918. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., July, 1918. | 2 A.R.C.O., July, 1918. |
| 1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1919. | 3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1919. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July. 1919. | 3 A.R.C.O., July, 1919. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1920. | 10 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1920. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1920. | 6 A.R.C.O., July, 1920. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1921. | 7 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1921. |
| 6 F.R.C.O., July, 1921. | 8 A.R.C.O., July, 1921. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1922. | 5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1922. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., July, 1922. | 5 A.R.C.O., July, 1922. |
| 8 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1923. | 6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1923. |
| 7 F.R.C.O., July, 1923. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1923. |
| 7 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1924. | 9 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1924. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1924. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1924. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1925. | 8 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1925. |
| 7 F.R.C.O., July, 1925. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1925. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1926. | 6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1926. |
| 6 F.R.C.O., July, 1926. | 6 A.R.C.O., July, 1926. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1927. | 12 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1927. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1927. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1927. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1928. | 12 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1928. |
| 6 F.R.C.O., July, 1928. | 9 A.R.C.O., July, 1928. |

"Tralee," Warwick Road, Cliftonville, Margate.

F.R.C.O. AND A.R.C.O. PAPER WORK

A SPECIAL COURSE OF CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS for the January, 1929, F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O. Examinations is now commencing. The chief reason why this system of tuition is so successful is that pupils are taught how to work. Experience has proved that a large number of candidates fail because they do not reach a high enough standard in their work, which is often the result of training on wrong lines. Now in this system of tuition, pupils are taught to produce work which is above the standard required by the examiners.

F.R.C.O. pupils are trained to work on a definite plan in such tests as the String Quartet, Part-Song, Solo, so as to acquire speed, which is a most vital factor, especially in the afternoon, when so many candidates come to grief.

Hints on how to study the score selected for the January examination as well as a complete analysis (which will give answers to likely questions) will be sent to all pupils.

A.R.C.O. pupils receive special help with Free Counterpoint, Pianoforte Accompaniment, and Four-Part Harmony. Questions on Choir-Training, Musical History, and Musical Form are included in the lessons.

The whole aim of this method is to teach the principles which underlie all highly artistic music, and also the application of these principles to examination work, so that a pupil who is thus equipped is enabled not only to pass the F.R.C.O. or A.R.C.O. examination, as the case may be, but also to develop to the utmost the musical ability with which he is endowed.

DR. PERCY WOOD, Mus. Doc. OXON., F.R.C.O.,
"TRALEE," WARWICK ROAD, CLIFTONVILLE, MARGATE.

MR. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M. (Double Dip. Singing and Piano), L.R.A.M., Class A, Performer and Teacher.
Prof. Singing, G.S.M., 1905-1915. Special Lect. on Musical Appreciation to L.C.C.
"Recit. and its Rendering." 1s. 6d. "Vade Mecum for Singers." 6d.
Preparation for all Exams. by Post and Personal Lessons.
Special Courses of Papers: Singing, Piano, Touch, Musical Appreciation, &c.
Nearly 1,000 Successes for Degrees and Diplomas.
Send for Prospectus,
21, Boundary Road, N.W.8. 'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

W. J. FREDERICK PUGH, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., prepares for L.R.A.M. (Aural Culture and Voice Culture Diplomas), A.R.C.M. (Appreciation Diploma). Recent Successes, 34, Wilmington Avenue, Chiswick, W.4. Chiswick 3267.

MISS WINIFRED RITCHIE
L.R.A.M.

Specialises in teaching of Aural Training, Harmony, Form and Teaching for all recognised Diplomas. Lessons personally, or by correspondence.
For particulars, apply, The London Music Shop, 63, Wigmore Street London.

SYNCOPATED MUSIC (PIANO) taught by Professional Expert. Write, Box 12, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

SPENCER SHAW, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.O. (Organist and Musical Director, Whitefields Tabernacle), Tottenham Court Road, W.1. Recitalist. Tuition in Organ, Piano, Harmony, &c. Preparation for Exams.

DR. A. E. TAYLOR. PUPIL GAINED STILLIE Bursary for Cpt.; Gold Medal for Cpt., Ass. Board; Gold Medal for Har., Ass. Board; C. C. Scholarship; A.R.C.O., A.T.C.L., Mus. B. Compositions revised and accompaniments written. Portland Place, Lancaster.

TRADITIONAL METHOD OF ITALIAN SINGING TAUGHT, as taught by Garcia. Vacancies for pupils. Schools and pupils visited, lessons arranged in Town. Terms moderate. Box 6, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

W. G. WEBBER, F.R.C.O. Recitalist, &c. Preparation for Exams. Organ lessons given on new four-manual Willis. Address, Christ Church, Westminster Bridge Road, London, S.E.1.

CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS (all music Exams.) by recognised and well-qualified Professor. 1s. 6d. per lesson, and postage. Stamp for specimen. Composers advised and assisted. "W. H. D.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

POSTAL LESSONS.—All Music Exams.; well-qualified teacher. 1s. 6d. per lesson and postage. Stamp for specimen. Composers advised. "W. H. D.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

TO COMPOSERS.—Complete and systematic course, by correspondence, in Military Band Instrumentation. Write, Major Charles Hoby, M.B.E., Mus. Doc., Oxon., 80, Warwick Gardens, London, W.14.

CONDUCTOR (experienced) will GIVE SERVICES to any Choral, Orchestral, or Operatic Society London or Provinces. Box 38, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL, OXFORD. There is a vacancy for an Alto Singer. Salary to commence at £130 a year, with a pension at the age of 60. Candidates must be Communicant Members of the Church of England. Applications should be sent, stating age and experience, with three testimonials, to the Organist, Christ Church, Oxford, not later than September 10, 1928.

ALTO WANTED.—CHRIST CHURCH, Westminster. £12. C. G. Yeo, 29, Wentworth Avenue, N.3.

ALTO WANTED AT St. MARGARET'S, LEE. £15. Apply, F. Leeds, 22, Clarendon Road, S.E.13.

ALTO REQUIRED for St. Stephen's Walbrook, E.C. Good reader. Light duties, £15. Apply at once, G. Metzler, 2, Edgarley Terrace, S.W.6.

ALTO WANTED.—St. Martin's Church, Ludgate. £15. Good reader essential. Apply to the Organist, on Friday evenings, 6.30.

CONTRALTO (well trained) would like to join Church Choir with the idea of becoming a Soloist. Box 10, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

TENOR, capable Soloist, £16; also ALTO, £16. REQUIRED for Holy Trinity Church, Wandsworth; Parish Church standard. Rehearsal, Sunday evenings. Residence, S.W. district desirable. G. H. Godwin, 128, Sutherland Grove, S.W.18.

TENOR.—There is a VACANCY for a Tenor in the Tudor Singers. Applicants must be young and enthusiastic, and reading must be good. Interview and audition arranged. Applications to the Secretary, The Tudor Singers, 6, Hosack Road, London, S.W.17.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW THE GREAT, E.C.—WANTED, CHORUS TENOR. £10 per annum. Apply, Anderson Shaw, Organist, c/o Church.

ST. MARY MAGDALENE, Munster Square.—BASS WANTED. Preferably young. Plainsong and Modern music. £25 per annum. Fridays, 8 p.m., and Sundays, 10.30 and 6.30. Written application only. E. F. Mather, 31, Sussex Place, N.W.1. Silence negative.

BASS LAY-CLERK WANTED AT ONCE for St. Michael's College, Tenbury. Two Choral Services of Cathedral type daily during term. Salary, £80, rising to £100. Communicant. Employment obtainable in Lawyer's Office. Apply, Rev. E. H. Swann, Warden.

THERE IS A VACANCY in the Choir of Ripon Cathedral for a BASS (not Baritone) LAY-CLERK. Communicant; good reader. Vacancy due to promotion. Salary, £100. Applications (with copies of testimonials, one of which must refer to character) may be addressed to the Precentor, The Cathedral, Ripon.

30 TRAINED VOICES (S.A.T.B.) REQUIRED to re-inforce or replace the regular choir in the performance of musical works given monthly at Christ Church, Crouch End, N., under the direction of Dr. Walker Robson. Weekly Rehearsals. Choir members will pay no subscription, but will provide their own music. Good sight-readers essential. Early application for membership should be sent to the Hon. Secretary, John Neville, 5, Elm Park, Stanmore, Middlesex.

SOLO and CHORUS MEN SUPPLIED for Church work, Weddings, &c. Apply, C. Hugh Weedon, 485, Green Lane, Harringay, N.4. 'Phone: Holborn 6966.

MR. ALFRED ALLEN, author of From the Organ Loft and a Communion Service in F major, would be happy to give lessons by letter to young writers of Church music. Llanychan, Ruthin, Denbighshire.

WANTED.—ORGANIST for St. Columba Parish Church, Oban. Salary, £90 per annum. Good opening in Town for private tuition. Applications should be sent to D. MacGregor, Clydesdale Bank Buildings, Oban, not later than 29th September, 1928.

WANTED.—ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER for Christ Church Cathedral, Waterford. Apply, stating age, qualifications, with copies of testimonials, to E. Jackson, Clooneen, Waterford.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED in October, Church near Sloane Square Station, S.W.3. Not elaborate Services. Good management of boys essential. Communicant. Good organ. Apply by letter, with references, stating salary required, to "R. D.," 34, Milner Street, S.W.3.

ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER WANTED for St. John's Church, Waterloo, near Liverpool. Residential district; large congregations. Stipend, up to £75. Apply to Rev. J. M. Hewitt, St. John's Vicarage, Waterloo, Liverpool.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER, experienced, seeks appointment; Congregational or Baptist, N. London. Box 7, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour St., W.1.

PUPIL-ASSISTANT WANTED.—London Free Church. Apply, "Organist, D. W. H.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

CHOIRMASTER WANTED.—Mixed Choir. Evening Service, Central London. Apply, Box 11, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

A.R.C.O. REQUIRES GOOD POST, Organist and Choirmaster (Church of England). Apply, Ernest J. F. Runeckles, The White House, Stonham, Stowmarket, Suffolk.

FREE TUITION FOR ONE MONTH and then reduced fees to promising voice. Pure Italian method. West-End Studio. Write, "Audition," Box 13, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGAN PHOTOS.—ELY CONSOLE, CASE; St. Magnus, London Bridge; St. Mary Woolnoth; Christ Church, Spitalfields; All Hallows', Barking, recently taken. Any organ specially photographed at nominal cost. G. Benham, "Bramerton," New Barnet.

FOR SALE.—ORGAN, by Nicholson & Co., Worcester. Consisting of 2 Manuals, compass CC-A, 58 notes, and full compass Pedal Organ, CCC-F, 30 notes. Constructed in two portions, with Tubular Pneumatic Action throughout, and has a detached Console fitted with Stop Keys, placed in the Orchestra in front of the Picture Screen. 6 Stops on the Great, 7 on the Swell, 2 on the Pedals, 8 Couplers; 3 Composition Pedals to each Manual, Tremulant, &c., and it is blown by an Electric Motor and Rotary Blower. No reasonable offer refused. Apply to W. Naunton Evans, Solicitor, Tonypandy.

ORGANS (New and Second-hand) for SALE.—Electric and pneumatic action up-to-date. Built or reconstructed. Bedwell & Son, The Cambridge Organ Works, Cambridge.

ORGAN CLASS (Saturdays, 2 p.m.)
(See M.T. for July.)
New term commences September 8th, 1928. Apply at once, to "R. C. M.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1. Number limited.

ORGAN PRACTICE.—1*s.* 4*d.* an hour (pupils, 9*d.*). Hydraulic-blown, two-manual and pedal organ, at the Fulham School of Music, 2, Edgarley Terrace, S.W.6.
ORGAN LESSONS at ST. STEPHEN'S WALBROOK, E.C.4. GEORGE METZLER, F.R.C.O. Tel.: Putney 4208.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN. Six Stops. Two Swells. New condition; practically unused. £8 10*s.* New Walnut Bench, 15*s.* "C.," 168, Tarring Road, Worthing.

FOR SALE.—PIANO PEDAL ATTACHMENT, complete with Stool. Norman & Beard pneumatic. R.C.O. compass. Splendid condition; little used. Apply, Box 9, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

FOR SALE.—ORGAN PEDAL ATTACHMENT for piano. Norman & Beard pneumatic. In good condition. Complete with stool, £10. H. E. West, F.R.C.O., 8, Liverpool Rd., Ealing, W.5.

BLÜTHNER DRAWING-ROOM GRAND; also Mason Hamlin Two-manual Organ, R.C.O. pedals. Both in excellent condition. £90 each. Seen by appointment. Write, "W. J.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

TO A.R.C.O. CANDIDATES.—MS. 24 Hymn-Tunes for Transposition, 2*s.* 6*d.*; 24 Accompaniment Tests, 5*s.*; 12 complete F.R.C.O. playing Test-Papers, up to date, 3*s.* 6*d.* Also Paper Work Lessons. "F.R.C.O./L.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

TEMPORARY LADY ASSISTANT PIANO TEACHER REQUIRED for the Michaelmas term. Non-resident. Apply Dr. Ivimey, The College, Marlborough, Wilts.

ACCOMPANIST.—GLASGOW GENTLEMAN (L.R.A.M., Gold Medallist), with excellent experience and testimonials, desires engagement with vocalist or instrumentalist. "BM/ZHKO," London, W.C.1.

TEACHING CONNECTION FOR SALE.—South Coast. Piano and Singing. Sound proposition. Box 14, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

GLASGOW.—TEACHING CONNECTION (Pianoforte) FOR SALE: excellent growing nucleus, southern suburb; 15 pupils. £4 weekly. Address offers, "BM/ZHKO," London, W.C.1.

IMPORTANT TO COMPOSERS.—Send stamp for our latest prospectus on music publishing. The Norman Reed Music Company, 133A, Charing Cross Road, London, W.C.2.

AUTHORS and COMPOSERS.—SONGS and PIANOFORTE SOLOS WANTED for immediate Publication. We compose Music to your Lyrics if desired. Send MSS. (words or music) to The Carlton Publications, 151, Nevill Road, London, N.16.

"MUSIC OF THE WATERS." By Laura Alexandrine Smith, published by Kegan Paul, Trench & Co. NEW or SECOND-HAND COPY REQUIRED. State price. Also any books dealing with music of the early Vikings, reproducing their melodies. Box "M. T.," c/o Advertisement Department, 5, New Bridge Street, London, E.C.4.

SOPRANOS AND TENORS should get the new Song, "Dearest, stay with me!" by Vincent J. Saville. Published by Messrs. W. Paxton & Co.

£1,000 PAID FOR LOSS OF HANDS.—Temporary loss of use: right hand, £8 per week; left hand, £6. Many other benefits. Annual premium, £3. Instalments arranged. Defence Ltd., 40, King William Street, E.C.4.

PIANO PEDALS, with Octave Coupler
This wonderful invention supersedes all Piano Pedals, and is a Master Patent.

St. George's Hall, Liverpool,
9th April, 1921.

"The simplicity of the attachment, and the clever sixteen-feet, eight-feet, or both combined, 'OPTIONAL OCTAVE' contrivance astonished me.

"I was delighted with the Pedal touch and with the variety in that touch, which your Attachment makes possible. It is very responsive to the movements of the feet, and is reliable."

HERBERT F. ELLINGFORD, Mus.Bac., Oxon., F.R.C.O.

Owing to increased output, we have reduced the price of our Popular Model to 14 guineas cash. Deferred payments if desired.

Write for Lists, Prices, and Clients' Opinions and References to
THE MALKIN PATENT PEDAL CO., LTD.,
NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LYME.
London Address: 34, Spencer Hill, Wimbledon, S.W.19.
Please mention this paper when writing.

AURAL TESTS.—L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and other examinations. SPECIAL PAPER showing how to obtain success in these important tests. All candidates should secure this paper. Write, enclosing 4*s.* 6*d.*, to "Aural Tests," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

FOR SALE, CHEAP.—Grove's "Dictionary of Music and Musicians." Last edition; 5 volumes, equal to new. Apply, Box 8, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

MUSIC DUPLICATING.—All kinds, any number; perfect copies. Specimens and prices on application to E. Herrick, at 37, Amherst Road, West Ealing, W.

A TREATISE ON CONDUCTING.

12,000 WORDS. ILLUSTRATED METHOD. 2*s.* 6*d.* Post free; Abroad, 3*s.* Pre-eminent Technique. It will thoroughly prepare you for the position of "Conductor." M. T. Cooper, M.D., 23, Beech Avenue, Blackpool.

THE TECHNIQUER

A BOON TO ALL INSTRUMENTALISTS

Invented and Patented by Mr. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac.

Copy of Testimonial from the renowned organist, ARTHUR MEALE, ESQ.

"Westminster Central Hall, June 1, 1928.

"I have used the 'Techniquer' for a great number of years. It is the best means of keeping the fingers supple that I know of. Specially, lately, during convalescence, has it been invaluable, when not being able to endure the fatigue and strain of tonal practice, I have been able to use it for the preservation of finger and wrist suppleness."

Send for list of testimonials and full particulars post free, "Hand Development," with 16 Photos, 1*s.* 6*d.*

Secretary: MISS F. J. FITCH, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M.
21, Boundary Road, N.W.8. 'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

CRAMER

MAGNIFICENT 1928
LATEST MODELS

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| BABY GRAND | ... | 120 Gns. |
| UPRIGHT GRAND | | 65 Gns. |
| UPRIGHT PLAYER | | 103 Gns. |

FULL SCALE
LATEST DEVICES

Write for our very generous Hire-Purchase Terms.

J. B. CRAMER & CO., Ltd.,
139 NEW BOND ST., W.1.
46 MOORGATE, E.C.2.
128/130 KENSINGTON HIGH STREET, W.8.

SECOND-HAND PIANO for SALE. Erard full-sized grand. Suitable for Church Hall or Schoolroom. Address Box 15, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

The "APOLLO" PEDAL REED ORGAN

In the
HOME or STUDIO
the "Apollo" provides a perfect and ever-ready medium for practice.

Pipe-like purity of Tone, Smooth and Easy Touch, Prompt Speech and Exactness of Positions are among the many characteristics which have made the "Apollo" Organ renowned throughout the world.

For SMALL CHURCHES
and places of Worship where space or funds will not allow of a Pipe Organ, the "Apollo" Special Church Model has proved the most efficient and reliable substitute.

Convenient Terms of monthly or quarterly payment arranged.

Illustrated Booklet and Specifications from

RUSHWORTH & DREAPER, LTD.
(DESIGNERS AND BUILDERS)
11-17, ISLINGTON - - - - - - - LIVERPOOL

London Showrooms: THE CHAPPELL PIANO CO., LTD., 50, NEW BOND STREET, W.1.

JUST OUT

THE JOHN COATES EDITION

OF ENGLISH SONGS

FIRST LIST

THE KNIGHT OF BETHLEHEM — Key and Compass. C (C to E), D♭ (D♭ to F), E♭ (E♭ to G)
Words by NEVILLE MAUGHAN.
Music by D. CLEGHORN THOMSON.

ROSES IN DECEMBER ... A minor (A to D), D minor (D to G)
Words by Rev. G. A. STUDDERT-KENNEDY.
Music by F. G. RUSSELL.

O MISTRESS MINE ... ... ... ... ... E♭ (G to A♭)
Words by SHAKESPEARE.
Music by A. REDGRAVE CRIPPS.

DIAPHENIA ... ... ... ... ... ... ... E (E to F♯)
Words by HENRY CONSTABLE.
Music by WALTER WHITAKER.

SUNSET DREAMS ... ... ... ... ... ... G (G to G)
Words by THOMAS MOORE.
Music by MABEL ACKERNLEY.

THE LAUGHING CAVALIER ... ... ... .. D♭ (D♭ to A♭)
Words by JAMES SHIRLEY.
Music by FELIX WHITE.

PRETTY PHYLLIS (Old French Song, "Le beau séjour") ... A♭ (E♭ to F)
Words by JOHN COATES.
Arr. by OWEN MASE.

THE CALENDAR ASTRAY ... ... ... ... C (E to A)
Words by BARONESS BOESLAGER.
Music by HENRY TILTMAN.

THE MYSTIC'S PRAYER ... ... .. B minor (F♯ to F♯)
Words by "FIONA MACLEOD" (WILLIAM SHARP).
Music by HENRY TILTMAN.

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS EACH.

May be obtained from MESSRS. NOVELLO & Co., LTD., 160, Wardour Street, London, W.1; Or JOHN COATES, The Coterie, Northwood, Middlesex.

All Songs of the "JOHN COATES EDITION" may be freely sung without any permission or license.

JUST PUBLISHED.

Specially composed for the Blackpool Musical Festival, 1928.

THE BLESSED DAMOZEL

BY

D. G. ROSSETTI

SET TO MUSIC FOR FEMALE VOICES

BY

JULIUS HARRISON

Price One Shilling and Sixpence

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Mandeville Place, Manchester Square, London, W.1

President:
THE RT. HON. THE EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, K.P., G.C.V.O., C.B.E.
Chairman of Board and Director of Studies:
Professor J. C. BRIDGE, M.A., Mus.D., F.S.A.
Director of Examinations: E. F. HORNER, Mus.D.

The FOLLOWING CANDIDATES were SUCCESSFUL at the DIPLOMA EXAMINATIONS held at the COLLEGE and at certain centres in April and July last (June in Scotland):

FELLOWS (F.T.C.L.).—Doris R. Cocks, Albert Heeley, F.R.C.O., W. Bradwen Jones, F.R.C.O., George J. Metzler, Hilda E. Maple, Clifford J. Phillips, Leonard W. Robinson, Violet L. Watkins.

LICENTIATES IN MUSIC (L. Mus. T.C.L.).—David R. Jones, Mrs. Kate F. Kirton.

LICENTIATES (L.T.C.L.)

PIANOFORTE.—Enid Allwood, Mrs. Mildred Andrews, Edith M. Bennett, Marjorie Blank, Lily R. Blair, Ellen G. T. Craven, Percy S. Crawley, Gertrude M. Croshaw, Wilfred R. Collet, Harry Conolly, Marion Courtney, Freda I. S. Crook, Kathleen M. Dalby, Susan Dean, Frank Drinkwater, Doris S. Dickens, Elsie Dunsmore, Constance B. Eames, Maud G. Ellis, James C. Erskine, Ada A. Gibbs, Karen Hvaler, Olive M. Halls, Winifred Hesbrook, William Heath, Kathleen Henson, Marian Heap, Joan K. Higgins, Mildred Hobson, Phyllis M. L. Holloway, Joy Hughes, Vera D. Johnson, Stella Kehoe, Fenton A. Kennedy, Olive K. Kirk, Dora G. Lewis, Mary K. McEwan, Evelyn Marsden, Cyril M. Marshall, Margaret C. Oram, Esther Pedder, Edith A. Petherbridge, Thomas I. Phizacklea, Frances G. C. Price, Frances E. Pollack, Alexander T. Purvis, George R. Read, Anita Rees, Leonard W. Robinson, Marjorie A. Rogers, Irene K. W. Roth, Josephine St. George, Dora W. Sanderson, Esme M. Schweitzer, Annie Skinner, Nellie D. Towlson, Edith M. Townsend, Martha B. Thompson, Albert E. Vaughan, Enrico A. Venanzi, Gwenda Webb, Marie Wilson, Elizabeth A. Williams, William Yeates.

VIOLIN.—Christine M. Hicks, Bertha M. Pirkis.

SINGING.—Phyllis Dunkerley, Gwendoline M. Hanson, Harold E. Josolyne, Nora E. Lister, Sylvia A. V. Pickering, Eva M. Thorne.

ORGAN.—George F. Crick, F.R.C.O., Hugh L. Jones.

ELOCUTION.—Florence N. H. Atack, Marjorie J. Bennett, Dorothy G. Jacobs, Josephine L. Marsden, Annie Peet, Kodagode A. G. Perera, William A. Riley, Lilian Waring.

ASSOCIATES IN MUSIC (A. Mus. T.C.L.).—Hugh E. Brandon, L.T.C.L., Mrs. Maude C. Bloore, Albert Fairhurst, Irene E. Gass, George F. Linstead, Frances H. Lousley, Arnold T. Peters, Norah Sharples, William H. Thomas, Edward Turner, Wilfred Walker, Arthur C. Waters, L.T.C.L.

ASSOCIATES (A.T.C.L.)

PIANOFORTE.—Robert Atherton, Mary E. Anderson, Frederick C. Andrews, Elizabeth A. Allen, Ethel Ayre, Ena Armstrong, Irene E. Arnold, Winifred A. Ball, Kathleen M. M. Barrett, Sam Blackburn, Nellie E. Baylis, Evelyn G. Bailey, Marjorie Beach, Arthur Bragg, Percy Bragg, Florence I. Bell, Mary C. G. Bell, Reginald J. Brown, Ida Bottomley, Annie Boyden, Doris Botting, Ethel E. Bowles, Vera Budge, Audrey Burton, Margery Bushell, Annie Cadwallender, Sheila Cameron, Agnes K. Craig, Isabella Crawford, Joan G. Clare, Charlotte E. A. Chapman, Olive G. Cashmore, Leslie E. Creed, Phyllis M. Cooper, Dorothy R. Corlett, Sarah B. Coyle, Roberta M. Coward, Elizabeth C. M. Cornish, Harold W. Collins, Frances F. A. Colebrooke, Ellen G. T. Craven, Mary B. Churchouse, Ivy M. Curtis, Olive E. Cutler, Irene E. Dawson, William H. G. Davis, A.R.C.O., Mrs. Ada Denney, Lilian Delamore, Mrs. Olive H. Dymond, Vera L. J. Dowrick, Ann Dolan, Sheilagh M. Doran, Esmé Douglas, Jennie Evans, Edith M. Ferdinando, Charlotte E. Finlay, Dorothy Fishlock, Ellen E. Fuller, Daisy Gray, Dorothy L. Gray, Marjorie V. Gant, Lilian A. Garbutt, Dorothy M. Greenwood, Arthur H. E. Godfrey, Gladys L. Gordon, Phyllis G. Griffiths, Elizabeth J. Hardy, Kathleen M. Harrop, Alfred Harrison, Rupert S. Hatton, Alice V. Harbour, Marjorie G. Hellier, Annie M. V. Hewett, Joseph Hooper, Eva Howlett, May Hurley, Winifred I. Hunt, Catherine H. Hutton, Mary Huston, Annie Jackson, Daisy M. Jackson, Mary A. Jacob, James W. Kiddle, Eveline V. Kinsley, Mary R. L. Lamb, Mary Laycock, Olive C. Lancaster, Wyndham G. Lewis, Doris Lees, Esther A. Lewis, Elsie M. Lewis, Una Linden, Phyllis M. Long, Florence M. McClelland, Kathleen M. Mastin, Ena Malin, Marie T. Messean, Mary E. Millard, Arthur T. Miller, Albert Y. Murray, Constance M. F. Newton, Esme Newstead, Doreen F. Nash, Dorothy C. Nicoll, Lilian M. Otley, Helen L. Osborne, Ethel Parker, Gertrude Parson, Evelyn M. Paxton, Ruth Palmer, Enid Pearson, Sylvia A. V. Pickering, Lilian A. M. Poole, Norah Reeder, Henry P. H. Reed, Eileen A. Read, John A. Reeve, Esther Richardson, Ernest Ridler, Rowena A. Roberts, Violet M. Roberts, Albert E. Robins, Winifred L. Rudge, Olive D. Seymour, Joyce Shelton, Frederick W. Skelton, Cyril Slater, Dorothy M. Starkie, Edith Sykes, Winifred J. Symington, Nellie Smith, Thomas W. G. Smith, Dorothy W. Stott, William Stokeld, Margaret L. Stocker, Walter S. South, Olive M. Sutton, Mary Shultis, Ernest Spafford, Mary B. Scott, Gladys E. Sturt, Edna M. Taylor, James H. Teasdale, Emily Thomas, Mildred Thompson, Muriel Thompson, Clare Twohig, Maureen Twomey, Arthur Tuckey, Margery Whatling, James L. Walmsley, Norman Ward, Hilda G. Watts, Florence A. Webby, Dorothy E. Welsh, Margaret E. West, Jane E. Westwood, Laura A. Whitfield, Muriel D. U. Whitworth, Olive R. Whittemore, Ciaris E. Whyman, Maud E. Whitehurst, Ellen Whitelock, Doris W. Williams, Margaret E. Williamson, Jack A. R. Wood.

VIOLIN.—Ruby I. H. Coates, William T. Green, Lenora F. Walker.

VIOLONCELLO.—Emma Pook.

SINGING.—Mrs. Florence H. Westbrook.

ORGAN.—William Baxter, Albert A. Drew, Harold W. James, Arthur S. Jones, Amy Jones, John W. Porter, Elizabeth E. Rowse, Elsie A. Shillinglaw, Ernest S. Stride, Charles Southern, William T. Travers, Walter Todd, James S. Wright.

ELOCUTION.—Ruby Archdale, Mary Appleyard, Alice Brown, Irene Dale, Margaret H. Knight, Eileen W. Miller, Lilian Sinclair-Hill, Lily M. Spilman.

CERTIFICATES

THEORY AND PRACTICE OF COMPOSITION.—Laura E. M. Mills.

PIANOFORTE.—Peter Anderson, George E. Arnold, Eric Aspley (Hons.), Brenda K. M. Bailey (Hons.), Lilian Bamforth, Bertha Bannister, Winifred L. Barton, Kathleen M. Beatty, Doris M. Beilby, Kathleen I. Belston, Mary J. Betson, Barbara O. Browne, Barbara M. Bolton, Marion G. Chetwode-Barton, Rosalyn E. Cheshire, Lavinia F. Cousins, Evelyn M. Cool, Winifred J. Cloke, Gladys M. Dalton, Frances J. Digance, Joyce H. Downing, Sallie Evans, Ivy E. Eves, Dorothy M. Goodson, Muriel L. Forshaw, Mary L. Forsyth, James W. Foster, Allie A. Gibb, Dorothy I. B. Green, Rachel A. Griffiths, Elsie D. Golding,

(Continued on page 784.)

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC—(continued from page 783).

Mary M. J. Guthrie, Albert H. Hanson, Edith Harari, Margaret V. Hathway, Dorothy M. Hitchin, Annie Holland, Dorothy E. Hughes, Vera Jubb, Miriam L. Large, Blanche Lowe (Hons.), Margaret S. H. Lloyd, Frances Lodge (Hons.), Ellen D. Madden (Hons.), Dorothy Mason, Mavis Martin, Edith Martin, Ethel V. Markham, Margaret E. Mason, Edith A. E. Nash, Alvina E. L. Nicholls, Alice L. V. Norton (Hons.), James Nuttall, Annie O'Kelly (Hons.), Donald Peace, Harold Peacock (Hons.), Nellie Porter, Myfanwy Roberts, Hilda Stevens, Gladys I. Senior (Hons.), Irene M. Shelton, Hilda Schofield, Fredrick P. Wadeson (Hons.), Lilian L. Watt, Elsie R. Weaire, Margaret E. West, Elsie H. Wheeler, Muriel W. Wilkinson, Dora C. Whitehead, Frederick G. Wilde, Elsie Wilson, Jessie Wike (Hons.).

SINGING.—Edith Calvert, Ethel Duxberry.

ORGAN.—Amy E. Bowler, William S. Johnson (Hons.), William J. R. Kessell.

OPTIONAL EXAMINATION IN HARMONY AND FORM.—Gavin H. Smith, L.T.C.L.

EXAMINERS.—H. L. Balfour, Mus.B., Professor Granville Bantock, M.A., Mus. D., J. E. Borland, Mus. D., W. H. Brereton, Prof. J. C. Bridge, M.A., Mus. D., R. A. Chamberlain, M.A., Mus. B., Avalon Collard, Sir Frederic H. Cowen, Mus. D., Edric Cundell, Ernest Denny, Edward d'Evry, Paul Edmonds, Dawson Freer, Fred J. Gostelow, H. A. Harding, Mus. D., E. F. Horner, Mus. D., Thomas Keighley Mus. D., Charlton Keith, J. Charles Long, Mus. B., William Lovelock, Mus. B., C. Egerton Lowe, Emmeline Medd Hall, A. Mistowski, Mus. D., E. J. Moeran, C. H. Moody, C.B.E., Mus. D., G. O'Connor Morris, S. Myerscough, Mus. B., Tivadar Nachez, G. Oldroyd, Mus. D., Louis Pecskai, Arthur W. Pollitt, Mus. D., E. Stanley Roper, B.A., Mus. B., Archy Rosenthal, Alec Rowley, Wilfrid Sanderson, Mus. B., Joseph Speaight, D. Vaughan Thomas, M.A., Mus. D., Anderson Tyrer, George F. Vincent, John Warriner, Mus. D., Alexander Watson, Maud Agnes Winter.

Next Diploma Examinations will take place at the College and at certain approved provincial centres in January next. Last day of entry for London, December 8; for the provincial centres, December 1.

December 8. Last day of entry for the next open competition for many Scholarships in practical musical subjects, also for a number of University Degree in Music scholarships.

Particulars of the Teaching Department, with list of Professors, Fees, Scholarships regulations, &c., and the Syllabuses of the Diploma and Local Examinations, free on application to the undersigned.

C. N. H. RODWELL, Secretary.

JUST PUBLISHED

MENDELSSOHN SONG ALBUM

EDITED BY
Sydney Northcote
(Professor, G.S.M.)

New English Versions
BY
R. H. Elkin

CONTENTS:

1. ON WINGS OF SONG (Auf Flügeln des Gesanges)
2. IS IT TRUE? (Frage)
3. GREETING (Gruss)
4. O YOUTH (O Jugend)
5. THE FALCON (Wartend)
6. ON THE LAKE (Schilflied)
7. THE MOON (Der Mond)
8. A HUNTING SONG (Jagdlied)

IN TWO EDITIONS:
Low Voice, and Medium or High Voice.

PRICE COMPLETE, 3*s.* 6*d.* NET.
(Each song is also issued separately at 1s. 6d. net)

ELKIN & CO., LTD.,
20, KINGLY STREET, REGENT STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

BROADWOOD PIANOS

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD.
STEINGRÄBER EDITION
SELECTED ORGAN ALBUMS

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 2226 | ANDERSSEN: Three Fugues ... ... ... ... | (4) | 2/0 |
| 2493 | — Fantasia on the Choral, "Aus tiefer Noth" ... | (4) | 2/0 |
| 1486 | ANTALFFY: Two Fugues ... ... ... ... ... | (4) | 2/0 |
| 1487 | — Legend ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | (4) | 2/0 |
| 1648 | — Intermezzo ... ... ... ... ... ... | (4) | 2/0 |
| | BACH: Organ Works. (Homeyer-Eckardt) 5 vols. | | |
| *64/6 | — — Vols. I./III. (Homeyer) ... ... ... | (3-5) ea. | 4/6 |
| 217 2/3 | — — Vols. IV./V. (Eckardt) ... ... ... | (3-5) ea. | 4/0 |
| 1925/8 | — Trio-Studies. (Thiele) 4 volumes ... | (4-5) ea. | 3/6 |
| 1397 | ECKARDT: Op. 34. Andante sostenuto ... ... | (4) | 2/0 |
| 1416 | — Op. 48. Pastoral-Fantasia ... ... ... ... | (4) | 2/0 |
| 2035 | ERBE: Op. 15. Five Choral-Figurations ... ... | (2-4) | 2/0 |
| 2017 | GRUNDMANN: Op. 6. 3 Preludes in form of Fugues | (4) | 2/0 |
| 2018 | — Op. 7. At Christmas-Eve. 3 Pastorals ... ... | (4) | 2/0 |
| 2170 | — Op. 9. In Serious Times. 11 Choral-Preludes ... | (4) | 2/6 |
| 2272 | MARTEAU: Op. 23, No. 1. Prelude and Passacaglia | (5) | 2/0 |
| 2213 | — Op. 23, No. 2. Prelude and Fugue... ... | (6) | 2/0 |
| 2214 | — Op. 23, No. 3. Introd. e Fuga meditativa ... | (6) | 2/0 |
| *77 | MENDELSSOHN: Organ Works. (Homeyer)... ... | (5) | 4/0 |
| 2230 | PACHELBEL: Fugue in E minor. (K. Erbe) ... ... | (4) | 2/0 |
| *67 | PRELUDES-ALBUM. (Homeyer) (87 Preludes and other Pieces of famous Organ-Masters ... ... | (2) | 3/0 |
| 899 | RIEMENSCHNEIDER: Op. 25. Concert-Prelude ... | (5) | 2/0 |
| 906 | — Op. 26. Concert-Postlude ... ... ... ... | (5) | 2/0 |
| 1156 | — Op. 29a. Stimmungsbilder I. ... ... ... | (3-4) | 2/6 |
| 1169 | — Op. 33. 1st Sonata. A major ... ... ... | (5) | 2/6 |
| 1265 | — Op. 43a. Stimmungsbilder II. ... ... ... | (3-4) | 2/6 |
| 1304 | — Op. 44. Ten Choral-Preludes ... ... ... | (4) | 2/6 |
| 1321 | — Op. 51. Eight Organ-Pieces ... ... ... ... | (5) | 2/6 |
| 1446 | — Op. 56. Prelude and Fugue. B flat major ... | (5) | 2/0 |
| 1604 | — Op. 58. Canzone. Pedal-Study ... ... ... | (5) | 2/0 |
| 1605 | — Op. 59a. Stimmungsbilder III. ... ... ... | (3-4) | 2/0 |
| 1793 | — Op. 62. 2nd Sonata. D major ... ... ... | (5) | 3/0 |
| 78 | SCHUMANN: Op. 60. Bach-Fugues. (Homeyer) ... | (5) | 2/0 |
| *1253 | TÖPFER-ALBUM: 84 Preludes and Postludes ... ... | (3) | 5/0 |
| 1497 | WEIDENHAGEN: Op. 32. Four Festival Postludes... | (5) | 2/6 |
| 1527 | — Op. 34. Festival Music on "Ein' feste Burg" ... | (5) | 2/6 |
| 1528 | — Op. 35, No. 1. Advent Pastoral on "Macht hoch die Tür" ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | (5) | 2/0 |
| 1529 | — Op. 35, No. 2. Paraphrase on "Seht, er kommt." By Händel ... ... ... ... ... ... | (5) | 2/0 |
| 1530 | — Op. 40. Ten Preludes ... ... ... ... | (5) | 4/0 |

(The figures in parentheses indicate degrees of difficulty.)
(2) Easy, (3) Medium 1, (4) Medium 2, (5) Difficult, (6) Very Difficult.

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD., Music Publishers,
8, HEDDON STREET, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.1.

JUST PUBLISHED.

SOLEMN MELODY

BY

H. WALFORD DAVIES

ARRANGED FOR

BRASS BAND

BY

J. ORD HUME

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS PER SET

Separate parts, 2*d.* each

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

Photo by] [Moffat, Princes Street, Edinburgh

ALFRED HOLLINS

The Musical Times

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

SEPTEMBER 1 1928

(For List of Contents see Page 847.)

THE STRAVINSKY LEGENDS

By Leonid Sabaneev

In this article I do not wish to express any opinion as to the value of the creative work of this most famous of my contemporaries and compatriots. Let this be the task of others to whom the study of his music affords more gratification. My intention here is merely to point to a number of facts connected with his labours.

Every big composer—especially one who provokes quarrels and controversies—is the subject of an extensive literature, and Stravinsky has not escaped this, all the European and American journals being full of articles concerning him. It may be due to the fact that the left wing of contemporary musical criticism does not include many specialists amongst its musicians, or to other causes connected generally with the custom now prevalent amongst musical scribes of writing round music, of talking dogmatically and aphoristically rather than in accordance with facts: however it may be, I note the interesting circumstance that with every month there is an increase in the growth of the musical legends at one time created round the figure of Stravinsky. They have explained him and interpreted him, and every step that he takes, be it good or bad, is expounded, whether with the composer's consent I do not know. It is evident that these legends are gradually becoming formulæ, labels attached to him, so that he can no longer walk abroad without them. Every musician, and especially the non-musician, repeats these tags and formulæ about Stravinsky, which perhaps take the place of opinions of his own, or may simply represent the power of the printed word and the hypnosis of authority; in any case it is impossible to discuss Stravinsky nowadays without hearing that he is returning to Bach, or to Handel, or to Glinka; that every work of his is a type and not a mere composition; that in every one of them he sets a problem and solves it; that he is a composer of pure music; &c.

There are instances in which it is a matter of consequence to a man that he should be a subject of discussion without regard to truth or probability. Artistes and artists often have recourse to this method, sending paragraphs to the newspapers concerning their marriages and their sports, and describing how they were attacked by Corsican brigands. This charming and naïve advertisement does not, of course, suit Stravinsky, who occupies such an important position amongst composers. With regard to him it would be desirable to know just what is genuine in his work and his moods, and in the ideas by which he is guided. But let us see whether all these legends satisfy the criterion of truth and probability. A big composer can lose nothing by the refutation of inaccurate statements of fact concerning him.

We will begin with the legend of Stravinsky as a composer of pure music. Pure music is a fully defined concept, which signifies music entirely independent of extraneous, non-musical impressions, such as a text, the stage, associations inspired by a programme. Consequently it observes its immanent laws of musical beauty and euphony. Does Stravinsky show himself to be a composer of such music? I would remind you that I am not discussing the value of his work, which may possibly be that of a genius. But is it pure music? Musical history has known many geniuses who have produced music that was not pure. An overwhelming proportion of Stravinsky's compositions are written for the stage (ballets, an opera-oratorio, &c.), and in them we always have a text or a programme. Their very type is doubly descriptive, illustrative, decorative, inclining to grotesqueness and even to caricature. That this is not an unfounded statement is evident from the titles of these compositions: 'The Fire-Bird,' a ballet; 'Petrushka,' a ballet-grotesque; 'Mavra' and 'Les Noces,' works of a characteristic type for stage performance; 'Pulcinella,' a ballet; 'The Rite of Spring,' a ballet; 'Œdipus Rex,' an opera-oratorio; 'The Little Fox,' 'Zvezdoliky,' a cantata; &c. All these are most characteristic as types of applied and descriptive music, music for the stage and the ballet. Moreover, they lose a great deal in a symphonic performance—more even than symphonic fragments from Wagner, whose music is manifestly purer than Stravinsky's. Some of these works are complete failures when divorced from the stage, which justifies the harshness of certain passages. Whence, then, the legend of pure music and a pure musician? Is it possible that his Pianoforte Sonata, Serenade, and Concerto are sufficient to outweigh in the scales of justice the whole mass of his previous and subsequent compositions? And, lastly, can we admit that in these compositions the principles of pure music triumph? They contain too little euphony for that.

Thus the legend of Stravinsky as a writer of pure music falls to pieces upon the mere examination of his compositions. Can it be that the composer, though working with subjects, sets himself—strange as it may seem—purely musical problems? Certainly not. In all the scores mentioned above we have before us his perfectly straightforward desire to attain the maximum of descriptive effect; so much so that, for description's sake, purely musical beauty and euphony are often sacrificed.

Let us go on. Stravinsky, as his satellites affirm, sets and solves a fresh problem in every composition. Well and good; but it would be desirable to know at least what kind of problems are here solved, so that we may judge as to whether a general solution of a stated problem has been reached, and how far it is satisfactory. It is unsafe to weigh the solutions of problems the nature of which remains unknown. If the the composer intentionally conceals from us the essence of the problems he has solved, it would be better to be equally reticent concerning the solutions. Many composers have manifestly set and solved problems, and their musical text has shown clearly in what they consist and to what extent the solutions have been successful. But when the whole business is attended with secrecy, discussion amounts to a mere exercise in verbal fencing, in order to conceal the inability to say anything that will accord with the substance, the musical essence of the phenomenon.

It appears, furthermore, that Stravinsky's compositions are always types and not compositions pure and simple—are something in the nature of the Platonic idea of a given type. His Sonata, his Concerto, his Oratorio are types of their various categories. That is all very well. But why are we suddenly expected to believe that such is the case? These things of Stravinsky's may be excellent, may even be works of genius, but other sonatas, and concertos, and oratorios have been equally so. Why, then, is the term restricted to Stravinsky? Why are a Liszt or a Beethoven Concerto manifestly far more typical than the Stravinksy Concerto—why are they not types? Is it because one of the most enlightened thinkers on the subject of Stravinsky has wished it to be so? Who conferred this privilege of being a type, and on what is it based?

All this claim turns out to be quite unfounded. There are no proofs, and it is merely a matter of hardihood and audacity. Beyond dispute, these qualities nowadays have a powerful effect on people who are too lazy or have no time to form their own opinions, and who are very anxious to utter wise words concerning Stravinsky. But to us musicians it is permissible to ask for some explanation.

Then there is current a legend concerning Stravinsky's return. Judging from his commentators he has been returning for a long time (it is really a few years), but whither, in what direction, and why, are not at all clear, as opinions on this subject differ considerably. On one point only is there agreement—that he does return: some say to Bach, others to Handel, to Beethoven, to Glinka. However fantastic this simultaneous return in such dissimilar directions, nobody is disturbed thereby. Nevertheless it implies a certain resemblance to the personalities to whom the composer is returning, and that resemblance is a quite real, concrete fact and not a mystical theory; consequently it should be possible to establish it by means of actual instances. Let us make the experiment.

Well, here again we find there is something wrong. According to his satellites, Stravinsky's Concerto is a reversion to Bach (or, some say, to Beethoven). But Bach, as we know, has typical methods, favourite types of the distribution of the parts, and these are entirely lacking in Stravinsky. Is it a return to Bach's contrapuntal style? No; Stravinsky's style is not purely polyphonic. Further, one of Bach's characteristic qualities is the great purity of his harmonies, but Stravinsky has none of this; his harmonies may be characteristic, but there is nothing of Bach about them.

Now as to Stravinsky's Sonata. If the opening of the first movement recalls anything, it is Rubinstein's 'Demon,' but the subsequent development reminds us rather of the style of the later classics (Beethoven and Hummel), when it had become rough and harmonically harsh. The second movement may have some resemblance to Beethoven, but there is no trace of Bach. Moreover, the most characteristic feature of the music of Bach and Beethoven is its expressiveness, a quality which Stravinsky himself rejects. His Sonata and Concerto have nothing in common with Bach as regards rhythm, harmony, melody, polyphony, or figuration. Whence, then, the legend? Are the commentators too little acquainted with Bach, and know him from hearsay as a 'dry' and 'mechanical' composer,' such as he was at one time regarded by the less cultured elements of the public? In that case they have probably accepted the dryness and the deliberate inexpressiveness of Stravinsky's latest works as the qualities which liken him to Bach.

It is the same story when we come to the return to Handel. In the facture of 'Œdipus Rex' there is absolutely nothing Handelian. Handel is contrapuntal in his choruses, diatonic and clear in his harmonies, expressive in his melodies; he has a characteristic rhythmical style, familiar to every musician who knows his scores. Stravinsky has no counterpoint, he is diatonic in quite another sense, his harmonies are harsh and deliberately make play with 'wrong' notes. The score of 'Œdipus Rex' contains reminiscences of the musical literature of the past, but not of Handel. The opening chords have more resemblance to the style of French opera of the early part of the 19th century; Jocasta's aria, the fanfare motifs, and the general conception are very like Meyerbeer. Another of Jocasta's arias recalls Militrisa's lamentation in Rimsky-Korsakov's opera 'Tsar Saltan.' The scoring of 'Œdipus Rex' has nothing in common with the Handelian resonance. Once again the question forces itself upon us: Do the commentators themselves know Handel and his style, or is he for them only a formula for the ratio to infinity? The answer thrusts itself upon us too, because it appears that in the same work—'Œdipus Rex'—a resemblance to Handel is very naïvely mixed up with a resemblance to . . . Glinka. It would seem difficult to bracket Handel with Glinka, nevertheless it has been done, and by those very persons who are known for a fact to be unfamiliar with Glinka's compositions. Handel, Bach, or Glinka—it is all something remote, something very old, of which the commentators themselves are as ignorant as of the Egyptian Pharaohs. Evidently, in discovering a similarity between these composers, they merely wish to express the opinion that Stravinsky's latest works have little to do with the style of contemporary music—that they smack of the archaic. But to us musicians there is a minimum of the archaic in Stravinsky.

Personally I do not know if the composer himself is interested in being likened to somebody—Meyerbeer or Glinka, or Bach and Handel. I do not understand the passionate desire to force these resemblances upon him—resemblances which turn out to be myths. They do it without even consulting the originals or troubling to examine the outlook of this very Handel whom Stravinsky is alleged to resemble. It is little short of disastrous that certain persons whose vocation lies in other directions should devote themselves to writing musical commentaries, and should talk and publish nonsense. Unhappily, the legend thus originated grows and spreads, and in a neutral and, individually, almost illiterate society, by whom the substitution of Stravinsky by Bach or Glinka, or even by Offenbach and Orlando di Lasso, would be quite unnoticed—in such a society a stereotyped appraisement is created which has no foundation in fact. An absurdity conceived by somebody is repeated and finds ready and general acceptance; it takes the place of an opinion of one's own. The causes of this phenomenon are to be found in that curse of musical criticism—ignorance of things in general and of music in particular. But eventually musical criticism will become what it once was—the opinion of the enlightened musician and not of the casual layman. The first stage in the restoration of this healthy condition must be the exposure of the legends which have been created, and which deceive the general public, who expect from criticism an essential estimate and analysis. The moment must come when composers will once again provide them with works of good quality, and the criticisms will be on an equally high level.

(Translated by S. W. Pring.)

POETRY, SONG, AND SCHUBERT

II.

By Mrs. Frank Liebich

One of the chief sources of Schubert's great fecundity as a song-writer was his quick power of intuition. By virtue of this lightning faculty he would make a rapid response to the latent meaning of a poem and record his experience in his own medium of rhythm, melody, and harmony. His best songs are evidence of a perfect equipoise of words and music, often as delicately adjusted to one another as any well-proportioned organic structure. So compact are some of these dainty song-forms as to offer an illustration of Arnold Schönberg's statement that a perfect work of art should be so homogeneous in its constitution as to disclose in every detail its truest and inmost being. 'Thus,' he says, 'I came to a full understanding of the Schubert songs, together with the poetry, from the music alone, and of Stefan George's poems from their sound alone; and this with a perfection that could hardly be attained by analysis and synthesis, and which in any case could not be surpassed.' *

Schubert's frequent immediate reaction to his experience of a poem helps one to realise that the notion of movement is the essential idea of all poetry, and that its mating with music can be understood as based on the feeling of élan, rhythmic motion, flight. Schubert, by reason of his close intimacy with poets and writers, must have unconsciously possessed the knowledge that a word, like a note, has overtones, in so much as it has jewel-like flashes of expression and almost as many shades of meaning as it has facets.

Schubert drew upon upwards of eighty different poets for his songs. The majority were German. He set fifty-five of Goethe's lyrics, forty-one of Schiller's. Of English poets Shakespeare, Scott, and James Macpherson (Ossian) provided him with lyrics. His friend the poet Mayrhofer had translated Shakespeare's Morning Serenade from 'Cymbeline' and a Drinking Song from 'Antony and Cleopatra.' Bauernfeld had rendered 'To Sylvia,' from the 'Two Gentlemen of Verona,' into German, and Storck had made German versions of Ellen's first, second, and third songs from Scott's 'Lady of the Lake,' as well as a Border song, 'Coronach,' and the 'Song of the Imprisoned Huntsman,' from the same poem; also a song from 'The Pirate,' and the 'Romance' sung by Richard Cœur de Lion in 'Ivanhoe.' The prose poems of Macpherson had been translated into German by Harold, and were much in vogue amongst Schubert's poet friends. The wild, romantic nature of the poems appealed to them and to Schubert. He set 'Colma's Lament,' 'Loda's Spectre,' 'The Maiden from Innistore,'

* 'Arnold Schönberg,' by Egon Wellesz.

'The Death of Oscar,' 'Croma,' 'Shilrik and Vinvela,' and 'The Night.'

A. W. Schlegel's version of Petrarch's sonnets and one by Dante, several of Metastasio's poems, as well as a fragment from Æschylus, translated by Mayrhofer, were given various settings between the years 1813 and 1820. The three Italian songs from Metastasio, published as Op. 83, were dedicated to the singer Lablache. Mignon's Lied, 'Nun wer der Sehnsucht kennt,' from Goethe's 'Wilhelm Meister,' haunted Schubert at one time very persistently. He made four different settings of the poem. The best-known one, in A minor, was composed in 1826. He arranged the same air as a duet between Mignon and the Harpist, having previously used the poem for a male quintet. The 'Winterreise,' which was published in 1824, and 'Die Schöne Müllerin,' in 1828, were not performed in their entirety until 1856, when Julius Stockhausen showed that the melodies would be best understood by being sung in close association. What seems to have been Schubert's defect in the matter of song-writing was an occasional lack of fastidiousness in manner and matter. But it must be remembered that a great many of his songs were not published until after his death. Had he lived longer many might have been remodelled. Also his great facility had undoubted drawbacks, and he was ignorant or heedless of its dangers. He would often rapidly scribble melodies to please his friends; and many of these friends were excellent company but very mediocre poets. Often he forgot what he had written and to whom he had given the manuscript. His genial ways and manners were therefore answerable for the printing of a good many trivial songs. But to have kept over six hundred of them at one level of perfection would have been little short of miraculous. Beauty is only glimpsed by intuition; when this faculty is crippled and the intuitive power is non-existent there remains merely a more or less scholarly arrangement of hard-and-fast forms and rules.

Short of stature, with no special gifts of attractiveness in feature or person, Schubert must yet have possessed an indefinable latent charm of character which gained him devoted friends. And this particular fascination, which manifested itself on occasions to those with whom he was in sympathy, redeemed and coloured his otherwise ordinary personality. Similarly in some of his symphonic and chamber music the beauty which appears at frequent intervals acts with so potent a charm on the listener as to ease his hearing over tracts of rather weary commonplace. But had he lived longer, what might he not have achieved in the light of his own occasional failures! For with truth has it been said that genius learns from its own nature; talent learns from art. In middle age different thoughts and emotions from those which he had experienced in youth and early manhood would, in their turn, have liberated the creative instinct within him. The melody of his life was interrupted and broken at an age when the first part of it might merely have been an incantation of a still greater beauty, which would have been the inspiration of his maturer years.

A study of his personality leaves an indefinable impression that he had not arrived at a full realisation of his own powers. On the third day of November, 1828, he went to see Simon Sechter, then the best professor of counterpoint at Vienna, to arrange to have lessons in counterpoint from him. The day and hour of the lesson were fixed. But the following week was Schubert's last on earth. During the preceding ten months he had written, besides several pianoforte works, the String Quintet, the C minor Symphony, and had finished his work on the Mass in E flat. Between May and October he had composed the 'Schwanengesang,' the final song of the cycle, 'Die Taubenpost' ('The Carrier Pigeon') being the last song he ever wrote.

The evolution in harmony and counterpoint that has been brought about during the hundred years that have elapsed since the death of Schubert has elicited a richness in chord structure and tone-values undreamt of in his time. Yet Schönberg's pupil, Egon Wellesz, has recorded how the writer of the most advanced book on harmony of modern times directs his pupils' attention to Schubert as illustrating the essential in regard to rhythmic sequence as exemplified in his songs. 'Look at Schubert's "Auf dem Flusse," he says to them, and see how each successive movement leads on to the next.' Thus is shown the homogeneous nature of music as an art, and how its past continually interacts on its present. The 'Unfinished' Symphony is typical of Schubert's career. Dying in his prime, with his life-work seemingly unfinished, like that beautiful and popular work his name remains enshrined among the immortals and his fame will thus assuredly persist.

THE UNWANTED PIANOFORTE SOLO

By Alexander Brent-Smith

It is customary nowadays, I believe, to give essays some useful function to perform, such as pointing a moral, or advocating a principle. This essay does neither, but is merely a series of observations relating to pianoforte solos and their place in our daily life, illustrated by one of the most painful and humiliating experiences of my musical career. My first observation about pianoforte solos is this, that though everyone wants to learn the pianoforte, no one wants to listen to other performers. Some statisticians go so far as to say that the number of people desiring to learn is almost equal to the number of people desiring to teach. This may be an exaggeration, but supposing that every teacher has at least one pupil, then there must be millions of young men and women striving to master and subjugate their ten wayward fingers. But of these million learners, there seems not one who wants to hear a pianoforte solo when it is presented at a concert. Of course I do not refer to concerts given by serious and capable musicians, but to local concerts, invariably described as grand, in which the Squire sings, the Vicar apologizes, and the funny man from the nearest big town convulses the cheap, and slightly upsets the more expensive, ticket-holders.

It is at concerts of this type that the pianoforte becomes such a pitiable Cinderella, working hard for others, while she herself is being perpetually scorned and snubbed. The pianist opens the proceedings with a pianoforte solo. This item is usually regarded as an intimation to the men who are gossiping outside the door that the concert is about to start, so in they troop.

An audience of this type cannot, and does not want to, listen to a pianoforte solo. Why should it? In the first place, a pianoforte solo, not having any words, does not convey any message to the listener. Nor does its title increase its appeal, because custom decrees that the works of salon composers, like the creations of superior cooks, should be served up with a foreign name. Very different are songs and recitations, which, however badly delivered, do convey some intelligible message, even if it be but the expression of some sentimental feeling which a poet with any humour or sense would have been ashamed to record.

In the second place, is it not to be expected that a piece of abstract music which demands our serious attention should make but small effect while we are eagerly awaiting the advent of the funny man with his absurd facial contortions and irresistible fooling? In this world, for every hundred who are moved by deep feeling there are millions (including the deep-feeling hundred) who are moved by laughter. It is therefore not to be wondered at that pianoforte solos, however gay, have very little chance of appreciation when they stand cheek by jowl with singing and laughter.

How bitterly and how frequently have I realised the truth of this statement! Times without number I have helped at miscellaneous concerts, and have found my own pianistic contributions treated (as I admit both the performance and the pianoforte deserved) with the most perfunctory applause, whereas my rival, the comic man, has ascended and descended the platform in a perfect hurricane of hand-clapping.

My deepest humiliation took place during the war, when on one occasion I organized two concerts, afternoon and evening, in aid of some local cause. We did not have programmes, the Sergeant-Major announcing the items with a megaphone. At the afternoon concert I opened the programme with a pianoforte solo, which, considering the skilful way in which I avoided the broken strings while still preserving the flow of the music, ought to have raised a storm of applause, if not for the music at least for the conjuring skill displayed. Actually all that my heroic effort did was to turn the conversation of the audience from a gentle hum into a distinct buzz. After my futile performance, each item was greeted rapturously. Overcome with chagrin at my lack of success, I decided not to play an opening solo at the evening concert, but to start straightaway with a popular song which spoke intimately of the family affection of a dusky beauty somewhere on the Mississippi. I explained the situation to the Sergeant-Major, pointing out to him that pianoforte solos only bored the audience, and that in consequence it would be better to start with the second item.

'Shall I give that out, Sir?' asked the S.-M.

'Please do,' I answered.

He took his megaphone, and, with the full force of his gigantic lungs, he bellowed, 'Mr. Brent-Smith will not bore you again with another pianoforte solo, so we will start with a song,' &c. No sooner had he uttered this unintentional but scathing criticism than he realised what he had said, and, turning round, he gave me a look of such contrition that we became from that moment friends for life. But the truth is there all the same—pianoforte solos at such concerts are like cautionary words in military drill—things that are necessary, but which demand neither response nor action.

After all, I think I see an edifying moral emerging from these observations, and that is, that pianists must be prepared to give and not to count the cost; to serve their fellow-men with never a hope of honour or reward.

Ad Libitum

'HATS OFF, GENTLEMEN! ——'

By 'Feste'

A good many oddities in the way of composition reach me, but top place is taken by the latest, which comes from New York. It is called 'The Exile's Lament,' and is by Harold B. Jayne. I do not apologise for making it the subject of a few remarks, the more so as Mr. Jayne, on his cover, says, 'Composer invites comments, favourable or unfavourable, especially from students, stating whether form of presentation and description helpful.' In the most literal sense, then, Mr. Jayne is asking for it.

'The Exile's Lament' is described as 'A Musical Drama, without words, in F minor and twelve related keys. A Rending yet Restful Remnant for Piano, Harp, or Organ, for Those Who Think and Feel.'

I must dispute the statement that this rending and restful remnant is without words; on the contrary, there are almost, if not quite, as many words as notes per page. The score bristles with directions in various tongues. However, before coming to the composition itself, the composer (who will be talking) holds us on the inside of the cover with a page of close type headed:

'COMPOSER'S THEME AND INTERPRETATION WHICH READ AND ANNOUNCE BEFORE PLAYING'

Most of us who do any kind of creative work are at times uneasy as to the quality of some of it, consoling ourselves, however, with the reflection that having done our best we can do no more, and that no man can always be at the top of his form. Mr. Harold B. Jayne is free from such doubts. He opens the ball by handsomely describing his work as 'pathetic, beautiful, affecting, and haunting,' which is surely all that can be asked of any piece of music:

> In this pathetic, beautiful, affecting, and haunting lament, opening with 'call to assemble,' we trickle up and down a scale of tender memories; a 'flood of anguish' bowed in woe; a rending, echoing, haunting cry; resignation to the passing years; 'eheu fugaces, anni labuntur'; alas, the years, they flee away. A ray of light and hope; again plunged in despair, through periods of meditation, as we sit in the shadows spending the present and re-spending the past.

And so on, to a spasm of religiosity that I prefer not to quote.

---

A passage that follows the 'Theme and Interpretation' suggests that, despite the request for comments, favourable and unfavourable, quoted above, Mr. Jayne is liable to grow restive under criticism:

'COMPOSER'S CAVEAT TO CRITICS AND THOSE WHO COMPLAINED OF ORIGINAL BREVITY AND DEMAND MORE CONVENTIONAL MELODY.'

> Remember the Great Moments of Life must be measured by intensity, not by duration. More life, actual or in imagination, may be lived or reviewed by a single thought that glances over earth or mounts to heaven in an instant of time, than in thousands of years of physical existence. So may intense emotion, extremity of anguish, be encompassed and expressed in a few bars and measures of music. . . . Wouldst thou prolong, save in its echoes, a 'haunting cry'; deflect a 'ray of light' by trifling, prattling melody; so intrude on sorrow, solitude, and despair; on meditation, by more than tick of clock, or chimes, twice told; arouse 're-flection' save by shadows, softly flitting by; tell the years, save in single beads?

If you do these not quite clearly-expressed things:

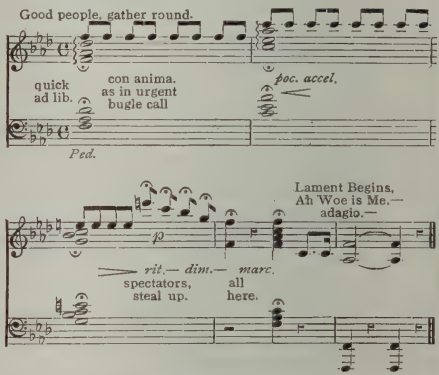
> Avaunt, trifler, subtle modulations and enharmonics, that transcend, and rich harmonies that exalt, rend, and soothe, are not for thee.

Yet, with all his avaunting of trifling critics, Mr. Jayne has a heart, and is not above making a few concessions:

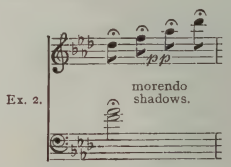
> IN APOLOGIA.—In this revised and published copy, I may, somewhat, have yielded to importunity and indulged in digressions that suggest—a logician, wandering from the point; a philosopher, that cannot keep silent; a sage, of surplus words. To me, the 'true and moving lament' rests in its rich and shattering harmonies, leading by straight path to the soul; more than in diverting, evading, and pleasant excursions by the wayside; a shallow style of irreverent floriture, such as infests and destroys early Italian Opera; at least in grandeur.

All these surplus words from the sage lead one to expect something startling and novel in the music. The references to 'intensity,' 'single thoughts that glance over earth and mount to Heaven,' and so on, raise high hopes as to Mr. Jayne's inventive powers. We are soon undeceived. His opening bars bring us down with a dull, rich thud:

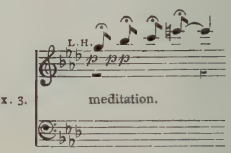
Ex. 1. Call to Assemble.—



The figure illustrating the stealing up of the spectators (apparently on reluctant tip-toes) calls for comment. In various forms it does duty for a variety of phenomena. A few bars later we have this:



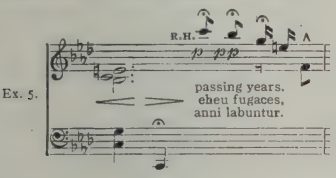
Two bars more, and it represents something else:



(There may be some subtle reason for bidding the player to meditate with his L.H. thus at the top of the keyboard; but I cannot discover it.)

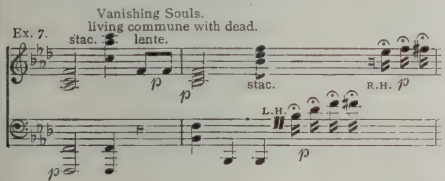
Meditation is of various kinds. That represented in Ex. 3 is of the questioning, dubious type. A bar later appears a more positive sample :

However, we have not yet done with that little single-note figure. Having used it to depict stealing spectators, meditation, and shadows, Mr. Jayne calls on it again :

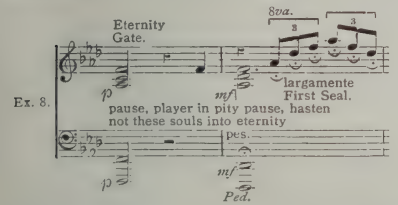


By putting it in the bass, he gives us another brand of shadows :

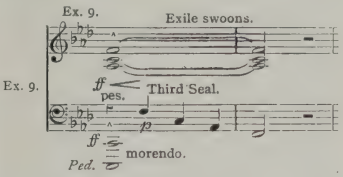
Before this page is out he makes it serve for something very different—nothing less than communion with the departed :



Which brings us to 'Eternity Gate: and the opening of the First Seal,' by means of the same old figure, now noted differently, but unmistakable :



It turns up again in the next bar (Second Seal), and, inverted and put in the bass, assists at the opening of the Third Seal, at which point it will be seen that the Exile, overcome by these rich and shattering harmonies and intense thoughts, promptly swoons :



I admit being almost overcome myself, though not in the same way.

---

Two more examples of Mr. Jayne's skilful use of the Lisztian metamorphosis of theme must be quoted. Those detached quavers have yet some further duty to perform. Here we see them again :

The instruction to 'trickle softly' may be recommended to Mr. Percy Grainger, if he is as keen as he used to be concerning unconventional directions. On the whole Mr. Jayne has him beaten in this department, for Mr. Grainger has never gone so far as to allude to shivering and weeping :

This by the way. The reader is waiting for Mr. Jayne's final use of his little figure-of-all-work. Here it is; now extended, and in octaves, and so naturally suggesting red trumpet blasts :

Lest the reader should think that these extracts do injustice to Mr. Jayne's inventive powers, I hasten to point out that the reverse is the case. Almost without exception his 'melodies' consist of scraps of the common chord or the dominant seventh. There are only two exceptions, and, as will be seen, they are very little ones :

I am not clear as to whether the words 'Collapse feebly' are a direction to the player, or an illustration of the Exile's condition (he is only four bars away from that swoon). A mere critic, still feeling a bit sore from that 'Avaunt, trifler!' might feel inclined to get some of his own back by applying it to Mr. Jayne's inventive powers.

On the whole, I think the worst bars have not been quoted. The line, however, must be drawn somewhere, not only from considerations of space, but also because Mr. Jayne more than once reminds his customers that the work is copyright. I therefore end with the final cadence :

I feel inclined to argue as to that 'Time 6 mins.' I make it nearer seven minutes. But it may be that I dallied at some of the pauses, of which there are no fewer than fifty-six. (The entire work contains only sixty-five bars, so it will be seen that the player progresses with difficulty.) As to the direction to 'Play twice for full impression,' I deny the necessity, for Mr. Jayne's music is of the sort that yields up all its secrets at once, thanks to his practical, commonsense method of depending less upon notes than on words. Nobody knows better than he that his music alone might mean anything—or even nothing. We have seen this with the little figure quoted so often. As with his melody so with his harmony, which consists entirely of common chords with a few sevenths. Thus, the plain chord of F minor occurs thirteen times. But do they all mean the same thing? They do not. One follows the 'spectators steal up' bar, and signifies that they are 'all here.' Several illustrate despair, one seems to refer to a 'peasant's cottage' (with timepiece, as is proved by three ticking quavers, duly labelled 'clock'); one has to do with 'light, hope, in excelsis cantando'; another with 'restored composure'; and the last one with 'Eternity Gate.' And nobody would think that the first inversion of the F major chord had anything to do with swooning, had not Mr. Jayne told us that the Exile succumbed at that point. Yet—so great is the power of suggestion—having read Mr. Jayne's note we can see the poor chap swooning about all over the place, and we feel that he might as easily do it to this chord as to any other. A born swooner doesn't need to pick and choose; any old chord will do, so long as it is labelled. The whole principle of programme music is summed up in that last sentence, but I resist the temptation to develop the point. Space is running out, and although I have finished with Mr. Jayne's music, there is matter on his cover that demands attention.

---

First, I note that he is by no means a one-work man. The back of his cover contains a long list, from which I select a few titles :

> Neglecting Life's Opportunities.—A Musical Allegory. A Message. A Word of Caution to the Young. Closing with the Clock of Time, struck by the Hand of Fate and Beckoning Opportunity—

(which reads rather like an advertisement of Eno's Fruit Salt).

> Quo Vadis, Nocturne, Fantasie.—Wandering along the Streams, Highways, and Byways of Life. With Rending and Soothing Melodies played on 'breast bone' of immolated 'lost love' for harp and violin.
>
> I Saw My Mother in a Dream.—Also called, 'The Revelations of St. John the Divine.' With Slumbering, Recumbent Nude Figures. Opening with Ground Bass, Stabbing itself with Shafts of Light.
>
> Committed to the Deep.—Lost at Sea.—Colorful Organ Number, dedicated to 'all who go down to the sea in ships' and to the United States Navy, —which, he implies, doesn't.

Another work is described as 'A Reverential Setting in F sharp minor and 18 Related Keys'; another is an Idyll 'with Rays of Rainbow in Violin Movement.'

The list is headed :

> LIST OF COMPOSITIONS, INSTRUMENTAL AND VOCAL, WITH DESCRIPTIVE TITLES, TEXTS, AND THEMES FOR PIANO AND ORGAN
>
> Music that Depicts, Speaks, Appeals, Thrills, Soothes, Haunts, Chords that Bind
>
> By Harold B. Jayne
>
> An inspired, untaught, untrained musician, springing like Minerva, full-fledged at birth, from Gwallia, Ancient Wales, that Land of Bards and Music.

Another page of the cover contains 'Comments and Opinions, Scraps from the Composer's Scrap Book,' the largest scrap being a letter from F. W. Hardwicke, who is described as 'an M.A. of Oxford, and Doctor of Music of London, England, Well known in Musical and Publishing Circles as a composer, Director of large orchestras and symphonies, and orchestrator of music, and organist, in England, Europe, Russia, Japan, the U.S.A., and Canada.'

Despite these world-wide activities, his name is new to me, and probably to most readers. If there be a Musical Doctor Hardwicke, I am surprised to find him testifying as follows concerning Mr. Jayne's music:

> I feel that I must write you a line. . . . Your several numbers are all great, showing most vividly, in tone, color, and construction, the legends and lyrics they are meant to depict. Indeed, without even the recital of the prologue, or use of words in any way, these unique Musical Compositions of yours tell and portray their story in a marvellous way.
>
> The dynamic chords, related and inter-related, have, within them, inner melodies, so beautiful, so subtle, at times rising and swelling forth, and then subsiding in tones of anguish, resignation, and content. These are creations.
>
> All your numbers lend themselves to magnificent orchestration, and yet being wonderful compositions for the pianoforte, especially when played by their composer. In short, all your numbers are of the highest rank and unique in character. . . . I pay my tribute to you as a genius.

More could not be said of a Beethoven, even by a rhapsodic Hardwicke.

Here is a tribute from 'An English Lady, a Church and Festival Organist':

> I tried this 'Lament' [the work discussed above] on the organ, last Saturday night, in empty church. It is a most touching thing, almost too much so for poor mortals like me. The chords are rich and grand, and brought tears to my eyes, as they first swelled around me and then shivered into ghostly silence.

This is not the only English lady who is rapt away by Jayne. Here is another, who, Harold B. assures us, has 'Taste and Cultivation':

> I love your 'Farewell to the Anvil,' and can get a lot out of it, though I miss you by my side to guide me, so that I can play it as I heard you play it in Vancouver and Montreal. Never mind publishers and so-called musicians. Your chords and music are the same type as the 'Lost Chord' and bring solace. . . . Your music may not be orthodox in writing, but it is your soul speaking and helping others.

Finally, here is a more homely testimonial from 'A Bootlegger, A Good Fellow and Traveller over Life's Rough Way':

> Your music came wonderfully over the phone (composer has special method of transmitting over phone), and we were all much impressed. Your 'Vulcan and Venus' is a knock-out—keep me posted so that I can tell the boys, if you get on anywhere, of the treat in store for them. That is some music, I'll tell the world.

I am not a Bootlegger, and only a moderately Good Fellow, but I may claim to be a Traveller over Life's Rough way, so it is fitting that I should join my Fellow Traveller and do my bit in telling the world—though with a very different object.

---

Why do I take up precious space on Harold and his Exile, when there is real music waiting to be discussed? Thus an impatient reader. The answer is that we musicians have in the past done too little in the exposure of pretentious humbug. We have let the Jaynes impose themselves without hindrance on a credulous public, and the results have been bad for musicians, though highly profitable for the Jaynes. True, the Musical Times is not likely to be read by Doctor Hardwicke, the Lady of Taste and Cultivation, and least of all by the Bootlegger. In the ordinary way, it would not be read by Mr. Jayne. But this particular number will be. At all events, a marked copy will be sent to him. He 'invites comments.' Very well: on his head be it. He shall have mine.

---

BAYREUTH

July 19-26, 1928

A Traveller's Notes

The journey from London to Aachen, where I stayed for thirty-six hours, was uneventful, save for the heat in the train. Proceeding from Aachen to Nürnberg was more eventful. The train was crowded, a large number of the passengers, including a male-voice choir, travelling to Vienna for a big choral festival. During the thirteen hours' run to Nürnberg we heard constant snatches of part-songs from various parts of our carriage, but at Würzburg we were provided with a free concert on the platform. The whole choir got off the train, lined up, and, under their energetic conductor, gave us twenty minutes' sturdy and effective singing. They were then joined by about a dozen brass instrumentalists, and in this way brought their performance to a climax, the guard's signal for departure, after thirty minutes' stay, bringing all the performers hurriedly back into the train. Once aboard, there was a rush for beer, and tired throats were soon being lubricated in a way that was apparently very satisfactory. I think most of the singers must have slept after this, for quietude reigned supreme until our arrival at Nürnberg. Here the Bayreuth passengers had to change trains, and after about fifty minutes' wait we began the final stage of our journey. It was not very difficult to pick out the 'Festival' passengers, for many had either scores or librettos in which they were deeply engrossed.

The early part of the next day was taken up with visits to 'Wahnfried' and Wagner's grave, where we paid our homage. A similar duty was performed at the graves of Liszt and Hans Richter, in the Bayreuth Cemetery. Then, after lunch and a brief rest, away we went to the Festival House, where 'Tristan and Isolde' was to begin at four o'clock in the afternoon. We journeyed there in the old-fashioned way—by carriage—and as we approached the long drive to the theatre the road was lined with people who evidently were there to quiz those who were proceeding to the performance. The grounds were crowded, and amongst the notables were the ex-King Ferdinand of Bulgaria, looking very genial, Prince Hohenlohe, the Prince of Thurn und Taxis, and Siegfried Wagner and his wife. It was a gay and excited throng and worthy of the first night of a great event.

To those who, like myself, enter the renowned Festspiel Haus for the first time, there must always be the feeling of expectancy and tension that usually precedes an occasion of importance. I should say that it will be some time before the glamour and interest surrounding the Bayreuth Festival die out. Wagner was one of those great personalities who left an almost indelible impression behind him, and it is certain that his great personality still surrounds everything connected with him in the Bavarian town wherein he chose to create a home for the production of his great works.

On entering the Wagner theatre—it might be called temple—one is surprised at the absolute difference from any other opera house, and this in spite of the fact that one was prepared for it. The flat roof, cleverly painted in imitation of the huge canopy of a Roman tent; the Corinthian columns at each side of the theatre; the raised seats spreading fanwise from the stage and in tiers like a section of the Coliseum; the absence of any curtains or upholstery of any kind—everything, in fact, omitted that would be likely to interfere with a perfect hearing of the orchestra and singers. Then the closing and bolting of all doors, the gradual lowering of all lights to total extinction, the tense silence of the orchestra, the beginning of the Prelude up to the slow and dignified raising of the stage curtain—all these formed a fresh and lasting experience to the new comer. Everything is well ordered and goes without rush or trouble; everything moves with comfort and ease. Even the long intervals for refreshment, when the audience walk in the sunny grounds and wander into the refreshment rooms, are not spoilt by rush or excitement. There is ample time to refresh oneself and then walk gently round the grounds, meeting friends or seeing 'who 's who.' This forms a pleasant interlude, but it is always gladdening when the brass instruments are heard on the balcony over the main entrance, playing some brief motif from the work in hand, in this way indicating that it is time to go in for the next Act.

'Tristan and Isolde' had a great performance under Elmendorf, who obtained from the orchestra beautifully clean work, with fine tone and phrasing—in fact, something to be remembered. The singing and acting of Nanny Larsén-Todsen as Isolde was a very distinguished performance, and although the others were good, hers stood out. The new scenery was most effective. Prolonged applause at the close of the third Act, after some considerable time brought Siegfried Wagner before the curtain. He merely bowed and retired. It was as if he had said, 'On behalf of my great father, I thank you.'

'Parsifal,' the next event, was very interesting for me because I had never seen it before. On the whole, the performance was most impressive, and there can be no doubt about the greatness of the work, but it needs perfection of handling in every detail. The first Act was stupendous, and made an effect upon me that will never be forgotten. The orchestra, under Dr. Karl Muck, was splendid. We were all keyed up for a fine second Act, but unfortunately this was not forthcoming. Nothing was so good as in the first Act, and the Ballet of the Flower-Maidens was the most stodgy affair of the kind I have ever seen. Parsifal could have had no difficulty whatever in withstanding temptation. Even Frida Leider (Kundry), great singer as she is, did not throw herself into the part as one expected she would. The third Act was rather dull for the first half, and then the various characters seemed to wake up, and the finish of the great work was remarkably fine. With better acting and a better ballet there should be no dull moments. The work of Ivar Andresén as Gurnemanz was easily the best all-round performance.

The next day my friends and I spent partly at 'Wahnfried' and partly at the interesting Wagner Museum in the Neue Schloss. The various mementos are placed according to period, and so the exhibition is easy to follow. There is, of course, the period of the boyish composer and conductor; the Paris period; the Dresden period; and so on. There are also interesting von Bülow and Liszt groups, which are distinctly appropriate for such a museum. Subscriptions are invited, also gifts from those who possess mementos of the great musician, in order that the Museum may gradually become complete.

The performance of 'The Rhinegold' was in every way successful. The orchestra, under Hoesslin, did magnificent work. All the very great difficulties in connection with the staging of this remarkable work were most successfully overcome, and the singers were all very adequate, notably Fricka (Maria Ranzow), who has a voice of lovely quality, Wotan (Friedrich Schorr), Loge (Fritz Wolff), and Mime (Walter Eischner). The usual difficulties with the reptiles simply did not occur, so well and carefully were these considered. I have seen this work several times, but never so well done as on this occasion.

The weather has been perfect, thus making the numerous intervals between the Acts, also our daily excursions out of town, a real joy. Everyone seems to be happy, and the whole town is in Festival mood. Even the kitchen-maids at our hotel were, on one occasion, whistling the 'Schlaf' motif whilst drying the plates!

It is needless to say that all the local shops are reaping a harvest, especially those selling photos, postcards, librettos, and anything connected with the Festival. It is their opportunity, and they are making the most of it. I almost forgot to say that many of the old and quaint beer taverns are revelling in good custom, especially the famous 'Die Eule,' where most of those connected with the performances since 1876 have foregathered at various times of the day, and especially late at night.

'Die Walküre' was notable for a very fine Wotan (Schorr), who was particularly brilliant in the third Act, also for an unusually good Fricka (Ranzow), who completely sustained her success of the previous evening. Brünnhilde (Larsén-Todsen) was very good, and the staging a triumph. The orchestra appeared to excel its fine playing of the 'Rhinegold,' and at the close of the performance there was a prolonged ovation from the audience. But the tradition of Bayreuth prevented either the singers or conductor from appearing. There is no doubt about this part of 'The Ring' being the most popular. Several ex-Royalties, not previously at this Festival, were pointed out to me.

It is a joy to be in a town that has no trams, omnibuses, or motor lorries. Horse carriages and motor cars are there in plenty, but these do not disturb the restfulness. Fifty-two years ago it must have been still more restful; therefore it is small wonder that Wagner found this an ideal spot for the consummation of his labours.

It is a rare thing to have the four chief characters in 'Siegfried' all very good, yet this happened at the performance of the 24th. The lighting and scenery would have surprised many who have considered the Bayreuth performances out of date. No one thought 'The bird' good. Why is it that a big voice with a pronounced vibrato is heard nearly everywhere in this part? I can imagine Wagner being more particular in his selection. The orchestra was again superb under Hoesslin. To hear this body of a hundred and thirty players was alone worth the journey to Bayreuth.

One morning (the day of 'Siegfried') I happened to be wandering alone by the grave of the composer at 'Villa Wahnfried.' Hearing light laughter, I looked up, and on the balcony I saw the widow of the great man sunning and fanning herself. She was lying on a lounge, and had a lady friend by her side. Something had evidently amused them, and they both appeared to be enjoying it immensely. A marvellous woman to be able to enjoy anything at her advanced years.

The country surrounding Bayreuth is delightful. Two excursions, one to Berneck and another to Kulmbach, proved this as we drove for miles through fields of waving wheat and oats, to say nothing of glorious views of distant hills either tree-laden or under cultivation. A remarkable feature as we passed through the various villages was the charming irregularity in the style of architecture, to say nothing of the flower-laden window-boxes which always added a touch of welcome colour. Each village, too, seemed to outdo the other in the number and quality of its geese! Never have I seen so many fine and plump waddlers, all in good condition for Michaelmas.

Notwithstanding a few blemishes, 'Die Götterdämmerung' was magnificently done. I have seen a better Hagen and Gunther, yet, with so much that was excellent, it would be churlish to find fault.

The destruction of the Gibichungs' Hall and the burning of Walhalla were triumphs of stagecraft, and the performance was a grand ending to an unforgettable eight days. Siegfried Wagner came before the curtain in response to prolonged cheering and applause.

I now leave for Australia, and will carry back with me memories of many great and interesting occasions.

W. Arundel Orchard.

NEW LIGHT ON LATE TUDOR COMPOSERS

By W. H. Grattan Flood

XXXVII.—Richard Allison

The late Prof. H. E. Wooldridge in his article on the Psalter in Grove's 'Dictionary of Music and Musicians' describes Richard Allison as 'a musician of the first rank,' who did not deserve Burney's contempt 'on the ground that merit of the highest kind happened to be very common in his day.' Strange, indeed, that both Burney and Hawkins blundered badly in their estimate of Allison's work. His edition of the Psalter (1599) is regarded by Wooldridge 'as one which can be said to show the pure Elizabethan counterpoint in perfection throughout,' and is the work of one man. But this work, great as it was, represents only one phase of Richard Allison's activities, for, as will be seen, he published also a valuable book of madrigals for four and five voices, entitled 'An Hour's Recreation in Music' (1606). The pity of it is that his personal history is meagre in the extreme. Neither Mr. Henry Davey nor Dr. Fellowes has been able to lighten the obscurity attaching to his biography. The few additional facts that have been gleaned by me are not of great value, yet, in conjunction with what has already appeared in our printed books of reference, their cumulative effect will be helpful in appraising this 'master of pure diatonic polyphony' (Davey).

Of Allison's early life and upbringing we have no record, but in 1590 he was evidently in the circle of such notable musicians as John Dowland, Thomas Campion, Philip Rossiter, William Cobbold, and John Daniel, and cultivated the lute as well as sacred music. He contributed ten four-part settings of 'Church tunes' to Este's Psalter in 1592. Este, in his Preface, says that he had engaged ten composers, 'being such as I know to be expert in the Arte and sufficient to answer such curious carping Musitions, whose skill hath not been employed to the furthering of this work.' Thus, sixteen of the settings were by John Farmer; twelve by George Kirby; ten by Richard Allison; nine by Giles Farnaby; seven by Edward Blancks; six by John Dowland; five by William Cobbold; four by Edmund Hooper; three by Edward Johnson; and one by Michael Cavendish.

Evidently the success of the ten settings contributed to Este's Psalter induced Allison to publish a Psalter of his own, and in the year 1599 appeared the 'Psalms of David in Meter, the plaine Song being the common tune to be sung and plaide upon the Lute, Orphargon, Cittern, or Bass Violl, severally or altogether. . . . With tenne short Tunes, in the end, to which for the most part all the Psalmes may be usually sung. . . . By Richard Allison, Gent., Practitioner in the Art of Musicke, and are to be solde at his house in the Duke's place neere Alde Gate, London, printed by William Barley, the assigne of Thomas Morley, 1599.' This book, dedicated to the Countess of Warwick, was recommended in complimentary verse by John Dowland.

Wooldridge writes: 'The style of treatment employed by Allison in this work—in which he has given the tune to the upper voice throughout—is almost the same as the mixed style adopted by him in Este's Psalter. Here, after an interval of seven years, we find a slightly stronger tendency towards the more florid manner, but his devices and ornaments are still always in perfectly pure taste. The lute part was evidently only intended for use when the tune was sung by a single voice.' It may be added, as pointed out by the Right Rev. Dr. Frere, Bishop of Truro, that 'the four parts are so arranged in one opening of the book (which measures 340 by 216 mm.) that the performers can sit round and each read his own part, thus :

One of the tunes in this book, 'Salisbury,' set to Psalm cxxv., was subsequently copied into Playford's 'Psalms and Hymns' (1671) and is known as 'Playford.'

Seven more years elapsed before Allison issued another work, and at length, in 1606, appeared what was probably his last volume, entitled, 'An Houres Recreation in Musicke, apt for Instruments and Voyces,' with a eulogistic preface by John Dowland, and a prayer 'for the long preservation of the King and his posteritie, and a thanksgiving for the deliverance of the whole estate from the late conspiracie, 1606.' This volume—dedicated to Sir John Scudamore—has ten songs of four voices and fourteen songs of five voices, two of which were reprinted by Thomas Oliphant. In the Christ Church Part-Books at Oxford are Parts 1 and 2 of 'My prime of youth' and 'The Spring is past,' from 'An Houres Recreation in Musicke.'

In the British Museum (Add. MSS. 31,392) are four Pavans of R. Allison, for the lute; and there is also (Egerton MSS. 2046) a Pavan for two lutes, entitled 'The Pavinge of Allasons,' in a volume dated 1616. Fuhrmann, in his Lute Book of 1615 (Nuremburg), published a Pavane by 'M. Aloyson, Angles,' apparently intended for R. Allison.* In the Dowland Collection (sold at Sotheby's in November, 1926) there is 'The Sharp Pavin. Mr. Allison.'

After the year 1606 there is no further trace of Allison—whose name is also printed 'Alison'—and we may therefore assume that he died at that period. He is not to be confounded with Robert Allison, who was sworn a Gentleman of the Chapel Royal, December 12, 1589, in the room of Mr. Palfreyman, and who, on February 8, $16\frac{08}{10}$, sold his place to Humphrey Isache.

* In the new 'Grove' a reference is made to 'Aloyson, M., Angles' (vol. i., p. 73), but without any comment.

A TALK WITH ALFRED HOLLINS

By Harvey Grace

During a recent visit to Edinburgh I took the opportunity of spending a few hours with Dr. Alfred Hollins. We paid a couple of visits to his organ at St. George's United Free Church—an instrument so unusual in many ways that I give the specification :

GREAT

| | ft. | | ft. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 Bourdon ... ... | 16 | 8 Fl. Traverso ... ... | 4 |
| 2 Open Diap. I ... ... | 8 | 9 Quint Flöte ... ... | 2⅔ |
| 3 Open Diap. II. ... ... | 8 | 10 Flautina ... ... ... | 2 |
| 4 Har. Flute ... ... | 8 | 11 Mixture ... ... ranks | 4 |
| 5 Lieb. Gedact ... ... | 8 | 12 Tuba ... ... ... | 8 |
| 6 Dulciana ... ... ... | 8 | 13 Clarion ... ... ... | 4 |
| 7 Octave ... ... ... | 4 | | |

SWELL

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 Geigen Principal ... | 8 | 5 Geigen Principal ... | 4 |
| 2 Röhr Flöte ... ... | 8 | 6 Horn ... ... ... | 8 |
| 3 Viole de Gamba ... ... | 8 | 7 Oboe ... ... ... | 8 |
| 4 Voix Céleste ... ... | 8 | 8 Clarinet ... ... ... | 8 |

PEDAL

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 Great Bass ... ... | 16 | 3 Fl. Bass ... ... ... | 8 |
| 2 Sub Bass ... ... ... | 16 | 4 Trombone ... ... ... | 16 |

COUPLERS

1 Great to Pedal
2 Swell to Pedal
3 Swell to Great
4 Swell Sub-Octave (by Pedal)
5 Swell Octave (by Pedal)
6 Swell Sub-Octave to Great (by Pedal)
7 Swell Octave to Great (by Pedal)
8 Tuba to Great
9 Tuba to Swell

ACCESSORIES

Nine Combination 'Key touches' to Great Organ.
Nine Combination 'Key touches' to Swell Organ.
Balanced Cresc. Pedal acting on entire Organ.
Balanced Swell Pedal.
Pedal for Swell Tremulant.

Built by Lewis, 1897.
Electric action, Tuba, and Trombone by Norman & Beard, 1907.

This modest two-manual of twenty-five stops is unexpectedly complete in effect. The Great is well supplied with accompanying stops, and so takes the place of a Choir. The solo stops on the Swell are excellent in quality and contrast. The Tuba is transferable to the Swell, and stands up well against a good solid background of Great tone. A convenience is the set of pedals operating on the Octave and Sub-octave couplers. Listening to the instrument in the body of the church I found myself wondering why we should ever go to the expense of four or five manuals when so much can be done with two—or three, if funds justify our being lavish. It has to be recognised, of course, that Hollins's dexterous registration is a factor. Standing at his side, one is lost in admiration—not unmixed with bewilderment—at the uncanny ease and certainty with which he maintains a constant variety. It was instructive to see what an important part is played in his schemes by the use of uncoupled manuals. Few organists—even those with three manuals at their disposal—realise how greatly they can increase their range of contrast by leaving the Swell and Great uncoupled at intervals. (One of the most interesting features in Stanford's organ works, by the way, is the frequency with which he calls for the uncoupled Great.) It was noticeable, too, that a good deal of variety was attained by the manipulation, by hand, of single stops. The results were often slight, but sufficient to impart variety without being restless or fussy.

In facility and subtlety of registration Hollins reminds me of Lynnwood Farnam. It is evident that both regard registration as a branch of organ technique to be studied for its own sake, like orchestration—a view put forward by another famous player, Henry Ley, in an interview in the Musical Times of December, 1922. No doubt most players would claim to study the subject in this way, but it cannot be denied that the majority stop short of the ideal, i.e., stop-management so fluent that it never interferes with the rhythm of the music. Mere stop-hunting with one hand while the other hand marks time or remains glued to a chord is not real registration, any more than a method of scoring for orchestra in such a way that the proceedings had to be held up from time to time while a player changed a crook or adjusted a mute would be called orchestration. The fact is that until very recent times organists were at the mercy of their organs. See, for example, how often composers of the past generation felt compelled to stick in occasional bars of music that had no meaning or justification beyond enabling the player to carry on with one hand or one foot while the spare members were preparing a fresh set of stops. Franck's organ music contains many—too many—examples, and there are a lot in Guilmant, e.g., the bridge between the two sections of the 'Funeral March and Hymn of Seraphs.' The player of a well-equipped organ of to-day can go ahead in a way undreamt of by the older school. Those who have to struggle along on clumsy instruments can only make the best of things by putting the rhythm and continuity of the music first.

This point is developed at some length, because one can hardly see Hollins play without being struck first by his outstanding resourcefulness in registration. It is based on something more than a sense of colour and effect; he has a profound knowledge of organ construction, which he describes as one of his hobby-horses.

Discussing registration, he expressed the commonsense view that variety and interest depend less on the size of the organ and the number of stops than on the means of control.

'Many organs to-day are unnecessarily large,' he said. 'I would much rather have a well-designed, moderate-sized three-manual with proper stop-control than a large four-manual with insufficient pistons and composition pedals. To my mind, a good many organs in America have far too many draw-stops, and even the accessories are often over-done. There is every conceivable coupler, and devices for control are carried to such an extreme that one almost needs a special controller to control the controls! Still, our American friends can show us the way in mechanism. Most of our builders here are far behind them. Even small organs in America have all the pistons and pedals adjustable at the keys, but you rarely find that convenience in England, even in the latest and largest organs. By the way, do you know the Estey "Luminous Stops"? I made their acquaintance on Armistice Day, 1925, at Tacoma. You press a knob to bring a stop on and the same knob again to take it off. When the stop is on it shows a tiny electric light, which disappears when the stop goes off. This may or may not be a handy arrangement for those who can see it. As I couldn't, things would have been awkward but for the fact that the organ was well provided with adjustable pistons.'

A stock question for interviewers being, 'Who is your favourite composer?' I duly put it.

'I don't think I have a favourite composer,' he replied. 'I have instead plenty of favourite works in every department of music but one—Jazz, which doesn't interest me. As a youngster I was most of all impressed by the Schumann Quintet, the "Meistersinger" Overture, the concert version of the Prelude and Closing Scene from "Tristan," and Liszt's "Les Préludes." I'm not conservative in my tastes, but I've no liking for the extreme modern school. So far as organ music is concerned I have always kept my early liking for Smart and Guilmant, and I am sorry to see that players neglect them nowadays. It 's a matter of fashion, I suppose. Both Smart and Guilmant had a fine feeling for what was effective and practicable on the organ, and some of our present-day organ writers have a good deal to learn in that way.'

There is, I believe, an impression that Dr. Hollins's recital programmes are invariably—even unduly—on the light side. This is perhaps due to the fact that his own compositions are, as a rule, specially suitable for concert use. But he is very far from being narrow in his views, holding that the choice of recital programmes must vary with the organ, the building, and the type of audience.

'In any case,' he added, 'a programme should not contain too many heavy or involved contrapuntal works, or works calling for full organ. After a contrapuntal work I put in something for solo stops, and I usually include a Scherzo or some other piece of a light and dainty kind. In the series of recitals I give from time to time at my own Church, I often repeat a work that seems to need rather more taking-in than can be managed at a single hearing. For example, I recently played the D flat Sonata of Rheinberger twice in one recital, omitting only the short introduction to the final fugue. I followed the first performance with a couple of quiet, simple pieces, and then repeated the Sonata. Practically the whole of the audience sat out both performances, so you see that people are less afraid of a long, serious work than many players imagine. Perhaps my audiences here are helped by the fact that I say a few words about the style and construction of each piece beforehand, illustrating my remarks by playing the chief themes. Among the larger organ works that crop up frequently at my St. George's recitals are the big A minor, B minor, D major, G major, G minor, and "St. Anne" Fugues of Bach, the "Gigue" Fugue, the C and D minor Toccatas and Fugues, and the Toccata in F; the Rheinberger "Pastoral," F sharp, and D flat Sonatas, Harwood's first Sonata and "Dithyramb," the second and third Chorals of Franck, and his Prelude, Fugue, and Variation, and the Pastorale. My favourite Bach work is the B minor Prelude and Fugue; of the Rheinberger works I like especially the D flat Sonata; and of Franck the B minor Choral.'

This is a suitable point at which to give a few specimen programmes from the series played by the Doctor during midsummer this year:

Toccata and Fugue in C, Bach; Sposalizio, Liszt; Lied and Bohemesque, Wolstenholme; Improvisation; Humoresque, 'L'Organo Primitivo,' Yon; Overture to 'Oberon.'

Pastoral Sonata, Rheinberger; Largo from the 'New World' Symphony; Fantasia in E flat, Saint-Saëns; Improvisation; 'Spring Song' and Triumphal March, Hollins.

Suite Gothique, Boëllmann; Andante from fourth Sonata, Bach; Choral Song and Fugue, S. S. Wesley; Three MacDowell pieces; Epilogue, Healey Willan.

Sonata No. 1, Mendelssohn; Gavotte, 'Maytime,' Hollins; Prelude, Fugue, and Variation, Franck; Improvisation; Toccata from fifth Symphony, Widor.

The fourth of these programmes was chosen by the audience from a list of about sixty works. It happens to be both a very well-balanced scheme and a testimony to the sound public taste developed by the recitals.

Transcriptions play a reasonable part in the Doctor's repertory. On this point he said:

'There is very little need for playing transcriptions of familiar orchestral music, because so much of it can now be heard by everybody, either at first-hand, or by means of wireless and gramophone. Nor was I ever very keen about such arrangements. I always felt that even when played by Lemare himself on that wonderfully effective organ at St. Margaret's, Westminster, the Wagner extracts were disappointing to anybody who had heard them on the orchestra. It is certainly out of place to play orchestral transcriptions as organ solos at a concert where there is an orchestra; yet I have known it done! But transcriptions are very valuable as a means of making available old and neglected music; a lot of it is not suitable for ordinary concert use, and would not pay for publication in the ordinary way. But as organ transcriptions it is pretty sure of a fair sale, and it works in well with recital programmes. However, one can't lay down a rule about transcriptions. If they "come off" they justify themselves. Personally, in spite of what I said just now about Wagner arrangements, I always feel that the "Parsifal" Prelude sounds better on a good organ than on most orchestras.'

'Do you recall any specially interesting incidents in connection with your tours abroad?' I asked.

'I don't think there's much about them that would interest other people, but they were immensely interesting to me,' he replied. 'For instance, it was a thrilling experience to examine the engines of the ship on which I sailed to Australia. Although I can get no idea of anything except by touch, I have all my life been keen about examining all sorts of things, and if the object happened to be something outside my reach and grasp—such as the Forth Bridge or the roof of a cathedral—I always try to get hold of a model. I think blind children should be shown many more models than they are at present. At Dayton, Ohio, during my recent American tour, I was shown over the great National Cash Register factory—a most interesting experience. I also visited the Cook Field at Dayton, where the Army aeroplanes are tested. Unfortunately, being a civilian, I was not allowed to fly, so I had to be content with sitting in the pilot's seat and examining as much as I could. During this tour I enjoyed hearing two famous American orchestras—those of Boston and Philadelphia. I played with the former under Gericke during my second tour in 1888. These orchestras are very fine, thanks to their being generously subsidised and rehearsed to an unlimited extent. Still, I always feel that they lack something of the warmth and responsiveness of our best English orchestras. Personally, I ask for nothing better than our own Queen's Hall Orchestra in its palmy days under Wood. I think excessive speed spoils much American performance. In fact, the craze for mere pace seems to have got into the blood of organists and conductors here as well as across the water. Organists seem to be unable to resist the temptation brought about by light touch and quick action, and conductors are inclined to take advantage of the improved technique of orchestral players and rush everything at the cost of a lot of detail. By the way, at the Philadelphia concert Harold Samuel played the "Emperor" Concerto, and I heard for the first time Stokowsky's orchestral version of Bach's D minor Toccata and Fugue. This struck me as being first-rate, and I was interested to hear that Stokowsky had also arranged the Passacaglia, which I was told was even more effective. Perhaps some conductor or gramophone company will give us an opportunity of hearing it.'

'There is a good deal of interest now taken in works for pianoforte and organ,' I said. 'I believe you have had more experience than most players in this kind of thing.'

'Certainly I have made rather a feature of pianoforte and organ duets for a long time,' he replied. 'I have played in this way the "Emperor" Concerto, the Liszt E flat Concerto, the Mendelssohn Capriccio, the Weber-Liszt Polonaise, Franck's Symphonic Variations, Liszt's Hungarian Fantasia, and many smaller works. This is a very enjoyable kind of recital item for both pianist and organist, and I find audiences like it too.'

It is appropriate at this juncture to point out that Hollins has from childhood been eminent as a pianist. While still a boy he played the 'Emperor' Concerto at the Crystal Palace at one of Manns's concerts. He studied under von Bülow at Berlin, and later at the Raff Conservatorium at Frankfort. He appeared as pianist at the old Popular Concerts, and in 1888 at a Philharmonic concert, playing a Beethoven Concerto at the latter. During his residence in London he was Professor of both pianoforte and organ at the Royal Normal College. Undoubtedly the remarkable clarity and rhythmic life of his organ-playing owes much to his fine pianoforte technique. Indeed, his actual method at the console is that of a pianist rather than of an organist. All his hand movements are extraordinarily free. He told me that he liked to show people that even a blind player need not crawl about the keyboard 'in the old-fashioned glue-pot sort of way,' and no doubt he takes a very proper pride in thus brilliantly overcoming his disability. But probably his concert experiences as a pianist are the chief factor.

In talking of his early days he mentioned a subject that will be of interest to readers of the recent correspondence in this journal on absolute pitch. He said: 'I don't remember the time when I couldn't name any note or combination of notes. Those were the great days of the street piano-organ, and even when I was a kiddie of two I took such intense pleasure in listening to them that my father used to encourage the men to come and grind in front of our house. I soon got to recognise the different performers and their instruments, and there came to be a "Monday man," a "Friday man," and so forth. I used to look forward eagerly to their coming, and howled the place down if they didn't turn up. On one occasion, when I was in bed with a bad cold, my father actually brought the "Friday man" into the house to grind for my benefit. These street organs were undoubtedly of use in my musical development, for I soon reproduced their tunes on the pianoforte, and it was found that I invariably adopted the same pitch as the organs. Of course I knew nothing about black and white keys, but I found that some tunes needed more of the raised notes than of the level ones. Somehow I got to know that one tune was in something called C, another in G, and so on, but I was puzzled by finding that the C on the church organ sounded lower than that on our pianoforte. Many years after, I discovered that the organ had been tuned to low pitch. Such an acute sense of pitch may often be a nuisance, as some of your Musical Times correspondents have pointed out. For example, I was at one of the first London performances of the "Valkyrie," and I well remember being bothered and confused all through by the pitch of the orchestra being different from that to which I had been accustomed. I have never liked the high pitch, and always have my pianoforte tuned to the low.'

Like that other great blind player, Wolstenholme, Hollins usually includes an improvisation in his recital programmes. I had not heard him extemporise for many years, the last occasion being at a Royal College of Organists' function. Before taking my leave of him at the St. George's organ I asked him to improvise. A less congenial time could hardly be imagined—very soon after breakfast on a cold, wet Saturday morning; he had not even discarded his overcoat and hat. Even the theme I gave him suffered from the depressing conditions, being an unpromising specimen in F sharp minor. He began with some diffidence, but soon thawed, and gave an admirable example of this delightful and too little practised art. The fugal section included some skilful stretti and an augmentation of the theme in the pedals, and he wound up with a really brilliant coda in the major that reminded me of the final section of Franck's 'Pièce Symphonique' in the same key, though there was no thematic similarity. I patted him on the back and congratulated him warmly. 'Not so bad, after all, was it?' he said.

'Not so bad!' I found myself wondering how many (if any) 'international celebrities' would discover half as much invention and musicianship at a moment's notice as this modest blind organist of a Scottish kirk. On second thoughts, however, I remembered that Hollins is an international celebrity, his brilliant gifts being at least as warmly appreciated across the Atlantic, in South Africa, and at the Antipodes as in his native country.

With regret I said good-bye to one who is not only a musician of rare accomplishment, but also an engaging companion, with a fund of keen and interesting talk.

---

[The portrait given as a supplement to this number shows Dr. Hollins at the keyboard of the Johannesburg Town Hall organ, which was built to his specification and opened by him in 1916.]

Wireless Notes

By 'Ariel'

An indignant correspondent writes from Eastbourne protesting against my August paragraph concerning hotel orchestras in general and that of the Grand Hotel, Eastbourne, in particular. He begins by asserting that no one in musical Eastbourne will agree with me. This is a large and lavish assumption, and I can only play up to it by saying that if Eastbourne is as musical as the writer thinks it to be, I shall have plenty of supporters. In fact, agreement with my main point might be regarded as a test: the more musical the public, the greater the number who think as I do.

What was this point? Simply that small hotel bands, of half a dozen or so players, should not be allowed to broadcast arrangements of works which were written for a large orchestra. I instanced a 'Tannhäuser' Fantasia and the 'Ride of the Valkyries' as works which are so constantly played by full orchestras that transcriptions are not excused on the ground of rescuing them from neglect. The effect when transcribed for a few instruments is little better than a travesty.

Instead of discussing this principle (which is surely sound and not at all pedantic), my correspondent draws a number of red herrings across the track. Thus, he tells me that 'the Grand Hotel Orchestra is famous, and consists of picked musicians who know their work.' I said nothing about the performance save that the orchestra was inadequate in size. My subsequent remarks about hotel programmes were obviously general. (I said 'these hotel programmes,' not 'the programmes of this hotel' or 'this hotel's programmes.') I am then told that 'the B.B.C. authorities consider the concert referred to as one of the best within their knowledge.' Presumably this means one of the best hotel programmes; if so, I am ready to admit that it was better than a good many I have heard. But still that is not the point.

The writer proceeds to rebuke me for my remark about 'this sort of thing suiting hotel patrons, torpid with much food after a day in the sun,' and adds that '"Ariel" is perhaps unaware that the Grand Hotel is of the highest class, and that his reference is distinctly vulgar.' Still uncrushed, I reply that people of the very highest class—the very cream of the cream—are as liable as the rest of us to suffer from (or perhaps I should say, enjoy) a state of torpidity at the close of a perfect day, especially during a holiday at the seaside. I myself was not unreplete when listening to this particular Sunday evening concert. . . .

---

Here is another example of the writer's inability to see a point. I asked why hotel bands should be given the benefit of wireless engagements and wide advertisement when there were many hundreds of well-equipped instrumentalists out of work. This is taken as an implication that 'well-equipped instrumentalists are not to be found in hotel orchestras'! It was merely a very reasonable protest against the B.B.C. giving engagements to players who are already in lucrative posts, instead of spreading their bounty to quarters where it is badly needed.

At the end of a long letter the writer manages to reach the real issue, and says that I 'must not expect the effect of a symphony or full orchestra from six instrumentalists.' I don't; nor do I want to hear those six playing music written for sixty. 'It appears that "Ariel" would exclude any work of full instrumental classical import from hotel orchestras.' I wouldn't. Everything depends on the work. There are some classical works that suffer little from being re-scored for small bands; others are simply killed. Conductors should use taste and discretion.

Finally I am reminded of the good work hotel orchestras do in spreading a knowledge of music. As a result of my experiences of such orchestras, I contend that they do precious little in this way. I do not complain of that. Their job is to entertain folk who are in no mood for anything but light fare. There is an abundance of suitable music, well adapted for small bands. Let hotel conductors stick to that, and leave big orchestral music for forces able to do them justice.

---

Once more we are being told on all sides that, owing to wireless and the gramophone, the domestic musician is silent—or, in the fashionable jargon, has ceased to function. 'On all sides': I should have said, on all sides but one, and it happens that the missing one is the most important. I allude, of course, to the domestic circle itself.

Mr. Aldous Huxley devoted a recent article in the Daily Mail to showing that all the world and his wife have given up performing and are becoming mere listeners. And our contemporary, Musical News and Herald, says: 'The gramophone, wireless, joy-riding, and, above all, dancing, have literally ousted music out of the home. . . . Papa is no longer asked to perpetuate his nautical song after dinner, and mamma never practises the piano because no one asks her to play.'

From a novelist writing in the Daily Mail we do not expect accuracy in musical matters, but a musical journal should know better than to indulge in such sweeping statements as the one quoted. Papa may or may not have given up his after-dinner nautical song; in fact, I think most papas did so before the coming of wireless. And if mamma plays no longer, it is not because nobody asks her to play. The joy in playing the pianoforte is not in obliging the company, but in playing to oneself, and if mamma is really fond of it, she won't stop because the family circle is not enthusiastic. This applies to musical performance in general. Perhaps for singers an audience, even of one, is necessary. But for players, no! In fact, many of us feel inclined to dry up in the presence of a listener. No doubt the old family circle music-makings are things of the past, but that is mainly because the family circle itself has almost ceased to exist so far as joining in some common indoor pursuit is concerned. But an enormous amount of music-making goes on still. How else can we account for the astonishing growth of the competition festival movement, and for the fact that there is probably more amateur chamber-music playing in the country than ever before?

---

I ask any reader to look at his own case, and that of all his friends. Is there among them a single individual who is really fond of playing, and who has given it up because of the facilities offered by wireless and gramophone? I myself have never, in the whole of my misspent career, got more pleasure out of the pianoforte than to-day, in spite of hearing stacks of gramophone records and wireless and other concerts without number. Moreover, wireless and gramophone have increased the home-players' repertory, by bringing fresh works to their notice, as well as by helping them in the interpretation by means of performances which are (usually) good object-lessons. No doubt a proportion of players have given up, but they were folk who in the past got little or no music beyond that of their own making; they had to play. But I can't conceive of anybody who played for the pleasure of playing ever being entirely satisfied with listening. So let us hear no more jeremiads concerning the effects of mechanically reproduced music.

---

Whether this country was musical ten years ago may be arguable; but it is safe to say that if she is not so in ten years' time, she is past praying for. Anyway, she has never before had such a lavish allowance of good music and musical knowledge placed within easy reach. In fact, the very easiness and cheapness may constitute the danger. When, years ago, you and I could afford no London concerts but the 'Proms,' and had to look twice at the shillings for those, an evening of orchestral music was something to look forward to, and talk about afterwards. The cost and the effort added a zest, for in music, as in food, hunger is the best sauce. It remains to be seen how far the absence of effort and cost will affect us.

---

The broadcasting of the Daily Express lesson-concert of its prize competition pieces opens up a field that some of our examining bodies might well explore. Some time ago Trinity College of Music issued gramophone records of pianoforte pieces from its syllabus, played by one of its professors. This was a good move, but a broadcast lesson-lecture is even better. If the more attractive of examination pieces are chosen, such a broadcast would be popular to many besides examinees. We may yet hear a substantial portion of the L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and even R.C.O. syllabus treated in this way, with benefit to an enormous public. By the way, apropos of the Daily Express competition, would such enormous interest have been roused if the domestic pianoforte had fallen silent?

---

Circumstances have prevented me from using my set during the past month; hence the absence of comment on performances. I am particularly sorry to have missed the Mahler Symphony, among other good things in an excellent lot of programmes.

---

The St. Ives Choral Society performed Coleridge-Taylor's 'The Song of Hiawatha' on August 8, conducted by Mr. Ernest White. The soloists were Miss Olive Franks, Mr. John Turner, and Mr. Joseph Farrington.

New Music

PIANOFORTE

John Ireland's new Sonatina (Oxford University Press) is a very concentrated and vivid work, and by no means a little one, even if moderate in length. It has the clean lines and the sharpness of thought that have generally marked Ireland's work, and is noticeably free from some mannerisms that had tended to become irritating. The first movement is certainly strong meat; the whole work is so; and it is at the opening that Ireland is least approachable. The vigour and clarity of style are noticeable at once, but it is not until one has become familiar with the movement as a whole that the logic of the thought is felt. Once appreciated, this section of the work grows on one. With so terse and intellectual a manner, however, it cannot hope, as it does not aim, to be a movement of 'popular' appeal. Much more so are the two remaining sections, a Quasi lento leading direct to the finale Rondo. The slow movement is short, and opens on a note of desolation similar to that given by the shepherd's pipe to the last Act of 'Tristan.' It works up to a high level of feeling before dying away to its opening mood, and is a very powerful section. The last movement is light and rhythmical, and similar in outlook to the last movement of the A minor fiddle Sonata. It is brilliant in sound and effect, and probably the most immediately attractive of the three sections. The whole Sonatina is difficult to play, as well as to grasp; and as the Rondo is one of the test-pieces for the Daily Express Piano-Playing Contests there will be some wry faces in London studios as well as among provincial pianoforte teachers.

A work of even greater difficulty both to player and listener is Alan Bush's Prelude and Fugue, from the same press. Here, again, there is command of technical resource, and a fine sincerity of aim, but large parts of the work seem to me irretrievably dull. The cure for this impression might be the composer's performance of the Fugue, which would be interesting. There is dignity and beauty in the cantabile section at the close, and there is power in the climax, but the interest has been lost before these are reached. It takes a subject of really arresting character to stand lengthy development, and this is where the composer fails. His fugue subject has a touch of artificiality and aimlessness which hamper it at the start, and from which the Fugue never recovers.

Three Miniature Dances, by Welton Hickin, also from the Oxford University Press, have a charm of their own, as well as an obvious teaching value. The Gavotte (with its pleasant little Musette) and Minuet are the most successful. The Polonaise somehow hardly sounds the real thing, and is less happy in touch.

Augeners send two welcome things by Frank Bridge. 'Winter Pastoral' is a vivid little work giving exactly the right note of bleakness and solemnity. It is not over-fanciful to say that one can sense in Bridge's music that the landscape has character apart from its winter bareness or its summer luxuriance. The music seems to touch something not merely superficial, but essential. 'A Dedication' is another able and effective piece, but lacks the note of distinction that sounded in the Pastoral. The music is rather reminiscent, and the work as a whole does not give so strongly as the former did the sense of a keen personal realisation.

John Unett's three 'Preludes' (Murdoch) are a curiously unsatisfactory blend of ancient and modern. The composer's structures are so elementary, his phrases, chromatics, and diminished sevenths so eminently un-modern in feeling, that the rather conscious 'modern-ness' of the works as a whole sounds affected. There is a note of sensitiveness in the Preludes, but they do not hold the attention in any real way.

It is somewhat difficult to speak with moderation of J. W. Ivimey's 'Abelard and Heloïse,' a suite of short pieces of distressingly 'educational' type. The tale of the lovers is somewhat naively told on the first page, and the subsequent little pieces are prefaced by quotations from 'The Love-Letters of Abelard and Heloïse.' The music is so guileless in style, with its commonplace little tune labelled 'Heloïse,' and the 'Fulbert' of Wagnerian recollections of a peculiarly watery kind, that it is frankly impossible to take it seriously. The thing would escape notice if it were not so unusually pretentious; as it is, it is deplorable (Augener).

Joaquin Turina's suite, 'Mallorca,' is published by Rouart Lerolle. It is effective, vivid pianoforte music of the post-Debussy sort, and rather unconvincing in effect in spite of the colour. We seem to have heard it all before, in circumstances in which it sounded more spontaneous. There is a quiet beauty of sound, but no particular individuality, in 'Nuit sur la Baie de Palma.' The last movement is called 'Par la route en auto.' Here we have a vigorous 6-8 opening, a second subject of 'antigua cancion francesa,' a middle section, 'inquieto e rubato' (water in the carburettor, perhaps), and a recapitulation with a Spanish tune instead of the French one. Colour and point there are, but it is a lot of fuss about very little.

'Thousand and One Nights,' an Oriental ballet suite by Serge Bortkiewicz, is obtainable from Edward Organ, and does not represent the composer at his best level. It looks like a cooked-up version of an orchestral work, and apart from some occasionally happy touches, as in the very 'Prince Igor'-ish 'Dance of Young Girls,' there is little distinction in the music. The 'Eastern flavour' is artificial, and the composer is often reminiscent. 'Zobeide' seems a direct reference to Rimsky-Korsakov. This composer is in much better form with 'Ein Roman' (Kistner & Siegel, Leipsic), a Suite of eight pieces, taking two people from 'Rencontre' via 'Amour naissant' to 'Bonheur suprême.' The work is a set of mood-pictures of considerable vivacity and very effective style. The general air of the music is rather Lisztian and very romantic; but it sounds spontaneous, and the skill of the pianoforte lay-out makes it telling in performance.

Ernst Roters's 'Klaviersuite' consists of five big movements, ambitious in style and difficult to play. The music is extremely rhetorical; the composer never uses one note where four would do; and beneath all the pother the music is commonplace. This tendency is apparent in 'Præludium,' and as the work progresses becomes more and more noticeable. The publisher is Simrock.

A very charming example of Medtner's thoughtful and sensitive musicianship is his second 'Improvisation' in variation form (Zimmermann, Leipsic). The intimate theme is treated in fifteen fanciful movements before it reaches the quiet and beautiful 'Conclusion,' and in each of these there is some interesting development. 'Meditation,' a beautiful number, and 'Song of the Water-Nymph,' may be specially mentioned, but other movements are as good, if less superficially attractive. Medtner, in addition to his musical insight, has a very personal and delicate pianoforte style, and this most interesting work shows him at his best.

From 'Edition Russe de Musique' comes a solo pianoforte version (arranged by the composer) of Stravinsky's new ballet, 'Apollon Musagete,' which is extremely interesting, as showing the tendencies of Stravinsky's art, and the simplification that is taking place both in matter and in style. But the work is essentially a ballet and essentially orchestral, and to attempt a serious criticism of it without reference to the score and the choregraphy is impossible. T. A.

STRING ORCHESTRA

The Overture and Dances of Gluck's 'Orpheus' have provided Dr. W. G. Whittaker with the material for three arrangements (Oxford University Press), obviously meant to be of use in competitions. The editor provides an optional double-bass part, a third violin part as substitute for violas, and a pianoforte part 'when the orchestra is incomplete.' All this is admirable. Dr. Whittaker could not have found better music nor could he have done more to provide for the limitations of local organizations. The string orchestra (the Cinderella of every festival) is often no orchestra at all, for it consists of violins only. Public schools also have their orchestras, which often are made up mainly of violinists. It is right that even these organizations should have music of essentially good quality and opportunities. But it all adds very considerably to the difficulties of the editor, and perhaps it is not to be wondered at if Dr. Whittaker has failed to discover here and there the best solution of his peculiar problems. For instance, the flute part of the second number (Book 1) seems to us much more important than the prefatory note suggests. 'No. 2 has flute parts which merely double the strings, except in the case of one or two holding notes,' says the preface. To some of us the difference between seems far from negligible. Moreover in this short piece there are at least half a dozen instances in which the addition of the flute means a sudden transposition of the melody some intervals higher or lower—by no means a trifling matter. In No. 3 (same book), when the solo part is played by a violinist, the use of mutes by the rest of the orchestra would secure contrast of colour and a better chance for the solo part to come through the texture of the accompaniment.

On the other hand, the presence or absence of double-basses gives rise to problems of balance requiring close attention. One need only glance at four bars of the 'Overture' (71 to 75) to realise this. Here a single note in the 'cello (already heard in the violas) cannot produce anything like the effect it should and would if doubled an octave lower by the double-bass. In the fourth bar of the same passage the 'cellos are directed, in the absence of double-basses, to play an octave lower, with the result that a gap is left between the bass and the supporting harmony. Perhaps better results might be obtained by making the 'cellos play not an octave lower but in octaves—especially as in this case the octave offers no technical difficulty, even to a player of very moderate ability.

The best solution of all would be a higher standard of playing and a more general appreciation of the value of lower strings. If schoolboys are taught drawing, whether they have any liking for it or no, why should they not be taught music as well as, or in place of, 'art school'? Unless something of this kind is done, an editor anxious to provide and arrange good music will always be faced by very awkward difficulties. Dr. Whittaker has made this lovely music as easy to play as possible, yet an amateur orchestra of moderate skill will find the intonation in parts of the 'Pantomime Lento' a hard nut to crack. F. B.

VIOLIN

Two pieces of unusual merit are Byron Brooke's 'Cradle Song,' for violin (or 'cello) and pianoforte (Novello), and C. H. Kitson's 'Phantasy' (H. F. W. Deane). The first possesses an easy and graceful swing, the effect of which is enhanced by the good use made of figuration that is in the genius of the string instrument. The second, of a more lively character, is a pattern of balance, the composer giving both violinist and pianist something interesting to do, something that attracts and holds the attention not on account of unusual tricks and difficulties but through its essentially musical qualities. Tenaglia's Aria in G minor has been very carefully arranged and fingered by Mr. Spencer Dyke (Joseph Williams). Players of very moderate ability will find solace and profit in the 'Four Easy Pieces' for violin and pianoforte, by E. Duncan-Rubbra (Oxford University Press), and in the Sea Shanties collected by Sir Richard Terry and harmonized by Maurice Jacobson (Curwen). Some of the 'Easy Pieces' are so very easy as to be almost devoid of stimulus for the player. But the harmonization is exceptionally tasteful, and the pianoforte part sustains the interest of the composition. F. B.

CHAMBER MUSIC

Mr. Stanley Wilson's 'Three Rhapsodies' for string quartet offer a strange contrast to Mr. Bernard van Dieren's Quartet No. 2 (both published by the Oxford University Press). The first is pleasant but conventional; the second rather forbidding, but so unconventional that special definitions have to be given of the value of 'dotted lines across the four staves' and of 'finer dotted lines' on the separate staves. In Mr. Wilson's work changes of rhythm are rare; in Mr. van Dieren's they are so frequent that the rhythm is not even indicated. Mr. Wilson's tempi are the usual allegros, andantes, &c.; Mr. van Dieren has in his fourth movement only scorrevole ugualmente, but scorns to tell us whether the ' flowing ' is to be that of a trickling brook or of a river in spate. The contrasts are equally striking in regard to construction, harmonization, and texture. The reader is thus free to choose between two characteristic examples of two opposite schools.

F. B.

---

UNISON

Moeran's ' Christmas Day in the Morning ' is an unpretentious, rosy-cheeked pippin of a tune, that (with a good, bold player) will go down well at any sing-song. Norman Demuth sets the old words beginning ' Sweet Suffolk Owl,' under the title ' The Brown Owl,' with a good sense of atmosphere. The song lies rather low, only going up to E. Felix White sets Carlyle (how many composers have tackled Tammas ? Surely few). ' The Sower's Song ' has the right sturdiness. Another of this composer's pieces is ' The Rover ' —the old words by Darley, set a shade less spontaneously than when he is at his best, but still acceptably. This is a song for bright tone and light, tripping style. ' Mothering Sunday,' by A. S. Warrell, has a 14th-century tune that I do not find very stimulating. This should be popular in America, where mammies round the door are deified once a year—and, I gather from the Sunday papers, defied the rest of the time. Gordon Jacob's ' The Barefoot Boy ' goes, like the lad, lightly and carelessly. It is pretty easy, if rhythmic stresses are carefully looked to. Ernest Bullock's setting of Bunyan's ' Song in the Valley of Humiliation ' (' He that is down needs fear no fall ') is short, bold, and fitly broad, as suits its philosophy.

By the same composer is ' Gird on thy sword ' (poem by the Poet Laureate), with a pleasant, slight Parryan flavour. This is a fine aspiration, well caught by the musician. Massed choirs could make it thrill. Bainton's ' A Christmas Carol ' sets one of the less familiar Herrick songs (' Dark and dull night, fly hence away '), and sustains it well. The end does not, I feel, quite convincingly clinch matters, but I like the mood of the carol. Paul Edmonds, in ' The Turtle-Dove's Nest,' uses a tune that some may feel right for the song's spirit, but that I find monotonous. R. H. Hull sets Blake's ' War Song to Englishmen,' bidding us ' Prepare, prepare the iron helm of war '—about the last thing most of us ever intend to do again. This is not the best Blake ; it seems to me to be in his bumble-bee-in-bonnet style. The setting is adequate, but the composer seems to have felt his task a little oppressive. Frankly, do we want to sing about war at all, to anyone's poem, however fine ? ' Scrap the lot ' is surely the wise course with songs that in any way tend to glorify a thing that is of darkness and the devil (Oxford University Press).

Harold Rhodes's ' Say not, the struggle nought availeth ' may be interpreted as a fight against evil. If so commended, it could be sung by elder children. The music only goes up to E, and mostly lies rather low (Year Book Press). Composers, I have remarked before, seem shy of trusting children's voices aloft. Instead of writing so much round about the bottom half of the compass, why not keep the voices swinging about more freely round the centre, and let them climb to the upper notes oftener ? Young, fresh voices don't want to stop at top E, or need to. We are not writing for old folks in the pew. Let us have more fresh air in our songs—in tune as well as compass. A lot of the songs that come in are good enough in their way, but there is rarely much charm, originality, resourceful use of device, or imagination in them. I feel the need of keener musicianship and scholarship here.

Two Old English songs, ' The hunt is up ' and ' The Marriage of the Frog and the Mouse,' are under one cover, the first arranged by ' H. A. C.' In this, demisemiquavers have to be managed, at a brisk pace, in jumpy rhythm, and in the other, grace and liveliness must not flag in twelve verses. Here we often get unimportant words on the first of the bar. I should be inclined to re-arrange the words a bit to avoid this. Three of George Rathbone's songs appear, all suitable for quite small singers : ' My Carpet,' a flowing six-eighter for lightly-poised voices ; ' Over the hill to the town,' in twelve-eight—light, firm, buoyant, and cheery ; and ' The Spindle Tree,' rather slow, quiet, needing shaded, tastefully-controlled tone. Cecil Sharman's ' Bumpety bump ' describes the adventure of a farmer on his mare (which provides the ' bumpety bump ' rhythm). This lively ditty will be enjoyed by children with a little experience in colouring their tone and making a story vivid. The same composer's ' Lilies are white ' swings gently and curves gracefully, with some neat leaps of fifth and sixth. Schubert's ' Erl-King ' is a tremendous test for any body of singers, not to mention their accompanist, who, unless he is in training, is likely to take refuge in one or other of the more or less subtle ways of ' cooking ' the job (I think I know them all, but as this is a moral family journal, not a Fagin's Academy of Faking for Feeble-Fingered Faint-hearts, I won't expound them), or else in the despairing solution that we are told Schubert adopted—playing twos instead of threes in that awful right-hand part. (Are not the tempering wind at ' My gentle boy,' and the oasis at the Erl-King's second blandishment, amongst the toiling accompanist's happiest glimpses of Paradise ; but, oh, that fff at the last outcry : ' His cold hand I feel ! '—when ours have ceased altogether to be anything but a red-hot blaze of pain.) Grown-ups will be glad to have this cheap edition of the song (Novello).

---

PART-SONGS FOR CHILDREN'S AND FEMALE VOICES

Percy Fletcher's ' When the green leaves come again ' suits young or middle-aged girls, who care to sing about fairies in Haynes Bayly's way. The rhythm is a little stiff, but the spirit will please. This is marked for S.A., but the lower part only goes down to C. That old favourite, ' The Bells of St. Michael's Tower,' is adapted as a two-part song (S.S.), from Stewart's arrangement of Knyvett's glee. This makes a good, bold, swinging item (Novello).

Dr. Alcock sets some 16th-century words, ' Art thou gone in haste ? ' for S.S. Here is charming work, that growing-up singers will appreciate. The running pianoforte part, though not difficult, needs a hand with comfortably matched fingers. ' Rustic Coquette,' by F. Champneys, is described as a ' Ballet ' for S.S.A.A. (the S.A.T.B. version is issued by Novello). This is in later part-song style, and is very much like a great many other cheery, rather square-toed ballads about rosy-cheeked maidens. Those who like what they know will enjoy its sophisticated unsophistication (Year Book Press).

James Gallie has arranged Malcolm Lawson's setting of 'Proud Maisie' (from 'Songs of the North') for S.S.A.—a straightforward, neat piece of work. The music does not quite stand up to the grim poem, of course. Whose would? It may be noted that the Sol-fa edition is sold separately from the Staff (Cramer).

W. S. Gwynn Williams sets a Welsh poem, 'Mountain Rill,' in a clear-cut, bold style for equal voices. I do not like the bad stresses of words like 'To' and 'On' at the first of the bar. Eric Chisholm's 'Cradle Song' ('O men from the fields') is for S.S.A. (or S.S.M.-S.), unaccompanied. It has imagination, though it seems, for an instant, to strain. Choirs with a good command of shading and colour might try it (Curwen).

Dr. Whittaker edits Purcell's 'We the spirits of the air,' from 'The Indian Queen.' This, for two equal voices, is quick and light—a neat little fairies' visiting card. Dr. Hathaway's 'To the Ladybird' moves with fleetness. It needs colour and variety of quickly-applied power. The accompaniment is not quite easy for the player whose left hand is a bit rusty in scales. These, and the next song, are from the Oxford Press. Can we sing about 'England, my England' in dear old W. E. Henley's rackety fashion nowadays? Doesn't that 'mail'd hand' recall too clearly a later fist, and has not the talk about the 'Chosen daughter of the Lord, Spouse-in-Chief of the ancient Sword' lost some of its fine stingo? Is this not to 'loose wild tongues that have not Thee in awe,' as a later and greater than W. E. H. sang—and, singing, condemned his own? Henley wrote some grand verse (read 'In Hospital' and the 'London Voluntaries' again, if you have forgotten their flavour); but a lot of his stuff is best described by the remark of J. M. Robertson, who, speaking of one of the poems which roars along in a mood of 'vinous courage' and ends, 'I am the Sword!' said, 'Surely Mr. Henley is mistaken. Surely it is the Waverley pen making a joyful noise after supper.' These lines that Mr. Slater has set (nearly all the way in unison) may please those who still enjoy a lusty howl about 'England, my England,' and it must be said for (or against?) the composer that he does not reach the height or depth of Henley's rodomontade, whilst he gives us a good enough tune with a swing in it; but I feel that (especially for children) the day for these beanos of demijohn valour which once passed for patriotism should be over for ever. I don't want to make too much of this matter of words, but there seems no reason why we should sing anything that goes against the sense of reality and kinship that is growing steadily, though so slowly, in a world at last awakening to the meaning and responsibilities of 'the brotherhood of man.'

Gordon Jacob's setting of Addison's 'The spacious firmament' moves with the right breadth and dignity. This would be useful in school chapels. The lower part, it should be noted, hangs rather low, and touches B. The same composer sets Wordsworth's 'Song for the Spinning Wheel.' Good, quick word-shaping and clear shading are wanted, with, in the player, a light, dexterous hand. Healey Willan's 'Spring' (modern words) is gay. One or two weak words get strong accents, on the beginnings of bars. The song is worth attention (S.S.) (Oxford University Press).

Dr. Whittaker brings out a set of 'Scenes from "Orpheus,"' by Gluck, arranged for female choirs and schools—nine pieces, mostly for S.S. or S.S.S. chorus, with three solo parts (mezzo-sopranos, or two sopranos and a mezzo). The whole lasts about an hour, and the book costs 3*s.* 6*d.* A shorter portion, comprising Nos. 2, 3, 4, and 5, is published separately, under the title, 'Orpheus and the Furies,' and all the vocal numbers can be had separately. Voice parts only of the complete work can be had, and the Overture and Ballet Music are available. The accompaniment is condensed for strings (with or without pianoforte). There is some lovely music here, that choirs need not be afraid of, for it is by no means difficult. Soloists should be reminded of the eighth number, 'From my yearning arms' ('Che faro'). This admirable work should be heard on a good many school platforms this winter. Three other extracts from Gluck ('Iphigenia in Tauris') are also arranged by Dr. Whittaker (the words, as in the other work, being by Albert Latham). These are the two hymns to Diana—'Glorious Sister of Apollo' and 'Queen and Goddess'—and the chorus of priestesses, 'O'er my tomb.' All are slow and dignified, finely-poised songs, arranged for S.S. (or S.A.) (Oxford University Press).

MALE-VOICE

Three unaccompanied T.T.B.B. pieces by Hugh Roberton are 'Remembrance' ('When I am dead, my dearest'), 'The winter is past,' and the folk-song 'Blow away the morning dew,' from Sharp and Baring Gould's collection. The first two are quiet, sweetly sympathetic pieces, and the last goes with a light-footed happiness (Curwen).

A re-arrangement of Brahms's 'In Silent Night,' for T.T.B.B., is welcome. Choirs that can get the low E flats will enjoy this best of all, but all will be glad to have it (Novello).

MIXED-VOICE

Hubert W. Hunt's editions of two of Pearsall's songs will be liked by S.A.T.B. choirs. One is 'Who shall have my lady fair?' which the composer spoke of as 'an Ante Madrigal, . . . an imitation of a style of song current in England about the time of Henry VII., . . . compounded of popular melody and the old ecclesiastical neuma, or vocalisation on the last syllable of particular phrases.' This makes a cheerful, slightly formal part-song, of a pleasant countenance. The 'Song of the Franc-Companies' needs altos with a sound low F. It is a bold, solidly-marching piece (Year Book Press).

Stanford Robinson, the B.B.C.'s chorus master, has arranged a selection of 'Plantation Songs' for baritone solo and mixed-voice chorus (one or two of them have been recorded by Metropole). The writing is simple and suitable. These would go down well at any sort of sing-song. Bantock has translated the words of the 'Song of the Volga Boatmen,' and arranged the tune for S.A.T.B. chorus or quartet very effectively. Hugh Roberton writes a simple vocal piece without words, entitled 'Nightfall in Skye,' which, with its humming and oo vocalising, should be an interesting bit of work in tonal colouring. The same composer puts whimsical words to a psalm-tune, in 'Mice and Men.' This was the custom in Scotland and the North of Ireland in former days; choirs did not like to rehearse the psalm-tunes to the sacred words, since this was 'vain repetition.' Their respect for the Book brought them to the simple-minded alternative of singing secular words at the practice, reserving the biblical ones for the Sabbath. I used to hear in Ulster of the way some of these 'week-day' words went—skits on local folk and doings. It was an odd idea. I wonder if choirs could sing the tune Mr. Roberton has set ('Desert') without thinking of some hymn that goes to it? This essay is in line with those war-time ditties we used to sing, that took some familiar tune like 'Aurelia' and clapped more-or-less seemly words to it. Myself, I don't think these customs worth reviving (Curwen).

Percy Turnbull has made a crisp, sharp-set piece for S.A.T.B. out of the 'Midsummer Night's Dream' song, 'You spotted snakes.' There is enjoyment here for choirs who can command flexible, coloured tone and manipulate tongue and lips freely. Edgar Bainton's setting of Robert Graves's 'In the Wilderness' (a picture of Christ) has quality. Choirs of some experience in the moulding and blending of tone should try it. It is not extremely difficult (S.A.T.B.), and captures something of the bite in the words. 'The Three Kings' is Healey Willan's setting of Laurence Housman's poem about the magi. Here, for S.S.A.T.B.B., is a bold, clear-cut scene, whose wise simplicity is its strongest point. George Dyson's 'In Honour of the City' (London) is described as a 'Fantasia' for chorus and orchestra. Dunbar's poem has struck a spark in Dr. Dyson. The music moves with a strong, athletic tread, and knows where it is going. It is fairly difficult, with plenty in it to give a good choir keen practice. The score is for S.A.T.B. and orchestra, the third and fourth horns, second trumpet, and the rest of the brass being dispensable, if desired; or small choirs can use strings and pianoforte, with drums if they can get them (Oxford University Press).

A Sanctus by Schubert, for three voices (compass B—alternative A flat—to F), is in canon form, with Latin words. With the right freedom of impulse it would make a strong and uncommon piece for a recital, or for use as a general anthem. Ralph Greaves has put imagination into his setting for S.A.T.B. of 'Come away, Death.' The trumpet call at the opening, for instance, is very effective. Experienced choirs will get the eerie feeling of this, which is not technically really difficult. It costs a shilling (Oxford University Press).

From Cramer comes a Sol-fa edition of Dr. Sweeting's 'Twankydillo,' the familiar folk-song: this is also done, of course, in Staff (S.A.T.B.); and Martin Shaw's setting of words selected by Kipling, entitled 'Service'—a portion from Micah vi., 8. There are less than a score of bars, and Mr. Shaw writes as fervently as one may, in so short a space. I feel that there is scarcely time, however, to get up steam.

The music to Masefield's mystery play, 'The Coming of Christ,' which was recently produced in Canterbury Cathedral, is printed. It is for full choir (S.A.T.B., with occasional slight division), with organ, and a small body of men's voices in unison, with pianoforte. A trumpet (or trumpets in unison) is also required. Simplicity rules here. The melodic lines are bold, and diatonic clashes are the chief means of strength. One or two corners only will give a choir difficulty. If the play is as good as the music, it ought to be performed very widely (Curwen).

A fresh wind blows in the music of Dr. Thomas Wood. His 'Master Mariners' is a suite of songs for baritone solo and S.A.T.B. chorus (or T.B.B.—there are two editions) and with orchestra. The words are from 16th- and 17th-century sources, and from Masefield. All of these ballads are well treated, in a style that is pleasantly personal, without fads or angularities, yet keen and taut. The suite (about twenty-one minutes in all) would make a good concert item; single songs would go down well. The orchestra, by the way, does not require wood-wind—only strings, percussion, two horns, two trumpets, and two trombones, though flute and piccolo are optional in one song. A celesta or pianoforte is wanted for another. Dr. Wood has also written 'The Ballad of Hampstead Heath,' depicting what happened to 'young Bacchus and his crew' when they tumbled down from Heaven's gate to London, N.W. This has humour, and body, and style. Choral societies should survey it. Wisely, the composer has arranged the orchestration so that it may be played by full, reduced, or small orchestra, the last consisting of strings, pianoforte, percussion (ad lib.), and two each of horns, trumpets, and trombones. The work lasts fourteen minutes. Both these compositions are published by Stainer & Bell.

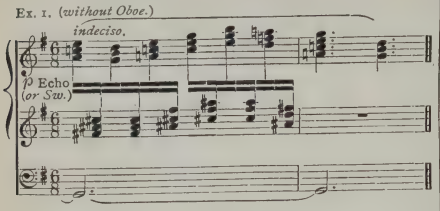
W. R. A.

---

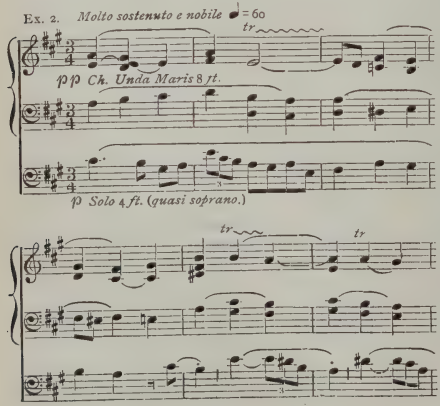
ORGAN

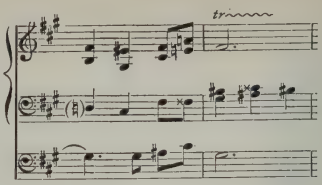
Karg-Elert has often shown both a fondness and aptitude for treating in modern fashion the old dance forms. There are examples even in his 'Choral Improvisations,' and others occur among his harmonium music. It is not surprising, therefore, to find that his latest organ work is a large-scale modernisation of the classical dance-suite. He leads off with a sonorous Entrata, which may be regarded as an equivalent of the French Overture, though it has none of the characteristic rhythms of the form. It would serve well as a postlude when something both broad and festive is required. There is a fine pedal point midway (with shake). No. 2 is called Canzone—a title that may mean almost anything, as Karg-Elert has himself often shown. This particular example is a broad cantabile, lusciously harmonized, with some five-part writing of beautiful texture and a splendid climax. A reference to 'O Sanctissima' at the close seems to suggest a liturgical connection. With an organ well equipped in the way of solo stops this movement would be a highly effective recital item of the quiet order. We come to the dance forms with No. 3—Corrente e Siciliano. The Corrente section is for manuals only, and the pedal part of the remainder consists of long-sustained notes, save for a brief and simple solo passage. The tricky catch-as-catch-can style of the Corrente and the graceful and fanciful

Siciliano set up a capital contrast, yet the two hang together well. A cadence that occurs four times in the latter calls for quotation :

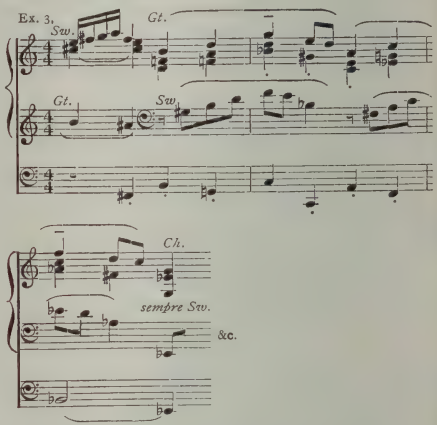


This ' comes off ' unexpectedly well—provided the indeciso is not of the involuntary type ! Towards the end the composer employs what is now one of his favourite devices—a soft high note on a manual, wedged or weighted down, as in Dubois's ' March of the Three Kings.' Discretion is needed in its application ; the merest trifle too much power would change a pretty effect into a nuisance. This piece is a delight from beginning to end. It is not difficult for players with deft fingers, but taste and fancy are needed to do it justice. (By the way, the numerous slides might well have been written out, as the ornament is rarely used nowadays, and all these old graces have always been ambiguous.) No. 4 is a Rigaudon, sub-titled ' Alla Burla.' This, with the opening direction, Allegro gajo e rustico, gives a good idea of it. Skilful pedalling is called for, and the piece altogether is by far the most difficult of the set. Registration is important—as indeed it is in all the composer's later works. Here he calls for three rather loud manuals, well contrasted. How many English three-manual organs can meet this demand ? Our anæmic Choirs not only make it impossible for us to realise some of Bach's intentions ; more and more they hamper us in dealing with modern music. The pedal indication too—' Fag. 16-ft. (or Bombarde) and 4-ft. or 2-ft.'—is hardly likely to be satisfied. Fortunately, a good deal of Karg-Elert's registration is not indispensable. In fact, many of his admirers think that it is well they should not be, for he is becoming overfond of the bizarre and restless. The Sarabande is a first-rate study in pedalling a melody. It opens thus :





and is in this lyrical vein throughout, save for a fine climax towards the end—one of those richly-laid-out treatments of essentially simple progressions of which the composer seems to have an endless supply. Another example of this occurs in the next piece—Gavotte e Carillon—where we have a succession of ninths made fresh by the method of laying-out :



The bell element is less prominent than the title leads us to expect. It consists of a triplet-quaver passage in R.H., over a simple phrase in sixths in L.H., with a pedal point, and a high note fixed down on the Choir. This piece appears to depend too much on registration—in other words, the actual musical interest is perhaps rather less than that in the rest of the Suite. For Finale the composer repeats the ' Entrata,' with slight changes, rounding the whole off with a tremendous cadence. The Suite should become one of the most widely-used of Karg-Elert's later works, partly because of its attractiveness, and also because it is not unreasonably or ungratefully difficult—a virtue that cannot be claimed for much modern music.

From the publishers of the Karg-Elert work (Novello) come also two new compositions by Basil Harwood—a set of Three Short Pieces and a longer number called ' In Exitu Israel.' The three pieces are admirable examples of the voluntary type, each three pages in length, but with a breadth of style and amplitude in laying-out that make them far more important than their title suggests. The degree of difficulty is about that of the ' Characteristic Pieces ' of Rheinberger. Particularly good is No. 3, with its wide-ranging melody, spacious texture, and genuine expressiveness. ' In Exitu Israel ' raises doubts—not in regard to the quality of the music, which is excellent—but concerning the structure.

The form is that of a March and Trio, with some extra sections tacked on, and these latter seem to reduce the driving-power of the work. Thus, the Trio—very appropriately a treatment of Tonus Peregrinus—is followed by a resumption of the March. At this point, where we expect a tightening-up of things, a page of free matter with several changes of time occurs, followed by a further appearance of the plainchant theme on the solo tuba in big chords. This again would have made a good finishing point, but it leads into a final page of matter entitled 'Hallelujah,' which has too slight a connection with what has gone before. The latter half of the piece thus becomes diffuse. As was said above, there is fine stuff in this work. It is difficult—rather unnecessarily so, perhaps; some of the manual octaves might have been dispensed with, and the florid pedal part doesn't always yield full value for the labour entailed.

Two Sonatas come from H. W. Gray, New York (Novello), one in B flat by Chris. M. Edmunds, and 'Sonata Dramatica,' by T. F. H. Candlyn. Mr. Edmunds has a keen eye for effect, but is inclined to overtax the resources of the instrument and player. The L.H. tremolando passages, fff, look well on paper, but count for little in actual performance. The mood is emotional, especially in the first two movements. In the Adagio e dolorosa we have both feet engaged in holding notes, but the fact does not prevent the composer from indicating nuances that are obtainable only by means of the Swell pedal. More and more composers do this sort of thing, evidently anticipating the day when a contrivance will enable us to manipulate the Swell pedal otherwise than by the feet. Mr. Edmunds hits on some striking themes, but his management of structure and his writing generally are behind his invention. But his music has warmth and colour, and altogether the Sonata makes one look forward to further work from the composer. Mr. Candlyn is a far better workman, though he allows his craft to get the better of him in the matter of length. His Sonata runs to forty-two pages (Mr. Edmunds manages with twenty less). Much of this length could be spared, as a good deal of it is the result of repetition, especially in the last movement. The title is justified chiefly in the opening 'Passionata'; the little syncopated motto theme strikes the right note, though (like almost all other motto themes) it is a trifle overworked by the time we have got to the forty-second page. The middle movement is an attractive 'Song without Words,' with some pleasantly diatonic writing and free rhythm. The Finale ('Pæan') is full of 'go'—a bit too long-drawn, as was said above, but very little of it falls below a good level of interest. Mr. Candlyn not only writes well in a general way; he writes well for the instrument, which is a rather rarer thing. Hence his Sonata is grateful to play, as well as good to hear. This capital work won the National Association of Organists' Prize and the Audsley Gold Medal for 1926. Sonatas are unprofitable enterprises in the ordinary way (even if one can find a publisher willing to take the risk), so perhaps some English organization will follow this American lead in the encouragement of serious organ composition.

Albert Beterlin's Offertoire, 'Jubilate Deo,' is a skilful treatment of a plainsong theme. By means of a plentiful use of 5-4 time the rhythm of the chant is maintained; the writing is largely canonic; and there is a finely-built climax. This is a piece that will be of service at churches where plainsong is used, and where the idiom is familiar. It is moderately difficult (Schola Cantorum, Paris; Novello).

The Year Book Press has issued in separate numbers Parry's Prelude, 'Preston,' and Charles Macpherson's Prelude in G from 'A Little Organ Book'; and the Allemande and Courante, and Sarabande, from Charles Wood's 'Suite in Ancient Style'—excellent studies and good examples of the facility with which this fine composer could handle antique styles. From the same house comes an arrangement by Harvey Grace of the Minuet and Trio from Schubert's Quartet in A minor. The organist has not much material with which to celebrate the Schubert Centenary. This movement—one of the most delightful in Schubert's chamber music—is easy to play, and lends itself well to transcription. The transcription is of the type that justifies itself, because few people are likely to hear the movement in the ordinary way; the organist, therefore, does well to step in and rescue it from semi-oblivion.

A couple of Bach arrangements call for notice. John E. West has transcribed with his usual practical musicianship the Chorale, 'Jesu, Joy of man's desiring' (retaining, however, the German title 'Jesus, bleibet meine Freude'). He uses the triplet figuration throughout, and so the player is never in doubt as to the effect of the combination of and the quaver triplets. Mr. West undoubtedly is right. This arrangement is published by Novello. Frederic H. Griswold has made an organ piece of the final chorus from the Cantata, 'Jesus nahm zu sich die Zwolfe,' giving the chorale melody to the pedals with 8-ft. stop, after the manner adopted by Bach himself in making similar arrangements. There is a misprint in the first phrase of the pedal part, two crotchets having been joined up as quavers and ranged wrongly (Clayton Summy, Chicago; Weekes, London).

Sir Henry Wood has made an arrangement of the Largo from Handel's Concerto Grosso No. 12—a well-laid-out version of a good example of Handel, very moderate in difficulty (Oxford University Press).

Franck's Symphony, arranged for organ, complete! A staggering proposition, at first, but, after all, not unreasonable. The work suggests the organ not less than the orchestra, and a transcription merely takes it back to the fons et origo of a good deal of it. The arranger is Herbert M. Kidd, and the publisher H. W. Gray (Novello). Mr. Kidd has been wise in leaving the registration to the player, contenting himself with reducing the work to keyboard form, with complete indications of the orchestration. He even refrains from making suggestions as to what manuals shall be used. There is much to be said for this method. Some of the best organ versions of orchestral works we have heard have been made by players using a pianoforte reduction, with pencilled registration to suit their organ. The only point in which we think Mr. Kidd has too closely followed the original is in regard to some passages where the string or wood-wind idiom is either inconvenient or ineffective on the keyboard. Such passages call for modification which ought not to be left to the player. Here and there Mr. Kidd makes the pedal and left hand play the same notes. This is not good laying-out, as the coupler almost invariably leaves the L.H. free for more interesting and useful work. The print is clear, and the pages not crowded, and on the whole the music is not very difficult to play. As it is not absolutely essential that every detail of the orchestration should be observed in registration, the work could easily be made effective on an organ of average resources. In fact, our impression is that the best result will be got by making it sound like organ music, with a reasonable amount of variety and nuance, rather than to attempt much in the way of detailed imitation of the scoring.

Whatever may be said of the principle involved in thus transcribing a complete Symphony—the first attempt of the kind, apparently—there can be nothing but praise for the labour of the arranger and the courage and enterprise of the publisher.

---

CHURCH MUSIC

Three movements from Masefield's Mystery Play 'The Coming of Christ' are now issued separately by Curwen. It may be recalled that some interesting notes on the play and on Holst's music appeared in the July number of the Musical Times. Two of the numbers now available are quite short and simple: 'The days are past,' sung by the King's Men, is for unison singing with accompaniment for pianoforte; 'As, after thunder,' for quartet (or chorus) of men's voices, is a straightforward treatment of a tune—'Hill Crest'—which, to quote from the article referred to above, 'deserves to take its place in the hymn-books.' The remaining chorus, 'Glory to God,' though not unduly difficult, needs a good choir. It is for S.A.T.B. and organ, and there is a fair amount of subdivision of parts. The stirring opening phrase is delivered (ff) by sopranos and trumpet in unison. The full chorus then enters, and soon reaches an effective climax in which the trumpet theme reappears. A brief section calls for some delicate pianissimo singing from divided sopranos, and leads to a return to the opening material. The chorus of King's men (unison) is next heard singing in the distance, after which the voices of the Heavenly Host enter, part by part, and repeat the strains of the previous pianissimo section. The tune 'Cresta' follows, sung by a tenor voice representing 'Light,' and unaccompanied except for a single holding note for the first verse. The final section (Adagio), for full choir, opens pianissimo and, except for the closing bars, is mainly unaccompanied; it calls for expressive singing and careful grading of tone from pp to ff. Towards the end the pace quickens, and a final entry of the trumpet theme combines with voices and organ in an impressive finish.

The first two numbers of Cramer's Library of Anthems are worth noting by choirmasters. 'Go not far from me, O God' (a prayer), by Noel Ponsonby, is an expressive little work for S.A.T.B. (unaccompanied). C. Hylton Stewart's 'To the Name of our Salvation' is a vigorous and straightforward setting of Dr. Neale's hymn, suitable for the Feast of the Circumcision or for general use. An acceptable addition to Novello's Chorister series of Church Music is a setting by Hugh Blair of 'The Lord is my Shepherd,' for two sopranos. It is well-written, tuneful music, which should prove useful for occasions when only treble voices are available. Byrd's 'Assumpta est Maria'—Offertory for the Feast of the Assumption—has been edited by H. B. Collins (Chester). The counterpoint is smooth and flowing and of no great difficulty, except that the first tenor part twice reaches to the high B flat. It is for treble, alto, first tenor, second tenor or baritone, and bass, and the text is in Latin. From the Year Book Press comes R. L. Pearsall's setting of the Lord's Prayer for unaccompanied S.A.T.B. It is appropriately simple and devotional in style, and has been edited for the Bristol Madrigal Society by Hubert W. Hunt.

Choirs on the look-out for a setting of the Te Deum and Benedictus which is off the beaten track should examine Martin Shaw's in the key of G (Cramer). This is broad, dignified music, which makes its effect by simple means. There are nowhere any intricacies to upset either singers or organist. Rhythmic freedom, however, is essential—e.g., the long chains of crotchets in the Benedictus may easily be made to sound stodgy should the composer's note on the point be ignored. A Short Communion Service by Douglas M. Coates (S.P.C.K.) is well-written and not difficult. The style is modal, and considerable use is made of plainsong themes. Both forms of the Kyrie are included, while for the Creed the traditional plainsong is used. The music may be sung unaccompanied. More difficult is Percy W. Whitlock's setting of the same Office (Oxford University Press). The vocal writing is free and interesting, and the organ is effectively used. The work offers scope to a good choir.

A Nativity Play—'The Finding of the King'—by F. G. Happold, and set to music by R. R. Broome, comes from the Oxford University Press. Those who are looking for something new of this kind for the coming Christmas season may be confidently recommended to examine this entirely admirable work for themselves. Much latitude is given as to cast, number of singers, &c. Thus, 'the play may be performed by an all-male, an all-female, or a mixed cast. . . . The size of the Angel Choir may be anything one wishes. It should not, however, be too small, and may be as large as desired.' The music consists largely of carols, based on words and music of traditional or of 14th- to early 17th-century origin. The treatment of these by the composer is musicianly and always interesting. The orchestral material—strings and wood-wind—may be hired from the publishers.

G. G.

---

Further Schubert publications have to be noted. Messrs. Paxton issue an album of Twelve Famous Songs, with English and German words. The choice sticks to the familiar, and the print is on the small side, but the album is good value for the low price. From Schirmer, New York, comes a capital work for those who play two-pianoforte music. It is an Andantino Varié, on a French Tune, originally written for pianoforte duet; adapted to two pianofortes, four hands, by Harold Bauer. This is one of the best of all Schubert's essays in duet form, and should become well known, both in its original version and in the arrangement of Mr. Bauer's—which naturally is the more effective.

The Oxford University Press has issued Constant Lambert's music to the ballet 'Pomona,' arranged for pianoforte duet by the composer. There are seven movements: Intrata, Corante, Pastorale, Menuetto, Passacaglia, Rigadoon, Siciliana, and Marcia. This is the most engaging thing of its kind that has come our way for a long time. It is easy to forgive Mr. Lambert's occasional 'wrong-note' perversities, because of the charm and interest of the music as a whole. We like especially the truly delightful Siciliana, the Menuetto—somewhat bleak, but full of point—the Pastorale, and the March, an original and fetching affair. The degree of difficulty is, on the whole, moderate.

The ballet ought to be heard in orchestral suite form. Skilful, direct, and highly effective, it places Mr. Lambert among the composers on whom an eye should be kept.

Occasional Notes

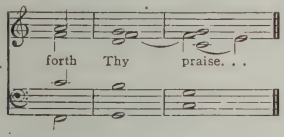
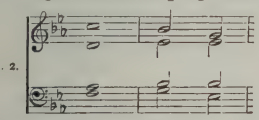
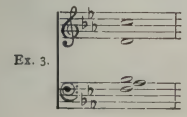
'Feste's' complaint concerning the overdose of dominant sevenths, especially at the hands of church organists, has brought several letters from fellow-sufferers. Among others is one from an old friend, himself an organist of distinction, who tells us that on the very Sunday after he had read 'Feste's' article he dropped into a village church where he found the organist going one better than the usual seventh-monger. Not only were plain chords garnished with sevenths; the discord was almost invariably suspended, so that almost every cadence was hung up with a 4-3. Even Tallis did not escape. Here is the ending of the opening Response as thus improved:



Apparently there were no altos or tenors in this choir; at all events they were either inaudible at these points, or else they loyally supported their organist in his efforts to impart a little interest to such out-of-date material as mere common chords. An even more striking effect was produced in one of the Psalms, sung to a chant whose second half began with this progression:



Here the local humorist stuck a B flat in the middle of the opening chord, thus:



He did this, not once or twice, which would have been quite bad enough, but in every one of the Psalm's twenty verses! However, such strange goings-on are not confined to village and small town churches, as a letter in our correspondence columns shows. It is quite clear that this organ-loft convention, like some others, is dying more slowly than we thought. The new School of Church Music can hardly tackle Cathedral organists, but we hope it will not overlook such details when it gets to work among the humbler members of the profession.

We congratulate Mr. Sydney Nicholson on having received from the Archbishop of Canterbury the Degree of Mus. Doc.

Our Note last month on the artistic principles of the Royal Horse Guards bandmaster was discussed by Mr. James Glover in the Stage of August 9. Mr. Glover—whose complimentary reference to the Musical Times gave us pleasure—sides with the bandmaster on the ground that seaside holiday-makers don't want 'serious and heavy music.' We never supposed they did. There is plenty of good light music, just as there is plenty of bad serious music.

A short time ago we spent a few weeks at a southern seaside town. A crack Army band was playing nightly on the pier, and thither we went on three evenings, hoping to enjoy some of that vast store of music that is both light and good—operatic overtures from Auber to Sullivan, suites and dances by Edward German and others, popular song medleys of the type that Mr. Glover himself used to serve up so inimitably at Drury Lane pantomimes, and so on. Instead, the programmes consisted entirely of fox-trots, during which a large number of young folk, embracing amoroso e stringendo, shambled, shuffled, and wriggled their way round the bandstand. At the end of each fox-trot the wrigglers demanded more, and got it. Nobody pretends that the dance music of to-day has any interest from the purely listening point of view, so, having no fancy for the fox-trot, black-bottom, or shimmy, or any other hideously-named negroid contortions, we left early, wondering why the local authorities who engaged the band for the entertainment of visitors didn't instruct the bandmaster to do his duty by us all, instead of achieving a spurious popularity by catering for the least musical section, who, it should be added, were already provided for in the local dance-hall—we beg pardon, palais de danse.

Mr. Glover apparently forgets that the musical public has grown enormously during the past few years. Hundreds of thousands of people now buy gramophone records of good music, light and serious, and listen to decent wireless concerts for hours every week, not in order to be educated, or for the sake of posing, but because they enjoy it. When they go for a holiday, do they suddenly give up their liking for it and become musical barbarians? Of course not. They may want a larger proportion of light music during their fortnight by the sea, just as they may put an extra Edgar Wallace in their bag; but they no more want drivel from the band than from the bookshop. The literary equivalent of a good deal of the rubbish played by seaside military bands would be a book shaky in grammar, vulgar in style, and with a mentality suitable for the half-witted.

Since the above was written, an article by Mr. Glover has appeared in the Sunday Dispatch, wherein, after all, he seems to support our views. As a result of recent visits to twenty seaside resorts, he finds that military bands are declining in popularity. He ascribes this mainly to a falling-off of interest and variety in the programmes—too much fox-trot and jazz, a tendency to vulgarise the programmes, and so on. This amply bears out what was said in these columns.

Mr. Glover suggests that local authorities might get better value for their expenditure by dropping military bands in favour of permanent small orchestras which could be augmented during the holiday season. 'It would open up the ordinary string orchestral library for thousands of selections to draw upon.' Again we are in agreement. A further proof that the public loss of interest in seaside military bands is due to the character of the programmes rather than to the type of band is furnished by the B.B.C. pronouncement that military band programmes are among the most appreciated of broadcasts, and that one of the most popular wireless concerts of recent times was that given by the Military Band conducted by Holst.

So the conclusion is that 'giving the public what it wants' means not quite what Lieut. Dunn and the Melody Maker thought it meant.

---

Our August issue contained an article by Dr. Herbert Thompson, entitled, 'Famous Victorians in a Toy Symphony,' being a report of a charity concert organized in 1880 by the Viscountess Folkestone. In the course of the article Dr. Thompson wrote: 'Of all that merry party of musicians, only one survivor is left—Sir Frederic Cowen.' The Doctor forgot that the Viscountess Folkestone is also still with us, though better known to-day as the Countess of Radnor. We are sorry this slip escaped our attention.

---

We recommend to readers a book called 'Fair Play,' by Rudolf Kircher, a pleasantly-written, sympathetic study of present-day England as seen by a German. Although Mr. Kircher's main concern is with games and sport, his work includes some excellent chapters on the drama, music, politics, and the national humour. In his Preface he explains this widening of the nominal scope of the book:

> It is not the author's fault if the reader is carried outside the sphere of pure sport into an atmosphere which some sportsmen may find uncongenial. Developments which have taken place in England make it necessary to give the word 'play' its widest interpretation.

And he has no difficulty in showing that the English way of approaching almost all its affairs from the angle of sport is largely responsible for both the strength and weakness of our musical life. The chapter, 'Music as Sport,' naturally deals specially with the competition festival movement and with community singing. Mr. Kircher is not always right in his facts. For example, he says that competition festivals began shortly before the war, whereas the history of the movement goes back a half-century—even much farther if we regard it as a choral and general development of the band contests that flourished in the North long before. And he is inclined to confuse competition festivals with such events as the week-long music-makings that now take place at seaside towns where there is a permanent orchestra. The only statistics he gives of a competition festival are those of the third Festival at Brighton. We wish he had procured the figures of (or, still better, could have been present at) such huge Festivals as those at Glasgow, Bedford, or London. He seems to have missed also a representative festival of the type where combined performance of a big work is the climax and main purpose.

---

He approves highly of the revival of folk-dancing, though he is not blind to the extravagances that must always show themselves in connection with a movement of the kind. He says unexpectedly good words of London musical life—even on its orchestral side—and pays a tribute to the excellent work done for music by the special performances in Southwark Cathedral, St. Martin-in-the-Fields, St. Michael's, Cornhill, and in many other City churches. But are the 'Masses of Berlioz, Bach, and Beethoven' to be heard at St. Paul's, Westminster Abbey, and in 'numerous smaller churches'? Beethoven in C, perhaps, but not the others, we think—certainly not that of Berlioz, for obvious reasons. It is a pity that he could not have been present at a St. Paul's Cathedral performance of the 'St. Matthew' Passion, or at a Westminster Special Choir service. Mr. Kircher's warmest praise is for the choral side of English musical life:

> English capacity for great musical performance, even under present conditions, can be gauged by the standard of part-song and chorus music; this is in full vigour to-day, and maintained a high level even during the depression of the 19th century. What English part-singers can do has been seen in Germany, in the performances of the Newcastle Singers in Frankfurt and other towns. The Newcastle choir is only one of many. The real musical talent of the English lies in vocal music, and especially in part-singing. No great obstacles stand in the way of its development; all that is required is a throat and a musical nature. It is significant that this form of art, in its nature simple, naive, and spontaneous, has been practised and intensively cultivated in England from the earliest centuries of our era. Primeval folk-melodies, folk-dances, and mysteries were the sources of this art, and all the complex musical forms and expressions have gradually developed from them. The English remained loyal to these pristine forms, and no judgment of English character and culture could be justified which did not take into account, besides the Stock Exchange, international trade, and party politics, this particular trait. . . . There are few nations that can point to a richer artistic heritage in song, rhythm, and speech, than the English, taken either in the narrower sense, or as a whole people embracing the Scots, Welsh, and Irish. Moreover, there is scarcely another nation which stands in such close association with these ancient forms of art.

All the four chapters dealing with music are in this excellent vein, and the drama is discussed with equal insight.

---

This being a musical paper, we dare not pause over the sporting chapters. We will only note that, as usual, the one game that is peculiarly our own stumps the foreign observer. Did anybody ever write understandingly about cricket without having either played it or lived and moved among players? We doubt it. So we are not surprised to find Mr. Kircher putting his foot in it several times. 'The important thing about cricket is that everybody can play it, even those whose aptitude for other games is questionable.' All we can say is, let them try it! The real case is that cricket makes such exceptional demands on the combined and quick use of eye, brain, and muscle that the man who can play it well can usually make a good show at any other ball game. Mr. Kircher says that no one is too young or too old for cricket. We wish he was right concerning the latter age limit. What wouldn't thousands of elderly Englishmen give to be once more at the wicket, steering one neatly through the slips, treating a half-volley as it ought to be treated, or stealing a short run? Or, if a bowler—but why continue the tantalising 'if'? Better say, 'Eheu fugaces!' and make the most of an occasional day at Lord's or the Oval. But we must quote Mr. Kircher again: 'The wicket is a small mark; two little bails lie on three parallel stumps, and the object of this game, almost unknown on the Continent, is to hit the wicket with a leather ball. The other side provides a defender whose duty it is to keep off the ball with a large wooden bat.' Large? Think of your first few overs against a fast bowler; the bat is all edge and no middle—a miserably puny defence against an almost invisible leather bullet. 'If he can hit it flying through the air he tries to make a run by crossing to the other wicket, and perhaps back again, before the fielders can throw the ball in.' But if he persists in making it fly through the air instead of along the ground his run will soon become a walk—back to the pavilion. 'The other side has a very dull time in the field, yet the keenest attention is expected of them.' Dull? With a fine view of the duel between bat and ball—a duel in which he is taking part all the while, with the chance that the very next ball that ever is may place the ultimate decision literally in his hands—if he can hold it! No, Mr. Kircher! The player who finds fielding 'very dull' is not a real cricketer, but a mere golfer or tennis-player who has missed his vocation. However, as we said above, we must remember that this is a musical journal, and must not touch the sporting side of the book. We end by commending Mr. Kircher's book to our readers. Such sympathetic and good-humoured international studies touch spots which the politician can never reach.

---

We have received a prospectus of the first half of the coming season at the 'Old Vic.' 'Love's Labour's Lost' opens the ball on September 10, and will run till the end of the month, with three operas interspersed on Thursdays—'Aida' on September 13, 'Il Trovatore' on the 20th, 'Madame Butterfly' on the 27th. The stock piece for October is Ibsen's 'The Vikings,' with four operatic evenings—'Lohengrin,' 'Faust,' 'Cavalleria Rusticana' and 'The Bosun's Mate,' and 'Carmen' (Thursdays, at 7.45). A complete list of the fixtures from September 10 till January-12 may be had on application to Miss Lilian Baylis, 'Old Vic.,' Waterloo Road, S.E.1.

---

A recent issue of Musical America contained some interesting views expressed by Mr. Arnold Bax on present-day tendencies:

> I think the present war-cry, 'Back to Bach,' must only lead its partisans to a cul-de-sac, for the conscious attempt to go back to anything is a mere intellectual futility. We are modern people and must find modern methods of conveying our own æsthetic life to our audiences.

This is true. To perform and hear as much Bach as possible is good; to copy his style (an easy thing to do) is bad. There is too much 'going-back' among composers to-day, though fewer seem to model themselves on Bach than on the Elizabethan and Tudor writers. Worst of all, we think, is going back to Hucbald. Why not a little farther? What 's the matter with Jubal?

> There appear to be certain signs of revolt against post-war fad in all the arts, and for my own part I am heartily glad of it. Those amongst my British contemporaries whom I most respect and for whose work (notably that of Vaughan Williams) I have the greatest sympathy, have developed their own personal styles, regardless of any of the heady excitements emanating from Austria or Russia. And I believe that the sincerity of English composers is one of the most remarkable features of their work. I may mention, too, perhaps, that certain of the younger writers who began their careers with an attempt to imitate and even to outdo the fashionable gamineries and jocosities of the Continent, have since settled down and are quite likely to produce works of a serious import in the near future.

It would be easy to name several composers to whom the last paragraph applies, and on the whole we think it is the most hopeful sign in British composition to-day.

Mr. Bax's remarks on his own development will be read with interest:

> As far as I know, the only new tendency in my style is but a modification of the manner in which I have always written. I am a brazen romantic, and could never have been and never shall be anything else. By this I mean that my music is the expression of emotional states. I have no interest whatever for sound for its own sake or in any modernist 'isms' and factions.

---

The 'Sing 'em muck' controversy has livened a few weeks of the 'off' season. Dame Nellie Melba cabled wrathfully protesting against a statement in Dame Clara Butt's biography that the former had said to the latter, who was about to tour Australia, 'Sing 'em muck; it 's all they can understand.' Whereupon Dame Clara cabled to Dame Nellie assuring her that she was innocent, having neither ascribed the remark to Dame Nellie, nor seen the proofs of the book in which it appeared. Exhibit No. 3 (as they say in the Courts) was a cable from Miss Ponder, the writer of the book. Wiring from India, Miss Ponder affirms that the proofs were duly passed by Dame Clara. The result of this long-distance argument is that we have three irreconcilable statements, and, one man's word being as good as another's (especially when they are women), the case must be dismissed, the parties paying their own costs. The only thing that is certain is that both these eminent singers, however emphatically they may decry the 'Sing 'em muck!' principle, have consistently acted on it in arranging their programmes. The fact of their having sung a good deal of fine music as well can never alter that.

As was shown by the letter in our August correspondence column headed 'He took us seriously!' at least one reader was deceived by the July 'Occasional Note' in which, tongue in cheek, we suggested that our young friend the Dominant should follow our example and treat musical questions with a becoming gravity. We thought the matter had ended, but our other young friend, the Musical Mirror, in its issue for August, contained a full-page leaded 'Open Letter to the Musical Times,' in which we were first praised for 'frolics and verbal skylarking,' and then rebuked for advising the Dominant to be more serious, and for the 'strange assertion' that we ourselves had neither inclination nor space for light-mindedness. We are still wondering how the writer could have seen through all our other 'verbal skylarking' and not through this very obvious example. No doubt he is only one of many readers. As we said in July, jesting about music is a dangerous game, and we have reluctantly decided that in future all our jokes must be labelled and marked in plain figures.

The Musician's Bookshelf

'Gioacchino Rossini.' By Giuseppe Radicciotti. Vol. 2.

[Tivoli: Arti Grafiche Majella di Aldo Chicca.]

The second volume of Signor Radicciotti's monumental biography of Rossini covers the years from 1823 to the composer's death in 1863, and deals in consequence with some of the most important events of his life—the London visit of 1824, the composition of 'William Tell,' of the 'Stabat Mater'; his life at Bologna, Florence, and finally at Paris.

In London Rossini appears to have had a very good reception, apart from the reservations of critics in respect of the cantata he wrote to commemorate the death of Byron—reservations which, perhaps, were not wholly undeserved. Signor Radicciotti reproduces the aria of Apollo and part of the chorus in which the Muses lament the poet's untimely death. These bear out his contention that the chief melody has sincerity and is well conceived. The 'Lament of the Muses for the Death of Lord Byron' was, however, a pièce d'occasion written by one who knew probably little of Byron and less of Britain, and was consequently most unlikely to express anything which could harmonize with the national sentiment.

Rossini found an enthusiastic patron in George IV. The King often joined in the performances given by Rossini, and Signor Radicciotti tells a little-known anecdote which is worth repeating. The King once, after singing a wrong note, asked that the whole piece should be begun again. 'Your Majesty,' answered the composer, 'has the right to do as you like. Sing on; I will follow you to the grave.' Rossini visited also Cambridge, and took part in the July Festival, playing the organ at the concert of sacred music and singing in the Senate House where the concerts of secular music were given. He left England on July 24, 1824, having earned a good sum of money, and very grateful for the 'infinite kindness shown to him by that superlatively hospitable nation.'

It is impossible to give here even a brief summary of all the new evidence the author has collected and presented in an eminently readable style. It may be said, however, that he draws a portrait which differs very considerably from the portraits of his predecessors. In the first place he makes it clear that Rossini was not a mere lover of ease and plenty, deaf to the call of higher feelings. Nor was he the irreverent, confirmed sceptic whose pungent sarcasm delighted the town. He completely lacked the ardent patriotism which fired his compatriots in 1848, but he was well over fifty years of age when the movement for political freedom started, and the suggestion that he should join the volunteers as commander-in-chief of all the military bands of Italy could not have been seriously meant, even at a time of national crisis when sentiment is apt to over-rule reason. When funds and gifts were asked for the volunteers Rossini contributed a good sum and two of his four horses. Yet this gift fell so far short of the hopes of those who imagined him to be as rich as Crœsus that hostile demonstrators gathered under his windows denouncing him as a reactionary and accusing him of meanness and avarice.

He was neither mean nor a reactionary. His servants were always treated with generosity and kindness; politics he left to politicians, not because he could not sympathise with a noble cause, but because he was neither intellectually nor physically of the stuff of which martyrs and heroes are made. At fifty he was already attacked by the malady which more than any other undermines energy, determination, the very life-force—neurasthenia. So much has been said of the marvellous ease with which he composed that it is well worth remembering how constant work used to exhaust his strength. He suffered from nervous exhaustion in 1830; he was seriously ill in 1833, and again ten years later. In 1841 it is said of him that he was so thin as to be almost unrecognisable. It is then evident that although he reached the age of seventy-six, his was not a robust or a particularly healthy constitution.

The chapter on Wagner repeats, in the main, what is (or should be) known—for the dialogue between Wagner and Rossini deals with problems not less vital to-day than they were in 1860. The additions and the commentary help us to reconstruct that memorable meeting; there is also a much needed exposure of the absurd legends invented at various times by the partisans of the two composers.

On the whole this second volume bears out fully the promise of the first. The narrative flows evenly; the subject matter is presented in a tasteful manner; there is evidence of wide scholarship and patient research. All the volume needs is an index—and this is wanted badly. But perhaps it will be found in the third and last volume, which will be published before the end of the year.

F. B.

'The Language of Music.' By E. Stanley Roper and R. J. Wickham Hurd.

[Oxford University Press, 5*s*.]

A challenging title is the one borne by this book, and a title which at once connects it with Miss Home's small volume, 'Music as a Language.' The work is, indeed, an outline of the scheme of musical training developed under Miss Home at the Kensington High School, supplemented by thirty-two pages of very helpful exercises by the authors.

In the study of a language the child has to learn his alphabet, grammar, reading, and composition. But the wise teacher will always keep dangling before the donkey's nose two carrots as the incentives to effort. When a child can read, he can enjoy for himself stories only formerly accessible through his teacher's lips. When he can write he can pen his first letter to father or mother.

How far does the course of musical training, as set out here, correspond with the teaching of a language ?

The scheme covers the years of secondary-school life from about eight to sixteen. The chapters are conveniently arranged so that, with one exception, each chapter represents a year's work. Chapter 1 deals with the beginnings, and presumes on no previous musical knowledge.

In that first year, the pupils learn to hear, read, and write the notes of the diatonic scale, plus fe ta and se in Sol-fa and Staff in the key of C. Their work, however, is entirely concerned with pitch. No rhythmic work at all is started till the second year, at the age of nine.

' Time should be introduced as soon as the class is sure of the notes of the scale in relation to the Staff. . . .' The children are then taught to recognise loud and soft pulses through tapping, continuing with duple time.

But why should pulse recognition be deferred till this stage ? It is not necessary to know the notes of a scale before you can hear that music has a regular beat, nor has the knowledge of the Staff anything to do with the ability to hear, clap, or step the rhythm of a piece of music played. (In this chapter, by the way, the words ' rhythm ' and ' time ' are used loosely, as if both meant time : e.g., ' Point out that all music is written in some regular rhythm, and then play some simple tunes in duple time, marking the pulses.')

This mention of hearing the pulses in music brings us to the second point. What music do the pupils hear in their lessons besides what they make for themselves ? None is mentioned except in one case, where the children learn to fix the mental effect of the degrees of the scale through settings of nursery rhymes, recommended to be composed by the teacher. But even for this purpose real music might be used.

Now if the child's musical horizon is bounded by the music he himself makes, where is the incentive to study ? Will he want to learn to read and write music when he has heard none ? Without this incentive, the first year's work may produce a set of efficient pupils well drilled in their musical alphabet, but it will almost certainly produce a set of music haters.

These two faults mar an otherwise excellent book, for from Chapter 2 onwards each step comes as a logical progress from the preceding one. With the introduction of the scale of G, transposition is begun. F is next taught, and modulation follows naturally, through the use of fe and ta. Melodic improvisation through the voice begins as soon as the key of C is known, and later, when a knowledge of chords is added, transposition and improvisation keep pace.

The section devoted to voice exercises is specially sound and clear. A little crop of misprints on pp. 13-15—(two lines of a modulator transposed ; ' use ' instead of ' lose ' ; doh instead of soh) suggest that a few pages escaped proof-correction.

What teachers will find most helpful is the clear way in which the successive steps are traced. Yet throughout the authors appear to suffer from a space limitation which is probably none of their choosing. The book aims to help and guide the inexperienced teacher. But undue compression has prevented the authors from even mentioning those very methods of making each stage interesting, and of presenting the subject from the child's angle, which would be so valuable to the young teacher. One feels that the limiting of the work to forty-eight pages of text has put the authors at a serious disadvantage, and must be held largely responsible for their book being only a good musical grammar instead of, in the full sense, ' music as a language.' E. M. G. R.

BOOKS RECEIVED

[Mention in this list neither implies nor precludes review in a future issue.]

' Suggestions for Musical Evenings.' By the Rev. J. E. and Mrs. Crawshaw. Pp. 32. Leeds : The Wesley Guild, 4½*d.*, post free.

' Stories of Methodist Music.' 19th Century. By James T. Lightwood. Pp. 54. The Epworth Press, 1*s.*

Gramophone Notes

By ' Discus '

H.M.V.

Despite the holidays, a large and unusually interesting batch comes from Hayes. I have hitherto been rather less enthusiastic than most of my fellow-reviewers concerning the records of the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra under Stokowski. It seemed to me that the choice of work was not calculated to display the orchestra's strong suit, which is brilliance and efficiency rather than subtlety of interpretation. Rimsky-Korsakov's ' Scheherazade ' Suite is just the thing for them, with its showiness, colour, and heartless glitter. Nothing better need be asked for than this set of records, though for most listeners the whole Suite at a sitting is too much like an over-spiced meal washed down with some potent spirit —say, vodka (D1436-40).

The revival of interest in early Verdi is unmistakable, so the present is a good moment for the launching of a practically complete ' Rigoletto,' recorded at Milan, the performers being the orchestra and chorus of La Scala, with principals of good average merit, conducted by Carlo Sabajno. The cuts are liberal, but rob us of nothing that matters much. What a string of familiar tunes is here ! They wear better than one would have expected, too. Perhaps this unlooked-for freshness is due to the zest of the performers. These Italians clearly have no doubts concerning the musical value of what they sing and play. I doubt if any other race could do this kind of thing with so much conviction. Anyway, this whole-hearted method of approach revitalises music that most musicians had regarded as faded.

I mentioned the orchestra first because the honours seem to go to them for their brilliance, variety, and point. The chorus is so good that it is a pity they have not more to do. Their 'Zitti, zitti' is a capital bit of crisp singing, with that rare thing a real choral staccato, and abundant variety of colour and power. Of the principals I prefer the bass and baritone, but all four shine in the ensemble passages, which are full of spirit. This is a big enterprise carried out in a way that leaves room for no fault-finding save in regard to a few details, which after all is more than can be said of any good average first-hand operatic performance (C1483-94).

How many of us know anything of Suppé beyond the 'Poet and Peasant' and 'Light Cavalry' Overtures? There is at least one other Overture as good, or better—that to 'The Beautiful Galatea.' As 'arranged' (thus the label, but 're-scored' is perhaps the right word) by Artok, and played by the Berlin State Orchestra, under Ernst Viebig, it makes capital hearing. By no means the least merit of the gramophone companies is their increasing tendency to dig out long-forgotten things by the lesser composers. We are beginning to realise that such men as Boccherini, von Suppé, Litolff, Cherubini, and others had more than one thing to say, and could usually be relied on to say it attractively (C1527).

An unusually good male quartet joins Marek Weber's Orchestra in Schumann's 'Sunday on the Rhine' and 'Drinking Song.' The combination is unusual, but there is no want of balance. The orchestral part is excellent, with some of the best brass recording I have ever heard. This is a record off the beaten track, and thoroughly enjoyable (B2765).

The Elman String Quartet disappoints me in its latest record. The label credits it with playing the 'Emperor' Theme and Variations of Haydn, but actually it gives us only the Theme and one Variation—the last, I think. This very short measure is the less excusable seeing that the movement was recently recorded in full by the Virtuoso Quartet. On the other side is the Andante Cantabile from Tchaikovsky's Op. 11—a very hackneyed choice. In neither work is the playing of the high quality reached in the records noticed recently in these columns. There is too much vibrato in the Tchaikovsky, and the ensemble in Haydn lacks finish (DB1055).

Kreisler as duettist is rarely heard. Here he is joined by Hugo Kreisler, with violoncello, in two of his own compositions—'Marche Miniature Viennoise' and 'Syncopation.' Like most of the great violinist's compositions, they cut no ice. Certainly the real jazz merchants need fear nothing from his excursion into their preserve. He sets some interesting rhythmical problems for the two instruments, but the result does not over-stimulate. There must surely be some good things for violin and violoncello awaiting the attention of two such players; why put us off with merely ordinary fare? (DA961).

I am disappointed, too, with the record of Dr. Prendergast playing, on the Winchester Cathedral organ, of Guilmant's 'Offertoire on two Christmas Themes' and Wesley's Larghetto in F sharp minor. The Offertoire is badly 'cut,' the greater part of the opening section being omitted, so that the French carol theme comes on with an effect of abruptness. In the 'Adeste fideles' section the rhythm is bad, and there is a quite unwarranted difference of pace between the plain statement of the tune and the ornamented form. In both pieces there is a want of clarity for which the player is probably not responsible. But one is sorry to find him guilty of the flabbiness of rhythm that has given organists a bad name among musicians (C1447).

The vocal records include some first-rate examples. I give first place to those of Stanford's 'Songs of the Sea,' in which Peter Dawson, an excellent male-voice chorus, the orchestra, and conductor, Malcolm Sargent, join forces with stirring results. The only fault I have to find with the soloist is in regard to the quieter songs, especially 'Homeward Bound,' where he is too consistently loud, and also a trifle hurried. There is fine scope in this song for mezza-voce singing. Diction is good, as is usual with Dawson, though he doesn't quite conquer the difficulty of 'The Old Superb' in this matter. But the performance as a whole proved its stirring quality, by reviving the thrill with which I first heard these fine songs many years ago. 'Homeward Bound' and 'The Old Superb' are on C1479; 'Drake's Drum' and 'Outward Bound' on B2743; and 'Devon, O Devon,' on B2747, with the remaining side given up to a sheer 'dud'—'He heard the great sea calling,' by Andrews. A bad lapse. As an object-lesson of the differences in all ways between a good song and a bad one, this record has a value of its own.

Georg A. Walter, a German tenor, sings Schubert's 'Du bist die Ruhe' and 'Nacht und Träume' with feeling. There might be more ease in the first, and we are sometimes made too well aware of his breath-taking. But I like the thought and earnest care at the back of his singing (B2772). Florence Austral's fine voice is heard in 'Porgi Amor,' from 'Figaro,' and Percy Kahn's 'Ave Maria.' She is more effective in the latter song, which gains much from the violin obbligato beautifully played by Isolde Menges (whose name ought to be on the label but isn't) (D1446).

To those of us who are weary of 'spirituals,' Paul Robeson's singing of them comes as a boon and a blessing. There is a really moving quality in his records of 'Sinner, please doan' let dis harves' pass' and 'Scandalise my name' (B2771). And what a voice! Are there many—or any—finer bass organs to be heard to-day? It is a pity his other record is of two poor songs—Johnson's 'Seem lak' to me' and Cook's 'Down de lovers' lane.' His singing here is less good, too—which is as it should be. A bad song's power for mischief is trebled when it is well sung (B2777).

Finally, here is coloratura singing of the best: Toti dal Monte in a couple of extracts from 'The Daughter of the Regiment,' recorded in La Scala, Milan. In the familiar 'Lo dice ognun' the chorus enters with fine gusto (B1152).

---

COLUMBIA

Grieg's Pianoforte Concerto retains its popularity so well that the Columbia Company could hardly have made a better choice for a large-scale work for its 'dark-blue' (4*s*. 6*d*.) series. Friedman is the soloist, and Philip Gaubert the conductor. Brilliance and power are the chief characteristics, bought, however, at the cost of the lyrical side of the work. The pianoforte tone is excellent on the whole, with some descents into noisiness at the bravura passages. The orchestral part is unusually vivid (9446-49).

(By the way, why do we hear so little of Grieg's pianoforte music apart from the Concerto? The only catalogue at hand is the latest H.M.V., in which I find Grieg represented by the Concerto, one song, and two pieces from the Lyric Suite arranged for orchestra. Yet one would have expected to see a longish list of those songs and pianoforte pieces which the catalogue annotator rightly describes as 'poetic' and 'charming.')

It is good to find the recording of Delius being kept up. The Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, conducted by Sir Thomas Beecham, is heard in 'The Walk to Paradise Garden,' from 'A Village Romeo and Juliet.' This strikes me as being the best Delius orchestral record so far issued—full of delicate touches, and practically free from the slight fog that some of us had come to regard as almost inevitable in gramophoned Delius (L2087).

A re-recording is of W. H. Squire playing Handel's 'Largo' and his own arrangement of Dunkler's Humoresque. It is late in the day to complain, but I cannot resist a grouse over some very un-Handelian harmonic weaknesses in the accompaniment. Moreover, Mr. Squire is over-fond of portamento. The humour in the Dunkler piece is of a very obvious type, and the musical interest is of the slightest (L2128).

A couple of operatic sopranos invite comparison—Rosetta Pampini and Eva Turner. The former sings 'Un bel di vedremo,' from 'Madame Butterfly,' and 'Si, mi chiamano Mimi,' from 'La Bohème' (L2126); the latter a couple of extracts from 'Turandot' (D1619), and 'Ritorna vincitor,' from 'Aida' (D1578). The honours are with the English girl, I think. Pampini is over-inclined to tremolo, though in the matters of variety and charm in quieter passages she is the better of the two. Miss Turner has astonishing power—too much for the combination of a loud needle and a small room. Good as she is in the 'Turandot' extracts, I prefer her in 'Ritorna vincitor.' (This is a re-recording, by the way.) There is a freedom from the occasional hardness that just spoils the Puccini from the mere drawing-room listening point of view, though one can imagine this penetrating quality to be effective in the opera-house. The 'Aida' record is distinguished by a fine dramatic feeling, as well as by a lavish outpouring of tone. Gramophonists will want to hear much more of this English singer.

METROPOLE

This new company is starting with a small output of music on the light side, admirably recorded. I have doubts as to the wisdom of its method of mixing the material. For example, No. 1307 gives us on one side Moussorgsky's 'Song of the Flea,' sung by Joseph Farrington, on the other Chaminade's 'L'Automne,' played by the Parkington Quintet. I imagine that most people who enjoy Mr. Farrington's singing would prefer another song to the Chaminade, and vice versâ. Moussorgsky's song is capitally sung, with exemplary diction, and a good convincing sardonic laugh. The Parkington party are very effective, and on both sides the recording is first-rate.

The Casano Octet provides another example of good work in Rubinstein's Valse Caprice and Debussy's 'Gollywog's Cake-Walk,' though both pieces—the latter especially—lose something by being transferred from their original keyboard form (1030).

No. A1016 again mixes performers, with Samehtini and Trio in Braga's 'Angels' Serenade' and Sydney Baynes's Band in Gabriel Marie's 'La Cinquintaine.'

Mr. Baynes's players are heard again in Peter's 'Love in Cloverland,' this time sharing a record with the Elite Orchestra, which chooses Poldini's 'Poupée Valsante.' In all these light instrumental records the sonority and tone-colour are excellent.

Robert Carr sings Goatley's 'Can't remember,' with a voice and diction that one would like to hear spent on better material. On the other side of this record is the Gresham Singers' performance, with orchestra, of Knox's trivial 'When the swallows fly home' (A1033).

Finally, in No. 1039 is one of the finest examples of choral recording I have ever heard—Emory University Glee Club singing the 'spirituals,' 'Couldn't hear nobody pray' and 'Good news.' Musically, the pieces are almost negligible, and the singing naturally does not belong to the 'straight' choral type. But the voices are fine (with some rich second basses), and the recording exceptionally clear; above all there is an almost uncanny effect of realism. You can see a camp meeting in full swing. We want this clarity and sonority in records of choral masterpieces, instead of the comparatively blurred results we have so far had. The company that can record (say) the Philharmonic Choir in Bach as the Metropole people have recorded these students in 'spirituals' will reap a harvest. Choralism is still the staple fare of a large section of the British public, and they are waiting for the gramophone to treat them as well as it does the votaries of instrumental music.

As I said above, the standard of reproduction reached thus early by this new company promises well. But are they wise in catering so little—or not at all—for musicians? This was the mistake made by all the recording companies in the early days of the gramophone, and the result was a prejudice against the instrument which has only recently been removed by a more enlightened policy. The companies have now learned that the public interested in fine music is so large as to be well worth catering for. Any new company should begin by taking advantage of that fact, and so capturing two publics instead of one.

NATIONAL GRAMOPHONIC SOCIETY

The two latest issues are of Brahms's Sextet in G (105-8) and Malipiero's 'Stornelli e Ballate,' for string quartet (103-4)—about as wide a contrast as can be imagined. The players in the Sextet are the Spencer Dyke Quartet, with James Lockyer and Edward Robinson.

Performance and recording leave little ground for complaint. The only fault is a lack of tone in some of the quiet passages—probably a fault in the recording. Clarity is notably good. The Malipiero work has a very vivid performance by the Poltronieri String Quartet. Tone is hard at times—perhaps deliberately. This is fierce music for the most part, and has little of the idiom or texture that we associate with the medium. But it is well worth hearing for its exciting effect. Altogether, these two sets of records are well up to the N.G.S. standard, if not a bit above it.

Music in the Foreign Press

DEBUSSY'S INFLUENCE ON MODERN MUSIC

In the June Musik, Kurt Westphal writes :

We are beginning to see very clearly that 'modern music' does not mean 'contemporary music' and nothing more. There is a world of difference between the music of Pfitzner or Siegfried Wagner and that of Hindemith or Stravinsky. Indeed, the word 'modern' applies to a certain definite style and epoch as surely as the words 'classical,' 'romantic,' 'academic,'* and 'new-romantic.' The incunabula of modern music may be difficult to determine ; but there can be no doubt that with Debussy's advent all uncertainty ceases. There is no single modern composer who does not start from Debussy. It is he who presented the world with the new conception embodied in the use of parallel chords—a conception which does away with the principle of tension and relaxation of previous harmony. This innovation was considered at first as an impoverishment, but the further evolution of music has shown the endless potentialities and deep significance of the new, 'functionless' chords. These began by having no value except as pigments ; but soon their expressive value asserted itself. [Examples from Hindemith, Wellesz, Kodály, and Stravinsky are adduced.] A remarkable point is that whereas with the older method rhythm had to lose its pregnancy in proportion as harmony became more complex (e.g., Reger favours broad tempi), nowadays, however complex the harmony, the liveliest and most intricate rhythms remain possible.

OUR TIME AND HANDEL'S OPERAS

In the same issue, Ernst Schliepe concludes an article on Handel's operas with the following remarks :

The Handel renaissance is already on the wane. Viewing things more coolly and critically, we are able to see the weakness of the movement. Handel's operas, representing the climax of the baroque opera, retain their historical significance ; but, practically, the Handel revival is nothing more than an interesting experiment, which could have succeeded but once, owing to its having taken place in exceptionally favourable circumstances.

THE HISTORY OF THE LUTE

In the June-July Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft, Karl Geiringer deals with this subject on the basis of iconographic documents. Representations of the Indian lute prove it to be the ancestor of the European instrument. From India, the lute reached in one direction Eastern Turkestan and China, in the other, Persia, Arabia, and, finally, Europe. It was introduced into Europe by the Moors of Spain during the 10th century. But as late as the 13th century, pictures of it remain few. It is during the 15th century that the use of the instrument began to spread. The decline began in the 17th century, owing to the growing popularity of the theorbo and chitarrone, and later was hastened by that of the keyboard instruments. Thirty-five very interesting illustrations are provided.

* I can find no equivalent to the German word 'Klassizistisch'—M.-D.C.

A. P. F. BOELY (1785-1858)

In the August Revue Musicale, M. de Saint-Foix praises this French pianist and composer very highly.

Boely's personality is altogether exceptional. He concentrated on the past, ignoring fashion and untouched by romanticism, devoting his life to the study of Bach, Handel, and Scarlatti. He was a pupil of Ignace Ladurner (whose significance was emphasised by Saint-Foix in the Revue Musicale, November, 1926), and whose first Sonatas, we are told, show certain affinities with those of Beethoven). His two Sonatas for the pianoforte, Op. 1, published in 1810 or thereabouts, are remarkable for their originality, and reveal their composer as an impassioned student of Beethoven's music. Another important work is the Sonata for pianoforte duet, Op. 17. Boely's output is considerable. Over three hundred pieces from his pen were published shortly after his death. The original manuscripts are preserved in the Versailles Library. One or two books of his Suites might well be republished.

ALEXANDER WAULIN

In the July Auftakt, Igor Glebov writes :

As early as 1919, I became interested in Waulin's music. I liked his thoughtfulness and his eager quest for expression. By now he has matured, and three of his recent works—the second 'Autumn' String Quartet (1924), a Pastoral Trio for flute, viola, and bass-clarinet (1925), and a lengthy Pianoforte Sonata in one movement (1926)—are worthy of close attention. His music is essentially restless, always in motion. The first impression one has is that of rush. Afterwards one realises the organic growth of the intricate lines and ornaments. The impelling power is melos—not as 'abstract' melody, but as concrete lines of tone governed by the principle of transformation and of transit from one form to another.

AN UNPUBLISHED OPERA OF DVORAK'S

In the same issue, an editorial note gives particulars of the newly-rediscovered first version of the opera 'King and Coalman,' of which Dvorák was supposed to have destroyed the score. This was the second opera composed by Dvorák—in 1871, shortly after 'Alfred.' It was not accepted for performance, on account of its alleged complexity. Three years later, the composer wrote, on the same libretto, an entirely new score, in which not a single bar of the former version reappears. This was produced at Prague. In 1916 the manuscript score of Acts 1 and 3 of the first version were discovered among the possessions of one of the members of the Czech National Theatre at Prague. It is now announced that the whole of the score and parts have been found. The work is to be included next year in the cycle of Dvorák's stage-works to be given at Prague on the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of his death.

RIMSKY-KORSAKOV RECONSIDERED

In the May Muzyka i Revolutsia, Igor Glebov writes :

It remains difficult to define and appraise Rimsky-Korsakov's work. Of late, criticism with regard to him has made no headway. The course of his evolution is plain enough to us, for it is remarkably straightforward and continuous ; but to discover the fundamental tendencies of his mind

(Continued on page 821)

I vow to Thee, my Country

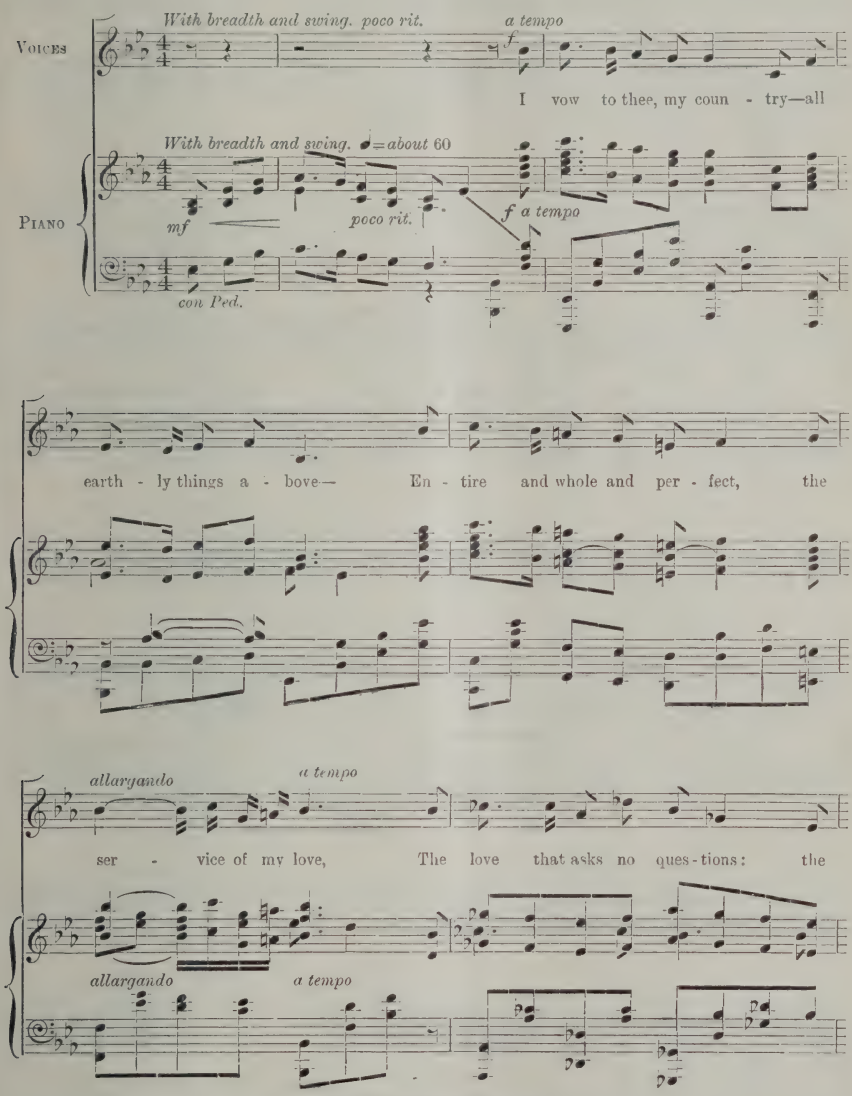
SONG FOR UNISON MASSED VOICES

Words by Cecil Spring-Rice * Music by Geoffrey Shaw

London: Novello and Company, Limited: New York: The H. W. Gray Co., Sole Agents for the U.S.A.



Voices
With breadth and swing. poco rit.
a tempo
I vow to thee, my coun - try—all
Piano
With breadth and swing. ♩=about 60
mf
poco rit.
f a tempo
con Ped.
earth - ly things a - bove— En - tire and whole and per - fect, the allargando
a tempo
ser - vice of my love, The love that asks no ques-tions: the allargando
a tempo

Copyright, 1928, by Novello and Company, Limited

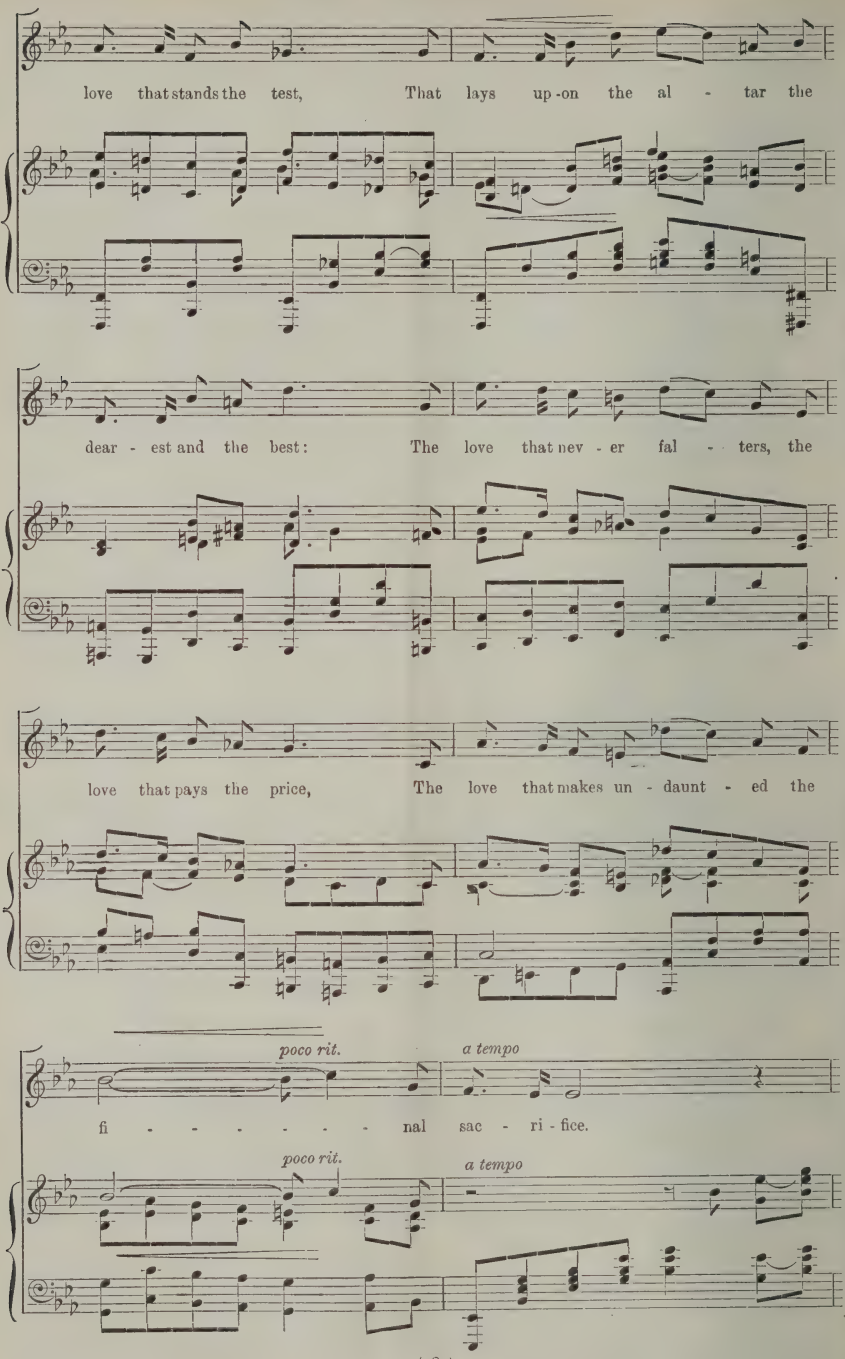
Tonic Sol-fa Edition in Novello's School Songs, No. 1517, Edition (B)

* From "A Treasury of Verse," Part 3, by permission of Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co., Ltd.



love that stands the test, That lays up-on the al - tar the dear - est and the best: The love that nev - er fal - ters, the love that pays the price, The love that makes un - daunt - ed the poco rit.
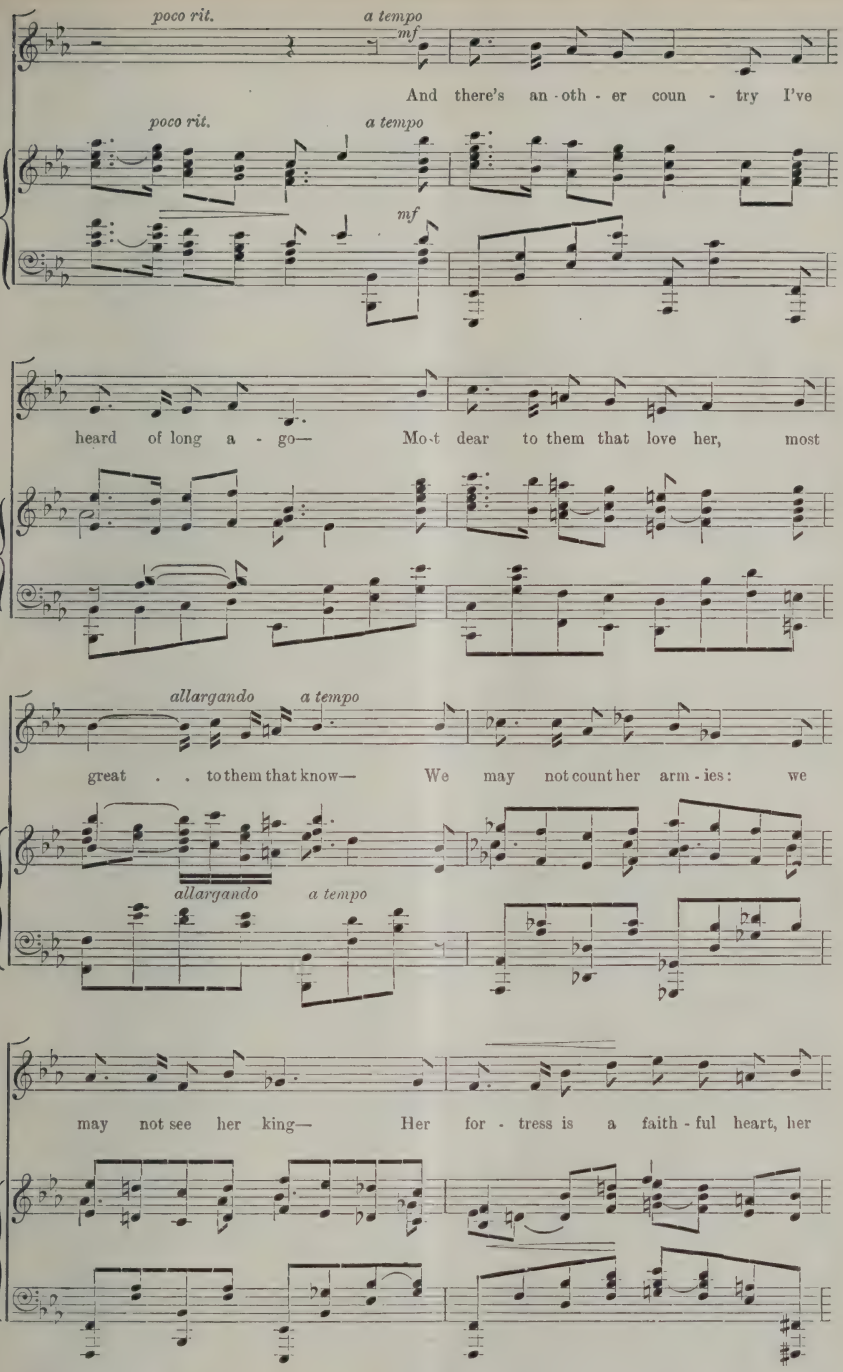
a tempo
fi - - - - - - - nal sac - ri - fice.
poco rit.
a tempo



poco rit.
a tempo
mf
And there's an - oth - er coun - try I've heard of long a - go— Mo-t dear to them that love her, most allargando
a tempo
great . . to them that know— We may not count her arm - ies: we may not see her king— Her for - tress is a faith - ful heart, her pride . . is suf - fer - ing— And soul by soul and si - lent - ly her poco a poco dim.

shi - ning bounds in - crease, And her ways are ways of gen - tle - ness, and
poco a poco dim.
senza rit.
mp
all . . . her paths are peace. . . . . .
senza rit.
mp peacefully
poco rit.

(Continued from page 816.)

and sensitiveness is by no means easy. A first characteristic is dreamy melancholy, tinged by visions of a distant bliss, of legendary, far-away countries; this being essentially a passive attitude, contrasts strongly with the composer's activity in the practice of his art, and even more with his almost autocratic will-power. A second characteristic is his genre, which contains elements that strongly react against his romantic dreaminess and passive disposition. This genre is the outcome of the study of national traditions and old customs which was in great favour during the 'sixties. Thus was he led to write scenes such as the markets in 'Mlada' and 'Sadko,' or the Carnival in 'The Snow-Maiden.' His tendency, however, is to treat such scenes in a picturesque and decorative manner rather than in a dramatic spirit. A third characteristic is his sense of nature. He excels in the art of suggesting scenery and atmosphere. As regards style and technique, he was very much influenced by Berlioz and Liszt. Schumann's influence on him was different from what it was on the other Russian composers. How far he may be considered as proceeding from Glinka is a moot point. Glinka always thought his music out in terms of the voice; Rimsky-Korsakov in terms of the orchestra.

KAROL KURPINSKI (1785-1857)

In the May Muzyka (Warsaw), Antoni Wieczorck writes on this Polish composer and conductor, whose output comprises twenty-four operas or musical plays, a Te Deum, and many pianoforte pieces.

AN ITALIAN CRITIC ON BUSONI

In the June Rassegna Musicale, Guido Pannain concludes a very thoughtful essay on Busoni with the assertion that he was 'the first classic of modern times.'

AN UNPUBLISHED FRAGMENT OF THE FINALE OF 'TANNHÄUSER'

In Le Ménestrel (June 1), Henri de Curzon describes a manuscript containing the part of Tannhäuser as first written by Wagner:

This manuscript was given to Tichatschek, the creator of the part, by Wagner himself. It afterwards passed into the hands of Ernest van Dyck, another famous interpreter of the part. It gives the vocal part, with a sketchy accompaniment and a few cues.

In this first version, Venus does not reappear. The text of the hitherto unknown part is:

Tannhäuser.—[To thee, sweet Venus, I return.] See what they have done with thine unfortunate lover. Hardly wouldst thou know him.
Wolfram.—Horrible! Am I dreaming?
T.—Let me journey night and day towards the Venusberg; listen again to the sweet calls that enchanted me and led me to the realm of joy. Didst ever hear such sounds, Wolfram?
W.—Silence! Come to thy senses! Shun temptation and turn to God.
T.—Thou mockest. I am accursed.
W.—Accursed indeed, unless thou resistest the charms of hell.
T.—Resist? No. . . . The charms are too wonderful. Wouldst know them? Come, Wolfram, I'll lead thee to the nameless delights. Hark, hark! . . . Hearest thou not jubilant tones? Breathest thou not wonderful fragrances? Look, look. . . . I'll lead thee soon, there is the berg. . . . the sweet Venusberg.
W.—Resist the spell. Come, turn towards God!
T.—Compassionate Lady Venus, see, thy lover comes! Here he comes to thee.
W.—Madness of despair! Flee, flee, seek salvation.
T.—Let me go!
W.—Salvation will come for thee.
T.—No, Wolfram, I must to her!
W.—An angel has prayed for thee on earth, and will soon bless thee from above. . . . Elisabeth . . .
T.—Elisabeth. . . .
(Then the funereal chorus.)

M.-D. CALVOCORESSI.

---

IMPERIAL LEAGUE OF OPERA

Sir Thomas Beecham asks us to give publicity to the following statement, and we do so with pleasure:

It is several months since a statement concerning the position of the Imperial League of Opera appeared in the Press.

This absence of publicity has helped to create an impression in many quarters that the League is going badly.

This is by no means the case; on the contrary, it is in a very healthy condition. It will be remembered that in the prospectus first issued last November we asked for a hundred and twenty thousand subscribers, each of whom should contribute 10*s.* a year for five years. The fundamental idea of the scheme, that of a large number of small subscribers, remains unaltered, but from the purely financial point of view no such number as originally required is now necessary. This modification is due to the fact that the League has offers as well as definite undertakings to provide considerable sums from private persons of wealth. We are therefore enabled to state fairly definitely what is needed to enable the League to close its subscription list.

From London at least a further fifteen thousand subscribers.
From Manchester a further three thousand subscribers.
From Birmingham a further fifteen hundred subscribers.
From Edinburgh and Bradford each a further thousand subscribers.
From Leeds and Liverpool each a further fifteen hundred subscribers.

It has been decided to omit Glasgow from the list of six provincial centres owing to the lack of interest in that town.

Glasgow's place has been taken by Bradford, which was not at first included in the scheme.

The present efforts to complete the scheme will be continued until, but not beyond, the end of this year. If by that time the total number, or all but the total requisite number, of subscribers has not been obtained the League will discontinue its work.

In that event each subscriber will receive back his or her subscription intact. No deduction will be made for expenses in connection with running the business side. The promoters of the League venture the opinion that the musical events of the past year in London have made it clearer than ever that the organization they are endeavouring to create is vitally essential to the artistic life of the country. They earnestly invite the co-operation of the general as well as the musical public to assist them in bringing into existence at least one permanent musical institution that shall be a credit both to Great Britain and the Empire.

Fuller particulars concerning the League are to be obtained at its head office, 161, New Bond Street, W.1.

Teachers' Department

POINTS FROM LECTURES

Summer-time lectures are given mostly at vacation courses and church conferences. The 'monthly meeting' type of lecture ignores the existence of summer, or, if the promoters recognise lectures, fine-weather lovers ignore them. It is at the vacation course that, in regard to points or tips, the harvest is great. Note-books, those strong-rooms of the memory, are filled—and mostly forgotten. That must be the reason why so many people attend the same course again and again. For them the passive and listening attitude must be shaken out of their too receptive storehouses. Recent courses have become more practical. The student has to do something: use the baton, sing in the chorus, join the scratch orchestra, and so on.

The time-table of the Oxford Summer Course in Music Teaching shows the tendency just named. Eight lecturers attended, each for three or four days. Dr. Adrian Boult held 'Informal Practice Classes in Conducting'; Mr. Hubert Middleton met 'Choir-training and Choral Practice Classes'; Mr. Geoffrey Shaw dealt with 'The School-Singing Class'; Major J. T. Bavin illustrated 'Class Teaching in Instrumental Music'; Miss Mabel Chamberlain (the first lady lecturer at these Oxford gatherings) laid the foundation of 'Musical Education in the Infant School.' More in the professorial line of instruction were Dr. George Dyson on 'Musical History: Its Growth and Development'; Prof. P. C. Buck on 'Four Neglected Points in Musical Education,' and Mr. F. C. Field-Hyde on 'Voice-Training.'

The set form of lecture by these experienced instructors had always a practical turn. Mr. Field-Hyde turned an 'awful example' to good account. He was a young man who had 'never sung a note in his life,' neither had he played outdoor games. Within a few minutes he gained some breath control and felt the health-giving benefit of vocal exercises, gaining applause for his vocal effort under Mr. Field-Hyde's direction. Other practical tests were demonstrated by the same lecturer, whose subject necessarily was controversial at times. He objected to cut-and-dried methods for any teacher or pupil. Voice-training was an art; the teacher needed to be a performer, and the beginner learnt to sing at first by imitation.

Mr. Frank Roscoe, who was present at Oxford in an advisory capacity on teachers' registration, was useful also in discussions. He had a cynical word for the districts where 'everyone lived by teaching each other music,' and suggested a quicker means of getting rich. If he were a less honest and more energetic person, he could start a bogus college to-morrow and be the richer in a couple of years.

An American musician who attended part of the Oxford course writes saying that the lectures of Dr. Buck, Mr. Shaw, and Dr. Dyson were specially interesting. Details, however, are not available.

Mr. Hubert Middleton gave useful suggestions on competitive festival organization, accompanists and their work. Speaking of essentials for conductors, knowledge and feeling were necessary in dealing with a choir, and care was needed particularly in looking after the shy men; 'the women always seem perfectly able to look after themselves.' He was, as he said, 'rabid' on the subject of tempo. 'Many of the greatest works were defaced through a wrong conception of time.'

The recreative plans and college life of Oxford attracted many students, of whom no initial standard of musicianship was demanded, the special aim of the course being to assist those who desired to bring more music into the life of the community. Fostering this spirit, the promoting Federations invited the towns-people to join in hymn-singing in the Sheldonian Theatre. About sixteen hundred attended. Orchestra and choir numbered two hundred. Listeners were invited to go outside for the purpose, as everybody present was put on honour to sing. As the local report says, 'Gradually the sound of the singing, urged on by Sir Hugh Allen, grew in volume until the final verse ended on a note of tremendous grandeur.'

At the Cambridge University Summer Meeting, Prof. Edward J. Dent continued his lectures on Victorian Music, and spoke chiefly of the work of Hubert Parry and Charles Stanford. Parry's best work was in his compositions for choirs, but his music was not a success abroad, because, to enter into the spirit of it, one must be steeped in the literature of the country. One of the greatest drawbacks of the Victorian era was too much reverence. Courage and not fear was wanted in English music. Stanford was a great teacher of composition, and nearly all the great English composers of the present day were either pupils of Stanford or of his pupil, Charles Wood. Because he had a wonderful power of absorbing all sorts of styles, it had been said that Stanford's music was a mere copy of other styles. If one studied Stanford's music carefully, however, one could find a sense of scholarship and dignity which could not always be found in the music he was said to have imitated.

Dr. Ernest Bullock lectured at Ryde for the Hampshire Organists' Association on 'Music and the Churches.' Attention, he said, should be paid to the place of hymns in the service. For instance, 'Weary of earth and laden with my sin' was hardly the sort of hymn to be sung directly before the sermon. The greatest argument in favour of the plainsong chant was that the words came first. Plainsong was not supposed to be beautiful music, and it was contended, and very rightly up to a point, that the words stood by themselves. Anthems should be simple and direct in their expression so that they could be understood and appreciated by the congregation.

Mr. F. Dunnill, organist of Birmingham Cathedral, when reopening a church organ at Ulverston, also went to the pianoforte and induced the congregation to sing to his favoured kind of tunes. The first thing to do, he said, if they wanted to build Church music on a sound basis of popular taste was to bring it to the test of tune, and submit the test to an unprejudiced jury. The hymn-tune was the simplest form of Church music, and until they got some standard of taste established with regard to it, they could not hope to decide the question with regard to more elaborate forms. He was afraid the tunes of some of their hymns—some old favourites—would not pass the test.

Continuing his campaign on behalf of a School of English Church Music, Dr. Sydney H. Nicholson told a large gathering at Bedford that before the beginning of the last century there was practically no Church music as it was now understood. There was a so-called choir in the West gallery, and an orchestra of sorts, but the musical state of things was deplorable. People said nowadays how nice it would be to get back to the old system of choir and orchestra, but they had no conception of the awful sounds that used to be emitted from those West galleries. The lecturer referred to the revival of Church music eighty years ago, and said that afterwards things settled down again, and it was probably true to say that the standard to-day was no better or worse than it was fifty years ago. The competition festival movement, the wireless, and the gramophone had raised the level of musical appreciation tremendously, and yet Church music stood still.

Welsh by birth, Dr. Dan Prothero, of Chicago, told an audience at Swansea that he was becoming more nationalistic, and felt himself to be a citizen of the United States. He was not less loyal to Wales. Orchestral music, in particular in America, was being encouraged, since it was harder to foster than vocal music. There were sixty symphony orchestras in America, nineteen in England and Germany, and twelve in France. These and other big musical movements were 'ghastly failures financially,' but, despite that, they were in America constantly and liberally financed by business men although, to such, profit was a religion.

J. G.

---

EASY PIANOFORTE MUSIC

Pupils of Lower Division standard would find useful and interesting practice in Doreen Harvey's 'Four Short Pieces' (Augener). Their titles are: Prelude, Waltz, Barcarolle, and Mazurka, and they make a well-varied group. In the last piece a flat is required in bar 13 before the B in the bass part, and a natural in bar 31 before the last D. The pieces following all come from the Oxford University Press, and may be recommended. Ludwig Lebell's 'Shock-headed Peter' will appeal to young people of elementary grade. It contains a number of pieces of a descriptive type, each with some nonsense verse as a text, together with a number of illustrations. 'A Waltz in Dreamland,' by C. H. Kitson, is a graceful little piece which asks for expressive treatment (Elementary). The same composer's 'Two-part Invention' gives excellent practice in hand-independence, rhythm, and phrasing, and is useful preparation for the more difficult examples of this type (Lower).

Henry Coleman's 'Holiday Sketches' (Lower) are somewhat of a novelty. They are published in four books. Books 1 and 2 contain five pieces each, and these albums are complete in themselves. Books 3 and 4 contain supplementary parts or accompaniments to the pieces in Books 1 and 2—and of the same degree of difficulty—which are to be played on a separate pianoforte. The music is tuneful and well-written, and the albums should provide pleasant and useful practice in ensemble-playing.

'Summer Eves,' by Norman Peterkin, comprises four pieces—'A Song in the Dusk' (a graceful Larghetto), 'The Pageant of Summer,' 'Summer Wanes' (mainly in four-part harmony), 'The Dance in the Sun' (a lively piece in $\frac{6}{8}$ time). All four are interesting examples of modern writing (Lower-Higher). Gordon Slater's miniature Suite, 'The Bluejacket,' contains a vigorous 'Hornpipe,' an expressive little 'Sea-croon,' and 'The Blue Peter' (a lively jig). The first and last are excellent examples of two-part writing, and make exhilarating practice in part-playing (Higher).

G. G.

---

Songs from the Plays of William Shakespeare, with Dances.' Written and compiled by Mrs. G. T. Kimmins.

[Novello, 2*s.* 6*d.*]

This new and cheaper edition of Mrs. Kimmins's book should be noted by school teachers. The material had the best of tests, having been sung and danced by the Bermondsey Guild of Play.

The author's aim is to make available for teachers a selection of Shakespearean songs, with dances descriptive thereof, the music being mainly based on tunes of Shakespeare's time. The settings are by J. Banister (1630-79), Johnson (1612), Arne, Morley, Hilton, Purcell, Humfrey, and, among modern composers, Schubert, Sullivan, John Ireland, &c. The dance tunes are largely by Richard Chanter, who has also arranged the pianoforte accompaniments. There are numerous photographs illustrating the dances, and the introductory chapter on 'The Boy Shakespeare' contains some excellent pictures.

The literary matter includes also the famous Carlyle passage on the poet from 'Heroes and Hero-Worship,' and a Preface by Prof. Israel Gollancz. This charming book for all kinds of youthful circles should make many new friends in its fresh form.

---

The sixth and last book of 'The Hundred Best Short Classics' (Paterson) brings a useful enterprise to a successful ending. Its thirteen numbers draw on Bach (1), Brahms (3), Mendelssohn (3), Schumann (3), Schubert (1), and Chopin (2). A very safe choice, and something of a 'pointer' in the matter of present-day likings.

---

Books 5 and 6 of 'Standard Graded Classics for Piano,' selected, fingered, and edited by A. M. Henderson, each contain about a dozen pieces, the choice ranging from Purcell and Bach through the classics and romantics to Glière—the only living composer represented. There are a good many excellent pieces somewhat off the beaten track, e.g., a fine Minuet by Beethoven, a Rondo by C. Ph. E. Bach, a Clementi Adagio, &c. Mr. Henderson's laying-out, fingering, &c., could not be improved on (Bayley & Ferguson).

---

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

Questions must be of general musical interest. They must be stated simply and briefly, and if several are sent, each must be written on a separate slip. Our 'Answers to Correspondents' Column closes on the 14th of the month. We cannot undertake to reply by post.

E. W. P.—We cannot identify the themes you quote. They are pretty much like hundreds of other tunes turned out in the 18th century—so much so that we cannot undertake to make a search.

W. Mitchell asks for advice with respect to the phrase-marks in Chopin's Study, Op. 10, No. 10. The following will answer the questions raised. (1.) The time is four-beat, and though this is nullified in the R.H. part when a change is made to two-beat, the L.H. pursues its way in quadruple movement throughout. (2.) The small phrase-marks in bars 1 and 2 should be contrasted with those in bars 9 and 10. The nature of the former shows that the composer asks for no emphasis upon the melodic side of the theme. Those in bars 9 and 10, on the other hand, not only change the time-distribution of the R.H. part, but throw up the melodic movement into special prominence. (3.) An effect of syncopation is indicated in bar 1 and elsewhere, both by the accent on the second and fourth beats and by the held minim sound in the L.H. This effect, by the way, should not be unduly stressed. In brief, the study is an example of what is often called cross-rhythm, and its effect as music depends upon how far the two opposing movements have obtained a lodgment in the mind. E. F.

H. B. C. asks us to describe the form of Oliver King's Melody, Op. 4, No. 2, and of Chopin's Mazurka, Op. 33, No. 2. The first-named is founded upon three-part form. The three parts are as follows: (1) bars 1 to 16; (2) bars 17 to 41; (3) bars 42 to 49. This is a general analysis with which some commentators would disagree, but at least it gives a form of logic to the movement which is practically formless in the accepted sense. Chopin's Mazurka is very different in this respect. It is written in the older Rondo form, the four appearances of the main subject being at bars 1, 33, 74, and 106. The central episode lies between bars 49 and 73. Some would place this movement in the three-part class, but this would narrow the whole conception. E. F.

P. A. W. (Madras).—(1.) We have made inquiries in likely quarters as to photographs of Rheinberger, but without success. We are sending your letter on to the publishers of most of his organ works, Messrs. Forberg, of Leipsic, who will, no doubt, write to you. (2.) Write direct to Mr. Caleb Simper, Kilbirnie, Barnstaple. (3.) The organ is usually called the King of Instruments, the title of Queen being bestowed on the violin. Like you, we have heard the violin called the King, but it seems inappropriate. Berlioz, you may remember, named the organ the Emperor, conferring the title of Pope on the orchestra.

Chordia.—The fugue subject has been used in various keys, and in slightly modified forms by many composers. Probably the 'four great composers' referred to in the examination question were Bach, Handel, Mozart, and Haydn. Bach used it in the A minor Fugue, Book 2 of the '48'; Handel in 'And with His stripes' and in a Harpsichord Fugue; Mozart in the Kyrie of the 'Requiem'; and Haydn in the F minor String Quartet, Op. 20, No. 5.

Sea Point (Cape Town).—(1.) We are at present well supplied with matter on the subject, but if you care to send an article we will consider it. But it must be more compact than your letter, which contained several more pages of closely-written manuscript than we could spare time for. (We spared it, but may jib a second time!) (2.) We doubt whether the book you suggest would easily find a publisher. There is already a whole library on the subject, and a new volume stands a poor chance unless the author is well-known.

E. L.—'The First Book of the Great Musicians,' by Percy Scholes (Oxford University Press), will give you what you want. The difficulty as regards notation you can get over by selecting examples from simple music or from simplified forms of great music. You will find the gramophone useful in your appreciative work. E. F.

'Liber' asks us to recommend 'an easy First Book for youthful students.' Really, 'Liber,' you place us in a difficulty—for what, in the first place, do you mean by 'youthful'? If you are thinking of small kiddies, refer to the article in the August number of the School Music Review entitled 'A Page for Pianoforte Teachers.' There you will find a notice of a book which, we believe, will meet your need. On the other hand, your word 'youthful' may suggest people in their 'teens—early or late. If so, write to us again, and we will suggest other plans to suit your need. E. F.

S. J. F.—You heard 'the delightful phrase' per wireless; we didn't. Why not write to the player and ask for the title of the piece or pieces played on such and such a date? We would gladly help you if we could, but the half-dozen notes you quote convey too little.

H. E. S.—Write to the Educational Department, London County Council, inquiring at what centres sight-singing classes are held in the evening. An inquiry of the Tonic Sol-fa College, 26, Bloomsbury Square, W.C.1, might also be useful.

A. C. L.—We are surprised to hear that your 'highbrow musical friends' pronounce 'oboe' as 'Obo.' Ours don't. In fact, we usually hear the instrument called 'Oboy'=hautboy, which seems a natural and sensible compromise.

L. W.—We can find no book giving 'the whole history of chanting.' The articles on Chant, Chanting, Psalmody, and Psalter, in the new 'Grove' contain all that the average reader will want to know about it.

J. S.—We can give no opinion as to the value of the old book you mention. Mr. Harold Reeves, Shaftesbury Avenue, W.C., will give you reliable information on the point.

H. P.—'School-Choir Training,' by Margaret Nicholls (Novello, 3*s.*). You will find much of use also in Mabel Chamberlain's 'Ear-Training' (Novello, 6*s.*).

Books about Clara Schumann.—Mr. Irvine Elliott, of Leeds, kindly writes to us concerning the inquiry of 'H. E.' on this subject. He says that Messrs. Arnold publish Florence May's 'The Girlhood of Clara Schumann,' and also the two volumes of correspondence between Clara and Brahms. He adds that the Litzmann book we referred to is published in an English translation by Grace Hadow by Macmillan (two volumes). Several other readers kindly write to similar effect.

Church and Organ Music

ROYAL COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS

ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING

The sixty-fourth Annual General Meeting was held at the College, Kensington Gore, on Saturday, July 21, under the chairmanship of the President, Dr. W. G. Alcock, M.V.O. Amongst those present were: Sir Hugh Allen (Vice-President), and the following members of the Council: Dr. G. J. Bennett, Dr. P. C. Buck, Dr. E. Bullock, Mr. E. T. Cook, Mr. G. D. Cunningham, Dr. H. E. Darke, Dr. A. Gray, Dr. H. A. Harding (hon. secretary), Dr. C. H. Kitson, Dr. H. G. Ley, Dr. S. R. Marchant, Dr. H. W. Richards, Mr. E. S. Roper, Dr. F. G. Shinn (hon. treasurer), Dr. E. T. Sweeting, and Mr. G. Thalben-Ball.

There was a large number of members present, including:

Messrs. H. Adkins, S. J. Andrews, N. Askew, S. H. Baker, E. J. W. Barrington, A. T. Batts, R. H. E. Beckett, L. J. Blake, J. W. Bliss, Miss A. Bransden, Miss M. Bristow, Messrs. A. Brown, A. F. Brown, A. W. Brown, H. P. D. Brown, R. M. Brunker, S. F. Bryan, G. E. Bullen, A. W. Bunney, A. V. Butcher, J. H. Carré, E. R. Carlos, A. Carter, D. Clark, F. B. Coley, E. A. Collins, W. G. Constable, Dr. M. P. Conway, Messrs. G. N. Cove, J. G. Coxwell, J. E. H.

Creed, Miss F. E. Cross, Messrs. J. R. Crouch, W. C. Crouch, F. V. Curtis, W. Curtis, E. A. Davies, I. R. Davies, K. M. Dick, A. Dinsdale, W. H. J. Emery, G. H. Eldridge, A. H. Essam, M. A. E. Farmer, P. A. W. Fitch, A. J. W. Foster, W. H. Gabb, C. W. Gell, I. Griffiths, Miss A. M. Haggar, Messrs. B. J. Hales, H. Hall, A. G. Harland, C. H. Harris, E. A. Harris, J. L. Harris, L. W. Harris, D. L. Hawkridge, S. G. Hemery, W. W. Hewitt, H. Hodge, C. C. Hodges, W. M. Hooker, H. Hunt, J. E. Hunt, S. W. G. Ives, A. Jackson, Miss M. E. Judd, Messrs. H. W. King, J. D. Kirkpatrick, F. C. Lambert, F. A. Lark, N. J. Leaver, A. F. Linfield, J. H. Long, F. Lovell, F. W. Marriott, N. J. Maybrey, G. Metzler, Mrs. L. G. A. Milnes, Messrs. H. J. Miller, C. J. Mitchell, W. H. Mitchell, L. C. Morris, R. F. Newton, R. G. E. Oakley, O. H. Peasgood, S. Perrott, E. V. Phillips, A. F. Preston, Miss E. J. Priday, Mr. W. Ratcliffe, Miss M. T. Renton, Messrs. A. V. Reynolds, H. A. Roberts, S. W. Robinson, D. G. Rogers, G. J. S. Ryan, A. R. Saunders, Miss E. A. Sewell, L. T. Shepstone, Miss E. Smith, Mr. J. A. Sowerbutts, Miss E. G. Springall, Messrs. A. Stark, R. Surplice, R. S. Thatcher, W. J. Tubbs, A. E. Tucker, A. W. Urquhart, Dr. C. F. Waters, Messrs. A. E. Watts, H. B. Weatherdon, W. G. Webber, H. F. Wilkinson, G. Williams, M. Williams, B. Willshire, F. B. P. Wilson, M. W. Wilson, G. T. Winney, J. H. Wood, C. G. Worley, W. J. Worth, G. P. Wright, R. H. Yarrow, and C. R. Yuille-Smith.

The Minutes of the last Annual General Meeting were read and confirmed.

Dr. Harding (hon. secretary) read the annual Report, as follows:

THE SIXTY-FOURTH ANNUAL REPORT

Your Council has the honour of reporting the continued success of the work and mission of the College during the past year. The interest, confidence, and co-operation of its members have been more than ever fully manifest, and your Council is encouraged in its efforts to maintain the dignity, the broad outlook, and the usefulness of our now National Institution. Though the usual high standard of efficiency was demanded, the examinations were well attended. The number of candidates at the examinations for the past year was four hundred and forty-three; of these eighty-six were successful in passing.

Your Council desires to place on record its profoundest regret at the loss which the College has sustained by the death of Sir Herbert Brewer, who, as a member of the Council, an examiner and lecturer, has for many years rendered the College unsparing and valuable service. His co-operation and assistance were of immense value, and his loss is deeply deplored.

Your Council has also the painful duty of reporting the death of Dr. Collinson (of Edinburgh), who although unable actively to assist the College to the extent he would have desired, was a loyal and devoted member of the Council for upwards of twenty years.

A hundred and fifty-two new members have been elected during the past year.

The following lectures were given at the College: On February 11, by Sir Hugh Allen, on Schubert's Quintet in C, Op. 163 (the work set for analysis for the Fellowship examination). The Quintet was played by students of the Royal College of Music (by permission of the Director of the R.C.M.). On May 15, by Dr. Ernest Bullock, on 'Anglican Chanting,' and by Dr. W. H. Harris, on 'General Points to be observed in Choir-Training.'

Lectures were given in the provinces as follows: On February 11, at Newcastle-on-Tyne, by Dr. Thomas Keighley on 'Choir-Training with special reference to the R.C.O. Choir-Training Examination Requirements.' At Cardiff, on March 27, Dr. H. G. Ley gave an organ recital and lecture. A summary of these lectures will appear in the College Calendar.

It will be remembered that four years ago your Council revived the College Choir-Training Examinations in response to an appeal by the Archbishops' Committee appointed 'to consider upon the place of Music in the Worship of the Church,' &c., and your Council has gladly bestowed its approval on the further outcome of the Report of that Committee, viz., the formation of a new School of English Church Music for the training of Church musicians—the founder of which, Sydney H. Nicholson, upon whom the Archbishop of Canterbury has just bestowed the degree of Mus. Doc., Cantuar., is a valued member of your Council. It is hoped that the training at this School will be such as to prepare students for the R.C.O. Choir-Training examinations, as the natural sequel to their training.

The examiners appointed for 1927-28 were: Fellowship Paper-work—Dr. Bennett, Dr. Kitson, Dr. Shinn; Fellowship Organ-work—Dr. Gray, Dr. Ley, Dr. Marchant; Associate Paper-work—Dr. Davan Wetton, Dr. Sweeting, Dr. Keighley; Associate Organ-work—Mr. Stanley Roper, Mr. G. D. Cunningham, Mr. Thalben Ball; Choir-Training Examination—Dr. Charlton Palmer and Dr. Davan Wetton.

Your Council desires to acknowledge its deep sense of indebtedness to Dr. F. G. Shinn, hon. treasurer, and to Dr. H. A. Harding, hon. secretary, for their able services rendered during the past year.

It also accords hearty thanks to the hon. auditors, Mr. Glanvill Hopkins and Mr. Yarrow, also to the professional auditors, Messrs. Pannell.

Your Council wishes to express its great appreciation of the highly efficient way in which Mr. Alan Shindler carries out his duties as registrar, and of his never-failing tact and courtesy.

The staff of the College merits the Council's warmest thanks and approval for its loyal and ready assistance on all occasions.

The adoption of the annual Report was carried on the proposal of Mr. Stanley Roper, seconded by Mr. Herbert Hodge.

Dr. Shinn (hon. treasurer) presented the annual Financial Statement, which was adopted; proposed by Mr. A. Dinsdale, seconded by Mr. A. G. Harland.

Mr. Stanley Roper: I have the greatest pleasure in proposing that we re-elect our excellent hon. treasurer, Dr. F. G. Shinn. We all know his value to the Council; he keeps us up to the mark in all matters of accuracy, and his services are of the greatest importance to us.

Dr. Henry G. Ley: I have the privilege of most heartily seconding Mr. Roper's resolution.

Carried unanimously.

Dr. H. W. Richards: I would like to suggest that Dr. Harding be asked if he will kindly continue to give us his invaluable services as hon. secretary. He has served the College for many years with extraordinary efficiency, and I feel sure that we could not possibly do better than re-elect him as our Secretary for as long as he will serve the College.

Dr. Sweeting seconded the resolution, which was carried with acclamation.

Dr. Harding: I come of age to-day, this being my twenty-first year of office. I feel very much honoured to receive this proof of your confidence and good will.

Dr. Shinn: I have much pleasure in proposing the re-election of the hon. auditors, Mr. Glanvill Hopkins and Mr. Reginald Yarrow, who have already served in that capacity, and I should like to couple with it a very hearty vote of thanks to them for their efficient audit of the accounts. I would also propose the re-election of the professional auditors, Messrs. Pannell, with sincere thanks for their services.

The resolution was seconded by Dr. Harding, and carried.

The President: Four Fellows were nominated by the members of the College for the two vacancies for London. The scrutineers, Mr. Reginald Yarrow and Mr. George Ryan, have delivered their report, and the votes recorded are:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| H. E. Darke | ... | ... 569 |
| H. L. Balfour | ... | ... 494 |
| A. R. Saunders | ... | ... 78 |
| H. Weatherley | ... | ... 75 |

I therefore declare that Dr. H. E. Darke and Mr. H. L. Balfour were elected London members of the Council.

Four Fellows were also nominated for the two country vacancies. The scrutineers report that the votes recorded are :

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| H. G. Ley ... | ... | ... | 496 |
| Alan Gray ... | ... | ... | 467 |
| A. C. Tysoe | ... | ... | 152 |
| J. W. Ivimey | ... | ... | 122 |

I declare that Dr. Henry G. Ley and Dr. Alan Gray were elected country members of the Council.

This brings the Annual General Meeting to an end, and we now proceed to the distribution of Diplomas.

DIPLOMA DISTRIBUTION

The presentation of Diplomas to successful candidates took place immediately after the Annual General Meeting on Saturday, July 21, 1928. The President, Dr. W. G. Alcock, M.V.O., presided.

Dr. HARDING opened the proceedings by making the following announcements :

For the Fellowship examination there were sixty-five candidates ; of these seven passed. For the Associateship there were a hundred and seventy-seven candidates, and forty-two passed. The Fellowship Lafontaine Prize was withheld ; the Turpin Prize was awarded to Mr. H. Stubington. The Associate Lafontaine Prize was won by Mr. H. W. King, and the Sawyer Prize by Mr. D. L. Hawkridge.

Dr. HARDING proceeded to say : The percentage of passes for the Fellowship was, as usual, very low—about 10 per cent. Now I have something cheerful to tell you, viz., that in the Choir-Training examination 50 per cent. passed. There were two candidates, and one was successful !

The President then gave the following address :

THE FUTURE OF THE ORGAN AND ITS PLAYERS

The development of the tonal scheme of the organ and its means of control has been so remarkable during recent years that it may be instructive to consider to what we organists are being led or driven. Though the founder of our College undoubtedly had in mind the Church organ and music suitable to it, and though our examinations were for so long bound by those limits, the introduction of modern organ music and of the transcription as Fellowship tests shows that we are alive to the wider requirements of our profession, and endeavour in some degree to keep abreast of them. The fact that the organ was for so long used for the presentation of serious musical thought alone, may be attributable to its long association with the Church. The invention of new tone-qualities and the means of employing them with the utmost facility have produced a new situation, which I think we should examine, drawing strongly marked distinction between the instrument as designed for the Church, the concert-hall, and the cinema. It need hardly be pointed out that the conditions and requirements in each case are very different, except that the Church organ is so often used for recitals and services. Even then, recital music will be kept within limits, in view of the ideals and associations of the building. The design of the Church organ should be so drawn up that anything savouring of a secular atmosphere is excluded. And here I hasten to add that all music loftily conceived and suitable to this class of organ may claim its right to be heard in a consecrated building. We possess a fine heritage of organ music to which worthy additions are frequently made by living composers. In the concert-hall we are in another atmosphere, though we need never lose touch with that innate dignity of the organ to which I referred in a former address—for the concert organ has as its foundation so much of the Church instrument that the addition of secular effects can never deceive us as to what is behind, even though gongs, side-drum, and other delights be found in the specification. After all, such aids to the imagination are comparatively seldom used, and there is plenty left through which we may uplift our hearers, should that be our aim. In the organ used in the cinema we are confronted with an entirely different problem. This instrument has established itself, whether it appeals to us all or no. To bring under the control of one player the wide range of effect attainable by a large number of instrumentalists is in itself a very urgent consideration. Its tonal scheme and complexity, however, demand a technical skill to which so far few have attained, and it may well be that the cultivation of this technique may be greatly developed in the near future. On hearing one of our great cinema players we may think that he has thrown over all allegiance to the organ as we have known it, and to be revelling in an orgy of sound which may certainly be described as new. It is therefore refreshing to find one of our leading cinema players acknowledging his debt to Sir Walter Parratt for having laid his foundations of technique so securely. From this we may and do infer that there are rules common to each style of playing. Proficient cinema organists can teach us more than we may be at first inclined to admit. Precision and quick perception are of all things essential to any organist's equipment, though they are not always in evidence. A favourite axiom of Sir Walter Parratt's was, ' The organist should be such a ready person.' Certainly no one can hope to excel as a cinema player unless he possess this quick perception and sparkling precision. Indeed, they are features of any good organ-playing, at least 75 per cent. of which I believe to lie in accurate sound duration. The instrument we usually find in the cinema has no doubt produced a technique of its own in the matter of registration, a competent knowledge of orchestration being essential, while its tonal scheme contains effects quite foreign to the organs used in church and concert-hall. Some time ago I heard an organ in a cinema the effect of which was so unsatisfactory that I was some time in realising that it must have been imported from a church ! Its diapasons sounded quite foreign to the place and the occasion, while there were none of those effects we associate with the film, and I must confess to having been most decidedly bored by the lack of variety and contrast. It was well played, and such effects as were obtainable were employed. I then began to wonder whether, if an instrument were designed which combined the best of every kind of organ, it might, if well controlled and in faithful description of the film, lead eventually to an art-form worthy of expansion. I believe such a field may be awaiting exploration, and we should be proud to be associated with so important a development. Too often one hears music which bears little or no relation to the film. I saw ' Ben Hur ' in a provincial cinema, and at the portrayal of the ' Last Supper ' the band gave as suitable music—' The Old 100th ' ! It was played excruciatingly upon a violin, a clarinet (nearly a semitone sharp), and a violoncello. There was also a pianoforte, but the pianist only increased the general misery of the whole business. It is no doubt the feebleness of so many films, with a succession of cowboys exceeding by many miles an hour the speed limit of a horse, eloping lovers, close-ups of the forbidden kiss, and so on, which makes anything like a connected musical setting impossible. It will be said that the public likes these things, and must be so catered for. Well, we live in an age in which a series of rapid and violent contrasts makes a strong appeal to the multitude, and this is not confined to the cinema. Do we not find it in music ? Sometimes a film is shown possessing features of high artistic merit. Think of the musical possibilities of that ' Arctic ' film and imagine Holst or Vaughan Williams giving us a musical setting for organ or orchestra, or both ! I believe something has already been attempted in this direction. But the masses need more and more musical education before such a development would pay, a consideration which, alas, outweighs any artistic reason. There is an aspect of the whole subject which is becoming more acute—I mean the matter of remuneration. We hear on all sides of the truly disgraceful pay of the average

Church organist, while the conditions of work are not always attractive. For instance, the other day I read this advertisement: 'Organist wanted, who would do occasional housework in vicarage, some gardening, and drive small Singer car, for country parish not far from London. Good organ. Anglicans.' That is from the Church Times, and, though no salary is mentioned, I will not give the name and address in case of an unseemly rush from this room to secure so desirable a post. We church organists are perhaps a little inclined to 'drive our small singers,' and if we do such work thoroughly, even in a country parish not far from London, there would be little time left for dusting the vicar's study or mowing his lawn. It is not every incumbent who shows much enthusiasm in the choice of suitable music, and there is a real danger of Church music falling on evil days. The common hymn and its tune seem to blind so many to the value of our really worthy music, and it is astounding that educated people can tolerate the drivel of some of the words and the utter worthlessness of many tunes. That, however, is a thorny path, and I will not pursue it further than to say that to the cultivated organist there is often enough to drive him and his small singers (and big ones, too) out of the Church. Can we wonder at organists transferring their skill to the cinema? The work there is even more clearly defined than in the attractive advertisement I have read to you. And I suppose the cinema player is sometimes, at least, allowed to choose his music. This does not always obtain in a Church appointment. I know of a case in which a musically ignorant vicar holds that his choice must be better than that of the organist because he (the vicar) is older! I have, of course, given quite exceptional cases (and much might be said on the other side), but the fact that they do exist is to be regretted. We have glanced at the conditions and remuneration of church and cinema appointments. So long as the church organist does not enjoy the security of tenure granted to the sexton, we must not wonder at his seeking secular posts. The signing of an agreement in such cases gives some security, and the hours of attendance are specified, while the remuneration is often a decided inducement. It is easier to endure discomfort if one is adequately paid. Cinema playing is highly specialised work, but however widely it may be developed (and I believe we are on the eve of much development), let us see to it that the various forms of organ-playing do not become involved. As I said just now, some affinity exists between church and concert organ, but the cinema variety is distinctly another affair. When we learn that an organ recital is to be relaid from a cinema, we must simply be prepared for something differing entirely from what we have hitherto understood the term 'organ recital' to mean. The conditions in each case are so sharply defined that you have only to imagine serious organ music played, however well, on a cinema organ, and (as I quoted just now) the usual cinema music played upon an organ designed for church use to realise this. Think of the atmosphere of a cinema (I refer to the artistic variety!), with its rapidly changing scene and medley of ideas, and compare it with the quiet listening of a recital audience, influenced by music of real artistic appeal. There is a consideration of high importance to which I have just alluded. I mean the necessity of keeping the various forms of organ-playing entirely separate. Each has its own sphere, and I cannot believe that there need be any interference. Our College was founded for one style, but that is no reason why its influence may not become widened, and if it happen that the ideals for which we have for so long fought be embraced by modern tendencies we shall, as an educational body, continue to flourish.

---

The presentation of Diplomas then took place. The complete list of passes appeared in the August number, with the Reports of the examiners. After this, Mr. H. L. Balfour played upon the organ the following pieces from the January, 1928, syllabus:

FELLOWSHIP

Prelude and Fugue, C minor ... ... ... ... J. S. Bach
(Novello, Bk. 7, p. 64; Augener, p. 168; Peters, Vol. 2, No. 6)
Larghetto from Quintet, Op. 108 ... ... ... Mozart
Chorale Prelude, 'St. Mary' ... ... ... Charles Wood

ASSOCIATESHIP

Andante con moto, Sonata No. 5 ... ... ... Mendelssohn
First Movement, Sonata in C minor, No. 3, Op. 56 ... Guilmant

The PRESIDENT: We are honoured to-day by the presence of Sir Hugh Allen. His coming to the meeting is a great encouragement to us. I ask him to be kind enough to voice our thanks to Mr. Balfour for his excellent recital.

Sir HUGH ALLEN: I have been wondering what a judge would say if he were asked to describe to the criminal in the dock how he, the judge, would behave in the circumstances which had brought the criminal into his unfortunate position! I think he would probably find himself in extreme doubt. I can conceive of no more terrible ordeal than that which falls upon the various members of the Royal College of Organists who are asked to sit down at the organ and show the candidates, and other members of the College, how the playing should be done. It requires two qualities—one is courage and the other is skill. I know that Mr. Balfour has courage. I have known him quell disorder in the Albert Hall by using all the stops in that huge organ. It is not necessary for me to say that he has skill. You who have heard him know that for yourselves, and I am sure you wish to give your warmest thanks to Mr. Balfour for his splendid performance.

Dr. SWEETING: I am a very old friend of Mr. Balfour's. I met him first in this building as long ago as 1876, when we were both scholars in the same school of music. I do not envy Mr. Balfour his performance this afternoon, but I do envy him the skill with which he did it, and I should like to add my own and everybody's thanks to those which have been so admirably expressed by Sir Hugh Allen.

The vote of thanks was warmly accorded to Mr. Balfour, who in reply said:

I cannot let this occasion pass without expressing very sincere thanks to you for the generous applause you have given me, and to Sir Hugh Allen for his remarks, backed up by those of my old fellow-pupil. It has been a pleasure to play in this building again, and to be reminded of what took place in 1876. I have done my best, but with a fearfully trembling courage!

Dr. RICHARDS: I am sorry to have to dwell upon a little sad note after all our joyfulness this afternoon, but this is the last meeting at which Dr. Alcock will act as our President. It was a very happy choice of the Council to select Dr. Alcock as President of the Royal College of Organists. He has a wide knowledge of, and a long experience in, various spheres. It is, therefore, a delight to hear one of those instructive addresses from our President who knows what he is talking about, and who has a great knowledge of the instrument and of the organist's craft. He has acted as Chairman of these proceedings and of the Council, and by his tact and charming manner, by his management of difficult questions that sometimes arise, we have been able to do our work in the best possible way. The happiness and good working of the Council during the last two years (although Dr. Harding is always at the helm) have been due to the delightful manner of our President. I will ask you to show your appreciation by giving very hearty applause to Dr. Alcock for all his goodness of thought and action for the Royal College of Organists.

Dr. ALCOCK: I can only tell you that the sad note mentioned by Dr. Richards is echoed in my heart. I am very sorry that my term of office is coming to an end. I have always felt, from the time I was elected President, that it was the greatest honour ever conferred upon me, but I had no idea that I had been so successful, and your kind appreciation will add greatly to my happy memories of the presidency of the College. I thank Dr. Richards for his kind words and you for the exceedingly warm manner in which you have accepted and re-echoed what he has said. I have one little pleasing piece of news to communicate to you—that I am to be succeeded by Dr. Bairstow, of York Minster.

THE CONVERSAZIONE

The success of this re-union as a social function was fully maintained. Many old friendships were renewed and fresh ones made. From so goodly a concourse of musicians could only come the 'voice of harmony' and the discourse of 'most eloquent music.'

A CHOIR-BOY'S RECORD

We have often given particulars of notable records of service achieved by veteran members of church choirs. Here is one of a different sort: Mr. Geoffrey Chandler, now eighteen years old, joined the Faversham Parish Church Choir ten years ago, during which period he has not missed a service, either week-day or Sunday. For several years he has been an excellent solo boy, so his attendance was not a mere casual turning-up. He has been presented with a gold watch as a mark of appreciation by clergy, choir, and congregation. He has now been transferred to the men's stalls, where we hope he will continue his record-breaking regularity.

---

It is a pity that disputants in the plainsong versus Anglican chant should so often spoil their case by over-statement. In the Church Times of August 17 a clerical supporter of plainsong speaks contemptuously of 'stupid, unmusical, Anglican chants.' Surely the charge of being 'unmusical' is the last that can fairly be brought. In fact, the Anglican chant suffers from being too musical. Its pronounced melodic and rhythmic character and its attractive harmony are the very factors that make it less suitable than the simple and more elastic plainsong tones for the recitation of prose. It ought to be possible to prefer plainsong for chanting purposes, and at the same time to admit the charm of the best type of Anglican chant—'a box where sweets compacted lie,' if ever there was one. This Church Times correspondent ends his letter by saying that those who want Anglican chants should be honest, and use Tate and Brady with them. We suggest that he and other extremists should be honest and admit that it is possible to hear good Anglican chanting and bad plainsong chanting. But perhaps he hasn't heard either; we've heard both. We add that our own preference is for plainsong, very strongly. But that preference does not blind us to the merits of the Anglican chant per se, or to the admirable results that may be obtained from its intelligent use.

---

The choirs of Chichester, Salisbury, and Winchester Cathedrals joined in a Festival service at Winchester Cathedral on July 27, about eighty singers taking part. There were four anthems—Vecchi's 'Alleluia,' Bach's 'Blessing, glory, and wisdom,' S. S. Wesley's 'Cast me not away,' and Balfour Gardiner's 'Thee, Lord, before the close of day.' The Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis were sung to a setting by Walford Davies. Dr. Prendergast conducted, his assistant, Miss Hilda Bird, accompanying; and voluntaries were played by Dr. W. G. Alcock, Dr. M. P. Conway, and the assistants of the three Cathedrals. The service was beautifully sung, and there was a large congregation.

---

Mr. Charles Stott, the well-known Bradford organ recitalist, has been granted seven weeks' leave of absence from his Church post, during which he will open and give daily recitals on the new organ in the chapel of Viscountess Cowdray's residence at Aberdeen. He will also give occasional recitals on the new organ at Cowdray Memorial Hall, Aberdeen. Both instruments, by the way, are by Messrs. Binns. Mr. Stott will make a special feature of organ music by modern English writers.

Nearly a thousand singers took part in the first Diocesan Choral Festival at Leicester Cathedral on July 18. The anthems were Ley's arrangement of a 16th-century tune to the hymn 'Lo, round the Throne' and Parry's 'Jerusalem.' Descant and fauxbourdon were freely used in connection with the hymns, and with fine effect. Dr. Gordon Slater conducted. Mr. W. J. Bunney accompanied, and Mr. Percy Saunders played the voluntaries. Sir Hugh Allen gave an address.

---

Under the auspices of the Suffolk Diocesan Church Music Committee eighteen choirs, numbering over three hundred singers, joined in a Festival Service at Southwold Parish Church on July 28. The Canticles were sung to Goss in A, and the Anthem was Ouseley's 'From the rising of the sun.' A large congregation was present, and the service was finely sung. The Rev. A. H. Stevens conducted, and Mr. Percy Hallam was at the organ.

---

The choir of Shillingstone (Dorset) Parish Church gave a concert at Milton Abbey on August 9, with an excellent programme that included excerpts from Silas's Mass in C and Mendelssohn's 'Hymn of Praise,' Noble's Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis in B minor, and a Tchaikovsky Motet. Miss Elsie Suddaby sang songs by Bach, Corner, and Bairstow. Mr. Alexander Popham conducted, and also played organ solos.

---

Mr. Ronald Dussek has been appointed to succeed Dr. Heathcote Statham at St. Mary's Parish Church, Southampton. Mr. Dussek—who is, we believe, a descendant of the composer—was a choir-boy at St. Peter's, Eaton Square, under the late Dr. Huntley, and has been organist at Epsom Parish Church since 1923.

---

Messrs. Rushworth & Dreaper have rebuilt the organ in St. Mark's Church, Tunbridge Wells. The instrument is now a three-manual of thirty stops and twenty-three pistons. Dr. W. H. Harris gave the opening recital.

---

Mr. H. L. Balfour will give an organ recital at St. Luke's, West Holloway, on September 27, at 7.45.

---

RECITALS

Mr. G. W. Harris Sellick, Middleton Parish Church—Grand Chœur in D, Guilmant; Introduction and Fugato, Herbert Brewer; Concerto No. 5, Handel; Choral No. 3, Franck; Bridal March and Finale, Parry.

Dr. J. C. Bradshaw, Christchurch Cathedral, N.Z.—Sonata No. 6, Mendelssohn; Solemn Prelude, 'Sursum Corda,' Elgar; Rêverie on 'University,' Harvey Grace; 'O Filii et Filiæ,' with Variations, John E. West.

Mr. P. P. Dickinson, Wesleyan Methodist Church, Frizinghall—Chorale Preludes, Bach and Brahms; Scherzo and Passacaglia, Rheinberger; Scherzo Claussmann; Toccata, Adagio, and Fugue in C, Bach.

Mr. George Dawes, Fletching Parish Church—Chorale Prelude on 'Eventide,' Parry; 'St. Anne' Fugue, Bach; 'Chant Pastoral,' Dubois.

Dr. Charles F. Waters, St. Mary-le-Bow—First movement (Trio-Sonata in E flat), Bach; First and Second movements (Sonata No. 8), Rheinberger; Rhapsody in C, Heathcote D. Statham; Two Preludes on 'Westminster,' C. F. Waters.

Dr. Chastey Hector, Brighton Parish Church—Prelude and Fugue in A minor, Bach; Selection from 'Parsifal'; Intermezzo and Scherzoso (Sonata No. 8), Rheinberger.

Mr. J. Spencer, St. Mark's, Leeds—A Bach programme: Prelude and Fugue in G; Passacaglia and Fugue; Four Chorale Preludes.

Mr. Gatty Sellars, United Methodist Church, Barnsley —Sonata in F, Mendelssohn; Fountain Reverie, Fletcher; Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Bach.

Mr. John Tomlinson, Middleton Parish Church—A Bach programme: Sonata in E flat; Toccata and Fugue in D minor; Fugue in B minor; Prelude on 'Nun freut euch lieben Christen g'mein.'

Mr. Allan Fortune, Ingrow Parish Church—Prelude (Sonata No. 1), Mendelssohn; Prelude and Fugue in D, Bach; Prelude on a Theme by Tallis, Darke; Concert Variations in E minor, Bonnet.

Mr. F. Vernon Curtis, St. Matthew's, Denmark Hill—Toccata 'Dorico,' Bash; Pilgrims' March (Symphony No. 4), Mendelssohn; Prelude and Fugue in C minor, Healey Willan.

APPOINTMENTS

Dr. William A. Hall, choirmaster and organist, Parish Church, Newark-on-Trent.

Mr. J. E. Pearson, organist, Upperton Congregational Church, Eastbourne.

Mr. George F. Austen, choirmaster and organist, The Pro-Cathedral, Calgary, Alberta, Canada.

Letters to the Editor

THE SOCIETY OF AUTHORS

SIR,—The Society of Authors have addressed an extraordinary circular letter to the leading music-publishing houses of London, which, while it is ostensibly an effort on their part to have full justice done to composers, is in effect one more endeavour to teach music publishers their business and to create discord between them and their composers.

Within the last few weeks the Society of Authors addressed a letter to The Times complaining that the British Government had taken no steps whatever to have British authors properly represented at the recent International Copyright Convention at Rome. We supported their protest in The Times because it seemed to us ridiculous that the guardians of copyright, literary or musical, should be in opposite camps and should not be helping one another. The time has come, however, when it is better to be perfectly frank with the Society of Authors. To begin with, their protest was a very belated one, taking place some weeks after the conclusion of the Rome Conference. It has been common talk during the last two or three years in the various leading European capitals that Great Britain has been conspicuously absent from the many International Conferences that have been held for the better protection and preservation of artistic copyright. At the Preliminary Meeting held at Rome in the spring not a single representative attended from the Society of Authors. The Society of Authors have only themselves to thank for the recent Government neglect. With the powerful literary names they command, they could compel Government attention. Their members write in many cases for the press, and occupy, consequently, much the same position as those bodies who possess votes sufficient to determine elections. Composers have no such advantage, consequently governments totally ignore the claims of musical copyright.

It is perfectly true that during the most important week of the Rome Convention the Government called our leading delegate up to Geneva for other business. Also, Mr. Williams, answering recent questions in the House of Commons, stated that he had had no complaints as to anybody being dissatisfied with our representative at Rome. Evidently Mr. Williams does not read The Times.

What we are leading up to, however, is the following. If the Society of Authors claim to be the indispensable guardians of the rights of composers, why are they taking no steps to remedy the abuse of his copyright which the composer labours under? It is hardly an exaggeration to say that the compulsory license system coupled with the compulsory scale of royalties governing the mechanical reproduction of music, have gone as near as possible to destroy copyright in music altogether. So far from making any protest on behalf of composers, the Society of Authors have completely ignored this wholesale confiscation of artistic property.

At the recent Board of Trade Inquiry held to inquire as to the justice of increasing the rate of royalty payable on mechanical records, the Society of Authors actually entered the lists against the composers and music publishers. Fortunately, some of their more enlightened members intervened at the last moment, and the Counsel who was briefed by the Society of Authors apologised for his appearance and retired from the Inquiry.

The increased royalties awarded by the Board of Trade to composers are a positive travesty of justice. What the Board of Trade have quite lost sight of is that the original conditions laid down by the shockingly drafted Copyright Act of 1911 are an absolute confiscation of the composer's right to a free market in the exploitation of his invention.

It sounds very plausible to state that in some cases the Board of Trade have increased the royalties to be paid by mechanical instrument manufacturers as much as 50 per cent., and in other cases as much as 25 per cent. These figures, however, ignore the essential question as to how far the original royalties stipulated to be paid by the Act can pretend to any semblance of fairness.

For instance, a popular melody in printed form published at two shillings provides the composer with a royalty of not less than 15 per cent. on the marked price. The same composition on one side of a three-shilling gramophone disc provides the composer, the author, and the publisher with one penny between them. The additional remuneration of 25 per cent. graciously awarded by the Board of Trade still leaves the royalty remuneration per work at a fraction over one penny to be shared between three owners.

Another perfectly monstrous thing is that the composer and the music publisher are permitted no control as to the price at which records of their works shall be issued to the public. The result is that sixpenny discs are springing up in every direction, and the farcical amount of royalty payable on them effectually stops the slightly bigger royalty that they would obtain on the more expensive discs. We wonder what Mr. Bernard Shaw or other distinguished authors would say if a Copyright Act took from them the power of deciding at what price they would publish their new works, and, under certain circumstances, compelled them to publish sixpenny editions. Have the Society of Authors ever given any attention to this problem?

When, previously to the Copyright Act of 1911, valuable musical copyrights were pirated and sold on the streets for one penny a copy, it cost music publishers months of work and thousands of pounds before the House of Commons could be made to understand that composers were the victims of sheer robbery. What steps did the Society of Authors take to help us in our struggle? It was only when an extra daring pirate issued a penny edition of Lord Balfour's famous 'Shilling Treatise on Fair Trade' that a few big publishers woke up, and inquired from us on the telephone how they could deal with the matter. We were unable to enlighten them, neither apparently could the Society of Authors.

By the efforts of the music publishers, a Sociêty has been created in this country for the collection of what are known as petits droits, small sums payable whenever a composer's work is publicly performed. Similar societies exist all through Europe. During the last three years our Performing Right Society have distributed considerably over £50,000 to authors and composers in connection with these fees. It would be interesting to know what similar fees, if any, have been obtained for composers by the Society of Authors. The sale of sheet music is being gradually annihilated by the enormous increase in popularity of mechanical music, and each succeeding invention in this direction takes a further toll of the reward due to the composer for the creation of his brains. We again ask, have the Society of Authors, who pose as the sole guardians of artistic property, taken any steps to inquire into this system of legalised robbery, or is the whole of their energy devoted to sending out foolish circular letters to music publishers, who, so far, are the only body who have put up a fight for the protection of musical copyright?—Yours, &c., CHAPPELL & CO., LTD.

THE ETHICS OF BORROWING

SIR,—On further consideration of the matter, I have arranged, with the concurrence of my publishers, that no further copies of my book, 'Music: Classical, Romantic, and Modern,' will be available. With regard to any statements of mine, in earlier correspondence, of which Mr. Scholes complains, I am quite willing to withdraw them; and express regret for having given him quite unintentional offence. I still feel, however, that his original censures of myself exceeded what was justified.—Yours, &c., A. EAGLEFIELD HULL.

August 25, 1928.

[We think Dr. Hull's letter will satisfy even his most severe critics. The withdrawal of his book, and his unreserved apology to Mr. Scholes, enable us to close the discussion with the hope that the unhappy affair will soon be forgotten.—EDITOR.]

FRIESLAND'S FOLK-DANCE

SIR,—It is often said that the people of the Dutch province of Friesland, even more than their cousins in the German province of East Friesland, are related in manner, customs, and language to the English. In one respect they certainly suggest the people of that Merry England which our folk-lorists are working to revive; they are very fond of song and dance. Their songs and dances, however, do not rest on any long tradition, and the seeker for old folk-songs would be hard put to it with nowhere to work on but this province. Their folk-song is that of the people of to-day, and it is most of it borrowed from their neighbours, while they have one dance, and one dance only, that is peculiar to the province. The most popular song in Friesland to-day is 'Home, sweet home,' in a version in their own language (they deny that it is a dialect, and assert that it is one of the oldest and purest languages in existence), written by the politician-poet Piet Jelles Troelstra. After it comes the 'Frisian National Song,' a jolly good tune that sounds as if it dated from the middle of last century, with 'Summer Morn' and the dance tune 'Skotse Trije,' or 'Scottish Three.'

Whether this dance actually came from Scotland is a matter for experts to debate. It exists in two versions, neither of which shows any particularly Scottish characteristics. And to-day it is rarely or never danced or sung alone, but always combined with one or two other dances or songs. In the revival which placed it on a firm and apparently permanent basis, the prime mover was a local alderman of literary and dramatic tastes, Mr. G. L. van der Zwaag, who nearly twenty years ago wrote a local play for an al fresco festival. It was one of the first of many of such plays in which the old custom of the small trade guilds combining for dances is put into practice. Van der Zwaag revived the ancient local dress which had almost disappeared, and introduced into his operetta the only trade dance which could be verified as an actual traditional one. This was the Shoemakers' Dance, which is almost invariably combined, as an intermezzo, with the 'Skotse Trije.' Mr. Y. C. Schuitmaker, who is the leading authority on the subject to-day, tells me that this method of combining the two dances is a very ancient one, and that in all probability these two dances were combined when the tradition first came into being. At any rate, as he and his party dance them the result is in perfect rhythm. To the Shoemaker's Dance a verse is sung:

'Sa stek ik de pluk (or els) der yn, sjuch!
Sa helge ik de piktread er troch.
Sa slaan ik de saal der op fest.
Sa docht de skûnmakker tige (or altyd) zyn best!'

which may be interpreted:

'So I push the awl right through, see!
So I pull the thread right through.
So I hammer the sole on fast.
So does the shoemaker always his best
(or his very best).'

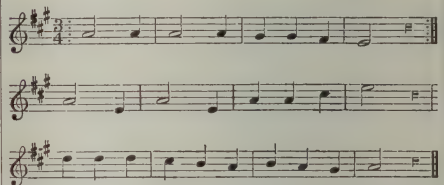
Simple as the words are, they are complex compared with the melody:



Some attempts are being made by Mr. Schuitmaker and others to find the originals of dances connected with other trades, and, in default of these, dances for milkmaids and farmers, for mowers by hand and machine, for watermen and harvesters, &c., are being invented to old tunes from other parts of Holland or even from abroad.

The Frisian people are intensely patriotic, being equally proud of their race and of their Netherlands nationality. At the close of the 'Skotse Trije,' therefore, it is customary to sing the Dutch Royal Anthem, the 'Wilhelmuslied,' and if the dance is to be repeated this will on the first occasion be replaced by 'Friesland,' their local National Anthem. This to some extent takes the place of the Dutch 'Wien Nêerlandsch bloed,' but anything of a political character in the feeling of either is entirely excluded. Autonomism, such as one finds in some of the outer provinces of other countries, is, I am told, entirely unknown among the Frisians, each district being thoroughly loyal to the country to which it is attached—that is to Holland or to Germany.—Yours, &c., HERBERT ANTCLIFFE.

Van Merlenstraat 73,
The Hague.

THE LARYNX AGAIN

SIR,—The letter of your correspondent, Mrs. E. Aubrey, and the general controversy as the result, urges me to subscribe to the many replies, as I feel wholly at variance with Mrs. Aubrey's ideas.

Singing, as we know, has been subject to more experiment than any other branch of music. There have always been the faddists; those who see nothing but things physical, and, almost as dangerous, those who aim at the purely psychological, instead of both seeking a rational balance. Whether the larynx rises or falls during the singing action matters little here; suffice it to say that its natural balance is governed by the laws of pitch and co-ordination, and it is a very dangerous subject to go astray on in the pages of such an important vehicle as the Musical Times.

The position of the larynx during singing is a result, not a cause; it is the result of conditions demanded by Nature. It is involuntary in its action, and is dependent upon the singer's obedience to natural law.

We sing to create images of beauty, and beauty is spirit, emotion, love. The mind gives it form in expression, and is made communicable to the listener by aid of the voice. Without the spiritual and mental attributes, therefore, voice would be nothing but soulless sound.

If we have perfect alignment of the body, or, in other words, physical balance, we can have natural and automatic breath action. If we have perfect freedom of all parts above the larynx, mostly of the jaw, there will be no throat interference. If we can add to the foregoing perfect diction, there will be no necessity for direct manipulation of any of our unsuspecting anatomy.

With the above perfect balance, the body will become a perfect channel for the manifestation of beauty and intelligence.

The teacher should know position and action in singing, and be thoroughly conversant with the anatomy of the vocal organs, but to localise on any of the parts, most of all the larynx, is to court disaster. The tongue, larynx, palate, lips, diaphragm, &c., are a singer's stock-in-trade, and require no direct manipulation. All physical faults have a mental origin. Localised tone-production will always be hollow and mechanical.

The worst fault of the singer is to be self-conscious. Why make him more so ?—Yours, &c.,

Winnipeg. STANLEY HOBAN.

'TOO MUCH DOMINANT SEVENTH'

SIR, — On p. 698 of your August issue, your contributor 'Feste' mentions the lamentable tendency of organists to interpolate unauthorised sevenths.

A notable instance where this occurs with painful frequency is in the fifth chord of Barnby's well-known single chant in E flat, now so intimately associated with the Nunc Dimittis, an interpolation which entirely alters the character of the chant.

But it is not parish church organists only who are guilty of the crime. In the Cathedral town in which I live, a funeral service was held in the Cathedral a year or two ago for a local notability, when the Cathedral organist himself added this seventh in every verse of that Canticle, and also in the Gloria.

But I can tell of something even worse. In the same Cathedral a memorial service was held, the same musician playing Handel's Dead March in 'Saul,' the second part of which is, as we all know, a phrase of four bars commencing in the key of G and ending in the key of D minor, as follows :

Will it be believed that this same organist played it as follows :

When this astounding alteration first came, I thought it must be an accidental slip ; but no !—the four bars are repeated further on, and again this phrase (in itself so eminently Handelian) was transmogrified into mawkish sentiment by the same alteration.

If Cathedral organists do such things, what can we expect elsewhere ?

I dislike writing anonymously, but as in this case to do otherwise would mean a personal allusion I ask to be allowed to sign myself,—Yours, &c.,

'NEMO.'

MENDELSSOHN AND THE HYMN-TUNE

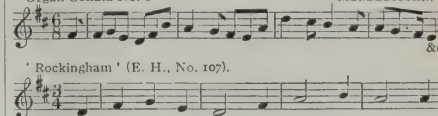
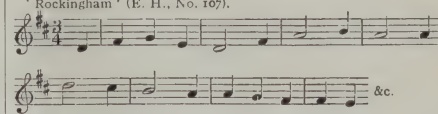
SIR,—In the Musical Times for May, 1923, you published an article showing 'quotations' of hymn-tunes—German chorales, I think—in Handel's 'Hallelujah.' But I don't remember ever having seen the extraordinary parallels between two English hymn-tunes and two themes from the organ works of Mendelssohn quoted anywhere. One is fully aware, of course, of the fascination the Chorale had for Mendelssohn, remembering the C minor Trio, the E minor Pianoforte Fugue, and all the Organ Sonatas except No. 4. But these two examples :

Ex. 1.
Organ Sonata No. 6 MENDELSSOHN.

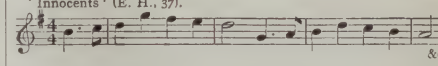


'Rockingham' (E. H., No. 107).



Ex. 2.
Prelude in G. MENDELSSOHN.

'Innocents' (E. H., 37).



seem to indicate memories of his English visits cropping out unconsciously.—Yours, &c.,

St. John's College, Brisbane, Queensland, Australia. ROY HEAD.

HANDEL AND HIS 'BORROWINGS'

SIR,—I gather from your review of Cecil Gray's 'History of Music' that he, in common with other eminent writers on music (such as Eaglefield Hull in 'Music : Classical, Romantic, and Modern') takes for granted the truths of the accusation against Handel that he 'borrowed' freely from other composers' music. Yet in 1908 Mr. P. Robinson, in his 'Handel and his Orbit,' conclusively (to my mind) disproved these accusations. The only writer that I have discovered to take any serious notice of Mr. Robinson's book is Dr. Ernest Walker in the second edition of his 'History of Music in England,' who refers to 'P. Robinson's very scholarly and also entertaining "Handel and his Orbit" (1908), where is adduced a large mass of evidence, some of it very weighty, that tends to prove that the supposed works of Erba, Stradella, and Urio, are really compositions of Handel's own, dating from his Italian period. The matter cannot be said to be settled ; but these researches have made it impossible, I think, to uphold any longer with confidence the traditional view which I formerly accepted.' Yet these statements continue to be made just as if Mr. Robinson's book had never been written. Even supposing that his arguments and facts are not held to be quite conclusive, yet it seems to be overlooked that there is far less difficulty involved in accepting them than is implied by the acceptance of the traditional view. In the latter case, has any satisfactory answer ever been found to the following questions : Why should Handel have 'borrowed' thus ? Did he ever show a lack of invention (though of course he often used material of his own over again, just as Bach and others have done) ? What is there in what we know of his life which could justify us in ascribing to him such an unscrupulous action ? How could he expect to escape, and how did he escape, detection during his lifetime ? Has anybody ever discovered any difference of style between these 'borrowed' portions and his own genuine compositions ? In the new 'Grove,' in the article on Handel, the usual accusations are made, and on the other side it is stated that Mr. Robinson's main contention 'can only receive bare mention here.'

I submit that writers on music have no justification for continuing to make these accusations against

Handel, just as if Mr. Robinson's book had never been written. If they consider that the arguments of the latter are not conclusive, I submit that they are morally bound to give their reasons for taking this view.—Yours, &c.,

E. J. P. Wyatt.

Rustington,
Littlehampton.

LONDON COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Sir,—I have read with interest and some anxiety your articles and correspondence dealing with 'bogus' colleges and diplomas, and especially your article on the 'Reconstitution of the I.S.M.' and its probable action with regard to these colleges, and Mr. Eames's letter. From these it would appear that anyone who holds a diploma from any of these colleges is incapable of being recognised as a musician, because the college has no public responsibility. Yet, surely, even if it should be regarded merely as a business proposition, it has as much public responsibility as any other good business house, i.e., the responsibility of supplying reliable goods. Should this, however, be questioned, there is still the matter of the demand of the public, and the public usually demands its money's worth in a business transaction. It would not continue to pay higher fees than the tuition given was worth.

I would like to put before you my own case, and the cause of my anxiety. There are doubtless others in the same position. I have been a pupil at the London College of Music for five and a half years. During the whole of that time I have had no reason to complain of inattention or lack of progress through any fault of my master. He is an F.R.C.O. and a music-lover, and he will not accept anything in the way of slackness, or work which does not make real music. I feel that I owe the College a debt of gratitude, and I have sought to express this feeling by sitting for its A.Mus.L.C.M. diploma. If I have been successful in the examination, am I to suffer musical ostracism because I am entitled to use those letters, even though I may compose some quite worthy music later on? (That is the end for which I am working.)

Moreover, is it really a good thing to 'knock nails into the coffin of these bogus colleges'? In my own case, the London College was the only college by means of which I could ever hope to get a foot on the musical ladder. I began to learn to play the pianoforte when I was five. I had had scarcely nine months' tuition when my parents moved to another town and my music lessons were not resumed. I continued to teach myself until I was twenty-one. I was very eager to learn and to compose. No opportunity presented itself, however, until I saw, simultaneously, advertisements of Trinity College and the London College. I wrote to both for prospectuses. The fees at Trinity College were £3 3*s.* for twelve lessons. I was earning 25*s.* per week, 20*s.* of which I paid away for food and lodging, so naturally I could not afford to take even one subject there. The London College was willing to teach the Rudiments at 12*s.* 6*d.* for twelve lessons, and Harmony at 15*s.* for twelve lessons, so I started with the Harmony course. Do you not think the College is doing good by making it possible for people like myself to have an opportunity of studying music and expressing themselves in it, the medium which they love and have chosen? Until I wrote to Trinity College (when I was twenty-one) I had no knowledge of the existence of music scholarships for older students. When I did learn of them, I felt my knowledge was insufficient to enable me to sit for any of them, and when I had learned more, I was too old, so the London College has been the only way. During the time I have been learning, I have been working as a shorthand-typist, though I have longed to make music my profession, and have worked hard to be able to do so, and now it seems that, whatever music I write in future will be condemned unheard because I am connected with this 'bogus' College—the only one which was able to give me the opportunity I sought. It would be distinctly ungrateful if I denied my connection with the College, would it not?

I may say that it is only my musical education which was neglected. I went to a secondary school and was successful in the Cambridge Senior Local Examination, so that the other conditions laid down by the I.S.M. would appear to be fulfilled.

I should be very much obliged if you would let me have your views on such a case as mine, and perhaps Mr. Eames might be kind enough to comment on it.—Yours, &c.,

G. E. C.

[We have never commented unfavourably on the teaching at the L.C.M. On the contrary, we have expressed the view that the College is doing good work by catering for the needs of students such as G. E. C. The case against the diploma side of the L.C.M.'s activities has been stated so often that we cannot repeat it.—Editor.]

THE COMPLETION OF THE 'UNFINISHED' SYMPHONY

Sir,—It is commonly assumed that Schubert abandoned the B minor Symphony because he could not, at the moment, 'get on' with the Scherzo; and that any attempt to do what Schubert apparently left undone must wrestle, in the first place, with the problem of finishing the Scherzo on the lines clearly indicated in the composer's abruptly terminating manuscript. A re-examination of the embryo Scherzo, however, leads me to a very different conclusion, and as Schubert's complete text is now generally available, in the 'Philharmonica' edition, my conclusion may possibly be of more than academic interest.

Before we look at the Scherzo at all, I would emphasise the extraordinary capacity which Schubert had acquired, by 1822, of brilliant improvisation with the orchestra. The first two movements of the Symphony illustrate this point so plainly that I need not quote particular instances. If, then, we find Schubert omitting to carry an initial impulse to its logical, or, rather (in his case), to its poetical, conclusion, our first thought will be, not that he was unable but that he was unwilling to do so; unwilling because his unerring sense of what we may call right context told him in time that the Scherzo, conceived as we know it, was doomed from the very start to be an unfit companion for the first two movements—an odd number, shall we not say, incapable of the larger synthesis which a symphony requires.

And a critical glance at Schubert's unfinished sketch appears to me to confirm this point of view. The Scherzo proper is unworthy of the mysterious and romantic glow which pervades the first movement. The thematic treatment, for example, is mechanical, lacking the inspired unexpectedness of Schubert's true invention. Further, the tune of the Trio is extremely commonplace. Schubert's childlike simplicity sometimes fails to distinguish between the common and the universal, and it failed here for the moment. But—and this is my main point—only for the moment. He had only to write the tune out and look at it, to see that it simply wouldn't do. Then, perhaps, one critical turn suggested another. He decided that the whole Scherzo was a misfit, and resolved to wait until a new and more felicitous conception came to his mind; failing which, he must abandon the Symphony to its two-movement fate.

On general and on particular grounds, then, it may be argued that Schubert discarded the Scherzo, of which alone we possess, literally, any inkling. But I am tempted to speculate further.

May not Schubert, on discovering the difficulty of composing any adequate sequel to the two movements already written, have concluded that they were best left to themselves? Beethoven's last Pianoforte

Sonata (dated January 13 of the same year) had struck a similar balance, of a quick paired with a slow movement. - Also, the world in general, which has apparently no hesitation in placing this Symphony in the first rank, if not absolutely first, does not seem to be much troubled by the canonical incompleteness of the work. And the world is usually right in such matters, in the long run. At any rate, let us not forget the inverted commas in speaking (or writing) of the 'Unfinished' Symphony.—Yours, &c.,

A. E. F. DICKINSON.

CECIL GRAY'S 'HISTORY OF MUSIC'

SIR,—Permit me to reply briefly to one or two statements made in the course of the review of my 'History of Music' which appeared in your pages last month. Your reviewer refers to what he calls a slip on my part in calling the E to E scale (on the white keys of the pianoforte) the Dorian mode. In reality there is no slip at all, for I am referring to the Greek Dorian, which most writers on Greek music identify with the E to E mode, as I should have thought was made sufficiently clear by the context. On the other hand a real slip has certainly been made by the reviewer himself when he quotes me as saying that I find the musical counterpart of Schubert in Bellini, and that Schubert was consumptive. I do not pretend to be an authority on the life of Schubert, but I should be surprised to learn that he was consumptive; I certainly cannot remember ever having seen it said in any life of Schubert with which I am acquainted. Your reviewer must surely be thinking of his abnormal consumption of beer! However that may be, the point is that nowhere in my book do I say anything of the kind; neither do I anywhere make what seems to me to be a singularly idiotic comparison between Schubert and Bellini.

As for the inconsistency, 'so vital as to undermine the whole principle on which Mr. Gray claims to work,' your reviewer has evidently not read carefully enough the passages on which his accusation is ostensibly based. It is, of course, always easy to find inconsistency in two statements which are forcibly wrenched from their contexts and placed side by side. But even so, when I condemn the habit 'of regarding a whole school or period as leading up to one or two outstanding figures, in whom all the virtues and qualities of their predecessors are presumed to be contained,' and then write two hundred pages later that 'Wagner seems to suck the strength and vitality from the art of all his predecessors like a vampire,' &c., there is no inconsistency, for the simple reason that this momentary 'pre-occupation with questions of formal and idiomatic evolution' on my part does not have the dire result of leading me to regard the whole of the music of the 19th century as leading up to Wagner. The word 'seems' is all-important. If anything, indeed, I am inclined to think that I have perhaps unduly minimised Wagner, but I have certainly not exalted him into a figure 'in whom all the virtues and qualities of his predecessors are contained.' In fact, your reviewer has completely misunderstood me here, and seems to think that I say exactly the opposite of what I actually say when the whole context is taken into consideration. Thanking you, in conclusion, for an otherwise very fair, and on the whole favourable criticism of my book,—Yours, &c.,

3, Hillsleigh Road,
Campden Hill, W.8.

CECIL GRAY.

[We plead guilty to error in regard to Mr. Gray's first two points. We ought to have remembered that the Greek nomenclature of the modes was different from that commonly used to-day. The mistake concerning Schubert and Bellini looks complicated, but is easily explained. We intended to write: 'The musical counterpart of Keats [not Schubert] he finds rather in Bellini.' The alteration of that one name removes the implication that Mr. Gray includes Schubert among the consumptives, and also does away with the absurd parallel between Schubert and Bellini.

Mr. Gray's third point concerns opinion rather than fact, and we see no reason to withdraw our charge of inconsistency. The passage we quoted was only one of several that struck us as being departures from his own principle. Here are two:

> 'Finally, all these various tendencies and artistic manifestations which we have been considering in this chapter and in the last—in other words, the whole of the music of the 17th century—are carried to their logical conclusion and highest point of perfection by two great German masters, Johann Sebastian Bach and George Frederick Handel' (p. 152).

And concerning Josquin des Près:

> 'In his work we find united all the finest qualities that are to be found separately in the work of his predecessors: the intellectual power of Okeghem, the sonority and expressiveness of Obrecht, the austerity of Agricola, the mystical grandeur of Isaac, together with an added mastery which raises his work to a height of perfection never before and seldom since attained' (p. 65).

If these passages (others might be added) do not conform to the habit, condemned by Mr. Gray, of 'regarding a whole school or period as leading up to one or two important figures in whom all the virtues and qualities of their predecessors are presumed to be contained,' we do not understand plain English.

After all, however, we do not blame Mr. Gray for apparent inconsistency. It is clear that the reaction against the historical method of the writers of a generation ago has gone too far. They were right, on the whole, in 'regarding a whole school or period, &c.'; but they were wrong in letting the principle blind them to the importance of the lesser men as individuals, rather than as mere predecessors or satellites.—EDITOR.]

'TURKOMAN MUSIC'

SIR,—My friend Mr. S. W. Pring, whose translations from the Russian are well known, has called my attention to a letter re the above in your last issue.

The work on 'Turkoman Music' is in Russian, as your correspondent has stated, and it is also true that few Britishers are conversant with that language. Indeed, had it not been for an appreciative inscription which headed a presentation copy sent me by Prof. Belaiev, I would myself have been quite ignorant of the compliment referred to. However, Mr. Pring tells me that he has now translated this work into English, and only awaits a publisher.

As for my work 'The Organ of the Ancients from Eastern Sources: Hebrew, Syriac, and Arabic,' I fully realise that an explanation is due. This work was accepted for publication early in 1926, but at the eleventh hour, for purely personal reasons, I withdrew it. I have now decided, however, to place it in the publishers' hands at an early date. In the meantime I beg to offer my sincere regrets to 'Orientalist' and any others who may have been inconvenienced by my action, as well as my apology to Canon Galpin, who knew the nature of the work in question, and made so kindly a reference to it in 'Grove.'—Yours, &c.,

2, Blythswood Drive,
Glasgow, C.4.

HENRY GEORGE FARMER.

THE TORONTO MUS. BAC.

SIR,—I see that Dr. C. W. Pearce, in his list of organists who have held their positions for long periods (July Musical Times), places the Toronto Mus. Bac. after one or two names! May I ask how long this has been a recognised distinction? Surely a committee was formed about thirty-five years ago (in the words of the late Sir John Stainer) to 'protest against, and to call the attention of the Government to, the action of the University of Trinity College, Toronto, in giving degrees in Music in absentiâ through an agency set up in this country'; and the Union of Graduates in Music was formed in 1893 (again in Dr. Stainer's words) 'that . . . British musical graduates . . . might combine together in order to make a firm stand against the constantly increasing endeavours to undermine the value of . . . degrees by bringing into circulation others not of the mint or coinage of our realm.'

Dr. Pearce was the first hon. treasurer of that Union of Graduates in Music; and now, thirty-five years later, he includes the Toronto Mus. Bac. in this list, side by side, as it were, with degrees from Oxford, Cambridge, &c., as if it were quite equal to the latter degrees! Considering the work and expense entailed in gaining a genuine British degree in music, it is not fair in any way to recognise colonial or American degrees, obtained 'through the post'!—Yours, &c.,

St. Andrew's Parish Church, Buckland, Dover. T. H. Hill.

A PROGRAMME WANTED

Sir,—Here is the programme of Mr. Lemare's recital on February 17, 1910, on the tiny four-manual organ in Trinity College, at which I was present.

Even now I entertain the most pleasant recollections of this recital, and of the masterly way in which this small 'four-decker' was handled by Mr. Lemare.—Yours, &c.,

Hickey's Chapel, Richmond. E. J. White.

Toccata and Fugue, D minor, Bach: Idyll, Bambridge; Rondo Capriccio, E H. Lemare; Sonata No. 6, Mendelssohn; Canzona della Sera, D'Evry; a. Soutenir (Study on one note); b. Scherzo from Organ Symphony in D minor, Op. 5, E H. Lemare; Improvisation on a theme selected by one of the audience; Fantasia, F minor, Mozart.

MEMORISING CHORAL WORKS

Sir,—Anyone who has ever conducted a choral society will, I imagine, agree with your correspondent's plea for the memorisation of music. Every such conductor, if he has only for a few bars succeeded in getting the full attention of his choir, knows the difference in 'grip' and vitality that memorisation would make.

(I must confess I had never realised before that the time spent in rehearsal, in proportion to that spent in performance, was so great, but I do not doubt for a moment that Mr. Scovell's statistics are correct.)

My experience has been that in a choir of mixed voices it is not very hard to get the ladies to memorise their music, but is is almost impossible to persuade the men to do so. Is this because men are less capable than women? Assuredly not! (You and I, Sir, would be traitors if we admitted such a thing.)

The real reason in a great number of cases is, I think, this: In most choral societies a very large number of the men are recruited from church choirs—many of them were, perhaps, trebles in church choirs. They have grown up, musically, without having a conductor to watch, and have gradually formed the habit of looking down at their music, even when they know it well, always relying on the organ to set the tempo and give the leads.

When they join a choral society they still read the music as it goes along. They do not look ahead or up; and if after much persuasion they give one eye to the conductor, that is all they can do.

Is there any remedy? In some cases it is impossible to break through the habit of years; but on the whole it is possible to teach a choir to memorise if the conductor, from the very first rehearsal, will teach his singers—(a) to read a bar or so; (b) to look up at the beat and sing by heart the bar they have just read; and (c) just before they come to the end of what they first read to look down again and read the next bar or so, then look up—and so on.

Gradually the passages sung by heart without looking down can be extended. In the end it is surprising how quickly a whole work can be memorised.—Yours, &c.,

Abingdon, Berks. G. M. Bruxner.

A WORD FOR FRANCK

Sir,—In the long and interesting review of Cecil Gray's 'History of Music' occur some remarks on Franck in which his music is accused of being—(a) too Franckian, (b) too limited in vision, (c) far too chromatic. Taking (a)—why not say plainly, 'I don't like Franck,' instead of attempting to elevate a personal opinion into the realm of criticism by blaming a composer for being himself. (b) I have found that Franck's music, though often appealing immediately, yields up its real beauties slowly, and wears well, which music of limited vision does not. In some of his slow movements particularly there is such a breadth and a sense of the infinite as to compare even with the later Beethoven. Such music sums up a whole philosophy. (c) Here the complaint is more justified, but surely to say 'far too chromatic' is rather sweeping. Franck is generally master of his chromatic idiom, and manages to give a much more significant message to the world by its means than many of our modern experimenters in Hucbaldisms, &c.

Yet Franck was not blind to the value of good diatonic progression, which he often introduces at moments of climax, and which he places in juxtaposition to more chromatic passages, in order to achieve contrast and avoid that monotony which is always produced by unrelieved chromaticism.—Yours, &c.,

9, Kingston Road, Taunton, Somerset. H. Howell Reed.

CUTTING OUT THE MIDDLEMAN

Sir,—The cry of many clever artists is 'Short of work.' Why? One reason is because they or their agents refuse to accept moderate fees. Concert-givers too often have very slender financial resources, and if expenses outrun receipts the societies peter out, and thus there are fewer engagements. Would it be possible to bring artists and concert-givers into closer personal relationship and do away with the middle man? Secretaries would often write direct to artists if they knew their addresses, but these are sometimes difficult to get at.

It might be worth while to have some recognised organ which, for a small annual fee, would publish in each of its monthly or weekly issues the names and addresses (not press notices) of vocalists and instrumentalists, e.g.:

Miss A. B., Soprano, 10, Hyde Park, W.300;
Mr. C. D., Accompanist, 300, Hyde Park, W.10;
Miss E. F., Violinist, Hyde Park, Manchester;
Mr. G. H., Baritone, Hyde Park, Glasgow;

allotting two lines for each advertisement, one for name, the other for address.

Personally, I have always avoided making engagements through agents, thus saving money, but not at the artists' cost.

If a society has £100 to spend on artists and the agent gets £10, only £90 is left for the artists, and this extra £10 may make all the difference between financial success and failure. Besides, £10 more is available for the artists!—Yours, &c.,

12, Oak Avenue, Bradford. S. Midgley.

BRITISH FEDERATION OF MUSICAL COMPETITION FESTIVALS

The Annual General Meeting and Conference of the British Federation of Musical Competition Festivals will take place at Buxton on September 28 - October 1. Judging from the prospectus, the proceedings will be on the usual enjoyable lines; and with so delightful a venue as a further attraction, there should be a large attendance. Early application should be made by those who require accommodation at the Palace Hotel, which will be the Conference headquarters. For full particulars write to the Federation Secretary, 22, Surrey Street, W.C.2.

The Amateurs' Exchange

Under this heading we insert, free of charge, announcements by amateur musicians who wish to co-operate with others.

Lady pianist, L.R.A.M., wishes to meet violinist or 'cellist of about equal standard for mutual practice, at Chiswick or near.—K. C., c/o Musical Times.

Pianist wishes to meet violinist, and also vocalist, for mutual practice. Classics generally. Kensington or Harrow districts.—COOK, 40, Parkfield Avenue, Harrow.

The Society of Women Musicians (Chamber Music Section) offers opportunities for the serious study of chamber music at weekly practices. Vacancies for good 'cellists, viola players, and leaders only. Full particulars of membership from the Organizing Secretary, S.W.M., 74, Grosvenor Street, W.1.

Violinist wishes to meet pianist for accompanying, &c. One evening weekly, for mutual practice.—A. E., c/o Musical Times.

Pianist wishes to form small amateur orchestra. Classics only.—ALAN P. DENHARD, 246, Barking Road, East Ham, E.6.

Capable violinist and also viola player wanted for string quartet. Harrow district.—S. H. G., c/o Musical Times.

Amateur players invited to join small string orchestra. No jazz. Reading.—W. H. R., c/o Musical Times.

Violinist and pianist wish to meet players of any instruments for the formation of a circle of friends who would play and study Bach and other 17th- and early 18th-century composers.—F. M. K., c/o Musical Times.

Baritone wishes to meet other voice, or voices, for sight-singing practice. Duets, glees, madrigals, &c. Evenings.—D., 27, Fallow Court Avenue, N.12.

Accompanist (lady), working for L.R.A.M., wishes to meet vocalist or violinist for practice. London, W. or S.W. Saturday afternoons.—H. D., c/o Musical Times.

Lady pianist wishes to meet vocalist or instrumentalist for mutual practice. London or districts near Ilford.—A. M., c/o Musical Times.

Lady vocalist, L.R.A.M., wishes to meet pianist for mutual practice. Must be good sight-reader.—N. ROBINSON, 14, Belsize Crescent, N.W.3.

Amateur string quartet offers itself for church or chapel services. Sunday afternoons or evenings. London, S.W. district, preferred.—PHILOMEL, c/o Musical Times.

Amateur study orchestra has vacancies for a few good strings, violin and viola. Now rehearsing G minor Symphony (Mozart) and other good orchestral works. Apply at rehearsals, Thursday mornings, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., The Mission House, 3, Gray Street, W.1.

SYDNEY (N.S.W.) PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY

We are officially informed that Mr. Gerald P. Peachell has been appointed conductor of the Sydney Philharmonic Society. Mr. Peachell was born at High Wycombe in 1888, and comes of a musical stock, being a nephew of Sir Frederick and Prof. Joseph C. Bridge. He studied at the Guildhall School of Music, and has done much and varied musical work as organist, music master, conductor, &c. His all-round qualifications include ability to play violin and viola, as well as pianoforte and organ. He took his Mus. Bac. degree at Durham in 1926. During the past six years Mr. Peachell has been assistant music master at Winchester College. He sails for Australia during the present month.

Sixty Years Ago

From the Musical Times of September, 1868:

OUR DEAR OLD CHURCH OF ENGLAND. New National Song. Dedicated, by express permission, to the Right Honourable Benjamin Disraeli. Words by J. E. CARPENTER. Music by J. L. HATTON. London: Robert Cocks & Co., New Burlington Street.

Respecting Signor Mario, as first tenor of the establishment, no good cause can be served by withholding the truth. We fully agree with all that is said about his knowledge of the stage, his gentlemanly bearing, and the irresistible manner in which he makes love; but he fails in that important quality of a vocalist, the power of singing the part he undertakes in an opera. The 'sensational' effect produced by witnessing the feats of Blondin on the high rope, or of a daring trapeze performance, is precisely what we experience on hearing Mario sing: we sit in breathless suspense until he has caught at the highest note, and then applaud in hearty thankfulness that no fearful accident has happened. Seriously, this is no part of the duty of an audience at a first-class lyrical establishment; and it is the province of a critic who speaks the truth not to pass lightly over a fact which is evident to all who dare to think. That Mario could sing well once is no proof that he can sing well now; and we need only instance his Romeo this season, in proof of the justice of our assertion that whatever good qualities he may possess, he is now utterly incompetent for the post to which he aspires.—(Henry C. Lunn, in a review of the London musical season.)

Sharps and Flats

A real conductor is always the thing he conducts—he is Beethoven when he leads that master, and he is Tasso when he directs Liszt's work of that name.—Pietro Mascagni.

Rank nonsense, caro Pietro! According to you, there must have been hundreds of Beethovens and Tassos. Anyway, imagine Toscanini as the Barber of Seville, Damrosch as Queen Mab, Hertz as Till Eulenspiegel, and Bodanzky as Debussy's Faun!—Leonard Liebling.

German music, aiming at greatness, achieved only obesity.—Vincent d'Indy.

On the other hand, there is d'Indy's own music, which did not aim at greatness and achieved its purpose. It surely is lean.—Musical Courier.

An address was given by Sir Hugh Martin, President of the Church Music Society.—Local Paper.

Don't forget that beating time with a baton is only about two hundred years old. Haydn died from it! He used to beat time with a big pole, which he one day brought down heavily on his foot. This led to blood-poisoning.—Albert Coates.

I could make popular music if I wanted to. . . . I may be a cerebralist, a synthetist, an intimista, as I have been called, but I obey an inner force which I can neither abolish nor modify.—Ildebrando Pizzetti.

Girls, if you feel the divine spark of music with you, let nothing deter you from fanning it into flame! Study for opera.—Emma Calvé.

Girls, our advice to you is this: Unless the flame is a devastating conflagration, rush to a fire-house the moment you feel the beginnings of a feeble sputter and have the hose turn enough $H_2O$ on you to drown out every vestige of the false and unprofitable flicker. Then get married.—Musical Courier.

Consider the famous Arnold Schönberg, What is he? A little bourgeois German of mediocre romantic spirit.—Ildebrando Pizzetti.

Apparently the singers' triumphs do not end with their departure from this life. I will not say they join the choir invisible, for no singer with a proper sense of his own value would consent to sing in any choir. But that their talents are recognised in other than mere earthly circles is proved by the touching little song that was so popular in America a few years ago:

> 'They wanted a singer in heaven,
> So God took Caruso away.'

I hope Enrico behaved himself properly in his new environment, though I have a disturbing vision of him feeling it was his duty to oblige the company, and bursting into 'On with the motley' as they fitted him with his halo and his first pair of wings.—Ernest Newman.

MUSIC IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Bruton (King's School).—On June 7, Purcell's 'Dido and Æneas' was performed, conducted by Mr. N. W. Newell. Part of the programme of the summer concert was devoted to Schubert, and contained songs, choruses, and movements from the Pianoforte Trio in B flat and from the 'Unfinished.' The remainder consisted of excerpts from 'The Mikado' (with orchestral accompaniment) and German's 'Henry VIII.' Dances.

Canford.—A community singing concert was given on May 17, and was broadcast. Mr. S. B. Leonard conducted.

Carlisle Grammar School.—The orchestra has now been augmented by the addition of wind instruments. At concerts during the term Haydn's 'Clock' Symphony and Mozart's Serenade in G were played under the head master (Mr. C. F. C. Padel), the choral society and orchestra combining, under Mr. C. F. Eastwood, in selections from Purcell's 'King Arthur.'

Chesterfield Grammar School.—At the School Musical Society concert on July 18, the chief work was George Fox's setting of 'The Jackdaw of Rheims,' for chorus and orchestra. The choir, about two hundred strong, was heard also in operatic choruses from Balfe, Wagner, Gounod, Schubert, Verdi, and Auber. Mr. G. H. Sadler conducted.

Cranleigh.—The choral and orchestral music for the School Pageant was written or arranged by Mr. S. M. Allen, who conducted, and Mr. R. W. Bowyer. Plainsong, folk-songs, and folk-dances were freely drawn upon; some of the music had been written for the pageant at Eccleshall in 1927, and various numbers were composed for the present occasion.

Dover College.—At an organ recital given by Mr. R. B. Hurry, Mackenzie's 'Benedictus' was played by Miss S. Spain-Dunk, accompanied by violins, trumpet, trombone, organ, and drums.

Eastbourne College.—A Musical Society, for discussion and performance, was founded in the Lent term, when several informal meetings were successfully held. The first formal programme was given in July, and was devoted in the main to Bach. It included Preludes and Fugues (some for organ, some for pianoforte), the Chromatic Fantasia, played by Mr. Belk, and part of the 'Italian' Concerto, together with various movements for violin and organ, played by Mr. Read.

Eton.—The Musical Society's concert contained organ and pianoforte solos, two of Stanford's 'Songs of the Fleet' (for solo and chorus), part-songs, the first movement of the Schumann Pianoforte Quintet, and a Haydn Minuet arranged for three violins. Dr. H. G. Ley has given four organ recitals. At one of these, songs were sung by Mr. Haworth; at others, anthems by the College choir.

Fettes.—The term's music has included a concert by the Falconer String Quartet, which played the Quartets of Mozart in D and of Dohnányi in D flat; and two organ recitals (on the new organ), given respectively by Mr. Havergal and Mr. W. Greenhouse Allt (St. Giles's Cathedral). The Founder's Day concert included the 'Peasant' Cantata of Bach and three orchestral movements from Schubert's 'Rosamunde.'

Oundle.—The Chelsea Singers have given a concert of glees, madrigals, folk-songs, and catches. At the midsummer concert the orchestra played the first movement of Beethoven's eighth Symphony, and among the choral items were Coleridge-Taylor's 'Drake's Drum,' and the Huntsmen's Chorus from 'Der Freischütz.' Movements were also played from the following: Bach, Sonata for flute in C, Trio for flute, violin, and pianoforte, in G; Mozart, Clarinet Quintet; Brahms, second Sonata for clarinet and pianoforte; and Dvorák, 'Bagatellen.'

Oxford (St. Edward's).—The programme of the summer concert contained Holst's 'King Estmere,' Walford Davies's 'Nursery Rhymes,' and part-songs by Stanford, Holst, and Balfour Gardiner. Mr. L. H. Ovenden conducted.

Rugby.—The House competitions, judged by Dr. George Dyson, were notable for the fact that seven of the nine Houses entered two programmes each. Among the items played were movements from the following: Bach, 'Brandenburg' Concerto No. 2, Concertos for two, three, and four pianofortes, and the Chaconne; Mozart, Horn Concerto in E flat, Quintet for pianoforte and wind, Trio for clarinet, viola, and pianoforte; Handel, 'Water Music,' Quartet for flute, clarinet, 'cello, and pianoforte; Beethoven, Quintet for pianoforte and wind; Mendelssohn, Pianoforte Trio in D minor; Brahms, Viola Sonata in F minor.

Wellington.—At a choral and orchestral concert on June 15, three movements of Vaughan Williams's 'Sea Symphony' were given, the orchestral part of the programme including a Haydn Symphony in E flat, the 'Fingal's Cave' and 'Magic Flute' Overtures, two movements of Beethoven's seventh Symphony, and Grainger's 'Mock Morris.' The last-named item was conducted by Mr. R. H. Timberley, the remainder of the programme by Mr. W. K. Stanton. At the end-of-term concert Stanford's 'Battle of the Baltic' was sung; and in Holst's Fugal Concerto, Max Bruch's 'Kol Nidrei,' and Mozart's Horn Concerto in E flat the soloists were boys in the school. On May 27 Mr. D. G. A. Fox (Director of Music, Bradfield College) gave a recital of works written or arranged for the left hand.

Westminster.—The Madrigal and Orchestral Societies have given two concerts during the term. At the first the orchestral works played were the 'Figaro' Overture, the 'Unfinished' (first movement), and the Ballet Music from 'Rosamunde.' The first movement of the Bach Concerto in C for two pianofortes was also played, and Percy Fletcher's selection from 'Tannhäuser,' and madrigals or part-songs by Dowland, Parry, Purcell, Vaughan Williams, and Holst were sung. At the second, the 'Magic Flute' Overture, part of Mozart's Symphony in G minor, and two Hungarian Dances of Brahms were played. Other instrumental items included Schubert's 'Marche Militaire' (combined House Orchestras), Haydn's 'Great and glorious' (brass quartet), and solos for pianoforte, clarinet, and flute. Combined House choirs sang 'Ward the Pirate,' and 'Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast' ended the concert. Mr. C. Thornton Lofthouse conducted. The competitions, judged by Mr. Arnold Goldsbrough, contained classes for House quartets, unison choirs, House orchestras, and chamber music.

F. H. S.

UNION OF GRADUATES IN MUSIC INCORPORATED

The summer meeting of the Union of Graduates in Music took place at the University of Dublin from July 31 to August 3. The attendance was large and representative, several members being accompanied by their wives. The gentlemen were in residence at Trinity College and the ladies at Trinity Hall. The proceedings opened on Wednesday morning with a reception at University College (National University of Ireland), where Dr. D. J. Coffey (the President) and Dr. J. F. Larchet (Professor of Music) welcomed the guests and conducted them through the laboratories, lecture theatres, and class-rooms of the College buildings. This was followed by a visit to St. Patrick's Cathedral, when Dr. G. H. P. Hewson, the organist, gave a recital, his programme including the C minor Fantasia and Fugue (Bach), a Psalm-Prelude (Herbert Howells), and the Choral Prelude, 'Nun danket' (Karg-Elert), and then to Christ Church Cathedral. The interesting features, including the tomb and memorial of Dean Swift, of the former were pointed out by Col. Murray, and of the latter by Dr. Kitson, who for several years was formerly the Director of Music there. In the afternoon of the same day all joined in a motor-coach drive to the Lake of Glendalough, an hour and a half from Dublin, situated amidst enchanting scenery in the Wicklow mountains, the return being made through the picturesque hill-side village of Enniskerry. The following morning was occupied in a most enjoyable ramble around Howth Head, reached in about forty minutes by tram-car. This introduced the visitors to delightful views of sea and landscape from the dizzy heights of the narrow pathway encircling the promontory along the edge of a rugged and precipitous coast.

After luncheon some went to Dublin Museum, where Mr. W. Buckley, the curator, described the exhibits, and others to the Irish Military School of Music. Following these visits all assembled at a garden party in the Fellows' Garden of Trinity College, upon the invitation of Dr. Walter Starkie (Registrar of the School of Music in the University) and Dr. C. H. Kitson (Professor of Music in the University and President of the Union of Graduates in Music). Among those invited to meet the members of the Union on this occasion were Lady McGarth, Col. and Mrs. Brase, Prof. Gilbert Waterhouse, Prof. Robert O'Dwyer, Dr. Brian Crichton, the Rev. J. P. Shortt, Signor and Signora Viani, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Brett, Mr. L. L. Dix, Mrs. and Miss Starkie, the Misses O'Hea, Miss Patricia Read, Mr. T. W. Weaving, Mrs. C. H. Moody, Mrs. J. C. Long, Mrs. C. F. Bowes, Miss Cunningham (Warden of Trinity Hall), Mrs. J. W. Jackson, Mrs. Bridger, Mrs. Clark, Mrs. Boxwell, Mr. and Mrs. J. Turner Haggard, Mr. Hubert Rooney, the Misses Alton, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Smyllie, Mr. Lennox Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Clandillon, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Garbutt, and very many others. Immediately after the garden party visits were paid to the Library, Chapel, and Examination Hall of Trinity College.

Each day all partook of breakfast and dinner at either Trinity College or Trinity Hall, and the whole party assembled for luncheon at Jury's Hotel, College Green.

Throughout the meeting the weather was perfect—glorious sunshine always; this added considerably to the pleasure of all, and a general wish was expressed that these summer meetings should be of longer duration. It was quite the most successful and happy gathering of members the Union has ever held. More will come next year!

Among the members who attended, apart from those already mentioned, were Dr. G. F. Brockless, Dr. Emilie B. Guard, Dr. Norman Hay, Dr. C. Hazlehurst, Dr. J. W. Jackson, Dr. B. Lofthouse, Dr. C. H. Moody, Capt. C. J. Brennan, Lieut. H. E. Adkins, Mr. C. F. Bowes, Mr. J. H. Bridger, Prof. E. A. Collins, Mr. R. Cooper, Mr. H. Goss Custard, Mr. R. T. Langdon, Mr. A. Forbes Milne, Mr. L. D. Paul, Mr. A. P. Porter, Mr. F. O. Sheard, Mr. H. Wharton-Wells, Mr. R. H. Whall, Mrs. M. Bolger, Miss Rhoda Coghill, Miss Margaret Jones, Miss Caroline Perceval, Miss M. S. Scott, and the hon. secretary, Mr. Charles Long.

SCHOOL OF ENGLISH CHURCH MUSIC

The scheme for the establishment of a School of English Church Music is making satisfactory progress. Though the capital sum aimed at is still far from attainment, the provisional Council feels justified in making a definite start. The exact nature of its plans will be announced as soon as the necessary arrangements have been made; all that can be said at present is that they will enable various practical activities to be commenced, on a small scale at first, but on lines that will permit of expansion as circumstances permit. One definite activity will be the appointment of at least one 'Commissioner' to visit different districts and give practical help in the music of parish churches where invited.

Many choirs, large and small, and from all parts of the country, have become affiliated to the School; the conditions of affiliation are simple, and may be had on application to the office at the address given below.

It is obvious that the activities of the School must in the main be directed towards giving help to those that are willing to co-operate, so that all choirs that wish to receive benefit or to help the cause should become affiliated as soon as possible.

Dr. Sydney Nicholson has personally visited most of the dioceses in England, and hopes to complete his task of getting some definite organization established in each diocese before the end of the year, so that practical work may be started with as little delay as possible. Meanwhile further donations or subscriptions are very necessary, especially at this time when a heavy financial responsibility must be shouldered if the scheme is to take practical form. All communications should be addressed to the Secretary, S.E.C.M., at the temporary office, 105, Gower Street, London, W.C.1.

ORGANISTS' LONG SERVICE ROLL OF HONOUR

By Charles W. Pearce

Dr. Samuel Weekes, of Plymouth, informs me that he no longer holds an organ appointment there, as stated in last month's list, and that he resigned before he had completed forty years' service; Mr. Ambrose Porter, of Lichfield Cathedral, tells me that his predecessor, Mr. J. B. Lott, occupied his post for forty-three years, 1881-1924; Mr. William Lee has, at present, completed fifty-two years of service at Mount Pleasant Presbyterian Church, Liverpool; Deneli (not Denei) is the Christian name of Mr. Skelding, late of Emmanuel Church, Clifton, Bristol; Mr. T. Manson's appointment is at Lerwick, Shetland (not Lanark). These are the only corrections I have to make in Lists I. and II.

To be appointed organist of the big Parish Church of Saffron Walden at the early age of eight looks like a ne plus ultra record of juvenile organ tenure. It recalls the child-ministrations of Samuel in the sanctuary at Jerusalem, and of Ion, who is immortalized in the Greek play of that name by Euripides. Well does J. T. Frye, the Essex boy-organist, deserve commemoration in the stained-glass window which has been erected to his memory in the church he served so well for sixty-four years.

Again, permit me to thank your readers for past favours, and to solicit their further help in the future. Letters or post-cards with legibly written particulars should reach me at 'The Paddocks,' Ferndown, Dorset, not later than September 10.

ORGANISTS' LONG SERVICE ROLL OF HONOUR

LIST III.—CATHEDRAL, COLLEGIATE, PAROCHIAL, AND OTHER ORGANISTS

(FOR NOT LESS THAN FORTY YEARS, CONTINUOUSLY, IN THE SAME APPOINTMENT)

| No. | Name | Appointment | Years of Tenure |
|---|---|---|---|
| 199 | Abbott, William ... ... ... ... ... | Parish Church of St. Mary Magdalene, Richmond, Surrey, 1854-1902 ... ... ... ... ... | 48 |
| 200 | Baber, E. H. ... ... ... ... ... | Christ Church (City), Bristol, 1881 (at present) | 47 |
| 201 | Bentley, Frederick ... ... ... ... | Holy Trinity Church, Hull (Yorks), 1881 (at present) | 47 |
| 202 | Betts, Edward ... ... ... ... ... | Collegiate Church (now the Cathedral), Manchester, 1714-67 ... ... ... ... ... ... | 53 |
| 203 | Bishop, Albert E. ... ... ... ... ... | St. Mary Abchurch, London, E.C., 1871-1911 ... | 40 |
| 204 | Bishop, E. A. (retired) ... ... ... ... | Quebec Cathedral, Canada, 1874-1924 ... ... | 50 |
| 205 | Booth, Josiah (retired) ... ... ... ... | Park Chapel, Crouch End, London, N., 1876-1917 | 41 |
| 206 | Box, Alfred Anderson ... ... ... ... | St. Thomas's Church, Bath Row, Birmingham, 1888-1928 ... ... ... ... ... ... | 40 |
| 207 | Burnell, Albert, A.R.C.O. ... ... ... | Parish Church, Weybridge, Surrey, 1885 (at present) | 43 |
| 208 | Cash, — ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | St. Katherine Cree, Leadenhall Street, London, 1812-65 ... ... ... ... ... ... | 53 |
| 209 | Coates, George Marsden (father of D. M. C., organist of St. Mary Magdalene, Paddington) | Parish Church, Wath-on-Dearne, Rotherham (Yorks), 1880 ... ... ... (at present) | 48 |
| 210 | Crate, F. A. (Churchwarden conjointly since 1886) | St. Thomas's Church, Winchester (Hants), 1885 (at present) | 43 |
| 211 | Crouch, William (grandfather of F. N. C., composer of 'Kathleen Mavourneen') ... ... | (1) St. Luke's, Old Street, London } conjointly, (2) Parish Church, Clapham } 1774-1826 | 52 |
| 212 | Dickenson, Frederick ... ... ... ... | Wesleyan Church, Horwich (Lancs), 1882 (at present) | 46 |
| 213 | Dobson, W. Silkstone ... ... ... ... | Christ Church, Southport (Lancs), 1888 (at present) | 40 |
| 214 | Essam, A. H. ... ... ... ... ... | St. Andrew's Church, Kettering (Northants), 1880 (at present) | 48 |
| 215 | Frye, John Thomas (appointed at the age of eight; died, October 23, 1887) ... ... | Parish Church, Saffron Walden (Essex), 1820-84... | 64 |
| 216 | Gater, William Henry, B.A., Mus. D., Trinity College, Dublin (sometime Divinity student; blind; died, June 21, 1928) ... ... ... | St. Stephen's Church, Dublin, 1876-1928... ... | 52 |
| 217 | Groombridge, John ... ... ... ... | (1) St. Stephen's, Coleman Street, London, 1775-1827 ... ... } conjointly (2) Parish Church of St. John, Hackney, 1781-1827 ... ... } | 52 / 46 |
| 218 | Halsall, Thomas, A.R.C.O. ... ... ... | Parish Church of St. James, Birkdale, Southport (Lancs), 1885 ... ... (at present) | 43 |
| 219 | Harris, Frank Lester ... ... ... ... | Parish Church, Paignton (Devon), 1884-1927 ... | 43 |
| 220 | Holland, Edwin (assistant-organist and organist) | St. Andrew's Church, Eccles, Manchester, 1885 (at present) | 43 |
| 221 | Ingham, Lawrence (blind) ... ... ... | Holy Trinity Church, Liverpool, 1839-79 ... | 40 |
| 222 | Jacob, John ... ... ... ... ... | Lady Huntingdon Church, Ebley, near Stroud (Glos), 1873 ... ... ... (at present) | 55 |
| 223 | Janes, Sydenham J. ... ... ... ... | All Saints' Parish Church, Okehampton (Devon), 1883 ... ... ... ... (at present) | 45 |
| 224 | Large, Henry ... ... ... ... ... | Parish Church, Mildenhall (Suffolk), 1868-1921 ... | 53 |
| 225 | Light, William ... ... ... ... ... | St. Margaret's, Lothbury, London, E.C., 1806-47 | 41 |
| 226 | Lusty, Don Joseph (died, June, 1928) ... ... | The Tabernacle, Dursley (Glos), 1878-1928 ... | 50 |
| 227 | Maltby, D. H. (Alderman) ... ... ... | Methodist Chapel, Mansfield (Notts), 1875 (at present) | 53 |
| 228 | Miller, William (first organist of the Sacred Harmonic Society, London) ... ... ... | St. Giles, Cripplegate, London, E.C., 1832-75 ... | 43 |
| 229 | Monk, William Henry, Mus. D., Dunelm. (Musical Editor, 'Hymns Ancient and Modern') ... | King's College, Strand, London, 1847-89 (conjointly with St. Matthias, Stoke Newington, 1852-89 (37 years)) ... ... ... ... ... | 42 |
| 230 | Moon, W. E. ... ... ... ... ... | St. Mary's Parish Church, Cowes, Isle of Wight, 1872-1924 ... ... ... ... ... | 52 |
| 231 | Moreton, George Harry, Mus. B., Dunelm. ... | St. Andrew's Parish Church, Plymouth, Devon, 1885 ... ... ... ... (at present) | 43 |
| | | Conjointly with Guildhall (Borough Organist), 1886 ... ... ... ... (at present) | 42 |
| 232 | Netherwood, John ... ... ... ... | Parish Church, Woodhouse, Huddersfield (Yorks), 1877-1919 ... ... ... ... ... | 42 |
| 233 | Pate, Thomas ... ... ... ... ... | Holy Trinity Church, Chester, 1887 (at present) | 41 |
| 234 | Petty, Joseph ... ... ... ... ... | Baptist Church, Sutton-in-Craven, Keighley (Yorks), 1879-1927 ... ... ... ... | 48 |
| 235 | Porter, Walter ... ... ... ... ... | St. Mary's, Lowgate, Hull (Yorks), 1875-1925 ... | 50 |
| 236 | Ranson, John (assistant-organist and organist)... | St. George's Church, Preston (Lancs), 1877-1927 | 50 |

| No. | Name | Appointment | Years of Tenure |
|---|---|---|---|
| 237 | Ray, Emily Stembridge ... ... ... ... | Parish Church, Ballhowton, Glasgow (Scotland) 1873-1921 ... ... ... ... ... ... | 48 |
| 238 | Rhodes, Miss ... ... ... ... ... | All Hallows, Lombard Street, London, E.C., 1812-65 ... ... ... ... ... ... | 53 |
| 239 | Rickard, Mrs. Alice Cambridge ... ... ... | Holy Trinity Church, Catford, London, S.E.6, 1886 ... ... ... ... (at present) | 42 |
| 240 | Robinson, John (organist of Westminster Abbey, 1727-62) ... ... ... ... ... ... | (1) St. Lawrence Jewry (London), 1710-62 ... ... ... conjointly | 52 |
| | | (2) St. Magnus, London Bridge, 1712-62 ... ... ... conjointly | 50 |
| 241 | Savage, E. W. ... ... ... ... ... | St. Thomas's Church, Winchester (Hants), 1883 (at present) | 45 |
| 242 | Severn, Charles (contrabassist and 'cellist, Philharmonic Society) ... ... ... ... | St. Mary's Parish Church, Upper Street, Islington, London, 1839-85 ... ... ... ... | 46 |
| 243 | Shaw, J. Patterson, F.R.C.O. ... ... ... | St. Helen's Church, Northwich (Witton), Cheshire, 1881 ... ... ... ... (at present) | 47 |
| 244 | Smothergill, William ... ... ... ... | All Hallows by the Tower of London, 1770-1823... | 53 |
| 245 | Spackman, Lewin ... ... ... ... ... | Parish Church, Corsham (Wilts), 1882 (at present) | 46 |
| 246 | Stear, Charles Wesley ... ... ... ... | Grammar School, Tyndall's Park, Bristol, 1885 (conjointly with St. Mary's Church, Tyndall's Park, for many years, and which he still holds) (at present) | 43 |
| 247 | Stone, William ... ... ... ... ... | St. John's Church, Weymouth (Dorset), 1881 (at present) | 47 |
| 248 | Taylor, James ... ... ... ... ... | St. Werburgh's Church, Dublin (the Vice-Regal Church before the erection of the present Chapel Royal), 1866 ... ... ... (at present) | 62 |
| 249 | Thorne, George (died, March 31, 1926) ... ... | Holy Trinity Church, Weymouth (Dorset), 1876-1925 ... ... ... ... ... ... | 49 |
| 250 | Tomlinson, James ... ... ... ... ... | Corporation Organist, Town Hall, Preston (Lancs), 1882-1927 ... ... ... ... ... | 45 |
| 251 | Walsh, George Richmond ... ... ... | St. Peter's Church and St. Mary's Church, Barton-on-Humber (Yorks), conjointly, 1870 (at present) | 58 |
| 252 | White, H. G. ... ... ... ... ... | Parish Church, Tintagel (Cornwall), 1879 (at present) | 49 |
| 253 | Wilde, Algernon Sidney ... ... ... ... | Abbey Church, Wymondham (Norfolk), 1882 (at present) | 46 |
| 254 | Winter, Leonard G. ... ... ... ... | Angel Street Congregational Church, Worcester, 1888 ... ... ... ... (at present) | 40 |
| 255 | Young, Henry ... ... ... ... ... | Parish Church, Buckingham (Bucks), 1871 (at present) | 57 |

[Dr. Henry J. Edwards writes pointing out that his period of service at the Parish Church, Barnstaple, is sixty-two years, not forty-two as given in last month's list.—Editor.]

SOME OF THE LESS-KNOWN SONGS OF SCHUBERT

Mr. Fox-Strangways has given special attention to the songs of Schubert, and his recent lecture on the above subject at the Musical Association proved to be of particular interest and value, as it was really a critical dissertation on the composer's methods. He said that Schubert had been reproached for choosing words that were less than great, but it had to be remembered that until the 18th century German poetry was largely dependent on French models. Lessing was the first to throw off the yoke, but, unfortunately, he did not write lyrics. For his early songs, Schubert could find only the scholarly Mattison and the solemn Klopstock. In Goethe he found the real thing, and he seldom failed with any lyric of his.

One of the feeblest of his poets was Schubart, who was content with versifying pretty ideas, but Schubert had got two fine songs out of him, and one famous one, 'Die Forelle.' 'An mein Clavier' provided lovely music, and 'An den Tod' suggested to Schubert a powerful use of modulation. In von Platen's 'Die liebst mich nicht' and 'Die Liebe hat gelogen' Schubert attained a wonderful poignancy, in the latter by means of a high tessitura, which a singer who can manage it can make most telling. Schiller was the most disappointing. Unfortunately, Schubert came to him early in life, before he had acquired his real technique. Schiller was really an historian, and it was the mental horizon of the historian that stood in the way of the unified conception demanded by a lyric. He says too much. The true reconciliation of the universal and the particular is found in Goethe, and, later, in Heine. Each line vibrates with many meanings beyond its own, and will therefore bear the emotion that music is there to add.

Everyone who looked through Schubert's songs in chronological order must see how long it took him to acquire his technique. Amongst his early defects in various songs were such things as too many full closes; the accompaniment sticky, leaving the voice to do all the work; a lack of connection between the phrases; too many keys which were too mechanically introduced. It was because these were just the things he triumphed over afterwards that they were worth mention.

One aspect from which we might view his songs was that of a general incorporation of recitative in lyrical forms. The whole spirit of 'Die Doppelgänger' was that of an impassioned declamation; yet the stanzas were treated metrically and separated by ritornels. In a broad sense, too, the unity of Schubert's cycles depended on this fusion, and on their general likeness to his ballads, which Beethoven spoke of as ten songs rolled into one. Thus, 'Die Schöne Müllerin' might be taken as one long ballad, having its lyrical as well as its declamatory moments.

Objection had been taken to Schubert's fondness for the chord of the diminished seventh. He was the first to exploit its modulatory powers; he never seemed to tire of it, or of its congener, the German sixth. It is a characterless chord, and is therefore useful in supplying a neutral tint. The other characteristic harmony in Schubert was the alternation of major and minor, not only for direct contrast, but to effect modulation such as in the slow movement of the 'Unfinished' Symphony, where he moves through the tonic minor to the minor mediant, and in the slow movement of the B flat Trio, where he moves to the submediant. This landing in a key a major third away was typical of Schubert. It is a very good place to go to, but his way of going there became a mannerism.

Did the words decide the form of a song? Yes and no. Yes, in material matters, such as whether the strains were to be A B A B or A B B A, whether the time was iambic, or trochaic, and the like. No, in the broader sense. A composer set what he found in a poem, which has many meanings (if not, it would be prose), and every composer did not find the same thing. Schubert took the simple, obvious mood, and set that; he was a pioneer, and was not looking too closely into details. He was reclaiming land from the sea and building the dyke; others entered into possession and farmed the land.

A lyric was an attempt to say one thing and to say it well. It must of all things have unity. A composer came to it armed with all sorts of devices that he had learned in quartet-writing and elsewhere, and selected from his armoury the device that would best bind the song into one utterance. Sometimes it was a recurrent figure, but with Schubert it was often the bass. The lecturer enumerated seven different kinds of basses to be found in the songs, quoting examples, and pointed out that they were typical because they were a clear example of what Schubert was so good at —two-part counterpoint. He seldom tried for more than two parts, and when he wrote these they always sounded as if they were made for each other, as well as being severally melodious. They gave distinction to harmony that was, if anything, too neat and tidy, even conventional.

Schubert was a singer, and in his songs never forgets how a singer would feel. He does not break off to comment or refine, as Wolf perhaps would. Nor does he work an idea to death, as Schumann did latterly, nor give all the fun to the pianist, as Brahms occasionally does. A singer will revel, too, in his frequent use of recitative, because it gives a sort of fulcrum for the lyric to work on, and makes him feel that he has a real message to deliver.

Something must be said about Schubert's melody, difficult as it was to make words say anything explicit of so intangible an experience. If we might compare the part played by harmony in music to the part played by geology in Nature, and if counterpoint was like the natural forces that acted upon and modified and, to some extent, made that geology, then we might say, perhaps, that melody was the scenery which resulted from the two. For a melody was not a mere series of equally important notes, but a chain binding together points of vantage; and these points of vantage were posited by the harmony and emphasised and set in relief by the counterpoint. In short, a melody was not the top line only, but every note, with all its implications from first to last.

A melody might have 'sweep,' which was principally got by minute climaxes. Another point was 'articulation' or metrical variety. In 'Who is Sylvia?' there were nine varieties of metre in its twenty bars. Thirdly, we wanted a melody to say something, not to describe, of course, but to characterise; not to tone-paint, but to define the mood. Schubert's melodies seemed so life-like. It was not that they told the story —only the words could do that; but they followed each turn of it with, at their best, absolute fidelity. Such a song as 'Eifersucht' never faltered; it went on picking up point after point, just as if it were the echoes back from the woods behind the stream. Perhaps Schubert got this skill from his immense practice in the writing of declamatory passages, from schooling himself to find the musical mot juste in every conceivable set of circumstances. Lastly, there was the melos, the general shape, as regards pitch and interval, that the melody took.

In the course of the paper, Miss Margaret Harrison and Mr. Owen Bryngwyn sang a number of Schubert's songs as illustrations.

London Concerts

THE PROMENADE CONCERTS

Thanks to the B.B.C., the 'Proms' are still in being. The thirty-fourth season began on August 11, with all the usual enthusiasm. The programmes mainly follow customary lines. A good move is the increased prominence given to Brahms (Wednesdays).

Fourteen new works are announced, the composers being Tansman, Kodály, Godfrey Sampson, Strauss, Sowerby, Sibelius, Arthur Benjamin, Edgar Bainton, Rubin Goldmark, Casella, Bach-Schönberg, Eric Fogg, Gordon Jacob, and Dorothy Howell.

Only one first performance has occurred in time for these notes—a Pianoforte Concerto by Tansman (August 16). It failed to make much impression, despite the deft playing of the soloist, Mr. Hely-Hutchinson. Perhaps soloist is hardly the word, for Tansman treats the pianoforte rather as a mere constituent of the orchestra. The music is of the sort of which too much is now being turned out. Scraps of tune are reiterated apparently on the principle that if a theme is repeated often enough it acquires significance. This is true—in fact it is a principle of which composers have made much. But Tansman doesn't. He scores piquantly, but a prolonged and maddening dose of triangle obliterated most of the pleasing impressions.

It is good to note that audiences have been large, and that Sir Henry Wood and his players have settled down quickly to a capital level of performance.

MARIANI'S ITALIAN MARIONETTES

There is not a great deal of first-rate interest to musicians in the performances now being given at the New Scala Theatre. This side will, no doubt, develop. (Our visit was on the second night.) But there is abundance of humour, much of which will appeal specially to musicians—e.g., the airs and graces of the puppets during the delivery of a top note, and, above all, the richly comic pianist in the concert-party item. The dancing and acrobatic performances were admirable. The illusion is positively uncanny at times. The party of singers who provided the vocal part of the potted 'Geisha,' and other numbers, were disappointing on the night of our visit. Some of their singing was frankly bad. Nor were the musical interludes by Julia Chatterton and Herbert Bedford up to the mark. There is an alert little orchestra, and when the intervals are shorter, and the singing improved, the show will be first-rate all round, instead of only on the marionette side as at present. Anyway, these astonishing and delightful puppets should not be missed.

A course of twenty-four University extension lectures on 'Some 19th-century Composers' will be given at Morley College (61, Westminster Bridge Road, S.E.1) by Miss Elsa West on Fridays at 7.30, commencing on October 5. The lectures will be fully illustrated with chamber music, pianoforte, and vocal examples. For full particulars apply to the hon. secretary, Miss Ethel Weeden, at the College.

THE WELSH NATIONAL EISTEDDFOD

After Holyhead in 1927, with its broad views of sea and coastline, the sombre and congested 'Rhondda valley was this year the scene of the Royal National Eisteddfod of Wales.

Treorchy is not the most forbidding-looking of the industrious townships which are strung along the course of the Taff above Pontypridd; but if we think of what the place might have been if only a little foresight had been exercised and a little care for the amenities of life, instead of the Victorian ferocity in getting rich quick, when the Rhondda collieries were first developed, the scene is depressing enough. The hills are still noble, but they are denuded of trees and disfigured by innumerable slag-heaps.

The Treorchy Eisteddfod was one of the least comfortable—one of the most restless and fiercely crowded—in a series of celebrations that are never noted for comfort; but it has to be recorded as a particularly interesting and successful one. The test-pieces were above the average Welsh standard. The principal competitions were fought out by numerous contestants; and the evening concerts had, in spite of certain hostile circumstances, quite brilliant qualities.

A number of rather feeble compositions were, as usual, heard in the tests, owing to the importance attached to the representation of Welsh composers at all costs. But there was after all small cause for grumbling at a festival which included Parry's 'Blest Pair of Sirens' (chief choral) and 'There is an old belief' (second choral), Schubert's 'Song of the Spirits over the Waters' (chief male-voice), Byrd's Lullaby, and the Rhine-maidens' Trio from 'The Twilight of the Gods' (women's choirs), the first movement of the 'Eroica' and Holst's 'St. Paul's Suite' (orchestras), and Purcell's 'Mad Bess,' Schubert's 'Doppelgänger,' and arias from Bach, Tchaikovsky, Moussorgsky for the solo singers.

Something both charming and new in the way of Welsh music was Dr. David de Lloyd's 'Chain of Folk-Songs,' in the women's choirs competition. Otherwise Welsh music did not show up with much distinction. On the other hand the choral singing both in the competitions and at the concerts was often magnificent—a compensation for the trials of a sojourn in the Rhondda. The classes for solo singers brought out a number of interesting voices; and South Wales may be proud of the six amateur orchestras which turned up to play the 'Eroica.'

The principal works at the evening concerts were the 'St. Matthew' Passion, 'Elijah,' and 'The Dream of Gerontius.' There was also a symphony concert by the London Symphony Orchestra. Sir Thomas Beecham was to have conducted this concert, as well as adjudicating in the chief competitions, but at the last moment his health failed, much to the disappointment of all the Eisteddfodwyr. Mr. W. H. Reed took his place. The L.S.O. also accompanied 'Blest Pair of Sirens'—in a competition that lasted from noon till 6.30.

The evening concerts at the Eisteddfod suffer from the drawback that the day's time-table invariably becomes dislocated, and the evening programme always starts late. Many of the participants are already weary after twelve hours of excitements and solemnities. And since a good part of the vast assemblies leave for distant parts by train, there is a steady exodus after about 9 o'clock. On the night of the 'Passion' performance it would have seemed extraordinary to an uninformed stranger to see, in music-loving Wales, the departing stream of 'early Britons' throughout the second part of the work, a stream which became a surging torrent during the last few numbers. As a matter of fact, time could have been saved that night by dispensing with applause and encores. The purist might have protested against performing the 'Passion' at all in circumstances that rather suggested a railway terminus on a Bank Holiday. But the value of it lay in bringing Bach home to a good many thousands (for after all there were still some thousands left at the end), and especially in the choir's saturation in the music.

The Festival choir was a remarkable organization. The six hundred singers had been rehearsing four times a week for twelve months. The conductor was Mr. John Hughes, the organist of a local chapel. Treorchy has every reason to be proud of this young man. To have trained the choir to such a pitch of excellence and to conduct the three great works with a strange orchestra which the singers had never heard until the week of the Festival, proved a real talent.

The circumstances were all against serenity and fine shades. Choir and conductor took the bull by the horns and triumphed by force of urgency and brilliance. They seemed quite unperturbed by the incessant comings and goings and by the fierce disturbances from the nearby railway junction—disturbances that pointed to Honegger rather than Bach and Elgar as the appropriate composer for a Treorchy Festival. Mr. Hughes might have added to the dignity of the 'Passion' performance by restraining his singers from applauding themselves and also by standing out against the performance, by way of conclusion, of Welsh hymns, which are noble and inspiring in their place, but which seemed out of it after an evening of Bach, as also after 'Gerontius.'

In the 'Passion' the narrative was sung rather drily and tightly by Mr. John Adams, but a fine performance of the bass music was given by Mr. Harold Williams. The women soloists were Miss Bessie Jones and Miss Dilys Jones.

'Elijah' was thrilling to hear. It was as though not a soul among the performers had heard that the work was hackneyed and threadbare. All believed in it, and made us, too, believe in it again. The smashing weight of the choral tone was something to wonder at. Mr. Horace Stevens much impressed the audience by his well-known and stately performance of the title-part.

'Gerontius' was a more daring undertaking for the Rhondda singers. The intonation rocked in the big chorus in the first part, and there was a misfortune in 'Lord, Thou hast been our refuge'—but as many of the singers had had no orchestral rehearsal at all, this was nothing to make much of when the rest of the choral singing was so stimulating. One has rarely seen an Eisteddfod audience so engrossed and hushed as at this performance. If it were not for the difficulties of the orchestral music, Elgar's oratorios would assuredly have a great vogue in Wales. The romanticism of his religious feeling is obviously the very thing for this emotional people. It is not too much to say that, whatever the imperfections, it was a great performance. The choir had learnt the demons' music to a T. 'Praise to the Holiest' stirred one's blood.

The soloists were good. Mr. Steuart Wilson has not been heard to better advantage. He sings with more breadth and more warmth than of old. He still clouds his voice unnecessarily by giving his 'i' a suspicion of 'oy' sound. Miss Margaret Balfour sang with the fruity richness for which she is famous. One could well dispense with some of the fruitiness in exchange for truer words. The vowel 'eh' is Miss Balfour's worst trap. It leads her into over-pressing, distortion, and false intonation. The bass, Mr. Watcyn Watcyns, was not quite in his element. He had a fine voice, but it was too veiled, and he sang stolidly from note to note without ever managing to carry off a phrase as it stood.

Mr. Reed conducted Beethoven's second Symphony and other works at the orchestral concert. He can seldom have known such a day, used though he is to hard work. He was judging violinists all the morning; he led the orchestra in the 'Blest Pair of Sirens' competition all the afternoon, and can have had barely time for a meal before the exacting evening concert began. Mr. Tudor Davies sang, and Miss Maude Gold played the violin in this programme.

The ' chief choral ' was one of the best competitions ever known at an Eisteddfod—thanks largely to Parry's noble work. The second test was ' Cwyn y Gwynt ' (' The Plaint of the Wind '), by John Hughes, an unaccompanied part-song of meagre content, which outstayed its welcome. All the thirteen entrants turned up. The conducting was the general weakness of the afternoon. The singing was often of splendid quality, and that meant that the would-be conductors were good choir-trainers. Curious, then, that they should have taken so little trouble in acquiring the art of conducting. They nearly all fussed with their choirs as though at a rehearsal. ' But, good people ' (one was inclined to say), ' practising is over now—it is the day—forget technics, and think only of the music, of the poetry, of Milton, of all things great and uplifting.' But nothing of the sort occurred to anyone; and consequently we had little that resembled a true performance of ' Blest Pair.' Some people (Fishguard, for example) were terribly insensitive, and took the piece as a march. Hereford was more feeling, but Ystalyfera was the first to utter ' O may we soon again renew ' as though it had an intense meaning. If this sounds disparaging, it must be said that the vocal material was magnificent all the afternoon, and a good conductor could, after an hour, have given a superb performance with any one of the choirs. The marks were :

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Ystalyfera ... | 198 | Port Talbot Choral | 177 |
| Ammanford ... | 190 | Risca ... | 168 |
| Rhymney ... | 187 | Llanelly ... | 165 |
| Port Talbot District ... | 184 | Tabernacle (Cardiff) | 154 |
| Mid-Rhondda... | 182 | London Cambria ... | 153 |
| Hereford Harmonic ... | 181 | North Gwent ... | 152 |
| Fishguard ... | 180 | | |

The tests in the ' second choral ' were a movement from ' Jesu, Priceless Treasure,' Parry's ' There is an old belief,' and a part-song by J. Morgan Lloyd. Six choirs sang. The marks were :

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Porth ... | 264 | Ynyshir and Wattstown | 243 |
| Pontygwaith ... | 256 | New Tredegar ... | 240 |
| Bettws Choristers | 245 | Hirwaun ... | 235 |

I could not hear the chief male-voice competition, which resulted in a win for Swansea (192), with Dowlais and Morriston equal seconds (185). The second male-voice contest was a disappointing affair, simply through the fault of the characterless music (part-songs by Protheroe and Dan Jones). An American choir of Welsh miners from Scranton, Pennsylvania, won the first place amid wild scenes of congratulations. Cwmbach was placed second, and Haverford West third. The Welsh Guards choir appeared in this competition and made a brave show—but did not sing well. There was, in fact, nothing to boast about by anyone. The Americans sang with excessive contrasts and explosive effects. They had apparently not a thought for what they were singing about.

The women's choirs, on the other hand, made a very pretty competition. Five choirs survived the eliminatory test. The marks in the final were :

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Dowlais ... | 290 | Porth ... | 267 |
| Clydach ... | 281 | Kenfig Hill | 262 |
| Ilford, London | 277 | | |

The orchestral competition, in which the ' Eroica ' was the test, was possibly the best of its sort ever known at a competitive festival. The marks allotted by Mr. Reed were :

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| ' Beethoven ' Orchestra (Cardiff) ... | 90 | Mond Orchestra ... | 84 |
| | | Porth ... | 83 |
| Mid-Rhondda ... | 88 | Afan ... | 80 |
| Merthyr ... | 86 | | |

Great numbers took part in the solo competitions. It is a peculiarity of the Eisteddfod (as compared with English competitive festivals) that professionals and quasi-professionals do not despise the prizes and the fame of a success at the festival; and, consequently, the true amateur is hardly in the running. Welshmen should ask themselves whether this is a desirable state of things. We certainly heard some distinguished performances in the finals, particularly by the men. Mr. D. J. Harries and Mr. Ben Jones both sang ' Der Doppelgänger ' really well in the baritone class. There was a strikingly fine bass, Mr. John Pennar Williams, who excited much interest with a performance of the Monologue from Act 2 of ' Boris Godounov.' The leading tenor, Mr. Emlyn Burns, was rather ' tight ' in production, but he might, one fancied, have the making of a first-class singer. Both he and the bass were giants.

There was a novel and interesting competition for pianist-composers. The award went to Mr. Mansel Thomas. A prize offered for a children's operetta was won by Mr. Haydn Morris, and Mr. H. Hughes won a prize for an orchestral fantasy.

The principal adjudicators were : Sir Henry Coward, Dr. David de Lloyd, Dr. Dan Protheroe, Dr. Hopkin Evans, Dr. David Evans, and Mr. W. H. Reed.

C.

ROME COPYRIGHT CONFERENCE: INADEQUATE BRITISH DELEGATION

A letter appeared in The Times of July 10 complaining that Britain's representation at the Rome Copyright Conference was totally inadequate compared with that of other countries. The signatories to the letter were Sir J. M. Barrie, President of the Incorporated Society of Authors, Playwrights, and Composers; Lord Gorell, Chairman of the Committee of Management of the Society; Arnold Bennett, John Galsworthy, John Masefield, G. Bernard Shaw, Messrs. Constable, Messrs. Longmans, Green, Messrs. Macmillan, Sir John Murray, Messrs. Thomas Nelson, and Humphrey S. Milford, Oxford University Press.

The British delegation, complained the signatories, in spite of requests addressed to the Board of Trade both by the Society of Authors and by the Publishers' Association, was composed merely of three Government officials who, however able in their own spheres, could not be considered in any sense to be representative of the persons most vitally interested in the results of the deliberations. Moreover, the chief delegate even of these was called away from Rome by our Government for an important portion of the sitting of the Convention. ' It is surely time,' they urged, ' that the British Government grasped the fact that literary property is a subject worthy of serious attention, and that its protection is essential to the country's welfare.'

Messrs. Chappell, in a letter to The Times of July 12, said that while no reflection was cast on the able and courteous gentlemen who represented Great Britain at the Conference, the fact remained that neither literature nor music had their claims presented in any sort of representative sense by the British Government.

According to Sir John Murray, Italy had twelve delegates and France and Germany ten each, compared with the three from Great Britain.

The Observer of Sunday, July 15, in a trenchant comment declared, ' By dispatching three officials to the Rome Conference on Copyright, the Government has maintained our national reputation for Philistinism. Other countries were represented by men of letters, or by authorities on the questions at issue, but our own Board of Trade disregarded the representations of the Society of Authors and the Publishers' Association. In France such conduct would have endangered a Government; but it does not appear to have disturbed our own House of Commons.'

There are a few vacancies (all voices) in the St. Martin-in-the-Fields Choral Society. Rehearsals on Wednesdays, 6.15 to 7.30. Apply to the hon. secretary, 6, St. Martin's Place, Trafalgar Square, W.C.2.

Music in Wales

ABERYSTWYTH.—A Musical and Dramatic Festival in connection with the Cardiganshire Federation of Women's Institutes took place at the College during the last week in July, in which parties from the institutes of neighbouring towns and villages assisted. Welsh folk-songs and part-songs were sung, and Welsh and English dramas were performed. In the absence of the Countess of Lisburne, Mrs. Stapleton presided, and said that they endeavoured to stimulate a greater love for music and drama throughout the Women's Institutes of the country, and were organizing competitions next year.

BARRY.—On July 19, as part of Barry's carnival week celebrations, a massed concert was given by the National Orchestra of Wales, conducted by Mr. Warwick Braithwaite, and a thousand Barry children, conducted by Mr. W. M. Williams. Orchestral items included the Overture to 'Tannhäuser,' selections from German's 'Merrie England,' and Tchaikovsky's 'Nut-Cracker' Suite. The school-children sang national airs and gave an exhibition of country dances, accompanied by the united orchestras of the Barry schools. Dancing on the green followed the concert.

BRIDGEND.—The annual meeting of the South Wales branch of the National Union of Organists' Associations took place at Nolton Church Institute, followed by an adjournment to St. Mary's Church, Nolton, where an organ recital was given by Miss Marjorie Fuller, assisted by Mr. Brinley Llewelyn (baritone) and Miss Eluned Leyshon (violin).

NEWTOWN (MONT.).—A Children's Festival took place in the County Pavilion on July 26, when songs and part-songs were sung by a massed choir composed of the children belonging to the elementary schools of the town and surrounding villages. An orchestra, representing a number of violin classes attached to the schools, played a number of special arrangements, including a Gavotte by Bach, Handel melodies, and Corelli's Sonata in F, besides accompanying the choristers in some of their songs and dances. Choral numbers included Mendelssohn's 'O for the wings of a dove,' Elgar's 'The Snow,' Sullivan's 'The long day closes,' and Walford Davies's 'Blow, wind, blow,' and instrumental solos were given by some of the young players. The conductors were Sir Walford Davies, Mr. Bumford Griffiths, and Miss Dilys Lodwick, the last-named having been chiefly responsible for the instrumental training.

Musical Notes from Abroad

THE BADEN-BADEN FESTIVAL

It must be admitted that the second Baden-Baden Festival, held on July 13-15, did not come up to the expectations of its many visitors. The ideals from which the Festival took birth are still in vigour, but actualities have borne too heavily upon them. Little comes of trying to force the pace of musical production, the tendency being rather to increase the output of poor work by musical amateurs. The three musicians who are responsible for the present Baden-Baden Festival—Paul Hindemith, Josef Haas, and Heinrich Burkhard—resolved to impose certain problems upon young composers who wished to compete for the honours of the Festival; so they ordered organ works and cantatas, with the object of reviving musical ways and means that had gone out of fashion. This put the composers in a difficult situation, for both organ works and cantatas live from a religious spirit which is not that of our epoch. What they could attain at the utmost was an artistic achievement based on new methods. Even that, however, was attained only by Philip Jarnach, who, fully conscious of what had been done in the past and of what had to be done in the future, has written a 'Romanzero' for organ both of masterly architecture and of a certain novelty in part-writing: a work that may be called romantic without sentimentality. All the other composers who devoted their efforts to organ works remained faithful to the Reger model, or could not even arrive at that. They obviously had composed, not spontaneously, but by effort.

In the case of the cantata, the difficulty appears even greater than in that of organ music. Cantata form is capable of so many interpretations that there would be an embarrassment of choice for a composer really penetrated with the religious spirit that gave birth to that form of composition. These composers, however, gave up creating in a churchly spirit. Taking a more general and worldly view of cantata form—even treating it as occasion for parody—they produced works in which many interesting details were to be found. The only one who followed his own inspiration was that Josef Matthias Hauer, who, at the Frankfort Festival, had won hearty applause by one of his symphonic pieces. This time he went back to some poems by Hölderlin, that unhappy German romantic poet who was so intimately connected with music. He calls his composition a chamber oratorio for stage or concert performance. A chamber orchestra, choir, and soloists are acting together or also against each other, for it is the pantheistic idea expressed by the poem that has to be translated into the language of music. Hauer, who, as a theorist, has never been taken very seriously, is certainly much better than his theory. Finding out by intuition the deepest sense of the poet's words, he renders it in a style interesting both from the melodic and the harmonic point of view. He brings about emotion in the audience. Hermann Scherchen conducted the work with that fervour of his own that proves so favourable to all that he performs. He is more than reproductive; he re-creates. Hauer is indebted to him for part of his great success.

Among the other works produced under the title of cantatas, Milhaud's 'The Return of the Lost Son,' to words by André Gide, was not free from monotony, partly owing to the character of the poem itself. But it was very interesting in its elements of style, the words having found their melodic counterpart as well as their instrumental interpretation. How far from Milhaud, who is known to be gay and witty, does Hugo Herrmann stand! Herrmann uses solemnity as a point of parody, availing himself of the old forms such as chaconne and fugue, for a treatment of verses by Christian Morgenstern, a German poet who gives a metaphysical sense to nonsense.

It is particularly in the field of opera that parody plays its best card. Woe to the operatic composer who dares to take sentiment seriously! Krenek, who timidly ventures into the romantic territory, is in risk of exclusion from the company of modern composers who count. They begin to abhor him, while imitating him. The short operas which were performed on the third evening, offered, indeed, some specimens of the daring spirit of sundry young composers. They are even daring enough to fall into amateurishness. Among them, however, we meet a certain Walter Gronostay, a Schönberg pupil who is on the way to give up his master's teaching and is gifted enough to find a way for himself, provided he cares to try. For the present, he holds a critical standpoint to all that embodies musical feeling, but in this more external attitude he knows how to express himself. He has written a one-Act opera called, 'In Ten Minutes,' but it takes him nearly forty minutes to carry out his ideas. His sense of the theatre brings him near to Ernst Krenek, whom he resembles in being his own poet. Of course, this composer of twenty-two is in the first stage of his artistic evolution. Being master of an idiom all too common in present-day music, he has to shake off the different influences that have formed his style.

That the one-Act opera can take on a serious character is proved by 'Saul.' Its composer, Hermann Reutter, seeking inspiration from a drama by A. Lernet-Holenia, succeeds in giving us a moving musical sketch. He catches the biblical king in the very moment of his visiting the Witch of Endor, whose prophecies fully deprive him of all hope of saving throne and life. Reutter has not in vain heard Alban Berg's 'Wozzeck.' But in one point he differs widely from Berg, for he is so sparing in his own contribution that he may be said to have written incidental music, though of greater value than the word implies in the emphasis that it gives to the great moments in the drama. It goes without saying that the artists who took part in these different operas had to be actors rather than singers.

The association of music with the film which had made its appearance last year, provided some interesting experiments. No doubt the Americanism that rules in the realm of moving pictures likewise makes itself felt in the music accompanying them. It must, however, be added, that some composers in this genre try to achieve an art work in miniature. Darius Milhaud, who has the expression of actuality at his finger-tips, gives the signal to other musicians who devote themselves to this task. Among them we find again Hugo Herrmann, playing out his formal mastership in machine-like movement; Ernst Toch, who proves very witty; and some others who are not able to run as fast as the film. The actuality of the latter seems to deride all the efforts of greater musicians.

ADOLF WEISSMANN.

HOLLAND

Eugène Goossens, who appeared in the dual capacity of conductor and composer at the eleventh concert of the 'International Cyclus' given by the Amsterdam Concertgebouw Orchestra, won a decided success, the public evidently enjoying itself, and the critics admitting his cleverness, though making the (to them) inevitable comparisons. 'A through and through romantic Pultvirtuoso,' was the description of one critic, 'who recalls many attitudes and gestures of Mahler's as represented in Böhler's silhouettes. But Goossens works more for effect than did his illustrious example.' The clash of temperament which appeared in the simple interpretation of the solo part of a Mozart Concerto by Elly Ney and Goossens's more 'worked' accompaniment caused adverse criticism, while his own 'Sinfonietta' was found to be moderately modern, not in any way romantic, 'extremely clever, but not very attractive in spite of its personal character.'

A bigger success both with public and critics was achieved by Rae Robertson and Ethel Bartlett, who played at the Scheveningen Kurhaus under Prof. Georg Schnéevoigt (with the Residentie Orchestra) Bach's Concerto in C minor, No. 2, for two pianofortes, and gave as an extra a short work by Couperin. Of novelties there have been only two items which fall strictly into this category, both by residents at The Hague. Alex Voormolen's 'Een Zomerlied, 1928,' dedicated to Schnéevoigt, is probably the best work, taking it all round, that he has yet written, certainly it is the most effective and original of his orchestral works. It owes less than any of its predecessors to the French influences to which the composer laid himself open in his later student days, and therefore is a more serious contribution to the growing corpus of Dutch national music.

Cæsar Hinderdael, a member of the orchestra, provided the second novelty in the form of a very pleasant Suite of 'Country Sketches in the Summer,' for oboe and orchestra, which he himself conducted, and the solo part of which was beautifully played by Jaap Stotijn. Stotijn also played magnificently in Haydn's Concerto in C major, which was admirably conducted by Ignaz Neumark. A couple of works for four 'cellos, by Jules de Swert and W. Fitzhagen, were an unusual but quite welcome item in one of the soloist concerts, and were played with perfect balance and a sense of style by four members of the orchestra—Messrs. C. van Isterdael, F. Zurhaar, W. Wegerif, and J. Bakker.

It is now definitely stated that Prof. Schnéevoigt will retire at the end of the present season, and will probably settle in America. Before he goes a special concert will be arranged with the usual social farewells. Another change in the musical life at The Hague will be brought about by the retirement of Prof. Richard Stronck from the directorship of the choral society 'Excelsior,' which will take place at the end of December. For the annual performance of the 'St. Matthew' Passion his place will be taken by Antoon Tierie, who, it is stated, will probably accept the permanent post which will be offered to him. The Italian Opera Company is busy making arrangements for the new season, which will open with a performance, the first in Holland, of Puccini's 'Turandot.'

HERBERT ANTCLIFFE.

VIENNA

THE 'SAENGERFEST'

For three or four days Vienna has been the scene for the assembly of more singers than have probably ever met anywhere at the same time. Approximately 150,000 of them gathered from Austria, Germany, Czecho-Slovakia, from the United States and the various overseas colonies—in short, from all countries where societies still exist for the cultivation of what the Germans call 'Männergesang.' The value of such gathering and singing is on the whole problematic from the musical point of view; it is a social affair rather than a serious musical function. Unfortunately, many people—especially foreigners—mistook these amiable social gatherings for a solemn Schubert Festival and for a matter seriously related to Vienna's musical life. Apart from such mental reservations, it was surely a thrilling, if not an artistically inspiring, spectacle, to see forty thousand singers assembled for a concert attended by as many hearers.

The one artistic event of the Festival was the first performance anywhere of Richard Strauss's latest choral composition, entitled 'Die Tageszeiten.' Strauss composed it for, and dedicated it to, 'the Schubert Bund, of Vienna, and its conductor, Victor Keldorfer,' who gave the first performance. It is a cycle of four songs for male choir, with orchestra, and is built on four poems by Josef von Eichendorff, the German poet who inspired so much of Hugo Wolf's finest lyric utterances. Strauss has created here four contrasting pieces of appealing simplicity of feeling—complex enough to rank them far above the usual Männerchor literature and close to a kind of symphony for human voices; yet sufficiently popular in vein and structure to make them useful to the amateur vocalist, and enjoyable to the lay listener. Beside the intricacies of 'Wanderer's Sturmlied,' Strauss's earlier effort in this realm, this music ranks as 'Ariadne auf Naxos' would rank beside 'Elektra': simpler, more transparent in construction and harmony, more serene in mood, the product of one who having coped with and solved many a self-posed problem, rests on the summit to look back upon a life replete with strife, and gather the sweet fruits of long experience. Not a 'new' Strauss, nor the Strauss of old; but the present one in his happiest mood.

BRITISH ARTISTS: THURSFIELD, COHEN, AND DAVIDSON

Amid the general and rightly bewailed deterioration of the Lieder style as it is to-day practised (not cultivated) in the German-speaking countries, it was a surprise and pleasure to hear a British singer undertake and carry through nobly the mission which her German fellow-artists neglect. I am speaking of Anne Thursfield, not a stranger at Vienna, but this time fully recognised at her real worth as a Lieder singer. She sings the complex and subtle mood-pictures of the great German song-writers with a perfection of style, a wealth of atmosphere, finesse of interpretation, and plasticity of diction which recall Lula Mysz Gmeiner and Julia Culp in their best days. Excellent, too, was the impression created by Malcolm Davidson, a British baritone who is at once a singer and a musician. Seriousness, intellect, taste, and artistry were the virtues which he disclosed at his debut, in addition to a fine, if not fully finished, voice. His musical and linguistic versatility were worthy of high praise, and a number of songs of his own workmanship were appealing and effective, though perhaps too uniform in mood. A third British artist who impressed us is Miss Harriet Cohen, a pianist of excellent technical equipment and, what is more important and rare, of emotional gifts and stylistic maturity.

THE SALZBURG FESTIVAL OPENS

The 1928 Salzburg Festival, or what has been seen of it at the time of writing, unrolls under less favourable circumstances than its predecessors. The introductory difficulties were those of former years: financial resources incommensurate with the high ambitions of the promoters, disinclination on the part of the Austrian State to subsidise the Festival scheme, and uncertainty, up to a short time before the scheduled date, as to its realisation. Ultimately again a Mæcenas was found to defray the cost for the furtherance of what is on solemn occasions referred to as the 'Festival Idea,' and less solemnly recognised as a means to attract international tourists.

Such is, of course, almost everywhere the motive of music and theatrical festivals in our time. But Salzburg, with its historical traditions and loftily expounded ideal dogma, should be particularly exacting as to its annual festival programmes. What we have sorely missed in former years is again, and more clearly, absent—a fundamental artistic plan and constructive ideas. It is easy, of course, to reproduce year after year the current Mozart performances of the Vienna Staatsoper and Max Reinhardt's current Viennese successes, trimming them with occasional new offerings—as, this year, Schiller's 'The Robbers'—and with the ever-present production of 'Everyman,' which has long lost its hold even on the Reinhardt enthusiasts, who have seen it for eight successive summers, with better casts and with costumes betraying less the wear and tear of time and use. In view of such offerings, one is inclined to doubt the wisdom of the celebrated men composing the 'advisory committee' (Richard Strauss, Franz Schalk, Hugo Hofmannsthal, and others), and understands their absence from at least the first half of a Festival which benefits from their illustrious names. Public attendance, too, has not been very large, and though many will, no doubt, come for Reinhardt's productions and the guest season of the Vienna Opera under Schalk and Bruno Walter later in the month, it will benefit 'tourism' rather than prove the artistic value of the much-proclaimed 'Festival Idea.'

A bow to history, inevitable in this country and quite appropriate, opened the musical portion of the Festival: Orazio Benevoli's Inauguration Mass, written for and first produced at the completion and dedication of Salzburg Cathedral. Gigantic in proportions, rich in polyphony, the work yet remains to our generation little more than a historical document not devoid of monotony and dryness. Conductor Messner acted wisely in interpolating two a cappella Motets by Buonamici and Bernardi, beautiful and far more durable music which made a welcome contrast.

RUSSIAN OPERA

The most interesting event at Salzburg this year has so far been the season of Russian opera given by Russian singers from Leningrad. Though somewhat haphazardly introduced into the Festival scheme, it was welcome as an innovation; and harassing as it proved for certain political circles, was promising from an artistic viewpoint. The Operatic Studio of the Leningrad Conservatory of Music had been described to us as the essence of the new Russian school of operatic interpretation.

Four works were produced: Mozart's 'Bastien and Bastienne,' as a compliment to the historical genius loci; Bernhard Paumgartner's comic opera, 'The Cave of Salamanca,' as a sop to contemporary Salzburg, where the composer-librettist of the piece acts as director of the Mozarteum Conservatory; and two Russian operas, 'The Guest of Stone,' by Alexander Sergeivitch Dargomijsky, and (in concert form) Rimsky-Korsakov's fairy-tale opera, 'Kachtchei the Immortal.' Paumgartner's opera had been performed previously in Germany. Its music is inspired by the two operatic idols of our generation, Richard Strauss and Giacomo Puccini. It is interesting for its form, that of a suite: Overture, Intermezzo, two Scherzos, a Finale, and an Epilogue follow each other—'absolute music,' as it were, applied to stage purposes. In keeping with its aim of being an opera buffa, it contains some pieces in archaic forms—Minuet, Sarabande, and Sicilienne.

The Russians play this work as a modernized, Russian-localised commedia dell' arte, with a witty, simple, modest scenery which cleverly makes a virtue of economic necessities. The actors are what we have come to expect of modern Russians: singers, actors, dancers, acrobats, and comedians all in one. They insist, however, on exhibiting their many talents at every moment; they skip, jump, dance, and are acrobatic with a determined hilarity which their efforts do not always impart to the audience. This makes for a certain strained humour, a laboured buoyancy. The 'collective' dogma excludes 'stardom'; this troupe goes further still—they are comrades in a common cause, taking in turn big, small, even mute rôles, and not shunning that of the stage 'super.' They shift a creaking wall, and a garden is changed into a room—at least we are presumed to see it that way. For awhile one enjoys such witty application of the Primitive Principle. After thirty minutes of determined amusement, one begins to reflect that opera, by history and necessity, is a thing of illusion, splendour, and display. One feels that above all here at Salzburg, with its baroque landscape, traditions, and historical associations.

Strangest of all, the mimic style of these avowed innovators goes straight back to Wagner. There is hardly a phrase or figure in the orchestra that is not immediately and painstakingly transformed into a motion, or step, by the actors. It does not, somehow, match with the 'abstraction' that these Russians preach. There is a logical break somewhere.

'Bastien and Bastienne' was awaited with fear and misgivings. There were rumours of expected demonstrations, but Emanuel Kaplan, the stage director, avoided them with a conciliatory prologue and an apologetic epilogue which gracefully credited Mozart with the merits, and incidentally burdened him with the responsibility for the shortcomings, of the production. Kaplan promised '20th-century Mozart,' and attempted it with strange means. He showed us Mozart, and at the same time a parody on him and the operatic species. The stage director walked on and off the stage, giving cues and carrying on 'props'; diligent promptors were constantly in evidence; and six young ladies, quaintly dressed as the prima donna's suitors, climbed on to the stage from the audience to accompany her arias with visible signs of delight and admiration. Meanwhile stage hands, with stately miens portentously marched about the stage to adjust the setting, and the protagonists retired at leisure moments to their dressing-tables (visibly placed near the wings) to improve their make-up. There was continual life and bustle; it was all excruciatingly funny and determinedly original, but the spirit of Mozart's rococo little opera was completely destroyed. The basic idea was, of course, 'anti-romanticism' on one side, and, on the other, to obliterate the boundaries of time and locality, to achieve what heretofore had been the privilege of the cinema alone—simultaneous realisation of parallel actions. The experiment is interesting, and may bear fruit, but it remains doubtful whether a big international Festival should be the scene for experiments as yet untried and not perfectly realised. Above all, is Mozart a suitable object for such attempts?

Classic Russian opera was represented by Dargomijsky's 'The Guest of Stone,' a literal setting of Pushkin's drama, and the first attempt to clothe the Don Juan theme in Spanish colours. The piece, written throughout in an idiom approaching the Wagnerian 'Sprechgesang,' is beautiful in portions, but conventional throughout. Compared with 'Boris Godounov,' its junior by only five years, this sixty-year-old opera wears badly. Dargomijsky left it a fragment—the fate of so many Russian operas of that period; César Cui completed it, and Rimsky-Korsakov, that experienced doctor of unfinished operas, orchestrated it. Here, on classic grounds, the Russian singers turned into classically-trained artists, free from laboured modernism and violent innovations; and they became excellent concert singers for the concert performance of Rimsky's 'Kachtchei,' based on Russian folk-stories and appropriately set to music in a corresponding idiom. Among the singers there were many beautiful voices, though they were not all perfectly trained.

Paul Bechert.

Obituary

We regret to record the following deaths:

William Henry Grattan Flood, at Enniscorthy, on August 6. He was born at Lismore in 1859. Musical talent showed itself early, and while still in his 'teens, he was appointed organist of St. Peter's Pro-Cathedral, Belfast. Subsequently he became professor at various Colleges, and organist at Monaghan Cathedral and Thurles Cathedral. For a time he was conductor of the d'Oyly Carte Opera Company, and he was also bandmaster of the 104th Regiment, being the last civilian Army bandmaster in Ireland. In 1895 he became organist of Enniscorthy Cathedral, a post he retained until his death. It is, however, as a writer on musical subjects that he was most widely known. Many books came from his ever-ready pen: 'The History of Irish Music,' 'The Story of the Harp,' 'The Story of the Bagpipe,' 'John Field,' 'Early Tudor Composers,' &c. He wrote many articles for such works as 'Grove,' the 'Dictionary of National Biography,' the 'Catholic Encyclopædia,' &c. The list of the British and foreign periodicals to which he contributed is too long to be given—if, indeed, it could be compiled. Inevitably, musical journals attracted him, and to the Musical Times especially he was a constant and highly-esteemed contributor. For many years he acted as Irish correspondent, and maintained a steady stream of informative articles, Letters to the Editor, and notes on a great variety of subjects, especially those of an antiquarian type. Many honours came to him. In 1907 the National University of Ireland conferred on him the honorary degree of Doctor of Music. In 1917 he received from the Pope the Cross Pro Ecclesia et Pontifice. The title of Chevalier was given to him in 1922; and he had previously been created a Knight of St. Gregory. His compositions were numerous, and were mainly for Church use. By his death, which occurred after only a few days' illness, the musical world has lost an indefatigable and versatile worker, and a man of great personal charm. To his widow and family we tender our sincere sympathy—an expression in which we are sure many of our readers will join.

Leos Janacek, the well-known Czech composer, during August, at Prague. He was born in July, 1854, at Hukvaldy, in Northern Moravia, where his father was the village schoolmaster. His first teacher was the monk-composer Krizkovsky, but the greater part of his musical education was received at the Organists' School, Prague. On his return to Moravia, he was appointed professor at the Normal School for Teachers at Brno, which post he retained for the greater part of his life. In 1881 he founded at Brno a School of Organists, which in 1918 became the State Conservatory of Music. A prolific composer, Janacek drew most of his material from folk-song. Of his operas the most successful is 'Jenufa,' which has been widely performed in Europe, and also at New York.

H. Godfrey Turner, suddenly, at Whitefield, N.H., on July 27, aged sixty-eight. Born in London (he was son of the late Godfrey Turner, of the Daily Telegraph), he began his career as a theatrical manager, his first important enterprise in connection with music being his management of the first British tour of Sousa's Band. Maud Powell, his first wife, was soloist to the band, and Turner became her manager, continuing to act in that capacity till his death. He had lived in America for many years.

Miscellaneous

The senior prize at the London Violoncello School has been awarded to Joan Mulholland, of the Royal Academy of Music; and the junior prize to Doris Rickelman, of London. A three-years' scholarship, open to children under fifteen years of age, will be competed for in September. Particulars from the Secretary, 10, Nottingham Place, W.1.

The Marlborough (Wilts) Choral Society's Summer Concert consisted of madrigals by Edwards, de Lassus, Morley, Ellis, and Orlando Gibbons, &c.; and part-songs by Lawes, Cooke, Ivimey, and Hatton, conducted by Mr. Francis J. Hill. The Marlborough Country Dancing Association were guests, and contributed English folk-dances.

Mr. Charles Winterbottom had the honour of being received by His Majesty The King on July 25, and was presented with the Royal Victorian Medal.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

Charges for Advertisements:—

| | £ | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Two Lines ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 3 | 0 |
| Three Lines ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 3 | 4 |
| For every additional Line ... ... ... | 0 | 0 | 10 |
| One inch (displayed) ... ... ... ... | 0 | 10 | 0 |
| Half a Column... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 | 0 |
| A Column ... ... ... ... ... | 4 | 0 | 0 |
| A Page ... ... ... ... ... ... | 7 | 10 | 0 |

Special Pages (Cover, &c.) by arrangement.

A remittance should be sent with every Advertisement.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

To insure insertion in their proper positions, Advertisements for the next issue should reach the Office, 160, Wardour Street, London, W.1, not later than

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 19 (First Post).

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| The Stravinsky Legends. By Leonid Sabaneev ... ... ... | 785 |
| Poetry, Song, and Schubert.—II. By Mrs. Frank Liebich ... | 787 |
| The Unwanted Pianoforte Solo. By Alexander Brent-Smith ... | 788 |
| Ad Libitum. 'Hats off, Gentlemen!' By 'Feste' ... ... | 789 |
| Bayreuth. July 19-26, 1928. A Traveller's Notes ... | 793 |
| New Light on Late Tudor Composers. XXXVII.—Richard Allison. By W. H. Grattan Flood ... ... ... ... ... | 795 |
| A Talk with Alfred Hollins. By Harvey Grace ... ... ... | 796 |
| Wireless Notes. By 'Ariel' ... ... ... ... ... ... | 799 |
| New Music ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 801 |
| The Musicians' Bookshelf ... ... ... ... ... ... | 812 |
| Gramophone Notes. By 'Discus' ... ... ... ... ... | 813 |
| Music in the Foreign Press. By M.-D. Calvocoressi ... ... | 816 |
| Imperial League of Opera ... ... ... ... ... ... | 821 |
| Teachers' Department: Points from Lectures ... ... ... | 822 |
| Easy Pianoforte Music ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 823 |
| Answers to Correspondents ... ... ... ... ... ... | 823 |
| Church and Organ Music... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 824 |
| Royal College of Organists: Annual General Meeting ... ... | 824 |
| Letters to the Editor ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 829 |
| British Federation of Musical Competition Festivals ... ... | 834 |
| The Amateurs' Exchange ... ... ... ... ... ... | 835 |
| Sydney (N.S.W.) Philharmonic Society ... ... ... ... | 835 |
| Sixty Years Ago ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 835 |
| Sharps and Flats ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 835 |
| Music in Public Schools ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 836 |
| Union of Graduates in Music Incorporated ... ... ... ... | 837 |
| School of English Church Music ... ... ... ... ... | 837 |
| Organists' Long Service Roll of Honour ... ... ... ... | 837 |
| Some of the Less-known Songs of Schubert ... ... ... | 839 |
| London Concerts ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 840 |
| The Welsh National Eisteddfod ... ... ... ... ... | 841 |
| Rome Copyright Conference: Inadequate British Delegation ... | 842 |
| Music in Wales ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 843 |
| Musical Notes from Abroad ... ... ... ... ... ... | 843 |
| Obituary ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 846 |
| Miscellaneous ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 846 |

MUSIC.

| | |
|---|---|
| "I vow to Thee, my Country." Song for Unison Massed Voices. By Geoffrey Shaw ... ... ... ... ... ... | 817 |

EXTRA SUPPLEMENTS given with this number:

1. Portrait of Alfred Hollins.
2. Bridal Song. Trio for Female Voices (S.S.A.). By Edgar L. Bainton.

DURING THE LAST MONTH

Published by NOVELLO & CO., LIMITED

ACKERNLEY, MABEL.—"Sunset Dreams." Song. 2s.

BAINTON, EDGAR L.—"Bridal Song." Trio for Female Voices (S.S.A.). (No. 524, Novello's Octavo Edition of Trios.) 4d.

BOYD, REV. W.—"Fight the good fight." Hymn (No. 1152, Parish Choir Book.) 1½d.

BULLOCK, ERNEST. — "O worship the King." Anthem for Harvest. (No. 1154, Novello's 8vo Anthems.) 4d.

CRIPPS, A. R.—"O Mistress Mine." Song. 2s.

HARWOOD, BASIL. — "Ye Choirs of New Jerusalem." Motet for Chorus, Organ, and Orchestra. 1s.

KINGSTON, MATTHEW. — "Come to me, O ye children." Song. 2s.

—— "If any little word of mine." Children's Hymn. 2d.

—— "We are coming, gentle Jesus." Children's Hymn. 2d.

MASE, OWEN.—"Pretty Phyllis." Song. 2s.

PICKARD-CAMBRIDGE, W. A.—Six Songs. For a Low or Middle Voice.

1. "Nay, but you who do not love her."
2. "Come, Sleep, and with thy sweet deceiving."
3. "Drop, drop, slow tears."
4. "I sat with love upon a woodside well."
5. "Charm me asleep, and melt me so."
6. "The splendour falls on castle walls."

} 4s.

DURING THE LAST MONTH—continued.

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW, No. 435, contains the following music in both notations. "O! Willow, Willow." (Unison.) Early English. "Summer and Winter." (Two-part.) C. V. Stanford, arr. by H. A. C. 2d.

SCHOOL SONG SERIES.—Published in two forms. A. Voice Parts in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations, with Pianoforte Accompaniment (8vo). B. Voice Parts only, in Tonic Sol-fa Notation.

| | | A. | B. |
|---|---|---|---|
| No. 1506. | "The King of Thule." (Unison.) HECTOR BERLIOZ ... ... | 3d. | — |
| ,, 1507. | "If I had any money." (Unison.) CECIL SHARMAN ... ... ... | 2d. | — |
| ,, 1508. | "The Coalman." (Unison.) CECIL SHARMAN .. ... | 3d. | — |
| ,, 1509. | "When cats run home." (Two-part.) A. HERBERT BREWER | — | 2d. |
| ,, 1510. | "Song of the waters." (Two-part.) G. RATHBONE ... | — | 3d. |
| ,, 1511. | "If I had but two little wings." (Two-part.) C. HUBERT H. PARRY ... ... ... | — | 3d. |
| ,, 1512. | "O who will o'er the downs." (Unison with optional Descant.) R. L. DE PEARSALL, arr. H. A. C. ... ... ... | 2d. | — |
| ,, 1515. | "The little Spinner." (Unison.) MOZART ... ... ... | 2d. | — |
| ,, 1516. | "Lonely am I now no longer." From "Preciosa." (Unison.) C. M. VON WEBER ... ... | 2d. | — |
| ,, 1519. | "I'll sail upon the Dog-star." From "The Fool's Preferment." HENRY PURCELL ... | 2d. | — |

SHAW, GEOFFREY.—"I vow to thee, my country." Song for Unison Massed Voices. (No. 1027, The Musical Times.) 3d.

TILTMAN, HENRY. — "The Calendar Astray." Song. 2s.

—— "The Mystic's Prayer." Song. 2s.

TONIC SOL-FA SERIES:

No. 2565. "The Miller's Wooing." A Choral Ballad. EATON FANING. Arr. as a Trio for S.S.C. by JOHN POINTER 4d.

WEATHERDON, H. B.—"Meditation" for the Organ. 1s. 6d.

WHITAKER, W.—"Diaphenia." Song. 2s.

WHITE, FELIX. — "The Laughing Cavalier." Song. 2s.

PUBLISHED FOR

THE H. W. GRAY CO., NEW YORK

KRAFT, W. J.—"Assurance." Sacred Song for Middle Voice. 50 cents (2s.).

LEVENSON, B.—"Hide me under the shadow of Thy wings." Anthem. (No. 949, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.).

MACKINNON, H. A.—"Ballad of Saint Stephen." Carol for Men's Voices. (No. 946, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.).

—— "I saw three ships." Carol for Mixed Voices. (No. 945, Church Music Review.) 15 cents (8d.).

PEERY, R. R.—"O praise the Lord." Anthem for General Use. (No. 941, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.).

"SIMPLEXA" FINGER TRAINER

(Registered No. 692810)

FOR ALL INSTRUMENTALISTS

A simple and very effective appliance for giving strength and flexibility to the fingers.
Recommended by Editor of the Musical Times.

IMPROVED MODEL
Price 2*s.* 6*d.*; postage and packing, 3*d.*

BYEWAYS, CLIFF ROAD, SEABROOK, HYTHE, KENT

Guide to A.R.C.M. and other Exams.

IN PIANOFORTE TEACHING.
2nd Edition, enlarged.
By ARTHUR FILLINGHAM, A.R.C.M.
96, The Crescent, Roundhay, Leeds.
"Candidates want advice of this kind."—Musical Herald.
"A handy brochure; gives a clear idea of what is expected."—Musical Record.
"Most original and encouragingly helpful."—J. H. Thomas, Esq., L.R.A.M. AND MANY OTHERS. 2*s.* 6*d.*

YOUNG SINGERS
Their Voice Cultivation and Preservation.

A concise, comprehensive, up-to-date guide to all engaged in teaching voice-production, enunciation, and singing to boys and girls

By JAMES BATES

To be obtained from :—
MESSRS. STAINER & BELL, 58, Berners Street, London, W.1.

Price One Shilling and Twopence, post free.

PLAYER ORGAN, built by Messrs. H. Willis & Sons, Ltd. Open Diapason, 8-ft.; Lieblich bourdon, 16-ft.; Cor do Nuit, 8-ft.; Gamba, 8-ft.; Voix Celestes, 8-ft.; Flute d'Amour, 8-ft.; Orchestral Horn, 8-ft.; Vox Humana, 8-ft. Tremulant, three Couplers. Case in fumed oak. Built 1924. Electric blower. All complete; can be seen any time. Cost £1,500; nearest offer, £550. J. Speight, Moor House, Rishton, Lancs.

MARGARET YOUNG, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L. Registered, Pianoforte, Singing, Theory. Personal or Postal Coaching. General Musical Advice. Bawburgh, Norwich.

GENUINE SMALL-SIZE 'CELLO FOR SALE, by Richard Duke. Price £20, or near offer. "M. B. Y.," 46, Hillcrest Avenue, N.12.

MSS. PUBLISHED FREE. 2*s.* Song sent if 3*d.* enclosed for packing, &c. "H.B.I." Service, 8, Laburnum Road, Farnworth, Lancs.

AN ORGAN RECITAL will be given by Herbert Walton, Esq., of Glasgow Cathedral, at St. Columba's Church of Scotland, Pont Street, S.W., on Tuesday, October 2nd, at 8.15 p.m.

No. 103.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS AND EDUCATIONAL SERIES

THE ART OF PIANOFORTE PRACTISING

WITH AN APPENDIX ON

LEGATO-PEDALLING

BY

C. EGERTON LOWE

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED

JOHN GILPIN

POEM BY

WILLIAM COWPER

SET FOR FEMALE (OR BOYS') VOICES IN UNISON
(Second Part Optional)

WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT
(Two Violins and Percussion Optional)

BY

COLIN TAYLOR

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

NOVELLO'S EDITIONS
OF THE ## FAVOURITE OPERAS, ADAPTED FOR ## CONCERT USE

BALFE.
*THE BOHEMIAN GIRL.
Price 3s.

BIZET.
*CARMEN.
Price 3s. Tonic Sol-fa, 2s.

DONIZETTI.
*THE DAUGHTER OF THE REGIMENT.
Price 3s.

FLOTOW.
*MARTHA.
Price 3s.

GOUNOD.
*FAUST.
Price 2s. Tonic Sol-fa, 1s. 6d.

PURCELL.
KING ARTHUR.
Price 2s. 6d.

VERDI.
*IL TROVATORE.
Price 3s. Tonic Sol-fa, 1s. 6d.

WAGNER.
TANNHÄUSER.
Price 3s.

WALLACE.
MARITANA.
Price 3s.

Orchestral Parts for Reduced Orchestra may be obtained from the Publishers.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

NOVELLO'S EDITIONS

ORGAN VOLUNTARIES

BASED ON POPULAR HYMN TUNES

ADAMS, THOMAS
Short Fantasia on 'Abridge' (No. 16, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6
Short Fantasia on 'Veni, Creator Spiritus' (No. 46, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

BEST, WILLIAM T.
Preludes on the tunes 'London,' 'Halifax,' and 'St. Bride' (Bk. 3, Best's Collection of Pieces)... ... 3 0

CALKIN, J. BAPTISTE
Study on Pleyel's Hymn (No. 4, Calkin's Compositions) ... ... 3 0

DARKE, HAROLD E.
Three Choral Preludes:
'St. Peter'
'Darwell's 148th'
Theme by Tallis
(No. 60, Original Compositions) (New Series) 3 6

FAULKES, WILLIAM
Alleluya, Festal Prelude on the tune 'Lasst uns erfreuen' (No. 110, Original Compositions) (New Series) ... ... ... ... ... 1 6
Fantasia on the old melody 'Urbs beata' (No. 379, Original Compositions) ... ... 1 6
Festival Prelude on 'Ein' feste Burg' (No. 3, Original Compositions) (New Series) 2 0

HIGGS, HENRY M.
Variations on the tune 'Heinlein' (No. 44, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

LÉFÉBURE-WÈLY, L. J. A.
Processional Hymn, 'Adoro te' (No. 6, 'The Modern Organist') ... ... 3 0

LEMARE, EDWIN H.
Concert Fantasia on the tune 'Hanover' (No. 4, Lemare's Original Compositions)... 4 6

MACFARREN, GEORGE A.
Variations on the tune 'Windsor' (No. 81, Original Compositions) ... ... 1 6

MORGAN, THOMAS J.
Fantasia on the tune 'Twrgwyn' (No. 66, Original Compositions) (New Series) 2 0

PARRY, C. HUBERT H.
Seven Chorale Preludes (1st Set):
'Dundee' 'Melcombe'
'Rockingham' 'Christe, Redemptor omnium'
'Hampton'
'Old 104th' 'St. Ann's'
(No. 1, Original Compositions) (New Series) 5 6

PARRY, C. HUBERT H. (continued)
Seven Chorale Preludes (2nd Set):
'Croft's 136th' 'St. Mary'
'Martyrdom' 'Eventide'
'St. Thomas' 'St. Cross'
'Hanover'
(No. 45, Original Compositions) (New Series) 5 6

PYE, JAMES T.
Introductory Voluntary on the Russian Hymn (No. 446, Original Compositions) ... ... 1 6

SILAS, EDWARD
Fantasia on 'St. Ann's' tune (No. 14, Silas's Original Compositions) ... 2 0

SPARK, WILLIAM
Jerusalem the Golden, with Variations and Finale ... ... ... ... ... 2 0

STEPHENS, CHARLES E.
Concluding Voluntary or Fantasia on the Chorale 'St. Mary' or 'Hackney' (No. 13, Original Compositions) ... ... 1 6
Fantasia on Choral 'St. James's' (No. 260, Original Compositions) ... ... 2 0

THORNE, EDWARD H.
Variations on the tune 'St. Luke' (No. 306, Original Compositions) ... ... 3 0

WALLACE, JAMES E.
Chorale Fantasia on the tune 'Heinlein' (No. 75, Original Compositions) (New Series) 3 0

WEST, JOHN E.
Prelude on Dykes's tune 'Requiescat' (No. 37, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6
Three Chorale Preludes:
'Winchester New'
'Burford'
'St. Michael'
(No. 47, Original Compositions) (New Series) 3 6
Improvisation on Schultz's tune 'We plough the fields' (No. 43, 'The Village Organist') 1 6
Prelude on Sullivan's tune 'We are but strangers here' (No. 37, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6
Prelude on Dykes's tune 'Now the labourer's task is o'er' (No. 37, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

WOODS, F. CUNNINGHAM
Variations on Elvey's tune 'Come, ye thankful people, come' (No. 43, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

HARVEST FESTIVAL MUSIC

CANTATAS

A GOLDEN HARVEST

FOR TENOR AND BASS SOLI AND CHORUS
WITH HYMNS TO BE SUNG BY THE CONGREGATION

THE WORDS AND HYMNS SELECTED AND WRITTEN BY
H. KNIGHT

THE MUSIC BY
THOMAS ADAMS

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.; Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

THE RAINBOW OF PEACE

FOR TENOR AND BASS SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORGAN

THE MUSIC BY
THOMAS ADAMS

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.
Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

HARVEST-TIDE

FOR TENOR AND BASS SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORGAN OR SMALL ORCHESTRA

THE MUSIC BY
HUGH BLAIR

Price One Shilling and Sixpence; Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.
Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.
Full Score and Orchestral Parts can be hired.

HARVEST CANTATA

FOR CHORUS, SEMI-CHORUS, AND ORGAN

THE WORDS SELECTED AND WRITTEN BY
J. F. WALLER

THE MUSIC BY
G. M. GARRETT

Price One Shilling and Sixpence. Tonic Sol-fa, 8d.
Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100; or with Music to the Hymns, 12s. 6d. per 100.
Full Score and Orchestral Parts can be hired.

RUTH

FOR SOPRANO, CONTRALTO, AND BASS SOLI AND CHORUS

THE WORDS BY
E. OXENFORD

THE MUSIC BY
ALFRED R. GAUL

Price Three Shillings.
Paper boards, Four Shillings; Cloth, Six Shillings.
Tonic Sol-fa, 1s. Choruses only, 1s. 6d. Book of Words, 6s. 6d. per 100.
Full Score and Orchestral Parts can be hired.

HARVEST CANTATA

FOR SOPRANO (OR TENOR) AND CONTRALTO (OR BARITONE) SOLI AND CHORUS

THE WORDS BY
R. D. BETJEMANN

THE MUSIC BY
JULIUS HARRISON

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.; Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

SONG OF THANKSGIVING

FOR SOPRANO, TENOR, AND BASS (OR CONTRALTO) SOLI AND CHORUS.
WITH HYMNS TO BE SUNG BY THE CONGREGATION

THE WORDS WRITTEN AND ARRANGED BY
S. WENSLEY

THE MUSIC BY
J. H. MAUNDER

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence:
Paper boards, Three Shillings and Sixpence.
Tonic Sol-fa, 1s.; Words only, 12s. 6d. per 100;
String Parts, price 13s. 6d.; Wind Parts, 21s. 5d.; Full Score, MS.

THE JUBILEE CANTATA

FOR SOLO VOICES, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

THE MUSIC BY
C. M. WEBER

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.
Paper boards, Two Shillings and Sixpence.
Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.
String Parts, 12s.; Wind Parts, 9s. 8d.; Full Score on hire.

SEED-TIME AND HARVEST

FOR SOPRANO AND TENOR SOLI AND CHORUS

THE MUSIC BY
JOHN E. WEST

Price Three Shillings. Tonic Sol-fa, 1s. 6d.
Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100; or 3d. each with Music to the Hymns.
Orchestral Parts can be hired.

A HARVEST SONG

FOR SOPRANO SOLO AND CHORUS

THE WORDS BY
J. BENNETT

THE MUSIC BY
C. LEE WILLIAMS

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence.
Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.
String Parts, 9s. 9d.; Full Score and Wind Parts, MS.

HYMNS AND CAROLS.

BARNBY, J.—Come, ye thankful people, come ... ... ... 1½d.
Harvest-tide thanksgiving, The. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... 3d.
Words only, per 100 2s.
Let all our brethren join in one ... ... ... ... ... 1½d.
Words only, per 100 3s.
Lord of the harvest, Thee we hail (Two Versions) ... each 3d.
O Lord of heaven and earth and sea ... ... ... ... 1½d.
Praise, O praise, our God and King ... ... ... ... 3d.
Sing to the Lord a joyful song ... ... ... ... ... 3d.
Sower went forth sowing, The. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... 2d.
BUNNETT, ED.—Sing to the Lord a joyful song ... ... 1½d.
CRAMENT, J. M.—Sowing and reaping (Carol)
Words only, per 100 2s.
DYKES, J. B.—Holy is the seed-time ... ... ... ... 2d.
Words only, per 100 3s.
GILBERT, B.—Come, ye thankful people, come ... ... 1½d.
HARVEY, W. C.—We thank Thee, Lord, for this fair earth (Children's voices) (Staff and Sol-fa Notations) ... ... 1½d.
HERVEY, F. A. J.—Make melody within your hearts (Carol) 2d.
KETÈLBEY, A. W.—God with plenty fills the hours ... ... 4d.
LEE, T.—King and Ruler of Creation ... ... ... ... 4d.
LOWE, A.—Holy is the seed-time (Carol) ... ... ... 2d.
Words only, per 100 3s.
MAUNDER, J. H.—Harvest Hymn of praise, A. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... 3d.
Words only, per 100 3s.
Joy of Harvest, The. (Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d.) ... ... ... 3d.
Words only, per 100 3s.
STIRLING, E.—Now Autumn strews on every plain ... ... 3d.
TOZER, F.—Lord of the rich and golden grain ... ... ... 3d.
Words only, per 100 3s.
TWELVE HYMNS selected from The Hymnary ... ... 1½d.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NOVELLO'S HARVEST ANTHEMS
SELECTED LIST

O WORSHIP THE KING. By ERNEST BULLOCK
Price Fourpence.

THOMAS ADAMS
ALL THY WORKS PRAISE THEE
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

IT IS A GOOD THING TO GIVE THANKS
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

W. G. ALCOCK
GIVE EAR, O YE HEAVENS
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

E. C. BAIRSTOW
I WILL GREATLY REJOICE
Price Fourpence.

J. BARNBY
THE EYES OF ALL WAIT UPON THEE
Price Twopence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

HUGH BLAIR
OH, BRING TO THE LORD
Price Fourpence.

A. HERBERT BREWER
LET THE PEOPLE PRAISE THEE
Price Threepence.

EDWARD BUNNETT
BLESSED BE THOU, LORD GOD
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

O CLAP YOUR HANDS
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

PERCY C. BUCK
GOD BE MERCIFUL UNTO US
For Boys' Voices.
Price Fourpence.

H. A. CHAMBERS
IF YE WALK IN MY STATUTES
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

EDWARD ELGAR
FEAR NOT, O LAND
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

PERCY E. FLETCHER
LET THE PEOPLE PRAISE THEE
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

ALFRED R. GAUL
O BE JOYFUL IN THE LORD
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

A. M. GOODHART
LET US NOW FEAR THE LORD
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

CUTHBERT HARRIS
AND GOD SAID
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

SING A SONG OF PRAISE
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

ALFRED HOLLINS
GOD THE ALL-FATHERLY
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

ALBERT LOWE
THE EARTH IS THE LORD'S
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

ARTHUR W. MARCHANT
I WILL MAGNIFY THEE
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

GEORGE C. MARTIN
THUS SAITH THE LORD GOD
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

GEORGE RATHBONE
EVERY GOOD GIFT
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

J. VARLEY ROBERTS
BLESS THE LORD THY GOD
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

I WILL MAGNIFY THEE
Price Fourpence.

F. W. WADELY
PRAISE, O PRAISE OUR GOD
Price Threepence.

HERBERT W. WAREING
THE LORD GOD PLANTED A GARDEN
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

HAROLD E. WATTS
THE GOD OF ABRAHAM PRAISE
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

JOHN E. WEST
PRAISE TO GOD, IMMORTAL PRAISE
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

FATHER OF MERCIES, GOD OF LOVE
Arranged for Boys' or Female Voices.
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

W. WOLSTENHOLME
O THAT MEN WOULD PRAISE THE LORD
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

"Such settings as these cannot do otherwise than tend to popularise the Church Service."—Musical Standard, June 6, 1891.
"Good, effective, easy, and dignified."—Musical Times, April 1, 1891.
"Admirably adapted to meet the requirements of the majority of choirs and congregations." "Deserve extensive recognition and use."—Musical News, September 4 and 25, 1891.
Also recommended by the Guardian, Church Times, &c., &c.

POPULAR CHURCH MUSIC
BY
J. H. MAUNDER

| | Staff Notation. | Tonic Sol-fa. |
|---|---|---|
| HARVEST ANTHEMS. | | |
| Sing to the Lord of Harvest | 4d. | 3d. |
| While the earth remaineth | 4d. | 3d. |
| Blessed be the Name of the Lord | 4d. | 3d. |
| SERVICES | | |
| SERVICE IN G | 2s. | 1s. 4d. |
| Or, separately:— | | |
| Te Deum | 4d. | 3d. |
| Benedicite, omnia Opera | 3d. | 3d. |
| Benedictus | 3d. | 3d. |
| Jubilate | 4d. | 3d. |
| Office for the Holy Communion | 10d. | 8d. |
| Pater Noster from the above | 3d. | 3d. |
| Amen ditto | 1½d. | 1½d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis | 4d. | 3d. |
| SERVICE IN CHANT FORM (No. 1) | 1s. 4d. | 10d. |
| Or, separately:— | | |
| Te Deum, &c., with Kyrie | 4d. | 3d. |
| Office for the Holy Communion | 8d. | 6d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis | 4d. | 3d. |
| Te Deum in B flat | 4d. | 3d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in C (partly Unison) | 4d. | 2d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in D | 4d. | 3d. |
| ORGAN. | | |
| Voix Seraphique (for Recitals) | 2s. 6d. | — |
| CHURCH CANTATA. | | |
| Penitence, Pardon, and Peace (for general use) | 2s. | 1s. 4d. |

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

JUST PUBLISHED.

GOD WITHIN
MOTET
FOR CHORUS, ORCHESTRA, AND ORGAN
Composed for the 274th Festival of the Sons of the Clergy
BY
A. HERBERT BREWER
PRICE ONE SHILLING.
London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED
O LORD, SUPPORT US
ANTHEM
BY
R. WALKER ROBSON.
PRICE THREEPENCE; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.
London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

New "YEAR BOOK PRESS" Publications

UNISON SONGS 7. THREE-PART SONGS 2.
TWO-PART SONGS 4. FOUR-PART SONGS 2.
CHURCH MUSIC 5. INSTRUMENTAL 3.
All these are just ready. Approval parcels, Post Free.
H. F. W. DEANE & SONS, THE YEAR BOOK PRESS, LTD., 31, MUSEUM STREET, LONDON, W.C.1.

TEXT-BOOKS
BY
ALBERT HAM, MUS. DOC., F.R.C.O.

OUTLINES OF MUSICAL FORM
WITH ANALYSES FROM
WELL-KNOWN CLASSICAL WORKS.
Price ... Five Shillings.
"In all respects this is an admirable little work, with no waste, no hiatus of a serious nature, handy in size, and with a practical scheme well carried through."—Musical Times.
DR. C. W. PEARCE, in alluding to the above work, says:
"Quite the best I have ever seen, and I shall lose no opportunity for recommending it."

THE RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC AND ELEMENTARY HARMONY.
THIRD EDITION.
Price ... Five Shillings.
"Dr. Ham's admirable little work may be cordially recommended."—Musical Times.

THE SOLITUDES OF THE PASSION
A PASSIONTIDE CANTATA.
For Solo Voices (Tenor and Baritone) and Chorus, with Hymns for Choir and Congregation.
Price 2s. Words only, 12s. 6d. per 100.
"A useful addition to the store of choral works for use in Lent and Passiontide is Dr. Albert Ham's Cantata, 'The Solitudes of the Passion.' The words are Biblical and well selected. The music is devotional and very singable."—Musical Times.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| MINUET AND TRIO FOR ORGAN | 2 | 0 |
| PEDAL AND MANUAL SCALES AND ARPEGGIOS | 2 | 6 |
| ANTHEMS: The desert shall rejoice. S. or T. Solo and Chorus (S.A.T.B.) | 0 | 3 |
| I heard the Voice of Jesus say. Bar. Solo and Chorus (T.T.B.B.) | 0 | 4 |
| PART-SONG: Music, when soft voices die (S.A.T.B.) | 0 | 3 |

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JOSEPH WILLIAMS LIMITED

THE SINGING-CLASS TEACHER
(HIS PRINCIPLES AND METHODS)
By F. C. FIELD-HYDE
(Lecturer at the Royal Academy of Music; Stockwell Training College; Homerton Training College, Cambridge, &c.)
Demy 8vo, cloth boards, 5s. net.
An exhaustive treatise on the Teaching of Sight-Singing, Musical Dictation, and the Training of the ear.
Amongst the subjects dealt with are: The Major Scale, Chromatic Notes, Changes of Key; Minor Keys; Time and Rhythm; The Staff Notation; Interval Study; Class Management; Voice Training; Part-Singing and the Conducting of Part-Songs, &c.
Separate books of Melodies and Tests for Sight Singing and Musical Dictation, for use in connection with "The Singing-Class Teacher," may be had.

Book I. Tonic Sol-fa ... 1s. 6d. net.
,, II. Staff Notation ... 3s. net.
Books I. & II. (complete) ... 4s. net.

STAFF SIGHT-SINGING PRIMER
ON THE MOVABLE DOH SYSTEM
BY GAVIN GODFREY
THIS book has been compiled for the purpose of providing a simple treatise on Vocal Sight-Reading for the use of classes of mixed voices (S.A.T.B.). It is hoped that it will be of assistance in the development of a sounder knowledge of the vocal reading art. It is not intended to be a substitute for a teacher, but is produced with a view to aiding him in his work.
Price (complete) 3s. 6d. net; Part I., 2s. net; Parts II. & III., 2s. net.

32 GREAT PORTLAND ST., LONDON, W.1.

ORGAN MUSIC

SUITABLE FOR PERFORMANCE AT CINEMAS, ETC.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| J. BENEDICT | | |
| Variations on Arne's "Where the bee sucks" ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| DUDLEY BUCK | | |
| At Evening ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| WALFORD DAVIES | | |
| Solemn Melody ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| EDWARD ELGAR | | |
| Contrasts (The Gavotte) ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| PERCY E. FLETCHER | | |
| Fountain Reverie ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| Matinale ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| EDWARD GERMAN | | |
| Morris Dance (Henry VIII.)... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Shepherds' Dance ,, ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Torch Dance ,, ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| R. G. HAILING | | |
| Chanson de Joie... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| KING HALL | | |
| Canzone ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| ALFRED HOLLINS | | |
| Allegretto Grazioso ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Barcarolle... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Berceuse ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Evening Rest ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| In Springtime ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Intermezzo in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Maytime (Gavotte) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Minuet ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Morning Song ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Spring Song ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| EDWARD J. HORSMAN | | |
| The Curfew ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| BERNARD JOHNSON | | |
| Pavane in A ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| S. KARG-ELERT | | |
| Harmonies du Soir ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| EDWIN H. LEMARE | | |
| Andantino in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Chanson d'Eté ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Elegy in G ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Intermezzo in B flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Madrigal ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Minuet Nuptiale ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Pastorale in E ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Reverie in E flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| Romance in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| J. A. MEALE | | |
| Chanson d'Espoir ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| J. RAFF | | |
| Cavatina ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| SCHUBERT | | |
| Ave Maria ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Serenade ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| BERTHOLD TOURS | | |
| Allegretto Grazioso ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Menuetto ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| TSCHAIKOWSKY | | |
| Chanson Triste ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Chant sans Paroles ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Andantino (Symphony No. 4) ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| ERIC WEBSTER | | |
| Berceuse ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| H. DAVAN WETTON | | |
| Andantino in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| H. A. WHEELDON | | |
| Cantilene ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 6 |
| Canzona ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| W. WOLSTENHOLME | | |
| Canzona ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 6 |
| Romanza and Allegretto in E flat ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

TWENTY SHORT AND EASY PIECES

FOR THE ORGAN

SET VI

| No. | | |
|---|---|---|
| 1. | ADAGIO FROM SEXTETT (OP. 81) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | BEETHOVEN |
| 2. | ALLEGRO GRANDIOSO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | HUGH BLAIR |
| 3. | LARGO IN E FLAT... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | E. BUNNETT |
| 4. | MODERATO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | GEORGE CALKIN |
| 5. | BERCEUSE ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | CESAR CUI |
| 6. | ADAGIO IN D ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | OTTO DIENEL |
| 7. | POSTLUDE ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | EDMONDSTOUNE DUNCAN |
| 8. | IMPROMPTU IN A ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | A. M. GOODHART |
| 9. | WEDDING MARCH ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | A. GUILMANT |
| 10. | MARCH FROM "ODE ON ST. CECILIA'S DAY" ... ... ... ... ... | HANDEL |
| 11. | LIEDER OHNE WORTE, No. 9 ... ... ... ... ... ... | F. MENDELSSOHN-BARTHOLDY |
| 12. | ALLEGRO IN C ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | GUSTAV MERKEL |
| 13. | ANDANTE ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | REISSIGER |
| 14. | POSTLUDE IN F ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | J. VARLEY ROBERTS |
| 15. | PRELUDE ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | B. LUARD-SELBY |
| 16. | PRELUDE IN A ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | HENRY SMART |
| 17. | ANDANTE CON MOTO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | CHARLES STEGGALL |
| 18. | ALLEGRETTO GRAZIOSO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | BERTHOLD TOURS |
| 19. | COMMUNION IN B FLAT ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | FERRIS TOZER |
| 20. | CON MOTO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | JOHN E. WEST |

PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS.

Cloth, Six Shillings.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

JOHN SEBASTIAN BACH

48 PRELUDES AND FUGUES

(THE WELL-TEMPERED CLAVIER)

A NEW EDITION, EDITED BY

HAROLD BROOKE

IN TWO PARTS

Price Four Shillings each

Or, Complete, Cloth, Price Twelve Shillings and Sixpence

ANALYSIS

FOR THE USE OF STUDENTS

BY

FREDERICK ILIFFE

Price Four Shillings and Sixpence; Paper Boards, Five Shillings and Sixpence

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NATIONAL SONGS

WITH

DESCANTS

SET I. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 271

THE BAY OF BISCAY (English)
A HUNTING WE WILL GO (English)
JOHN PEEL (English)
ALL THROUGH THE NIGHT (Welsh)
SCOTS, WHA HAE (Scottish)
THE OAK AND THE ASH (Scottish)
EARLY ONE MORNING (English)
OH, DEAR! WHAT CAN THE MATTER BE? (English)
THE BRITISH GRENADIERS (English)
THE ASH GROVE (Welsh)
GOOD KING WENCESLAS (Traditional)
THE FIRST NOWELL (Traditional)

SET II. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 275

COME LASSES AND LADS (English)
WI' A HUNDRED PIPERS (Scottish)
DAVID OF THE WHITE ROCK (Welsh)
THE YOUNG MAY MOON (Irish)
THE GOLDEN VANITY (English)
THE FLIGHT OF THE EARLS (Irish)

SET III. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 276

MEETING OF THE WATERS (Irish)
THERE'S NAE LUCK (Scottish)
DRINK TO ME ONLY WITH THINE EYES (English)
LET ERIN REMEMBER (IRISH)
THE BAILIFF'S DAUGHTER OF ISLINGTON (English)
THE BELLS OF ABERDOVEY (Welsh)

SET IV. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 307

THE CAMPBELLS ARE COMIN' (Scottish)
IN DERRY VALE (The Londonderry Air) (Irish)
THE AGINCOURT SONG (English)
ANNIE LAURIE (Scottish)
AUTUMN'S GOLDEN LEAF (English)
SILENT, O MOYLE (Irish)
MINE EYES HAVE SEEN (American)
OFT IN THE STILLY NIGHT (Irish)
I SAW THREE SHIPS (Traditional)
SHEPHERDS! SHAKE OFF YOUR DROWSY SLEEP (Traditional)

(PRICE EIGHTPENCE EACH SET)

(Each Song can be had separately.)

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

JUST PUBLISHED

CONCERT EDITION

OF

TALES OF HOFFMANN

OPERA FANTASTIQUE

BY

J. OFFENBACH

(Arranged by MAURICE JACOBSON).

Price 5/- net.

For full particulars write to

CRAMER'S CHORAL LIBRARY

Edited by MARTIN SHAW.

| | | O.N. | Tonic. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1. | A FAERY SONGGranville Bantock, S.C.T.B. ... | 6d. | 4d |
| 2. | LAMENT FOR MACLEAN OF ARDGOURArr. Heathcote Statham ... ... | 6d. | 4d. |
| 3. | FALERO, LERO, LOO! (Glee)Vincent Thomas, S.S.C.C. ... ... | 6d. | 3d. |
| 4. | THE WILLOW TREEArr. E. T. Sweeting, S.A.T.B. ... | 4d. | 2d. |
| 5. | TWANKYDILLOArr. E. T. Sweeting, S.A.T.B. ... | 6d. | 3d. |
| 6. | TURMUT-HOEIN'Arr. E. T. Sweeting, T.T.B. .. | 4d. | 2d. |
| 7. | MAN'S MEDLEYVincent Thomas, T.T.B.B. ... ... | 6d. | 3d. |
| 8. | THERE'S NONE TO SOOTHE MY SOUL TO RESTErnest Bullock, S.A.T.B. ... ... | 4d. | * |
| 9. | SERVICEMartin Shaw, S.A.T.B. ... ... | 4d. | * |
| 10. | THE WAUKING O'THE FAULDErnest Bullock, S.A.T.B. ... .... | 6d. | 3d. |
| 11. | COME, TUNEFUL FRIENDSNorman O'Neill, S.A.T.B. ... ... | 6d. | 3d. |

* Old Notation and Tonic Sol-fa together.

Write for Specimen copies to

J. B. CRAMER & CO., LTD., 139, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.1.

TWICE 55

COMMUNITY SONGS

Over 300,000 sold in Great Britain in two years.

Containing well over 100 of the greatest song favourites, patriotic and national airs, traditional and folk melodies, rounds, canons, and hymns. Mostly arranged for part-singing or unison with piano accompaniment. In use by numberless W.I., Girl Guides, Boy Scouts, Singing Societies; Y.M. and Y.W.C.A.'s, etc., etc., Pocket size, 5½ by 8½ inches. Old Notation only.

Price 6d. complete.*

TWICE 44

SOCIABLE SONGS

Compiled and arranged by Geoffrey Shaw.

A companion volume to the famous "2x55." The contents do not duplicate. "The name of the Editor is sufficient guarantee." Contains unison, two-, three-, and four-part songs with and without accompaniment. "The best and cheapest foundation for School Singing." Old Notation only. Pocket size, 5½ by 8½ inches.

Price 6d. complete.*

THESE two famous little song collections have done much to make group singing popular by placing in the hands of the people a wealth of the best songs at an absolute minimum price. They differ from other similar collections in this respect, that in most instances the songs are fully harmonized so that they may be played on the piano or sung in parts. This advantage will be at once appreciated. Both collections are officially adopted by the L.C.C., and are in widespread use throughout the country wherever group-singing is practised.

REALLY GOOD AND AT THE SAME TIME REALLY CHEAP

SPECIMEN COPIES 7d. EACH*

HAWKES & SON (LONDON) LTD.

DENMAN STREET, W.1.

NOVELLO'S EDITIONS

A SELECTED LIST OF SACRED SONGS

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS, except where otherwise stated.

Abbreviations: (S) Soprano; (M-S) Mezzo-Soprano; (C) Contralto; (T) Tenor; (Bar) Baritone; (B) Bass.

| | Range of Lowest Key. |
|---|---|
| FRANZ ABT | |
| Maria (O Lord most Holy). E (S or T) ... ... (1/6) | E—G♯ |
| THOMAS ADAMS | |
| Nearer my God to Thee. E flat (C or B); F (S or T) ... | B♭—E♭ |
| Radiant Morn, The. D (M-S, C, or Bar) ... ... ... | C♯—E |
| Rock of Ages. E (C or Bar); G (S or T) ... ... ... | B—E |
| IVOR ATKINS | |
| Virgin's Lullaby, The. G minor (M-S) ... ... (1/6) | D—F |
| EDGAR L. BAINTON | |
| Song of the Virgin Mother, A. D (M-S) ... ... ... | D—F |
| JOSEPH BARNBY | |
| Elizabeth's Song. G minor (C or M-S) ... ... ... | D—E |
| Soft southern breeze. B flat (Bar); D flat (T) ... ... | D♭—F |
| When I view the Mother holding (Christmastide). D (C or M-S) ... ... ... ... ... ... (1/6) | D—D |
| JOHN F. BARNETT | |
| Rock of Ages, The. E minor (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... | B—F♯ |
| JULIUS BENEDICT | |
| I mourn as a dove. A (S) ... ... ... ... ... (1/6) | D♯—A |
| Lord is very pitiful, The. F (T) ... ... ... (1/6) | E—G |
| O thou afflicted. D flat (C) ... ... ... ... (1/6) | A♭—D♭ |
| W. STERNDALE BENNETT | |
| His salvation is nigh them that fear Him. G (Bar); B (T) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... (1/6) | D—E |
| O Lord, Thou hast searched me out. F (C) ... ... (1/6) | C—D |
| Whosoever drinketh of this water. E (B) ... ... (1/6) | B—E |
| A. HERBERT BREWER | |
| Virgin's Cradle Song, The. F (M-S) ... ... ... ... | D—F |
| GERARD F. COBB | |
| It came upon the midnight clear (Christmastide). D (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | D—E |
| WILLIAM COENEN | |
| Beyond. D flat (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... ... ... | D♭—F |
| Come unto Me. D (C or B); F (M-S or Bar); G (S or T) | C—D |
| Father, forgive them (Lent). F minor (S or T) ... ... | E—F |
| I shall see Thee again. F (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... | E—F |
| Thou wilt remember us. C (C or B); D flat (Bar or M-S); E flat (S or T) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | B—E |
| ANTONIN DVOŘÁK | |
| Inflammatus et Accensus (Latin words only). D minor (C) | A—E |
| EDWARD ELGAR | |
| Angel's Song, The. C (M-S) ... ... ... ... (1/6) | D♯—E |
| As a Spirit didst thou pass. E flat (T) ... ... ... | F—A |
| PERCY E. FLETCHER | |
| Hark! hark! my soul! C (C or B); E flat (S or T) ... | A—D |
| MYLES B. FOSTER | |
| O for a closer walk with God. C (M-S or Bar); D (S or T) | C—E |
| ALFRED R. GAUL | |
| Eye hath not seen. G (C); B flat (M-S) ... ... (1/6) | B—D |
| Ruth (Entreat me not to leave thee). B flat (M-S or S) (1/6) | C—F |
| CHARLES GOUNOD | |
| Angel hosts descending. F (S or T) ... ... ... ... | C—G |
| Holy Vision, The. D minor (S or T) ... ... ... ... | D—F♯ |
| Jerusalem. A minor (S or T) ... ... ... ... | E—B |
| Nazareth. E flat (C or Bar); F (S or T) ... ... (1/6) | B—F |
| Power and Love. A (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... ... | E—F♯ |
| There is a green hill. D (C or B); E (M-S or Bar); F (S or T)... ... ... ... ... ... ... | C♯—D |
| CARL H. GRAUN | |
| Lo! the heaven-descended prophet. B flat (S) ... ... | E♭—C |
| ROBERT KING (Arranged by H. A. CHAMBERS.) | Range of Lowest Key. |
| Come, O Thou Traveller unknown. D (C or B); F (M-S or Bar) | C—F |
| CHARLES H. LLOYD | |
| O Father all-creating (Weddings). E (S or T) ... ... | E—G♯ |
| ALEXANDER C. MACKENZIE | |
| Cross and Crown. B flat (S or T) ... ... ... ... | C—G |
| Dormi Jesu (The Virgin's Cradle Hymn) (Latin words only). E (C or M-S) | E—E |
| For lo, the winter is past. B flat and C (T)... ... ... | E—G |
| Lord is my Shepherd, The. G (S) ... ... ... ... | E—G |
| EDWARD J. MARGETSON | |
| Far from my heavenly home. E flat (C or Bar); G (S or T) | B♭—E♭ |
| JOHN H. MAUNDER | |
| O lovely flowers (Harvest). G (C or Bar); A (S or T) ... | B—G |
| BERNHARD MOLIQUE | |
| Pour out thy heart before the Lord. A flat (T) ... (1/-) | E♭—A |
| ALICE A. NEEDHAM | |
| Far from my heavenly home. C minor (C or Bar); D minor (M-S) | C—F |
| HORATIO W. PARKER | |
| Come, Holy Ghost (Whitsun). D (S) ... ... ... | D—G |
| Lo, now the shades of night. A flat (C) ... ... ... | A♭—E♭ |
| Declining now the sun's bright wheel. E flat minor (Bar) | B♭—E♭ |
| C. HUBERT H. PARRY | |
| Ballad of Meshullemeth, The. E flat (C) ... ... ... | B♭—F |
| God breaketh the battle. G (T) ... ... ... ... | D—A |
| Lady! thou Queen of Israel. E flat (S) ... ... ... | D—A♭ |
| Lord is long-suffering, The. (C or M-S) ... ... ... | D—E |
| D. PUGHE-EVANS | |
| Lead, Kindly Light. E flat (C or Bar); F (M-S); G (S or T) | C—E♭ |
| Return unto thy rest. E flat (C or Bar) ... ... ... | B♭—E♭ |
| HENRY PURCELL | |
| Now that the sun (Evening Hymn). E flat (C); G (S) ... | B♭—E♭ |
| J. JOACHIM RAFF | |
| Twilight is gently falling, The (Ave Maria). E flat (S or T) | E♭—A♭ |
| ROLAND ROGERS | |
| Lead, Kindly Light. F (C or Bar) ... ... ... ... | A—F |
| FRANZ SCHUBERT | |
| Litany for All Souls' Day. E flat (C or Bar) ... (1/6) | C—E♭ |
| JOHN STAINER | |
| My Maker and my King. D (S) ... ... ... (1/6) | C♯—F♯ |
| ALESSANDRO STRADELLA | |
| O God, have mercy (Pietà Signore). D minor (S or T) ... | D—G |
| ERIC H. THIMAN | |
| Birds, The. C (M-S or Bar); D (S or T) ... ... ... | D—F |
| God of Love my Shepherd is, The. F (C or Bar); A flat (M-S) | A—D |
| In the bleak mid-winter. D (C or Bar); F (S or T) ... | A—E |
| Jesus the very thought of Thee. B flat (C or Bar); D (M-S) | B♭—D |
| My Master hath a garden. F (M-S or Bar); G (S or T) (1/6) | C—F |
| HERBERT W. WAREING | |
| Jesu, Lover of my soul. E flat (M-S or Bar) ... ... | B♭—F |
| H. LANE WILSON | |
| Lord is my Shepherd, The. E flat (C or Bar); F (M-S); A flat (S or T) | B♭—E♭ |

For songs by Bach, Handel, Mendelssohn, &c., see separate lists and catalogues.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

SOLOS FROM THE CHURCH CANTATAS

BY

JOHN SEBASTIAN BACH

In Twelve Books—each Book, One Shilling and Sixpence

FIRST SET

SOPRANO

Air — WITHIN MY HEART OF HEARTS ("A Stronghold Sure").
Air — OUR JESUS HATH FOR AYE ("God goeth up").
Air — MY HEART EVER TRUSTING ("God so loved the world").
Air — O GRANT US, MIGHTY LORD ("Jesus, now will we praise Thee").
Air — SIGHING, WEEPING ("My spirit was in heaviness").

TENOR

Air — LORD, TO US THYSELF BE SHOWING ("Bide with us").
Recit. — WHY HAST THOU THEN ("My Spirit was in heaviness").
Air — FAST MY BITTER TEARS ,, ,, ,,
Air — REJOICE, O MY SPIRIT ,, ,, ,,
Recit. — THE MIGHTY GUARDIAN ("Thou Guide of Israel").
Air — HIS FACE MY SHEPHERD ,, ,, ,,
Air — AND WHY ART THOU, MY SOUL ("When will God recall").

ALTO

Air — THOU, WHOSE PRAISES NEVER END ("Bide with us").
Recit. — THE FATHER HATH APPOINTED HIM ("God goeth up").
Air — MY SPIRIT HIM DESCRIES ("God goeth up").
Air — INTO THY HANDS ("God's time is best").
Air — REJOICE, YE SOULS, ELECT AND HOLY ("O Light Everlasting").

BASS

Recit. — HE COMES, THE LORD OF LORDS ("God goeth up").
Air — 'TIS HE, WHO ALL ALONE ("God goeth up").
Recit. — IT IS NOT MINE ("God so loved the world").
Air — ON MY BEHALF ,, ,, ,,
Recit. — YEA, THIS THY WORD ("Thou Guide of Israel").
Air — WHOM JESUS DEIGNS ,, ,, ,,
Air — YET SILENCE ("When will God recall").

SECOND SET

SOPRANO

Air — OPEN WIDE, MY HEART ("Come, Redeemer").
Air — FATHER, WHAT I PROFFER ("Give the hungry man thy bread").
Air — COME, VISIT, YE GLOWING ("How brightly shines").
Air — I HAVE WAITED FOR THE LORD ("If thou but sufferest").

TENOR

Recit. — THE SAVIOUR NOW APPEARETH ("Come, Redeemer").
Air — COME, JESU, COME ("Come, Redeemer").
Air — WHAT VOICE IS WITH THE TEMPEST ("From depths of woe").
Air — TUNEFUL HARPS AND VOICES ("How brightly shines").
Air — THOU ART MY GOD ("Lord, rebuke me not").

ALTO

Air — GOD'S ENSAMPLE THUS TO FOLLOW ("Give the hungry man thy bread").
Air — JESUS SLEEPS ("Jesus sleeps, what hope remaineth").
Recit. — INCLINE THINE EAR ("Lord, rebuke me not").
Air — THE LORD HATH HEARD ("Lord, rebuke me not").
Air — ALL EARTHLY POWERS FROM GOD INHERIT ("Praise thou the Lord").

BASS

Air — THE PASCHAL VICTIM HERE WE SEE ("Christ lay in death's dark prison").
Air — DO THINE ALMS ("Give the hungry man thy bread").
Air — WITH JESUS WILL I GO ("Wailing, crying").
Recit. — AH, WHEN ON THAT GREAT DAY ("Watch ye, pray ye").
Air — BLESSED RESURRECTION DAY ,, ,,

THIRD SET

SOPRANO

Recit. — O LORD, HEAR ME WHEN I CALL ("Lord, rebuke me not").
Air — HOW LONG, O LORD ,, ,,
Air — O PRAISE THE LORD ("O Praise the Lord").
Recit. — O JESU, OUR REDEEMER ("There is nought of soundness").
Air — HEARKEN WHEN WITH TREMBLING ACCENTS ,, ,,
Air — THOUGH REVILING TONGUES ASSAIL ME ("Watch ye, pray ye").

TENOR

Recit. — LORD, WHY SO FAR AWAY ("Jesus sleeps").
Air — IN BILLOWS THE RIVERS OF BELIAL ("Jesus sleeps").
Recit. — O HAPPY TOWN, O FAVOURED LAND ("Praise thou the Lord").
Air — O BLEST ARE ALL THAT FEAR HIM ,, ,, ,,
Recit. — REJECT IT NOT ("Sages of Sheba").
Air — SAVIOUR, TAKE ME FOR THINE OWN ("Sages of Sheba").
Air — UPLIFT YOUR HEADS ON HIGH ("Watch ye, pray ye").

ALTO

Air — BE WELCOME, THOU GREAT ANGEL ("O teach me, Lord").
Air — AH, TARRY YET ("Praise our God").
Air — GOD IS EVER SUN AND SHIELD ("The Lord is a sun and shield").
Recit. — BE STEADFAST IN AFFLICTION ("Wailing, crying")
Air — PAIN AND SORROW WORK SALVATION ,, ,,

BASS

Air — GOD, WHOSE POWER ("Let songs of rejoicing")
Recit. — ALTHOUGH AN HOST ENCAMP ("Lord, rebuke me not").
Air — O LORD, THY MERCY ,, ,,
Air — FARE YE WELL ("O teach me, Lord").
Recit. — THESE THINGS THAT ISAIAH OF OLD ("The Sages of Sheba").
Air — GOLD OF OPHIR IS BUT VAIN ,, ,,
Air — AH, WHERE SHALL I SUCCOUR ("There is nought of soundness").

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

INSTRUCTION BOOKS FOR THE VOICE

GUSTAV GARCIA
A GUIDE TO SOLO SINGING
Price 3s.; Paper Boards, 4s.

H. H. HULBERT
BREATHING FOR VOICE-PRODUCTION
Price 3s.; Paper Boards, 4s.

AGNES J. LARKCOM
THE SINGER'S ART
Price 1s. 6d.

RICHARD MANN
A MANUAL OF SINGING
Price 1s. 6d.

MARGARET NICHOLLS
SCHOOL CHOIR TRAINING
Price 3s.

ALBERTO RANDEGGER
SINGING
Price 6s.; Paper Boards, 7s.

J. STOCKHAUSEN
METHOD OF SINGING
Price 6s.; Paper Boards, 7s.

D. C. TAYLOR
SELF-HELP FOR SINGERS
Price 2s. 6d.; Paper Boards, 3s. 6d.

VOCAL EXERCISES FOR ALL VOICES
WITH MARKS OF EXPRESSION AND PHRASING
BY
ALBERTO RANDEGGER

MARCO BORDOGNI
TWENTY-FOUR VOCAL EXERCISES
FOR MEZZO-SOPRANO
Price 2s. 6d.

CONCONE
50 Lessons for the Medium Part of the Voice.
25 Lessons. A Sequel to the Fifty Lessons for the Medium Part of the Voice.
15 Vocalises. A Sequel to the Twenty-five Lessons for the Medium Part of the Voice.
Ditto. For Mezzo-Soprano or Contralto.
40 Lessons for Contralto.
40 Lessons for Bass or Baritone.
Price 2s. 6d. each.

AUGUSTE PANSERON
FORTY MELODIC AND PROGRESSIVE VOCAL EXERCISES
FOR SOPRANO AND TENOR
IN TWO PARTS.
Part I. Containing Nos. 1 to 26. Part II. Containing Nos. 27 to 40.
Price 3s. each Part.

FORTY-TWO MELODIC AND PROGRESSIVE VOCAL EXERCISES
FOR CONTRALTO, BARITONE, OR BASS
IN TWO PARTS.
Part I. Containing Nos. 1 to 29. Part II. Containing Nos. 30 to 42.
Price 3s. each Part.

FIFTY VOCALISES FOR TWO VOICES
SOPRANO AND MEZZO-SOPRANO, OR TENOR AND SOPRANO, OR TENOR AND BARITONE.
IN TWO PARTS.
Part I. Containing Nos. 1 to 30. Part II. Containing Nos. 31 to 50.
Price 3s. each Part.

PROGRESSIVE STUDIES FOR THE VOICE
WITH PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT
BY
GEORG HENSCHEL

PART I. STUDIES IN SUSTAINED SINGING | PART II. STUDIES IN FLORAL SINGING
Each Part published for High, Medium, or Low Voice.
Price 4s. each.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

THE ENGLISH COUNTRY DANCE

GRADED SERIES

CONTAINING THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DANCES TOGETHER WITH THE TUNES

BY

CECIL J. SHARP

VOL. 1.
BRIGHTON CAMP.
*GALOPEDE.
*NANCY'S FANCY.
*THE BLACK NAG.
*GATHERING PEASCODS.
*RUFTY TUFTY.

VOL. 2.
RIBBON DANCE.
GODDESSES.
*THE MARY AND DOROTHY.
*IF ALL THE WORLD WERE PAPER.
PICKING UP STICKS.
*HASTE TO THE WEDDING.

VOL. 3.
BONNETS SO BLUE.
THE MAID PEEPED OUT AT THE WINDOW.
CHRISTCHURCH BELLS.
*HEY, BOYS, UP GO WE.
*SELLENGER'S ROUND.
THE MERRY, MERRY MILKMAIDS.

VOL. 4.
SAGE LEAF.
EPPING FOREST.
CHILDGROVE.
*THE OLD MOLE.
HIT AND MISS.
NEWCASTLE.

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS EACH VOLUME.

* The Dances marked with an asterisk may be had for Brass or Military Band.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

TWELVE COUNTRY DANCE TUNES

COLLECTED BY

CECIL J. SHARP

ARRANGED FOR

BRASS OR MILITARY BAND

By GORDON JACOB

IN THREE SETS

PRICE ... ... 4*s.* 6*d.* EACH.

Separate Parts, 3*d.* each.

SET 1.
THE BUTTERFLY
GALOPEDE.
HASTE TO THE WEDDING.
NANCY'S FANCY.

SET 2.
GATHERING PEASCODS.
RUFTY, TUFTY.
HEY BOYS.
THE BLACK NAG.

SET 3.
IF ALL THE WORLD WERE PAPER.
THE OLD MOLE.
SELLENGER'S ROUND.
THE MARY AND DOROTHY.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

PROGRESSIVE STUDIES

FOR THE PIANOFORTE.

EDITED, ARRANGED IN GROUPS, AND THE FINGERING REVISED AND SUPPLEMENTED BY

FRANKLIN TAYLOR

THIS Collection of Studies is intended to illustrate the various elements of a complete course of pianoforte technique, and to provide students with the means of attacking and overcoming the different special difficulties which have to be encountered. With this view, the Studies have been arranged in groups, those in each group being placed in progressive order, and having reference to some one particular difficulty. The greater part of the Studies themselves have been selected from the standard works of the most eminent Study-writers, and with these are included numerous others, which, though of equally great practical utility, have hitherto been less generally accessible.

| | | | | | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1. | FIVE-FINGER STUDIES | ... | ... | ... | ... | Part | 1 | | |
| 2.* | ,, | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 2 | | |
| 3. | SCALES | ... | ... | ... | ... | Part | 1 | | |
| 4. | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 2 | | |
| 5. | BROKEN CHORDS | ... | ... | ... | ... | Part | 1 | | |
| 6. | ,, | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 2 | | |
| 7. | ,, | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 3 | | |
| 8. | ,, | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 4 | | |
| 9. | ,, | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 5 | | |
| 10. | LEFT HAND | ... | ... | ... | ... | Part | 1 | | |
| 11. | ,, | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 2 | | |
| 12. | ,, | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 3 | | |
| 13. | ,, | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 4 | | |
| 14.* | ARPEGGIO | ... | ... | ... | ... | Part | 1 | | |
| 15. | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 2 | | |
| 16. | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 3 | | |
| 17. | VELOCITY | ... | ... | ... | ... | Part | 1 | | |
| 18. | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 2 | | |
| 19. | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 3 | | |
| 20. | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 4 | | |
| 21. | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 5 | | |
| 22. | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 6 | | |
| 23. | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 7 | | |
| 24. | FIGURES IN SEQUENCE | ... | ... | Part | 1 | | | | |
| 25.* | ,, | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 2 | | |
| 26. | BROKEN THIRDS, SIXTHS, AND OCTAVES | ... | ... | ... | ... | Part | 1 | | |
| 27. | BROKEN THIRDS, SIXTHS, AND OCTAVES | ... | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 2 | | |
| 28. | SHAKES | ... | ... | ... | ... | Part | 1 | | |
| 29. | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 2 | | |
| 30. | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 3 | | |
| 31. | DOUBLE NOTES | ... | ... | ... | ... | Part | 1 | | |
| 32. | ,, | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 2 | | |
| 33. | ,, | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 3 | | |
| 34. | ,, | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 4 | | |
| 35. | OCTAVES | ... | ... | ... | ... | Part | 1 | | |
| 36.* | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 2 | | |
| 37. | CHORDS | ... | ... | ... | ... | Part | 1 | | |
| 38. | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 2 | | |
| 39.* | STACCATO | | | | | | | | |
| 40. | REPETITION | ... | ... | ... | ... | Part | 1 | | |
| 41.* | REPETITION AND TREMOLO | ... | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 1 | | |
| 42. | ,, | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 2 | | |
| 43.* | PART-PLAYING | ... | ... | ... | ... | Part | 1 | | |
| 44. | ,, | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 2 | | |
| 45.* | ORNAMENTS | ... | ... | ... | ... | Part | 1 | | |
| 46. | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 2 | | |
| 47. | ACCOMPANIED MELODY | ... | ... | Part | 1 | | | | |
| 48. | ,, | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 2 | | |
| 49. | EXTENSIONS AND SKIPS | ... | ... | Part | 1 | | | | |
| 50.* | ,, | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 2 | | |
| 51. | RHYTHM | ... | ... | ... | ... | Part | 1 | | |
| 52.* | ,, | ... | ... | ... | ... | ,, | 2 | | |

53. EXERCISES FOR THE WEAKER FINGERS. By J. A. O'NEILL.

54. WRIST STUDIES (Handgelenksübungen). By ARNOLD KRUG.

55. EXERCISES FOR FACILITATING INDEPENDENCE OF THE FINGERS (Übungen für die Selbständigkeit der Finger). By ARNOLD KRUG.

56. PRELIMINARY STUDIES IN PLAYING POLYPHONIC MUSIC (Vorübungen für das polyphone Spiel). By ARNOLD KRUG.

* These Books contain Studies composed by Mr. Franklin Taylor specially for this Series.

FIFTY-SIX BOOKS, PRICE TWO SHILLINGS EACH.

FROM THE ABOVE:

SELECTED PIANOFORTE STUDIES

PROGRESSIVELY ARRANGED BY

FRANKLIN TAYLOR

THE present collection of Studies is designed to provide teachers with a short course of Pianoforte Technique adapted to the needs of the average pupil, the intention being to spare the teacher the labour of choosing a sufficiently varied selection from the large mass of material existing, and at the same time to ensure that the different departments of technique shall be undertaken in the order which experience has proved to be the most beneficial.

The Studies are grouped in two Sets, and are so arranged that the different Books in which they are contained may be taken in consecutive order, but pupils who are already further advanced than the elementary stage represented by Set I. may commence at once with Set II., which will be found to be complete in itself, and to illustrate all the essential elements of technique.

Where additional studies are desired, or studies on certain subjects which are not touched upon in this series, the larger collection published under the title of "Progressive Studies" (from which the present examples have been selected), is of course available.

IN TWO SETS (EIGHT BOOKS), PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE EACH BOOK

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

JUST PUBLISHED

NEW ORGAN WORK

BY

SIGFRID KARG-ELERT

(Op. 100.)

PARTITA IN E

1. Entrata
2. Canzona
3. Corrente e Siciliano
4. Rigaudon (Alla Burla)
5. Sarabande
6. Gavotte e Carillon
7. Finale quasi ritorno

PRICE FIVE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

TONE-STANZA

No. 1. F MINOR.

FOR PIANO. By ERNEST AUSTIN.

A sincere and charming Piano Solo, which should be in every pianist's répertoire, and on every Teacher's list of Modern Student pieces.

PRICE 2s. NET.

Thematic List of this Series will be sent on request.

J. H. LARWAY, 2, PERCY ST., LONDON, W.1.

JUST PUBLISHED.

SEVENTEEN SONGS

COMPOSED BY

HENRY PURCELL.

Edited and arranged, with accompaniment for the Pianoforte, by

ARTHUR SOMERVELL.

Price Four Shillings

CONTENTS.

A PASTORAL ELEGY ON THE DEATH OF MR. JOHN PLAYFORD.
AH! CRUEL NYMPH.
AH! HOW PLEASANT.
AH! WHAT PAINS.
AN ELEGY ON THE DEATH OF MATTHEW LOCKE.
ANACREON'S DEFEAT.
CEASE, O MY SAD SOUL.
HOW DELIGHTFUL 'S THE LIFE.
I FAIN WOULD BE FREE.
IF MUSIC BE THE FOOD OF LOVE (2nd Version).
LET EACH GALLANT HEART.
LOVE ARMS HIMSELF.
OLINDA.
ON THE BROW OF RICHMOND HILL.
SAWNEY IS A BONNY LAD.
THE FATAL HOUR COMES ON.
THE QUEEN'S EPICEDIUM (ELEGY ON THE DEATH OF QUEEN MARY. 1695).

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

"LES BALLETS DU CONCAN"

(Op. 9, No. 2)

L'ARRIVÉE

Mouv.t de Tango (danse)

In the Indian Musical Play.

The greatest of all novelty Piano Solos is the composition entitled "L'Arrivée" ("Ballets du Concan," No. 2), whose author is the Portuguese pianist, Carlos Eugenio Ferreira, barrister-at-law, established in Portuguese India.

The transformation of Indian music into one-step, tango, waltz, serenades, ballads, &c., is arranged by Mr. Ferreira, and named "Dolente" (mandó), Goanish dance with variations, Op. 1; "Sobre o Mandovy," waltz, Op. 2; "Canto de Rucminim," waltz, Op. 3; "Echos da India," melody, Op. 4; "Sous les palmiers," waltz, Op. 5; "Serenata Indiana" (mandó), with variations, Op. 6, printed in London; "Les Charmes de Gôa," waltz, Op. 7; "Les Ballets du Concan," modern one-step, and tango; characteristic dances ("Sur des Motifs et Chansons Indiennes") Opp. 8 and 9, and among his pianoforte works, "L'Arrivée" is a delightful piece, widely appreciated as played by the Portuguese Orpheons, and all the leading bands.

As a composer of pianoforte music of an educational nature, Mr. Ferreira occupies a notable place among modern musicians. His ideas are always fresh, and thus exercise a strong appeal, particularly with the Indian music-lovers.

In Mr. Ferreira's works the style, the melody, the soundness, the rhythm, and the lyric Orientalism are well accentuated.

"L'Arrivée" possesses all the wealth of melodic invention for which the composer is famed, and if tenderness and charm pervade every piece of Mr. Ferreira's, especially the dance, "Indian Tango" is one of his best inspirations. It comprises 14 pages, well edited and printed by J. Rangel & Co., with four of them, separate, containing song for female voices and words in the Concani and French languages, and presenting on the frontispiece a portrait of the dancing girls and the bridegroom's nuptial home.

The music may be obtained of the Library Coelho-Pangini, Gôa, and of all music-sellers.

The House, Arthur Viegas, Nova Gôa, Portuguese India, will give all information about the matter, when it is requested.

Price 1½ rupee.

JUST PUBLISHED

THREE SHORT PIECES FOR ORGAN

No. 1. Andante con moto in D.
No. 2. Andantino in A minor.
No. 3. Larghetto con espressione in A flat.

By
BASIL HARWOOD
Op. 45.

(No. 20, Original Compositions for the Organ)

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

New Numbers in the "YORK SERIES."

ALLELUIA HAIL WITH GLADNESS.
J. LAMONT GALBRAITH.
Cantata. Price 2s. net.

CROWN OF LIFE.
NOEL HANNENFORD.
Cantata. Price 2s. net.

THE SHEFFIELD CATHEDRAL DESCANTS.
(24 Settings of Popular Hymn Tunes.)
By T. W. HANFORTH.
Price 6d.

BANKS & SON, MUSIC PUBLISHERS, YORK.

JUST PUBLISHED.

MADGE

A CAMP-FIRE PLAY
BY
KITTY BARNE
INTRODUCING
FOLK-SONGS, SUNG AND ACTED

Price One Shilling.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED

PART-SONGS for MIXED VOICES
By C. LEE WILLIAMS

A HARNET ZET IN A HOLLOW TREE
A TRADITIONAL BALLAD. Price 4d.

THE CURFEW TOLLS THE KNELL OF PARTING DAY
WORDS BY THOMAS GRAY
Price 3d.

THE DESPAIRING LOVER
WORDS BY WILLIAM WALSH.
Price 3d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

TWELVE
INTROITS OR SHORT ANTHEMS

SET 2.

| No. | | |
|---|---|---|
| 1. | GIVE EAR UNTO MY PRAYER | JACQUES ARCADELT |
| 2. | WE WAIT FOR THY LOVING-KINDNESS | PHILIP ARMES |
| 3. | THE SACRIFICES OF GOD | HUGH BLAIR |
| 4. | ALMIGHTY GOD, WHO HAST ME BROUGHT | THOMAS FORD |
| 5. | SET YOUR AFFECTIONS | ALFRED R. GAUL |
| 6. | O GOD, WHOSE NATURE AND PROPERTY | ALAN GRAY |
| 7. | REND YOUR HEART | F. A. GORE OUSELEY |
| 8. | COME, LET US WORSHIP | PALESTRINA |
| 9. | BEHOLD, GOD IS MY HELPER | JOHN STAINER |
| 10. | I WILL LAY ME DOWN IN PEACE | ARTHUR S. SULLIVAN |
| 11. | O GOD OF BETHEL | CHRISTOPHER TYE |
| 12. | BLESSED ARE THEY | S. S. WESLEY |

PRICE ONE SHILLING
Each Introit may be had separately

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NOVELLO'S ELEMENTARY MUSIC MANUALS

No.

1.—PART-WRITING FOR BEGINNERS, by J. W. IVIMEY. The Rules tabulated are for the guidance of beginners in the Art of Part-writing. Many of them change from rules to recommendations, when the students become more advanced. Bound in linen covers. Price 8d.

2.—LESSONS IN HARMONIZING MELODIES, by CUTHBERT HARRIS. Many elementary students of harmony can satisfactorily add parts to figured basses, but are unable to harmonize even simple melodies. This book gives minute instruction which any student can understand. Part I. Price 2s. 6d.

3.—AN ELEMENTARY MIXED-VOICE SIGHT-SINGING COURSE (Staff Notation through Tonic Sol-fa), by GEORGE LANE. The Exercises are written in the Treble and Bass Clefs, in order that the Book may be used by Male and Female voices in one class. Suitable for Evening Continuation Schools. Part I. Price 8d.

4.—AN ELEMENTARY MIXED-VOICE SIGHT-SINGING COURSE (Staff Notation through Tonic Sol-fa). by GEORGE LANE. Part II. Price 8d.

5.—HINTS TO YOUNG VIOLINISTS, by C. EGERTON LOWE. Price 1s. 6d.

6.—LESSONS IN HARMONIZING MELODIES, by CUTHBERT HARRIS. Part II. Price 2s. 6d.

7.—ADDITIONAL EXERCISES IN HARMONIZING MELODIES, by CUTHBERT HARRIS. Price 8d.

8.—HINTS ON PIANOFORTE TEACHING (chiefly to Boys), by E. D. RENDALL. Price 2s. 6d.

9.—SCHOOL CHOIR TRAINING, by MARGARET NICHOLLS. A Practical Course of Lessons on Voice Production for the guidance of Teachers of Class Singing. Price 3s.
(The Appendix, published separately: Hints on Part-Singing and Exercises, 3d.; Sol-fa, 3d.)

10.—THE COMPOSITION OF SIMPLE MELODIES, by ROBERT T. WHITE. Price 2s. 6d.

11.—PHYSICAL EXERCISES IN THE INFANT SCHOOL, by MARGARET A. HUGHES. Price 4s. 6d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

TECHNIQUE AND EXPRESSION IN PIANOFORTE PLAYING BY FRANKLIN TAYLOR.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

In the course of my experience as a teacher of the pianoforte, an experience extending over many years, certain ideas have from time to time suggested themselves to me which have proved useful—to myself, as enabling me to express more clearly that which I desired my pupils to understand, and to my pupils, as tending to facilitate their comprehension of the various difficulties they have had to encounter, at the same time leading them to perceive the most practical means of overcoming them, and thus accelerating their general rate of progress.

These suggestions relate to both the mechanical and intellectual sides of the study of pianoforte-playing, or briefly, to Technique and Expression, the chief matters implied by the first of these terms being the production of various qualities of tone, the choice of suitable fingering, and the best methods of attacking certain difficulties; while the second, which may perhaps be more aptly designated the means of expression, includes rhythm, phrasing, variety and gradation of tone, the use of the pedals, et cætera.

WITH NUMEROUS MUSICAL EXAMPLES FROM THE WORKS OF THE GREAT MASTERS.

PRICE, CLOTH GILT, SEVEN SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE NET.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

"LONELINESS"

and other Essays, also extracts from Lectures on Singing delivered to the Students of the Royal Academy of Music, London.

By AGNES J. LARKCOM, F.R.A.M.

Price 4s. 6d.; postage, 4d. extra.

GERALD DUCKWORTH & CO.,
3, HENRIETTA ST., COVENT GARDEN, or any bookseller.

T. MEE PATTISON'S POPULAR CANTATA

THE ANCIENT MARINER

33rd 1,000.

Vocal Score, 2s. 6d. Choruses only, 1s. 3d.

Band Parts may be hired.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

FOREIGN MUSIC

If you have any difficulty in obtaining Foreign Music, we invite you to send your inquiries to us. Our Foreign Department holds a large and comprehensive stock of foreign editions, including those of André, Choudens, Costallat, Durand, Heugel, Hug, Hamelle, Leduc, Lemoine, Schlesinger, Simon, Zimmermann, and many others of equal note.

Certain catalogues and list are available, and will be sent on application.

The comprehensive nature of our stock will be judged by the following list:

PIANOFORTE
Solos, duets, &c., transcriptions and arrangements of all kinds.

VOCAL
Operatic, concert, and classical solos, duets, glees, exercises, vocal scores of operas, oratorios, &c., and orchestral parts.

ORGAN
Original compositions, transcriptions, and arrangements, in volumes and separately.

HARMONIUM
Duos, trios, quartets, transcriptions, &c.

INSTRUMENTAL
Solos, duets, trios, quartets, &c.

ORCHESTRAL
Scores and parts, miniature scores, pianoforte arrangements, studies, exercises, &c., for all instruments.

Inquiries for little-known or unknown works will be welcomed, and any compositions not in stock can be obtained at short notice.

When writing please state which of the above sections is of interest to you.

SCHUBERT CENTENARY

Messrs. Novello have in stock certain of the 21 folio volumes of Schubert's works, forming the Complete Edition as published by Breitkopf & Härtel. List and prices will be sent on application.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

Years Ahead

The past is present only in careful, painstaking construction ; for the Chappell Piano is the really modern instrument embodying the inventive genius of the present age, and designed exclusively for to-day and the future. In many important features, the Chappell Piano is far ahead of the times, and will be "up-to-date" for some time to come. That is why the Chappell is becoming ever more and more the Piano chosen by the great musicians.

THE CHAPPELL PIANO CO. LTD.
50, NEW BOND ST., LONDON, W.1.

CHAPPELL

"Infinite riches in a little room."—CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE.

The JULY-AUGUST number of

"THE CHESTERIAN"

CONTAINS

"THE CONFESSIONS OF A PROGRAMME-WRITER," by Mrs. Rosa Newmarch.

A striking article of special interest to all concert-goers.

IN the SEPTEMBER-OCTOBER issue, commencing the eleventh year of publication of the magazine, further opinions of prominent contemporary composers on the subject of "INSPIRATION" (continued from the number for JANUARY-FEBRUARY, 1928) will appear, contributed by the following :

ARNOLD BAX — CYRIL SCOTT — PHILIPP JARNACH
FRANK BRIDGE — JOAQUIN TURINA — PAUL DE MALEINGREAU
VINCENT D'INDY — PIERRE DE BREVILLE — NICHOLAS MEDTNER
CHARLES KOECHLIN — LOUIS DUREY — ERNST TOCH
G. FRANCESCO MALIPIERO

Price per copy 9*d.* Annual Subscription 5*s.*

"'The Chesterian' is one of the two best known musical journals published in the English language."—From "New York Herald Tribune."

J. & W. CHESTER, Ltd., 11, Gt. Marlborough Street, London, W.1.

London :—Printed by NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited, at Novello Works, Soho, and published at 160, Wardour Street, Soho, W.1. Saturday, September 1, 1928.

No. 524. NOVELLO'S OCTAVO EDITION OF TRIOS, etc., FOR FEMALE VOICES. Price (4d)

BRIDAL SONG

TRIO FOR FEMALE VOICES (S.S.A.)

THE WORDS WRITTEN BY JOHN FLETCHER (1579-1625)

THE MUSIC COMPOSED BY

EDGAR L. BAINTON

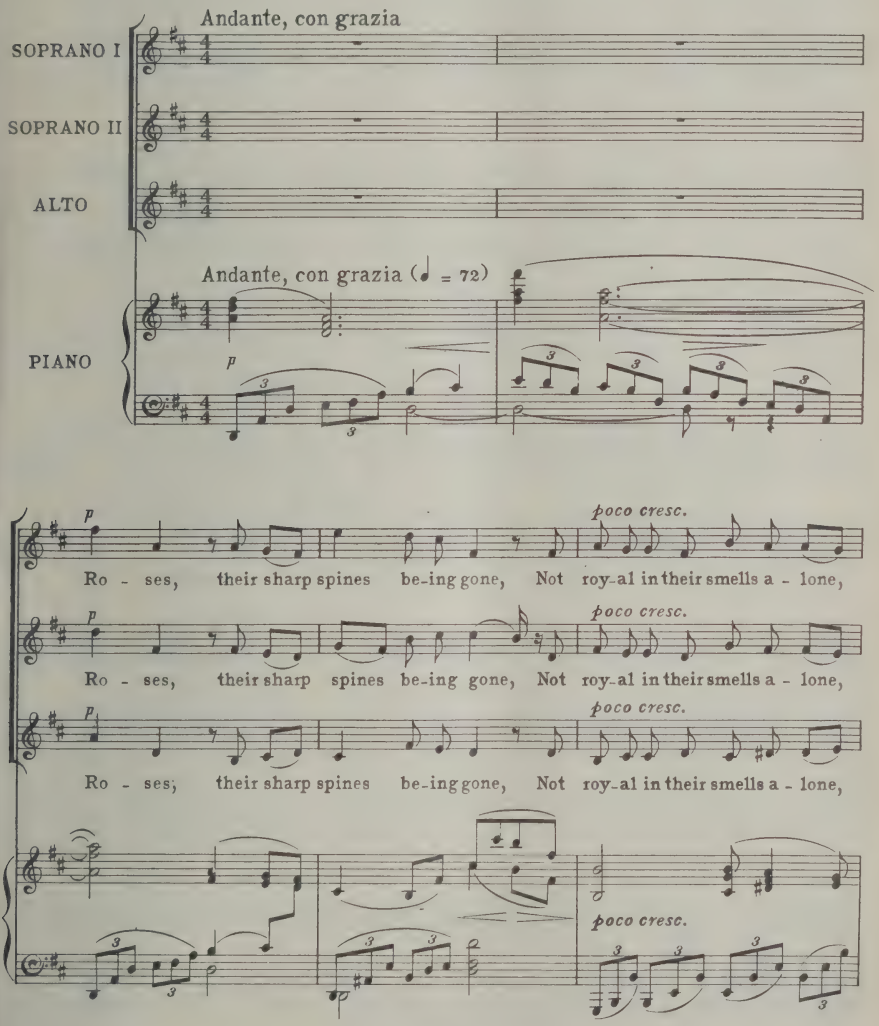
London: NOVELLO & COMPANY, Limited; New York: The H.W. GRAY Co, Sole Agents for the U.S.A.



Andante, con grazia
SOPRANO I
SOPRANO II
ALTO
Andante, con grazia (♩ = 72)
PIANO
p
poco cresc.
Ro - ses, their sharp spines be-ing gone, Not roy-al in their smells a - lone,
Ro - ses, their sharp spines be-ing gone, Not roy-al in their smells a - lone,
Ro - ses, their sharp spines be-ing gone, Not roy-al in their smells a - lone,

Copyright, 1928, by Novello & Company, Limited MADE IN ENGLAND.

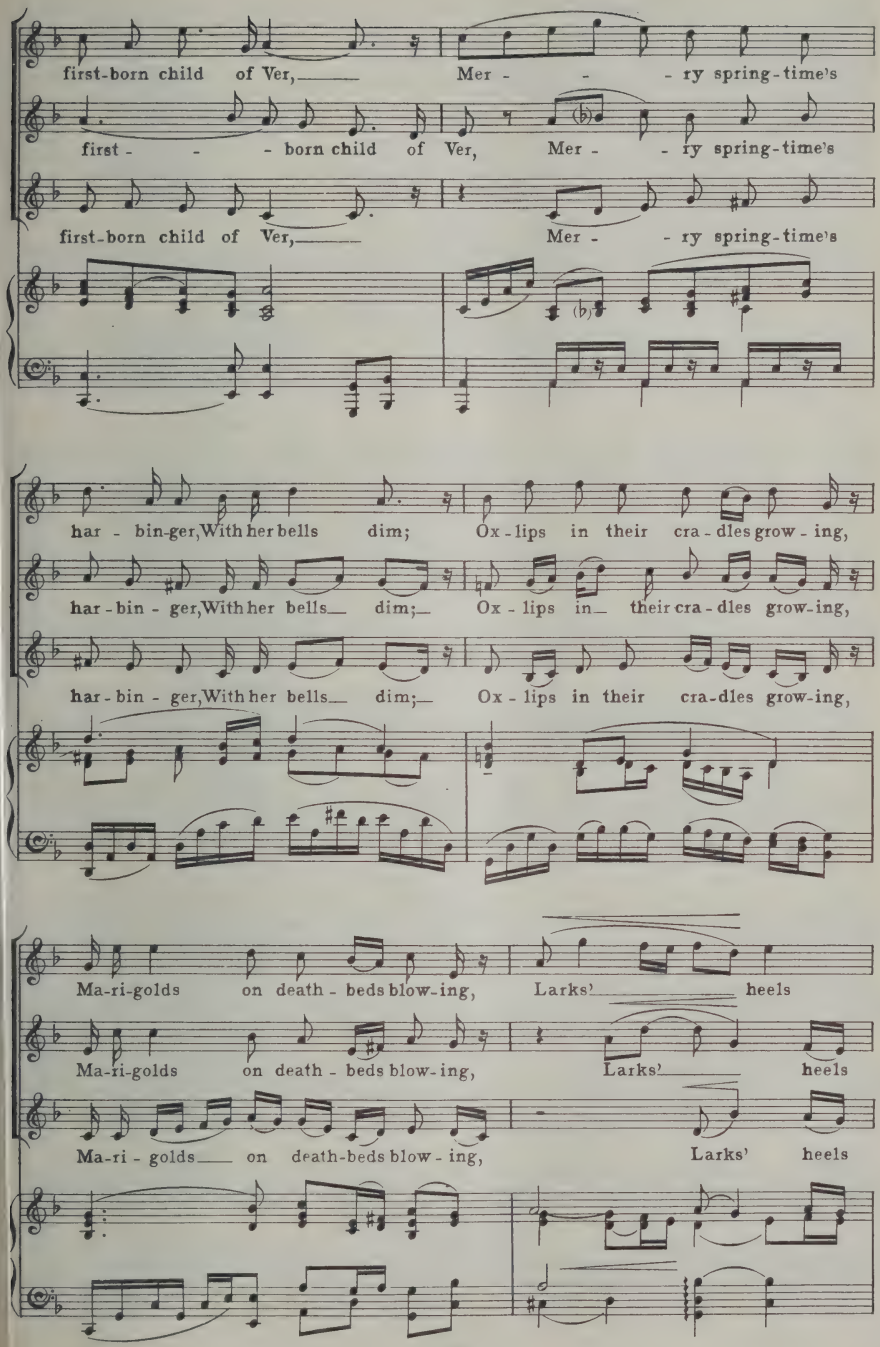
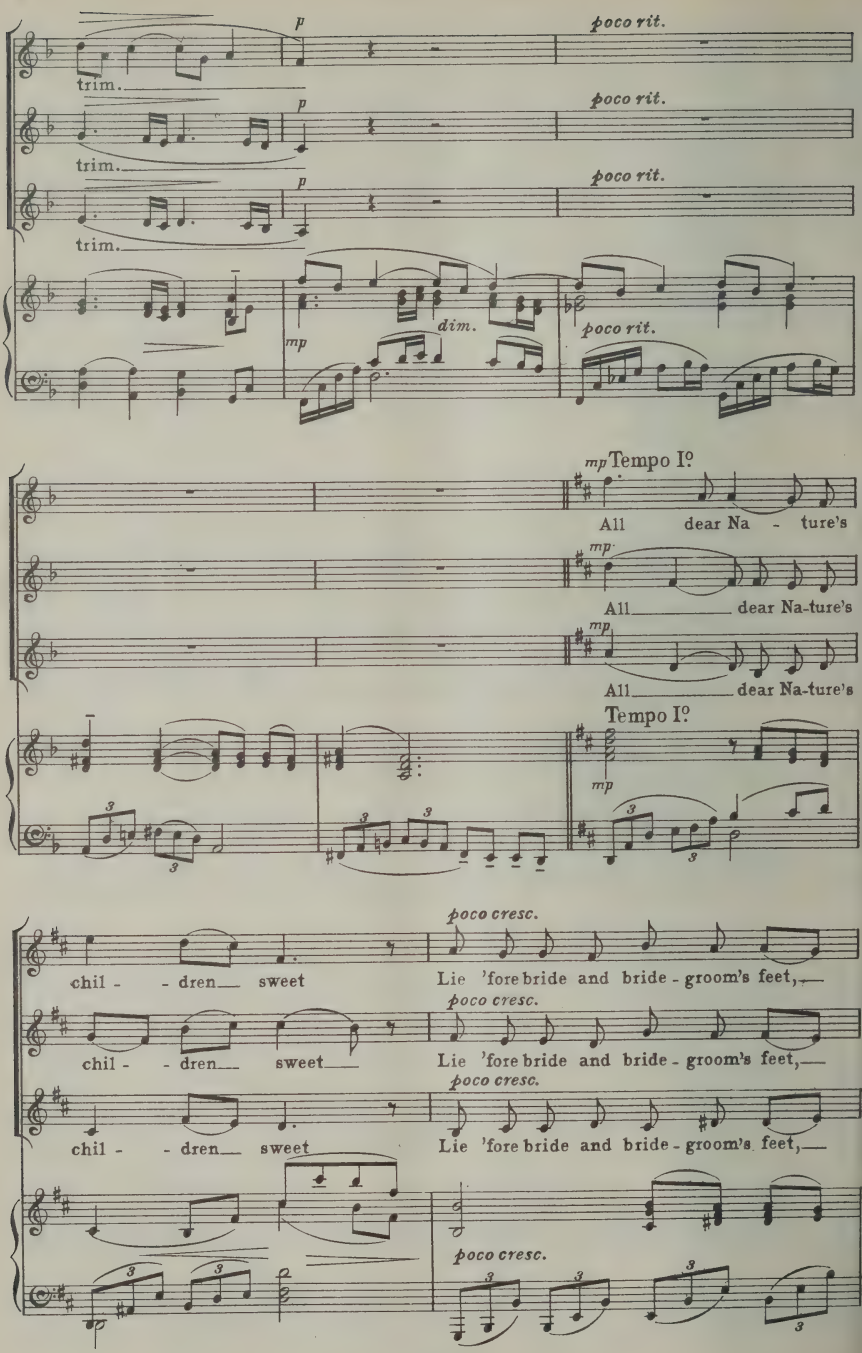
mp
But in their hue; Maid-en pinks, of o-dour faint,
But in their hue; Maid-en pinks, of o-dour faint,
But in their hue; Maid-en pinks, of o-dour faint, Dais-ies
cresc.
mf
Dais - ies smell-less, yet most quaint, And sweet thyme true;
Dais - ies smell-less, yet most quaint, And sweet thyme true;
smell - - less, yet most quaint, And sweet thyme true;
dim.
rit.
Poco più mosso
p
Prim - - - - rose,
Prim - - - rose,
Prim - - - rose,
Poco più mosso



first-born child of Ver, Mer - - - ry spring-time's
first - - - born child of Ver, Mer - - ry spring-time's
first-born child of Ver, Mer - - ry spring-time's
har - bin-ger, With her bells dim; Ox-lips in their cra-dles grow-ing,
har-bin - ger, With her bells dim; Ox-lips in their cra-dles grow-ing,
har-bin - ger, With her bells dim; Ox-lips in their cra-dles grow-ing,
Ma-ri-golds on death - beds blow-ing, Larks' heels
Ma-ri-golds on death - beds blow-ing, Larks' heels
Ma-ri - golds on death-beds blow - ing, Larks' heels



p
poco rit.
trim.
p
poco rit.
trim.
p
poco rit.
trim.
mp
dim.
poco rit.
mp Tempo I°
All dear Na - ture's
mp
All dear Na-ture's
mp
All dear Na-ture's
Tempo I°
mp
poco cresc.
chil - - dren sweet
Lie 'fore bride and bride - groom's feet,
poco cresc.
chil - - dren sweet
Lie 'fore bride and bride - groom's feet,
poco cresc.
chil - - dren sweet
Lie 'fore bride and bride - groom's feet,
poco cresc.

Novello & Company, Ltd. Engravers & Printers. 15422

NOVELLO'S OCTAVO EDITION
OF
TRIOS, QUARTETS, &c.
FOR
FEMALE VOICES.

FOR S.S.A. UNLESS OTHERWISE STATED.

218. I know a glade ... A. W. Marchant 4d.
29.*§I waited for the Lord Mendelssohn 4d.
279.* If hope were but a fairy (2v.) Foster 3d.
342.* If through the churchyard (4 v.) J. Brahms 2d.
459.*§If yet Pan's Orgies (S.S.A.A.) Geoffrey Shaw 4d.
295. In a year (4 v.) ... Felix Woyrsch 4d.
482. In going to my lonely bed (4 v.) R. Edwards 3d.
207.* In grotto cool ... G. J. Bennett 4d.
126. In life if love we know not (2 voices) C. Reinecke 3d.
399. In midst of ocean (6 v.) Schumann 4d.
204.* In our boat ... F. H. Cowen 4d.
108. In sleep the world reposes R. Hol 3d.
93. In summer go thy love to seek C. Reinecke 3d.
208.* In the dell and dingle G. J. Bennett 4d.
216.* In the hayfields ... ... Pinsuti 6d.
155.* In the meadows G. J. Bennett 4d.
419.* In the warm blue summer weather (4 v.) Colin Taylor 4d.
35. In the wood ... ... F. Hiller 4d.
469. In this hour of softened splendour Pinsuti 4d.
104. In Thy Name shall they rejoice (4 v.) G. Henschel 3d.
137.* Invitation to the dance (2 v.) Reinecke 6d.
77. Invocation to Faith ... A. G. Gits 4d.
353.* Irish Reel, The ... ... Irish Air 3d.
477. Isle, The ... ...Gerrard Williams 3d.
403.* It is not always May ... Pinsuti 3d.
154.* Ivy tree, The ... G. J. Bennett 4d.
175.* Jack Frost ... ... J. L. Hatton 3d.
24.§ Jesus, heavenly Master ... Spohr 3d.
508.* Jingle, A ... ... R. Thompson 4d.
489.* John Peel (arr. by) John E. West 4d.
188. June ... ... ... Finlay Dun 4d.
400.* June Roses ... ... Schumann 2d.
179.* Knight and the Lady, The Schweizer 4d.
357.* Lamb, The ... H. W. Davies 4d.
222. Lament, A (2 v.)... Martin Roeder 4d.
326. Let the hills resound ... B. Richards 4d.
516. Light as fairy foot can fall ("Oberon") ... ... Weber 3d.
443.* Little Sandman, The ... ... ... 4d.
273.* Little thoughts that grow C. H. Lloyd 3d.
107. Live we singing M. Hauptmann 3d.
209.* Loneliness of woods, The Richard Hol 4d.
409. Lonely Isle, The (4 v.) G.A. Macfarren 4d.
476.* Long day closes, The (4 v.) A. Sullivan 4d.
485. Look down, O Lord (4 v.) W. Byrd 3d.
132. Look upward (2 v.) ... C. Reinecke 3d.
20. Lord, how long ... ... Brahms 6d.
14.§ Lord is my Shepherd, The (4 v.) Schubert 6d.
332. Love flew down from the North H. Gibson 4d.
514.§ Love on my heart from Heaven fell G. Holst 3d.
408.§ Love Song, A ...Granville Bantock 6d.
333.* Love Song (4 v.) ... J. Brahms 3d.
292.* Love's influence (4 v.) Felix Woyrsch 3d.
322. {Love's measure (4 v.) / Tilting (4 v.)} L. Sinigaglia 3d.
221. Love's Philosophy (2 v.) M. Roeder 4d.
464.* Lovely appear ... ... Gounod 4d.
325. Loving burial, A L. Sinigaglia 3d.
421* Lullaby (arr.) ... ... Brahms 2d.
422.* Maiden of the "Fleur de Lys," The E. A. Sydenham 2d.
264. Maidens of Zia ... Herbert Bunning 4d.
89. Maiden's Song, A ... C. Reinecke 4d.
352. Make haste, O man, to live Williams 4d.
60.* Make the car of a golden King-cup M. Costa 6d.
283. March (2 v.) ... Myles B. Foster 3d.
344.* March night, A (4 v.) ... J. Brahms 3d.
438. May-bells... ... John E. West 4d.
496. Maybush, The ... ...E. M. Boyce 4d.
121. May dance (4 v.)... Asger Hamerik 8d.
210.* May-Day ... ... ... Oliver King 4d.
244. May-Day song (2 v.) ... King Hall 4d.
275. May Morning (4 v.) ... J. Pointer 4d.
341.* Meadows at Wildbach, The (4 v.) J. Brahms 2d.
388. Mermaid, The (5 v.) ... Schumann 4d.
48. Mermaids, The ... T. A. Walmisley 6d.
320.* Merry beggars, The ...F. C. Woods 4d.
251.* Merry Songsters (2 v.) J. Kinross 4d.
397. Merry Spring returning F. Hiller 4d.
110. Might I the bird be Richard Hol 4d.
337.* Miller's Daughter, The (4 v.) J. Brahms 3d.
56.* Mistress Mary ... C. A. Macirone 3d.
305.*§Moonlight ... ... H. Clarke 6d.
169. Moorland ride, The ... Carl Hering 3d.
192. Morning Hymn (4 v.) ... Spontini 6d.
246. Morning Song (2 v.) ... King Hall 4d.
198. Morning sweet cuckoos greet G. Bartel 4d.
96. Morning thoughts Henry Smart 6d.
76. Morning walk, A... ... J. Raff 8d.
340.* Mountains are cold, The (4 v.) J. Brahms 2d.
185.* Mountain Spirit, The (4 v.) A. Jensen 4d.
446. Music when soft voices die (6 v.) J. Harrison 4d.
492. My bonnie lass, she smileth E. German 4d.
483. Ditto (4 v.) T. Morley 4d.
461.* My love dwelt in a Northern Land E. Elgar 4d.
518. My silks and fine array E. M. Boyce 4d.
271.* My true love hath my heart (4 v.) W. A. C. Cruickshank 4d.
502.* Ditto ... ... G. Rathbone 4d.
164.* Nanie ... ... R. Schumann 3d.
451.* Night ... ... Hamish MacCunn 4d.
313. Night Music ... H. W. Wareing 4d.
4.* Night sinks on the wave Henry Smart 3d.
223. Night Song (2 v.) Martin Roeder 4d.
447.* Nightingale, The ... Bateson 2d.
200.* Nightingale, The ... T. Weelkes 3d.
67.* Nights, The ... ... G. Roberti 4d.
301. Noble be thy life (Canon for 6 v.) Beethoven 4d.
189. Northern love song, A. H. Hofmann 3d.
339.* Now all the roses (4 v.) Brahms 4d.
478.* Now is the month of maying (4 v.) T. Morley 3d.
497. Ditto ... ... ... A. Webber 4d.
61.* Now May again (4 v.) Mendelssohn 3d.
506. Now once again (Christmas) P. E. Fletcher 4d.
365.* Now sleeps the crimson (4 v.) G. Holst 3d.
338.* Nun, The (4 v.) ... ... J. Brahms 3d.
501. Nursery Rhymes (humorous) A. Carse 4d.
168.* Nurse's Song (2 v.) B. Luard-Selby 3d.
120. Nymphs in the Rhine, The Marschner 6d.
135.* O beautiful violet (2 v.) C. Reinecke 3d.
498.* O can ye sew cushions (Lullaby) G. Bantock 4d.
18. O clap your hands E. H. Thorne 8d.
90. O grateful evening ... C. Reinecke 3d.
157.* O happy fair ... ... ...Shield 4d.
58.* O Lord, Thou hast searched (Surrexit Pastor Bonus) (4 v.) Mendelssohn 8d.
510.§ O love, I complain ... G. Holst 3d.
472.* O lovely May ... ... E. German 4d.
368.* O Memory ... ... H. Leslie 4d.
453.* O my love ... Hamish MacCunn 4d.
474.* O peaceful night ... E. German
57.* O praise the Lord (Laudate pueri) Mendelssohn 6d.
19.*§O sing to God (Noël) ... Ch. Gounod 8d.
5.* Oh, Skylark, for thy wing H. Smart 4d.
235. Oh, Spring ... Marie Wurm 3d.
364.* O swallow, swallow ... G. Holst 3d.
436.* Oh, the merry May P. E. Fletcher 4d.
228. O thou breeze of Spring King Hall 4d.
258.§ O thou divine (2 v.) A. C. Mackenzie 8d.
105. O why, if thou art mine Hauptmann 3d.
289. O worship the Lord (4 v.) S. S. Wesley 4d.
146. Of oak thy mournful bier's prepared C. Reinecke 3d.
457.*§Of Pan we sing... Geoffrey Shaw 6d.
67.* Oh the Summer Night G. Roberti 4d.
450.* On a faded violet Hamish MacCunn 4d.
52.* On departure ... ... Franz Abt 3d.
197. On the land afar extending G. Bartel 3d.
142. Once again the day ... Franz Abt 3d.
287. {One day there came from Lochlin / Sorrow not, why art thou weeping? / Niels W. Gade} 4d.
248.*§Ophelia (2 v.) ... ... H. Berlioz 4d.
263.*§Orpheus with his lute... Ed. German 4d.
481.* Ditto ... A. Sullivan 4d
69.§ Our home shall be on this bright isle (4 v. with solo)... Henry Smart 6d.
331. Out of the darkness ... H. Gibson 4d.
94. Over a grave ... ... C. Reinecke 3d.
99. Pangbourne ... ... F. Corder 4d.
458.*§Pan is our all (S.S.A.A.) Geoffrey Shaw 4d
141. Parting beam of daylight Franz Abt 3d.
36. Peace ... ... ... F. Hiller 4d.
64. Peace ... ... ... G. Roberti 4d.
486.* Piper's Song ... ...R. Boughton 3d.
381.* Pixies, The S. Coleridge-Taylor 4d.

*Pieces marked thus * may be had in Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d. to 3d. each.*
§ Band Parts.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NOVELLO'S OCTAVO EDITION

OF

TRIOS, QUARTETS, &c.

FOR

FEMALE VOICES.

FOR S.S.A. UNLESS OTHERWISE STATED.

143. Praise of Spring ... C. Reinecke 3d.
348.*§Praise to the Holiest (s.s.a.a.) (from "The Dream of Gerontius") E. Elgar 6d.
136. Prayer on the waters (2 v.) Reinecke 3d.
281. Promised Land, The (2 v.) M.B. Foster 3d.
131. Queen of the heavens (4 v.) Brahms 4d.
536.* Questionings (4 v.) ... Brahms 3d.
191. Quiet Hours ... R. B. Addison 4d.
243. Rainbow, The (2 v.) ... King Hall 4d.
372.*§Rain is falling, The ... W. Bendall 4d.
366. Rainy day, The ... ...Percy Bowie 4d.
257.§ Rejoice, for Love is lord (2 v. Duet Accompt.) ... A. C. Mackenzie 6d.
219. Remember now thy Creator.—Fear God ... ... W. S. Bennett 4d.
410.* Rest thee on this mossy pillow H. Smart 2d.
468.* Rhinemaidens, The ... R. Wagner 6d.
416. Rhyme of the four birds, The A. C. Mackenzie 4d.
286.*§Ring out, wild bells ... H. Lahee 4d.
505.*§ Ditto ... P. E. Fletcher 4d.
43.* Rise again, glad Summer Sun (3 v. with A. solo) ... H. Leslie 4d.
392.* River King, The (4 v.)... Schumann 2d.
272. Roger and Maggie ... C. Mühlfeld 3d.
127. Rose is queen, The (2 v.) C. Reinecke 3d.
445. Rose Tree, The ... H. Blair 4d.
390. Rosemary (4 v.) ... ... Schumann 2d.
111. Sabbath morn, The Franz Lachner 3d.
490. Salvator Mundi ... ...H. Farjeon 3d.
26.§ Say, where is He born Mendelssohn 3d.
309.§ Say, who is this ... G. Holst 4d.
350.§ Sea song, A (2 v.) ... Ivor Atkins 4d.
218.* See, see what a wonderful smile (4 v.) Colin Taylor 4d.
40.* Secret, The ... ... F. Hiller 4d.
471. Send out Thy light ...Ch. Gounod 4d.
16.* Serenade (4 v., with solo) Schubert 8d.
154. Shades of night (2 v.) ... J. Kinross 4d.
31. Shades of night, The ... ...Spohr 6d.
112.* Shed no tear (4 v.) ... E. Austin 3d.
146.* Shepherd, The ... H. W. Davies 4d.
170. Shepherd boy, The ...Carl Hering 4d.
70. Shepherdesses' Lament, The Gabussi 4d.
160. Shine out, Stars B. Luard-Selby 4d.
163.* Silent, Oh Moyle (arr.) Irish Melody 3d.
180.* Silver Swan, The (4 v.) O. Gibbons 2d.
112. Sing, sweet birds ...Oliver King 4d.
130.* Sing ye praises (4 v.) ... Brahms 2d.
65.* Sinks the Night R. Schumann 3d.
140.§ Sion heard of it (97th Psalm) J. Barnby 6d.
54.*§Sir Eglamore (humorous) (arr. by) H. B. Gardiner 4d.
29.* Skylark, The ... ... King Hall 4d.
01.* Skylark, The ... J. C. McLean 4d.
67. Sleep, baby! ... J. C. Marks 4d.
20.* Sleep, little baby (4 v.) Colin Taylor 4d.
91.* Sleeping beauty, The (4 v.) Woyrsch 4d.
40.* Slumber Song, A ... F. N. Löhr 4d.
06.*§Snow, The ... ... E. Elgar 8d.
95.* Snow in Spring ... ... C. Reinecke 3d.
27. Snowdrop, The ... ... King Hall 4d.
02. So the world goes round M. Wurm 3d.
27.* Softly fall the shades ... Hatton 4d.
03.* Softly the moonlight (4 v.) F. Iliffe 4d.
87. Soldier's Bride, The (4 v.) Schumann 2d.
74. Solitude (4 v.) ... ... J. Pointer 4d.
65.* Some strain that once thou heardest (4 v.) ... ... Marie J. A. Wurm 4d.
60.* Song, A... ... ... P. C. Buck 3d.
92. Song ("Mirza Schaffy") C. Reinecke 4d.
11. Song for Spring ... ... E. Silas 3d.
314. Song in Snowtime, A H.W. Wareing 3d.
463.* Song of Fionnuala (arr.) Irish Melody 3d.
415.* Song of Morning, A A.C. Mackenzie 4d.
521. Song of Rest, A. H. W. Davies 3d.
462. Song of the Bees, The M. Sargent 4d.
433.* Song of the Ermine César Franck 4d.
62. Song of the four seasons Selby 4d.
91. Song of the Graces ("Faust") Reinecke 3d.
475.* Song of the Pedlar (humorous) C. Lee Williams 4d.
374.*§Song should breathe ... W. Bendall 4d.
282. Song should breathe (2 v.) M.B. Foster 3d.
101. Sonning Lock ... ... F. Corder 4d.
513.§ Sorrow and joy ... ... G. Holst 3d.
287.§ { Sorrow not, why art thou weeping? / One day there came from Lochlin / Niels W. Gade } 4d.
349.*§Sound Sleep R. Vaughan Williams 6d.
25.*§Spinning Chorus, The (4 v.) Wagner 4d.
362.* Splendour falls, The (4 v.) G. Holst 4d.
159. Spring ... ... B. Luard-Selby 4d.
81. Spring, The ... ... L. Samson 6d.
162. Spring, The ... ... R. Würst 6d.
186. Spring and his bride (4 v.) A. Jensen 6d.
73. Spring in the land ... J. Raff 4d.
51. Spring Morning, A ... Franz Abt 4d.
432. Spring Song, A ... ... Pinsuti 4d.
487. Stabat Mater (4 v.) F. W. Davenport 4d.
276.* Stars are with the voyager, The (4 v.) J. Pointer 3d.
288.* Stars of the summer night J. E. West 4d.
97. Stars beyond the cloud, The B. Tours 4d.
166. Stedfast heavens, The R. Schumann 3d.
117. Stork's return, The H. Marschner 6d.
299.*§Summer ... ... ... H. Clarke 6d.
63. Summer Days ... H. C. Banister 4d.
21.* Summer Eve (4 v.) ... J. L. Hatton 4d.
147. Sunbeams in Winter ... C. Reinecke 3d.
50.* Sunset ... ... ... Franz Abt 3d.
45.* Swallow, The ... ... H. Leslie 4d.
193.* Sweet and low (2 v.) B. Luard-Selby 3d.
361.* Sweet and low (4 v.) ... G. Holst 4d.
211. Sweet flowers of Spring Oliver King 4d.
103. Sweet land (Cambria) Walmisley 4d.
242. Sweet little bird (2 v.) ... King Hall 4d.
177.* Sweet May ... ... J. Barnby 4d.
231.* Sweet tender flower (4 v.) J. Stainer 3d.
262.* Sweet the Angelus ... H. Smart 4d.
203.*§Sweet the balmy days Mackenzie 6d.
190.* Sympathy ... ... O. Schweizer 4d.
384.* Tambourine player, The (4 v.) Schumann 2d.
363.* Tears, idle tears (4 v.) ... G. Holst 3d.
82. Tell me where is fancy bred Callcott 4d.
143.* Thou Heaven, blue and bright F. Abt 3d.
150. Thou that Thyself with death hast striven ... C. Reinecke 3d.
380.* Three Fishers, The (4 v.) W. Wolstenholme 4d.
294. Three Horsemen, The (4 v.) Woyrsch 4d.
196. Through murm'rous leaves G. Bartel 3d.
322. { Tilting (4 v.) / Love's measure (4 v.) } L. Sinigaglia 3d.
370.*§To a nightingale ... W. Bendall 4d.
167.* To a skylark ... ... C. H. Lloyd 4d.
367.* To blossoms ... ... P. Bowie 4d.
308.*§To-day and to-morrow H. Clarke 6d.
328. To Harmony ... Nicolai von Wilm 4d.
449. To Music ... H. J. Timothy 4d.
278. To Sea (2 v.) ... Myles B. Foster 3d.
209.* To stay at home is best B. Tours 4d.
238. To the March winds Marie Wurm 3d.
355.* To the rain in Summer T. Wendt 4d.
369.*§To the skylark ... ... W. Bendall 3d.
300.*§To the woods ... ... H. Clarke 6d.
217. Torrent, The ... A. W. Marchant 4d
199. True life to live... ... G. Bartel 4d.
201.* Twelve by the clock (2 v.) C. H. Lloyd 4d
54.* Twilight ... ... ... Franz Abt 4d.
371.*§Twilight ... ... ... W. Bendall 4d.
66.* Twilight ... ... ... G. Roberti 4d.
176.* Twilight star, The ... J. Barnby 4d.
322. Two Garden Songs L. Sinigaglia "Love's measure," "Tilting" (4 v.) 3d.
268. Under the greenwood tree (4 v.) Marie J. A. Wurm 4d.
118. Upward ... ... H. Marschner 6d.
493.* Valleys of Dream, The P. E. Fletcher 4d.
75. Vicissitude ... ... J. Raff 6d.
293.* Vicissitude (4 v.)... Felix Woyrsch 3d.
396. Vigil ... ... ... F. Hiller 4d.
156.* Violet, The ... G. J. Bennett 4d.
123. Voice of Spring, The A. H. Behrend 4d.
473.* Voice of Spring, The ... H. Rhodes 4d.
241.* Voice of the grass, The (2 v.) King Hall 4d.
175.* Voice of the western wind J. Barnby 4d.
178. Vox Amoris ... Otto Schweizer 4d.
83.* Waken, day is dawning Mackenzie 6d.
128.* Waken not the sleeper (2 v.) Reinecke 3d.
139.* Wanderer's greeting, The Franz Abt 2d.
42.* Wanderer's night-song, The F. Hiller 3d.
277. Water Lilies (4 v.) ... J. Pointer 6d.
230. Water-Lily, The Nicolai von Wilm 4d
360. Water-Lily, The ... T. Wendt 3d.
10.* Water-nymphs, The Henry Smart 6d.
253. Waterfall, The (2 v.) ... J. Kinross 4d.
444. Wedding is great Juno's crown Tours 3d.
261.* Weep you no more ... P. C. Buck 3d.
519. Welcome ... ... E. M. Boyce 4d.
28* Welcome to this place (4 v.) Bishop 3d.
407. Were I a bird ... ... F. Hiller 2d.
383.* What can lambkins do S. C.-Taylor 4d.
72. What can the stars be ... J. Raff 4d.
479. What saith my dainty darling (4 v.) T. Morley 4d
38. When does a maiden ... F. Hiller 4d.
448. When evening casts Bayley 4d.
116.* When Evening's twilight J. L. Hatton 3d.
180.* When e'er the sounding harp Brahms 4d.
267. Whenever life some joy doth bring (4 voices) ... M. J. A. Wurm 3d.
512.§ When first we met ... G. Holst 4d.
74. When glows a heart ... J. Raff 6d.
359. When Summer dies B. Luard-Selby 4d.
87. When two are lovers Carl Reinecke 3d.
11. Where are the angels J. L. Hatton 4d.
140. Where deepest shadows Franz Abt 3d.
520.* Where the bee sucks A. S. Sullivan 4d.
452.* Whither? ... Hamish MacCunn 4d.
298.§ Whither away C. Villiers Stanford 1s.
494. Who liveth so merry (arr. by) P. E. Fletcher 4d.
376. Who shall be fairest T. S. Holland 4d.
280.* Willow and its lesson (2 v.) Foster 3d.
312. Wings of Sleep, The C. H. Lloyd 4d.
225. Winter ... ... ... King Hall 4d.
149.* Winter hath not a blossom Reinecke 4d.
323. Winter Song, A... L. Sinigaglia 4d.
34.*§With a laugh ... W. S. Bennett 6d.
131. Woe to him (2 voices) C. Reinecke 3d.
7.* Wood-nymphs, The Henry Smart 4d.
259. Wood-nymphs' call, The P. C. Buck 3d.
495.* Ye dainty Nymphs E. M. Boyce 4d.
163. Ye shining stars (Canon) R. Würst 4d.
402. Ye Spotted Snakes ... J. D. Davis 4d.
32.* Yet once again (Magic Flute) Mozart 3d.
304.* You stole my love (4 v.) Macfarren 3d.
417.* Young love ...Granville Bantock 3d
12.* Youth, Joy, and Hope J. L. Hatton 6d.
405. Zephyr through the woodland Hiller 4d.

(To be continued.)

*Pieces marked thus * may be had in Tonic Sol-fa, 1½d. to 3d. each.*
§ Band Parts.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

Specially composed for the Blackpool Musical Festival, 1928.

THE BLESSED DAMOZEL

BY

D. G. ROSSETTI

SET TO MUSIC FOR FEMALE VOICES

BY

JULIUS HARRISON

Price, One Shilling and Sixpence

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

FOUNDED IN 1844

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH

No. 1,028—Vol. 69. Registered at the General Post Office for Canadian Postage.

OCTOBER 1 1928

Price 6d.; Postage, 2d.
Annual Subscription, post-free, 7s. 6d.

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY

ROYAL ALBERT HALL

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING

FIFTY-EIGHTH SEASON, 1928-1929

CONDUCTORS:
Conductor-in-Chief: DR. MALCOLM SARGENT

SIR EDWARD ELGAR, O.M.
SIR HUGH P. ALLEN, K.C.V.O.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1928, at 2.30 p.m.

ELIJAH - - - - - MENDELSSOHN

MISS STILES-ALLEN | MISS GLADYS PALMER
MR. TUDOR DAVIES | MR. KEITH FALKNER

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 24, at 2.30 p.m.

MASS IN D - - - - ETHEL SMYTH
THE SONG OF MIRIAM - SCHUBERT
and Other Works.

MISS CAROLINE HATCHARD | MISS ASTRA DESMOND
MR. PARRY JONES | MR. STUART ROBERTSON

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15, at 2.30 p.m.

CAROLS

MISS MEGAN FOSTER | MR. JOHN GOSS

SATURDAY, JANUARY 5, 1929, at 2.30 p.m.

MESSIAH - - - - - HANDEL

MISS DORA LABBETTE | MISS ETHEL BARKER
MR. WALTER WIDDOP | MR. HAROLD WILLIAMS

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 2, at 2.30 p.m.

AN OPERATIC CONCERT

MADAME MIRIAM LICETTE | MR. WILLIAM BOLAND

SATURDAY, MARCH 2, at 2.30 p.m.

THE KINGDOM - - - ELGAR

MISS JOAN ELWES | MISS MARGARET BALFOUR
MR. STEUART WILSON | MR. HOWARD FRY

GOOD FRIDAY, MARCH 29, at 2.30 p.m.

MESSIAH - - - - - HANDEL

MISS FLORA WOODMAN | MISS MURIEL BRUNSKILL
MR. HEDDLE NASH | MR. HORACE STEVENS

THIS IS NOT A SUBSCRIPTION CONCERT

SATURDAY, APRIL 27, at 2.30 p.m.

THE CREATION - - HAYDN

MISS BELLA BAILLIE
MR. WALTER GLYNNE | MR. ROBERT EASTON

DOUBLE CHORUS OF 850 VOICES
THE NEW SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
At the Organ - MR. R. ARNOLD GREIR

EIGHT CONCERTS will be provided, of which SEVEN, including the Carol Concert, will comprise the Subscription Series. The performance of Handel's "Messiah" on Good Friday is not included in the Subscription Series.
Prices of Subscription for these Seven Concerts: Stalls, £2 14s. 6d.; Arena, £1 19s.; Balcony, £1 7s. 6d.
Prices of Tickets for each Concert:
Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Arena, 7s. 6d.; Balcony (Reserved), 5s.; Unreserved, 3s. 6d.; Gallery (Promenade), 2s.
Subscribers' names will be received and tickets issued at the Booking Office, Royal Albert Hall, and the usual Agents.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, LONDON, N.W.1

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patrons:
HIS MAJESTY THE KING
HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN
H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AND STRATHEARN, K.G.
H.R.H. THE PRINCESS LOUISE (Duchess of Argyll)
President:
H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AND STRATHEARN, K.G.
Principal:
JOHN B. MCEWEN, M.A., D.Mus., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M.

MICHAELMAS HALF-TERM
BEGINS 29TH OCTOBER, 1928.

THE STUDENTS' ORCHESTRA.
Conducted by SIR HENRY J. WOOD, D.Mus., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M.

TEACHERS' TRAINING COURSE.
Special Course for the Training of Teachers.

CONDUCTORS' COURSE.
FOR THE TRAINING OF CONDUCTORS.

OPERA COURSE.
FOR THE TRAINING OF OPERATIC SINGERS.

ENSEMBLE CLASSES

SCHOLARSHIPS.
SEVENTY-TWO SCHOLARSHIPS AND EXHIBITIONS.

L.R.A.M.
Last day of entry for the Christmas Examination, 31ST OCTOBER.

PROSPECTUSES, ENTRY FORMS, and all other information on application.

A. ALGER BELL, Secretary

Guildhall School of Music

(Founded in 1880 by the Corporation of London, and managed by the Music Committee)

VICTORIA EMBANKMENT, E.C.4

PRINCIPAL: SIR LANDON RONALD, F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M., &c.

PRIVATE Lessons in any single Musical Subject, and STAGE TRAINING in Elocution, Gesture, Dancing, Opera; Classes in Conducting, Fencing, French Classical Drama.

Complete Musical Education at inclusive fees, £12 12s. and £14 14s. Opera Class, Saturdays. Special Training Course for Teachers (approved by Teachers' Registration Council).

Prospectus and Syllabus of Local Centres and Schools Examinations (open to general public) free.

H. SAXE WYNDHAM, Secretary.

Telephone: Cent. 4459; and City 5566.

WIGMORE HALL STUDIOS.—These splendidly appointed Studios are the recognised centre of the best musical activities in London. Forty-five rooms. Grand Piano in every room. Lift, telephone, and every comfort and convenience. Low inclusive rates. One morning or afternoon per week the minimum time arranged for. Apply, 38, Wigmore Street, W.1.

The Royal College of Music

PRINCE CONSORT ROAD, SOUTH KENSINGTON, S.W.7

Patrons: { HIS MAJESTY THE KING / HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.
Director: Sir Hugh P. Allen, K.C.V.O., M.A., D.Mus., D.Litt.

CHRISTMAS HALF-TERM

The Christmas Half-Term will commence on Monday, October 29th, 1928.

The new Edition of the Prospectus may be obtained post free on application to the College.

COMPLETE MUSICAL EDUCATION
is provided by Teachers of the highest eminence.

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT
Classes are held for pupils under sixteen, whose time is also occupied by their general education.

SPECIAL CLASSES ARE HELD FOR:
Score Reading, Conducting, Training of Teachers, Musical Criticism, and Ballet.

OPERATIC CLASSES
The College possesses a fully equipped College Opera Theatre for an audience of 600.

SCHOLARSHIPS, EXHIBITIONS
Upwards of 70 Scholarships and Exhibitions are provided from a permanent endowment fund.

ENSEMBLE CLASSES
There are Vocal and Instrumental Ensemble Classes, and Pupils sufficiently advanced in this work are given the opportunity of putting their knowledge into practice at College Concerts.

A.R.C.M.

Examinations for Associateship of the College (A.R.C.M.) are held three times a year, in December, April, and September.
Full particulars obtainable from the Registrar.

CLAUDE AVELING, Registrar.

The Royal College of Organists

THE SOLO-PLAYING TESTS for the next F.R.C.O. EXAMINATION are:

Prelude and Fugue in C minor, J. S. Bach. (Novello, Book 7, p. 64; Augener, p. 168; Peters, Vol. 2, No. 6.)

Choral Prelude, "St. Mary's," Charles Wood, No. 1 of 16 Preludes, Vol. 1. (Stainer & Bell.)

Larghetto from the Quintet, Op. 108, Mozart. Arrangements for the Organ by W. T. Best, No. 20, p. 247. (Novello.)

The 10 selected pieces and the book set for the Essay for the January, 1929, A.R.C.O. Examination, are the same as those set for July, 1928.

All Candidates for the next Examinations must send in their names for Fellowship by December 6th, for Associateship by December 13th. In the case of NEW MEMBERS, proposal forms, duly filled up, must be sent in before November 29. No names will be entered after the above dates.

For the convenience of members, past examination papers have been bound in one volume: Fellowship and Associateship Organ Work, January, 1913, to July, 1927; Paper Work, July, 1924, to July, 1927. Price 4s., to be obtained by members only.

Regulations, List of College Publications, Lectures, &c., may be had on application.

Examples indicating the character and approximate difficulty of the NEW TESTS, set for the first time at the July, 1924, Examinations, may be obtained at the College.

Associateship or Fellowship, 6*d.* each (post free).

N.B.—The College is open daily from 10 to 4.

H. A. HARDING, Hon. Secretary.

Kensington Gore, S.W.7.

ROYAL MANCHESTER COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Founded 1893. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1923

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF YORK, K.G.
Principal: DR. ADOLPH BRODSKY
Registrar: STANLEY WITHERS, M.A.

Students are requested to enter upon a complete course of Musical instruction, and are not admitted for a shorter period than one year.
Fee for the year, £36. Special fee for Organ Course, £30, and for Wind Instrument Course, £18.
Systematic Course for the training of Teachers, approved by Teachers' Registration Council.
The Prospectus with Scholarship information, Diploma Regulations, and Entry Forms, on application.

ORGAN PRACTICE.—1s. 4*d.* an hour (pupils, 9*d.*).
Hydraulic-blown, two-manual and pedal organ, at the Fulham School of Music, 2, Edgarley Terrace, S.W.6. Tel: Putney 4208.
ORGAN LESSONS at St. STEPHEN'S WALBROOK, E.C.4.
GEORGE METZLER, F.R.C.O., F.T.C.L.

Manchester School of Music

Founded by J. A. CROSS (1892)

Late Principal (1897-1925): Albert J. Cross, A.R.A.M.
Director: LEOPOLD H. CROSS, M.A.

The oldest Institution in Manchester devoted solely to the interests of Music.

All branches of Music taught. Day and evening Private Lessons. Opera Class. Full Orchestral Class. Intermediate and Elementary String Orchestras. Classes for Ensemble Playing, Elocution, Choral Singing, Harmony, Aural Training, &c.

Students prepared for all Royal Academy and Trinity College Exams.

Single Subjects taught. Prospectus from the Secretary, 16, Albert Square.

96 & 95, WIMPOLE STREET, W.1

TOBIAS MATTHAY PIANOFORTE SCHOOL

Instruction under his teachers, and under his own supervision.

Open to Professionals and Amateurs, and also to Children.

The Staff consists of thirty-nine senior Professors of thorough experience and platform reputation, all trained by the founder.

Special Short Courses for Teachers during term and vacation.

Lecture-Lesson Class by Mr. Matthay on the practical teaching of Technique and Interpretation, diagnosis and correction of faults musical analysis and synthesis, &c., alternate Wednesday evenings.

COMPLETE TRAINING COURSE FOR TEACHERS
(Approved by the Teachers' Registration Council)

This One-Year Course may be joined at the beginning of any Term.

For further particulars please apply, Mrs. Marion Cole, Secretary.

THE
SCOTTISH NATIONAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC
SESSION 1928-29

The Session consists of Three Terms: September 10 to December 1, December 3 to March 9, and March 11 to June 7.
Complete Musical Curriculum. Day and Evening Classes.
Single Subjects taught.
Prospectus and further information may be obtained from:

STUART S. FORSYTH, Secretary,
Athenæum Buildings, Glasgow.

BIRMINGHAM & MIDLAND INSTITUTE
SCHOOL OF MUSIC

Visitor ... Sir Edward Elgar, O.M., Mus. Doc., LL.D
Director ... Granville Bantock, M.A., D. Mus. (Ed.).

Session 1927-1928

The Season consists of AUTUMN TERM (September 22 to December 20); WINTER TERM (January 14 to April 11); SUMMER TERM (April 20 to July 4).

Instruction in all branches of Music, Students' Orchestra, Chamber Music, Students' Rehearsals, and Concerts.
Prospectus and further information may be obtained from—

H. M. FRANCIS, Secretary.
Paradise Street, Birmingham.

THE LONDON SCHOOL OF SINGING

New Address: 2, Gray Street, Duke Street, W.1 (near Selfridge's)
President: A. NETTLEFOLD
Principal: DAVID GODELL

Instruction in all Vocal Subjects. A thorough musical education if desired.
Special Voice-curing Courses for all vocal defects, caused by overstrain and incorrect production.
Practice with Accompaniste can be obtained at the School at a moderate fee.
Particulars from Secretary, Miss M. Heath. Mayfair 3819.

LONDON SOCIETY OF ORGANISTS
FOUNDED 1913

President for 1928: J. PERCY BAKER, Mus. B.

Organists, Assistant-Organists, are eligible. Register of vacant appointments. All particulars on application to the Hon. Secretary.
De Crespigny House, Denmark Hill, S.E.5.

MEMORISE your MUSIC

BY MEANS OF THE

MACKINNON METHOD

The world-famous Pianist writes to MISS MACKINNON

"I have read with the greatest interest your remarkable work on Musical Memory. You have elucidated with rare understanding all the principles of this formidable problem, and your work will be of valuable assistance to all those who wish to remember a composition completely and perfectly."
(Signed) ALFRED CORTOT, 12/12/1927.

READ WHAT CORRESPONDENTS SAY:

"Until taking your Course I could not memorise at all, but now I find it quite easy to do so."—30/6/28.

"I am delighted with the way I have improved in playing since taking your Course. Apart from memorising, I have learnt the art of complete relaxation during performance. This alone has been well worth the fee to me. You have done for me in a few weeks what I have been trying to do for years without success."—27/7/28.

"I have found that your Lessons have given me an entirely new outlook in memorising, even in old pieces (formerly memorised by the old repetition ad nauseam method). Also the Lessons teach one to go on working by oneself—a great matter."—20/3/28.

"I really cannot begin to thank you for the Lessons. I would never have believed such an improvement possible in so short a time."—30/4/28.

THE FEE FOR THE COMPLETE COURSE OF SIX POSTAL LESSONS IS £3 : 3 : 0

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED OR FEE REFUNDED

SEND FOR FREE BOOKLET
(FIX COUPON INSIDE ENVELOPE).

To MISS LILIAS MACKINNON, 1, Paultons Square, London, S.W.3.

Without any obligation on my part please send me your free booklet on "Memory Training."

Name.....

Address.....

(S.J.8.) .....

BOW AND BROMLEY
MUSICAL FESTIVAL
(President: H.R.H. Princess Beatrice.)
To be held at
ST. STEPHEN'S HALL, SAXON ROAD,
BOW, E.,
On 3rd, 4th, & 5th DECEMBER, 1928.
Singing (Choral and Solo), Pianoforte, Organ, Elocution, Dancing.

Copies of the Syllabus and Entry Forms may be obtained from Mr. C. E. Bell, 10, Bonwell Street, E.2 (post free, 2d.).
Latest date for entries, 1st November, 1928.

NORTH LONDON
MUSICAL FESTIVAL
For North of the Thames and Open Competitions
Entries due October 22.

Orchestras, Chief Choral and School Choirs, November 17th.
Classes on other evenings for many Choirs, including Infants. Ten Judges.
Open Solo Classes for Solo Singing, Pianoforte, Violin, Elocution. Over 100 local Classes. Public Halls at Kentish Town. November 16 to 24.

Syllabus free from John Graham, Hon. Secretary, 74, Park Hall Road, London, N.2.

SCARBOROUGH
Competitive Musical Festival
Under the Auspices of the Scarborough Townsmen's Association.
APRIL 25th, 26th, 27th, 1929
GRAND HALL, THE SPA
Solo, Duet, Quartet, Choral, Orchestral, School Choir, Etc., Competitions
Mr. F. CROMACK, Secretary,
Scarborough Townsmen's Association,
Albert Chambers, 9, Aberdeen Walk, Scarborough.

DEGREES IN MUSIC
DURHAM MATRICULATION
LONDON MATRICULATION
PREPARATION BY CORRESPONDENCE
On a thoroughly individual system, ensuring to each Student the closest care and attention.
The following are a few extracts from successful pupils' letters:—
"The way you anticipated the form which the questions asked at the examination would take (and in some cases the actual questions themselves), is wonderful."
"This agreeable result is due to your skilful tuition, and to the skill and patience of yourself and staff I owe very much."
"I much appreciated all the papers you set me, and all the interesting notes without which I should most probably have failed."
For Terms, Testimonials, &c., Address—
Mr. J. CHARLESTON, B.A. (Hons. Oxford and Lond.).
14, Elsham Road, Kensington, W.14.

ORGAN CLASS (Saturdays, 3 p.m.)
High-Class Individual Tuition. Friendly Interest. Any Grade. Full particulars from W.B.M., c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ARS VIVENDI BREATHING
is a New Departure
both for Amateurs and Professionals.
THROAT STRENGTHENED, EFFECTS OF STRAIN REMOVED, AND RESONANCE INCREASED.
DIAPHRAGM BECOMES POWERFUL, ENSURING EASE, REACH, AND ENDURANCE WITHOUT FATIGUE.
QUALITY OF TONE QUICKLY IMPROVED.
Particulars from Mr. ARTHUR LOVELL, Wigmore Hall Studios, Wigmore Street, London, W.1.

Field Hyde Method of Voice Training
Miss ELSIE DUNIAM-JONES
L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.
Prepares for diploma examinations or concert platform. (3 L.R.A.M. Successes, Easter, 1928.) Failing or faulty voices successfully treated. Single lessons or short courses on Song Interpretation in English, French, or Italian. Auditions free. Vacancy for accompanist-pupil. 17, Cavendish Square, W.1, and at Hendon.

THE TONIC SOL-FA ASSOCIATION
The Monthly Meetings will be resumed on Saturday, October 20th, 7 p.m., at the King's Weigh House Club, Thomas Street, London, W.1.
LECTURE-RECITAL.
With Vocal or Instrumental Illustrations. "Music for Young Children." Mrs. J. Murray MacBain.
Admission Free. Full particulars from the Secretary, Mr. T. H. Warner, L.T.S.C., 82, Ashgrove Road, Goodmayes, Essex.

THE CLIFTON COOKE COMPETITIONS
Instituted 1913, for the purpose of discovering talented and promising Singers, Pianists, and Reciters desiring to use their gifts professionally, either as Performers or Teachers, to whom a first-class course of training would not be otherwise accessible.
£250 FREE SCHOLARSHIPS
IN SINGING, PIANO, and ELOCUTION, Cup, Medals, and Cash Prizes. Open Competition for the trained and untrained, October 27th, November 3rd and 10th. Adjudicators: Mr. Charles Webber, Conductor, British National Opera Co.; Mr. Fred Cutchee, Miss Florence Ager, and Miss Phyllis Windsor. Results at Lecture-Recital, King George's Hall, W.C.1; Wednesday, Nov. 14th, at 7.30 p.m. Prospectus, Secretary, 26M, Guilford Street, W.C.1.

"GOD'S HARVEST VOICE." An Anthem by Cecilia Havergal. 2d. Novello.

MODERN CORR. COLLEGE

Principal: Arthur McAlister, B.A. Cantab.

MATRIC. — Durham: London: Dublin. Successes ... 157

MUS. BAC. — The Guarantee Course for the complete Degree has become very popular. For ONE FEE, which can be paid by Monthly Instalments, Tuition is given until the Degree is gained. If the Course is interrupted the student is under no liability.

A.R.C.O., F.R.C.O. — For ONE FEE Tuition is given until both Diplomas are gained. The Courses include Form, Musical History, Voice Culture. F.R.C.O.—Failed 7 times. A student after failing 7 times joined the M.C.C., and he was then successful. A.R.C.O.—A student after failing 4 times joined the M.C.C. and passed after a course of ten lessons.

A. MUS. T.C.L. — This is entirely Theoretical, and forms an excellent preliminary to Mus. Bac. One of our Students gained an average of 82% at a recent Exam. L.Mus. T.C.L.—A student of the M.C.C. gained 95% Orchestration, and then passed 1st Mus. Bac. at the FIRST ATTEMPT.

A.T.C.L. — Art of Teaching ... ... ... ... ... ... 93%

L.R.A.M.) / A.R.C.M.) (Pf.) — The Course for L.R.A.M. includes Form: Art of Teaching: Phrasing: Touch: Fingering: Pedalling. A student writes: "I gained 81% for Form and Art of Teaching. At a previous Exam. (under other tuition) I gained 66%." A.R.C.M. writes: "I obtained 123 out of 126 for Special Paperwork."

1st M. B. Sept. 1928.

TOTAL PASSES ... ... 7

FOUR of the Successful Candidates were Students of the M.C.C.

F.T.C.L. JULY, 1928. ENTRIES ... 2 SUCCESSES ... 2

PLEASE STATE EXAM. OR SUBJECT.

MODERN CORR. COLLEGE SHERWIN ROAD, NOTTINGHAM.

ST. JOHN'S WOOD PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH,
MARLBOROUGH PLACE, ABBEY ROAD, N.W.8.

FOURTH SERIES OF ORGAN RECITALS

1928—1929.

By W. IRWIN-HUNT

(Organist and Master of the Music of the Church.)

TO BE GIVEN ON THE SECOND SATURDAY IN EACH MONTH, AT 4 P.M., AS FOLLOWS:
October 13th, November 10th, December 8th, January 12th, February 9th.

Among the Organ items on the Programmes are:

BACH: Choral Prelude, "Christ came to Jordan"; Ten Instrumental Movements from the Cantatas, Transcribed for Organ by Harvey Grace.
BEETHOVEN: Pianoforte Concerto, E flat. (Pianoforte: RAE ROBERTSON.)
CHERUBINI: Overture, "Anacreon."
DELIUS: "On hearing the first Cuckoo in Spring" (requested).
FRANCK: Choral, No. 1.
GRAINGER: "Shepherd's Hey."
HARVEY GRACE: Rêverie on the tune "University."
HUMPERDINCK: Vorspiel; Waldscene ("Hänsel and Gretel").
LISZT: Legend, "St. Francis preaching to the Birds"; Introduction and Fugue, "Ad nos."
MENDELSSOHN: Sonatas No. 1 and No. 2; Overture, "Ruy Blas."
RAVEL: Petite Pastorale.
SAINT-SAËNS: Fantasia, E flat.
SCRIABIN: Prelude, D.
VIERNE: Finale, First Symphony.

Also JENNIE WATSON (Violin) and KATE LEVENTON (Pianoforte), at first Recital.

Communications may be addressed to Mr. A. D. DRURY, 1, The Crossways, Barn Hill, Wembley Park, Middlesex.

Organ by Bishop & Son, London and Ipswich.
Bechstein Grand Pianoforte.

The FIELD-HYDE School of Vocal Training

43, UPPER GEORGE ST., BRYANSTON SQ., LONDON, W.1

MR. FIELD-HYDE'S new Training Course for Teachers of Singing and Students preparing to teach will be held on Saturday mornings, commencing October 13, at 11.45. The Course will cover all aspects of Vocal Training, with model lessons and teaching demonstrations, and will cover the requirements of the L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. examinations.

A HOLIDAY COURSE will be conducted during the CHRISTMAS VACATION.

A PRELIMINARY LECTURE RECITAL, Subject: The Making of a Singer, will be given by Mr. Field-Hyde, assisted by pupils, in the Court House, Marylebone Lane, W., on Wednesday, October 10, at 8.15 p.m.

TEACHERS who have been through the Field-Hyde Training Course are amongst the most successful teachers in all parts of the country. The following are typical reports of their successes:

From a West of England Teacher:

"You will be interested to hear that my Soprano Competitor won first for the classical song and also the Gold Medal for the Operatic Aria, another won the novice Contralto, and my Ladies' Trio also came first at the Eisteddfod."

From a Teacher in S. Africa:

"You will be glad to hear that my Teacher Candidate for the Licentiateship passed with very good marks, and all my pupils did well this year. I do feel so grateful for all your kind advice and help, and for the stimulus you have given me."

From a Midland Teacher:

"At the Festival last Saturday my pupils won seven prizes and the Challenge Cup which was given this year for the first time, and at the —— Festival four months back my pupils took twelve prizes and the Cup for the best singer of the Festival, this being the fourth year in succession of holding this cup. Your course had a greater effect than anything else in my musical experience."

For full particulars of the Courses or Lecture-Recital, address the Secretary, as above.

WESTMINSTER CATHEDRAL

AN

ORGAN RECITAL

will be given on the first Wednesday of each month (except January) beginning

OCTOBER 10th, at 6.30 p.m.

RECITALIST: GUY WEITZ, C.O.C.

Organist of Farm Street Church, Mayfair, W.

A full list of programmes is printed in the September issue of "The Rotunda," obtainable (price 2*s.* net) either direct from the publishers, 234, FERNDALE ROAD, S.W.9, or at the offices of "Musical Opinion."

All particulars as to times of train, &c., in connection with the

SPECIAL "WILLIS" EXCURSION

TO

Liverpool Cathedral

ON

Saturday, October 27th,

will be announced by circular letter to those making application.

Note:—MR. H. GOSS CUSTARD, MUS. BAC.,

will be giving a SPECIAL RECITAL on the GREAT 5-MANUAL ORGAN at 3.15 p.m. for visitors.

Tickets obtainable from the Manager, 234, Ferndale Road, Brixton.

—— BOOK EARLY ——

JOIN THE ORGAN CLUB

(ACTING-PRESIDENT: DONALD PENROSE, Esq.)

AND VISIT

OCT. 20—MR. MIDGLEY'S ORGAN at UXBRIDGE, by COMPTON.

NOV. 10—ST. PETER'S, EATON SQUARE.

Further attractive visits to follow.

NOV. 24—ANNUAL MEETING.

Entrance Fee, 2*s.* 6*d.* Annual Subscription, 10*s.* 6*d.*

For full particulars apply Hon. Sec., 28, HILLMORE GROVE, SYDENHAM, S.E.26.

S. JAMES'S, MUSWELL HILL, N

ORGAN RECITAL

by MR. H. A. BATE,

Every Saturday, at 5.45 p.m., commencing 13th October.

Recital of music by S. S. Wesley will be given by the Choir on Wednesday, 3rd October, at 7.45 p.m. Organ solos by Dr. H. G. LEY, M.A.

LEEDS PARISH CHURCH

Annotated Service Book for the Leeds Triennial Musical Festival week. Exclusive illustrations; Hymns and Descants; an article on the Parish Church Music, by Dr. Herbert Thompson, M.A.; Special Photos of the Organ Console, Choir Vestry, and Portraits. Editorial article by The Precentor, Rev. C. R. Hall. Price, including postage, 2*s.* 3*d.* Address H. Bacon Smith, 31, Vernon Road, Leeds.

Proceeds for the Parish Church Choir Endowment Fund.

ORGAN PHOTOS.—Melbourne and Brisbane T. Hs., St. Paul's Cath., and scores of other important organs. I possess specially designed apparatus, and can take absolutely any organ, at low cost. G. Benham, "Bramerton," New Barnet.

St. Luke's, Redcliffe Square, S.W.

ORGAN RECITALS

SATURDAYS, at THREE p.m.

October 13

MAITLAND FARMER, A.R.C.O., L.R.A.M.

Harvest Recital.

Organist, St. Luke's, Redcliffe Square, S.W.

Contralto—ELSIE FRANCIS-FISHER.

October 20

G. D. CUNNINGHAM, F.R.A.M., F.R.C.O.

Organist, Birmingham Town Hall.

November 3

REGINALD GOSS-CUSTARD, F.R.C.O.

Organist, St. Michael's, Chester Square, and Bishopsgate Institute.

November 10

MAITLAND FARMER. Armistice Recital.

Bass—HORACE STEVENS.

November 24

Organ and Pianoforte Recital (Grieg Concerto, &c.).

Organ—GEORGE RYAN, F.R.C.O., Organist, St. Mary, Boltons, S.W.

Pianoforte—MAITLAND FARMER.

December 1

HAROLD DARKE, MUS. DOC., F.R.C.O.

Organist, St. Michael's, Cornhill, E.C.

ORGAN—NORMAN & BEARD.

Church, three minutes from Earl's Court Station. Bus Services: 14, 30, 31, 74, 96

The Pianist's Hands

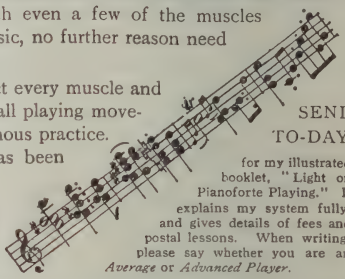
The Times says: "The excellence of Mr. Macdonald Smith's methods has been abundantly proved."

PREVALENT among pianists is the idea that you cannot play well unless you have a special sort of hand; this is a mistake. It is obvious, however, that the hands must be in perfect condition, otherwise the many technical difficulties to be overcome will be found insuperable. For a pianist every single muscle of the hands and arms must move the instant it is required to do so, and if this fails to be the case with even a few of the muscles brought into play in any complicated passage of music, no further reason need be sought to account for failure.

Let the "From Brain to Keyboard" System perfect every muscle and nerve in your hands and give you instant control over all playing movements without any of the usual drudgery and monotonous practice. Why not learn something about the System that has been used by many of our eminent musicians.



SEND TO-DAY for my illustrated booklet, "Light on Pianoforte Playing." It explains my system fully, and gives details of fees and postal lessons. When writing, please say whether you are an Average or Advanced Player.

From Brain to Keyboard

Macdonald Smith's System of Pianoforte Playing.

M. C. MACDONALD SMITH, 94, GOWER STREET, LONDON, W.C.1

"Controlled Relaxation and Weight Touch"

AS APPLIED TO ALL PHASES OF

PIANOFORTE PLAYING

A COURSE OF 12 CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS FOR HOME STUDY, SPECIALLY DESIGNED FOR THE BUSY TEACHER AS WELL AS FOR THE AMATEUR AND PROFESSIONAL STUDENT.

THIS method, introduced by CHARLES A. GILLETT after many years' close analysis of the actual playing of many of the greatest pianists, has never failed to bring results. To study and practise this system is an inspiration to all ambitious pianists.

Those whose desire is to attain the highest artistic standard should study this most modern teaching.

Write TO-DAY for FREE EXPLANATORY BROCHURE

The Secretary
The Charles A Gillett Pianoforte School.
11 SOUTH MOLTON ST LONDON W.1.

PERSONAL LESSONS DAY AND EVENING.

SIGHT-READING
AND MEMORY-PLAYING

Perfect memorising can be taught and your ability to read at sight increased in an extraordinary manner and in an incredibly short space of time by the Master-Method of Memory-Playing.

Read what this pupil writes of her own experience after only a short course of the Master-Method System.

The White Cottage, Highfield Avenue,
Golders Green, N.W.11.

Your lessons have opened an entirely new and delightful study for me, for until now I have not been able to memorise the easiest piece of music. I find that besides learning to remember what I play, I read with much more ease, due no doubt to the concentration you have so much insisted on. I have always been rather careless in my reading, depending on the effect of a difficult passage rather than the true notes, but I do not feel I want to be careless now.

(Signed) Mrs. M. P. HEWETSON.

If you cannot always trust your memory—if your sight-reading is weak—write to day for my Free Book, "The Master-Method of Memory-Playing," which is sent free and post free and without the slightest obligation. It gives full particulars of the simple Master-Method System of postal instruction by which thousands have benefited beyond their own belief. A post-card will do. State whether you play the piano, violin, 'cello, or organ, and whether a moderate or advanced player.

MR. REGINALD FOORT, F.R.C.O.,
194, BEACON HOUSE, HEMSTAL ROAD, LONDON, N.W.6.

MASTER-METHOD OF MEMORY-PLAYING
MEANS BETTER
SIGHT-READING

THE INCORPORATED SOCIETY OF MUSICIANS

RECONSTITUTED 1928.

THE FIRST ORDINARY MEMBERS OF COUNCIL:

Sir Hugh P. Allen, K.C.V.O., M.A.
A. T. Lee Ashton, D. Mus.
Granville Bantock, M.A., D. Mus.
Percy C. Buck, M.A., D. Mus.
Sir H. Walford Davies, D. Mus.
Allen Gill, F.R.A.M.
Lewis Hann, A.R.A.M.
Bernard Johnson, B.A., B. Mus.
Ernest Markham Lee, M.A., D. Mus.
Tobias Matthay, F.R.A.M.
John B. McEwen, M.A., D. Mus.
Arthur Wormald Pollitt, D. Mus.
Sir Landon Ronald, F.R.A.M.
William Gillies Whittaker, D. Mus.

The aims and objects of the Society are:

"THE PROMOTION OF THE ART OF MUSIC AND THE MAINTENANCE OF THE HONOUR AND INTERESTS OF THE MUSICAL PROFESSION."

The Society has been reconstituted in an endeavour to create a PROFESSIONAL REPRESENTATIVE BODY. The honour and interests of the profession can only be maintained by the profession itself, acting through a representative Society, and the Council invite the support of all professional musicians eligible for membership.

> ". . . . a study of the Committee's Report has convinced us that the musical profession has . . . . an opportunity of bringing into being an organization in every way fitted for the dual task of protecting its interests and furthering the progress of the Art; and we urge readers to give careful consideration to the Society's claims on their support."
>
> (Musical Times, July, 1928.)

Conditions of membership, application forms, and full particulars may be obtained on application to —

FRANK EAMES, General Secretary,
Incorporated Society of Musicians,
19, Berners Street,
London, W.1.

THE NORTHERN CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE

PRINCIPAL:

ALBERT JOWETT, Mus. Bac., Oxon.

COMPLETE COURSE IN COMPOSITION

Mr. Jowett announces to readers of the Musical Times this important Course in Composition. A most notable success was the celebrated Composer and Pianist WM. BAINES, who was entirely trained by Mr. Jowett.

THE COLLEGE ALSO OFFERS COACHING FOR ALL IMPORTANT EXAMINATIONS, MUS. BAC., L.R.A.M., ETC.

SPECIALIST TEACHING IN SINGING, VOICE-PRODUCTION, ETC. PERSONAL TUITION IN LEEDS, NEWCASTLE, AND HARROGATE.

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED. LYRICS SET TO MUSIC.

ACCOMPANIMENTS FOR SONGS, MELODIES HARMONIZED.

A well-known Song Composer advises in all matters relating to Song Writing.

NORTHERN CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE,
HEATHFIELD, MOORLAND DRIVE, HARROGATE ROAD, LEEDS.

The London Oratorio and Concert Association.

FOUNDED 1912.

THE ASSOCIATION exists for the purpose of bringing Secretaries of CHORAL SOCIETIES, OPERATIC AND MUSICAL SOCIETIES, ETC., into direct communication with capable and reliable Artists, without the intervention of an Agent, and is based on the co-operation of its members. Choral Societies engaging a quartet of soloists for any work, can have the advantage of preliminary rehearsal of the principals by the musical director.

Musical Director: Mr. Hubert Bath.

For Prospectus and List of Artists, address Secretary,
26, GUILFORD STREET, RUSSELL SQUARE,
LONDON, W.C.1.

"MASTERY OF THE KEYBOARD"

SIGHT-READING LESSONS

COMPLETE COURSE OF SIX POSTAL LESSONS

The Times: "Deals with the subject systematically from the first stage."

Music: "Goes fully and thoroughly into his subject from every possible standpoint. Cannot fail to be of service."

A PUPIL FROM CHINA WRITES: "My master is a gifted pianist, a minor genius, but he has not the least idea how he sight-reads, and cannot explain."

AFTER SECOND LESSON: "Your course has so far quite revolutionised my playing, and even now I am finding pieces far easier to sight-read."

GEORGE DENHAM, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.,
41, AVONDALE ROAD, S. CROYDON,
and WEEKES'S STUDIOS, 14, HANOVER ST., W.1
('Phone: Croydon 2703)

CORRESPONDENCE COACHING
for EXAMINATIONS.

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING

MUS. DOC., LOND., L.R.A.M.

Autumn Courses as follows:—

(1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work. Xmas, 1928; April, 1929
(2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work. ,, ,, ,, ,,
(3.) Touch and Technique (for Pianoforte Diplomas)
(4.) Trinity College Diplomas. Jan. and April, 1929
(5.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Jan. and July, 1929
(6.) Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc. (London and Durham)
(7.) Separate Subjects

NUMEROUS SUCCESSES

Candidates entering for the first time, and also those who have failed to pass any examination, should write to
Dr. SPRANKLING, 46, Clarendon Road,
Redland, Bristol. Telephone: Bristol 3033.

PAPER WORK BY MUS. B., F.R.C.O.

OVER 1,100 SPECIMEN WORKINGS

"Your lessons and ideas splendid."
"Your excellent models make my attempts look cold."

SUCCESSES (with those for January, 1928) include 3 F.R.C.O. (1 for Jan., 1928). 3 A.R.C.O. 2 L.R.A.M.

2*s.* 6*d.* per lesson and postage.

"E. B.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES

MISS LYDIA JOHN
(A.R.A.M., L.R.A.M.), CONTRALTO.
Lecture-Recitals of Folk-Songs, Elizabethan Songs, &c.
Professor of Voice-Production and Singing.
Pupils prepared for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c., Scholarships and Festivals.
28, ALBION ROAD, LONDON, N.W.6.
Lessons given at above address or West-End Studio, Cricklewood Conservatoire of Music, N.W.2; and Highbury Conservatoire, N.5, &c. Primrose 3869.

MISS ELIZABETH NICHOLSON
CONTRALTO.
Oratorio, Concerts, Recitals
56, Russell Square, W.C.1. Museum, 7944.

MISS MURIEL ROSCOE
CONTRALTO.
Trained at the Royal Manchester College of Music.
LINGUIST. CAN SING IN LATIN, FRENCH, GERMAN, AND ITALIAN.
Christ Church Vicarage, BACUP.

HORATIO C. KENNEY
TENOR, WELLS CATHEDRAL.
ORATORIO, CONCERTS, &C.
5, Vicars' Close, Wells, Somerset.

HAROLD KNOWLTON
TENOR.
Soloist, St. Paul's Cathedral.
Shirley, Park Road, Crouch End, N.8. Mountview 5289.

EDWARD REACH
TENOR,
AVAILABLE FOR ORATORIO, CONCERTS, ETC.
Streatham 7888. 12, Maybury Street, London, S.W.17.

ARTHUR BROUGH
BASS-BARITONE.
(B.B.C., LONDON AND PROVINCIAL CONCERTS).
Is available for Opera, Oratorio, Choral and other Concerts, and Recitals.
Brochure on application. Teaches at City Studio.
Hendon 2014. 22, Tenterden Drive, Hendon, N.W.4.

VERNON HARRISS
L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Gold Medalist. BASS.
Oratorio, Concerts. Vocal Coach and Adjudicator.
Senior Music Master, Downside School, near Bath.

FRANK POULTON
L.R.A.M., L.G.S.M. (Performer, Singing.)
BASS-BARITONE.
Next Broadcast from 2 LO., on October 11th.
33, Hounslow Ave., Hounslow. Hounslow 1536.

ARTHUR MANGELSDORFF
SOLO PIANIST
RUSSIAN MUSIC
CONCERTS AND RECITALS
TALKS AT THE PIANO
For terms, apply to
ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

WILLIAM SANDS
ORGANIST and DIRECTOR OF THE MUSIC, REDDITCH PARISH CHURCH
RECITALIST AND ACCOMPANIST.
For vacant dates, terms, &c., apply to
The Oaks, Mount Pleasant, Redditch, Worcs,
or, 4, Valley Road, Shortlands, Kent.

VOICE-PRODUCTION AND SINGING.

ALBERT GARCIA
CARRIES ON THE TRADITIONS OF HIS GRANDFATHER, THE LATE MANUEL GARCIA.
STUDIO: 59, QUEEN'S ROAD, N.W.8.

N. ANDREW
MUS. DOC., F.R.C.O., A.R.M.C.M. (Dist.)
Correspondence Lessons in Paper-work for Mus. D., Mus. B., R.C.O., R.A.M., and T.C.L. Examinations.
Pieces Annotated. Courses in Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, and Orchestration.
Terms, &c., Henrietta Street, Ashton-under-Lyne, Lancs.

MR. J. C. BRYDSON, MUS.B.,
SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE TUITION.
Fees from 10s. 6d. for Ten lessons, according to Course.
Recent Successes at A. and L.Mus., T.C.L., ETC.
"Balcary," KEGWORTH, near Derby.

ELIZABETH LEVY
L.R.A.M., GOLD MEDALLIST.
PIANO LESSONS (TOBIAS MATTHAY'S METHOD) and Harmony taught by her at pupils' houses or her Studios, Weekes, 14, Hanover Street, W.1, and 27, Buckingham Mansions, N.W.6. Phone: Hamp. 3972.

TO COMPOSERS

NICHOLAS GATTY
MUS. DOC. CANTAB.
is prepared to undertake the revision and arrangement of MSS., and to advise on any matter concerning composition and orchestration.
For terms, &c., apply, 12, Upper George Street, W.1.

E. SIMS-HILDITCH
LECTURER AND ADJUDICATOR
Address, 37 Victoria Street, Crewe.

MISS MARY LINDSAY
L.R.A.M. (Teacher's Diploma).
Gives lessons in Voice Production and Singing.
Moderate Terms.
26, Onslow Square, S.W.7. Tel.: Kensington 3627.

MISS PITT SOPER F.R.A.M.
Professor of Singing, Royal Academy of Music, London.
Prepares Candidates for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Examinations (Teachers and Performers).
For particulars, apply Wigmore Hall Studios.

MISS MARY WILSON, F.R.A.M.
Professor of Singing at the Royal Academy of Music, London.
Receives pupils for Voice Production and Singing. Prepares candidates for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Diplomas as Teacher or Performer. Also gives SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS to candidates entering for the L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Singing Teachers' Diplomas.
Particulars on application.
Address: 10, Harley Street, London, W.1. Phone: Langham 3909.

GEORGE A. ARMSTRONG, Mus. Bac., A.R.M.C.M., L.Mus. T.C.L. Correspondence Lessons in all subjects. Preparation for diplomas. 131, Warbreck Drive, Blackpool, N.S.

CAPTAIN PERCY BAKER, M.C., F.R.C.O., L. Mus. T.C.L. (Author of "Compend of Musical Knowledge," "Studies in History and Form," &c.). Specialist in Tuition by post for R.C.O., R.C.M., R.A.M., &c., Diplomas. Study Aids, 9d. Studies in Modulation, 3s.
Send for interesting Pamphlets on Methods.
HAZELDENE, TEWKESBURY.

ALLAN BROWN, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., L. Mus. T.C.L. (Organist and Musical Director, Kingsway Hall), 298, Balham High Road, S.W.17. Telephone: Battersea 0916.
Special preparation for F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O. Also L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. ORGAN EXAMINATIONS.
SINGLE LESSONS and PRACTICE on facsimile R.C.O. inst. Also large four-manual organ. Pieces registered and phrased.

RECENT SUCCESSES IN ORGAN WORK:

| | |
|---|---|
| 1 A.R.C.M., 1920. | 1 L.R.A.M., 1919. |
| 1 L.R.A.M., 1924. | 4 A.R.C.O., 1921. |
| 1 A.R.C.M., 1928. | 3 A.R.C.O., 1922. |
| 2 F.R.C.O., 1922. | 5 A.R.C.O., 1923. |
| 6 F.R.C.O., 1923. | 4 A.R.C.O., 1924. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., 1925. | 8 A.R.C.O., 1925. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., 1926. | 7 A.R.C.O., 1926. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., 1927. | 8 A.R.C.O., 1927. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., 1928. | 9 A.R.C.O., 1928. |

"Hints for R.C.O. Candidates" to be obtained from the Publishers, Reid Bros., 26, Eastcastle Street, Oxford Circus, W.1. 2/8 post free.

MR. ALFRED ALLEN, author of From the Organ Loft and a Communion Service in F major, would be happy to give lessons by letter to young writers of Church music. Llanychan, Ruthin, Denbighshire.

MR. J. PERCY BAKER, Mus. B., Dunelm., F.R.A.M., gives Postal Tuition and prepares for Examinations. Personal Lessons (Pianoforte and Theory), at 14, Hanover Street, W.1. Address, 12, Longley Road, Tooting Graveney, S.W.17.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:—

(1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work.
(2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work.
(3.) Interesting Courses of Study in Rudiments, Harmony, Form, &c.

L.R.A.M. Exams. 1910-28... 334 Correspondence Pupils successful.
A.R.C.M. Exams. 1914-28... 90 " " "

MR. E. H. BIBBY, Mus. Bac., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Waterloo Buildings, Piccadilly, Manchester.

In response to many requests, MR. BIBBY begs to announce that he has prepared the following additional CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:

(1.) The "Mus. Bac." Degree.
(2.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Paper Work.
(3.) A.T.C.L. and L.T.C.L. Paper Work. (30 Successes.)
(4.) The Associated Board Examinations in Rudiments, Harmony, and Counterpoint. (21 Successes.)

(Address as above.)

MR. BIBBY also gives PERSONAL Lessons in Manchester. Complete Preparation (Practical and Paper Work) for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L., &c. Address as above.

MISS J. BLAKE, A.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. (Teacher of Singing), prepares pupils L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Exams., as Teacher or Performer. Highest recommendations. Studio, 139, New Bond Street, W.1.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., PIANOFORTE.—Special Coaching by Arthur Ellarshaw, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

CLARINET.—ALAN FRANK (pupil of Chas. Draper) open for pupils, at moderate fees, and engagements. 28, Telford Avenue, S.W.2. 'Phone: Streatham 3456.

COACHING for first Mus. Bac. and "Exercise" (Durham) by CORRESPONDENCE, with models to every lesson. 1½ guineas, 12 lessons. L. Gen, 102, Nag's Head Road, Enfield.

FREDERICK GREEN, Mus.B., F.R.C.O., &c. Voice Specialist, Vocal Coach, and Adjudicator. Prep. for A.R.C.M. and L.R.A.M. 1, Newington, Liverpool.

FREDERICK C. HAGGIS, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., L.T.C.L., specialises in VOICE-TRAINING and SINGING. Pupils are offered, in addition to private tuition, exceptional advantages in Class-Singing, for the further study of Sight-Singing, Ear-Training, and Interpretation. Address: 14, Hanover St., W.1.

DR. CUTHBERT HARRIS, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE TUITION. 413 Successes in Mus. D., Mus. B., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.O., and the paper-work requirements for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Diplomas in pianoforte playing. For terms, &c., apply to 58, Avondale Road, Gorleston-on-Sea.

DR. CHASTEY HECTOR, D. Mus. Oxon., 1922, L.R.A.M., instructs Candidates personally or by post, for Degrees and Diplomas in Music. "The Downs," Old Shoreham Road, Hove, Sussex.

MISS H. HEALE COACHES for all EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC (at private residence or at West-End Studio), in Pianoforte, Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, Form, Orchestration, "Teaching," Modulation, Transposition, &c. For Terms, &c., apply, Dunraven House, 41, Albert Bridge Road, S.W.11.

HERBERT HODGE, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., Organist and Choirmaster, St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, London, has, since 1908, made a speciality of coaching Candidates for the Organ Playing Examinations of the Royal College of Organists, and can arrange a private course of instruction (or single lessons) to organists visiting London.

SUCCESSES IN ORGAN PLAYING SINCE 1910:

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1910 | ... | 8 | 1919 | ... | 11 |
| 1911 | ... | 10 | 1920 | ... | 7 |
| 1912 | ... | 20 | 1921 | ... | 9 |
| 1913 | ... | 18 | 1922 | ... | 15 |
| 1914 | ... | 25 | 1923 | ... | 15 |
| 1915 | ... | 25 | 1924 | ... | 7 |
| 1916 | ... | 18 | 1925 | ... | 14 |
| 1917 | ... | 2 | 1926 | ... | 11 |
| 1918 | ... | 3 | 1927 | ... | 12 |

5, Streatham Place, S.W.2. Telephone: Streatham 2195.

DR. A. G. IGGULDEN, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE COACHING. Latest Successes: Durham, Sept., 1927, Mus. Doc., 3 Final Mus. Bac., and three 1st Mus. Bac. passes. Also in 1927—4 Mus. Doc. and 3 Mus. Bac. Exs., after prelim. course in composition. 200 successes at Durham alone, besides R.C.O. Diplomas. The Durdans, Reigate.

A. H. LAWRENCE, Mus.B., F.R.C.O. (Asst.-Organist, Leeds Parish Church). Correspondence tuition in all Subjects. Preparation for Degrees, &c. 72, Castleford Road, Normanton, Yorks.

MR. C. E. de M. LEATHES, M.A., Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O. Tuition in Piano, Harmony, Composition, &c. Pupils successfully prepared for all examinations. 12A, Lisgar Terrace, Kensington, W.14. Telephone: Fulham 4826

MR. PERCY MANCHESTER, TENOR (pupil of Mr. Plunket Greene), begs to announce that he is prepared to give Singing and Interpretation Lessons at Cramer's Studios, New Bond Street, or at "Flexfield," Parsons Green, S.W.6.

DR. ORLANDO A. MANSFIELD, Mus. Doc., University of Toronto; F.R.C.O., F.A.G.O., &c., Sirsa House, Cheltenham. Correspondence Lessons. Revision of MSS. Scoring, editing, and arranging. Examination pieces analysed and annotated.

MISS F. HELENA MARKS, Author of "The Sonata: Its Form and Meaning" prepares for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and all other examinations, Pianoforte, Harmony, "Form and Teaching," &c. Personal or Correspondence Lessons in all Paper-Work subjects, including those for L.R.A.M., "Aural Training and Sight-Singing," and A.R.C.M. in "The Teaching of Musical Appreciation," &c. Pupils received and visited for the Pianoforte. Many recent successes L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c.
10, Matheson Road, London, W.14.

FREDERICK MARRIOTT, F.R.C.O., gives CORRESPONDENCE TUITION for F.R.C.O., A.R.C.O., and L.R.A.M. paper work requirements. 28, Belmont Hill, Lewisham, S.E.13.

DR. H. H. L. MIDDLETON, Mus. Doc., F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Specialist in Pianoforte Playing, Touch, Technique, and Interpretation. Thirty years' experience in preparing for examinations. More than 1,000 of Dr. Middleton's pupils have gained Degrees and Diplomas. Address: Weekes' Studios, 14, Hanover Street, W.1.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L. Exams. Correspondence lessons in Harmony, Form, Teaching, &c. 29 pupils' successes. Moderate terms. Arthur W. Morrison, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c. 39, Clarendon Road, Fulwood, Sheffield.

MR. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M. (Double Dip. Singing and Piano), L.R.A.M., Class A, Performer and Teacher.
Prof. Singing, G.S.M., 1905-1915. Special Lect. on Musical Appreciation to L.C.C.
"Recit. and its Rendering." 1s. 6d. "Vade Mecum for Singers." 6d.
Preparation for all Exams. by Post and Personal Lessons.
Special Courses of Papers: Singing, Piano, Touch, Musical Appreciation, &c.
Nearly 1,000 Successes for Degrees and Diplomas.
Send for Prospectus,
21, Boundary Road, N.W.8. 'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

W. J. FREDERICK PUGH, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., prepares for L.R.A.M. (Aural Culture and Voice Culture Diplomas), A.R.C.M. (Appreciation Diploma). Recent Successes, 34, Wilmington Avenue, Chiswick, W.4. Chiswick 3267.

POSTAL LESSONS.—Successful High-Class Tutor; all subjects for principal examinations. From 1/6 per lesson. Apply G.M.B., c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

POSTAL TUITION by F.R.C.O., F.T.C.L. (Registered Teacher). Any Exam. One guinea ten lessons. Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, &c. Courses in History, Choir-Training, &c., R.C.O. exams. Recent successes: F.R.C.O., July, 1927; A.R.C.O., January and July, 1928: A. Mus. T.C.L., L.T.C.L., F.T.C.L., July, 1928. Address: BM/JRMB, London, W.C.1.

SPENCER SHAW, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.O. (Organist and Musical Director, Whitefields Tabernacle), Tottenham Court Road, W.1. Recitalist. Tuition in Organ, Piano, Harmony, &c. Preparation for Exams.

DR. A. E. TAYLOR. PUPIL GAINED STILLIE Bursary for Cpt.; Gold Medal for Cpt., Ass. Board; Gold Medal for Har., Ass. Board; C. C. Scholarship; A.R.C.O., A.T.C.L., Mus. B. Compositions revised and accompaniments written. Portland Place, Lancaster.

TRADITIONAL METHOD OF ITALIAN SINGING TAUGHT, as taught by Garcia. Vacancies for pupils. Schools and pupils visited, lessons arranged in Town. Terms moderate. Box 6, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

SYNCOPATED MUSIC (PIANO) taught by Professional Expert. Write, Box 12, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

W. G. WEBBER, F.R.C.O. Recitalist, &c. Preparation for Exams. Organ lessons given on new four-manual Willis. Address, Christ Church, Westminster Bridge Road, London, S.E.1.

DR. PERCY WOOD, Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O. SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:

(1) Elementary Harmony and Counterpoint.
(2) F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O.
(3) A.R.C.M. (Theory of Music).
(4) Mus. Bac. Degree.

Several recent successes in all these examinations.

R.C.O. EXAMINER says: "Your system is undoubtedly an excellent one."

SUCCESS GUARANTEED—given any pupils with the requisite musical ability for the examination in view.

328 A.R.C.O. Successes since 1909.
195 F.R.C.O. " " "

RECENT SUCCESSES IN PAPER WORK:

| | |
|---|---|
| 2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1918. | 2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1918. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., July, 1918. | 2 A.R.C.O., July, 1918. |
| 1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1919. | 3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1919. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1919. | 3 A.R.C.O., July, 1919. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1920. | 10 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1920. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1920. | 6 A.R.C.O., July, 1920. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1921. | 7 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1921. |
| 6 F.R.C.O., July, 1921. | 8 A.R.C.O., July, 1921. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1922. | 5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1922. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., July, 1922. | 5 A.R.C.O., July, 1922. |
| 8 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1923. | 6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1923. |
| 7 F.R.C.O., July, 1923. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1923. |
| 7 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1924. | 9 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1924. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1924. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1924. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1925. | 8 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1925. |
| 7 F.R.C.O., July, 1925. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1925. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1926. | 6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1926. |
| 6 F.R.C.O., July, 1926. | 6 A.R.C.O., July, 1926. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1927. | 12 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1927. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1927. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1927. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1928. | 12 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1928. |
| 6 F.R.C.O., July, 1928. | 9 A.R.C.O., July, 1928. |

"Tralee," Warwick Road, Cliftonville, Margate.

FREE ADVICE and Assisted TRAINING to ambitious SINGERS, by Exponent of Exceptional Method; also to PIANISTS by Professional Accompanist and Teacher. Audition, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

CONDUCTOR (experienced) will GIVE SERVICES to any Choral, Orchestral, or Operatic Society, London or Provinces. Box 38, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

R.C.O. EXAMS.—Finishing lessons given on replica of R.C.O. organ at National Institute for the Blind, London. Apply, Mr. H. V. Spanner, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., 79, Crofton Road, London, S.E.5. Candidates are advised to apply early.

TO COMPOSERS.—Complete and systematic course, by correspondence, in Military Band Instrumentation. Write, Major Charles Hoby, M.B.E., Mus. Doc., Oxon., 80, Warwick Gardens, London, W.14.

WELL-KNOWN SINGER (Tenor), of wide public experience, desires Professorship of Singing and Interpretation at Music College or School in London or Provinces. Box 16, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

THE REVISION OF MSS. is UNDERTAKEN by musical critic and song composer. Lessons in piano, singing, theory. Herbert H. Nelson, 9, Grange Rd., Canonbury, N.1.

NEW COLLEGE, OXFORD

ELECTION OF CHORISTERS

A TRIAL OF VOICES will be held in NOVEMBER to fill vacancies.

Choristers are boarded at the School House, and are granted Scholarships from the date of election up to the age of 17½.

Forms of application, and further information, can be obtained from The Headmaster, New College Choir School, Oxford.

CHOIR LEADER (Soprano) WANTED at Brixton Unitarian Church. Small Salary. Apply Organist, 14, Daysbrook Road, S.W.2.

REQUIRED, SOLO BOY, ALTO, and TENOR. Each £25. Apply, by letter, stating age and experience, to Dr. Davan Wetton, Christ Church, Lancaster Gate, W.2.

TENOR WANTED for St. Paul's Church, Avenue Road, N.W. Apply, giving experience, and stating salary required, to R. Willoughby Jeffery, Saint Cast, Lapstone Gardens, Kenton, Harrow.

TENOR OFFERS SERVICES FOR EXPENSES only. High Church: Central or N.W. London preferred. Box No. 20, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

YORK MINSTER.—TENOR SONGMAN WANTED. Salary, £120. Apply to the Chapter Clerk, Minster Gates, enclosing three testimonials. Only first-rate sight-readers should apply.

BASS WANTED for St. Mark's, Hamilton Terrace, N.W.8. Good reader essential. £20. Also voluntary TENOR. Apply, A. R. Saunders, 14, Geraldine Road, Wandsworth, S.W.18.

CHOIRMASTER and ORGANIST REQUIRED for London Church. For particulars of services, stipend, &c., apply, Box 18, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1, giving qualifications, experience, references. Silence negative.

EX-ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER seeks RE-ENGAGEMENT. Being a trained Tenor, would assist in choir, with a view to taking over full charge. Box 17, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGANIST-CHOIRMASTER WANTED for Wallington Baptist Church. Salary, £40. Write, stating experience, to H. Knight, "Steephill Cottage," Fir Tree Grove, Carshalton, Surrey.

ORGANIST-CHOIRMASTER REQUIRED for Church of the Holy Spirit, Clapham. Sunday, sung Eucharist, 9 a.m. Apply, by letter, to Rev. W. A. Dunn, The Parsonage, 16, Elms Road, S.W.4.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER REQUIRED for Limpsfield Parish Church, Surrey. Choral Celebration, 10 a.m.; Morning Prayer, 11; Evensong, 6.30. Special Services on Festivals. Apply, stating qualifications, and salary expected, to Rector, Limpsfield, Surrey.

ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER WANTED for Leighton Buzzard Parish Church. Salary, £100 per annum. Leaving Organist is Music Master at a large Secondary School (worth £130). Excellent teaching connection and wide scope. Applications to be sent to the Vicar, Leighton Buzzard, before October 10.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED for Cairns United Free Church, Milngavie, near Glasgow. Salary, £100. Apply, with copies of testimonials, to W. Reid Gardner, Royal Bank, Milngavie.

PROMISING YOUNG ORGANIST wishing to STUDY seriously, but unable to extend present studies, desirous of meeting interested gentleman. Box 19, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

PUPIL-ASSISTANT WANTED by the Organist of St. Mark's Hamilton Terrace, N.W.8. Excellent opportunity for earnest Student. Apply, A. R. Saunders, F.R.C.O., 14, Geraldine Road, S.W.18.

YOUNG ORGANIST OFFERS SERVICES as Assistant, in exchange for tuition. M. Rowland, 35, Pyrland Road, Highbury, N.5.

BARGAIN! Two-Manual ORGAN. Church Organ Keyboard. 6 full rows reeds. £50. Suit student or small Church. Also BROADWOOD PIANO. Write, F. J., c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGANS (New and Second-hand) for SALE.—Electric and pneumatic action up-to-date. Built or reconstructed. Bedwell & Son, The Cambridge Organ Works, Cambridge.

PEDAL AMERICAN ORGANS.—One, Two, and Three Manuals. Bargains. From £15. Best Makers. Stagg, 45, Grays Inn Road, London, W.C.1.

PLAYER ORGAN, built by Messrs. H. Willis & Sons, Ltd. Open Diapason, 8-ft.; Lieblich bourdon, 16-ft.; Cor do Nuit, 8-ft.; Gamba, 8-ft.; Voix Celestes, 8-ft.; Flute d'Amour, 8-ft.; Orchestral Horn, 8-ft.; Vox Humana, 8-ft. Tremulant, three Couplers. Case in fumed oak. Built 1924. Electric blower. All complete; can be seen any time. Cost £1,500; nearest offer, £550. J. Speight, Moor House, Rishton, Lancs.

ORGAN PEDAL ATTACHMENT for PIANO. Complete with Stool. Perfect, £5. Seen evenings after 6 p.m. 8, Garlies Road, Perry Rise, Forest Hill, S.E.23.

CHOIR MUSIC FOR SALE at very low prices.—Well-known Anthems for Harvest, Christmas, Easter; Te Deum settings, Canticles and various other music. List from Rector, Patching, Worthing.

ORATORIO BAND PARTS complete with full score for hire: "MESSIAH," "ELIJAH," "CREATION." Pope, 17, St. Augustine's Parade, Bristol.

BROADWOOD PIANO FOR SALE.—Upright Grand. Excellent condition. £37. Apply, "Bank House," 376, Garratt Lane, Earlsfield, S.W.18.

HOPKINSON BABY GRAND. New in July. Price £110, including removal. Terms to suit purchaser. Miss K. Craster, 68, Regent Street, Leamington Spa.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF WALES, ABERYSTWYTH

A resident PIANIST-LECTURER and TEACHER of PIANOFORTE is REQUIRED to commence duties in October. The pianist will be a member of the Trio maintained jointly by the National Council of Music and the University College of Wales. Duties will be partly extra-mural. Salary £250—£275 per annum according to qualifications and experience, together with travelling expenses. Apply to the General Secretary by October 5th, enclosing testimonials or references.

FOR SALE
TEACHING CONNECTION
SINGING

One of the largest in Colonies. Ideal climate. Surf Bathing all year round. Golf, Tennis, Yachting. Permanent Orchestra, Symphony Concerts, &c.

Apply, Mrs. Vivian Bennetts, 79, Talgarth Road, Barons Court, London, W.14.

RELIABLE lady ACCOMPANIST seeks WORK. A.R.C.M. Reader. Vocal, instrumental, choral, orchestral experience. N. L., 1, Bourne Hill, Southgate, N.14.

WANTED, PIANO PRACTICE. Mornings. Must be very good instrument. London, S.W. or W. S. Lyle-Smyth, 58, Albert Hall Mansions, S.W.7.

WANTED.—Cancelled Col. RECORDS by Gervase Elwes, L1234, L1398, D1374. Sidebottom, "Sherwood," Bramhall, Ches.

BRITISH LYRIC WRITERS! We are offering £25 CASH, and usual Royalties for best Lyric submitted. Peter Derek, Ltd., Dept. 2049. 106, Charing Cross Road, London, W.C.2.

AURAL TESTS.—L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and other examinations. SPECIAL PAPER showing how to obtain success in these important tests. All candidates should secure this paper. Write, enclosing 4s. 6d., to "Aural Tests," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ESSAY.—A.R.C.O., Jan., 1929. Six special new Model Essays (3rd series), on the book "The Scope of Music," with Hints on how to write the Essay. Most Important. Also 1st and 2nd Series of 6 Essays on this book. Price, each series, 4s. 6d. Enclose P.O. to "Essays," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

MUSIC DUPLICATING.—All kinds, any number; perfect copies. Specimens and prices on application to E. Herrick, at 37, Amherst Road, West Ealing, W.

A TREATISE ON CONDUCTING.

12,000 WORDS. ILLUSTRATED METHOD. 2s. 6d. Post free; Abroad, 3s. Pre-eminent Technique
It will thoroughly prepare you for the position of "Conductor."
M. T. Cooper, M.D., 23, Beech Avenue, Blackpool

£1,000 PAID FOR LOSS OF HANDS.—Temporary loss of use: right hand, £8 per week; left hand, £6. Many other benefits. Annual premium, £3. Instalments arranged. Defence Ltd., 40, King William Street, E.C.4.

Can you 'IMPROVISE' at the Keyboard?

Improvisation or composing at the keyboard, also playing music (which you have heard) by ear, and without the aid of any written music—can be learnt by ANYONE of average intelligence. By means of a short Postal Course I guarantee to teach YOU to do this, to improve your technique, play at sight, and memorise music without difficulty.

My booklet, "The Piano and its Possibilities," is sent FREE on receipt of a post-card.

MR. H. CRAWFORD, KINGSLEY GREEN, HASLEMERE.

THE SHEFFIELD SUNDAY SCHOOL WHITSUNTIDE COUNCIL

Invites original TUNES for the Whitsuntide Demonstrations of 1929.

The Council will be prepared to pay the copyright fee, but does not bind itself to accept any Tune.

The Compositions to be sent to the Secretary, Mr. G. Pagdin, Montgomery Hall, on or before October 15, 1928.

THE HYMN OF LIGHT

(Adapted from the Greek—Fourth Century.)

To be sung in Unison to "THE LONDONDERRY AIR" (Traditional), with Harmonized Accompaniment by EDITH E. RHODES.

Words by BARCLAY BARON. Music Copyright by E. E. RHODES.

Copies, price 3*d*. each, 2*s*. 6*d*. per dozen, may be obtained from Hopkinsons' (Successors), Ltd., Music Warehouse, Commercial Street, Leeds.

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED

LYRICS SET TO MUSIC, MELODIES HARMONIZED, MUSIC TRANSPOSED AND COPIED, BAND PARTS WRITTEN, MSS. PREPARED FOR PUBLICATION BY A MASTER HAND, ACCOMPANIMENTS OF DISTINCTION WRITTEN TO SONGS.

For terms, write, A. CARRINGTON BRIGGS, Glenholme, Hessle High Road, Hull, Yorks.

PIANO PEDALS, with Octave Coupler

This wonderful invention supersedes all Piano Pedals, and is a Master Patent.

St. George's Hall, Liverpool, 9th April, 1921.

"The simplicity of the attachment, and the clever sixteen-feet, eight-feet, or both combined, 'OPTIONAL OCTAVE' contrivance astonished me.

"I was delighted with the Pedal touch and with the variety in that touch, which your Attachment makes possible. It is very responsive to the movements of the feet, and is reliable."

HERBERT F. ELLINGFORD, Mus. Bac., Oxon., F.R.C.O.

Owing to increased output, we have reduced the price of our Popular Model to 14 guineas cash. Deferred payments if desired.

Write for Lists, Prices, and Clients' Opinions and References to

THE MALKIN PATENT PEDAL CO., LTD.,
NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LYME.
London Address: 34, Spencer Hill, Wimbledon, S.W.19.
Please mention this paper when writing.

"SIMPLEXA" FINGER TRAINER

(Registered No. 692810)

FOR ALL INSTRUMENTALISTS

A simple and very effective appliance for giving strength and flexibility to the fingers.
Recommended by Editor of the Musical Times.

IMPROVED MODEL
Price 2*s*. 6*d*.; postage and packing, 3*d*.

BYEWAYS, CLIFF ROAD, SEABROOK, HYTHE, KENT

THE TECHNIQUER

A BOON TO ALL INSTRUMENTALISTS

Invented and Patented by Mr. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac.

Copy of Testimonial from the renowned organist, ARTHUR MEALE, ESQ.

"Westminster Central Hall, June 1, 1928.

"I have used the 'Techniquer' for a great number of years. It is the best means of keeping the fingers supple that I know of. Specially, lately, during convalescence, has it been invaluable, when not being able to endure the fatigue and strain of tonal practice, I have been able to use it for the preservation of finger and wrist suppleness."

Send for list of testimonials and full particulars post free.
"Hand Development," with 16 Photos, 1*s*. 6*d*.

Secretary: MISS F. J. FITCH, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M.
21, Boundary Road, N.W.8. 'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

"LONELINESS"

and other Essays, also extracts from Lectures on Singing delivered to the Students of the Royal Academy of Music, London.

By AGNES J. LARKCOM, F.R.A.M.

Price 4*s*. 6*d*.; postage, 4*d*. extra.

GERALD DUCKWORTH & CO.,
3, HENRIETTA ST., COVENT GARDEN, or any bookseller.

YOUNG SINGERS
Their Voice Cultivation and Preservation.

A concise, comprehensive, up-to-date guide to all engaged in teaching voice-production, enunciation, and singing to boys and girls

By JAMES BATES

To be obtained from:—
MESSRS. STAINER & BELL, 58, Berners Street, London, W.1.

Price One Shilling and Twopence, post free.

Made Mendelssohn laugh for 3 days

This woodcut, reproduced from PUNCH of 1845, and depicting a chorus at Covent Garden, made Mendelssohn laugh for three days—according to his own confession. This is one of the scores of illustrations in—

Grove's # DICTIONARY OF MUSIC
and Musicians

NEW (THIRD) EDITION in

5 Volumes

handsomely bound in Cloth or Half-Morocco

Over 4,000 pages.

96 full-page illustrations (24 in colour), and many smaller ones.

Some idea of the remarkable scope and thoroughness of GROVE'S is afforded by the adjoining table. This shows the number of pages devoted to the more prominent of the many musicians whose biographies and list of works are given:

| Musicians. | No. of pages of Biography. |
|---|---|
| Bach ... | 33 pages |
| Beethoven ... | 62 „ |
| Chopin ... | 5½ „ |
| Debussy ... | 3½ „ |
| Elgar ... ... | 7½ „ |
| Handel ... | 10½ „ |
| Liszt ... ... | 9 „ |
| Mendelssohn... | 60½ „ |
| Mozart ... | 33 „ |
| Schubert ... | 55½ „ |
| Schumann ... | 40½ „ |
| Strauss ... | 9½ „ |

7/6

as first payment brings the set to YOUR HOME IMMEDIATELY.

To the GLOBE PUBLISHING Co., Ltd.,
112, Strand, London, W.C.2
(Use unsealed envelope, ½d. stamp.)

Please send me Prospectus of the New Grove's Dictionary of Music, with full particulars of payment-out-of-income, and discount for cash.

Name.....

Address.....

M.T. 44. .....

POST THIS COUPON

TO-DAY for Free Illustrated BOOKLET

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Mandeville Place, Manchester Square, London, W.1

President:
THE RT. HON. THE EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, K.P., G.C.V.O., C.B.E.

Chairman of Board and Director of Studies:
Professor J. C. BRIDGE, M.A., Mus.D., F.S.A.

Director of Examinations: E. F. HORNER, Mus. D.

Wednesday, October 3rd, at 3 p.m.—Lecture.

Wednesdays, October 10th, 17th, 24th, and 31st, at 3 p.m.—Students' Concerts.

The College provides INSTRUCTION and TRAINING in all Musical Subjects (Instrumental, Vocal, and Theoretical) and Dramatic and Operatic Elocution. The Lessons are arranged to meet the convenience of both day and evening students. Entry may be made for any number of Subjects—from one to the Full Course. The College is open to beginners as well as to the more proficient student; pupils under 16 years of age are received for the Junior School at reduced fees.

The ORCHESTRAL, CHORAL, the OPERATIC, and CHAMBER MUSIC CLASSES are open to sufficiently competent persons who are not College Students for other subjects.

Tuition in the Rudiments of the Theory of Music, Harmony, Counterpoint, Form, Instrumentation, Composition, and the Art of Teaching is also given by Correspondence.

Particulars of the Teaching Department, with list of Professors, Fees, Scholarships regulations, &c., and the Syllabuses of the Diploma and Local Examinations, free on application to the undersigned.

C. N. H. RODWELL, Secretary.

JUST PUBLISHED

MENDELSSOHN SONG ALBUM

EDITED BY
Sydney Northcote
(Professor, G.S.M.)

New English Versions
BY
R. H. Elkin

CONTENTS:

1. ON WINGS OF SONG (Auf Flügeln des Gesanges)
2. IS IT TRUE? (Frage)
3. GREETING (Gruss)
4. O YOUTH (O Jugend)
5. THE FALCON (Wartend)
6. ON THE LAKE (Schilflied)
7. THE MOON (Der Mond)
8. A HUNTING SONG (Jagdlied)

IN TWO EDITIONS:
Low Voice, and Medium or High Voice.

PRICE COMPLETE, 3*s.* 6*d.* NET.
(Each song is also issued separately at 1s. 6d. net)

ELKIN & CO., LTD.,
20, KINGLY STREET, REGENT STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

BROADWOOD PIANOS

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD.,
SCHUBERT ALBUM
OF POPULAR PIANO WORKS IN BOSWORTH'S PORTRAIT CLASSICS SERIES.

PORTRAIT EDITION, 3*s.* 6*d.* net.
Edition No. 1119

CLOTH BINDING, 6*s.* 6*d.* net

SUPER-CLOTH BINDING, 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

CONTENTS;

TWO ECOSSAISES, Op. 33.
VALSE, Op. 9a.
LITTLE VALSE, Op. 9b.
GERMAN DANCES, Op. 33.
MOMENT MUSICAL, Op. 94, No. 2.
MOMENT MUSICAL, Op. 94, No. 3.
MOMENT MUSICAL, Op. 94, No. 6.
MENUET, Op. 78, No. 3.
IMPROMPTU, Op. 90, No. 1.
IMPROMPTU, Op. 90, No. 3.
IMPROMPTU, Op. 90, No. 4.
IMPROMPTU, Op. 142, No. 2.
SCHERZO, B♭ major.
SCHERZO, D♭ major.
IMPROMPTU, Op. 142, No. 3.
MARCHE MILITAIRE, Op. 51, No. 1.
BALLET from "ROSAMUNDE."
SYMPHONY IN B MINOR (UNFINISHED SYMPHONY).

Send for Revised Price List of Bosworth Portrait Classics Series.

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD., Music Publishers,
8, HEDDON STREET, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.1.

JUST PUBLISHED.

SOLEMN MELODY

BY

H. WALFORD DAVIES

ARRANGED FOR

BRASS BAND

BY

J. ORD HUME

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS PER SET

Separate parts, 2*d.* each

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

The Musical Times

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

OCTOBER 1 1928

(For List of Contents see Page 944.)

SCHUBERT AND MELODIC DESIGN

By Rutland Boughton

The complete breakdown of the so-called 'modern movement' in the arts is causing many musicians to reconsider and revalue the music which has been established as 'good' for many years. That reconsideration lends greater significance to the rather artificial nature of centenary revivalism, which almost inevitably brings about a certain number of second-rate resurrections; for even the great masters were not 'great' all the time. It would be very easy to choose a dozen futile songs by Schubert, and decide to scrap his sentimentalities with the brittle ware of modern activity. Even in his best work there is often a passing reminder of his worst. Nevertheless Schubert has prevailed; he has exerted a more than personal power, in that without his work we could not have had the songs of Brahms and Strauss, to name but two of his debtors; and it may be worth while to try to understand something of the nature of that power. However, to look back on a thing is a very different matter from a first acquaintance with it.

We look back on Schubert to-day with our minds oppressed or amused, as the case may be, with a modern dissolution which is asserted by theories the more passionately because it has failed of æsthetic justification.

I am never quite sure whether modern music is rehearsed. In some extravagant cases it would scarcely seem to matter what notes were played; so we cannot know whether the music has gained a vogue because it hides the defects of inefficient performers (the sort of artist who swanked himself into authority in the war years), or whether its votaries really are efficient and have spent precious hours of practice correcting their notational mistakes in Bartók, Stravinsky, and other such variation of parent for the same ugly child. Judging by what I hear from my friends who play in symphony orchestras it would appear that modern composers are often well satisfied with notes other than those they write. But supposing our executive artists to be men of musical integrity who have not failed to practise their modern music with such assiduity that the correct notes are played, then it must be child's play for them when they revert to the real masters; and the greater ease with which they play the older works will have good or bad results according to the measure of their oppression or aloofness during the period of cacophony. They may have got into the habit of playing the modern stuff hopelessly because they have been obliged by economic circumstances; if so, their musical hearts will probably be to some extent strained in the effort to piece the rotten joinery of the jig-saw jazz, and they will be unable to disclose the tender phrases of Schubert, who will find them out even more surely than does Beethoven with his firmer grip on the feelings. On the other hand, they may feel towards Schubert as we feel towards the rain after a time of drought. The heats may not have been unpleasant in their early stages, but life soon got prickly and dusty, and we welcomed the rain because there was real life and sweet growth in it, even if it made the fields slushy in places.

Schubert's contemporaries presumably looked upon Handel and Haydn as the great masters, upon Mozart as an amazing prodigy (divine or delightfully wicked?), and upon Beethoven as an artist of dangerous power. To those contemporaries Schubert must have seemed a curious mixture—in some respects a reactionary peasant, in others a follower of the doubtful courses indicated by Beethoven. To us, harking back to his simple, bald, and sometimes redundant style, his vitality and survival offer an interesting problem.

Up to and including the time of Bach the art of music consisted in the blending of two distinct expressions corresponding to the æsthetic standards called by Nietzsche Dionysian and Apollonian. There were the simple and immediately appealing forms derived from folk-art and the intricate intellectual forms of polyphony. Bach was the crest of a great double wave wherein folk-music and musical art were mingled; in his music we can see the perfect poise of the momentary pause before the wave broke to be re-formed in homophony.

Now the homophonic composers were concerned chiefly with harmony as the musical element which offered most scope to their style. Some musicians may perhaps regard that as incorrect in the case of Mozart, whom we have been taught to regard as a master of melody. As a matter of fact, it is more correct in regard to Mozart than to Beethoven, but I think it applies to both. Our conceptions of artistic form have been confused in music as in all the arts by the artificialities of the Renaissance. People talk of the superior formative influences of Italian art as compared with the German, just as they talk of the clean lines of Palladian architecture and the confusion of Gothic. But the Palladian architect could afford to be clean in his lines, because they were all decided for him beforehand in a complete knowledge of the purpose of his building. His art was the product of a stationary, and therefore a hopeless, conception of civilisation. The Gothic builders of the finest time never knew what chapel or outbuilding would be wanted next, or what enlargement of the main structure, to meet the growing and practical needs of the common service; their art was the product of a growing civilisation which had for its goal nothing less than the establishment of the Kingdom of Heaven upon earth. A similar conceptual opposition will be found in all the arts as they grew and were subverted from the original purpose of their growth; the same effort for vital expression and the same subsequent hopeless enchainment will be found in 12th-13th century architecture, 14th-15th century painting, 15th-16th century literature, and 17th-18th century music.

So, if we scrutinise the so-called marvellous melodic powers of Mozart we shall find that they amount to less than is generally believed. His instrumental music will be found to consist, as to thematic material, of an extraordinary amount of trivial decoration and padding (scale-passages and arpeggios), achieved with such masterly arrangement that they hold our attention in spite of the fact that they are often empty of musical purport—empty, that is to say, of the musical logic which can be traced in the melodic line of Bach by means of statement, repetition, and counter-statement, and above all by an evolution of the melodic line so prolonged that it often exhausts our capacity to take it in until we have given to it much study and reflection. Such study would at once expose the comparatively superficial nature of Mozart's art. Later composers also are fain of statement, repetition, and counter-statement. They are the easiest bricks for our handling, and Mozart is the best exemplar of such formal art; but it is not necessarily a melodic art. His scraps of melody are often mere chips of childish thought. His instrumental works are generally based on an assembly of short-breathed themes in melodic terms. That is why he had to pad out his forms with so large a quantity of scale, arpeggio, and exquisite decoration. He does it with such cunning that our interest is held long enough for happiness to be evoked; so Mozart is worshipped by musicians of all times, and called by Bernard Shaw 'the master for masters.' But we have only to compare Mozart's music with Bach's to realise what a mistake Shaw made in his description, unless he meant that the business of a master was to say as little as possible with the utmost assurance and fascination of style, and so spellbind his audience.

Perhaps some devoted lover of Mozart exclaims: 'What? Mozart no composer of wonderful melodies? What about "Voi che sapete," "Dove sono," and a hundred more?' Exactly. What about them? Are they the standards of melody by which we judge all other tunes from the 'Londonderry Air' to Isolde's Death Song? Or do we perhaps judge melody from a simple folk-song standard? Or have we perhaps not considered what melody really is?

Laymen apparently understand by melody 'Sweet music; musical arrangement of words; arrangement of single notes in musically expressive succession; principal part in harmonized music, air' (Oxford Dictionary).

Parry's article in 'Grove' naturally supports the third definition given, and then shows how melody has been influenced by rhythm and harmony. Let us then accept the definition upon which layman and musical craftsman are agreed, that melody is an 'arrangement of single notes in musically expressive succession.'

Now there are very few themes (I can think of none) in Mozart's instrumental works at once so well-arranged and musically expressive as the various themes in a good folk-song; and as musical expression some of his opera arias are positively bad. I have emphasised one word in the previous sentence. What do we mean by 'musical expression'? Do we not mean a music that is clear and complete, so far as it goes, in outline and emotion? By an expressive theme do we not mean a melodic unit which is definite and complete in shape and emotional statement? By an expressive tune do we not mean an arrangement of such units in a relationship which is both definite and exhaustive in form and feeling?

The outline of melody is the first thing; a phrase which does not at once propose itself as a thing of distinctive shape cannot be said to be musically expressive. Nor will a series of phrases, however well shaped in themselves, be musically expressive unless their relationship is established formally. The more obvious the relationship the more immediately acceptable the tune; the more vital the relationship the more enduring the tune. But a tune, and even a single phrase, may have a fair outline and yet be wanting as musical expression if it is not emotionally convincing.

Emotion is so implicit in musical sound that it is hard to conceive a phrase, much less a tune, which does not carry something of feeling with it; and, in fact, emotionless music is only successfully achieved by the destruction of all that has been regarded as specifically musical during periods of artistic growth. But however deeply embedded in music may be its original emotional impulse, there is a good deal of difference between the 'Londonderry Air,' for instance, and the sort of made-up melody which theorists propose for harmonization by students. Emotion is often present in the latter only by force of association—because all the music we have ever heard has had an emotional aspect, and it is hard to hear any musical sound without some quickening of the heart; but the waves of feeling which rise to an increasing climax and final ebb in the 'Londonderry Air' prove the presence of a vital impulse which affords a final test of good melody in extended form.

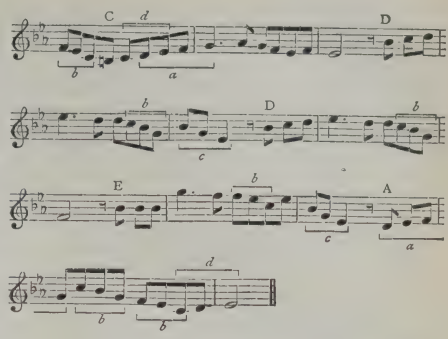
Such a tune is good in outline, and good in expression as well.

That sort of combination we do not find to the same extent in Mozart, whose works are generally inferior—the instrumental works in expression, the vocal works in design.

Consider the first subject of the Finale in the G minor Symphony—the example so aptly chosen by Parry because of its likeness to the opening of Beethoven's first Pianoforte Sonata. In matters of rhythm and symmetry Mozart's music is as vital and perfect as it could well be, and it is 'worked out' with the ingenious joy of a master craftsman; but it carries nothing of expression to equal the emotional power which is carried by a Bach Fugue, or by the opening bars of the Beethoven Sonata. The quality of the Mozart movement lies less in its expressiveness than in its rhythmic energy and in the adjustment of its sections. In the matter of emotional appeal there is something obviously missing from the Mozart which is present both in the 'Londonderry Air' and in the Beethoven piece, though in the matter of formal achievement any equal number of bars in the Symphony will be as well knit as the folk-song, and probably superior to the Sonata. If, instead of the Finale of the G minor Symphony, we compare the slow movement, the expressiveness is certainly increased, but even then does not reach the intensity of the folk-song or of an average Beethoven slow movement; and the expressiveness which is natural to the Mozart slow movement is partly smothered by the decorations without which the piece could not be endured to its end because of its melodic deficiency. And this, it must be recalled, is actually one of Mozart's most expressive slow movements.

If the instrumental music of Mozart is deficient in expressiveness, his vocal music is equally deficient in melodic design.

Good melodic outline consists of one or more phrases which, by means of repetition, development, contrast, and, above all, by links of inter-relationship, make an effect of living unity, giving a sense of growth rather than of plan, rising as a wave rises, reaching a crest, and falling away easily to its end. The 'Londonderry Air' is one of the finest examples of such a melody. Its rhythm is so well ordered that it could be analysed as eight varied statements of the same theme, or, following the plan favoured by musical theorists, we may discover in it five distinct phrases subtly varied and inter-related:



B and C are related to A, D and E to A and B, and the final statement of A is a kind of summary of all the phrases. Or consider a simpler tune-form, made up of one phrase with one interpolation. It is the melodic form best suited to the expression of a clear and direct emotional idea. When this formula (AABA) is used we are very near the aboriginal spring of song, for the presence of the B is merely to enable the chief phrase to be repeated without becoming monotonous. It is the interpolation of the B-phrase which differentiates this tune-form from the endless repetitions of savage song. But when a composer has anything direct and important enough to say within that form it has a power possessed by no other. Among folk-songs are many examples, one of the simplest being 'The Keys of Canterbury' (Songs from Somerset: Cecil Sharp). Beethoven used the same form for the slow movement of his third Pianoforte Trio, for the main tune in the choral section of his last Symphony, and elsewhere.

When the form ABAB (or more commonly in British folk-music ABBA) is used, the two phrases will naturally be of more equal value, and the possibilities of melodic growth much enlarged. Examples are the opening of Purcell's 'What shall I do?' from 'Dioclesian,' the chief chorale in the 'St. Matthew' Passion, and the first section of the slow movement from Beethoven's Sonata in C minor, Op. 13. The great advantage of this form seems to be that by means of the double repetition a broad theme is securely established, and it is then possible to develop it freely or introduce episodic matter without easily losing hold of the original idea.

In higher types of melody repetitions will often take a sequential form, or be varied or extended. Compare for sequential repetition Isolde's 'Death Song,' for variation the first duet in Bach's 'Peasant' Cantata, and for extension the opening of Elgar's first Symphony, and the slow movement of the 'Kreutzer' Sonata. Higher types will, moreover, introduce a larger number of phrases, but I think it may be taken for granted that an increase in the number will be associated, as in the 'Londonderry Air,' with links of inter-relationship unless the melody is that of a song with several verses, in which case a tune of much looser build becomes possible, the song getting its musical unity in the repetitions caused by the sequence of verses. We shall find many such examples among Schubert's songs in strophic form. In the best examples of such free melodies there will be little suggestions of inter-relationship like the sequential fragment in the first song of Beethoven's cycle, 'An die ferne Geliebte':

Ex. 2.

or the related scraps in 'The Ballinure Ballad' from Herbert Hughes's collection of Irish Country Songs:

Ex. 3.

Loose melodic construction may be tolerated only when there is to be considerable repetition of the whole tune; otherwise some formula must be established to hold the ear of the listener. The words may do something to hold attention; however, we are not now considering music as a mere reinforcement or colouring of verse, but as a medium for creative design. More to the point is the fact that the phrases of a rambling melody may to some extent be rivetted by means of a persistent figure in the accompaniment. Schubert freely availed himself of that unifying factor also; but to discuss it properly would take us beyond the scope of the present article, which is to consider the nature of pure melodic design so that we may appreciate Schubert's significance in the history of music, coming as he did at a time when melodic values had been overlaid with superficial decoration of Renaissance artifice on the one hand, and on the other by the almost occult discoveries of Beethoven in the emotional values of even the simplest harmony in association with rhythm and divested of obvious melody.

Not to labour the melodic deficiencies of Mozart (whose life-long power as an exquisite decorator and later power near akin to that of Beethoven are indisputable), let us just examine one song of his generally held to be a beautiful melody. In 'Voi che sapete' there are twenty-one separate phrases, of which (omitting the Da Capo) only five are repeated with or without variation, none being inter-related. This means that no fewer than sixteen phrases are introduced and afterwards ignored. The Da Capo rounds off the piece, it is true, and reduces the number of derelict phrases to twelve. As the musical expression of the saucy boy who sings the song it is perfect; as musical design it is as inferior to the 'Londonderry Air' as were the instrumental pieces in emotional expressiveness. Mozart is the great master he has always been felt to be, but the roots of his greatness were not primarily melodic. His natural genius was to give clear and light-hearted unity to a mass of charming detail by setting it out with consummate skill, adding enough harmonic solidity to give a moderate sense of depth. Later on his detail grew less charming and more beautiful—last of all grave and intense; but that was the full-grown and disillusioned Mozart who cannot be said to have fulfilled his maturity. The fulfilment was left for Beethoven. Mozart grew out of his artificial world—indeed he was thrown out by those who first pampered and then neglected him—and he reached the point where Italian superficiality had to be rejected because he had gained a deeper understanding of the value of art; but he never got near enough to the facts to understand that what we know as the Renaissance was an imposition in both meanings of the word. He never reached the point where he felt the need to express himself in a tune as clear and common as those which Beethoven was presently to use. Hence his failure as a song-writer. His opera arias, artificial with Renaissance ornament, make their charming and abominable effect. His songs are a longing for the innocence of childhood rather than an expression of it. Blake could sing Songs of Innocence because he had not been seduced by an artificial world; but when Mozart should have been singing his 'Little lamb, Who made thee?' he was being placed by his father in the worst possible conditions that he might become a mere money-making machine. So the simple song-form which is the natural origin of all that is most expressive in music became at once rouged and powdered with false sentiment and with trivial charm. His best-known song, 'The first violet,' is nearer in feeling to a Bond Street perfumery than to a Herefordshire lane.

Beethoven had not the same evil to contend with. For him, as for Mozart, song was not at first the chief medium for music; but his singing sense was not entirely spoiled, though, alas! he never learned to relate it to the limitations of the human instrument. 'Adelaide' is beautiful enough in its affected way, but in the 'Distant Beloved' song-cycle Beethoven is already very near to the cyclical form established by Schubert. Beethoven's life was spent in ploughing his way deep into the original mother earth which had been neglected during the period from Bach to Mozart. Starting as Mozart did, accepting as the main job of a composer the assembly and arrangement of thematic details to be bound up together by rhythm and made solid by harmony, it was not long before he reverted to the main principles of Bach's greatness—the principles of growth and expression as distinct from those of arrangement and decoration. The reversion is distinctly felt in the first Pianoforte Sonata. It is a musical reaction much like the literary reaction to Saxon English after an age of Johnsonese, such as 'The Ancient Mariner' of Coleridge exemplifies; or the realistic reaction in painting of the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood. The second subject in the Finale of the Beethoven Sonata presages a return to natural melody after the long subservience to those ideals which found their final musical degradation in the coloratura of the Italian aria.

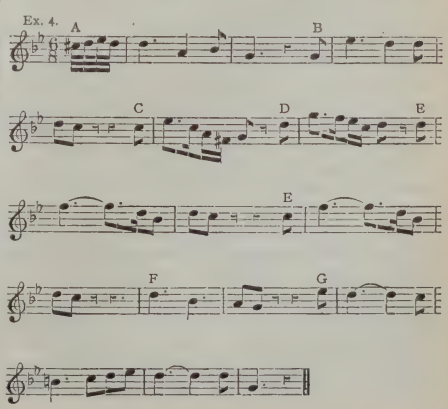
Even Spitta, in his 'Life of Bach,' advanced the idea that the fertile German nature learned a sense of form from the Italians. Nothing of the sort; there was clearer and finer form in German song than ever came out of Italy. What was learned from Renaissance Italy was the art of saying nothing, or a bad thing, charmingly. The artificial structure of the sonata endured the pretty things Mozart put upon it, but when Beethoven tried violently to make it a vehicle of true feeling it went to pieces. Very early in Beethoven's music we feel the pressure of his moods within the constraints of the arbitrary art-forms; he introduces real tunes more and more frequently, until in the Choral Symphony he fits words with a tune that might have been picked up in the street. He clearly felt that melodic form must once again become dominant in music. Its highest developments would naturally be in polyphony, and for that also Beethoven was preparing himself.

Schubert, man of peasant stock, took up the story just at the right moment for the song. His earliest attempts were, as might be expected, extra-ambitious efforts in the more formal manner of Mozart and early Beethoven. The earliest Schubert song we possess is a long-winded affair in various keys and rhythms; the music follows the words, but never asserts its own power of formal definition. Mozart had used a little trick to save the form of his songs when he was unable to use the orthodox Da Capo; he introduced at the end a little phrase from near the beginning, and so preserved a slight sense of structural virtue. Schubert at first artlessly ignored all tricks; his earliest songs were the more rambling and tedious, especially as many of them were long scenas and ballads of the kind popularised later by Lœwe. The natural Schubert of the three great song-cycles was at first oppressed by the instrumental and formal art which Beethoven had undermined but not exploded. Even when Schubert had discovered the weakness of his long-drawn ballads he did not find any means of giving them unity; and that is one of the chief causes of his failure in opera, for he was by no means destitute of musico-dramatic power, as many a great song testifies. The fact is that he was thinking in instrumental terms. So soon as his third song he pulled his material together somewhat by reverting towards the end to the most characteristic music near the beginning, but it was not a song-form that resulted—it was essentially an instrumental form in which harmony and accompanimental figure were more important than melodic expression.

Of course these early efforts were not wasted. In their weakness he learned how to win strength. He learned the paramount importance of the voice, which Beethoven had disdained—probably because of the ridiculous habits singers had acquired under Italian influences. Schubert avoided that mistake, while he learned from the greater master how to invent and apply effective instrumental formulas in his accompaniments, so to unite voice and pianoforte that the general melodic design might be carried on by either part, as needed by the dramatic idea, or (more frequently) in consideration for the bellows-capacity of the vocal organ.

As early as Schubert's fifth song the original strophic form was re-asserted—in a sort of half-ashamed way, it is true—young German manhood paying court to the Italian theatre lady, and trying to impress her with his complete knowledge of the world. Apparently the lady wasn't impressed, and in the next song all attempts at high-falutin' emotional effect are abandoned, and the strophic form so thoroughly accepted that no pains are taken to write out the different verses and accommodate their natural variations of verbal rhythm.

In this song—'Klaglied,' to words of Rochlitz—the interest is almost entirely concentrated in the vocal line; so Schubert inevitably reverts to a natural melodic form. Here is the tune:



C picks up the salient notes of B; D is related to C, E to B, and F to A. The introductory and concluding bars for pianoforte are related to A and B.

The accompaniment is an ordinary waltz rhythm, but it is saved from commonplace by touches of genius. This little song of two pages ushers in the real Schubert, and is worth all the pretentious things which had preceded it—'Hagar's Klage' with its seventeen pages, 'Eine Leichenphantasie' with its eighteen pages—bloated and bewildering echoes of Mozart at his worst, childishly talkative, and strained with Italian affectations. But we must all be chattering children and affected adolescents for a time, and the marvel is that Schubert arrived at so lovely and economical a conception of song when he was but a boy of fifteen. Its significance was apparently lost on musicians. Even Schubert's biographer, Hellborn, having patted his little boy on the back for the earlier attempts, describes as 'a slight and commonplace work' this song in which the composer really finds himself.

Once on the right road Schubert never lost it, though he often diverged in his efforts to find a larger world, and for the sake of dramatic experiment. The five songs of the year 1813 are short, only one of them in any way pretentious, all but that one based upon the idea of melodic form, and that one felt to be unsatisfactory even by the composer, inasmuch as he tried to make a better job of it a year later. Two of the 1813 songs are still alive, or would be if they were sung. 'Todtengräberlied' has both the form and idiom of a folk-song. 'Verklärung' is more loosely made, being overweighted with recitative, but its melodic sections are the more economical in their limitations (AAAABBAAA BBAA). The accompaniments are of the simplest kind.

This may fairly be regarded as a real reaction, not only from the artificial perfection of Mozart but also from the emotional intensity as developed instrumentally by Beethoven, and it is not the business of any composer to ignore valuable details contributed by his predecessors, if he can master them; but Schubert was only a boy still. The wonder was that he developed so quickly; and if I seem to linger unduly upon the early songs it is just because his growth was rapid and is proved in those very songs. He produced one of his masterpieces a year later. The early songs are deficient so far as the pianoforte parts are concerned, but he had first to re-assert the greater importance of the vocal line, which Beethoven had swamped in his reaction against the Italian vocal ideal.

When voices are used at all it must be possible to hear the words, or listeners will strain their attention and be disappointed, however good the music. That certain fact is æsthetic sign enough that song-composers must make the vocal line the first object of their care. But that is not to say that the accompaniments are to descend to the triviality of guitar thrumming, or even to the thin suggestiveness of the lute part in, for example, the songs of Dowland. Given a vocal line as good as the composer can make it, the more significant the pianoforte part the better, up to a certain point. An accompaniment may be too dull or too dominant, and in Schubert's early songs the accompaniment is sometimes too thin.

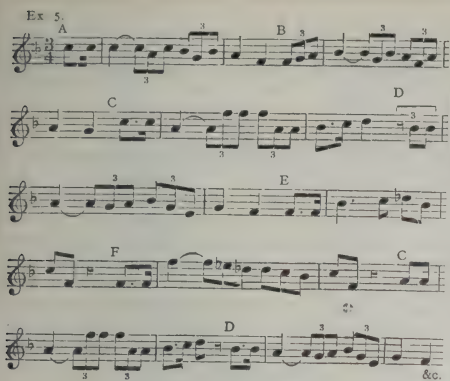
Not, of course, in the big dramatic songs. They are really studies for the kind of musical drama which was only realised by Wagner, who owes more to the lesser master than is generally realised. But while Schubert has the dramatic spirit right enough, and though in his simpler forms he could shake himself free of Italian artificiality, in his larger songs and stage works he was burdened by the Italian opera tradition. All he could do with the mass of narrative in big songs was to get through it as quickly as possible with the help of recitative. Schiller's 'Der Taucher'—the one unsatisfactory song of 1813—is a good example of such failure.

Narrative is barely endurable in ordinary verse; extended and maltreated by music it becomes unendurable. For narrative to be endurable in verse it must have very special qualities—powerful commonplaceness lighted by frequent passages of transcendent glory (Homer)*, or when it gives an expectation of naughtiness (Don Juan), or when sensuous beauty and melodrama are combined, as in Masefield's longer poems. Music has nothing to add to such expressions, which are complete in themselves.

Schubert eventually became sufficiently aware of music's inability to make a certain length of song effective, and his biggest successful songs are those in which narrative is reduced to a minimum and the dramatic element offers room for emotional development, as in the 'Erl-King.' He was essentially a composer of music, and when he had not to deal with verse which left something of emotional fullness or dramatic idea unexpressed he became dull and mushy. However, the year 1814 was to find for him the kind of song-form which exactly suited him, by offering a broad sweep of dramatic suggestion filled with some striking detail.

'Don Gayseros,' a cycle of three songs in which a lady is wooed by a devil, is not a great work of art, but it has the innocent and delicious ardour which seems exactly right for a boy of seventeen. The first of the three is very much of an experiment; it consists of two folkish tunes used in alternation through a circle of nine major keys. The second has a similar flavour, but proves a more real capacity for melodic growth by the interlinking of its phrases:

* I have no Greek, but Arthur Way's fine translation is good enough for a man who does not know what he is missing.



B related to A, D related to A and B, E related to C, F to E, and so on. It is a real counterpart in music of the Gothic spirit in architecture, both in the popular quality of the tunes and in the natural evolution of its form. The third song is interesting in yet another way. It opens with a recitative which is practically a tempo, akin to the Arioso of Bach and the declamation of Wagner; then follows a short, simple tune, and finally another tune in close relation to the music of the recitative. This economy of form seems to show that Schubert had practically acquired the sense of melodic design which was to avail him in his subsequent work. The pianoforte part is comparatively undeveloped, but there also are slight touches which make all the difference between life and death in the smaller forms of art. We may therefore pass over the songs which intervene between 'Don Gayseros' and Schubert's first perfect song, 'Gretchen am Spinnrade.'

No wonder that his masters said they had nothing to teach him! One biographer remarks, 'It is probable his only teacher was Beethoven'—and that is certainly true in some respects, for when reduced to the simplest terms of statement a good Schubert song is a Gothic development of folk-song with a pianoforte part derived from the emotional suggestions instrumentally indicated by Beethoven; sometimes, however, akin to the visual realism of Bach, as for example in 'The Trout,' where the figure of accompaniment is suggested by the look of the fish in the water. In 'Gretchen at the Spinning-wheel' the realism is, as with Beethoven, generally aural, derived from the sound of the machine. However, we are not concerned here with all the details which combine to make the pianoforte-song a self-standing work of art, though it is impossible to withhold some expression of wonder that the boy of seventeen was so far developed psychologically that 'Gretchen at the Spinning-wheel' is not only a perfect song but a perfect example of dramatic art also.

(To be concluded.)

AFTER PLAYING SCHUBERT'S PIANOFORTE SONATAS

By Erik Brewerton

A French critic, M. Lasserre, in a study of Meyerbeer has concluded that he is fundamentally lacking in natural freshness and sincerity. It is precisely and predominantly these qualities that Schubert's pianoforte music displays. The richness and expressiveness of much of his chamber and orchestral music is, indeed, generally absent when he writes for the pianoforte, as are the thorough-going earnestness of Beethoven, the witchery of Chopin, and the romantic exuberance of Schumann; but the constant freshness and sincerity are sufficient of themselves to endow this music with genuine life. Its freshness is particularly evident in its idyllic outlook, so that it rather disarms criticism, having too smiling and indulgent an air to promote the controversies and speculations dear to the critic. If the intellect is not challenged, neither are the emotions deeply stirred. A walk in spring need present no breathless landscapes to the eye, deliver no memorable messages to the mind. It is enough that Nature working on her generous scale with new life, new colour, and new sound, imparts on such occasions an indefinable sense of well-being which no sense of familiarity can stale. Easy-going, seldom concentrated, nearer to reverie than to thought, averse from passion as this music is, the breath of an eternal Spring has fanned it. And the generous scale on which Nature works is to be found too. Schubert is not confined to the economies of Grieg, a composer with whom he has some details in common. The faults of the Sonatas are certainly not due to a poverty of musical ideas; rather is he careless in the outlay of riches to which there never seems to be an approaching end.

His Pianoforte Sonatas, however, count for little either with pianists or the public. Beethoven, and the subsequent development of pianoforte music on more and more characteristic lines, have been too much for them. If it is their merit that they often suggest Beethoven, as in the Adagio of the Sonata in C minor and in the Scherzos, it is also their misfortune. The temperament of Schubert was certainly all too human to keep him in 18th-century leading strings. Like Beethoven's, his spirit was democratic, bold, and unconventional. But, unlike Beethoven, he made no attempt in his Sonatas, except perhaps in the first movement of that in A minor (Op. 42), to modify the form in the interests of expression. He was near enough to the classical tradition to feel quite at home with a form of composition which later romantic composers found irksome, and he remained at home. For after studying his music in general, one cannot but feel that this conservatism is at variance with the true character of the man; in short, he should have followed Beethoven's example and modified the form, or, alternatively, he should have remained faithful to Mozart and modified his ideas. The youth of Schubert, his amazing rapidity in composition, and his lack of great pianistic knowledge and ability will, no doubt, help to explain this apparent inconsistency. Thanks to Beethoven, the Pianoforte Sonata, like the Symphony, became an experiment in the grand style, the first movement particularly asserting itself more and more in determining the character of the whole work. There is little of this in Schubert. His first movements, generally marked 'moderato,' cannot rival those of his own two great Symphonies and Pianoforte Trios. Schumann, Chopin, Liszt, and Grieg found a more congenial sphere in a lyrical style of composition which Schubert himself foreshadowed in his Impromptus and Moments Musicaux. Pianists cannot be entirely blamed therefore if, as good evolutionists, they confine themselves to what is on the strict line of development, and continue to play the F minor Moment Musical or the A flat Impromptu from Op. 142, whilst they neglect every one of eleven Sonatas.

Those, however, who are not afraid of digressions and are able, through a certain frivolity in their natures, to put Beethoven out of mind for a season, may find the contrast of Schubert's Sonatas positively refreshing, presenting, as they do, an engaging alternative which, moreover, may not have received its due share of recognition. The contrast with Beethoven is evident in many ways. The melodic character of Schubert's subjects, the absence of strong contrast between them, the short development section, the preference in the second movement for an Andante rather than for an Adagio (of the latter there is only one example), the fondness for four movements, the inclination towards three-time and compound time as against common-time—in all these points a contrast with Beethoven is most marked. Especially in the nature of their themes may the difference between their characters be traced. How strikingly succinct and rhythmical are Beethoven's, and how much superior in force and interest their development! But how sharp and dry are the first subjects of his earlier Sonatas compared with the warmth and geniality of these from Schubert!

Ex. 1 (a). Sonata in A minor, Op. 42.

(b) Sonata in A major, Op. 120.

(c) Sonata in B flat major, Op. Posth.

The nature of such subjects as that of Ex. 2 in particular is unsuited to development, and the limitations of Schubert's pianistic accomplishment and the rapidity of his writing are responsible for a monotony of figuration and lack of grace. Some passages hardly look like original pianoforte music, but resemble a reduction from another medium. Such writing as the following might be effective on the orchestra, and a similar starkness is, indeed, to be found in the C major Symphony, but on the pianoforte it is strangely out of place:

Ex. 2. Sonata in A minor, Op. 143, 1st movement.

Though the sonority of these Sonatas compared with that of Mozart's and Haydn's is considerable, their texture is loosely-knit and does not repay much study. The beautiful subjects of the Andantes are sometimes too floridly elaborated; triplet figures are too much in evidence in the accompaniments; octaves often intrude, sometimes, as in the Coda of the last movement of the A minor Sonata (Op. 143), in an awkward and ineffective manner; and the balance of tone is disturbed by too great a separation between the hands, the right hand wandering away in single notes into a high treble, and making a poor show against chords in the left. Schubert's first movements lack strength, but against this must be credited the fact that the last, so often the weak spot in Sonatas, are strong and happy. The Rondo is more native to his blood. The popular style of his melody is more in keeping with the phrases of this form, so reminiscent of song and dance:

Ex. 3 (a). Sonata in D, Op. 53, last movement.

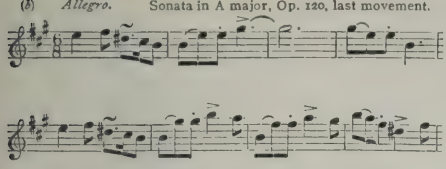
(5) Allegro. Sonata in A major, Op. 120, last movement.



The Scherzos, too, the most Beethovenish part of Schubert's Sonatas, are excellent. Full of vigour and humour, they would, if the conventions allowed, make admirable solos combined in certain cases with the preceding Andantes.

The pianist of these days may be excused an inflated pride in an inheritance of music so abundant and varied. The rapid extension of pianoforte technique, however, a natural consequence of composers for the pianoforte having been, with the exception of Schubert, fine players themselves, has its dangers. Craftsmanship is a manifestation of taste, and helps to create it. The power of the modern pianoforte, with the infectious energy expended by highly-trained performers, makes a nice taste in pianoforte music almost impossible nowadays. It is not necessary to go to the later Romantics for an illustration; the last movement of the 'Waldstein' Sonata will serve to make one hesitate to ascribe to music what may be largely tour de force. Such a movement Schubert could never have written. Whatever lack of finish, whatever excess of irrepressible semiquavers occur, there is no suggestion that he ever wrote deliberately for effect. A little naïve exuberance may be noted in the decorations of his Andantes, but there is an entire absence of forced emotion. He never attempts to heap Pelion on Ossa. That Schubert had a genius for the pianoforte is proved by the beauty of the accompaniments to his songs, but his lack of virtuosity as compared with the powers of other pianoforte composers, whilst it detracts from the interest of the expert, has certain compensating advantages. For it is a point gained that no one will play this music out of any other desire but the love for it; and the heart has no need of perfection. We come here to the crux of a problem, which, as regards music, Schubert illustrates very pointedly. When the judgment is inhibited by the affections what are we to say? Are we to acquiesce? 'L'affection éclaire,' says a genial French philosopher of the last century, and in a treatment of art from a sociological point of view he maintains that the judgment of the professional critic is to be distrusted precisely because in the pride of his authority he grows unsociable and thereby damages his claim to give an opinion. According to this standpoint the best opinion is the most charitable. Thus, to sing or play for the sake of effect, for self-gratification of any kind, for any other reason in fact than that of sympathy (which implies self-forgetfulness), becomes a futility. Just as no one plays Schubert except out of sympathy with his spirit (the fashions of centenaries perhaps excepted), so the whole tone of his music proclaims an extraordinary emancipation from self in the composer, an impression which the external evidence of his life and habits substantiates. The sustained steadiness and sweep of his style suggest those inexhaustible forces of Nature into which, pantheist as he was, he saw himself absorbed after death. His strength is not that more usual spectacle of the alien in the universe stung to action by the obstacles and perplexities in his way. Even in his biggest inspirations the confidence is too great to allow stress and striving to dominate for a moment.

Not even in the settings of romantic poems by Goethe and Heine does he give way, does he lose control. Schubert's message is optimistic, and, strange to say, appears perfectly reasonable at the same time. He makes us feel, bourgeois as we are, that we can talk poetry for the rest of our lives without raising our voices. This sense of elevation is the cause of what some would call the uncritical and monotonous eulogies of writers on Schubert—Grove, E. Duncan, Bourgault-Ducoudray. His serenity, his healing power are such that once they are felt he cannot be discussed critically as an artist; the word becomes slightly inapplicable. For a life devoted to art is so easily involved in the unnatural and unreasonable that it has been compared to living in a theatre. Artistic pursuits produce a weariness of the spirit, a thinning of the sympathies, and a nervous excitability which are evident enough without a resort to Tolstoi's excessive diatribes. If a composer releases us from the possibility of these disappointments and artificialities we cannot, for the sake of æsthetic scruples, afford to neglect him. Once Schubert's claim on these grounds is recognised, it is irrelevant to criticise him. He must be performed. He must be taken in deep draughts. The same dozen songs must be increased to a greater fraction of the six hundred. As regards his pianoforte music, a jolly little Marche Militaire corrupted by Tausig or a Moment Musical complicated by Godowsky are no longer adequate. Neither does it appear from a gramophone record of the well-known Impromptu in A flat, from Op. 90, made by Rachmaninov (wherein Allegretto becomes Presto and the plentiful pp's swell almost into ff's), that the most brilliant pianists are necessarily fit to perform this music. Only the musical public by its reiterated demands and discriminating appreciation can incorporate music, which could hardly occupy a more obscure position in this country, into a permanent place in the pianist's répertoire. It is the advantage of centenaries that they serve to confirm existing opinions or to correct them.

THE MIDDLE-CLASSICAL SCHUBERT

By Eric Blom

That Schubert was the true child of his time and environment, and therefore, time and environment being the early 19th-century Vienna, one of the first romantics, is a truism. What has not so often been pointed out as to become tiresome is the fact that he was also, and in a more intimate sense, the true child of his class. Among the great masters he is pre-eminently the middle-class composer, not only because he belonged to the burgessy, but because his art represents the burgessy as it had never been represented in music before. Earlier composers had written for the well-to-do citizen classes, notably those of Elizabethan England, where those classes cultivated music as assiduously as they patronised the drama. But though the Elizabethan artists to some extent adjusted their art to the robust tastes of the ndustrious—Shakespeare himself is rugged and crudely vital compared with the courtly poets of the Italian Renascence—they were not obliged to write otherwise for the people than for the Court, for the simple reason that Court and people were then almost wholly at one as to the kind of entertainment they enjoyed.

Not so in Schubert's time. The burgessy looked but shyly on at the amusements of Court and aristocracy when it was vouchsafed a glimpse of them at all, and for the rest it was left to find its homely art where it could. Middle-class Vienna had its own mediocre poets and its own amiable painters to sentimentalise over its mild domestic love affairs and trim garden idylls. Its own musician was Schubert. No masters before him had deigned to acknowledge that they belonged body and soul to the citizens, though they may have condescended occasionally to please them, as Mozart condescended with 'The Magic Flute.' Most composers were hangers-on to the great. Bach, indeed, wrote for the middle-class church-goers, but they could not have felt that this universal genius, whose art moved them to wondering awe, was altogether one of themselves. Beethoven snapped his fingers at majesty and nobility, but his broad humanitarian outlook would not let him become intimate with the middle class alone after he had spurned the upper. That is why his overwhelming greatness could not dislodge Schubert, his contemporary and co-citizen, from the affections of his own set. Beethoven's music blew stormily across the world; Schubert's was for long quietly confined to Vienna. It had the homely and rather complacent note of people who were comfortably pleased with themselves and desired to know nothing beyond their sphere. Only once or twice did Beethoven hit upon this tone of smug blandness—in the Bagatelles, for instance. In Schubert it is everywhere. A gentle, confidential familiarity is the most characteristic and persistent distinction of his work.

That Schubert could be neither courtly like Haydn and Mozart nor heroic like Beethoven was natural in his circumstances. He was the son of a poor schoolmaster with no prospects in the great social world; on the other hand there was no call for heroic denials at any time of his life, hard as it was. He belonged to a class that bore joys soberly and decorously and put up with sorrow in a meek spirit and not without a certain enjoyment so long as it came in a tolerably picturesque form. There was not over-much tenacity in these easily contented souls, and when the need for resistance came, no violent rebellion. Generally there was compromise. Schubert submitted for longer than was quite admirable to the disheartening drudgery of schoolmastering, and when at last he revolted, the sacrifice of his pittance was no great one, and friends were at once found willing to help him.

A lack of fibre in Schubert may be frankly acknowledged if we agree that faults as well as virtues make the attraction of people for whom we care. Energy certainly is not his strong point, nor truculence a defect of his art. Any attempt of his at a heroic style rings a false note of empty bombast. Even great tragedy he can scarcely attempt without becoming merely stagey. It is in the expression of intimate sorrow due to negative rather than positive causes, the sadness of the might-have-been, that he becomes infinitely touching and lovable. We may not admire the journeyman miller who withdraws at first sight of a rival, or the jilted lover of the 'Winterreise' who cannot be bothered to pick up his hat when the wind has blown it off; all the same, Schubert knows how to make them sympathetic to us with the insidiously pleading loveliness of his music. But sorrow with him, when all is said, is only the reverse side of happiness, no palpable reality in itself. On the other side there is always well-being, comfort, good-nature, the innocent tippling and flirting which fills the life of the respectably unenterprising burgess and would exasperate the adventurer; for Schubert the minor key is inconclusive and unsatisfying, and will turn into the major on the provocation of the least smile or sunbeam.

Just as there is this want of toughness that cuts Schubert off from those out-classed by daring or misfortune, so also he misses the elegance of the high-born. He is impatient of formality and needlessly circuitous in his use of form. Above all, he is the typical pedestrian of music, the man in the street used to neither horse nor carriage. His quick movements more often amble than race, and his Andantes do not so much walk as go for walks. He loiters with the delicious leisure of the Viennese citizen who still has within walking reach an unexciting but charming countryside. The Finale of the 'Trout' Quintet and the first movement of the Octet are characteristic of that unhurried rambling among pastures already just a little urban that shows us Schubert on his most endearing side. It is also the side which more than anything stamps him as a distinctive personality in music.

Sometimes on his strolls he will stand and talk to people. It may be aimless chatter or it may be something straight from the heart that he says; in either case he will pleasantly relax the regular gait of his walking measure. Four-square patterns will grow loose and the poetical metre will give way to the freer attitude of prose, though seldom losing touch with the stuff of poetry. In the songs this subtle breaking of the metre is especially noteworthy. I do not at the moment refer to any breaking of the rhythm, though the irruption of recitative, as in 'Der Neugierige' or at the close of 'Erlkönig,' can be very seizing; what I mean is the temporary extension or contraction of the metrical periods while the musical flow continues unbroken. In two of the most adorable songs, 'Fischerweise' and 'Das Lied im Grünen,' the unprepared hearer, who expects that the music will go jogging pleasantly on to the end, must catch his breath with delight when suddenly the voice breaks away in a wider curve from the steady accompaniment.

Schubert thus ambled and lingered around not only the gently agreeable things with which existence at Vienna teemed in those days—the cheerful burbling of the brook in the earlier songs of 'Die schöne Müllerin' is the very essence of Schubertian contentment; he could even be sorrowful, reflective, or tragic without fretfulness. In the 'Todtengräberweise' the leisurely pace that was a new musical something between the set classical allegro and andante becomes mysteriously poignant in spite of its apparent easefulness; in 'Gefrorne Thränen' and 'Ihr Bild' an aching woe is conveyed under a calm surface. But the dominant emotion in Schubert is joy, his readiest expression cheerfulness. His was an age weary of tragedy. The world—and the Vienna that was the world to Schubert—was but newly delivered from the menace of Napoleon which had been a terrible reality to Beethoven. It was avid of pleasure, but above all of tranquillity, of joy without excitement. The Biedermeier period was setting in, a time of effusive versifying, letter-writing, and diary-keeping, a companionable wine-bibbing and harmlessly philandering time, a time of dancing Valses nobles et sentimentales. Friendship and boon-companionship were essential—more important perhaps than love-making, for if true love was not to be had, flirtation would do; and if that failed, then some imagined frustration of the heart would keep it in a blissfully passive misery. We do not know that Schubert was ever in love. There is no evidence that the unhappy infatuation with the young Countess Esterhazy is more than a pretty fabrication, either of Schubert's own imagination or that of his friends. All we know for certain about a sentimental entanglement is to be gleaned from a reference to a pretty chambermaid in one of the letters he wrote from Zseliz in 1818. What, then, becomes of the anziehender, bewusster Stern at which he merely hints to his friend, the painter Moritz von Schwind, in a letter written during the second Hungarian sojourn in 1824? What even of the pessimistic poem that followed, a typical product of a time at which a little wretchedness was but the spice in a general flavour of good cheer?

(To be continued.)

'THE ANGEL OF FIRE': PROKOFIEV'S NEW OPERA

By Leonid Sabaneev

Hardly anyone can doubt that Prokofiev is a man of enormous musical gifts, that he possesses an inexhaustible wealth of musical forms, that he 'breathes music.' In this respect, so far as I personally am concerned, there has never been any obstacle to a thorough admiration of his talent; it has been withheld for other, profounder, almost psychological reasons. Prokofiev conceals within himself an ever-vigilant, indefatigable sarcasm, a Mephistophelian mockery and derision of everything, and particularly of his own creative work. He seems afraid or ashamed to be tender, profound, sensitive, to be altogether himself. Like a boy possessed by 'false shame,' he blushes for his noble qualities, and for some reason prefers to obscure them by less worthy revelations. Hence he is generally regarded as turbulent and unbridled, as a musical 'barbarian,' as the composer of a continuous 'scherzo.' Unfortunately, there is a considerable amount of truth in this view, but happily it by no means covers the whole Prokofiev. In him there is—and sometimes it is very strongly expressed—both depth and sincerity of feeling, and a special tenderness which, perhaps on account of the rarity and timidity of its appearance, seems particularly dear and precious.

It may very well be that in an impoverished musical world Prokofiev is now unrivalled in the extent of his talent and the vigour of his creative imagination. But the power of the world, the hypnotic effect of modernism upon him, are reflected in this false shame of the romantic, the fear to seem too good (psychologically)—for such things are nowadays naïve and provincial. Nevertheless to his and our happiness a great deal of provincialism has remained in this composer; the city has not bleached out of him the elementary quality implanted in him and his talent, which it is difficult, nay, even indecent, to compare with the elementariness of Stravinsky—theatrical and artificial from beginning to end. Between them there is the same relation as between a natural waterfall and an artificial cascade forming one of the attractions of some Luna Park.

'The Angel of Fire' is an opera on a subject by Valery Bryusov, the poet-stylist, written some time ago in the ancient epic, almost epistolary, manner. With Bryusov, as with a typical 'formalist' poet, all the charm and meaning of this work consists in its style of the later Middle Ages, reproduced with a masterly hand in the Russian language, which never knew a mediæval period.

My surprise will, therefore, be understood, as well as a certain fear for the result, when I learned that this literary composition, whose life is entirely in its language and style, was the canvas for—an opera! It is clear that the composer entered upon his task in a fit of original literary innocence, and knew neither what he was creating nor with what material he was working. But, again happily for him and ourselves, Prokofiev is not a very profound and clever composer, not a Wagner nor even a Moussorgsky; rather is he artless, like Mozart, who could write enchanting music to such incredible nonsense as 'Così fan tutte.' Prokofiev accepted the cold and glittering experiment of Bryusov, the academician, with its stylistic virtuosity, simply as a subject for 'an opera with Satanic episodes,' and created music which bears approximately the same relation to Bryusov's design as Mozart's 'Don Juan' to Byron's poem, or Gounod's 'Faust' to Goethe's.

On the whole, all this proves to have been for the best. My acquaintance with the details of the music of 'The Angel of Fire' had to be made through the medium of the pianoforte score, a profounder and more intimate knowledge of it being obtained from the performance of the first Act at a Kussewitzky concert. Rarely is it given to me in these days to derive pleasure (to say nothing of a sort of enthusiasm) from listening to contemporary music, but I am bound to state—and I do so in all sincerity—that my impressions on this occasion can only be compared with the most powerful I have experienced in the course of my musical life—the first hearing of Scriabin's Symphonies and Stravinsky's 'Petrushka.' It is genuine, new, and at the same time good music.

Prokofiev does not follow the age and its changing fashion. He is true to himself and to his own style, when once he has found it. But when for some reason or other he abandons his false shame and does not desire to appear shallow and ridiculous, or to gibe at himself, then he can, I am convinced, create things worthy to be regarded as works of genius. 'The Angel of Fire' is one of Prokofiev's comparatively few serious compositions—serious, not in the usual meaning of the term, but in a more profound and intimate sense. In this work he allows himself to express his real sentiments concerning the world and music; the Mephistophelian mockery of himself and of the best qualities of his inner ego disappears. And his creative work is speedily illumined by a light of unprecedented power. I think that it is a temporary illumination, and, knowing Prokofiev's spiritual lineaments, it seems to me that it will forthwith hide itself once more within its shell of ridicule and roughness, behind which I may be permitted to surmise that a colossal timidity and modesty are concealed. In listening to and studying his compositions, and especially 'The Angel of Fire,' I am often reminded of his literary double—also a Sergei—the poet Esenin, a man of genius who perished prematurely in the unequal struggle between his tender soul, with its merely superficial layer of coarseness, and the hostile revolutionary world.

Prokofiev is the Esenin of music, the same profoundly Russian, gentle, bashful man who, perhaps intentionally, drapes his extreme modesty in the garments of raillery and coarseness. It is a sort of original mimicry, the instinct which impels a sensitive soul to protect itself from the excessive roughness of the world; and this soul arrays itself in the simulacra of the rudeness of barbarism, in terrifying costumes, whose purpose is self-defence. That is what I read behind the sounds—fantastic, thick, and heavy as the mediæval vaults—of the scene from 'The Angel of Fire' played by Kussewitzky at his concert. This music is full of a wild inspiration, of an unbridled and unusually comprehensive imagination, which can be likened only to Wagner's and Moussorgsky's fantastic outbursts. After such sounds as these, which, in the words of a Russian poet, 'explode chaos,' Scriabin is a punctilious gentleman, at home in the drawing-room. It was revealed to me for the first time (better late than never; I should have been happy to have found that I had been greatly mistaken in my earlier estimates of him) that Prokofiev is an essentially profound composer, but he fears this profundity, mistrusts its influence over him, and therefore eschews it.

The fantasy of 'The Angel of Fire' is cyclopean and monumental. It breathes the spirit, not the sounds, of the distressing Middle Ages. And the orchestral colouring is grey, strong, sombre, like the colour of ancient ruins. One feels that behind this terrible exterior this man, like Beethoven—who was similarly stern and harsh in his treatment—is possessed of the profoundest tenderness, of which he makes no use. 'The Angel of Fire' is, perhaps, Prokofiev's best and most serious work; in any case there is plenty of proof that its central value lies in the music, in the composer's fantasy, and that in this case it is not a question of an ingenious approach to the subject. Prokofiev does not have recourse to any of the special artifices used in writing music; he is neither an atonalist nor a polytonalist, and in general takes no theory to his heart. He is an exorcist, after the style of those who figure in his opera, and in justice to him I must state that to a musician who has not yet lost the faculty of enthusiasm, who can still discriminate between organic tonal imagination and the mere piling-up of notes, the magic force of the music in this scene presents itself with ineffable power. This fantasy terrifies and intimidates, and I cannot point to any passages in musical literature approaching or rivalling these pages of genuine tonal horror (not the horror produced by tones, which, unfortunately, is very often encountered nowadays !).

In a recent conversation with me Prokofiev said that at the age of thirty-five every composer repeats his past. It is very pleasant to be able to state that the composer's irony was for this once wide of the mark. 'The Angel of Fire' has nothing in common with Prokofiev's past except its organic development. From a boy full of vigour, and therefore insolent and preferring jest and sarcasm to serious contemplation, he is converted by a gradual, perhaps painful and hence more profound and valuable, process, into a mature man, into an artist with a monumental, even a grandiose style. I have a presentiment and a suspicion that Prokofiev himself, as one of the types of 'unconscious,' entirely intuitive creators, neither understands the significance of his evolution nor is aware of its individual stages. Possibly he will find, as has already happened once, that these remarks of mine are not in conformity with his creative work, that with him everything is 'simpler.' On one occasion, in the course of conversation with a musician, he denied that psychologically he was of the breed of Dostoevsky, and that his creative work was tragical and broken-down by pain. It may very well be that, like many composers, he understands himself least of all, or perhaps it is an intentional dissimulation of himself and his comprehension. All this is of no essential consequence. For me personally it is far more important that I have at last discovered the real Prokofiev, at whom one can and must marvel, who is in some way commensurable with such giants as Moussorgsky, to whom he is even in certain respects very closely akin. Nowadays when so much of the music produced is bloodless, dry, rationally constructed, apart from any of the resources of inspiration, one somehow wants to offer a particularly cordial welcome to this music, which comes to us again, as in bygone times, from certain mysterious realms, where it has arisen by ways unknown to anyone, and least of all to its composer. I do not know whether Prokofiev is gratified or annoyed by the fact that he is reviving a vigorous romanticism, uniquely essential in the musical world.

There are spots even on the sun, and so much the more may we expect to find them on Prokofiev's opera. The most serious blemish is the position of the singers. I have no clear idea as to how they fare in the other Acts, but in the scene performed by Kussewitzky they were definitely and irrevocably smothered by the too dense and too powerful orchestra. Through a purely technical negligence on the part of the composer the voices are continually hemmed-in by the orchestral sonorities. The orchestra of Wagner or Strauss is louder and more powerful, and yet it does not drown the singers as does the comparatively modest, but too dense and viscous, orchestra of Prokofiev. The listeners' annoyance was increased by the fact that for a comparatively long time, on a background of really gifted music, the open mouths of the vocalists could be seen (and they were very fine artists—Nina Koschitz, Braminov, and Raisov) ; then the mouths closed and simultaneously the orchestra muted their instruments and played softly for a very long while without any singing at all. To say the least, it is an unsuccessful lay-out of the material. Perhaps the composer reckoned on a hidden orchestra, and it might then have been possible to approximate the conditions of a concert performance to those of the 'sunken' orchestra of Bayreuth. Whether the conductor or the composer was the more guilty has not been explained, but the blame falls on both.

It is difficult to refrain from hoping that this opera may see daylight as soon as possible ; only then can a definite judgment be pronounced upon it.

(Translated by S. W. Pring.)

SCHUBERT, LANNER, STRAUSS, AND THE WALTZ

By E. van der Straeten

Schubert was an elementary magnetic force, the synthetic expression of his time and people ; both are mirrored in his music, because his music is the truthful expression of himself. His personal magnetism was felt consciously, or unconsciously, by all who came into contact with him. Thus, in spite of his great modesty and reserve, he became the central figure of a circle of friends which for brilliance of talent has rarely been equalled in the annals of history. Eminent poets, painters, musicians, actors and actresses, members of the aristocracy, Government officials, and the intelligentsia of the merchant and citizen classes, all belonged to or were in some way connected with this circle.

Mentally oppressed by a despotic Government, they sought their pleasures and relaxations chiefly in the privacy of their homes, and, as it has ever been with young people, one of their favourite amusements was dancing. Their musical and literary evenings, held at various houses of their friends, to which they had given the name of 'Schubertiades,' often finished with the favourite 'Würstelball,' so called from the Würstel (little sausages) which were served as refreshment in those frugal days when the whole country was more or less reduced to a state of poverty ; but nothing could daunt the spirit of the Viennese, and the love of dancing was innate in the people. All Vienna danced; all Austria danced. Already at the beginning of the 13th century they had their 'violet festival' on the Kahlenberg (a hill with a magnificent view over Vienna and the surrounding country), of which the last Minnesinger and crusader, Neidhart von Reuenthal (whose mutilated effigy may still be seen, resting on his tomb, by the side of St. Steven's Cathedral), sings:

> Reimt aus die Schemel und die Stühle,
> Heisst die Schragen fürder tragen,
> Heut woll'n wir Tanzes werden Müde.
>
> (Clear out all the stools and eke the chairs,
> The trestles let be farther carried,
> To-day we'll dance unto exhaustion.)

They danced the ancient rounds, &c., but the dance tunes of the 17th century contain already the germs of the waltz. There is the story of the 'liebe Augustin,' a disreputable strolling bagpiper, who, in those terrible days of the great plague, in 1683, when he was lying drunk in a gutter, was picked up by the attendants of a passing plague-cart, who thought him dead, threw him on the top of a pile of plague victims, and shot him with these into a plague pit in the outskirts of the town. The next morning, when he had slept off the effects of his intoxication, he scrambled out of the pit and returned, dancing through the streets of the town to the tune of his still familiar song, 'Oh du lieber Augustin, Alles ist hin' ('O my dear Augustin, everything 's gone!')—known in England as the melody of 'Buy a broom,' and to-day revived as the Frothblowers' Anthem. Another dance-song belonging to that time is the still well-known 'Grandfather dance' ('Und als der Grossvater die Grossmuter nahm'—'When grandfather married grandmother'). The 'Bradertanz' ('Prater-dance,' from the famous park at Vienna), from a Leipsic tablature MS., 'Pertite ex Vienna,' of 1681, showed already the characteristic waltz-like rhythm of the later folk-dance.

An important element in the evolution of the waltz was supplied by the musicians from the Austrian Alps, the Styrians, and the fiddlers from Linz. They formed quartets generally composed of two violins, a guitar, and a bass, sometimes with a clarinet instead of the second violin. These quartets played on the boats sailing down the Danube, and when they arrived at Vienna they went from one beer- or wine-house to another, where they were joyfully welcomed by the people, who danced to their dreamy, charming Ländler (Styriennes) and rewarded them so liberally that many of them settled there permanently. The Viennese temperament, however, was too vivacious for slow-time dances, and from an amalgamation of the Styrienne, the 'Teutsche' or 'Deutsche Tanz' (German dance), and the 'Langaus,' emerged eventually the waltz. The Langaus (long-out) was a round dance in which the dancers whirled up and down the whole length of the ball-room until they had to stop from sheer exhaustion. A Langaus danced at the end of the second Act of Martin y Solar's 'Una cosa rara' on November 17, 1786, was vociferously acclaimed and became very popular. It was a direct precursor of the waltz, but marked in the score Andante con moto, whereas the Langaus danced by the people was in quick time.

Although the dance tunes of the Bratelgeiger (roast-beef fiddlers), as the wine and beer-house-musicians were facetiously called, were mostly only crude productions, Schubert was quick to recognise in them the true expression of the mind of the people. He saw in them the possibility of expressing the feelings awakened by the contemplation of the hills and forests and all the beauty of Nature which permeated his whole being. He lifted the simple folk-dance, which in its rugged, natural simplicity appealed to him more than the somewhat antiquated Minuet, the child of the artificial rococo period, to a higher level. His 'Deutsche' and waltzes became musical miniatures of high artistic value. His first set of waltzes, Op. 9, composed in 1816-17, included the famous Trauer- or Sehnsuchtswalzer ('Waltz of mourning,' or of longing, a title given to it by the publishers, to Schubert's great annoyance). For a time it was circulated in MS. copies, undergoing various changes in the process, and passed as Beethoven's composition until Anselm Hüttenbrenner obtained from Schubert an authentic copy in 1818.

All the early folk-dances were of the simplest binary form, consisting of two eight-bar sentences, each of which was repeated. Schubert extended the form, gave it a richer harmonic treatment, and often anticipated effects of Lanner and Strauss. See, for instance, his beautiful waltzes, Op. 96. Brahms, Kiel, and other German writers adhere in their waltzes more or less to the form which Schubert gave to that dance. Weber in his 'Aufforderung zum Tanz' develops from it the larger art form which was afterwards followed by Chopin, Rubinstein, Raff, &c.

J. N. Hummel is said to have been the first to string together several waltzes, adding a coda. He did this with nine waltzes, which he thus welded together for the opening, in 1810, of the 'Apollo Saal,' that fairy palace patronised by the Imperial family, with five large halls, three winter gardens, thirty-one rooms, thirteen kitchens, &c., which failed in 1839, was degraded to a candle factory, and burnt down in 1876.

Schubert himself never danced, but when at the Schubertiades his friends wanted to do so, 'dear Bertel' (one of his nicknames) needed but little coaxing before he sat down to the pianoforte, and good-naturedly played Deutsche, waltzes, écossaises, &c., until the perspiration ran off his forehead, and his tired, stumpy fingers refused to obey the dictates of his ever active mind. Most of the dances played on such occasions were the children born of the moment; if one or the other pleased him he would play it again, and afterwards write it down. In this way originated the Atzenbrugg dances, and many other precious gems that reflect a chromatic scale of every mood of which the human soul is capable. Yet how few are there who know them even now!

Schubert was typically Viennese; the dance was in his blood, and his heart responded to its rhythms. One can imagine how delighted he must have been when, sitting in the company of his friends at the 'Rebhuhn' (the 'Partridge'), in the Goldschmied Gasse, he heard a young fiddler, with his little band, play melodious waltzes that stood on a much higher level than any he had heard before from these wine-house musicians, and which proved their author to be a true tone-poet.

This young man was Joseph Lanner; he felt honoured and delighted by the applause of the great master, who henceforth often used to visit the 'Rebhuhn' with his friends on purpose to hear Lanner play. One day, in 1822, Franz Lachner, who had recently come to Vienna, met Schubert and Lanner, when the latter, who had never seen Lachner before, began to speak of the successful organist who had just been appointed at the Protestant church. Schubert introduced him, adding, 'Yes, yes, the little Franz's have really got something in their little heads!' ('Ja, ja, die Franzln haben doch was im Köpfchen'). Lanner, too, had something in his head, for he and a youth of about eighteen, who played the viola in his quartet (or quintet, as it may then already have been) were to become classics of the waltz.

Lanner was born April, 1801, the son of a glovemaker, in the suburb of St. Ulrich, now Mechitaristengasse 5, not far from Ferd. Raimund's (famous actor-playwright) birthplace. At the age of twelve he played in the little band of Pamer, a typical devil-may-care Viennese wine-house musician, a highly-gifted composer of dance tunes, many of which became very popular. Unfortunately he was addicted to alcohol and betting. The intolerable conditions which his dissolute habits created in the band caused Lanner to leave it, and with a few musical friends he instituted chamber music evenings at his parental home, where, among others, some of his earliest compositions were performed.

His great ambition, however, was to have a band of his own, and a beginning was made early in 1819 with a trio formed by himself as leader and the Bohemian brothers Drahanek, one a violinist, the other a guitarist, at a coffee-house in the Leopoldstadt suburb. The success was phenomenal. His dance tunes were so perfectly expressive of the Viennese mentality that they were rapturously applauded, and soon there followed engagements from wine-houses in the town, including the 'Rebhuhn.' At this period they were joined by Johann Strauss, who also had been in Pamer's band and left it, and at the younger Drahanek's recommendation became their viola-player.

Johann was the son of Franz Strauss, the host of a little beer-house, 'Zum guten Hirten' ('At the good Shepherd'), in the Floss Gasse, Leopoldstadt, where he was born, March 14, 1804. Linzer fiddlers and Viennese 'Bratelgeiger' entertained the guests there in a delightful atmosphere of conviviality which drew to the place poets, writers, and musicians like Castelli, Deinhardstein, Wenzel, Müller, and many others, who figure prominently also in Schubert's life. In this atmosphere little Johann's undoubted musical talent was fostered. The father, on account of financial embarrassment, committed suicide, and the mother soon after married again. She did not encourage Johann's musical propensity, and apprenticed him to a bookbinder, but his love of music and independence of character soon asserted themselves, and he ran away. Polischansky, a musician and frequenter at the 'guten Hirten,' found him wandering about in the town, took him home, and gave him lessons on the violin. His progress was so rapid that he was soon able to join Pamer's band, and at the age of fifteen he realised his ardent desire to play with Lanner, whom he idolised.

The dreamy, fair-haired and blue-eyed, gentle and sympathetic Lanner, and the impetuous, vivacious, and ambitious, black-eyed and black curly-headed Strauss—they called him 'nigger-head' ('Mohrenkopf'), attracted each other like the positive and negative poles of an electric current. They soon became such close friends that they went to live together in a modest little room in the Windmühle (No. 18), sharing their joys and sorrows as well as their clothes and—if there was any—their money, in the same happy bohemian fashion in which Schubert lived with Schober, Schwind, Mayrhofer, and others of his many friends. A violoncello was then added to their quartet, and the popularity of Lanner's quintet became so great that he enlarged it to a string orchestra, which on May 1, 1824, made its debut at the first coffee-house in the Prater with immense success.

He found himself soon so much in request that he enlarged his orchestra still further. Thus he was able to fill, if necessary, two engagements at the same time by dividing his orchestra, placing part of it under the leadership of Strauss. Lanner's compositions had by that time found a ready market, and Diabelli and Haslinger competed for the rights of publication. Strauss also began to show great talent for composition, and becoming ambitious to have a band of his own, he eventually asked Lanner to release him from his engagement. This led to a gradual estrangement between the two friends, which came to a climax on September 1, 1825. On that day the orchestra was playing at the 'Bock' on the Wieden, the suburb where both Schubert and Schwind lived at that time. A heated altercation ensued between Lanner and Strauss, in which the musicians as well as the audience took sides, and it ended in a general scrimmage, with considerable damage to the room.

The two young leaders parted, each going his own way. Lanner, the more feeling of the two, expressed his grief in the so-called 'Trennungswalzer,' which describes under three headings the events of that evening and the fourth part is a plaint. Strauss was already married, and his son Johann, who was to surpass even his father, was born on October 25, 1825. Lanner married in 1828. The wedding feast was given at the 'Bock,' and while the friends of Lanner were toasting the bride and bridegroom Strauss entered the room to offer his congratulations. The friends embraced in deep emotion, and a complete reconciliation took place, but so far as their artistic pursuits were concerned their ways continued to run apart.

Strauss had an orchestra of fourteen players. His waltzes had met with immense success, engagements were coming in from all parts, and publishers were eager to produce his compositions. The artistic rivalry between the two 'waltz kings' proved a great stimulant in the evolution of the popular music of Vienna. Few of their followers have equalled them; none have surpassed them in their particular branch, except the younger Johann Strauss. Lanner was the better melodist, revelling in broad cantilena. The best of Lanner's compositions are like an echo of Schubert, and many great musicians took pleasure in them. Mendelssohn, in a letter to Ferdinand David, says,

'. . . the printed piece of music is "Die Werber" ("The Suitors"), by Lanner. I wish you would study it.'

Strauss's music was of a more effervescent nature, with strongly marked rhythms and real orchestral finesse. His son Johann shows the same characteristics, and expanded the form to larger dimensions, especially in his introductions. An example of this is afforded by his 'Blue Danube' waltz, which Brahms admired so much that he wrote the opening bars in Strauss's album, and underneath the words, 'Leider nicht von mir [Unfortunately not by me], Johannes Brahms.'

SCHUMANN'S 'WOMAN'S LOVE AND LIFE' CYCLE: A REFLECTION

By Lionel R. McColvin

Schumann's cycle, 'Woman's Love and Life,' raises a curious little problem in æsthetics; and not a few worthy critics, because they have not recognised the existence of this problem, have felt compelled to utter mild sneers about a work which deserves better from them. Now that six of these songs have been recorded,* however, we have a partial solution of the problem which has interesting implications.

The difficulty lies in the words. Unlike many poems, these do mean something; they are sensible and coherent. But—they say things which wouldn't be said, though they might be thought. We have here the passionate, almost gushing, utterances of a young woman very much in love. And, say the critics, no sensible woman would say things like this. They accuse the poet and composer of presenting either an overstrung, over-romantic, immodest girl, or an unreal, impossible, and consequently inartistic, picture. In brief, they would probably dismiss the subject with some such remark as, 'No decent girl would shout about her lover in that way.'

And of course she wouldn't.

She might, however, think of him in these terms. A particularly communicative girl might even write like this to an ideal confidante—a most intimate friend, a sister.

The problem is this, then: Have we to assume that a song implies a singer?—that the speech of a musical work need have any counterpart in actual life? We might say, 'No,' remarking that there are thousands of songs which express ideas and thoughts that no one in real life would dream of expressing. That ready answer would not face the difficulty, however, since it would refer mostly to those songs which are meaningless or stupid. And this Schumann cycle is neither. Its ideas are not meaningless, but exceedingly lucid, not stupid but altogether genuine and logical.

They bear the stamp of reality as thoughts, but not as spoken utterances.

But unfortunately, before we can hear the song some one has got to sing it! The presence of a fleshly mortal to give reality to the song at the same time—in this case—makes it unreal.

Read the words alone. Chamisso, who wrote them, was not only a poet of merit; he was one who thought and felt. He himself had suffered much and understood much before these poems were set down. His famous 'Shadowless Man,' though we may read it simply as a weird tale, is a philosophical document into which he has put much of his own being. Sit down and read the poems, forgetting the songs, and you will say, 'This man knows a good deal about human nature, and here he has given us an intimate glimpse into the workings of the mind of a woman—of a certain type of woman, admittedly, but not an exceptional or abnormal one.'

That is exactly what he has done. He hasn't written a series of recitations.

Schumann's share is very similar. He, impressed by the truth of the poems, sought to heighten their reality. To an unusual extent Schumann was interested in the psychological aspect of song, rather than the purely vocal. He turned to the song, thinking not of the singer, but of its suitability as a medium for the expression of his thoughts. This is shown in several ways—by the fact that he wrote most of his songs during the one period when he was most concerned with love, and that love is their principal theme, by the absolute spontaneity of his songs—upon which Grove, Dannreuther, Niecks, and others specially comment.

Now, to return to this cycle: if a composer deliberately wrote songs, with a singer in mind, to words which should not be sung, he would be guilty of an artistic fault—though, perhaps, a slight one. I would suggest, however, that Schumann did not write these songs with a singer in mind, but simply with the idea of intensifying the words by music—the real aim, of course, of all good songs, though generally this aim is accompanied by the desire to create also vocal and musical beauty and expressiveness.

But if Schumann was not guilty, we make him guilty every time these songs are sung!

Here we come to the place of the gramophone. Do we find here yet another to add to its many benefits? The critic of mechanical reproduction often objects that it takes away the personal element. Here, however, it may be that this is a positive advantage. If we attend a recital we cannot forget that a singer is singing these songs, saying these things aloud to us. With the records it is not impossible to forget the singer. We forget the accompanist who, as it happens, is here nearly as important. We do not think of a real living man in evening dress; rather are we conscious that we are hearing an interpretation of the pianoforte music. Why should we not similarly think of the interpretation of the vocal part?—regarding both, as it were, as disembodied musical expression.

If this is accomplished we can easily come to regard these songs as the expression of thoughts, and not as the inartistic utterances of unutterable words. The problem of the cycle is thus solved. We are able to enjoy, without any artistic qualms, one of the finest and most intimate song-cycles in existence.

* By Emmy Bettendorf (Parlophone).

---

Dr. Harold Darke asks us to state, in reply to many inquiries, that a recent operation prevents him from giving his usual autumn series of Bach recitals at St. Michael's, Cornhill. He hopes to be able to do so a little later.

NEW LIGHT ON LATE TUDOR COMPOSERS

By W. H. Grattan Flood

XXXVIII.—William Bathe

To the credit of a brilliant young Irish amateur musician, William Bathe, of Dublin, must be accorded the first printed English work on musical theory, viz., 'A Brief Introduction to the Art of Musick,' in 1584, thirteen years before the appearance of Morley's 'Plaine and Easie Introduction to Practicall Musicke' (1597). Mr. Henry Davey fully admits Bathe's wonderful powers as a theorist, and says that his book 'is remarkable in its perception of the octave, instead of the hexachord, as the foundation of the scale, and for its allusions to the use of accidentals.' It may be added that not only did Bathe designate Measures as 'Bars' (in which Morley followed him), but he also adumbrates the modern scale. His biography is well-known on the Continent, but English writers have not yet done jutice to him.

Born in Drumcondra Castle, near Dublin, on Easter Sunday, April 2, 1564, the son of John Bathe, an Irish judge, and Eleanor Preston, daughter of Janico Preston, Viscount of Gormanston, William Bathe was brought up in a cultured atmosphere. As a boy he showed great proficiency on the harp, but was also of a literary turn of mind. In 1582 he was sent to Oxford University, where he studied for several years, and in 1584 published his first theoretical work on music, dedicated to his grand-uncle, the Earl of Kildare. In this work, printed in London 'by Abel Jeffes, dwelling in Sermon Lane near Paulis Chain,' he describes himself as 'student at Oxenford.' He lays down rules that may be said to have been a short cut to musical knowledge, and devised a system whereby a child could learn in a month or less to sing at sight.

In October, 1584, Bathe was presented to Queen Elizabeth by Sir John Perrott, Viceroy of Ireland, and he delighted the Queen by his marvellous skill in playing on all kinds of musical instruments. The State Papers furnish proofs of the Queen's interest in this Irish student of Oxford, and he got livery of his Irish estates on September 24, 1590, his father having died on July 18, 1586. He presented Elizabeth with a harp of his own make, and also taught the Queen mnemonics.

Bathe followed up his first work with another more elaborate treatise in 1590, but not published until 1600. This was entitled: 'A Briefe Introduction to the Skill of Song; concerning the Practise, set forth by William Bathe, Gentleman.' In this work are set down 'ten sundry ways of two parts in one upon the plaine song, also, a Table newly added of the comparisons of Cleves, how one followeth another for the Naming of Notes; with other necessary examples, to further the learner.' This book was printed by Thomas Este, and might well be reprinted, for it contains much sound theory on voice cultivation and the art of singing at sight. He gives the following synopsis entitled 'Ante Rules of Song':

'1. To prepare for Naming the Notes: Practise to sunder the Vowels and Consonants, distinctly pronouncing them according to the manner of the place.

'2. To prepare for Quantitie: Practise to have the breath long to continue, and the tongue at liberty to run.

'3. To prepare for Time: Practise in striking to keep a just proportion of one stroke to another.

'4. To prepare for Tune: Practise to have your voice clear, which when thou hast done, learn the rules following:

'The skill of song doth consist in four things—Naming, Quantitie, Time, Tune.'

While in London, from 1588 to 1591, Bathe was no doubt acquainted with Byrd, Morley, Campion, Rossiter, Dowland, and other Elizabethan composers; but he had long determined to devote himself to religion, and so, having returned to Dublin, and having made over his inheritance to his brother, John, he set sail for Flanders in November, 1591. A letter from Sir William Fitzwilliam, Lord Deputy of Ireland, to Burghley, dated December 2, 1591, is the last we hear of Bathe as a musician: 'It has transpired that one William Bathe, a gentleman of the Pale, dwelling near Dublin, one known to your lordship for his skill in music, and for his late device of the new Harp which he presented to her Majesty, who has lately gone to Spain, did at his departure leave a cypher with William Nugent whereby to carry on a correspondence on matters of State.'

From 1592 to 1595 Bathe studied in Flanders, and in the latter year, on August 6, entered the Jesuit novitiate at Tournai, being soon after ordained Priest, previous to which he taught at St. Omer's, where there were a large number of English youths being prepared for Douai, Rome, and Spain. In May, 1601, he was selected to accompany Father Mansoni, S.J. (Apostolic Nuncio), to Ireland, but on reaching the Court of Spain it was announced that peace had been concluded between Spain and England, rendering the embassy unnecessary. Father Bathe remained at Valladolid from 1602 to 1604, and at the latter date was made Spiritual Director of the Irish College at Lisbon.

In 1606 Father Bathe was appointed Spiritual Director of the Irish College, Salamanca, and laboured for some years at his best-known work, 'Janua Linguarum,' published in 1611, designed to facilitate the study of languages, just as his 'Brief Introduction to the Skill of Song' was meant to be a royal road for the learning of singing. This work (in Latin and English) appeared four years later, in London, and an English translation entitled "The Messe of Tongues' (Latin, French, English, and Spanish) was published in London in 1617—imitated and developed by Comenius in 1631.

In June, 1614, Father Bathe, S.J., was summoned to the Court of Spain, at Madrid, to give the Spiritual Exercises, but was taken suddenly ill, and died on June 17. He sowed, but others reaped; his 'Brief Introduction' was utilised by Morley, while his 'Janua Linguarum'—translated into twelve languages—won fame for Comenius.

---

We have received the itinerary of the German Singers (who visited England in 1926 under the title 'Märkische Spielgemeinde'). The tour opens on September 27 at Southampton (Central Hall), and includes visits to twenty-four provincial centres, widely spread. The Singers will be heard in London on October 24 (Royal College of Music, lunch hour; and Southwark Cathedral, evening) and October 25 (St. Martin-in-the-Fields, lunch hour). Inquiries of Mr. R. Nunn May, National Union of Students, 3, Endsleigh Street, W.C.1.

THE THREE CHOIRS FESTIVAL

By Harvey Grace

This year's Festival at Gloucester has been so copiously reported in the chief daily and weekly newspapers over the whole country that a monthly journal may well avoid some parts of the ground that have been already covered. It will be more useful to discuss the event in a general way, giving special consideration to the principal new works, and to certain aspects of the Festival that reveal themselves fully only in retrospect.

First, it must be said that the all-round success was such as to earn the warmest praise for everybody concerned. The melancholy circumstances under which the preparations for the Festival began, and the difficulties that must inevitably have surrounded them, are too well-known to need restatement. To Mr. S. W. Underwood, who, on Sir Herbert Brewer's death, stepped into the gap and trained the chorus until Mr. Sumsion's return from America, at midsummer, must go high praise. He handed over to the conductor-in-chief a body of singers that was generally held to be well above the average in all-round excellence. Only those who have had long experience in choir-training are able to estimate fully the value and difficulty of the work done in the early stages of preparing so exacting a programme.

An ordeal of a different kind fell to Mr. Sumsion. Young, and unknown to the musical world outside the area of the Three Cities, he must have had his anxieties and trepidations. Even to an old hand the work of the conductor-in-chief at a Three Choirs Festival is a severe strain—mental, nervous, and physical. Whatever Mr. Sumsion felt, however, he hid so successfully that so far as demeanour went, he might have been directing the Festival from boyhood. He was, in fact, an immediate success, above all in the important matter of inspiring confidence. His manner was quiet and unobtrusive—there was even a likeable touch of diffidence—and his beat generally firm and clear. One felt that his quiet efficiency, and his evident hold on the choir, were the best of guarantees for the future of Gloucester's share of the Festival.

That the townsfolk should make much of him was natural and pleasing. His level head will, no doubt, save him from taking too seriously such demonstrations as the prolonged applause at the Friday concert in the Shire Hall after a thoroughly bad performance of a 'Brandenburg' Concerto—applause so prolonged that the orchestra had to rise and bow, whereas they should have apologised.

The occurrence was one of several which raise the question of inequality of performance during the week. More on this topic later. It is mentioned here because it has to do with Mr. Sumsion's future as a conductor—which, be it remembered, is also in a large measure the future of the Gloucester Festival. A conductor is the least 'born' of all interpretative musicians. Some highly successful conductors are entirely 'made,' and perhaps the most successful of all are those who are one part born and nine made. The making calls for an environment and a wealth of opportunity that can hardly exist in a country Cathedral city. Certainly there are local orchestras, but valuable as they may be in the training of a conductor, the only really satisfactory preparation for the conducting of a first-class orchestra is frequent experience in directing such a body. Amateur players may develop a conductor's patience, and prove his ability to cover weaknesses and make the best of things. But a conductor at a Three Choirs Festival has a first-class professional orchestra at his command, and negative work is replaced by positive. Instead of slaving for months to obtain B2 results from C3 players in moderately difficult music, he has to deal with A1 players and to obtain in a few hours A1 results in exacting music of widely varying types.

Recent years have seen the Festival programmes including a growing amount of modern orchestral music. As a result, the task of the conductor-in-chief has so greatly increased in difficulty and scope as to demand consideration on the part of the executive. Nobody is likely to deny that the present system asks too much of any musician, however gifted and adaptable he may be—and here let it be said that the way in which the three Cathedral organists concerned have risen to the occasion has long been a matter of admiring comment. But need the ordeal be so severe? Is it necessary to limit their opportunities of conducting a professional orchestra to one week and a few odd rehearsals in three years? Surely the strain would be less, and the conducting better than it is, if the work were shared annually. Each Cathedral organist would then have the advantage of regular yearly experience of conducting under Festival conditions. Even that is little enough, seeing how much complex and unfamiliar music the programmes now contain. But it would be just three times better than the present arrangement, under which a conductor puts in a week of hectic struggle, and then says good-bye to first-class orchestral experience for three years.

So drastic a suggestion is made with diffidence. It will not, I am sure, be misunderstood by the conductors, and the executive has, during recent years, shown such readiness to depart from use and wont in other ways that I am not without hope that they may at least admit that there is something to be said for it.

The two major novelties—Honegger's 'King David' and Kodály's 'Psalmus Hungaricus'—justified their inclusion, the latter especially. Moreover, they gave us some of the best singing and playing of the week. Mr. Sumsion showed his mettle in the former, and the best witness to the excellent results was to be found in the changed attitude of most people towards Honegger's work. The rehearsals had left doubtful or antagonistic even those of us who had heard 'King David' before, and who had the advantage of scores. After the performance the Ayes clearly had it. There were reservations, of course. Honegger is far from being a first-grade composer, and 'King David' is a hopeless jumble of styles. But for once in a way the parts are greater than the whole. Such pages as (for example) the solo, 'The Lord is my Shepherd,' in which the voice has an entirely commonplace diatonic melody which struggles along between chromatic lines that don't fit, are simply puerile. There is too much of this employment of cacophony for its own sake; it suggests the unnecessary discomfort of a progress over broken bottles. But there are real flashes in music of the descriptive sort. The long passage illustrating the incantation of the Witch of Endor is astounding, and the orchestration of the passage concerning the destruction of Jerusalem is so realistic that even with no clue to its programme, one would, I think, be apprehensive of broken windows and flying debris. The Hebrews and Philistines Marches are duly barbaric, and the short scene of the Camp of Saul at night is a fine bit of tone-painting. The jumble of styles spoken of above lies chiefly in the chorus part, which draws on Bach, Handel, Lutheran chorale, Genevan Psalm-tune, and a few other oddly mixed sources.

The part of the Narrator was taken by Mr. Basil Maine with complete success. He rang the changes between plain narration, declamation, and lyric fervour very skilfully. He was drowned in the culmination of the Incantation scene, but even his gradual submergence was not without its effect. Certainly nothing was more striking than his interjections at the back of the orchestral tissue. It was not his fault if we felt that in giving the story to a Narrator the composer had merely dodged a problem instead of solving it.

'King David,' then, was a success in spite of its faults, because these faults did not include the unforgivable one of insincerity. It may be argued, of course, that only a composer knows whether he is sincere; the answer is that only the listener knows whether his work sounds sincere. There can be little doubt that most of the Gloucester audience felt that Honegger had been genuinely seized by the Old Testament story, and had expressed it in terms of music as genuinely as in him lay. Distinguished work was done by the soloists—Elsie Suddaby, Margaret Balfour, and Frank Titterton.

Kodály's Psalm was almost as fiercely dissonant as 'King David.' It had the merit, however, of consistency and design, and every harshness was in the picture. The composer conducted an excellent performance. The choir overcame the considerable difficulties with that little bit to spare that makes all the difference. The trebles and altos deserve a special mark for their trying four-part wordless passage. Mr. Steuart Wilson was exactly the right choice for the solo part. The work made a very real impression.

Granville Bantock's 'The Burden of Babylon' had only a partial success. Its form was probably to blame. It consists of a long stretch for unaccompanied double choir and solo quartet, sandwiched between elaborate fanfares for brass and drums. The unaccompanied singing, being largely of the block chordal type, became monotonous; and its frequent and difficult changes of key made for uncertain intonation—which, of course, was mercilessly exposed when the instruments re-entered. Moreover, the economic side cannot be ignored in these days. A choral society (or its treasurer) will do some hard thinking before embarking on a work which, though unaccompanied, yet entails the heavy expense of a large force of brass and percussion. The 'Burden' proved to be a miscalculation, with some splendid moments.

Ethel Smyth's Mass in D was a quasi-novelty. It aroused admiration, respect, and astonishment rather than affection. To obtain from it the full measure of surprise one has to think of it, not as having been written by a woman (Dame Ethel objects to that circumstance being considered at all) but as the product of any English composer whatever in the eighteen-nineties. It is easy to point to faults—its length, its over-indebtedness to Beethoven and in a lesser degree to Verdi, its too sustained strenuousness. But the Mass remains an indisputably vital piece of work that, having at long last obtained a measure of recognition, deserves to receive much more. Its performance was not wholly good, owing probably to the fact that Dame Ethel's conducting is many degrees below her composing.

(It is an odd thing that composers who would never dream of attempting to sing the solo part in one of their own works do not hesitate to take up the far more responsible task of conducting it. On second thoughts it is not odd: the soloist would break down, whereas the orchestra may be counted on to keep going, no matter what a conductor does.)

The small-scale novelties comprised a Motet by Basil Harwood, 'Ye choirs of New Jerusalem,' an impressive treatment for choir, orchestra, and organ of an ancient plainsong tune; a short choral work written by Sir Herbert Brewer for this year's Festival of the Sons of the Clergy, 'God within'; a group of songs by Herbert Howells, 'In Green Ways,' attractively written and deftly orchestrated, and well sung by Joan Elwes; and an orchestral work, 'The Call of the Woods,' by J. W. G. Hathaway. This was specially written for the occasion and conducted, in the composer's absence, by W. H. Reed. It proved to be a well-sounding essay, deriving a good deal from some familiar models. Dr. Hathaway's wood, in fact, is rather too obviously a Wald.

Among the more or less familiar chief works the best performances were of 'Gerontius' and 'The Kingdom,' directed by the composer, Verdi's 'Requiem,' and Holst's 'Two Psalms.' Elgar's Violoncello Concerto was the chief work in the Wednesday Shire Hall concert, with Beatrice Harrison as soloist. There is no more delightful feature at these Festivals than the sight of Elgar directing a few of his finest works under the ideal conditions afforded by noble architecture (the reference is not to the Shire Hall!) and moving about freely among the public—a prophet, for once in a way, honoured in his own country and among his own people.

Having spoken of the best performances, duty must be done and reference made to some bad ones. Bach's 'O Light Everlasting,' on the Wednesday morning, marked the first fall from grace. It was for the most part dull, the florid passages lacked grip and vitality, and the tempi were not well considered. Parry's 'Voces Clamantium' began the Thursday badly. The leads were not well taken up, there was some poor tuning, especially by the basses, and again the tempo was erratic. It is impossible to avoid the conclusion that the excellent performances of the exciting novelties had been obtained at the expense of Bach and Parry and, on the Friday, of Handel, for 'The Messiah,' despite some fine moments, sounded perfunctory as a whole. No doubt choir and conductor alike were tired. But fatigue is like fear—a natural disability which can be touched to fine issues if we can screw ourselves up to the extra pinch of endurance, as we should to the sticking point of courage. Frankly, I thought Mr. Sumsion failed us here, especially when I recalled the very live singing of 'The Messiah' at Hereford last year.

The worst performance of the week was that of the Bach Concerto mentioned above. I have heard casual work from the London Symphony Orchestra on similar occasions, but they touched bottom here, especially in the slow movement—one of Bach's loveliest.

This brings us back to the question of inequality of standard. So intensive and comprehensive a week of music-making cannot remain at the peak throughout; but the inequalities should be less marked than they were at Gloucester. A wise man once said that there is no bad beer; some beers are merely less good than others. Similarly we ought to be able to review a Three Choirs Festival and say there were no bad performances, but that all were not equally good. This matter is far more important to-day than formerly. More and more every year the Festivals attract musicians from a distance. The motor car has thrown it open to all parts of Britain, and this year saw many visitors from Scotland; some came even from America and the Continent. From being a semi-local affair the Three Choirs meeting has become of national importance, and may soon become even international. This development is all to the good, but it brings with it responsibilities that must be faced. At present both orchestra and conductor-in-chief are overworked. Relief might easily be obtained without loss to the scheme as a whole—rather with gain. There is room in the Cathedral programmes for more a cappella work. There was practically none at Gloucester. It is, in fact, a reproach to the Festivals that they have paid so little heed to the revival of the Tudor and Elizabethan school of polyphonic writers. A few examples of Byrd, Weelkes, or Gibbons would provide welcome relief, would ease the strain on the orchestra, and would develop the taste and musicianship of the district. And not for the first time one felt that the Friday evening orchestral concert was a bad anti-climax. If a second Shire Hall concert is felt to be necessary, it should take the form of a really first-rate chamber concert or mixed solo recital. A tired orchestra merely going through a programme largely composed of chestnuts is of no use to anybody. And here may be permitted a grumble concerning the two new works heard at the Shire Hall. Both were played on the Friday, and at the end of a long and dilatory programme. I personally knew five critics who were staying the night in order to send a notice to their papers. Three had arranged to telegraph, and one had even booked a long-distance telephone call in order to get a notice in the Saturday papers. But the new works were heard at so late an hour that nothing could be done.

Without a doubt the week's programme is too congested; certain changes in our musical life make it desirable to lighten the cargo. In the early days of the Festivals—until a few years ago, in fact—the Three Choirs patrons depended on the annual music-making for the bulk of their musical experiences. So much was this the case that critics who attacked the Festivals about ten years ago did so mainly on the ground of this concentration of the musical life of a large district into one week of the year. The argument was unsound, of course, because it did not take into account the many months of preparation on the part of hundreds of choral singers. A Three Choirs member of long experience probably has a bigger and better répertoire than any other choralist in the country. It must be admitted, however, that the great bulk of the hearers did look to the Festivals for their chief opportunity; and there was much to be said for making the most of the annual week by giving them full measure, pressed down and running over. To-day those same listeners can hear the best of music, excellently performed, on every day of the week by touching a switch or turning a handle. This being so, a Festival, be it Three Choirs, Leeds, or Haslemere, should now concentrate less on quantity of music than on quality of performance. It is true that huge audiences attend these gargantuan feasts, and probably they will continue to do so. But complaints are frequent, nevertheless, and it is clear that the cutting of one concert, and a slight shortening of the rest of the programmes, would ensure a less jaded audience and a fresher orchestra and choir, and would lighten the rehearsals sufficiently to allow 'The Messiah' and 'Elijah' to receive something more than the mere run-through that seems to be their present allowance.

As to 'Elijah,' one felt that a few short spells devoted specially to the words would have turned a good performance into a thrilling one. There is no apparent reason why these really admirable choral singers should not be as vivid and dramatic in their rôle as Horace Stevens is in the title-part. It would be difficult to name an important work in which the choral part has so large a proportion of intensely significant phrases, many of them sung in unison or synchronously. The Three Choirs singers are as note-perfect as Mr. Stevens. Why should they not cast aside their copies and become similarly possessed with their part? They will do this, willy-nilly, when they approach their task—as all singing should be approached—through the words rather than through the music.

There are two things about singing that astonish—or should astonish—listeners. First, that any work with a poor text should ever be performed; second, that choirs are able to sing a fine text without being obviously moved by it. No solo singer worth his salt can maintain an appearance of indifference to the magic of words. This singular power of detachment seems to be reserved for choralists. When they shed it—how rarely this happens!—they become the most electrifying of musical mediums. The glories of an orchestra are pale beside those of a body whose musical appeal is driven home by the irresistible power of splendid words. Is there a finer text than that of 'Elijah'?

Before leaving Mendelssohn's oratorio let the significant fact be stated that it drew the largest audience of the week, and that it was the only work that showed an increased attendance compared with the last Festival. This being so, we can hardly expect it to be shelved yet awhile. Nor should it be. At Gloucester it showed itself to be still a fine and vital work, in spite of the choir's failure to realise that it is also an intensely dramatic one.

Remaining points must be summarised.

Discussion of the solo singers is impossible; even a list of names would become a lengthy catalogue. It is enough to say, poster-wise, that they included the Bulk of Britain's Best. Of much good—even distinguished—work there stick in the memory most the exquisite singing of Dorothy Silk in the Evening Scene in 'The Kingdom,' the impassioned utterances of Steuart Wilson in the Kodály Psalm, and (as usual) the vivid characterisation of Horace Stevens in 'Elijah.'

In the midst of such strenuous concertising the daily Evensong, sung by the three Cathedral choirs combined, was an oasis—welcomed, it was good to see, by large congregations. The singing reached a very high standard, but it was disappointing to find persisting here some conventions that are being discarded in other Cathedrals and in many parish churches. Is it necessary to accompany every note sung by the choir, even unto the uttermost Amen? And is it not generally agreed that the prayers after the anthem should be read, not intoned? The services would have gained much from a little use of the natural voice, some unaccompanied singing, and a larger proportion of fine music in the place of some that was merely ordinary. This complaint applies also to the opening Festival service, which needed either a fine setting of the Canticles or an imposing anthem. The chanting was of the cast-iron Anglican type that pays little regard to the verbal rhythm. So good a body of singers ought to be able to achieve good chanting with very little rehearsal. The point is of considerable importance, because the Festival service is largely attended by country clergy and church choir members. They ought to hear an object-lesson instead of the stereotyped methods that they themselves are being urged to give up. It may or may not be important to sing 'King David'; it is certainly necessary to take some pains with his Psalms. Moreover, there is still a body of ecclesiastical opinion that is strongly opposed to the Three Choirs Festival, as was shown by an article in the Church Times recently. If the choice of music, or its performance, during the week's services conveys any suggestion that the purely church-music side of the Festival is being neglected in favour of the more exciting concerts, the case of the opposition is strengthened.

Some excellent organ-playing was heard from day to day, the bulk of it from Mr. A. J. Pritchard, the Gloucester assistant. Sir Ivor Atkins and Dr. Percy Hull did valuable work of a difficulty and importance that can never be fully realised by the audience in general. The interpolation of a Handel Organ Concerto at one of the morning concerts, with Dr. Hull as soloist, was a successful step in the direction of variety and relief. It should be followed up. There are not a few fine modern works for organ and orchestra that ought to be heard under these ideal conditions.

The sale of tickets beat the previous best by a score or so, but the collections fell off somewhat.

Socially, the Festival was as enjoyable as ever. Where so much warm-hearted hospitality was shown, one hesitates to single out an example, but this side of the affair owes so much to Mr. C. Lee Williams that his name can hardly be kept out. As usual, he and his son kept open house at College Green, and the happy family feeling that pervaded the Festival was due very largely to his hospitality, and not less to his constant care, shown in a hundred little ways, for the comfort and happiness of visitors.

With last month's meeting, then, the Gloucester Festival began a new epoch, looking back with gratitude and affection to its late conductor as it stepped forward under his successor. That its future is safe with Mr. Sumsion nobody doubts—certainly not the present writer, who has ventured on a few criticisms and suggestions because such a juncture as the present seems to be the right time to make them. Having done what he conceives to be his duty, he returns thanks for a week so enjoyable that he is already looking forward to packing his bag for Worcester.

Occasional Notes

Until a recent article by 'Feste' drew our attention to the fact, we were unaware of the wide vogue of the mouth-organ. The July issue of the Berliner Tageblatt Monthly Edition contains a good deal of information concerning this humble instrument, and, having found it to be of interest, we pass some of it on to our readers.

Germany is the chief maker of mouth-organs. Here are a few of what Mr. Polly would call 'staggering statitistics': The two chief makers employ six thousand workmen. In addition, there are many smaller concerns, and in Saxony the home manufacture of mouth-organs by 'cottage-workers' keeps nine thousand busy. The combined mouth-organ and accordion industry is the second largest department of musical-instrument manufacture in Germany. The average export is about fifty millions of mouth-organs and one million of accordions. What becomes of this immense output? Apparently America is the chief outside customer:

> 'The first case of mouth-organs sent to the U.S.A. in the sixties marked the beginning of the great development of the Trossingen mouth-organ industry. The quickly enthused Americans (who still possess the rare gift of approaching a new idea without prejudice) displayed an unexpected interest in the little mouth-organ, and within a few years the instrument was thoroughly at home in even the remotest tracts of the dollar land. The demand rose at such an extraordinary rate that the supply remained inadequate for many years in spite of the constant enlargements of the factories. It is pleasant to note that Americans have been unswervingly faithful friends of the mouth-organ to this day. Of the 50.5 million mouth-organs exported by the German harmonica industry in 1927 no less than twenty-two millions, or, roundly, 43 per cent., went to the United States.'

Apparently 'Feste,' like most musicians, underrates the musical possibilities of the instrument. On the other hand, it is likely that the Berliner Tageblatt over-rates them:

> 'Originally a mere toy—and a torment to sensitive ears—it became a solo instrument of the highest order, and is now, in the true sense of the term, on everybody's lips. Even the attitude of musical authorities towards the mouth-organ has undergone a radical change. A well-known music educationist in the Rhineland declared a short while ago at a meeting of music teachers, that it would be better if the whole people could play the mouth-organ than for the so-called élite to listen to the Ninth Symphony and pass out unaffected and indifferent. The last phase in the development of the mouth-organ has been its incorporation in orchestral music. After the war people suddenly discovered that the mouth-organ, owing to its cheapness and ease of manipulation, is the only instrument for the broad masses for the display of musical talent. It was also recognised that it is an excellent medium for musical instruction, capable of introducing the young quicker into the realm of music than any other instrument.'

Discussing the far-flung empire of the mouth-organ, the journal quotes an authority who becomes dithyrambic :

> ' The mountaineer in the German highlands whiles away his time on cool summer nights with his mouth-harp. To the taciturn Breton fisherman the little instrument is a faithful friend and companion throughout his hard life on the expanses of the Northern seas. The lazzarone of Naples in its company heeds not the scorching heat of his skies in his dolce far niente. The natives of Africa have been its most devoted admirers for the last thirty years. It is as familiar in the pampas of South America as in the enchanted world of India and China. To the sheep-farmer of Australia it is as indispensable as to the workers on the illimitable cotton-fields of the Mississippi basin.'

Going back for a moment to those ' cottage-workers,' we note that in the Klingenthal district there is a population of twenty thousand dependent on the industry. Tourists in these parts (we read) ' may hear the noise of tuning proceeding from nearly every house '—sufficient warning to the musical tourist in search of quiet. We shall make a wide detour in order to dodge Klingenthal !

The Tageblatt gives pictures of school classes and orchestras of mouth-organists. There are, we read, three thousand of such bands in Germany, and several thousands in America. Are there any in England ?

---

An article on Württemberg's share of this truly national industry gives an account of the origin of the instrument a hundred years ago. (The centenary was celebrated in 1927 with an immense ' Hoch.') We quote from the Tageblatt, partly in order to show the excellent idiomatic English of the journal. (In order to appreciate this Tageblatt achievement, consisting of twenty-four large pages, we have to imagine—if we can—a London newspaper bringing out a similar monthly edition in fluent German) :

> ' The rise of the Württemberg mouth-organ industry from the most primitive beginnings to an industry of world renown impresses one like a story from the Arabian fairy-tales. The founder and pioneer of the industry was a very young journeyman clothmaker, named Christian Messner, who after much laborious time-wasting experimental work carried out in the pigeon-loft of his father's house succeeded in 1827, with the faithful help of the schoolmaster of the village, in producing the first workable mouth-organ. Why he used the pigeon-loft for his workshop is explained by the fact that his father, a very austere craft master of the old stamp, had little use for trickery of any sort, and looked with unconcealed disdain upon what he considered the silly time-wasting humbug of his offspring. Young Messner, however, was as thick-skulled as his progenitor, and fled from the domain of his always-grousing father to take refuge in the peaceful habitat of the pigeons. It was there that he made the lucky hit. As soon as he found that his mouth-harps took the fancy of the people, he chucked his job as a clothmaker and devoted all his time and energy to the more remunerative production of mouth-organs. The products of his industry he sold at country fairs and inns and to enterprising hawkers in the South of Germany.'

---

The Tageblatt contains equally enthusiastic articles on German pianoforte, harmonium, violin-strings, and organ manufacture. We end by quoting a delightfully naïve sentence from the organ article :

> ' From the plainest village church to the St. Peter Cathedral of Rome the notes of Walcker organs swell forth in praise of the Lord, and bear witness also of the indefatigable work of this firm of organ-builders.'

---

In his review of Dr. Sanford Terry's new biography of Bach in the Sunday Times, Mr. Ernest Newman says : '. . . apparently he [Dr. Terry] has in preparation what will be the first complete edition of Bach's four-part chorales.' It is only fair to point out that one of the most valuable editorial tasks fulfilled by the late H. Elliot Button was a volume issued by Novello's in 1923, entitled ' Chorales harmonized by Johann Sebastian Bach, collected and arranged in melodic order.' It contained over two hundred chorales—all that are known to have been arranged in four parts by Bach. In many instances several harmonizations are given—some tunes have no fewer than nine versions—the total number of items being about four hundred. The text may be relied on, as Mr. Button collated all the available versions, and the whole collection was scrupulously compared with the versions in the volumes of the Bach-gesellschaft. This fine and scholarly work was the first complete English edition. In addition to the usual indexes is one of Mr. Button's own invention—an ingenious affair by means of which the reader who knows whether a given chorale begins on a strong or weak accent, and whether its tonality is major or minor, may find it at a glance.

---

This Note is aimed at choirs, especially those who take part in competition festivals. Messrs. Novello will publish in mid-October a Primer entitled ' A Handbook for Choralists : Studies in Sight-Singing, Technique, and Expression,' by Harvey Grace. The work is the outcome of Mr. Grace's experiences as a choral adjudicator, and will include a number of short graded exercises for sight-singing and general purposes, specially written by well-known judges—E. C. Bairstow, Harold Darke, T. F. Dunhill, Julius Harrison, Geoffrey Shaw—together with a number of Canons by Beethoven, of great interest and value as studies. The book will form one of Novello's Primer Series, and will cost 1*s.* 6*d.*

---

In our August number we dealt very frankly with some views alleged by the Melody Maker to be those of Lieut. W. J. Dunn, bandmaster of the Royal Horse Guards. We say 'alleged,' because we have since had the pleasure of a call from Lieut. Dunn, and as a result we are persuaded that so far from acting on the policy of playing down to the taste and intelligence of the least musical members of his audiences, he maintains a standard of programme that is far better than that of most Army bands.

In the programmes recently played by him at Clacton-on-Sea, for example, there is a good leaven of first-rate music. A plebiscite programme played on September 7 consisted of the Overture to 'William Tell,' selections from 'The Desert Song' and 'Carmen,' the 'Tannhäuser' Overture, a Sullivan selection, Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsody No. 2, and the Introduction to Act 3 of 'Lohengrin.' This not only does credit to him and his audience; it also backs up our contention that the normal holiday crowd now consists mainly of people with a taste for something better than fox-trots and the 'Policeman's Holiday' kind of thing. At most of his engagements Lieut. Dunn insists (the word is his own) on at least one classical programme being included in the scheme. In one such programme we note the inclusion of Saint-Saëns's 'Marche Héroïque,' a movement from Schubert's 'Dramatic' Symphony, the 'Danse des Bouffons' from Rimsky-Korsakov's 'The Snow Maiden,' the slow movement from Tchaikovsky's 'Pathetic' Symphony, the Finale to the same composer's fourth Symphony, Litolff's 'Maximilian Robespierre' Overture, and the 'Tannhäuser' March. Other items stretch the term 'classical' rather far, but the programme remains a good one for holiday purposes. When Lieut. Dunn told us that he insisted on the inclusion of a classical programme we naturally pointed out that his practice was far better than his precept, reminding him of what (according to the Melody Maker) he had said concerning the 'moral dishonesty' of a conductor forcing on the public his own views and musical standards. He agreed that we were 'one up' on that point, and admitted that the Melody Maker article (of which he had seen no 'proof') conveyed the misleading impression on which we had based our 'Occasional Note.' We are glad to clear up this matter, and we mention with pleasure the friendly attitude of Lieut. Dunn throughout our discussion.

---

We have read with interest an article entitled 'Building up Complex Emotions,' by Mr. Louis Levy, the well-known cinema musical director. Concerning 'Timbre and Emotion,' Mr. Levy mentions the combination of oboe and violoncello as 'a suitable combination for mother-love,' and goes on:

'This subject of the mood of instruments is one which lends itself to a good deal of study, and the wise musical director can make a lot of capital out of the right use of his instruments without having any other cards up his sleeve at all. It is the best way that I know to get effect without much trouble. Here are a few suggestions:

'Violin solo: Suitable for love and romance, especially for interiors, such as drawing-rooms. For exterior love themes the muted trumpet is very effective.

'"Study," such as is applicable to professors, &c., can be effectively suggested on the French horn, and if the character is at all eccentric, such as in a weird laboratory scene, the French horn should be muted.

'Of course, the evergreen trombone solo cannot be beaten for a comedy situation.

'The bassoon is peculiarly applicable to "village idiot" types.

'There have been occasions when I have used a double-bass solo. It can be most effective to describe—how shall we call them?—pontifical villains.

'Finally, the drum is the instrument for depicting suspense, as when a jury retires to consider a verdict.'

In the long run, however, the main factor is surely the music itself. The trombone may, no doubt, be used easily enough in comedy, but it is far more suitable for the heroic. The bassoon will always be associated with clowning, yet there are plenty of instances of its use as a highly expressive instrument. A drum-roll while the jury files out to consider the verdict, by all means; but the instrument will no less suitably join in the fanfare that heralds the hero's acquittal. Only in one instance do we agree with Mr. Levy, and that is in regard to the muted trumpet being reserved for 'exterior love themes'—the more exterior the better. The influence of the cinema on music is generally bad, and this system of associating orchestral instruments with the more facile emotions is specially so. The fact of its enabling the 'wise musical director' to 'get effect without much trouble' is alone enough to condemn it.

---

Ravel is to receive the honorary degree of Mus. Doc. at Oxford University on October 16, and will take part in a concert of his own works on the evening of the 19th at Æolian Hall, the event being the first of a series of chamber concerts arranged by the enterprising Mr. Gordon Bryan.

---

In our note last month on Rudolf Kircher's 'Fair Play' we mentioned his approval of the good musical work done at various London churches, among them being St. Martin-in-the-Fields. We return to the topic in order to draw attention to the arrangements for the coming season at St. Martin's. On every Saturday, at 3.15, from October to April, there will be a concert of some kind. The first three events will be a song and violoncello recital by Nicholas Naderjine and May Mukle (October 6), a violin recital by Isolde Menges (October 13), and a concert by the Civil Service Choir (October 20). On Thursday, October 25, there will be a lunch-hour recital by the German Singers now on tour in this country. The St. Martin's Choral Society will sing Brahms's

'Requiem' on November 10, and Vaughan Williams's Christmas Fantasia, Brahms's 'Alto Rhapsody,' and Beethoven's Choral Fantasia on December 15. The Society, by the way, has a few vacancies (all voices). Rehearsals are on Wednesdays at 6.30 in the Vestry Hall (Hon. Secretary, 6, St. Martin's Place, Trafalgar Square). In addition to these Saturday music-makings, there are organ recitals on Tuesdays at 6.30. The recitalists for October are Drs. W. G. Alcock, W. H. Harris, Harold Darke, and Ernest Bullock. The conductor and general director of all these activities is Mr. Arnold Goldsbrough.

Quintet . . . . . Beethoven.
(a) Grave, Allegro non hoppo.
(b) Andante cantabile.
(c) Rondo, Allegro non hoppo.
—French concert programme.

But for that 'non' we should fear that Tin-Pan Alley had started jazzing Beethoven.

The correspondent of a daily paper, describing a Channel swim, says:

'I have never seen a swimmer with more grit than Miss Hawke. On the way we played gramophone records to her, and I sang songs to her, but never once was she at all gloomy.'

A more than usually significant 'but'!

From a Massachussetts newspaper:

'Baritone Solo . . . "Gold is our Refuge."'

Very likely; but why make a song about it?

The Musician's Bookshelf

'Bach: A Biography.' By Charles Sanford Terry.

[Oxford University Press, 21*s*.]

One's first feeling concerning this book is astonishment at the undoubted fact of its being the first real biography of Bach. Spitta's volumes are invaluable, but they are not so much a life of Bach as a critical history of German music of the period, from which the details of Bach's life have to be painfully dug out. Forkel is sketchy, and all the more recent books either confine themselves to Bach's music or some department of it, or attempt the impossible task of discussing the man and his work under one cover.

Here at last is a volume which aims at being undiluted biography, and achieves its aim with success and real distinction.

The reader's second reflection will be—or should be—one of pride that this book (in its own line the crown of Bach research) is by an Englishman, and that it is appearing almost simultaneously in a German edition. The fact serves as a reminder of the honourable part played by this country in Bach literature, and above all other writers by Dr. Terry himself. It is fitting that his latest book should exhibit at its best his unusual skill in the assembling and ordering of facts.

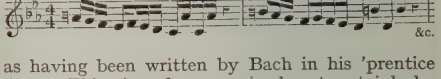
His thoroughness is staggering. Apparently he has taken nothing for granted. The old authorities have been overhauled, and new ones discovered; he has trodden the ground in the literal sense, having visited the scenes of Bach's life, viewed the churches, houses, and other buildings with which Bach was associated; and tried—or at least examined—the organs on which he played.

Nor has he stopped at that. In the handsomest way he enables us to traverse the Bach terrain at second hand by adding to his book over seventy plates—excellent photographs and reproductions of old prints. Here we may view old Veit Bach's mill, the 'Golden Crown' Inn at Arnstadt where young John Sebastian lodged, Mülhausen as he saw it (a delightful old print), the organ gallery at Lübeck—in fact, book and plates give us a personally conducted tour in our armchairs.

The result of this happy and unusual blend of the literary and pictorial is that we see Bach the man as well as Bach the composer. Happily, this detailed and systematic survey of his life leaves him, if anything, even more securely established in the affections of his devotees. It is a wholesome thing for young musicians to discover that John Sebastian Bach was above all a perfectly normal man, with no affectations or pretensions, who did his duty as a plain citizen. It is good to read of the touch of stubbornness that enabled him to hold his own with his pastors and masters; the quality was merely another manifestation of the doggedness with which from childhood he fitted himself for his work. Somebody inquired of him, late in life, as to the secret of his mastery. 'I worked hard,' he replied; 'if you are as industrious as I was, you will be no less successful.' The reply under-estimates the part played by genius, but is a reminder of a fact familiar to all who have studied any aspect of Bach's output in chronological order. His early works show him wrestling with the technique of composition and failing often—perhaps more often than many a facile student of to-day. The nonsense so often talked about inspiration being killed by the study of severe models, the absurdity of rules and restrictions, and so forth, needs no better corrective than such a life as Bach's.

As will be gathered, Dr. Terry touches little on the music. Among his few references are one or two that may be questioned. On p. 47 he quotes a C minor Organ Fugue on this subject:

Ex. 1.



as having been written by Bach in his 'prentice days. This piece, however, is almost certainly by his son Emanuel, and is now omitted from most editions of the organ works. The decision as to its origin is arrived at on the score of style. We may say of it that had Bach written it in his early days it would have been even less good than it is; had he composed it in his maturity it would have been very different in manner.

It is difficult to agree with Dr. Terry in his statement that the subject used in the 'Art of Fugue' is based on that which Frederick the Great gave to Bach for an improvisation. He says: 'So close is the relation between the Berlin visit and Bach's treatise that the theme he selected for illustration is a shortened form of the one whose excellence he had praised to the King,' i.e., Frederick's own subject. Dr. Terry backs up his case by quoting the two subjects, putting them in the same key in order to help out the resemblance, which still remains slight. Let us look at them in their right keys, in order to see their radical difference :

Ex. 2. (a)

Ex. 2. (b)

The ' Art of Fugue ' theme clearly bears the stamp of careful structure with a view to scientific use. Musically it is far less interesting than Frederick's ; on the other hand, Frederick's is obviously less suited for development. On p. 90 we read, apropos of a sight-reading hoax played on Bach by Walther, that ' Bach read full scores with equal facility, and, like Mozart, was as fluent if the separate parts were arranged around him. He preferred to read a trio or quartet in that way.' But not even a Bach or Mozart can read as fluently from separate parts as from a score ; only an Argus could do that, or would prefer such a method. These details are pointed out because Dr. Terry's accuracy when facts are concerned is such as to lead readers to regard him as being equally reliable in more speculative matters.

The book is full of interesting sidelights on the life of the period. Look, for example, at the list of foods provided for Bach, Rolle, and Kuhnau on the occasion of their visit to Hallé in order to inspect and report on the new organ. At a banquet given them by the College the menu contained beef à la mode, pike with anchovy sauce, smoked ham, peas, potatoes, sausages and spinach, roast mutton, boiled pumpkin, fritters, candied lemon peel, preserved cherries, asparagus, lettuce, radishes, butter, and roast veal. This is the order in which the menu is given, but we may doubt whether the company returned to roast veal at the end. Cheese seems to have been taken for granted, and the silence concerning liquors must not delude us into thinking that none were provided. Far from it. Dr. Terry adds, ' Little wonder that a big blot fell on the " Bach " as the writer signed a receipt for six thalers, his fee ! '

Mention of wine recalls a delightful letter written by Bach to Johann Elias Bach, acknowledging the gift of a cask of right Bavarian :

> ' Worthy and respected cousin,—Your letter, received yesterday, brings the good news that you and your dear wife are well, and for the delectable cask of wine that came with it accept my best thanks. Unfortunately the cask suffered a jar, or some other accident, on the journey, for on examination here it is found to be one-third empty, and contains, the Visitator declares, only six kannen. It is regrettable that the smallest drop of so noble a gift of God should be wasted, but I am none the less heartily obliged by my cousin's kind present. Pro nunc I am not réelement in a position to reciprocate ; still, quod differtur non auffertur, and I hope to find an opportunity to discharge my obligation.'

By the time he had finished the letter the frugal side of Bach came to the top, hence this postscript :

> ' Though my good cousin offers to send me more of the same liqueur, I must decline on account of the heavy charges at this end. The carriage was 16 gr., delivery 2 gr., Visitator 2 gr., provincial excise 5 gr. 3 pfg., general excise 3 gr. So my cousin may calculate that the wine cost me nearly 5 gr. a measure—a too-expensive present ! ' —especially when the cask leaks and loses a third en route ! The letter quoted above shows Bach's fondness for interlarding his correspondence with scraps of Latin and French. All his letters are so characteristic that the reader wishes there were more of them.

Bach's failure as a disciplinarian is well known and easy to understand. It was partly due to his touch of choler, but even more to the conditions under which he held office. Those Leipsic boys were no doubt a handful, and repressive measures were quite elaborate. Here are the fines for misdemeanours :

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 1. | For losing the key or leaving it in the door ... ... ... ... ... | 4 gr. |
| 2. | For failing to shut the door when the last to leave the room ... ... | 2 gr. |
| 3. | For being sick (qui vomitat) ... ... | 2 gr. |
| 4. | For swearing, loud, or improper speech | 6 pf. |
| 5. | For impertinent language, in Latin or German ... ... ... ... | 6 pf. |
| 6. | For not getting up in the morning, and missing prayers ... ... ... | 3 pf. |
| 7. | For not tidying the cubicle before 10 in summer and 12 in winter ... ... | 6 pf. |

No. 3 is distinctly dear ; the only one that gives a fluent youth a chance of good value is No. 5.

In closing this cursory survey of a notable book a curious omission in Dr. Terry's list of authorities must be pointed out. Concerning the organ works he mentions the Peters and Augener editions, but ignores the Novello—an oversight, no doubt. But it is unfortunate, because the Novello edition happens to be the one above all suitable for English players, inasmuch as it not only gives the whole of the Chorale Preludes arranged on an admirable system, and excellently laid out from the player's point of view ; it includes also a supplementary volume in which are all the chorales used by Bach in the organ works, and an English translation of the hymn, or a portion thereof, with which the tune was associated. Apparently no other edition gives this invaluable aid to an interpretation of the Chorale Preludes, and it is a pity that a ' Life ' which purports to include all authoritative collections should ignore it.

But let the last word of this review be one of warm thanks to Dr. Terry for his masterly book. He has put us heavily in his debt by former Bach volumes. They were, however, more or less written for the scholar and specialist. This ' Life ' is for every Bachite—in fact, for everybody with a taste for a first-rate biography of a great man.

H. G.

---

' Suggestions for Musical Evenings,' by the Rev. J. E. and Mrs. Crawshaw, is a capital little guide for those who have to arrange lectures or musical evenings for a guild or study circle. There is information worth several shillings, but the cost is—4½*d.*, post free! (Wesley Guild Headquarters, Oxford Chambers, Leeds).

BOOKS RECEIVED

[Mention in this list neither implies nor precludes review in a future issue.]

'Enyimba Ezokutendereza Katonda' (Luganda Hymn-Book, with tunes). Pp. 368. Kampala: The Uganda Bookshop; London: S.P.C.K., 4*s.*

'Another Way of Music.' By Eva Ducat. Pp. 202. Chapman & Hall, 10*s.* 6*d.*

'The Artists of the Dance: Vera Trefilova, A Study in Classicism.' By Arnold L. Haskell. Pp. 43. The British-Continental Press, Ltd., 2*s.*

'Letters of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart.' Selected and edited by Hans Mersmann. Translated from the German by M. M. Bozman. Pp. 278. J. M. Dent, 10*s.* 6*d.*

'Die Deklamations-Rhythmik in der vokalen Polyphonie des 16. Jahrhunderts.' By Karl Gustav Fellerer. Pp. 48. Düsseldorf: L. Schwann.

'Die Schöne Müllerin.' By Franz Valentin Dannan. Pp. 212. Leipsic: Breitkopf & Härtel.

New Music

PIANOFORTE

Another of the test-pieces for the Daily Express contest comes for review in the present batch. Alec Rowley's 'The Rambling Sailor' (Winthrop Rogers) is a grade B test and cannot be called difficult, but requires a good deal of grip and musical judgment. Probably in this class and still more in the advanced sections the judges will find many executants well able to play the notes but who can make no sense of the music. Ireland's movement, for instance, in Grade A, needs real insight and power, and York Bowen's 'Rêverie' goes to pieces at once unless the player has authority enough to hold it firmly in his hands while he allows it the rubato and freedom it wants. The problem with 'The Rambling Sailor' will be to get a feeling of unity into the performance. The sections are short: there are at least four 'joins' where the interest will flag unless it is kept up with real determination—and any hesitation will make the piece sound 'loose.' There is not a great deal in it—a sprightly opening section, a contrasting middle passage reminiscent in a rather facile way of one or two shanties, and a return to the opening matter—all good-humoured and effectively written, but not in any sense distinguished music.

A long and ambitious work, rhapsodical in style, is Joseph Hathaway's 'The Call of the Woods.' It is restless, uneasy music, as the title suggests, and the effect of some of its moments is more potent than that of the work as a whole. The pianoforte writing is not always telling, and suggests that the poem was orchestrally conceived. It has that sameness of colour which characterised Vaughan Williams's 'Pastoral' Symphony, though the effect there was as restful as here it is restless; and it needs the shifting lights of good orchestration to help it. Many passages that lack point in a pianoforte performance might come out more strongly in an orchestral version, and thus keep the interest alive.

G. O'Connor-Morris's 'Boat Song' is a cleanly-written little work, kept well under control, and not trying to say more than it can. The composer is fluent, and knows how to produce a full, luxurious sound from the instrument; his ideas are graceful in style, and the rhythmic possibilities of the 'Boat Song' are attractive. There is a very neat and effective turn into the major at the end of the piece, and all through it are the marks of careful workmanship. Augener's also send T. S. Harold's 'Dance Suite,' a work of moderate difficulty consisting of 'Bourrée,' 'A Little Minuet,' and 'Country Dance.' The dances are tuneful, and firm in design; there is a slight feeling of Edward German's works in the same style, and though not as individual as those, these dances are clean, sincere music.

No publisher's name is to be found on the pages of Edmond Schelpe's 'Impromptu.' Why this modesty? for the music is quite well printed. And it has little touches of musical feeling among its rather weak reminiscences of MacDowell. The composer writes from South Africa asking what his music 'yet lacks.' I think a good adviser would recommend a course of lessons from a first-rate teacher, but unfortunately not everyone can get lessons from a Stanford or a Holst. But anyone can give himself a steady course in classical music, playing Bach as Chopin used to do, and Beethoven and Haydn, and forsaking all the MacDowells and Chaminades, on whose work so much pianoforte music seems to be based. Study of the classical writers will lead to a dislike of the formlessness and cheapness of style which spoil this Impromptu.

Ethel Smyth used the expression 'fumbling ecstasy,' or something like it, about the tune 'Jerusalem the Golden,' and a similar description might apply to Edgar Barrett's 'Deirdre—a Celtic Lament' (Elkin). The musical matter is pretty commonplace. As with so much 'Celtic' music—and literature too—there is a fine lack of self-criticism, so that unless you vigorously abandon yourself to the creation of atmosphere and suppress all attempts to question, you are apt to be repelled. But the thing is sincere, and so commands respect; it gives itself entirely to its very obvious emotion, without stint or reserve, and it will rouse a similar emotion in its hearers—or some of them. It has atmosphere—see the beginning of the Coda—and a sense of form. Higher up in the same category as the 'Farewell' comes Sibelius's D flat Romance, which perhaps influenced it, and at the top of that class, I suppose, would be 'The Londonderry Air.' These works deal with a similar emotion, but have more reticence—in one case there has been the purification of a long existence as a folk-tune or popular melody; in the other the emotion has had to submit itself to the judgment of a very alert and stern mind. 'Deirdre' is less good than the others because it has more easily found expression, and is much less concentrated. Its underlying musical impulse would probably not have been strong enough to stand the milling through which those other works have had to go. Cyril Scott's 'Badinage,' also from Elkin, is a study in the use of the two fourths which make a seventh. It goes on and on with the same chord in different positions until the listener is driven through boredom viâ irritation to fury. When one remembers some of Cyril Scott's earlier works this sort of thing is tragic.

Constant Lambert, like some other composers, has tried to use the elements of jazz for a serious subject. 'Elegiac Blues' is written in memory of Florence Mills, and there is an undoubted effect in it. But the rhythm it so largely uses is trivial in itself; it helps (with other things) the writer to express a kind of regret, half-affectionate, perhaps half-humorous, but beyond that it cannot go, and it hampers the effect of other musical appeals by its own poverty. The work is an experiment, thoroughly sincere and partly successful, but not leading anywhere or lasting long itself (Chester).

Erwin Schulhoff's Sonata No. 2 (Chester) has distinction of style, both in matter and texture, and an unusual sensitiveness to sound effects. It is modern in outlook, but clear, and the logic of its design makes it comparatively easy to follow. It has four movements, all of them moderate in length, and the work as a whole has unity. Each movement has its own qualities; perhaps the second, the Scherzo, is the most readily attractive, but the first has a very real charm in its quiet opening subject, which returns in a particularly happy way at the recapitulation. The work is thoroughly well in hand from start to finish. The result is that it is manageable from the performer's point of view, as well as the listener's. The Sonata is certainly one of the best examples of modern pianoforte music that have recently come for review.

From Rouart Lerolle come Nicolas Nabokoff's 'Shot (sic) Stories,' four pieces for pianoforte. The title must be a misprint, but I could wish it were not, because it opens such a delightful vista of suggestions. There is also a long Sonata by this composer. It is all very 'modern'; the right hand has nothing to do with the left, and when they do happen to harmonize, the result is trivial in the extreme. I suppose all reviewers are afraid of missing some rising genius, and failing to understand what they don't like. But one must take the risk. This music of Nicolas Nabokoff's, including the 'Shot Stories,' seems to me perfect rot.

T. A.

---

SONGS

Blake is a difficult poet to tackle if you are one of those who like to know the meaning of what they read, because he obviously means so much more than he says, but what that more is . . . there 's the question. Still more is he difficult to set, because a composer, unless he treats Blake entirely superficially, as mercifully few do, has to deal primarily with this implied but not expressed meaning. Rutland Boughton in 'Maiden's Song' (Curwen) deals straightforwardly with the words; he gets the best out of their more obvious rhythmic possibilities; his closing bars are attractive. But somehow the core of feeling in Blake's poem is not the same as that of Boughton's music—the music misses the deeper reverberations. If it caught and expressed those it would be a great song; as things are, it is only a good song, and that 's an achievement. 'The Little Boy Lost,' by Herbert Howells (Oxford University Press), is a simpler poem, and its chief problem is that of reflecting the strange atmosphere, 'vapour,' in which the poem is bathed. Howells uses a fairly ordinary device, and uses it with such skill that it does not fail of its purpose, as it very easily might have done. This is a striking little work. Boughton's other song is a setting of Drinkwater's 'Holiness,' light in texture and rhythm; an attractive little work, well suited to the words (Curwen).

From Elkin comes 'Coronach,' a song version of Edgar Barrett's pianoforte solo of the same name. It has some suitable words by Harold Boulton. 'Homing Birds,' by Cecil Baumer, is a conventional song, effective in lay-out and design, but not at all individual. Muriel Herbert's 'The Lake Isle of Innisfree' (same publisher), somewhat experimental in style and rather indebted to Vaughan Williams's 'The Roadside Fire,' is yet a sincere-sounding work; there is freshness in it, and the phrases are shapely.

'Come, O thou Traveller unknown' is an arrangement of a splendid tune by Robert King (an early 18th-century composer and 'one of the royal band,' says 'Grove') to the well-known Wesley hymn. The fine swell of the melody and the fire of the poem make a striking effect; the arranger provides a firm background, but wisely does not interfere much—he lets words and tune make their own mark, which they certainly do. The range is baritone, the arranger is H. A. Chambers, the publisher is Novello. It will be a welcome change from the sacred songs that so often spoil organ recital programmes, for it is a fine thing.

Why should not a composer set 'Who is Sylvia?' if he wants to? And yet it is with surprise that one reads 'Who is Sylvia?' by Arthur K. Duff (Oxford University Press). The saving of the song is its absolute simplicity and directness. There is no attempt to be clever, or illuminate any abstruse aspect of the words that Schubert missed; the composer just sets the poem to a shapely and unaffected tune; his view is not in any way vivid or personal. Graceful is the word. 'Come away, Death,' by R. E. H. Allport, is another song dedicated to John Coates, and published by the Oxford University Press. It is less direct than the last; there is more elaboration, and the underlying structure is more commonplace. It is, in fact, very nearly cheap, if not quite so, and although the rather pretentious figuration of the accompaniment may conceal this weakness for a moment, it cannot do so for long. The work is not up to the standard of this publisher.

Two Warlock songs, 'The Lover's Maze' and 'Sigh no more, ladies' (Oxford University Press), are examples of the composer's brilliant and rather harder style. The first is charming, because so alert, and its little airs and graces are innocent, or sound so (perhaps truer to say). The second is less successful. Bars of perfectly ordinary harmony make the splashes and added notes when they appear sound unnatural. The work is not so spontaneous in effect as the previous song, and lacks the charm of that work.

Herbert Sharpe's 'The Spring' is a rather boisterous and almost bucolic setting of Barnes's poem. It is not a penetrating view of the words, but the music is good-humoured and effectively written, and the tune has shape. Cedric Sharpe's 'The Year 's at the Spring' is a brilliantly written work depending for its effect on rhythm and a fine splash of sound, rather than on any vivid insight. It would make a telling encore song for high baritone or mezzo-soprano. This composer's 'The Fairy Fiddler' is a much better work. It has atmosphere and is more individual; its quietness achieves more than the bluster of the other song. The publisher of these last numbers is Joseph Williams. T. A.

PART-SONGS FOR FEMALE AND BOYS' VOICES

'The Handel School Song Book,' edited by J. M. Diack, contains ten pieces, some in unison and some in two parts. One or two old favourites are here—'O lovely peace' and 'Where'er you walk,' with the original words. For other pieces words by Blake, Goldsmith, and Scott have been selected. I think most people will declare that the choice is happy. I am glad to see that some, at least, of the songs touch the top G. These bold, strong airs want a well-supported, free, and flowing tone. There are hours of clear enjoyment in their preparation. The runs make fine practice. No piece is more than fairly difficult, and some are quite easy. There is something for most ages. The pianoforte edition is 2*s.*; the Staff, with Sol-fa, 6*d.* (Paterson).

P. J. Mansfield's 'Spring' (to Nash's favourite poem, set for s.s.) runs easily, with some staccato bits, plenty of light and shade, and a pleasant feeling of buoyancy. The music is not particularly new, and the key-scheme is rather monotonous. Havergal Brian's 'Ah, County Guy!' has simple parts (s.s.), lies in the lower middle range, and asks pp and ppp singing. It gets something of the spirit of the questioning poem, and suits fairly grown-up singers (Paxton).

MIXED-VOICE

'The Oxford Folk-Song Series' is the latest project of the energetic Oxford University Press. Dr. Whittaker is the general editor. All the pieces now to hand are S.A.T.B. arrangements, except one. Ernest Bullock treats 'The winter it is past' (a gently-flowing, very easy piece), 'With Jockey to the fair' (brisk, quick, and lilting), 'What can a lassie do wi' an auld man?' (a snappy six-eight from Scotland), and 'Yeo, yeo, yeo, yeo, yeo, Sir!' (some bluff stuff about 'merry tars,' from an 18th-century ballad). E. Duncan-Rubbra takes 'My tocher's the jewel' and writes for S.S.A.T.B. (or the first soprano part may be a solo). This is 'For Hugh Mackay,' and those who know the gentle, sweetly-sad voice of the Arts League of Service tenor can tell how well it would suit him. The lower parts hum. This composer is not averse to consecutives between extreme parts, but he is discreet in other ways, such as the weight of the accompaniment. Percy Turnbull gets good, strong clangs (not clashes) of harmony in 'There was a simple maiden.' There are a few bars of doubled parts. E. L. Bainton sets one of Burns's rather artificial poems, 'Behold, my love, how green the groves,' charmingly and simply. H. E. Randerson puts a lot of changes of harmony into one bar of 'The Piper of Dundee,' and so prevents the piece from running quite so fleetly as I feel it needs to, though a good choir might get over this. Gordon Slater chooses 'Kelvin Grove,' and takes the comfortable line of solo sopranos, with closed-lips accompaniment, in the most straightforward fashion. Gordon Jacob has made two settings of 'The Ash Grove,' one short and the other more extended—with more weaving of parts, 'ah' accompaniment, and so on. The counterpoint runs, in both, on very familiar lines. I am a little doubtful if all this folk-song arranging is quite worth while. The results are pleasant enough, but somehow most of them lack any fresh quality, anything to throw new light on the tune and illuminate its beauty. The best point is that scarcely any of the settings get in the way of the air. The business of arranging folk-tunes apparently ties you down to platitudes (so as to maintain the simplicity of the tune in its new framing), or to being clever and using the tune as a text for divagations. Some of the longer essays might aim at a sort of concentrated variation form, such as Charles Wood used once or twice very happily (Oxford University Press).

Mr. Diack has cut Handel's 'Solomon' down to about an hour, bettered the poor libretto, avoided any eight-part work, and printed the whole for 3*s.* I have not been able to compare this edition with the original, save from memory, and can only say that there is plenty of fine, swinging stuff here, though, of course, some of Handel's gaudy grandeur and charming pastoral music have gone. There are two parts—'The Dedication of the Temple' and 'The Wisdom of Solomon.' These could be used separately as short cantatas. Those who don't like piecemealing a great work may object, and I own that I don't readily conjure up 'Solomon' except as a big work for a pretty big choir, done in glowing colours, with some fine character-drawing (in the 'Judgment') and a delicate fancy for the purling bits. There is no reason, of course, why small choral societies, for whom this abridgement is designed, should not make of their members' voices the most clear, delicate, and strong instruments that are needed to do it justice. When you prune such a work as this, you need all the finer singing to make up for the pruning. The work in its present form will be welcomed by all, save perhaps those who, knowing it as Handel in those ripest last years wrote it (he was sixty-three), may prefer to wait until they can again renew their memories of its rolling eight-parters. W. R. A.

ORCHESTRA

A 'Guildford Suite,' by Thomas F. Dunhill (Paxton), should appeal to conductors on the look-out for music at once tasteful and melodious, easily understood yet not lacking in distinction. It consists of six pictures on a historical or legendary background—programme music, but music not too closely tied to its programme. Not the least attractive episode describes children singing and selling flowers to the pilgrims on the way to the Shrine of St. Thomas à Becket. This seems a very fair specimen of the art of a composer who delights not in spectacular things but in freshness and simplicity. The Suite is scored for one flute, one oboe, two clarinets, one bassoon, two horns, one trumpet, harp, and strings; trombones are optional, and one player only is required for the percussion department. F. B.

STUDIES

Léon J. Fontaine's 'Twenty Short Melodious Studies for the Violin' dealing with the positions from the second to the seventh (Paxton) seems to point to the realisation of the importance of learning early something about the high positions, for, apart from the position difficulty, they have no other serious problem for the student. This is as it should be, and one welcomes the change from the old methods whereby a student never tackled the higher positions seriously before he was able to encounter those redoubtable pedagogues—Rode and Campagnoli. F. B.

CHAMBER MUSIC

It is interesting to see Mr. Arthur Bliss turn his skill and ingenuity to chamber music. A thorough iconoclast is often at his best when for some reason or other his zeal begins to feel that discretion is not merely a coward's virtue. Mr. Bliss's Quintet for oboe and string quartet (Oxford University Press) is still the work of a bold and enterprising spirit, but indications are not lacking of a more sedate mood than that which prevails, for instance, in some parts of the 'Colour' Symphony. The chief characteristics remain, however, the same—buoyancy, high spirits, hustle—and I much prefer the last movement (with Connelly's Jig) to the almost rhapsodic mood of the second movement. To avoid disappointment, it should be clearly understood that this is a work for oboe and strings—not merely a Quintet with an oboe part. The oboist has the lion's share, and the Quintet must stand or fall according to the skill with which that part is interpreted. F. B.

Gramophone Notes

By 'Discus'

H.M.V.

Both H.M.V. and Columbia issue Mozart's E flat Symphony this month. The former recording introduces us to a new conductor, Erich Kleiber. The orchestra is the Berlin State. Comparisons between the two issues being inevitable, I say at the outset that I find the H.M.V. the clearer. This quality is so important in Mozart that it is sufficient, I think, to turn the scale. Kleiber is on the slow side in the Minuet, apparently regarding it as a dance rather than as an incipient Scherzo. He shows an admirable lightness in the Finale. In the slow movement he is over-leisurely (D1448-50).

The best thing in orchestral records this month is the set of Brahms's first Symphony, played by the London Symphony Orchestra conducted by Abendroth. Imperfections there are, as is inevitable in so long a work, and one with scoring on the thick side. But throughout it gives us the right feeling of size and grandeur. The Finale is particularly good (D1454-58).

The most vivid orchestral record is of a couple of movements by Manuel de Falla—the Spanish Dance from 'La Vida Breve' and the Fire-Ritual Dance from 'L'Amour Sorcier,' conducted by Piero Coppola (D1453). The clearest is of a selection from Millöcker's 'The Beggar Student,' played by Karel Marek and his orchestra. The music is a good sample of the light type. Viennese composers and players are dabsters at this sort of thing (C1528).

Another good light orchestral record is that of the New Light Symphony Orchestra (conductor anonymous) in 'Persiflage,' a rather weak piece by Francis, and Glazounov's piquant Ballet Scene, 'Marionettes' (B2754).

Two violin sonata records call for nothing but praise. Handel's A major is beautifully played by Isolde Menges and Eileen Beattie (D1374); and Grieg's C minor fares hardly less well at the hands of Marjorie Hayward and Una Bourne. I qualify the praise because I think a little more might have been done to knit the loosely-strung work together. The C minor is, perhaps, the least satisfactory of Grieg's three Violin Sonatas in this respect, but it contains more than enough delightful music to atone for its structural defects (C1388-90).

Isolde Menges is capital in the de Falla-Kreisler Spanish Dance, but is ill-advised to choose for companion piece the Brahms A flat Waltz. Are there no others of the set? This A flat (one of the weakest, surely) has been recorded so often that the discs, placed end to end (has a disc an end?), would reach from here to there (E508).

Poor tone is the only fault to be found in the pianoforte records received—Paderewski playing Chopin's F sharp major Nocturne and the Paganini-Liszt 'La Campanella' (DB1167); and Harold Samuel in Bach's A minor 'English' Suite. (The Bourrées are not included, as they were recorded a year or so ago.) The fine Prelude and the Gigue come off the best. The Sarabande suffers from want of sustained tone. I have doubts about Mr. Samuel's method of making the Gigue fill a 12-in. side; he plays it through in the usual way, with each half repeated, and then gives the whole again, without repeats. Even so jolly a movement as this may go on too long by saying its say three times over (C1405-06).

Moiseiwitsch gets off the beaten track with Palmgren's 'Rococo' (only mildly rococo) and a highly diverting piece by Ibert called 'The little white donkey' (E492).

Irene Scharrer plays Bach's 'Jesu, Joy of man's desiring' (with fine clarity and a nice balance between the chorale melody and accompaniment) and a pleasing Gavotte by Boyle, arranged by Craxton (E489. The label, by the way, describes the Gavotte as a violin solo).

Browning Mummery sings finely Frank Bridge's 'Love went a-riding' to the no less admirable accompaniment of Gerald Moore. I like him less in Denza's 'Had you but known,' chiefly because it is a poor song. In both his words are not very clear (B2756).

First-rate is Stuart Robertson in Vaughan Williams's 'Silent Noon' and Lehmann's 'Myself when young,' with diction above the average (B2755).

Inability to hear more than an occasional word spoils our enjoyment of John Brownlee's singing of two songs by Franz and Gretchaninov's 'The Dreary Steppe.'

Both choral and organ recording show an advance in Holst's Psalm 86, sung by the Philharmonic Choir, conducted by C. Kennedy Scott, with Gladys Currie and Percy Manchester as soloists. The important organ part is a great success, and the choir comes through capitally. Mr. Manchester deserves a special mark for his words. This is one of the best choral records so far made (D1375).

A couple of Walford Davies's Nursery Rhymes and Thalben-Ball's arrangement of 'Drink to me only with thine eyes' are sung by members of the Temple Church Choir. The Nursery Rhymes are delightful music, but I don't like the singing much, It is far too 'precious,' and in 'Drink to me only' there is a lachrymose touch—especially from Master Thomas Lough, I note with regret. I hope he will drop that wobble before he gets his adult voice (B2770).

I think so highly of Hugh Roberton and the Glasgow Orpheus Choir that I should like to praise their latest record. But I can't. Coleridge-Taylor's 'Summer is gone' is blurred and not well tuned. The recording may be to blame here, but in Balfour Gardiner's 'Cargoes' nobody but the conductor is responsible for the distortions brought about by unnecessary rallentandos and by taking the 'Spanish galleon' passage slower than the preceding verse through changing the value of the crotchet. The final phrase, 'Dirty British Coaster,' marked by the composer molto allegro, is sung far too slowly. For rhythm's sake, H. S. R., don't lend your authority to this kind of thing, already too common. Time's time, after all, and when a composer goes out of his way to warn us at a change from 3-4 to 4-4 that the crotchet must not change its value, it 's not for the likes of us to flout him. And if he wants three or four rallentandos he won't be afraid to mark them (E407).

'La Bohème,' complete (or so nearly so as to make no difference), is a good successor to the 'Rigoletto' noticed last month. Again the recording has been done at La Scala, Milan, with the same conductor and an excellent cast of soloists, with the result that, as in the 'Rigoletto' set, the strong point is team work (C1513-25).

A Flonzaley recording leaves little to be said. Only in one detail does the playing of Mozart's Quartet in D (No. 8) err, it seems to me. The players are so inclined to overdo the sforzandi, that the movement becomes heavy, and the tone hard at times (DA947-49).

Just as these notes are being closed comes a formidable contribution to the Schubert celebrations—the two song-cycles, 'Die Winterreise,' sung by Elena Gerhardt, with Conraad von Bos at the pianoforte, and 'Die schöne Müllerin,' sung by Hans Duhan, accompanied by Ferdinand Foll. There are also a number of detached songs performed by Gerhardt and Bos—'Schlummerlied' and 'Abschied' (D1460); 'Im Frühling,' 'Der Musensohn,' and 'Das Rosenband' (D1461); 'Litanei' and the Romance from 'Rosamund' (D1462; 'Litanei' is accompanied by Paula Hegner, with violin obbligato by Marjorie Hayward); 'Fischerweise,' 'Das Fischermädchen,' and 'Geheimes' (D1459). The 'Winterreise' group is numbered D1262-64, with an odd disc—E460—giving 'Die Post' and 'Die Krähe.' The other cycle is on ten records. As the numbering is not consecutive I cannot find space for details. Nor can the records be discussed fully. It must suffice to say that those by Duhan are by far the finer. In fact, after hearing the 'Maid of the Mill' songs, I am inclined to regard these ten records as being at least the equal of any of the numerous contributions made by the gramophone to the Schubert Centenary. The Gerhardt records, it must be confessed, show a great singer in decline. There are fine moments, and the authority and style that we look for. But voice does matter, after all, and too often there is unsteadiness and a sense of effort. The 'Litany' is, perhaps, the best of her records. The accompaniments of Bos are a delight. The great value of this batch of records is that it gives us many songs—some of Schubert's finest—that have probably not been recorded before, and that certainly are not familiar to the average listener. After an overdose of 'Hark! hark, the lark' and 'Who is Sylvia?' it is a refreshment to be able to hear these two cycles. In no other way does one get a full sense of Schubert's greatness as a song composer. When I say that his music is able to overcome my natural British antipathy to such a dose of linden trees, tears, brooklets, and a general condition of moist sensibility, I have paid it the highest of tributes. (All the same, I wish some English poet of genius would write fresh words to about two hundred of Schubert's best songs, discarding the moon-struck wanderers and lovesick younglings for more normal and companionable folk.)

COLUMBIA

A batch of four 'Rosamund' records carries on the Schubert stream. The Ballet Music is on L2125; L2124 gives us the second and third Entr'actes and the engaging 'Shepherd's Melody'; the first Entr'acte is on L2123; the pick, I think, is L2122, because it deals with less familiar material—the Overture, also known as the 'Alphonso and Estrella.' (There appears to be almost as much confusion concerning these Overtures as there is about the 'Leonora' and 'Fidelio' group.) This 'Alphonso and Estrella' piece is so attractive that it ought to be heard far more frequently in place of the over-worked Ballet Music. It is capitally played by the Hallé Orchestra, conducted by Harty. The Overture is, in fact, one of the best of recent orchestral records, and its companions are also excellent.

To the 'popular' dark blue label series is now added Mozart's E flat Symphony, played by the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra under Weingartner (9450-52). This opens rather dully, it seems to me. The slow movement is good. In the Minuet the wind is too loud for the strings when the latter have low notes. We ought to hear more of the quaver arpeggio, surely; the solid crotchet chords played by the wind dominate the situation instead of providing the harmonic background. This fault, however, is so common that audiences apparently don't mind. (Has anybody ever heard the main theme of the Finale of Beethoven's seventh Symphony, for example? It is given to the first violins alone, but struggles vainly against the sf chords of the full wind. Nearly all wood-wind playing seems to be on the loud side nowadays, and a real pp bit of dialogue from these instruments is rare, although it is one of the most refreshing of orchestral effects.) The Finale gives us a good deal of the right sparkle—a capital bit of playing and recording, with the wood-wind heard to advantage.

The 'Blue Danube' has had such a good innings lately that a couple of Waldteufel are a welcome change. They are 'Les Sirènes' and 'Les Patineurs,' and both are excellent—better than the more famous Strauss example, I think. The players are the Grenadier Guards Band (9463).

In the way of string music there are four recordings that should not be missed. Felix Salmond and Simeon Rumschisky play Grieg's Sonata for violoncello and pianoforte. When all is said as to Grieg's weakness in handling large forms the fact remains that his loosely-constructed Sonatas often make better hearing than more perfect examples, thanks to the lyric charm of his themes. Both players make the most of this quality. The eighth side of the four records is given to one of the best of Grieg's short pianoforte pieces, arranged for violoncello—'To Spring'—an effective transcription (L2137-40).

A couple of records of Lionel Tertis show him as composer of three attractive pieces: 'Serenade,' 'The Blackbird,' and 'The River.' Bracketed with them is a transcription, by the player, of Tchaikovsky's song 'None but the weary heart,' here called 'Pleading' (D1627-28).

Arthur Catterall draws on familiar material—the Brahms-Joachim Hungarian Dance in D minor and Raff's 'Cavatina,' playing both admirably (9439). Perhaps the best of these string records is of Albert Sammons in Svensden's 'Romance,' despite some hardness of tone in forte passages—which may be a recording rather than a playing fault (4954). Which reminds me that in nearly all the Columbia records reviewed this month the surface is less good than usual.

A couple of choral records offer the widest possible contrast. The choir of St. George's Chapel, Windsor, directed by Dr. E. H. Fellowes, sings well in Attwood's 'Teach me, O Lord,' and a couple of Psalms. The chanting is good, but I am surprised to find a common misreading of the Gloria receiving such sanction—'As it was . . . and ever shall be.' Surely the point lies in 'was,' 'is now,' and 'shall be' (4922).

After these placid Anglican strains the record of the Don Cossacks Choir in three Russian folk-songs is as vodka after barley-water. Here is fierce, unbridled singing by splendid voices. One can enjoy it, despite the fact of knowing nothing about the subjects of the songs. (The labels might help by giving at least English titles.) Unfortunately, the companion piece to these wild outpourings gives us barley-water again, of an even weaker brew than Attwood and Anglican chants—a Bortniansky hymn-like anthem (or anthemy hymn) of an inanity that is emphasised by the concertina swellings of the voices. There is no need to import feeble church music; our present supply is ample (9438).

Among the vocal solo records is a capital one of Miriam Licette in Mozart's 'Dove Sono' (9436). Harold Williams wastes his excellent voice on a feeble song by Dickson, 'Thanks be to God,' and seems to show by his singing that he knows how poor it is. 'To-morrow,' by Keel, is better, but not first-rate (4923).

For Schubertians there are six of the songs, four sung by Frank Titterton—'The Erl-King' and 'On the water' (9431), 'By the sea' and 'Ave Maria' (9432); and two by Roy Henderson, 'Tartarus' and 'The Sign-post' (9433). The singing in all is excellent. Mr. Titterton may be held by some to over-dramatise the latter half of 'The Erl-King,' but he certainly gets a thrill out of it. (The accompaniment, by Pouishnov, is alone worth the money.) Why does Titterton sing 'Ave Maria'? It is clearly a girl's song. And 'On the water' calls for lighter voice or treatment. Words in all six songs are creditably clear, though we miss a few. All said, these Schubert song records are to be commended, above all for their manly vocal quality and sincere style.

METROPOLE

There is little of musical importance here. The Casano Wireless Octet plays Kreisler's 'Liebeslied' Waltz and Dvorák's tenth Slavonic Dance. I wish transcribers would leave this over-played number for some of its even better companions (1053).

The Gershom Parkington Quintet draws on Schubert for the F minor 'Moment Musical,' coupling with it Mendelssohn's on 'Wings of Song.' Both are arranged by Mr. Parkington. I don't mind much what he does to the Mendelssohn song, but I object strongly to his 'improvement' of the Schubert. I still hold that nobody, be his name Godowsky or Parkington, has any right to tamper with the harmony of the original—or at all events to introduce, as Mr. Parkington does here, effects which are so entirely out of the style of the piece as to weaken and vulgarise it (1054).

The best of the batch are a couple of records of the Emory University Glee Club. They sing a negro slave song, 'Water Boy,' bracketed with a couple of really diverting quartets, 'The Mosquito' and 'The Story of a Tack' (1066). Even better are 'Go down, Moses' and the Civil War song, by a quartet, 'Ah ain't gwine study war no mo'.' The unction and relish of the singers in the latter—especially the bass—are delicious; and they have fine voices, too (1061).

Player-Piano Notes

ÆOLIAN

Duo-Art.—Harriet Cohen's performance of Bax's 'Mediterranean' (0335) heads the list this time. It is clear, full of colour, and altogether effective, though it will appeal to Bax enthusiasts rather than to the average player-pianist.

For those who care for rich fare there is Goossens's 'Folk-Tune,' No. 1 of Two Studies (0333), played by himself. For many it will be too cloying and overloaded. Goossens here joins hands (for the only time, surely!) with Cyril Scott.

Chopin's 'Brilliant Variations,' Op. 12, need more variety in power and colour than Adolph Waterman gives them, though his playing is delightfully clear. The tone is so level as to take away some of the music's interest (0332).

Leonid Kreutzer makes such labour of Bach's charming Siciliano from the Sonata in E flat that it loses much of its flowing grace (0336).

Beethoven's Polonaise in C is of slight interest musically, but Emil Sauer's playing makes the roll enjoyable (0300).

Hand-Played.—By far the best is a fine performance by John Thompson of Dohnányi's Rhapsody in C (A1085*d*). This is a brilliant and effective affair.

MacDowell's 'To a Wild Rose' has a simple and unaffected treatment by George McManus (A1093*d*).

There is an attractive Viennese Waltz No. 2 by Gaertner-Friedman, played by Ignaz Friedman. Good as the actual technique is, however, the waltz rhythm is too much in the background, even for a 'concert' waltz. Apparently the performer has little sympathy with the dance! (A1089*e*).

Rudolph Ganz is admirable in Chopin's Scherzo in C sharp minor, indulging in no more than a legitimate rubato (A1091*f*).

There is a pleasant, though not particularly interesting, 'Serenade' by Pierné, played by Robert Schmitz (A1083*e*).

Grieg's charming little 'Nocturne' suffers from Winifred Byrd's exaggerated 'expression.' Throughout the rhythm is destroyed by the player's sitting down on the end of every phrase. Even a piece of this dreamy type should be kept moving (A1081*d*).

Themodist.—Dvorák's Slavonic Dance, Op. 72, No. 10, is not a real success. It is hardly possible to avoid a stilted, pecking effect in the right-hand chord passages. There are several of these Slavonic Dances which would be far more effective, and give less trouble than this, besides having much more musical interest (T30387*c*).

There is a skittish, but very ordinary 'Salon Studie,' Staccato, by Bohm (T30391*a*).

Much of Hollins's organ music is so pianistic that it is not surprising to find his 'Song of Sunshine' coming off even better as a pianoforte roll than in its original form. It is most successful and very easy to manage (T30384*b*).

On the other hand, Walford Davies's 'Solemn Melody' is far less satisfactory on the pianoforte than on the organ or orchestra—it suffers too much from the inevitable lack of sustaining tone (T30385*b*).

In Myra Hess's arrangement of Bach's 'Jesu, Joy of man's desiring' (T30388*b*) it is difficult—in fact, impossible—to bring out the chorale melody when it occurs in an inner part. Here is a point wherein the machine must take second place to the human hand. Otherwise this is a good roll (T30388*b*).

BLÜTHNER

The outstanding roll is of Scriabin's 'Polonaise,' Op. 21, both by reason of its very fine performance by Walter Bonim and for its musical interest. Here is something for the listener who likes music served up with warmth and passion. A notable feature on the playing side is the clear and effective pedalling (59,825).

There is a placid and charming 'Sicilienne' by Gabriel Fauré, played at his usual high standard by the composer—a typical Fauré roll (55,916).

The two Chopin rolls, Mazurka, Op. 30, No. 4, played by Alfred Hoelm (55,779), and Nocturne, Op. 37, No. 2, played by Joseph Sliwinski (55,782), are only moderately good. The Mazurka is not one of the most interesting, and Hoelm does nothing to make us forget the fact; moreover, his pedalling is blurred in places. The Nocturne is better in every way, though Sliwinski is over-leisurely.

The Beethoven 'Bagatelles' vary considerably in interest. Three of the best, Nos. 4-6, are capitally played by Felix Wernow (58,408).

How unexpectedly well some of Mendelssohn's pianoforte music wears is shown by Josef Hofmann in his playing of the little Scherzo, Op. 16, No. 2. This is delightful and effective (56,940).

Gabriel Pierné's playing of his 'Pastorale Variée' shows it in the most favourable light, but the theme is hardly strong enough to maintain the interest over so long a stretch. The composer has hung a little too much on a somewhat slender peg (57,107).

Felix Gieseking plays Rubinstein's wistful 'Die Thräne' with plenty of sympathy, and with an application of the principle of rubato that makes his performance a good lesson in this respect (59,423).

There is an adequate arrangement of the 'Death of Isolde' from 'Tristan and Isolde,' well played by Julius Prewer. It is more effective than most rolls of this type (54,867).

The following rolls are a selection heard apart from the usual monthly list.

Most attractive is MacDowell's 'Improvisation.' Charlton Keith's gradation of tone-power in this is particularly good, and the playing throughout excellent in its clarity (50,850).

It is interesting to contrast Bertrand Roth's playing of Grieg's 'Nocturne' with that of Winifred Byrd mentioned above. Roth's playing is highly expressive, and he maintains the gently-flowing movement on which the charm of the piece depends so much (55,984). Another roll of the 'Nocturne' was issued some time ago, played by Gustav Riemann (52,056), whose performance is, perhaps, even better. He adopts a slightly slower pace, and shows just a shade more depth of feeling.

The varying moods of Mengelberg's 'Barcarole' are well displayed by Elly Ney. There is plenty of contrast, and a fine virility about her playing (51,047).

For sheer virtuosity the palm goes to M. G. Leschetitzky's playing of Leschetitzky's 'Barcarola,' Op. 39, No. 1 (51,528). The clarity of the rapid passages in thirds is remarkable. This is a most attractive roll.

There is also a good sample of the old style of salon music in Sally Liebling's 'Valse de Concert,' played by the composer with due éclat (52,056).

D. G.

Teachers' Department

EASY PIANOFORTE MUSIC

Two books of pieces suitable for elementary pupils come from Elkin. Arthur Baynon, in the six little pieces under the title 'A Summer Garland,' writes pleasantly and tunefully, if somewhat conventionally. More fresh are Alan Gordon's 'London Pieces'—nine attractive little numbers under such titles as 'The Horse Guards' (a quick march), 'St. Martin-in-the-Fields' (a bright little bell-like piece), 'The Berkeley Ball' (waltz time), &c. Two other albums from the same publishers are rather more difficult. 'A Fairy Story' in seven chapters, by Frederick Nicholls, is likely to make an easy appeal to young people (Elementary-Lower). The music makes few demands on finger technique, and mostly calls for expressive playing. Some of the pieces should prove helpful rhythmically. 'A Book of Dances,'

(Continued on page 919)

The Golden Skein

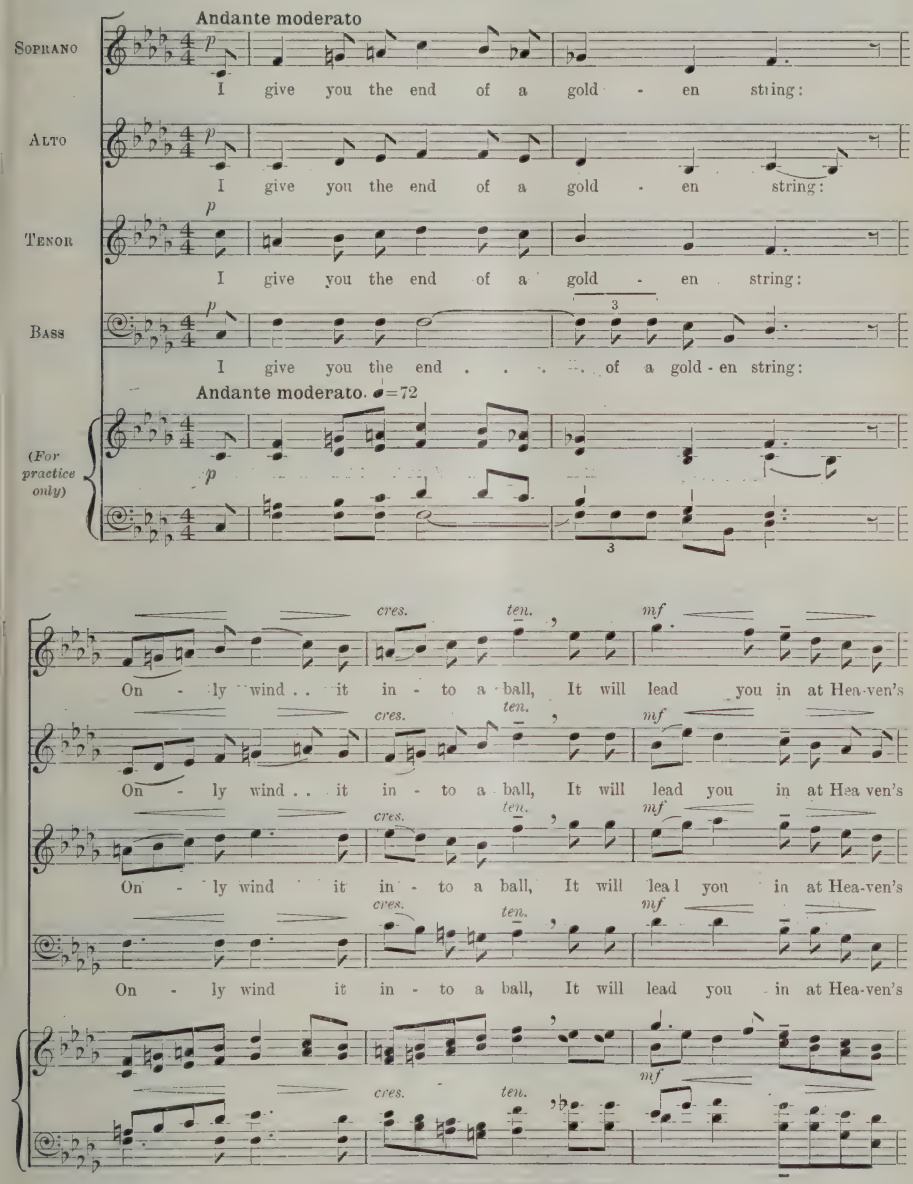
FOUR-PART SONG FOR MIXED VOICES

Words by William Blake Music by Edgar L. Bainton

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY Limited; New York: THE H. W. GRAY CO., Sole Agents for the U.S.A.



Andante moderato
Soprano
I give you the end of a gold - en string:
Alto
I give you the end of a gold - en string:
Tenor
I give you the end of a gold - en string:
Bass
I give you the end . . . of a gold - en string:
Andante moderato. ♩=72
(For practice only)
On - ly wind . . it in - to a ball, It will lead you in at Hea-ven's
On - ly wind . . it in - to a ball, It will lead you in at Hea ven's
On - ly wind it in - to a ball, It will lea l you in at Hea-ven's
On - ly wind it in - to a ball, It will lead you in at Hea-ven's
cres. ten. mf

Copyright, 1928, by Novello and Company, Limited

dim.
p
rit.
gate, . . . Built in Je - ru - sa - lem's wall. . . . .
gate, . . . Built in Je - ru - sa - lem's wall. . . . .
gate, . . . Built in Je - ru - sa - lem's wall. . .
gate, . . . Built in Je - ru - sa - lem's wall. . . . .
a tempo
mf cres.
f
Eng - land! a - wake! a - wake! a - wake! Je -
Eng - land! a - wake! a - wake! a - wake! Je -
Eng - land! a - wake! a - wake! a - wake! Je - ru - - sa - lem thy Eng - - - - land! a - wake! a - wake! Je -

dim.
mp
- ru - sa - lem . . thy sis - ter calls! . . . Why wilt thou sleep the
- ru - sa - lem thy sis - ter calls! . . . Why wilt thou sleep . . the sleep . . of sis - - - - - ter calls! . . . Why wilt thou sleep . . the sleep . . of
- ru - sa - lem . . thy sis - ter calls! . . . Why wilt thou sleep the dim.
p
rit.
sleep of death, And close her from thy an - - - cient death, . . . And close her from . . . . thy an - - - cient death, . . . And close her from . . . thy an - - cient sleep of death, . . And close her from thy an - - cient

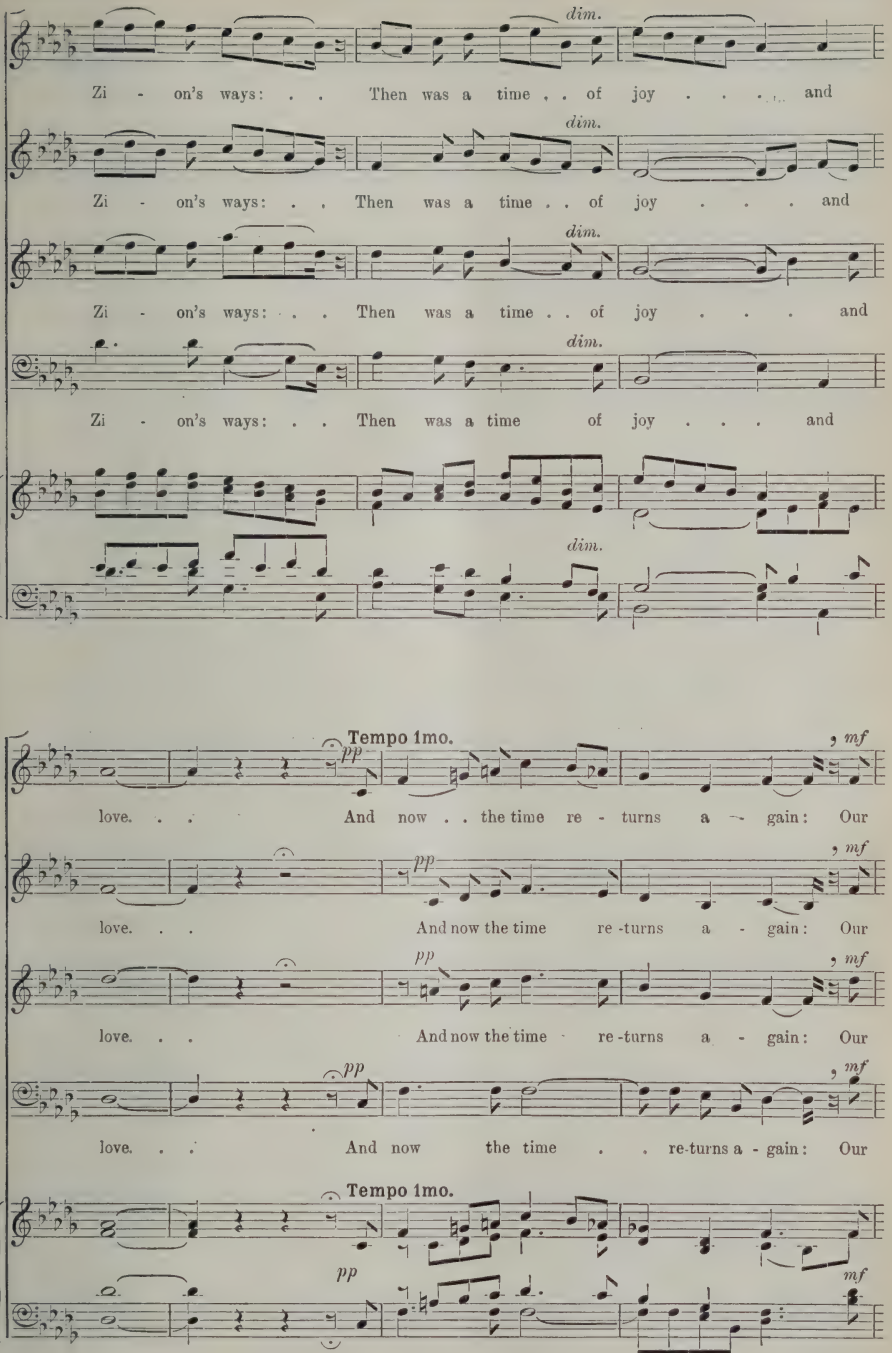
Poco più tranquillo
pp
walls? Thy hills . . and val - - leys felt.. her.. feet . .
walls? Thy hills . . and val - - leys felt.. her.. feet . .
walls? Thy hills . . and val - - leys felt.. her.. feet . .
walls? Thy val - - leys felt her feet
Poco più tranquillo
pp
mp poco cres.
Gent - ly up - on their bosoms move: Thy gates . . be - held . . sweet
Gent - ly up - on their bosoms move: . . . Thy gates . . be - held . . sweet
Gent - ly up - on their bo - soms move: Thy gates . . be - held . . sweet
Gent - ly up - on their bosoms move: . . . Thy gates be - held . . sweet



dim.
Zi - on's ways: . . Then was a time . . of joy . . . . and
dim.
Zi - on's ways: . . Then was a time . . of joy . . . and
dim.
Zi - on's ways: . . Then was a time . . of joy . . . and
dim.
Zi - on's ways: . . Then was a time of joy . . . and
dim.
Tempo 1mo.
pp
, mf love. . . And now . . the time re - turns a - gain: Our love. . . And now the time re-turns a - gain: Our love. . . And now the time re-turns a - gain: Our love. . . And now the time . . re-turns a - gain: Our Tempo 1mo.
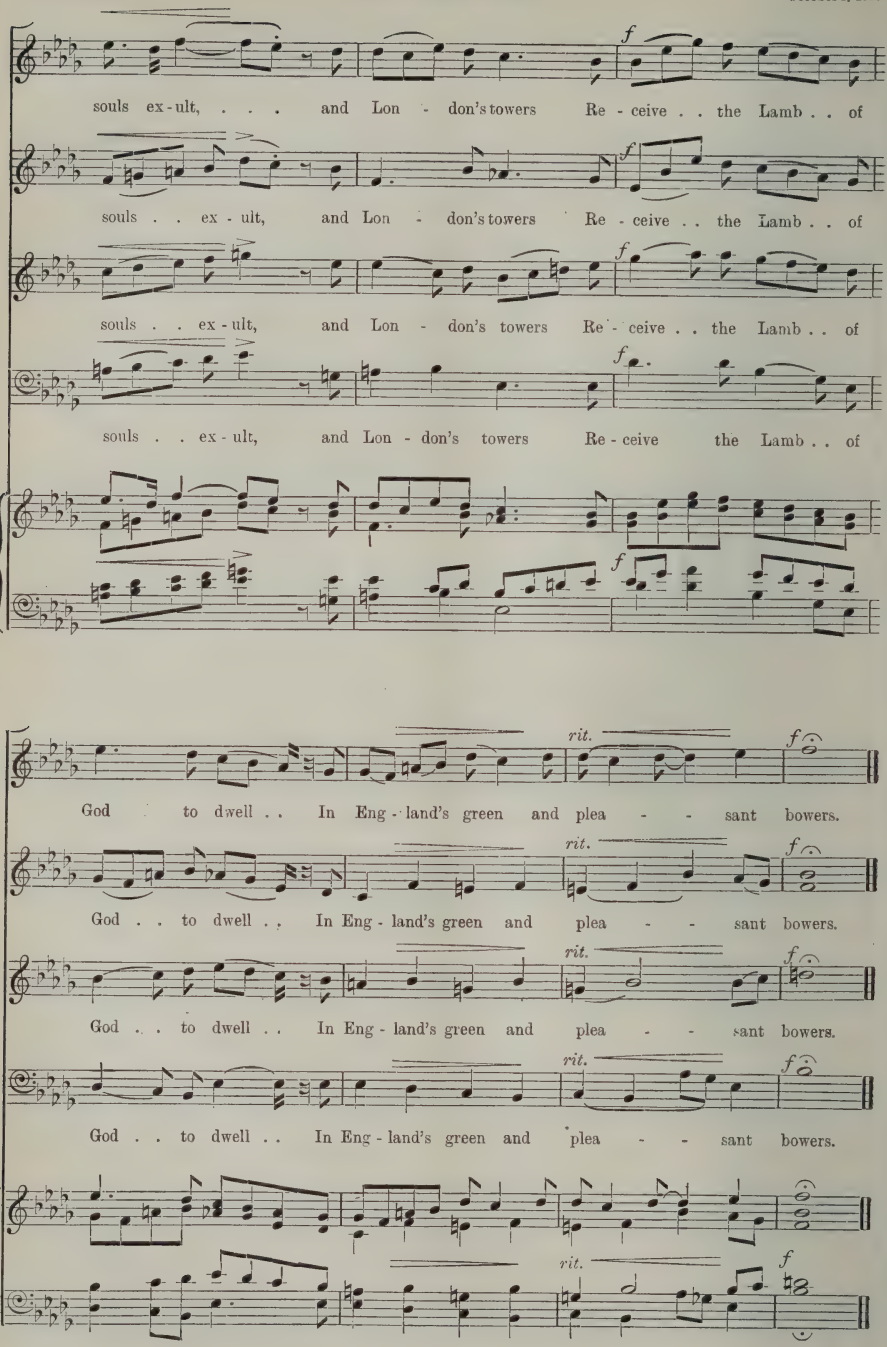
pp
mf



souls ex-ult, . . . and Lon - don's towers Re - ceive . . the Lamb . . of souls . . ex - ult, and Lon - don's towers Re - ceive . . the Lamb . . of souls . . ex - ult, and Lon - don's towers Re - ceive . . the Lamb . . of souls . . ex - ult, and Lon - don's towers Re - ceive the Lamb . . of f
rit.
God to dwell . . In Eng - land's green and plea - - sant bowers.
God . . to dwell . . In Eng - land's green and plea - - sant bowers.
God . . to dwell . . In Eng - land's green and plea - - sant bowers.
God . . to dwell . . In Eng - land's green and plea - - sant bowers.

(Continued from page 912.)

by George F. Dodds, will appeal to boys and girls alike. There are four of them—Hornpipe, Minuet, Gavotte, and Jig. They are well-written, with the interest equally divided between the two hands, and will help in developing finger technique and hand independence (Lower-Higher).

Some good, though not exceptionally striking, work by well-known writers of educational music comes from Paxton. Harry Farjeon provides two further sets of 'Contrasts.' No. 3 (Elementary) contains 'In the Steppes' (mostly in two-part writing and built up on three- and five-bar phrases) and 'At the Fair' (a brief, vigorous allegro giocoso). In No. 4, a charming little piece for cantabile playing—'In the Meadows'—is coupled with 'A Plaintive Waltz,' which contains some interesting touches in both melody and harmony (Higher). Thomas F. Dunhill's 'The Pied Piper' contains six pieces, well varied in style, but most of them calling for neat, fluent finger-work (Lower-Higher). Suitable for the same grade is E. Markham Lee's suite of four pieces, 'The Land of Make-Believe.' Their titles are: 'Frolic of the Elves,' 'The Court of the Fairy Queen' (a stately dance), 'Ghosts and Shadows,' and 'Moonlight Revels' (a graceful allegretto in 3-4 time). J. Stuart Archer's 'Gigue' is a fluently-written piece in 12-8 time, mainly in two-part writing, which would make a capital study for the development of hand independence (Intermediate). G. G.

---

In our review last month of Book 6 of 'The Hundred Best Short Classics,' we said it was the end of the series. This was a slip, which we regret. Book 7, the final number, has just been issued. It contains a capital selection from Bach (1), Brahms (4), Schumann (3), and Chopin (5). Patersons are the publishers.

---

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

Questions must be of general musical interest. They must be stated simply and briefly, and if several are sent, each must be written on a separate slip. Our 'Answers to Correspondents' Column closes on the 14th of the month. We cannot undertake to reply by post.

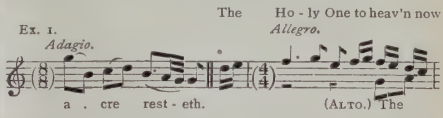
L. P.—There are several versions of the story and origin of Haydn's 'Farewell' Symphony. That generally accepted is told by Michel Brenet in her life of Haydn (Oxford University Press). The Symphony was written as a hint to Prince Esterhazy that Haydn and the orchestra were tired of being kept at the Prince's Hungarian palace, and wished to return to their homes at Vienna. It is on ordinary lines until the Finale (save for its key, the unusual one of F sharp minor, with F sharp major for the Adagio). 'After about a hundred bars [we quote from Michel Brenet] all the instruments stopped suddenly, on the dominant; when a return to the principal key was expected, a fragment of the Adagio reappeared interwoven with a new theme soon divided into four parts for violins. In another moment the second horn and the first oboe blew out the candles of their music-stands and quietly left the hall. The bassoon, silent until then, seemed to try to replace them, and twice, in unison with the second violin, began the first notes of the original motif; but, immediately abandoning his part, he disappeared in his turn. Gradually all the lights were extinguished, and all the musicians stole away, until the Prince's favourite, Tomasini, the first violin, and a second violin, were left alone at their posts in the semi-darkness. Very sadly, with muted instruments, their last accents seemed to fade away in the night, and Haydn, alone at his desk, was preparing, not without anxiety, to go out too, when Nicolas Esterhazy called him and announced that he had understood the musicians' request, and that they might leave next day.' The Finale was revived in December, 1918, in Queen's Hall, at a concert of humorous music organized by Sir Landon Ronald. It was performed with the original effects of blown-out candles, &c., and proved to be one of the most effective items in the programme. Sir Frederic Cowen conducted it.

Trelawney.—In Bach's cantata, 'The Heavens shout,' at the change from Adagio to Allegro there should be no break. Regard the Allegro as beginning with the word 'Holy,' so that the preceding semiquavers make the eighth beat of the last Adagio bar. The pace should be doubled at the change, the two quavers with which the altos enter being equal to the semiquavers of the soprano entry:



The passage is awkward as set out, but would be quite simple if Bach had halved the bars of the Adagio, using the crotchet as the unit. You ask about the pace. We prefer to give no metronome mark. There is only one pace to decide—that of the Allegro, the Adagio being the same speed halved. The semiquaver runs in the Allegro are the deciding factor; the pace at which your choir can sing them clearly (and brilliantly, as befits the text) is the pace for the whole movement.

A.R.C.O.—(1.) Let your opening voluntary be about three minutes long, so timed as to last during the entry of the choir. So much for duration. You ask as to character. Obviously it should be on the quiet side, but as you say that the bells are heard in the building, it must not be too quiet. Range from mp to mf until choir are in their places, by which time the bells will have ceased from troubling; then end p or pp. Don't improvise, if you have no gift that way. (But only one improviser out of a hundred knows that he hasn't, really.) There are hundreds of excellent short pieces suitable. As to the end of the service: play quietly while the choir are going out—if their walk must be accompanied; but need it be? Anyway, don't burst at once into somebody's Festive March while folk are still at their devotions. (2.) For a student compelled to work without a teacher, we should advise Alcock's 'The Organ' to follow Stainer, plus the shorter works of Bach (not forgetting the Chorale Preludes, including those for manuals only) and Rheinberger's Monologues, Characteristic Pieces, Meditations, and the two sets of Trios. (All from Novello.)

E. O. G.—(1.) The standard book on Parry is C. L. Graves's 'Hubert Parry: His Life and Works,' published in 1926 (Macmillan). (2.) The book by Parry to which you refer has not yet been published. It occupied him during the later years of his life, and bore the title 'Instinct and Character.' According to Mr. Graves, the decision against publication was based on the grounds that 'the work dealt with many departments of human knowledge, and particularly science, on lines which did not represent the latest and most authoritative pronouncements of expert investigators; that the upheaval of the War and its results and lessons inevitably laid many of his conclusions and speculations open to challenge and controversy; and that to publish the book, as it stood, would not redound in the main to the author's repute.' There are, however, 'splendid things in it,' and Mr. Graves's biography quotes liberally from it. Typewritten copies of 'Instinct and Character' are in the British Museum, the Bodleian, the Royal College of Music, and the Cambridge University Libraries.

G. W. S.—We do not know Parry's Scherzo in F for the organ, and so cannot discuss the cadence with certainty. But if, as you say, the key of the subdominant is used for a long time towards the end, followed by an abrupt return to the tonic for the close, it certainly seems to be an error of judgment. We know the uncomfortable feeling that results. The subdominant having been so strongly established, the final cadence has a dominant rather than a tonic effect. We recall a similar miscalculation in Best's otherwise admirable Fugue in E, where towards the end the key of A persists, without being balanced by a sufficiently long stretch of E afterwards.

M. E. W.—The method of finger-substitution is less employed in organ playing to-day than formerly. It has its place in organ technique, but was often overdone, the result being monotonous and sticky. Although the mechanisms of organ and pianoforte touch differ, the present-day tendency is to finger on the organ pretty much as on the pianoforte. This makes for greater freedom, and also helps the phrasing and variety of touch. The old school of organ playing made less use of staccato and mezzo-staccato than is now usual. The advice you have received as to the application of your pianoforte method to your organ work is sound.

A. J. T.—What kind of post do you wish to obtain? As you refer to the advisability of joining a union, we presume you aspire to be an orchestral pianist. The diplomas you have gained, though good so far as they go, would not be of much use in this connection. You must get your L.R.A.M., and meanwhile give up the idea of any post worth having. There are far too many well-equipped musicians waiting for them; you are still in the early stages of study.

Alpha.—In the Allegretto of Beethoven's Sonata in E, Op. 14, No. 1, the bar is the unit. Hence the metronome markings you quote 𝅗𝅥. = 84 and ♩. = 64. You think they are wrong, because they imply a crotchet rate of 252 and 192, which you say cannot be the case in a movement marked Allegretto. But the term applies to the bar. Don't think in crotchets, but in bars. Beethoven's notation is misleading—unless one thinks a bit!

V. W. T.—Having done the Lenten cantatas you name, you might well try Charles Wood's 'Passion according to St. Mark' (Faith Press). Concerning your other question, we are posting to you a booklet giving particulars of such works published by Novello. Make a list of those that seem likely to suit your needs, and ask Novello's to send them on approval. You may then keep them for a fortnight and choose at your leisure.

J. S. is anxious for information respecting a 'Colour System' of music-teaching. Erica Losh's 'Rainbow' (Novello) uses a colour scheme in linking staff and keyboard. The book is entirely elementary, and refers only to beginners. It is possible that J. S. may find in it the system which she seeks.—E. F.

T. L. J.—Any or all of the works of Rheinberger (twenty Sonatas and about a hundred short pieces); many pieces by John E. West; the best of Merkel, Guilmant, Dubois; all Franck; Vierne's 'Twenty-four pieces in Free Style'; Chorale Preludes by Parry, Darke, West, and many others. All the works named can be had from Novello's.

E. B. B.—(1.) Breitkopf & Härtel publish a complete edition of Beethoven, but a good many of the works are probably out of print. Write to Novello's concerning any work you require, and they will obtain it, if it is to be had. (2.) In Beethoven's Solemn Mass the chorus should undoubtedly enter at 'Pleni sunt,' although the previous soli indication is not contradicted. The point is evidently an oversight.

Idyll.—For your study of MacDowell take Lawrence Gilman's 'Edward MacDowell' (John Lane) and/or John F. Porte's book of the same title (Kegan Paul).

C. H.—Your question about matriculation at London University should be addressed to the authorities of that institution.

J. R.—(1.) Some of the pianoforte works of Arnold Bax would probably meet your needs (Murdoch). Write to Chester's for a list of their recent pianoforte issues. (2.) Try the Pianoforte Sonata by Benjamin Dale, and Karg-Elert's Sonata in F sharp minor (both from Novello). (3.) We cannot undertake the analysis you ask for, even if we had a copy of the Sonata—which we haven't. The composer is not yet 'in the forefront of British musicians.' (4.) Nor can we compare the Sonatas of Albeniz and Scriabin 'from an intellectual, pianistic, and attractive standpoint.' The task calls for more time and space than we can spare. Sorry!

C Clef.—Works for two violoncellos and pianoforte: Barcarolle, Reuschel, 2*s*. 6*d*.; 'Adieu,' Schuberth, 2*s*., and Six Caprices de Concert, 3*s*. 6*d*.; Theme and Variations, Thierot, 3*s*.; Adagio in G, Grimm, 2*s*.; Concerto in E minor, Kleugel, 5*s*. 4*d*.; Concertino, Romberg, 4*s*. (All from Novello.) We have given the prices at your request, and we see the reasonableness of your suggestion that our review columns should always state the cost. But space is a consideration, and moreover complications in regard to the rate of exchange make prices of foreign music fluctuate. However, we will see what can be done.

E. W.—The degrees and diplomas accepted by the Teachers' Registration Council are: Mus. Doc., Mus. Bac., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.R.M.C.M., and F.R.C.O.; or, as an alternative, attendance as a whole-time student for three years, or as a part-time student for five years, at certain approved institutions, among them being R.A.M., R.C.M., T.C.M., London, Inc.L.A.M., G.S.M., and the Royal Manchester C.M. If you want further particulars, write to the Secretary, Teachers' Registration Council, 47, Bedford Square, W.C.1.

W. L. (Chorlton-cum-Hardy).—(1.) We believe publishers of dance music and 'song hits' are prepared to provide harmony and other trimmings if the words and tune strike them favourably. So you might try. (2.) If the publisher accepts your work he will offer to buy it outright, or to pay you a royalty. The latter arrangement is fairer to both parties. (3.) You pay nothing to the publisher in either case—unless he is of the shark variety, in which case give him a wide berth. No reputable publisher asks a composer for money.

D. A. V.—(1.) We know of no edition of 'The Messiah' a semitone lower than the usual pitch. (2.) The tune 'O Sanctissima' appears in 'Church Hymns' (No. 38), and doubtless in many other collections. We cannot trace the song 'Croppies lie down.'

S. E. H.—We do not know who publishes John Hughes's hymn-tune 'Cwm Rhondda,' nor does it appear in various hymnals we have consulted (including one Welsh book).

Liber.—For a child just starting, take Francesco Berger's 'First Steps at the Pianoforte' (Novello, 4*s*.).

G. P. M.—The degree is of little worth in this country. Leave it alone!

---

Where can lantern slides dealing with the life of Schubert be obtained? Mr. Frank Bevers, West Park Grove, Healey, Batley, York, will be grateful for information.

---

The annual Report of the Village, Country Town, and School Concerts Society shows that this valuable organization has made continued progress since its inception in 1919. About fifty tours are arranged each season, the concerts numbering about five hundred. Co-operation with local choirs and orchestras is gladly made when possible. Warm approval of the scheme is expressed in a letter from the Duchess of Atholl, Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Education. Full particulars as to the means of obtaining a visit from the Society's concert party are to be had from the hon. secretaries, Miss Paget, 20, Clarendon Road, W.11, and the Rev. Walpole E. Sealy, Fonthill, East Grinstead, Sussex.

Church and Organ Music

HYMN-TUNE ACCOMPANIMENT

By Corbett Sumsion

The responsibility for the standard of congregational singing lies with the organist, not as choirmaster but as organist. It is agreed on all hands that generations of organists have conspicuously failed in this simple task, and the odds are that the failure is due to lack of interest in the business. The first duty of every organist is to assert himself at his instrument. He should realise that a martinet nature is essential if he is to impose his views on others, and that although he will constantly be up against other opinions, he is the musical cock of the walk. With a full organ he can defy the parish. If it happens, as it is certain to do sooner or later, that he falls out with his vicar, he may fitly take a leaf from Wesley's book—Wesley, who, when reproached by a certain precentor for taking an anthem which he detested at such a pace that the choir never even started, retorted: 'I, Sir, am at the head of my profession. You, Sir, are nobody.'

The average congregation consists of two types—the perfunctory singer, who drags from sheer boredom, and the fervent singer, who drags from an excess of emotion. With this material the organist must do what he can. With his choristers he can overcome rhythmic difficulties by marching them round the practice-room whilst singing; and, if this device fails, stubbornness may yield to the rhythm of the cane. I think the whole congregation might with advantage join in the periodical perambulations of their parish church which they now leave to the clergy and choir. These latter indulge in a kind of eastern shuffle which directly militates against good rhythmic singing, and might well be quickened into a march. Is not the Church militant? Perhaps, however, in these shifting times, we had better leave the congregation safely pewed, and leave the organist to do what he may with other means.

One essential is bold phrasing; a second is to use plenty of organ and be hanged to the expression marks; and a third is to bring into effect such latent musicianship as a man may boast, let the people sing in unison, and himself improvise variations at his instrument. Nothing, in my experience, is better calculated to supply the apathetic pew-holders with that fillip which they lack. From an artistic point of view this seems to me the fittest method, and far preferable to the use of descant, in that the tune remains paramount. It is beyond dispute that when a composer sets himself to interpret the words of a hymn in terms of music, his concern is the tune. The remaining voice parts are the merest padding, and added in conformity to custom. The tune, therefore, I maintain, should retain its supremacy at all costs.

Now the organist will be faced by a great number of tunes which do not lend themselves to alternative treatment. Some hymns seem to be very complete as they stand, and the lily needs no painting. Other tunes, the product of persons with no musical education whatever, flaunt a poverty which no amount of skill and effort may hide. At the moment, however, the majority of organists have allowed their discretion to outrun their enterprise, and are content with a prim reproduction of the four voice parts. I realise that many an organist whose flesh may be willing enough to perform variations will be brought up short by his intellectual inability to weave them. That the art of improvisation is at a desperately low ebb is evidenced by those preliminary meanderings which, being without form and void, herald with a certain historic appropriateness the commencement of worship; and again in the starveling phenomena which pass current as accompaniments to Creeds and Paternosters. The less said about both the better.

For those who need outside assistance, there are already published a few volumes of alternative accompaniments to certain well-known tunes. That these publications are few must be attributed to the failure of the profession to buy. If this is due to apathy, then one can look with some eagerness to the projected School of Church Music. If it be due to parsimony, then perhaps arrangements might be made with one of the tobacco combines for an issue of appropriate cigarette cards. They would do no more harm than others I have seen, and might concentrate the pewholder's attention on a reform which is overdue, and to a musical bankruptcy in organists which is something of a scandal. But he must never learn how many men with half the alphabet after their name depend on a series of semibreve chords devised by Stainer to carry them safely through the ordeal of accompanying the Apostles' Creed.

---

CONGRESS OF THE NATIONAL UNION OF ORGANISTS' ASSOCIATIONS

By W. A. Roberts

The Congress was this year held at Lancaster, August 27-30, and the various meetings were full of interest and incident, the social arrangements of this annual reunion of friends and kindred spirits being a delightful feature. Numbering a hundred and fifty, the visitors were personally welcomed and hospitably entertained by the Mayor and Mayoress, Councillor and Mrs. Parr, in the Town Hall. The reception was followed by a concert in Ashton Hall, the programme including choice choral items contributed by Mr. Aldous's well-known Lancaster choir, and solos on the Norman & Beard organ by Dr. Reginald Dixon, who is practically the Borough Organist, although such an appointment remains to be officially created. Several songs were sung by a boy-soprano, Fred Firth, the 'Morecambe nightingale,' who has a beautiful voice which he uses with rare expression.

If space permitted, a reference in terms of high appreciation would be due to the singing of the Aldous Choir of seventy mixed voices, especially in Faning's eight-part 'How sweet the moonlight sleeps,' Elgar's three-part 'As torrents in summer,' Bach's five-part chorus 'The Heavens shout,' and Brahms's 'A Song of Destiny,' to which an organ accompaniment was admirably played by Dr. Dixon.

On the following morning Sir Hamilton Harty took the chair at the annual general meeting held in the banqueting room of the Town Hall. There was a large attendance of members and friends, to whom the Mayor of Lancaster conveyed a cordial welcome.

The subsequent formal business was expeditiously dealt with, for Sir Hamilton wastes no time. In his Report, the hon. secretary, Mr. John Brook, stated that there are now thirty-six Associations in the Union, representing three thousand members. The Executive had in hand two important schemes—viz., the application for a charter of incorporation, which would give the Association a legal status, and the formation of a Benevolent Fund. Both schemes were far-reaching and of great significance. As regards the incorporation, all that is now lacking is the sanction of the Board of Trade to the scheme which the delegates have already approved. The new title will be 'The Incorporated Association of Organists,' with a sub-title, 'The Organists' Fellowship.' Full particulars will be published after receipt of the official sanction. Some unavoidable delay had arisen owing to the serious illness of Mr. G. H. Hirst, of Dewsbury, the Association's legal adviser and staunch friend. It was heard with satisfaction that Mr. Hirst is now well on the way to recovery.

The hon. treasurer, Mr. John Hodgkinson (Liverpool), reported a credit balance of £87, and his financial statement showed the economy practised in expenditure, which is cut down to a minimum.

On the motion of Mr. Lumsden (Edinburgh), a highly esteemed Scottish representative, Sir Hamilton Harty was with acclamation re-appointed President for the ensuing year, Mr. Brook hon. secretary, and Mr. Hodgkinson hon. treasurer, with Mr. Ormrod (Southport) and Mr. R. Mason (Liverpool) as auditors.

Well-merited allusion was made to the success of the Quarterly Record since Mr. J. Percy Baker assumed the editorship. On the invitation conveyed and voiced by Mr. Moore, Hull was selected as the place for next year's Congress. Peterborough was also mentioned, but after discussion, and especially after hearing a few words from Mr. S. W. Pilling, Hull was chosen. The Torquay Corporation was thanked for officially inviting the Conference to Torquay in 1930, a cordial invitation which was provisionally accepted. On the suggestion of Dr. Dixon it was decided that next year's meetings should cover the week-end, so as to include a service on the Sunday.

In the afternoon Dr. Prendergast, of Winchester, presided, and an address was given by Sir Hamilton Harty on 'The Discouragement of Music in England.' He contended that music in this country was discouraged by lack of the financial support given in other countries, that our musicians were not protected from unfair subsidised competition from foreign sources, and that the quality of the music by our native composers suffered from an absence of generous national consideration and support. Sir Hamilton said the problem was one that had nothing to do with narrow, internal dividing lines, and urged that a society of the size and importance of the National Union of Organists should not confine itself entirely to matters of limited interest, but should try to influence a wider field. It had already a membership of three thousand, was represented in the important centres of music, and included in its ranks the names of many very distinguished musicians. The general development of interest in music during recent years had made it impossible for organists to remain merely specialists in their own particular branch of music. His object in discussing the problem was to suggest means by which the corporate opinion of the members could be ascertained, and used as a lever to help forward certain reforms.

Speaking with great earnestness, as a 'British musician with an Irish accent,' Sir Hamilton said the policy of musicians must be one of aggression. Music must be made a new thing in the lives of the people, and be provided at a nominal cost. The Association of Organists should sound a more militant note. He confessed that he saw nothing grotesque in the adoption of trade-union methods by the profession. Though he wished to speak most temperately and with the utmost fairness, Sir Hamilton said he could not disguise from himself that he was making an attack on the national attitude towards music—an attitude which was scandalously unpatriotic, even if it were unconsciously so.

Music was an art that could not develop or progress without support and encouragement, and it would be hypocritical to pretend that English music could compete with the music of other countries unless it received an equal amount of support, either from the State or from groups of wealthy individuals, as in America.

They experienced a complete absence of organized support. England was the only civilized country of which this could be said. So far as an abstract love of music was concerned, he believed the British were as musical as others, but without a definite financial encouragement of music, he could not see how they would become a nation as truly represented in music as any of the other great nations.

There was too much free trade in this country's attitude towards music. England imagined that by throwing its gates wide open to the world it could provide itself with all that was best in the world's music. There was a catchword, 'Art knows no boundaries,' but that was not true of the English art of music. It knew too many.

It was best to be honest and contrast the amount of foreign music and musicians, and foreign musical propaganda, with the tepid welcome extended to British music and musicians in foreign countries. If they believed that music was a beautiful and noble art, it was their duty as a great nation to cultivate it and encourage it by every means in their power. Good music was a thing that could never show a commercially satisfactory return. To put it brutally, they were merely posing as a great musical nation so long as it did not cost them anything.

Musicians who looked for help from the State were not optimistic, as the attitude of statesmen to music was one of cynical indifference, combined with ignorance. In their legislation they had placed good music on the same level as cinemas and football matches, and had handicapped concerts with a tax that had crippled the efforts of large organizations and put out of action smaller societies.

Limited and inadequate as it was, municipal enterprise still represented the only thing which bore the faintest resemblance to State interest. Surely something could be done there. The municipal candidate who added a small musical plank to his manifesto would not be looked upon as entirely quixotic and visionary. Musicians should organize themselves as a voting power, and insist on candidates taking some interest in their work.

Sir Hamilton concluded his stirring address, which was that of a born leader as well as a fine musician, by saying that a revolutionary change in our national attitude such as his audience knew to be necessary, would come, as other revolutions had come, from the masses. It would come only when they had stirred the imagination of the people themselves, and had made them realise what was really meant and intended by a musical England.

In the debate which followed several good impromptu speakers were heard. Mr. Percy Baker said the address was a call to action, which should lead to something practical. They must look at the forces arrayed against them. All musicians looked upon music as a part of their lives, as a thing which had moulded their character, but that was not the view of the nation. To Englishmen, speaking generally, music was not a part of life, but a thing aside. The music heard on the gramophone and wireless merely trickled through the head. It was the wall of ignorance and indifference towards music which was the greatest obstacle they had to surmount.

Mr. Harold Dawber said that the difficulty they had to contend with, as regards corporations, was that these were composed of so-called business men, who would not encourage anything unless they could see some financial return. Pictures in art galleries were tangible investments, but there was no visible return or profit on money spent on music. How best to encourage works by native composers was another problem which, as regards organ music, Mr. J. A. Meale thought would be solved if organists would play more music by our native composers. We were too prone to neglect our own goods. Mr. Milner thought the way of salvation lay in the schools and the children.

In the afternoon visits were paid to the Castle and to Messrs. Shrigley & Hunt's stained-glass works, where the various processes were followed with keen attention. This beautiful and skilled art-work is an industry of which the town may well be proud. In the evening two musical recitals were attended, the first being given in the 15th-century Parish Church and the second in the handsome Roman Catholic Cathedral. At the Parish Church some excellent singing was heard from the choir of twenty-four boys and twelve men, whose training and quality were especially shown in Walmisley's 'Not unto us.' Mr. N. S. Wallbank, an able player who is shortly leaving Lancaster for Hull, displayed the organ, a Harrison rebuild (as yet incomplete), in some Bach and Mozart. At the second recital, in the R.C. Cathedral, where Dr. Reginald Dixon is choirmaster and organist, the excellent choir of men and boys sang Byrd's Motet, 'Sacerdotes Domini,' movements from Dixon's Mass of St. Wulstan, and examples of plainsong. In the Cathedral is a fine organ built in 1886 by Ainscough, of Preston. On this effective instrument Dr. Dixon played two Versets from Boëllmann's 'Heures Mystiques,' Widor's 'Suite Latine,' and his own musicianly organ Meditation, 'Ascendit Deus.' A collection was taken up at both recitals on behalf of the Organists' Benevolent Fund.

Wednesday morning was occupied with a lecture on the 'Poets of the English Lakes,' by Mr. D. Hardman, of Christ's College, Cambridge, who completely held the attention of his hearers.

The afternoon was spent in a visit to Morecambe, where the Mayor and Mayoress (Councillor and Mrs. Gardner) held a reception in Grafton Hotel.

At the annual dinner in the evening, at the King's Arms, Lancaster, Sir Hamilton Harty, as chairman, was supported by the Mayors of Lancaster and Morecambe, the Rector of Morecambe, and the Rector of Lancaster Cathedral. During the evening Sir Hamilton presented Mr. and Mrs. Brook with a cheque on behalf of the Associations, which was to be expended in a wedding present. The good wishes he gracefully expressed are echoed by all who know Mr. Brook and his splendid work for the National Union, which owes to him its inception and much of its extraordinary development. The work of the Lancaster Association officials, done by Mr. J. W. Aldous (President), Dr. R. Dixon (hon. secretary), and Mr. T. Arkwright (hon. treasurer), was duly recognised in a hearty vote of thanks. Some very good after-dinner speeches and stories were heard, interspersed with vocal and instrumental music contributed by Mr. Leonard Pearson (baritone), Mr. Wiggins (violin), and the Vale Vocal Quartet.

The next day most of the survivors spent in an excursion to the Lake District, going by train to Lakeside and thence by boat up Lake Windermere to Ambleside, and after lunch to Rydal Water and Grasmere. On the return to Lancaster a smoking concert in the King's Arms wound up a well-planned and enjoyable Congress.

'SECURITY OF TENURE'

Readers who imagine that parish church organists are now no longer subject to unjust or capricious dismissal will be disillusioned on reading of the following case that occurred recently. The church is a well-known one in the northern suburbs, and the victim an unusually well-equipped all-round musician—a Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., and L.R.A.M., the two last-named diplomas being for pianoforte and singing. We suppress the names (though our conviction is that the greater publicity given to such cases the better). The organist was appointed, out of a large number of applicants, in November last year. If commendation of his work in the Parish Magazine (and even from the pulpit!) meant anything at all, he was giving complete satisfaction. No intimation to the reverse and no complaints of any kind were made by the vicar. It was therefore a shock to him when he received the following letter:

'My Dear Mr. ——, We are very loth to cause you any feelings of anxiety and disappointment, but it is only fair to let you know as early as possible that the opportunity has arisen for Mr. —— [the victim's predecessor] to return to us, and with his long experience and vast knowledge of our history and requirements, we cannot do otherwise than avail ourselves of his services.

'Therefore, while recognising your untiring efforts, and warmly thanking you, we have no alternative but to determine your engagement.

'With a view to giving you all possible consideration we wish to release you at once, and have arranged with Mr. —— [a deputy] to carry on until Mr. —— resumes. We are forwarding you a cheque for one month, together with a further three months' stipend.

'With this information before you, we think you may prefer to send us a formal letter of resignation for publication, and we do not hesitate to say we would wish it so.

'Wishing you all happiness and success in whatever post you elect to fill next,

'Yours very truly,
.....(Vicar).
.....(Churchwardens).

Rightly, we think, the organist declined to send a formal resignation. It should be added that he had given up a post in order to take up work at the church where he has been so shabbily treated, and that he has since been unable to find a suitable position. Apparently he has no legal remedy. What has become of the suggested form of agreement drawn up a few years ago by some influential organists' committee? Only by the use of some such document can organists be protected from methods that no employer would dare to use against an employee who belonged to a trade union.

---

During the forthcoming Leeds Festival there will be the usual series of special services at Leeds Parish Church (September 30-October 7). We have received a copy of the Service Book, which shows a fine scheme wherein the best of English Church music plays a worthy part. The Service settings are by Farrant, Tallis, Wesley, Best, Noble, Walmisley, Stanford, Macpherson, and Bairstow, and the anthems are by Gray, Boyce, Vaughan Williams, Weelkes, Purcell, and Alcock. The book is fully annotated, and contains the hymn-tunes (with excellent descants by Tysoe, Moody, &c.), and some well-produced portraits and other illustrations. No publisher is given, but we presume it may be had from Mr. H. Bacon Smith, 31, Vernon Road, Leeds (2*s*.). The proceeds go to the Choir Endowment Fund, of which Mr. Bacon Smith is treasurer.

---

Mr. Douglas Fox, of Bradfield College, gave a recital at Chigwell School recently. As most of our readers are aware, Mr. Fox lost his right arm in the war, but he makes such astounding use of his left hand and feet that few hearers would be conscious of his handicap. At Chigwell his programme included the Overture to 'Otho,' the Gigue Fugue of Bach, Saint-Saëns's Coronation March, the Air and Variations from Beethoven's Septet, and Grieg's Elegiac Melody. A good deal of fuss was made recently over the performance at Queen's Hall of a German pianist who played with left hand alone a worthless transcription of Strauss. We think that the regular and brilliant fulfilment of his work at Bradfield by this English organist is far more worthy of an ovation.

An organ recital per gramophone may in time become an ordinary occurrence in churches where there is no adequate instrument or player. Such a recital took place at St. Bartholomew's, Croxdale, Durham, on August 24, the programme including Bach's D major Prelude and Fugue (Dr. W. G. Alcock), the opening movement of Widor's sixth Symphony (Mr. H. Goss-Custard), Bach's Prelude on 'Christ came to Jordan' (M. Dupré), and items by Widor, Guilmant, Meale, &c. Choral records played were of Mendelssohn's 'Hear my prayer' (Temple Church Choir), Goss's 'O Saviour of the world' (Chapel Royal, Windsor, Choir), Byrd's 'This day Christ was born' (York Minster Choir), &c.

A fine series of twelve recitals of English organ music has just been given at Lichfield Cathedral by Mr. Ambrose Porter. About forty composers were represented, and the percentage of music by living writers was large. This is Mr. Porter's second effort of the kind. We should like to see his example more generally followed by players who are in a position to give serial recitals, and who are able to plan and publish their programmes in advance.

We have received a booklet containing particulars of an excellent series of recitals which will be given at St. James's, Muswell Hill, on Saturdays, at 5.45, by Mr. H. A. Bate. The series begins on October 13, and will last until mid-December. The choice of music is an admirable blend of old and new, original and transcribed. There are well-written analytical notes. The organ is a fine and large Harrison.

The ninth annual Sandbach and District Choral Festival took place on September 15, fourteen choirs joining forces. The canticles were sung to Stainer in B flat, and the anthems were Goss's 'O taste and see,' and Elvey's 'I was glad.' Mr. J. Meredith conducted, and Mr. C. Plumb was at the organ.

The anniversary of the opening of the Liverpool Cathedral organ will be celebrated on October 27, when a special excursion train will be run from London. Mr. Goss Custard will give an hour's recital. The railway fare will be 10*s.* return; railway tickets, programme, and other particulars are to be had from the Manager, 234, Ferndale Road, S.W.9.

Messrs. J. W. Walker have reconstructed the organ at Christ Church, North Finchley. It is now a three-manual, with detached console, thirty-five stops, adjustable pistons, and electro-pneumatic action. A series of recitals by well-known players is being arranged.

The recitals at Westminster Cathedral, which were dropped last season, are to be resumed. The new series will take place on Wednesdays at 6.30, beginning on October 10, and Mr. Guy Weitz will be the player throughout.

Mr. Owen le P. Franklin has resigned from the post of organist and choirmaster of St. Alban's, Holborn, and is about to start a six-months' tour of Canada as organ and pianoforte recitalist.

A new organ, built by Messrs. Henry Wadsworth, of Manchester, for the John Elias Memorial Chapel, Llangefni, was opened on August 22, Mr. John Williams giving the recital.

A new organ has been erected in the Wesleyan Central Hall, Johannesburg—a three-manual of thirty stops and twenty-two pistons. Messrs. Rushworth & Dreaper are the builders.

The rebuilding of the organ at Great Meeting, Leicester (the opening of which by Dr. Gordon Slater was noted in our last issue), was carried out by Messrs. J. W. Walker.

Mr. W. R. Simmons will give an organ recital for children at St. Luke's, West Holloway, on October 20, at 6.30.

A new three-manual organ has been installed in St. Michael's Church, Eastbourne, by Messrs. J. W. Walker.

The new organ at the Wesleyan Church, Stanford-le-Hope, built by Messrs. Speechley, was opened on September 5, when Mr. Allan Brown gave a recital.

APPOINTMENTS

Mr. F. Vernon Curtis, choirmaster and organist, St. Peter's, Carmarthen.

Mr. H. O. Hodgson, choirmaster and organist, Nottingham Parish Church.

Mr. Ronald Knight, choirmaster and organist, Woodford Congregational Church.

RECITALS

Mr. Arthur E. Temple, St. Lawrence Jewry—Prelude and Fugue in C, Bach; Fantasia, 'Ad nos,' Liszt; Sonata No. 2, Mendelssohn.

Mr. Purcell J. Mansfield, Holsworthy United Methodist Church—Concerto No. 6, Handel; 'Holsworthy Church Bells,' Wesley; 'The Angelus,' Mansfield; Reverie on 'University,' Harvey Grace; Minuet on 'Hanover,' Charlton Palmer; 'St. Francis preaching to the birds,' Liszt.

Mr. L. M. Jones, St. Lawrence Jewry—Phantasie in A, Rheinberger; Fugue in B minor, Bach; Scherzo, Widor; Festival Toccata, Fletcher.

Mr. Frank Wright, St. Dunstan-in-the-East—Dithyramb, Harwood; Benedictus, Reger; Cantabile and Finale (Symphony No. 6), Widor.

Mr. A. J. Sainsbury, Lausanne Cathedral—Symphony No. 8, Widor; 'Angelus,' Norman Cocker; Fantasie, Franck; Fugue, Krebs.

Mr. J. A. Sowerbutts, Cathedral Church, Guildford—Sonata No. 3, Sowerbutts; 'Sea Prelude,' Robin Milford; Introduction, Passacaglia, and Fugue in E flat minor, Healey Willan; 'Carillon de Westminster,' Vierne.

Mr. Owen le P. Franklin, St. Clement, near Eastcheap—Introduction and Toccata, Walond; Evening Hymn on a Ground, Purcell; Fugue in F, Bach; Sonata No. 2, Mendelssohn.

Mr. H. S. Middleton, Ely Cathedral—Chorale Prelude, 'Winchester New,' West; Prelude and Fugue in C, Bach; Voluntary in G minor, Stanley; Dithyramb, Harwood.

Dr. J. C. Bradshaw, Christchurch Cathedral—Sonata No. 4, Guilmant; Three movements from 'Messe Basse,' Vierne; Cradle Song, Harvey Grace.

Dr. Charles F. Waters, St. Clement Danes, Strand—Sonata No. 2 (first movement), Bach; Two Studies on English Hymn-Tunes, Charlton Palmer; March (Symphony No. 3), Widor; Two Communion Preludes, Waters.

Mr. H. Cyril Robinson, St. John's, Barmouth—Psalm-Preludes Nos. 2 and 3, Howells; Sonatas Nos. 1 and 2, Mendelssohn; Concert Piece, Guilmant.

Mr. Stanley Lucas, S. Croydon Congregational Church—Prelude and Fugue in E minor, and Air and Variations in A, Hesse; 'Plaint,' Harvey Grace; Prelude on 'Ye boundless realms of joy,' Parry; Choral, Vierne.

Dr. Eric H. Thiman, St. Lawrence Jewry—Pavan, Byrd; Rhapsody No. 1, Howells; Scherzo, Harvey Grace; Carillon, Wolstenholme; Fantasia on March Themes, German.

Miss Edna C. Howard, St. Mary-le-Bow—Toccata in F, Bach; Psalm-Prelude No. 2, Howells; Prelude on B A C H, Liszt; Sonata in G minor, Merkel.

Mr. Herbert F. Ellingford, St. George's Hall, Liverpool—Masonic March, Ellingford; Sinfonia to 'Wir danken dir, Gott,' Bach; Sonata No. 1, Mendelssohn.

The Amateurs' Exchange

Under this heading we insert, free of charge, announcements by amateur musicians who wish to co-operate with others.

Lady pianist (higher local, T.C.L., honours) wishes to meet vocalist or instrumentalist for mutual practice of classical music.—60, Gordon Road, Carshalton, Surrey.

Lady pianist wishes to meet violinist for mutual practice and enjoyment. Classical music only. Must be keen.—Rycott, 6, Cromwell Road, Teddington.

Lady pianist, working for L.R.A.M., wishes to meet violinist or 'cellist, or both, for mutual practice.—762, Coventry Road, Small Heath, Birmingham.

Gentleman, playing viola, second violin, or pianoforte, wishes to join chamber-music circle, or orchestra, within reach of Notting Hill Gate.—Benson, 43, Elgin Crescent, W.11.

Gentleman (advanced grade Associated Board standard) wishes to meet another for duets and mutual practice. Southport district.—Enthusiast, c/o Musical Times.

Lady pianist (L.R.A.M.) wishes to meet vocalist, equal standard, for mutual practice. London N. district preferred.—Olive M. Kemp, 12, Elgin Road, Alexandra Park, N.22.

Lady pianist wishes to meet violinist or 'cellist for mutual practice. Mornings or afternoons preferred. London, S.W. or W.—S. L. S., c/o Musical Times.

Young lady, moderate pianist, wishes to meet other musicians for mutual practice. One evening weekly.—W. O. S., c/o Musical Times.

Violinist (gentleman) wishes to form quartet or trio, or to meet accompanist, for mutual enjoyment of classical music. Has had quintet experience.—J. R. H., 44, Lynette Avenue, South Side, Clapham Common, S.W.4.

Violinist wishes to meet good pianist (lady) for the practice of Sonatas, &c. Once a week, within easy reach of Forest Hill.—Miss N. Bomford, 46, Westbourne Road, Forest Hill, S.E.23.

Lady pianist wishes to practice sonatas, concertos, &c., with a good violinist. West London.—W. H., c/o Musical Times.

Instrumentalists—violin, viola, 'cello, and bass—wanted for string orchestra in this district.—Hampton, The Avenue, Harold Wood, Essex.

Letters to the Editor

THE SOCIETY OF AUTHORS

Sir,—Messrs. Chappell's communication on the subject of the Incorporated Society of Authors, Playwrights, and Composers in the Musical Times of September is interesting inasmuch as it expresses in typical terms the attitude of those few music-publishing houses which still remain hostile to a Society which exists purely and simply for the purpose of protecting the rights and interests of authors and composers.

The immediate pretext for Messrs. Chappell's tirade is a circular letter which was drafted by the Composers' Committee of the Society, and which was dispatched to the leading sheet-music publishers with a view to obtaining their opinions on questions of more or less vital consequence to composers, who not unnaturally wish to submit their work for publication to those publishers who are prepared to offer the fairest terms.

(i.) The Circular Letter to Music Publishers.

This letter, which Messrs. Chappell designate 'foolish' and 'extraordinary,' and 'one more endeavour to teach music publishers their business,' is set out in full below. Already courteous and detailed replies have been received from a number of publishers, who have expressed their willingness to discuss the matter further and have dealt specifically with the various questions in the spirit in which these questions were asked:

'11, Gower Street,
'London, W.C.1.

'Dear Sir,—I am instructed by Lord Gorell, Chairman of the Society, and by the Composers' Committee to write to you and to the other prominent music-publishing houses in order to obtain your views on various points arising out of the terms of agreement between music publishers and composers.

'I shall, therefore, be pleased to learn from you what your attitude is towards the questions set out below, and what your own practice is with regard to them.

'A number of music-publishing houses have recently adopted forms of agreement considerably more favourable to composers than those which were customary in the past, and it is the wish of the Society to bring the names of these publishing houses to the notice of composers in order that they may submit their best work to them in the first instance.

'1. Are you prepared to publish on an exclusive licence basis or do you insist on an assignment of copyright prior to publication?

'2. If you own the copyright, what apportionment of mechanical royalties and broadcasting fees do you consider fair as between composer, author, and publisher; or, where there is no author, between publisher and composer? Do you collect these royalties yourself; if so, what charge is made for collection?

'3. Do you insist upon the composer's parting with all artistic control of his work to you?

'4. If so, is he consulted by you in connection with the mechanical reproduction of his compositions?

'5. Are you willing to include proper termination clauses in your printed agreements with composers, whether you have been granted an exclusive licence or conveyance of copyright?

'6. Do you fix a definite date for publication in your agreement?

'7. Do you fix in your agreement the number and price and format of the edition?

'8. Do you undertake to secure copyright in England and America on behalf of the composer and author?

'9. Are you prepared to take action for infringement of copyright when the author has assigned his copyright to you?

'10. Does your usual form of agreement contain a clause stating that accounts shall be rendered on specific dates?

'11. Do you claim the right to publish compositions and lyrics in album form, and, if so, on what basis?

'Yours truly,
'(Signed) G. Herbert Thring.'

(ii.) The Rome Conference

Dealing with the question of the letter of protest against Great Britain's inadequate representation at the Rome Conference for the revision of the Berne Convention, which appeared in The Times, Messrs. Chappell declare, 'Their protest was a very belated one.' Messrs. Chappell are again speaking without their book. If they had taken the trouble to inquire they would have discovered that for weeks preceding the Conference, Lord Gorell, the Chairman of the Society of Authors, had been in communication with Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister, who was responsible for the British delegation. They would have learnt that Lord Gorell had expressed in the strongest possible terms the necessity of the representatives of the Society of Authors and the Publishers' Association being either included among the delegates or at any rate consulted by the official delegates on all points on which their special knowledge of the problems at issue might be of use. The latter alternative only the Board of Trade conceded, and it was then that the Committee of the Society and the Publishers' Association decided to send to Rome, the former its Secretary, the latter its President.

It was only after the publication of the Secretary's Report on his return from Rome that it was decided, in consultation with the Publishers' Association, to lodge a vigorous protest signed by a number of the most prominent members of the Society and of the Publishers' Association. This appeared in The Times on July 10, 1928. Its object was to prevent the recurrence on future occasions of the Government's indifference to the value of literary and artistic property.

The names attached to this letter as signatories were: J. M. Barrie (President of the Incorporated Society of Authors, Playwrights, and Composers); Gorell (Chairman of the Committee of Management of the Incorporated Society of Authors, Playwrights, and Composers); Arnold Bennett; John Galsworthy; John Masefield; G. Bernard Shaw; Constable & Co., Ltd.; Longmans, Green & Co., Ltd.; Macmillan & Co., Ltd.; John Murray; Thomas Nelson & Sons, Ltd.; Humphrey S. Milford (Oxford University Press).

Messrs. Chappell & Co. were not consulted, nor was their signature to the document required. Nevertheless Messrs. Chappell were not going to let themselves be left out. As they say in their letter, 'We supported their protest in The Times,' and, sure enough, a day or two after the appearance of the letter signed by the imposing list of names set out above appeared a letter echoing the protest and signed in solitary splendour by Messrs. Chappell, Ltd.

(iii.) The Board of Trade Mechanical Royalties Inquiry

'The increased royalties awarded by the Board of Trade to composers are a positive travesty of justice'—so runs Messrs. Chappell's trenchant comment on the result of the application made recently under Section 19 of the 1911 Copyright Act.

It seems extraordinary that Messrs. Chappell, whose Managing Director, Mr. William Boosey, played so prominent a part in the application, should be unaware that the award made by the Board of Trade was not made to composers, as they allege, but to copyright owners. In this connection it is interesting to note that Mr. Boosey, in evidence, admitted that in the great majority of instances Messrs. Chappell were the copyright owners of the musical works of which they were the publishers, and so held the control of the mechanical reproduction. Indeed, he even went further and admitted that Messrs. Chappell in their printed form of agreement stipulated that a composer's copyright should be assigned to them prior to publication.

On top of this Messrs. Chappell have the impertinence to ask, 'If the Society of Authors claim to be the indispensable guardians of the rights of composers, why are they taking no steps to remedy the abuse of his copyright which the composer labours under?' The first copyright difficulty which faces the composer is, in this particular case, that before his work can be published the copyright must cease to be his!

As soon as Messrs. Chappell have removed the beam in their own eye it will be time enough to consider the mote in the eye of the gramophone companies.

At the Board of Trade Inquiry Mr. William Boosey set himself up as the champion of the poor down-trodden composer.

The Society of Authors decided to test his altruism. Mr. Boosey, in common with the other publishers who were concerned in the application, was asked to give a guarantee as to the proportion of any increase in the mechanical royalty rate which he proposed to give composers. Mr. Boosey refused. Indeed, it was not till the Inquiry was nearing its conclusion, and the application seemed likely to fail unless the Society of Authors lent it its whole-hearted support, that the publishers concerned gave the required undertaking to two officials of the Society, whereupon Counsel for the Society was able to state to the Tribunal that a satisfactory undertaking had been forthcoming, and that the Society wished now that composers' interests were safeguarded to associate itself with the application.

This, Messrs. Chappell describe as the Society's Counsel 'apologising for his appearance.'

In fact, regarding the whole of this matter Messrs. Chappell in their letter are guilty of a number of crass mis-statements, so much so that it would be trespassing on your space to attempt to deal with them seriatim. Throughout Messrs. Chappell seem to have been actuated simply by a spirit of vindictiveness against the Society, and have patently made no attempt to verify their facts or references.—Yours, &c.,

G. Herbert Thring
(Secretary of the Incorporated Society of Authors, Playwrights, and Composers).

THE NATURE OF HARMONY

Sir,—I have to thank Mr. J. K. Findlay for his letter in the August Musical Times and for his interest in my articles. He refers to and quotes from a book entitled 'The Scientific Basis and Build of Music,' by D. C. Ramsay, published in 1893. He is of opinion that in this work Mr. Ramsay 'has anticipated the line Dr. Shirlaw takes' in treating of the major and minor scales. This is strange, because up to the present I have not in my articles investigated any scales whatever. How then does Mr. Findlay discover that my views on this subject have been anticipated, seeing that he does not know what these views are? He speaks of 'the minor harmony, or scale,' as if these terms were synonymous. Of course they are not. We may, however, examine for a moment Ramsay's views on scale formation.

He begins by informing us that if—there is much virtue in this 'if'—we 'take f as the true generator of the scale of c, the subdominant chord comes out as *f*1, *c*3, *a*5.' No doubt! But several other things come out at the same time. For example, this 'true generator' f, or the subdominant chord f-a-c, necessarily becomes the tonal centre of the entire c major key system. 'This process Ramsay repeats for the tonic chord and for the dominant chord, the full process being—*f*1, *c*3, *a*5, *g*9, *e*15, *d*27, *b*45. Thus is evolved the true major scale.' In multiplying by 3 and 5 Ramsay professes to be guided by nature. But nature does not multiply *f*1 by 3 in order to obtain the note c, nor by 5 in order to obtain the note a. Besides, Ramsay assumes for the most part what he wishes to prove. If we know a priori, as Ramsay appears to know, that the major scale is evolved from a triad of triads arranged in the order of subdominant, tonic, dominant, no device of multiplication is necessary; we may at once present the order thus: f-a-c-e-g-b-d. Without such knowledge Ramsay is bound to treat *a*5 as he has already treated *f*1 and *c*3; he must multiply by 3 and 5. So that we obtain the much more logical triad of triads arising from the three sounds—*f*1, *c*3, *a*5—first postulated, thus:

*f*1-*c*3-*a*5
*c*3-*g*9-*e*15
*a*5-*e*15-c♯25.

This at least is how nature works, not indeed by multiplication, but by the natural series of primary and secondary harmonics.

As for the minor scale, this arises in a similar way, but by an 'inverse process.' In this case 'we must start from *b*45, the last born of the notes of the major scale, and divide, as we had formerly multiplied, by 3 and 5.' Our author does not favour the law of primogeniture; however, we will not stress the point. This, according to Ramsay, is 'nature's inverse process.' Where in all the world did Ramsay acquire such a notion? Nature does not divide *b*45 in order to produce *e*15. On the contrary, it is e that is the 'true generator' of b, for this b is the third harmonic or upper partial of e.

We find b, then, the leading-note of the c major scale, and the minor harmony e-g-b established as tonal centre of the a minor key system. The scale of the minor system ought, therefore, to appear as b, c, d, e, f, g, a, b ; just as the major scale ought to assume the form f, g, a, b, c, d, e, f. Ramsay assures us, however, that f is not really the tonal centre of the c major system, nor is b the centre of the a minor system. The centre of both systems is really d, or rather two d's, differing from each other in pitch, the real centre then being ' neither in the one d nor in the other, but at an invisible point between them, like the centre of gravity in a double star ' ! But here we have reached a point that is surely beyond the gravity of the reader. O Liberty ! O Harmony ! What crimes are committed in thy name ! No, Mr. Findlay, please accept my assurance that my views regarding the origin and nature of the major and minor scales differ somewhat from those of Mr. Ramsay.

Certainly Ramsay exhibits a considerable perspicacity in his conception of the minor harmony as brought about by a process of inversion. Such a conception, of course, originated not with Ramsay but with Zarlino, who wrote about the middle of the 16th century. But not a single writer, from the time of Zarlino to the present day—certainly not Ramsay—has been able to tell us how such a process of inversion for the minor harmony can possibly arise. The most noteworthy attempts—Rameau with his co-vibration of multiples, Tartini with his combination tones, Riemann with his supposed undertone series, &c.—have failed, because harmonic generation arises upwards, not downwards. This is the problem—the nature of such a process of inversion—that I have set myself to solve in my articles dealing with the minor harmony. I hope and believe that I have been successful. At least, no serious criticism has so far been directed against my conclusions.

I observe that Dr. Froggatt, in spite of my articles, is still unable to understand this process of inversion. With every desire to help him, I am afraid the best advice I can give is that he should keep on trying. In time I am sure the light will break forth. He might begin with the fourth, and ask himself why he calls this the inversion of the fifth. He should not find it difficult to understand that this fourth can be heard as such only when the lower note of the interval is in the bass, and fulfilling up to a certain point the rôle of the fundamental. The resulting formation is as *g*4-*c*3-*g*2, the inversion of *c*2-*g*3-*c*4 (or, what is the same thing, $\frac{1}{2} : \frac{1}{3} : \frac{1}{4}$ ; $2 : 3 : 4$ I know Dr. Froggatt is very sensitive on this point). Arrived at this stage, the rest is comparatively easy. It is nature's method of inversion. Could anything be more simple, or beautiful ?

Dr. Froggatt also enters the lists on behalf of Mr. J. Morrison, and stoutly asserts that ' most certainly 16 : 19 : 24 and 6 : 7 : 9 are minor triads.' When Dr. Froggatt tunes his pianoforte in such a way that all the major thirds are of the proportion 7 : 9, he might let me know about it. I would like to hear it. If Dr. Froggatt finds nothing to complain of, I am afraid the neighbours will.—Yours, &c.,

Cupar, Fife, N.B. Matthew Shirlaw.

---

THE LARYNX AGAIN

Sir,—Please allow me to give a word of welcome to the letter which appeared in your September issue from Mr. Hoban, of Winnipeg. One is glad to know that Mrs. Aubrey is doing good work ; but it is possible that some other detail in her teaching is producing the good results rather than a special position of the larynx. It is noticeable that she has not given any anatomical or scientific reason for the special position which she advocates. As a voice specialist with very definite views upon the subject, it gives me pleasure to endorse Mr. Hoban's opinion that ' the tongue, larynx, and diaphragm require no direct manipulation.' I might, perhaps, feel inclined to qualify the statement by saying they very rarely ' require direct manipulation.' I agree, too, that ' the teacher should be thoroughly conversant with the anatomy of the vocal organs.' That, however, leads to the crux of the whole matter, namely, what constitutes the full equipment of the vocal organ and what is the particular office for each component part. Until that has been scientifically and definitely settled we are not likely to emerge from our present state of disagreement upon vocal training. In the Music Student of January, 1921, is an article by the late Albert Visetti, entitled ' Wanted a System,' in which the following occurs :

> ' Let us work together and formulate a system for mechanical and technical training—a universally recognised system, giving a hall-mark to the British trained singer. The foundation of all art is mechanical : technical accuracy to a student will become spontaneous, and he will then be able to employ his temperamental instincts to the full and his soul will speak.'

How soon such a system will become an accomplished fact it is impossible to say. Unfortunately, I have good grounds for believing that the musical Dons of Great Britain would be very loath to accept any such system if it happened to proceed from one of their own countrymen. Madame Blanche Marchesi, in her book ' A Singer's Pilgrimage,' remarks :

> ' Celebrities need not hide in England. Nobody disturbs their peace much. The world in general does not care if they exist or not. England, unfortunately, is apt to neglect and ignore its home-grown talents, but the British public thoroughly appreciates everything that comes from abroad.'

—Yours, &c., Ernest G. White.

135, New Bond Street,
W.1.

---

Sir,—I would like to deal, if I may, with one or two points in the letter of your correspondent Mr. Stanley Hoban.

The first, that ' Singing has been subject to more experiment than any other branch of music,' is perfectly true, but this is due to the fact that there is not, and never has been, any recognised technique for the voice, and until there is such a thing, established and accepted, as is the technique of the violin or any other instrument, so long will these experiments continue, and rightly so.

Mr. Hoban says again, most truly, that ' We sing to create images of beauty,' &c. Does not an instrumentalist play for precisely the same reason ? But before he reaches that stage he has spent long years in arduous toil to acquire the complete mastery over the instrument and over his fingers, wrists, arms, and every part of his ' stock-in-trade.'

In the name of all that is reasonable why should a singer be the only person who should know nothing about the instrument he is using ? His voice has a physical origin and is the result of the muscular action of the larynx, and if there is anything wrong with the voice the cause lies in the larynx. If the teacher should know position and action in singing, it is essential that this knowledge should be imparted to the pupil.

Self-consciousness is nervousness, and is the result of lack of control over whatever instrument one is using, and a singer who has absolute control over his voice is a singer devoid of self-consciousness.

There are few singers who have this perfect control, for there are few to whom Nature has given, without training, a perfect vocal action, which is a larynx in the right position ; but that all singers can acquire it is beyond question, when this undoubted fact is recognised—namely, that it is the larynx which must be trained, and not the voice.—Yours, &c.,

7, Clifton Gardens, Ethel Aubrey.
Maida Vale, W.9.

THE TORONTO MUS. BAC.

Sir,—I am sorry that a well-deserved but unexpected compliment paid to two friends of mine in the August Musical Times 'Organists' Long-Service Roll of Honour' should have revived for the moment an ancient grievance which by this time ought to be forgotten. In such cases it is always better 'to let bygones be bygones' than to rake up long-buried things from the dust-heap of 'auld lang syne.'

As one of the three survivors of the thirty-eight people who, on July 7, 1890, signed a letter to Lord Knutsford—then Secretary of State to the Colonies—on the matter referred to by your correspondent Mr. T. H. Hill, permit me to say that my position at that time enabled me to look well below the surface on both sides of the game—better, perhaps, than even Sir John Stainer himself. In consequence, after the 'affair' had blown over, I decided to retain an honorary ad eundem Mus. D. degree which, in 1886, I had accepted from Trinity University on the recommendation and advice of my old friend and master, Dr. E. J. Hopkins, of the Temple Church. Another friend, Dr. Albert Ham, the present esteemed Professor of Music at Toronto University, assures me that this degree is not only valid under changed conditions, but is nothing to be ashamed of. I may perhaps be pardoned if I say that I am rather proud of being listed in the same University Calendar with Dr. Edward Banting, the discoverer of that world-renowned Insulin treatment which, five years ago, saved my life.

Much has happened since I signed the Knutsford letter and memorial in 1890. In the first place, Trinity University has no longer an independent existence, having long ago been absorbed by the older and larger University of Toronto, which last year celebrated with considerable éclat its first centenary festival. Its large, handsome buildings, together with its comprehensive curriculum, may compare favourably with those of our own modern universities. Moreover, the support afforded to the homeland by His Majesty's 'Dominions beyond the Seas' during the Great War, may be said to have widened our prejudiced, insular outlook, by making many of us take broader views of things in general than we did previous to the fateful year 1914.

In proof of this, I see on p. 9 of the current 'Roll' of the U.G.M. the following significant statement: 'In 1923, a proposal made at the Annual General Meeting that all Graduates in Music of all Universities throughout the British Empire should be made eligible for membership of the Union was under the consideration of the Council during the two years following. It was found to be inexpedient to make any immediate change in the constitution of the Union, as the conditions prevailing at the various universities of the Dominions Overseas are so widely different.'

In view of the wonderful progress in all branches of musical education, &c., now being made even in the most distant parts of the British Empire, it may confidently be hoped that this proposal made to the U.G.M. five years ago may be realised before long. And should my unauthorised 'recognition' of two old and valued friends in the organists' roll as brother graduates in one of the best-equipped universities in the British Empire overseas prove in the slightest degree helpful to such a desirable realisation, I shall feel that I have been neither too 'previous' nor inconsistent.—Yours, &c.,

C. W. Pearce.

'The Paddocks,' Ferndown,
Wimborne, Dorset.

---

LONGEVITY OF ORGANISTS

Sir,—It is just possible that some of your readers may, like myself, be interested in that discredited science, astrology. It so happens that I have completed a detailed study of the birth-dates of two hundred organists, and find ample reason for the longevity of the tribe. One of the most important planets to organists is Saturn—old Father Time—who gives long life if well aspected—i.e., in harmonious relation with other planets. I have the birth-dates of thirteen of your August list, and also of T. H. Collinson, who was nearly fifty years at Edinburgh Cathedral. Twelve out of the fourteen have one or more good aspects to Saturn, and T. H. Collinson (a really phenomenal horoscope) has Saturn in good aspect to seven out of the remaining eight planets.

Of course, this is not the only configuration which produces longevity, but it is one which is very common in organists.

Fourteen per cent. of organists are born while the sun is in Capricorn, the sign of Saturn (i.e., between December 21 and January 21), whereas the theoretical proportion would be only 8.33 per cent. The total proportion of planets in this sign, which theoretically should be fifty-eight per cent. (per hundred horoscopes), is seventy-five per cent.

I do not wish to take any more of your valuable space, but if any of your readers are interested in the subject of music and the horoscope, I shall be glad to give them any further details and statistics in my power.

I have no use either for fortune-telling or pseudo-mysticism, and am interested in astrology purely as scientific fact.—Yours, &c.,

Beatrice Saxon Snell (Miss).

Green End,
3, Craven Road,
Reading.

---

ORGANISTS' LONG-SERVICE ROLL OF HONOUR

Sir,—Amongst the names in the list of organists of Kendal Parish Church (one of the largest churches in the country) appear Wm. Burn, 1738-91, and Thos. Scarisbrick, 1822-69, i.e., fifty-three years and forty-seven years respectively. Mark Burn, the father of William, held the post previous to 1738.

At St. Thomas Church, Kendal, the present organist, Mr. Smallwood Winder, was appointed in 1883, forty-five years ago. History does not record why Messrs. Burn and Scarisbrick lived so long, but I know Mr. Winder must ride thousands of miles per annum on his push-cycle—and that in the hilly Lake District. My admiration for Mr. Winder is equally divided between his musicianship and his capabilities as an athlete.—Yours, &c.,

Paul Rochard.

'Newlands,' Kendal.

---

'CUTTING OUT THE MIDDLEMAN'

Sir,—Your correspondent S. Midgley, writing in the September number under the above heading, blames artists for booking through agents and for refusing to accept low fees. While not sufficiently conceited to class myself as a 'clever' artist, I can certainly claim to be 'short of work,' and my experience as a free-lance for ten years may be of interest.

Before the war I was beginning to 'feel my feet' as a vocalist, though brought up and trained to another profession. However, after four and a half years of military service it was imperative to have expert advice, so in 1919, as funds would not permit of more, I enrolled as an evening student in one of our great schools of music. Here I remained for over three years. (Incidentally, during that time I came into personal contact with the head of the school on one occasion only, and the school has never assisted me to a single engagement. We evening students, who paid the bulk of the fees of the establishment, were known to the lordly day students, who were awarded scholarships and so paid no fees, as 'in-and-outers'—'in at a quarter to, and out at a quarter past,' as one of these students put it.) My fees alone cost me nearly £100.

Before leaving I sat for and obtained the highest diploma awarded by the school, and also that of another great institution. These elaborate documents stated

No. 1436. THERE IS A GARDEN IN HER FACE.—H. A. Chambers. Price (4*d*.).

NOVELLO'S PART-SONG BOOK.

A COLLECTION OF PART-SONGS, GLEES, AND MADRIGALS.

For S.A.T.B. unless otherwise stated. Those marked thus * may be had in Tonic Sol-fa Notation.

| No. | | |
|---|---|---|
| 614 | Absence ... ... H. Goetz | 3d. |
| 217 | * Do. (A.T.T.B.) J. L. Hatton | 3d. |
| 181 | * Do. ... ... ,, | 2d. |
| 67 | Adieu love, adieu G. A. Macfarren | 4d. |
| 312 | Adieu, my native shore Pearsall | 3d. |
| 943 | Adieu, sweet Amaryllis J. W. G. Hathaway | 3d. |
| 1227 | Do. ... C. Macpherson | 4d. |
| 390 | Adieu to the woods Egerton | 4d. |
| 658 | Advice to lovers ... P. W. Pilcher | 3d. |
| 1398 | *After many a dusty mile E. Elgar | 4d. |
| 913 | After the battle arr. T. R. G. Jozé | 3d. |
| 674 | Ah, my dear Son (Carol, 3 V.) ... | 4d. |
| 1375 | Ah! what is love ...W. McNaught | 4d. |
| 515 | Ah! woe is me (6 V.) H. Lahee | 6d. |
| 648 | Airley Beacon C. V. Stanford | 3d. |
| 568 | Airs of Summer ... J. L. Roeckel | 3d. |
| 17 | All among the barley E. Stirling | 3d. |
| 971 | *All for my true love H. D. Wetton | 4d. |
| 81 | All is not gold that shineth bright in snow (5 V.) W. J. Westbrook | 4d. |
| 394 | *All is still ... G. A. Macfarren | 2d. |
| 802 | All Souls' Day J. Rheinberger | 4d. |
| 59 | All ye woods and trees and bow'rs J. L. Hatton | 2d. |
| 83 | * Do. (5 V.) H. Lahee | 2d. |
| 940 | Do. ... H. W. Wareing | 4d. |
| 1037 | *Allan Water arr. H. E. Button | 3d. |
| 478 | *Allen-a-Dale ... C. H. Lloyd | 6d. |
| 1020 | *. Do. ... ... J. B. McEwen | 4d. |
| 334 | Already snow has fallen R. Franz | 2d. |
| 113 | Alton Locke's Song G. A. Macfarren | 2d. |
| 1425 | A-maying, a-playing A. Rowley | 4d. |
| 1011 | *Amaryllis I did woo J. E. West | 3d. |
| 1322 | *American National Songs (Three) | 2d. |
| 972 | Amintor's well-a-day J. E. West | 4d. |
| 1364 | An address to the nightingale W. W. Pearson | 4d. |
| 175 | An Autumn song ... C. Pinsuti | 4d. |
| 20 | An emigrant's song W. Macfarren | 3d. |
| 1074 | *An Empire song A. C. Mackenzie | 4d. |
| 1053 | An end will I bring Schubert | 4d. |
| 1387 | *An old Song resung H. B. Gardiner | 6d. |
| 485 | And then no more ... R. Raff | 3d. |
| 1103 | *Angelic hunter, The arr. J. Brahms | 4d. |
| 1091 | Angel's call, The I. I. Viotta | 2d. |
| 960 | *Angel's greeting, The J. Brahms | 4d. |
| 1167 | *Angelus (Tuscany) E. Elgar | 6d. |
| 1340 | *Anglers, The W. W. Pearson | 3d. |
| 30 | Angler's Trysting-tree, The C. W. Corfe | 4d. |
| 1039 | *Annie Laurie arr. H. E. Button | 3d. |
| 108 | Annie Lee ... ... J. Barnby | 2d. |
| 182 | April showers ... J. L. Hatton | 2d. |
| 1218 | Do. (A.T.T.B.) ,, | 2d. |
| 1318 | *Arethusa, The ... W. Shield | 4d. |
| 137 | Arise, sweet love ... H. Leslie | 2d. |
| 97 | Arise, the sunbeams hail F. Berger | 4d. |
| 520 | Around the maypole tripping J. L. Hatton | 2d. |
| 859 | *Arranmore Boat Song arr. T. R. G. Jozé | 6d. |
| 457 | *Arrow and the song, The W. Hay | 4d. |
| 973 | As Amoret with Phillis sat John E. West | 3d. |
| 1054 | As dewdrops at morn Schubert | 4d. |
| 525 | As I saw fair Clora F. Corder | 4d. |
| 146 | As it fell upon a day ... S. Reay | 4d. |
| 619 | As the ripples flow E. A. Sydenham | 3d. |
| 1052 | As the watcher longs Schubert | 4d. |
| 900 | As through the land J. Pullein | 3d. |
| 796 | *As torrents in summer E. Elgar | 3d. |
| 1180 | As when the sun renews his strength (Madrigal) C. E. Miller | 4d. |
| 1257 | *Ash Grove, The arr. Dunhill | 4d. |
| 1105 | At Andernach in Rhineland Abt | 4d. |
| 393 | At first the mountain rill G. A. Macfarren | 2d. |
| 981 | At her fair hands ... J. Elliott | 3d. |
| 788 | Do. ... C. H. H. Parry | 4d. |
| 335 | At parting ... ... R. Franz | 2d. |
| 358 | *At the coming of the Spring J. L. Hatton | 4d. |
| 195 | Auburn ... ... ,, | 4d. |
| 582 | *Auld Lang Syne arr. E. Land | 2d. |
| 71 | Autolycus' Song C. A. Macirone | 2d. |
| 1006 | * Do. ... C. Lee Williams | 4d. |
| 158 | Autumn ... ... W. Macfarren | 4d. |
| 274 | Do. (T.T.B.B.) ,, | 4d. |
| 353 | Do. ... A. C. Mackenzie | 2d. |
| 1162 | Autumn fields, The N. W. Gade | 4d. |
| 464 | Autumn is come again (5 V.) F. Corder | 4d. |
| 403 | Autumn song ... S. Reay | 4d. |
| 683 | Do. ... ...J. Rheinberger | 3d. |
| 484 | Ave Maria ... ... ... J. Raff | 4d. |
| 241 | * Do. ... ... H. Smart | 2d. |
| 968 | *Awake, awake ... G. Bantock | 4d. |
| 76 | *Awake, awake, the flow'rs unfold H. Leslie | 2d. |
| 25 | Awake the starry midnight hour Mendelssohn | 3d. |
| 923 | *Away to the woodlands H. W. Warner | 4d. |
| 978 | *Baby's feet, like sea shells pink, A C. H. Lloyd | 4d. |
| 225 | Bacchanalian Song (A.T.T.B.) J. L. Hatton | 4d. |
| 193 | Bait, The (Come live with me) J. L. Hatton | 2d. |
| 996 | *Ballad, A (8 V.) ... T. Wendt | 4d. |
| 1016 | Ballade of Midsummer ,, | 4d. |
| 1017 | Ballade of Spring ,, | 6d. |
| 1044 | *Battle of the Baltic, The C. H. Lloyd | 6d. |
| 861 | *Battle song, A arr. T. R. G. Jozé | 4d. |
| 578 | Do. ... E. A. Sydenham | 4d. |
| 1334 | *Beacon, The ... A. Carse | 4d. |
| 689 | Beauty, arise ... K. J. Pye | 4d. |
| 841 | Before me careless lying (5 V.) C. H. Lloyd | 6d. |
| 1238 | *Beleaguered, The A. S. Sullivan | 3d. |
| 56 | *Belfry Tower, The J. L. Hatton | 2d. |
| 1311 | *Belgian National song F. Campenhout | 2d. |
| 572 | Bells across the snow Ch. Gounod | 4d. |
| 432 | *Bells of St. Michael's Tower, The W. Knyvett (5 V.), arr. R. P. Stewart | 6d. |
| 1271 | *Ben Bowlegs (humorous) W. W. Pearson | 4d. |
| 984 | Bendemeer's Stream J. Pointer | 4d. |
| 1216 | Beside the river ... A. Jensen | 3d. |
| 793 | *Better music ne'er was known C. H. H. Parry | 4d. |
| 184 | *Beware ... ... J. L. Hatton | 2d. |
| 220 | Do. (A.T.T.B.) ,, | 2d. |
| 111 | *Bird of the Wilderness J. Barnby | 4d. |
| 196 | Do. ... ... J. L. Hatton | 4d. |
| 1157 | Birds are singing, The Hans Sitt | 3d. |
| 798 | Birthday serenade, A G. J. Elvey | 4d. |
| 1308 | Birthright, The ... ...E. Elgar | 4d. |
| 300 | *Bishop of Mentz, The Pearsall | 2d. |
| 1107 | *Black Monk, The (Welsh folk-song) arr. R. Boughton | 4d. |
| 55 | *Blow, blow thou winter wind G. A. Macfarren | 2d. |
| 1254 | Blow, breeze, from the North G. Elvey | 4d. |
| 1369 | Blow, western wind Pearson | 4d. |
| 661 | *Blue-bottle's fate, The (humorous) A. H. Ashworth | 4d. |
| 544 | Blue-eyed lassie, The F. Brandeis | 3d. |
| 933 | *Blwyddyn Bywyd D. Protheroe | 4d. |
| 187 | Blythe is the Bird J. L. Hatton | 3d. |
| 399 | *Boat Song ... H. Leslie | 2d. |
| 357 | * Do. ... ... E. Prout | 6d. |
| 1088 | Do. ... ... F. Schubert | 3d. |
| 385 | Boat, The ... ... R. Schumann | 4d. |
| 3 | Boating Song ... E. G. Monk | 3d. |
| 521 | *Boatman's Good-night, The F. Schira | 2d. |
| 545 | *Bonnie Bell A. C. Mackenzie | 3d. |
| 1310 | *Boy, The (humorous) Brewer | 4d. |
| 63 | *Break, break on thy cold grey stones, O sea G. A. Macfarren | 2d. |
| 99 | Breathe soft, ye winds J. B. Calkin | 2d. |
| 1307 | * Do. ... ... W. Paxton | 2d. |
| 878 | Bridal Song ... H. Leslie | 6d. |
| 639 | Bright be thy dreams Oliver King | 3d. |
| 402 | *Bright-hair'd morn, The S. Reay | 4d. |
| 584 | Bright Moon ... John E. West | 3d. |
| 1222 | *Bring me a golden pen F. H. Cowen | 4d. |
| 601 | Broken Flower, The Oliver King | 3d. |
| 447 | Brook, The C. G. Reissiger | 4d. |
| 1015 | *Brownies, The Moellendorff | 4d. |
| 1416 | Bushes and Briars ... (arr.) | 3d. |
| 223 | Busy, curious, thirsty fly (A.T.T.B.) J. L. Hatton | 3d. |
| 743 | *Butterfly, The J. Blumenthal | 6d. |
| 1095 | *By a gentle river laid John E. West | 4d. |
| 1430 | By Marykirk a sweet bird sang W. Jackson | 3d. |
| 1002 | *By the waters of Babylon P. Cornelius | 3d. |
| 1141 | By woodland and wayside E. Franz | 3d. |
| 1272 | Call John (humorous) arr. W. W. Pearson | 4d. |
| 1122 | Calm is the lake ... ... F. Abt | 4d. |
| 359 | Calm night ... ... J. I. Hatton | 4d |
| 380 | Calm of the sea, The ... H. Hiles | 6d. |
| 1432 | *Camel's Hump, The E. German | 4d. |
| 911 | *Capture of Cremona, The arr. T. R. G. Jozé | 4d. |
| 314 | Caput apri defero... ...Pearsall | 4d. |
| 178 | *Caravan, The ... C. Pinsuti | 2d. |
| 1251 | *Cargoes ... H. B. Gardiner | 4d. |
| 1273 | Carrion Crow, The (humorous) W. W. Pearson | 4d. |
| 607 | Cavalier, The ... C. Goodall | 4d. |
| 529 | Cavalry song C. A. Macirone | 4d. |
| 635 | Cephalus and Procris A. W. Batson | 4d. |
| 482 | Chafer's Wedding, A (humorous) Lewandowski | 8d. |
| 1087 | Chapel, The ... C. Kreutzer | 4d. |
| 427 | *Charge of the Light Brigade, The E. Hecht | 6d. |
| 85 | *Charm me asleep (6 V.) H. Leslie | 4d. |
| 906 | Do. ... J. B. McEwen | 4d. |
| 1429 | Charming Chloe ... ... E. Boyce | 4d. |
| 847 | *Chase, The ... E. German | 4d. |
| 757 | Cherry ripe ... A. H. Brewer | 3d. |
| 583 | Do. ... ... arr. E. Land | 2d. |
| 1255 | * Do. ... ... W. G. Ross | 3d. |
| 731 | Do. (6 V.) S. P. Waddington | 4d. |
| 1212 | Cheshire cheese, The arr. J. C. Bridge | 4d. |
| 734 | Chi la Gagliarda ... B. Donato | 4d. |
| 375 | Chieftain to the Highland bound, A Pearsall | 3d. |
| 466 | * Do. ... ... O. Prescott | 6d. |
| 94 | Childhood's melody F. Berger | 2d. |
| 101 | Chivalry of Labour, The (5 V.) J. B. Calkin | 6d. |
| 1145 | Chloe, that dear bewitching prude H. Willan | 3d. |
| 1147 | *Chorus of Empire C. A. E. Harriss | 4d. |
| 66 | *Christmas... G. A. Macfarren | 3d. |
| 1109 | *Christmas greeting, A E. Elgar | 8d. |
| 314 | Christmas song, A ... Pearsall | 4d. |
| 967 | Do. ... ... M. Prætorius | 3d. |
| 845 | *Close to my heart ... W. Davies | 4d. |
| 677 | *Clouds, The J. Rheinberger | 4d. |
| 823 | *Come again, sweet days J. Dowland | 3d. |
| 726 | *Come away ... E. German | 4d. |
| 873 | * Do. ... ... H. Parker | 6d. |
| 1169 | Come away, come away, death arr. Arne | 3d. |
| 36 | Do. (5 V.) G. A. Macfarren | 4d. |
| 51 | * Do. (5 V.) ,, | 4d. |
| 58 | Come celebrate the May ... Hatton | 2d. |
| 668 | Come, fairies, trip it ... F. Iliffe | 4d. |
| 102 | Come fill, my boys (A.T.T.B.) J. B. Calkin | 2d. |
| 118 | *Come follow me A. Zimmermann | 2d. |
| 1143 | Come forth, the summer's murmur hear ... E. Franz | 3d |
| 14 | Come, heavy sleep J. Dowland | 3d. |
| 745 | Come if you dare... ... Purcell | 6d. |
| 1210 | Come, lasses and lads arr. J. C. Bridge | 4d. |
| 899 | Come let me take thee J. Pullein | 3d. |
| 317 | Come let us be merry Pearsall | 3d. |
| 507 | *Come live with me W. S. Bennett | 2d. |
| 360 | Do. ... J. L. Hatton | 4d. |
| 193 | Do. (The Bait) ... ,, | 2d. |
| 497 | Come, May, with all thy flowers J. L. Gregory | 3d. |
| 1052 | Come, O come, dearest, come Schubert | 4d. |
| 671 | Come o'er the burn, Bessie (3 V.) | 3d. |
| 1214 | Come out across the heather A. Jensen | 4d. |
| 791 | *Come, pretty wag, and sing C. H. H. Parry | 3d. |
| 38 | Come sleep... ... J. Benedict | 4d. |
| 1060 | Do. ... J. W. G. Hathaway | 3d. |
| 1110 | * Do. ... R. H. Walthew | 2d. |
| 945 | Do. ... A. G. Wathall | 4d. |
| 1007 | *Come to me, gentle sleep Cowen | 4d. |
| 701 | Do. ... H. W. Schartau | 4d. |
| 713 | Come, tuneful friends (humorous) C. H. Lloyd | 4d. |
| 1032 | Come with me, fairest J. Brahms | 4d. |
| 615 | Comfort ... ... H. Goetz | 3d. |
| 999 | *Comfort in tears... P. Cornelius | 6d. |
| 1422 | *Coming through the Craigs o' Kyle A. Rowley | 4d. |
| 1182 | *Comrades' song of hope, The A. Adam | 3d. |
| 383 | Confidence (8 V.) ... R. Schumann | 4d. |

THERE IS A GARDEN IN HER FACE

FOUR-PART SONG

WORDS BY RICHARD ALISON (1606)

MUSIC BY

H. A. CHAMBERS

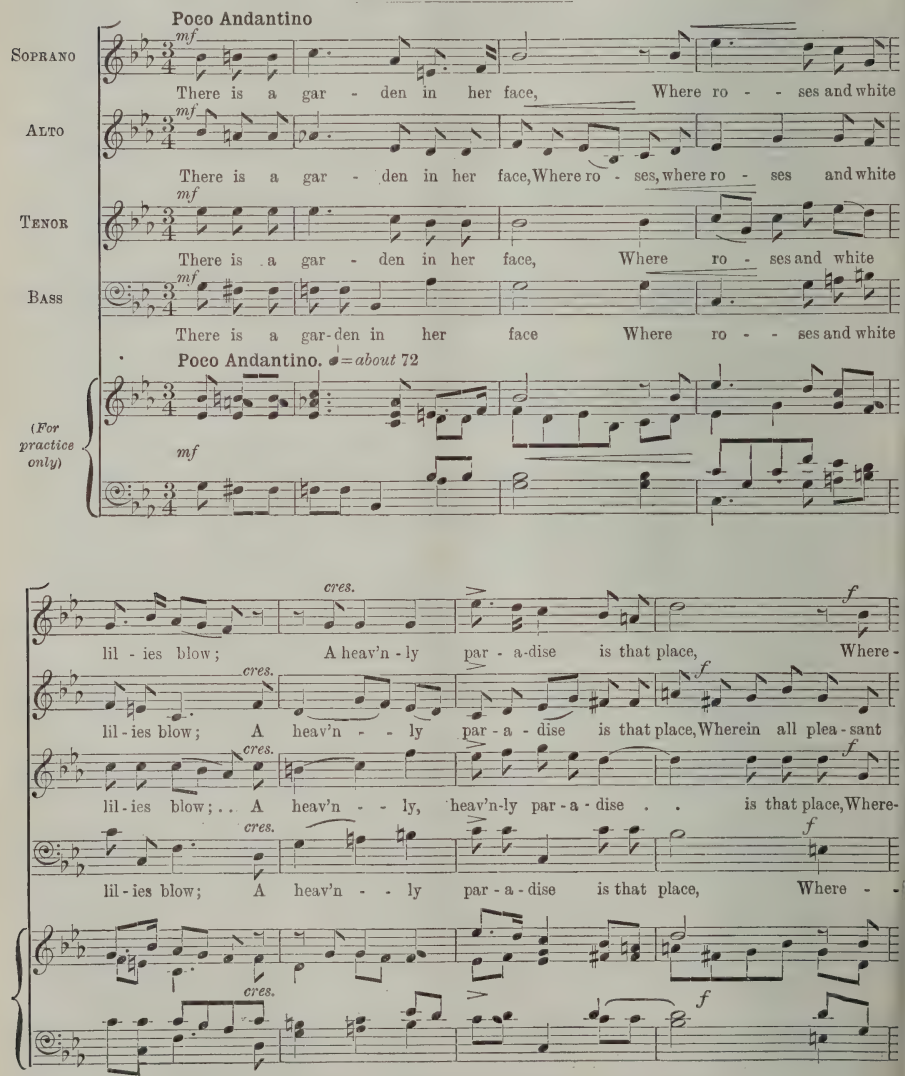
LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED; NEW YORK: THE H. W. GRAY CO., SOLE AGENTS FOR THE U.S.A.



Poco Andantino
mf
Soprano
There is a gar - den in her face, Where ro - - ses and white
Alto
There is a gar - den in her face, Where ro - ses, where ro - ses and white
Tenor
There is a gar - den in her face, Where ro - ses and white
Bass
There is a gar-den in her face Where ro - - ses and white
Poco Andantino. ♩= about 72
(For practice only)
cres.
f
lil - ies blow; A heav'n - ly par - a-dise is that place, Where - lil - ies blow; A heav'n - - ly par - a - dise is that place, Wherein all plea - sant lil - ies blow; . . A heav'n - - ly, heav'n-ly par - a - dise . . is that place, Wherelil - ies blow; A heav'n - - ly par - a - dise is that place, Where - -

Copyright, 1928, by Novello and Company, Limited

THERE IS A GARDEN IN HER FACE

- in all plea - sant fruits do grow.
mf fruits, . . . all plea-sant fruits do grow. There cher-ries grow which none may
mf
- in all plea-sant fruits do grow. . . There cher - ries
There cher - - ries
mf
- in all plea-sant fruits do grow. . . There cher-ries grow which mf
mf
There cher - ries grow which none may buy, Till cher-ry ripe . .
buy, there cher - ries grow which none may buy, Till cher-ry grow which none, . . which none may buy, Till cher-ry, cher-ry ripe, grow,
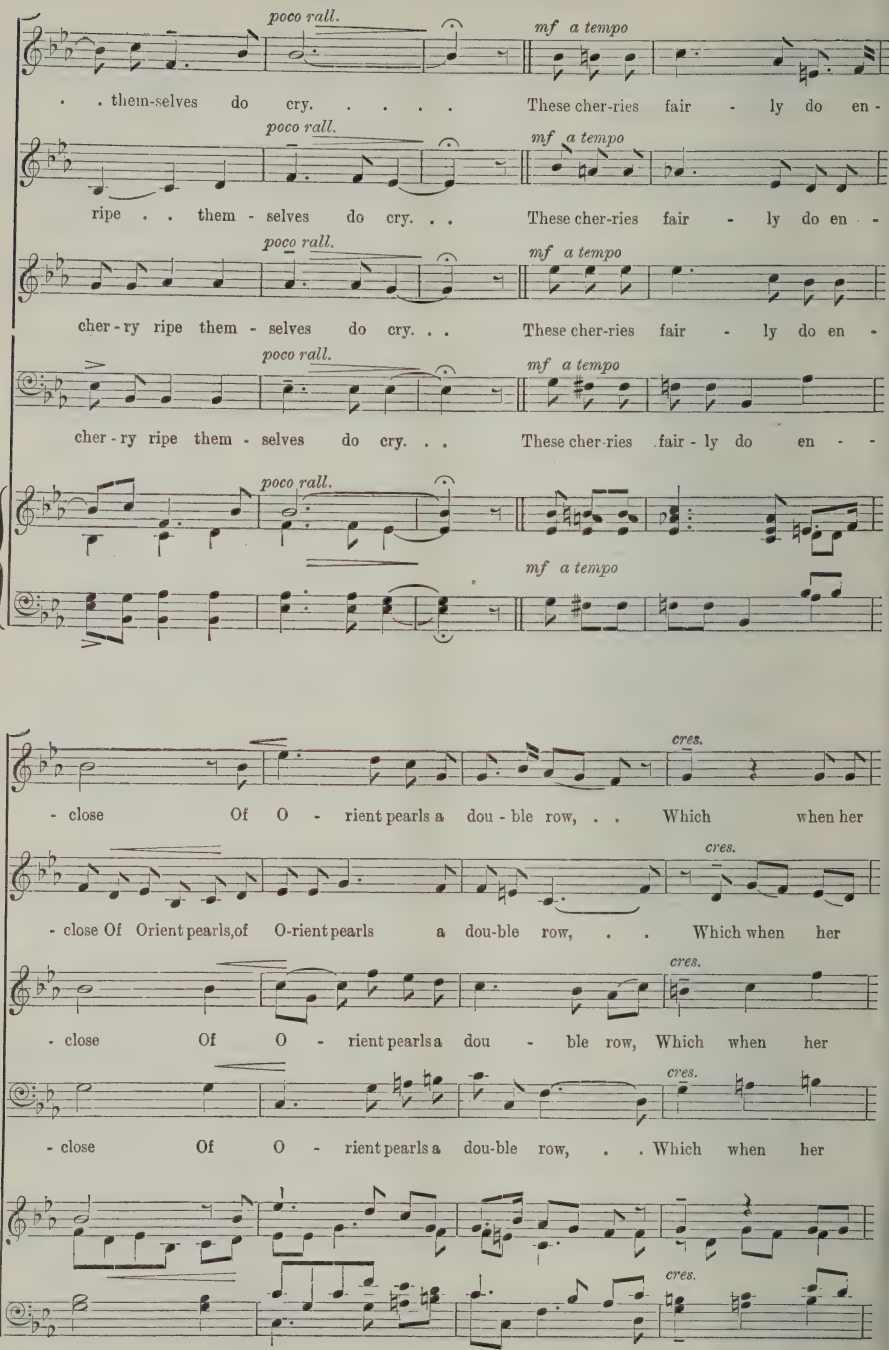
none may buy, there cher-ries grow which none may buy, Till cher - - ry,



poco rall.
mf a tempo
. . them-selves do cry. . . . . These cher-ries fair - ly do en -
poco rall.
mf a tempo
ripe . . them - selves do cry. . . These cher-ries fair - ly do en -
poco rall.
mf a tempo cher - ry ripe them - selves do cry. . . These cher-ries fair - ly do en -
poco rall.
mf a tempo
cher - ry ripe them - selves do cry. . . These cher-ries fair - ly do en -
poco rall.
mf a tempo
cres.
- close Of O - rient pearls a dou - ble row, . . Which when her
cres.
- close Of Orient pearls, of O-rient pearls a dou-ble row, . . Which when her
cres.
- close Of O - rient pearls a dou - ble row, Which when her
cres.
- close Of O - rient pearls a dou-ble row, . . Which when her
cres.

f love - ly laugh - ter shows, They look like rose - buds filled with love - ly laughter shows, They look like rosebuds filled, . . . . like rose-buds filled with love-ly laughter shows, . . They look like rose - - buds, rosebuds filled with love-ly laugh - ter shows, They look like rose-buds filled with
mf
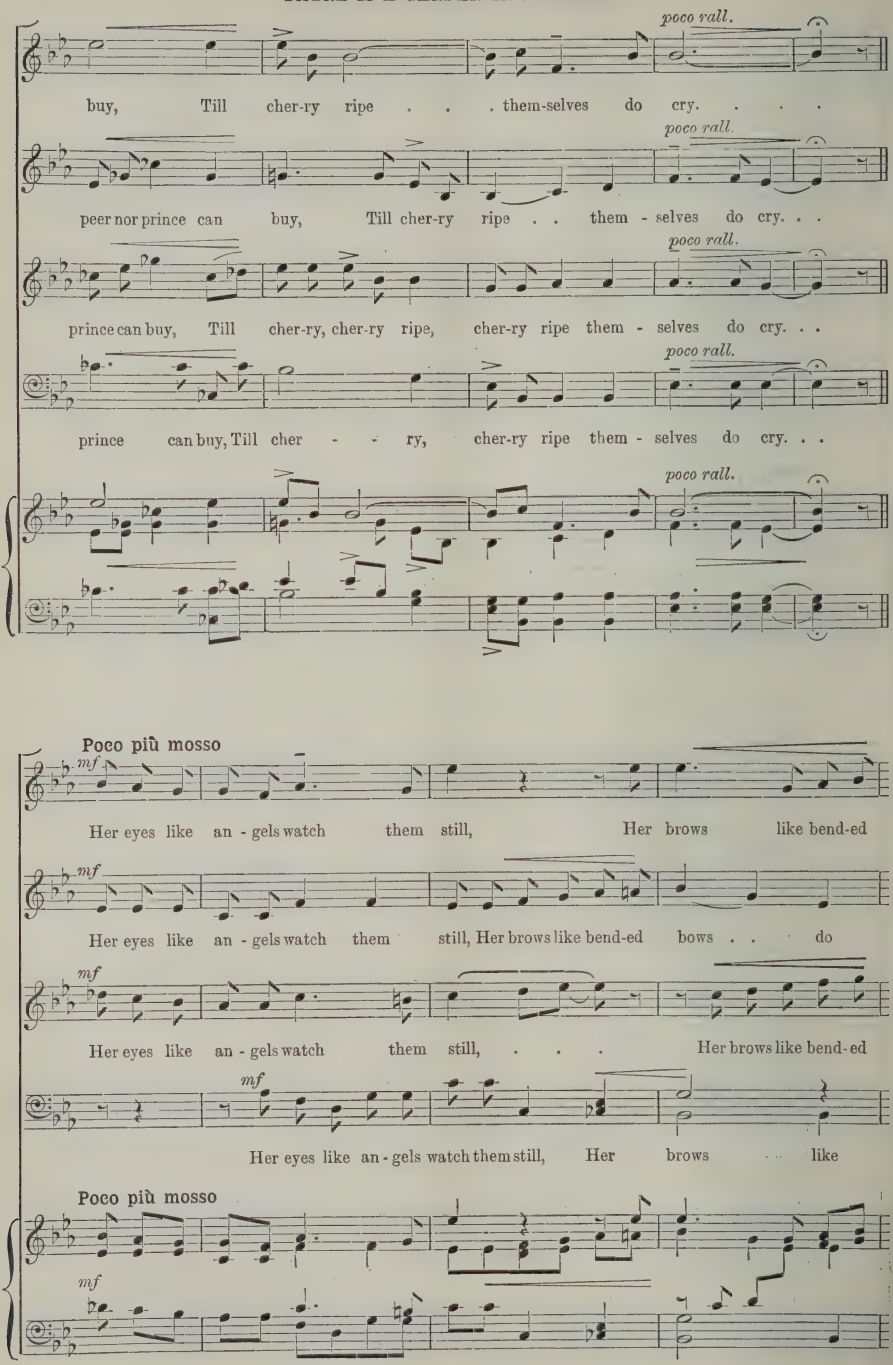
snow: Yet them nor peer nor prince can snow: Yet them nor peer nor prince can buy, yet . . them nor snow: Yet them nor peer, nor peer . . nor Yet them nor peer, snow: Yet them nor peer nor prince can buy, yet them nor peer nor . .



poco rall.
buy, Till cher-ry ripe . . . them-selves do cry. . . .
poco rall.
peer nor prince can buy, Till cher-ry ripe . . them - selves do cry. . .
poco rall.
prince can buy, Till cher-ry, cher-ry ripe, cher-ry ripe them - selves do cry. . .
poco rall.
prince can buy, Till cher - - ry, cher-ry ripe them - selves do cry. . .
poco rall.
Poco più mosso
mf
Her eyes like an - gels watch them still, Her brows like bend-ed
mf
Her eyes like an - gels watch them still, Her brows like bend-ed bows . . do
mf
Her eyes like an - gels watch them still, . . . Her brows like bend-ed
mf
Her eyes like an - gels watch them still, Her brows like Poco più mosso
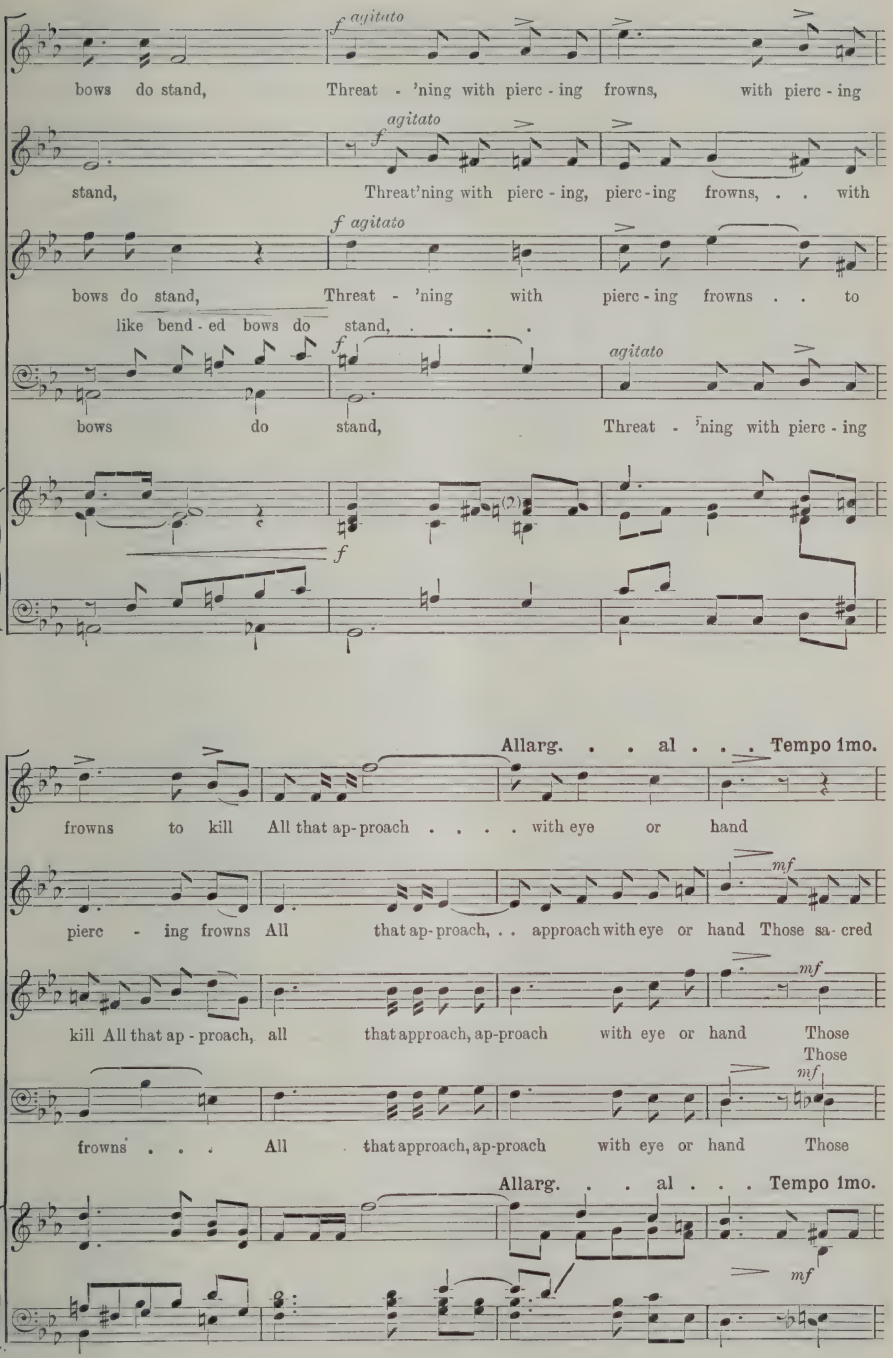
mf



f agitato
bows do stand, Threat - 'ning with pierc - ing frowns, with pierc - ing agitato
f stand, Threat'ning with pierc - ing, pierc - ing frowns, . . with f agitato
bows do stand, Threat - 'ning with pierc - ing frowns . . to like bend - ed bows do stand, . . . .
f
agitato
bows do stand, Threat - 'ning with pierc - ing
f
Allarg. . . al . . . Tempo 1mo.
frowns to kill All that ap - proach . . . . with eye or hand
mf
pierc - ing frowns All that ap - proach, . . approach with eye or hand Those sa - cred
mf
kill All that ap - proach, all that approach, ap - proach with eye or hand Those Those
mf frowns . . . All that approach, ap - proach with eye or hand Those Allarg. . . al . . . Tempo 1mo.
mf

mf
Those sa - cred cher - ries to come nigh, Till cher - ries to come nigh, those sa - - cred cherries to come sa - - cred, sa - - cred cher - ries to come nigh, . . Till . .
sa - - cred cher - ries, those sa-cred cherries to come nigh, . . those cherries to come nigh, . . Till rall. e dim.
cher - ry ripe . . . . themselves do cry. . . . .
rall.
nigh, Till cher - ry ripe . . them - selves do cry. . . .
rall.
cher - ry, cher - ry ripe, cher - ry ripe them - selves do cry. . . .
rall. e dim.
cher - - ry, cher - ry ripe them - selves do cry.
rall. e dim.

that I was qualified as a concert artist in singing, but when I came to mention the fact to those who engaged artists, alas! they would not even look at them, and even suggested they were a drawback. However, I decided to 'peg away,' and advertised as far as funds would permit.

I have never refused an engagement because of the lowness of the fee. My lowest fee in recent years was 7*s.* 6*d.* for a hotel 'engagement' spread over a period of three hours, and so far my highest fee has been four guineas for an engagement at Queen's Hall, London.

Despite the fact that press reports have been excellent and that I have kept my name as far as possible before the public, my actual yearly receipts from engagements since 1920 have been £10, £22, £23, £20, £27, £29, £19, £10, £25 (this year to date).

I have a répertoire of a large number of works which I have memorised, and hundreds of classical and popular songs. No wonder then that, as a married man, I dare not throw over a certain means of livelihood for the purely executive side of music which I love so much more, and for which I honestly feel I am fitted.

Could I have done worse had I booked through agents or taken lower fees?

For obvious reasons, as I still look for a successful career as a vocalist, I cannot ask you to publish my name, but merely sign myself,—Yours, &c.,

'Nil Desperandum.'

---

Sir,—I would direct Mr. Midgley's attention to your advertisement columns in the September issue of the Musical Times. He will find the announcement of the London Oratorio and Concert Association, which was founded in 1912 by myself and a few colleagues, to supply the want about which he complains. Any conductor or concert manager who is interested in securing the services of capable and reliable artists (not always the same thing!) may do so by writing to the secretary, who will send the names and addresses.—Yours, &c.,

Clifton Cooke.

---

WESTMINSTER SINGERS

Sir,—I crave the courtesy of your space to reply to a letter from Mr. W. H. Brereton in your July issue wherein he claims for the Westminster Singers a proprietary right in the word 'Westminster,' on the grounds that his quartet had registered this title, one which he says was adopted because the original members were Abbey men. Mr. Brereton apparently does not know that the Stationers' Hall registration conveys no legal rights whatever, and if he thinks it possible to monopolise the word 'Westminster' (as applied to vocal organizations) for all time and for the entire world, he is possessed of an ultra-sanguine disposition. I seem to remember a Westminster Choral Society, and it is quite open to anybody to institute a body of Westminster Madrigal or Folk-Song Singers without infringement of any sort.

The burden of his grievance is that my organization, the Westminster Glee Singers—which he terms a 'recently formed group'—has violated these so-called rights, not being 'blind to the advantages to be derived from the word "Westminster."'

The facts of the matter scarcely bear out this unpleasant innuendo, for my organization is a mixed-voice body of from twelve to twenty members, formed twenty-seven years ago, the adult singers originally being all Abbey men, which I believe was not the case with the Quartet in question. Our first tour, in Canada, was undertaken in 1901, and since that time the whole of the British Dominions overseas have been visited at varying intervals, no fewer than sixteen members of the Abbey choir having been included in our personnel.

Here is the record: Australia and New Zealand, three times; Canada, four times; India, Burmah, Ceylon, and Newfoundland, twice each; with single visits to South Africa, the West Indies, Fiji, the Bahama Islands, British East Africa, the Straits Settlements, the Malay States, and British Guiana. If foreign countries be also included the list would embrace the United States, Cuba, the Philippine Islands, Java, China, Japan, Portuguese East Africa, and the Hawaiian Islands.

All these many years it has been open to the Westminster Singers to visit the outlying portions of the Empire, and, in their restricted musical area, do what I have done in that wider field of unaccompanied part-singing which includes anthems, choral services, and compositions up to eight parts. But with the exception of a war-time visit to Scandinavia they have elected to confine their attentions to the British Islands, and they must not now complain if someone with more initiative and a wider vision realises the claims of our kinsmen overseas, and carries to them the musical message of our national British minstrelsy.

As a past lay-vicar of Westminster Abbey, controlling an organization which was primarily formed by Abbey men, my position would appear to be unassailable, and if confusion arises as to the two bodies, this can only germinate in the minds of the musically uninformed and unthinking.

It is regrettable to learn that any impression exists that Mr. Brereton and his excellent singers should not be available for engagements, and I can only hope that his quite legitimate complaint is not one of serious magnitude. Hitherto the English press has not favoured my work with much attention, and so this difficulty has not arisen. Possibly the publicity which this correspondence may give will be of some value in drawing attention to the fact that the Westminster Singers are still on their native heath, and available to carry on the useful work in which they have been so singularly successful for many years.—Yours, &c.,

Toronto, July 28, 1928. Edward Branscombe (Westminster Glee Singers).

[Having re-opened this matter in order to allow Mr. Branscombe to state the case for the Westminster Glee Singers, we close it again. Although the correspondence inevitably leaves things as they were, it has been useful, we think, in clearing up some confusion concerning the two parties.—Editor.]

---

HOLLINS AND HIS ORGAN

Sir,—I read with great interest your article on Dr. Hollins. If I may offer one or two comments, I should like in the first place to endorse your remarks about the wonderful effectiveness of the organ at 'Free St. George's,' and to commend a careful study of its specification to those who, in these days of high prices, are seeking for ideas. Having often had the pleasure of playing on it, and spending many delightful hours in the church with Dr. Hollins, I am sure that there is not an organ of that size which is capable of more variety.

Next I would refer to the remarks about the rendering of items for organ and pianoforte. I have had the privilege of joining with the Doctor in nearly all the works mentioned, and, apart from the stimulating and inspiring effect of such an association for an ordinary musician like myself, I am convinced that such performances have a great interest for the public, and I wish that many more recitalists could put such programmes forward.

It is a great regret to me that Dr. Hollins's brilliant 'Polonaise' for organ and pianoforte remains in MS., as it contains some of his most attractive writing, is immensely popular with all audiences, and gives ample scope for both performers.

It would savour of impertinence to say more about the personal aspect of your subject; Dr. Hollins's charm and affability are well known. How unassumingly and how unfailingly he 'delivers the goods'! In spite of his world-wide reputation, it can never be said of him, as I have heard it said of players of far smaller deserts, '—— charges you so much for speaking to him!'—Yours, &c., F. Heddon Bond.

Wellingborough.

---

THE ANÆMIC CHOIR ORGAN, Etc.

Sir,—In the course of reviewing Karg-Elert's new Suite for organ you make several very apposite observations on registration, which all progressive organ builders ought certainly to take to heart! To our way of thinking a closer co-operation between player and builder has long been overdue, since it is only when one party becomes articulate and expresses itself decisively that the trail to greater perfection is blazed. Now, first, you pointedly remark that 'Our anæmic Choirs [i.e., Choir organs] not only make it impossible for us to realise some of Bach's intentions; more and more they hamper us in dealing with modern music.' Only too true, ten years ago; but things are improving. For example, in the new organ for Glasgow University there is to be an eleven-stop Choir as against a twelve-stop Swell and an eleven-stop Great. The Choir organ for St. Thomas's R.C. Church, Wandsworth, will actually be larger by one stop than the Great! Moreover, the latest tendency in the design of the Choir organ is to incorporate some of the delightful independent Mutation ranks, of which Titelouze, Clérambault, Couperin, Bach, &c., made such free use, which have long been known both to Continental builders and players, but which, as usual, have scarcely been heard of by English builders or players until lately. British music, however, like British art, science, and philosophy, is gradually being deprovincialised; and one can only hope that even British organ-building will lift itself out of the groove in which it has always been, as far as tonal matters go. These Mutations, i.e., Nazard 1⅓, Tierce 1⅗, Larigot 1⅓, Septieme 1⅐, &c., have great colouristic possibilities, and by means of various syntheses they may be made to yield many new and unfamiliar compound tones. To the full Choir organ, at any rate, they lend a really piquant brilliance which surely does away with the reproach of anæmia or lack of vitality!

Again, you remark: 'The pedal indication, Fagotto 16-ft. (or Bombarde) and 4-ft. or 2-ft., is hardly likely to be satisfied.' Again, only too true—but not in the best modern British work. At St. Thomas's, Wandsworth, above noted, the Pedal organ will contain a 4-ft. pedal stop, as well as a choir octave to Pedal, and Swell octave to Pedal for emergency! The Swell 16-ft. reed (Waldhorn) will be derived electrically from the Pedal as a mf 16-ft. reed (an 'expressive' one, too)—so here at least there will not be the slightest difficulty in carrying out Karg-Elert's directions. Hence perhaps we may ask, not without a certain feeling of satisfaction, 'Anything else?'—Yours, &c.,

Henry Willis & Sons, Ltd.

234, Ferndale Road,
Brixton, S.W.9.

---

ISOLATED NEAR NEWBURY

Sir,—I wonder if any of your readers are in a position like mine. I have lived near London until March of this year, and for three years have been studying the violin, playing for two seasons as second violin in an amateur orchestra. Now, owing to the removal of my family, I am right in the country, six miles from Newbury. They have a good orchestra there, but I am unlikely to be able to join as I can find no means whatever of getting home at night—I cannot walk six miles at night, as I am not over-strong. So far I have been unable to find anyone in the surrounding district with any interest in real music. Is there, I wonder, among your readers anyone in the Woodhay district of Newbury (preferably pianist or violinist), who, like myself, would join forces for practice and mutual help and encouragement in this difficult business? I cannot afford anything expensive. I am not very advanced, but I am really keen, and would be grateful if you would publish this letter, in the hope that it may discover another traveller along the same road.—Yours, &c.,

Stargroves Gardens,
Newbury, Berks.

Margaret A. Moyes.

---

WILLIAM COBBETT AND THE GLOUCESTER FESTIVAL

Sir,—In the article on 'The Music Meeting,' in the August issue, mention is made of the carrying on of the meetings through world-shaking events. But here is a nasty knock from William Cobbett's 'Rural Rides':

> 'I intended to sleep at Gloucester, but found I should run a risk of having no bed if I did not bow very low and pay very high; for what should there be here but one of those scandalous and beastly fruits of the system called a 'music-meeting"! Those who founded the cathedrals never dreamed, I dare say, that they would have been put to such uses as this! They are, upon these occasions, made use of as Opera-Houses; and I am told that the money which is collected goes, in some shape or another, to the clergy of the church, or their widows, or children, or something. These assemblages of player-folks, half rogues and half fools, began with the small paper-money, and with it they will go. They are amongst the profligate pranks which idleness plays when fed by the sweat of a starving people.'

Well, well! It is to be hoped that Father William felt better when he had got this bit of uncommonly hot stuff off his manly chest. Anyhow, he is as dead (or nearly so) as the bountiful Queen Anne, and we are still going strong.—Yours, &c.,

R. H. Whall.

Stroud, Glos.

---

SOMETHING LIKE AN ENTHUSIAST

Sir,—I think possibly the following may be of sufficient interest to find a place in the Musical Times. It is from the diary of Col. Peter Hawker, born 1786; a great sportsman, but also a keen musician, as the extracts will show:

> '[Manchester.] I went on a musical excursion which except a wild fowl expedition is the only event which would have brought me here. [I follow his punctuation—such as it is!—R. H. W.]
>
> 'I went in the evening to Covent Garden Theatre in order to hear my favourite overture of "Der Freischütz" conducted by the immortal composer himself, Carl Maria von Weber.
>
> '. . . to the last most glorious Philharmonic where Thalberg drove me crazy with delight.
>
> '. . . toddled into Lymington (in a lobster cart) to the high diversion of ourselves and petrifaction of all the staring dandies and repaired to old Klitz, the Clementi of the place. There Langstaff joined in a trio while I went foraging and it came on a determined wet night, for which we were all well armed; as we brought off a fiddle, a tuning hammer and all the music we could borrow and sat with a good fire, for a thorough batch of such noise that neither the wind nor the rain was thought of.
>
> '[During a great storm]. We have our punts floating at our door in the street ready to rescue our family in case of danger . . . and I by way of aping Nero (who fiddled while Rome was burning) sat at my old humstrum and boggled through a given number of Bach's fugues.'

Hawker wrote a book on 'Instructions for the Best Position on the Pianoforte,' and invented 'hand moulds' for the pianoforte, which he patented, and which were taken up both in this country and abroad. In the intervals of shooting he dashed to France and Holland to recommend his invention. At Haarlem he played on the gigantic organ, and then:

'. . . . took the organist to the church porch, delighted him much with a sight of my hand-moulds for the pianoforte, gave him a prospectus of them, shook hands with him, and galloped off.'

From 'More English Diaries,' by Arthur Ponsonby.—

Yours, &c., R. H. Whall.

Stroud, Glos.

COMPOSER'S NAME WANTED

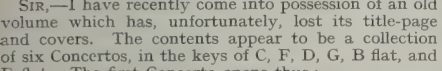
Sir,—I have recently come into possession of an old volume which has, unfortunately, lost its title-page and covers. The contents appear to be a collection of six Concertos, in the keys of C, F, D, G, B flat, and E flat. The first Concerto opens thus:



The volume itself gives no indication whatever as to the identity of the composer. I have, however, a book of six Overtures arranged for the harpsichord by their writer, C. F. Abel, and the style of composition, as well as the type of printing, seems to suggest some affinity between the Concertos and the Overtures.

Can any of your readers give me information which would settle the question of authorship?—

Yours, &c., H. Stubington.

Appletree House,
Presteigne, Rads.

THE MODERN IDIOM

Sir,—Let us fervently hope that the article by Leonid Sabaneev, in the September issue of the Musical Times, wherein he demonstrates the absurdity of some of the claims put forward for Stravinsky by his admirers, may be taken as an indication that Authority is at last about to voice its protest against 90 per cent. of what is fashionably described as the 'modern idiom.'

Not long ago I met a student who is attending one of our leading musical institutions, and who is looked on by her teachers as a very promising pianist. I asked her to play me some Chopin, but was told she 'really did not know any,' and had the same answer when I asked for some Schumann. She was then left to choose for herself, the result being that I was treated to some strange music by a living composer—truly an example of a stone for bread!

It is lamentable that a leading musical institution should send out students who have been deliberately trained to ignore Schumann and Chopin; but still more lamentable that in place, say, of the Study in C minor being placed before her as a pattern of perfection, she should be taught to look on it as 'old-fashioned,' and be provided with something more 'modern' on which to exercise her talent.

We see, everywhere, this tendency to make little of music which is not of the variety known as modern, and to sing the praises of any composer who will but do his best to follow in the steps of the Stravinsky-Schönberg-Bartók school.

Those to whom such music gives gratification explain the present antagonism to modern music as similar to that which was felt towards Wagner's music. They apparently forget that Wagner stood alone, and that his genius made him the instrument of a real forward step in musical evolution, and, consequently, he was not surrounded by shoals of composers writing in the Wagnerian idiom.

They also forget, apparently, that Wagner never dreamed of asking his critics to judge his music otherwise than by hearing it. Honegger and Schönberg, however, say that it is very liable to be mere noise when listened to, and we must read it, if we wish fully to grasp its great merits.

If there is any glimmer of meaning in this statement it can only be that counterpoint of fine quality visually may go hand-in-hand with a resulting atrocious vertical harmony!—as if a round object could give birth to a square shadow!

Schönberg is praised by Honegger for the good work he has done in rescuing us from the 'tyranny of tonality,' an expression worthy of an Ultra-Modern.

The subject requires a volume—the subject, that is, of 'Modern Music'—and the sooner the better. People, like myself, who can enter into the delights of 'Gerontius,' the 'Enigma' Variations, 'Till,' &c., are getting more and more curious to know exactly what reasons can be put forward by the Anti-Tonality, Anti-Listening, and Anti-Euphony school, in support of its contention that it represents a real legitimate advance in musical art.—Yours, &c.,

Plymouth. Herbert W. Fisher.

Sharps and Flats

Sir,—May I be permitted to offer a suggestion to the Band Committee, viz.: That during the week, rather than stick rigidly to eyebrow music . . .—Letter to Editor of Southport Paper.

Songs like 'Parted,' 'Absent,' 'Two Eyes of Grey,' and 'The Rosary' are the real folk-songs of modern England. And I am prepared to wager that none of your readers could guess the name of the most popular British Christmas song! No, it is not 'Home, Sweet Home,' nor 'Good King Wenceslas,' nor 'Christians, Awake!'—but 'The Miner's Dream of Home.'—J. H. Squire

Probst, in the last year of Schubert's life, gave him 17*s.* 6*d.* for the E flat Trio! One would like to visit Probst where he is now, and dole out brackish water to him at 17*s.* 6*d.* a molecule.—Ernest Newman.

Woman's sphere is the home.—Galli-Curci.

It is sad stuff, this talk about educating the public taste. Surely any bonehead can see that the public does not want the best . . . I do not believe in giving the people Brahms when they want Wilfrid Sanderson . . . Let the highbrows sniff . . . —George Coulter.

Sixty Years Ago

From the Musical Times of October, 1868:

CRYSTAL PALACE

On Wednesday, September 16, the annual concert of the Sol-fa Association was given with the utmost success. We have often alluded to the excellent progress of this Society; and have only to say that on the present occasion the choral music was given with even more than the usual amount of precision and refinement. An interesting test of the power of the choir to sing at first sight was exhibited to the audience, a sacred part-song, the composition of Mr. Henry Smart, having been brought forward, the seal of the copies broken in the orchestra, and the parts distributed at once to the singers. The performance of this composition was most praiseworthy; every note being taken almost as correctly as if the choir had been previously acquainted with the work.

An interesting incident occurred in All Saints' Church, at Hertford, lately, an account of which we extract from the Hertford Mercury. 'Sunday was the ninetieth birthday of Mr. Charles Bridgeman, and on that day he played the organ both at morning and evening service, and with his old skill. Everything changes now, and church music is not what it was. Some young people like the Psalms played to jig tunes, and musicians of the old classical school don't like it. Our venerable nonagenarian organist always was of that school, and those who love its music—sweet, solemn, reverent, and chaste—are still refreshed by performances which have lost but little of the grace and beauty which made Mr. Bridgeman eminent in years gone by. Mr. Bridgeman has now been organist of All Saints' Church for seventy-seven years—more than three-quarters of a century! We are glad to be able to say that his health is good. Long may he live to make us wonder more than we do now at powers so long preserved.'

---

Colchester.—The choir (consisting, at present, of eight men and twelve boys) at St. Leonard's Church, in this town—which has within its Borough seventeen churches—appeared at surplices on Sunday, August 30. This being the first time that a surpliced choir has appeared at Colchester since the Reformation, a very numerous congregation assembled at this beautiful old Church.

London Concerts

THE OLD VIC

The renovated Old Vic. was packed for the opening of the opera season on September 13, when a good all-round performance of 'Aida' was given. The principals were May Busby, Gladys Palmer, Henry Wendon, Frank Sale, and Joseph Farrington, and capital work was done by all of them. We have often heard less good operatic singing from stars in more august surroundings. The chorus sang better than it looked. Operatic choruses rarely achieve success in both respects; the Old Vic. body deserves praise for managing the more important (and difficult) side. The good level of efficiency shown by all concerned, and the obvious enjoyment of the crowded audience, indicate surely the solution of the opera problem. But is there a problem? At the time of writing the B.N.O.C. is enjoying a successful spell at Lewisham, and the Carl Rosa Company is starting a season at Hammersmith. At the Old Vic. from now on throughout the season, opera will be on tap for three times per week. Let us have national schemes by all means, if there is no other way of giving us the pick of singers and conductors from abroad. But English opera must be an affair of English singers using their own language, in performances so priced as to attract the average English public that is now accustomed to getting a good evening's entertainment at the cinema and variety house for anything from a shilling up to a half-crown. The Old Vic., the B.N.O.C., and the Carl Rosa Company are building up a public for opera, and steadily founding a school of English opera singers. Costly schemes with imported 'stars' and fashionable audiences have their value, but they do neither of these things, and so in the long run do not make for permanency.

What the Old Vic. is doing in this and kindred ways may be read in the Annual Report. For example, the operatic nights are so attractive that almost invariably standing room is at a premium. Here is the opera public being built up. During the last 'International' season at Covent Garden the Old Vic. opera company was represented by half a dozen of its principals, including three who took part in the 'Aida' performance noticed above—May Busby, Gladys Palmer, and Henry Wendon. This is evidence of the valuable work done in developing a school of English opera singers. And, finally, we read that the success of opera at the Old Vic. was mainly instrumental in bringing about the dramatic performances that have sent so many people to the Waterloo Road in search of the Shakespeare and similar dramatic fare that they sought vainly in the West End. The Report holds out hope that when the Sadler's Wells Theatre is opened as a sister establishment to the Old Vic., opera will be played continuously, turn and turn about, at both theatres. So London will get its permanent opera after all, not by grandiose projects, but as a result of the labours of Emma Cons, Lilian Baylis, and their co-workers, who saw that in building up an opera tradition, no less than in building an opera house, the first thing to be done is to lay the foundation 'well and truly.'

H. G.

THE B.N.O.C.

With so much opera going on in London it has been possible only to take samples. Those taken from the B.N.O.C. season at the Lewisham Hippodrome showed that the Company is steadily gaining strength. The violent fluctuations that used to take place in the standard of performance—a brilliant production one night, a mediocre show the next—have been smoothed out to a general level of all-round merit, which fluctuates only on the right side. Even when a performance threatens to be good enough and no more, like that of 'I Pagliacci' on the opening night, suddenly it will change to magic. It was Mr. Frank Mullings who applied the touch, when he sang 'On with the motley.' Not even Caruso made that bitter cry so moving, so intense in its music.

'Carmen,' on the following night, was a mirror to all the traditions. Miss Constance Willis went through her part to a turn. She seems to have all her impersonations well organized and card-indexed; a most reliable and valuable artist. This was a performance in which one respected every player. Then came 'The Mastersingers,' in which the blood flowed more warmly on both sides of the footlights. Mr. Robert Parker, as Sachs, grated slightly in Act 1, but mellowed in his garrulous progress and was delightful by the time he sat down to his night's work in Act 2. Mr. Walter Widdop had an off-night vocally, but his Walther was of the right quality. All Davids are pretty singers—so seems to be the rule—but Mr. Heddle Nash is surely the prettiest of all. The stage company was thoroughly likeable all the evening, and it was not entirely due to the thrall of the music.

Missing 'Butterfly,' 'Aida,' 'Valkyrie,' and 'Trovatore,' we come to 'Parsifal,' on September 17, for the first time in a London suburb. The staging did not rival Bayreuth, nor did the orchestra, but the performance easily outdid Bayreuth (according to the present writer's experience) in the essential part that belongs to the spirit. Mr. Walter Hyde, as Parsifal, did not yelp or swagger; he sang and acted as his two leit-motiven told him. The Kundry, Miss Gladys Ancrum, was not a mixture of Chrysothemis and Musetta. Mr. Norman Allin's voice made Gurnemanz welcome to talk as much as he liked. Mr. Robert Parker showed us the depth of the mental as well as the physical agony of Amfortas. Only the Klingsor, Mr. Bernard Ross, felt the want of apparatus. The performance was keyed to the right pitch in mind and feeling, and it must be accounted one of the best achievements of the company.

The first performance of 'Lohengrin' by the B.N.O.C., with Mr. Tudor Davies in the title-part, was dated too late for mention in this notice.

M.

---

PROMENADE CONCERT NOVELTIES

August 23 gave us the first performance of a work that will probably be heard again, and frequently—Zoltán Kodály's Suite, 'Hary Janos.' It consists of half a dozen movements arranged from a comic opera produced at Budapest in 1926. Hary Janos is not a mineral water, but a national character apparently compounded of Till Eulenspiegel and Baron Munchausen. The Suite is a very attractive affair, with scoring that can be described as fresh and original even in these days of brilliant orchestration. There is real beauty in the two quiet movements. The composer conducted, and was recalled many times. The Suite was finely played.

Godfrey Sampson's Symphony in D, which was conducted by the composer, on August 25, must be called an excellently made work, in spite of the suspicion of a sneer that lies behind the implication of respectable laboriousness. The sneer is, after all, but the refuge of the enterprising young people who may have original ideas but cannot do a sound job. Mr. Sampson may well ignore it, for, as this Symphony shows, he knows his craft. His deficiency is a lack of individual notions, his merit that he is without false æsthetic preconceptions. For the moment his music is so colourless as to reflect no personality, either (unfortunately) his own or (fortunately) any other composer's, with the exception, perhaps, of Elgar here and there. The significant point is that, though the Symphony has no positive merits over and above good workmanship, its deficiencies are all negative. There are no faults to discard, only virtues to acquire, and so Mr. Sampson's progress towards something really vital should be easy and rapid.

Leo Sowerby's Overture, 'Comes Autumn Time,' was heard on August 30. The composer is among the young hopes of America, and is a Chicago organist who recently won the American equivalent of the Prix de Rome. The Overture is an orchestral version of an organ piece. It is on the short side, direct in style, with a likeable warmth in harmony and scoring, and not without suggestions of both MacDowell and Franck.

One of the most interesting novelties of the month was Sibelius's symphonic poem 'Tapiola' (September 1). It takes its name from the Finnish deity Tapio, and its mood is indicated by a verse prefaced to the score which speaks of dusky forests wherein 'dwells the Forest's mighty god, and wood-sprites in the gloom weave magic secrets.' It is a strong, rugged work, thoroughly characteristic of the composer's later style, which gripped the attention from the start. A violent contrast to this austere, brooding, sombre music was supplied by the blatant strains of the 'Zampa' Overture, which was placed between the Sibelius work and the other novelty of the evening—Arthur Benjamin's Concertino for pianoforte and orchestra. In this an attempt has been made to utilise some of the elements of jazz. The pianoforte part was ably played by the composer, but the work, in spite of occasional sparkling bits, proved boring to, at any rate, one listener.

Edgar Bainton's 'Eclogue'—first performed last winter by Sir Dan Godfrey at one of his Bournemouth Symphony Concerts—received its first London performance on September 8. As its title implies, it is of a pastoral character. It is a musicianly work, mainly quiet in mood, and well deserves the further hearing necessary for a full appreciation of its undoubted merits.

Rubin Goldmark's 'Negro Rhapsody' (September 11) had the misfortune to be eclipsed by Elgar's glorious 'Falstaff.' Even without this contrast, however, it would have cut a poor enough figure. The negro spirituals used by the composer are brave tunes, but his treatment of them is timidly conventional. Dvorák, in his 'New World' Symphony and the 'Nigger Quartet,' long ago did all that Mr. Goldmark can do with this kind of material, and did it a good deal better. In fact, Dvorák made the tunes his own to the extent of making them sound positively Slavonic. In the 'Negro Rhapsody' one is always conscious that all the fat remains with the thematic material, and that the composer's share is a lean and hungry sort of affair.

Alfredo Casella's 'Partita,' for pianoforte and orchestra (September 13), is nothing if not exuberant. The nimble Italian composer is here, there, and everywhere with technical devices and flashes of invention. He so dazzles and bewilders his hearers with his wit and resourcefulness that at the end their critical faculty lies for the moment exhausted and without a word to say in protest against such an assault of brilliancy. But it cannot be killed outright by this sort of clever fencing, and once revived it is acutely conscious of having been unfairly stunned. One's resentment, however, limits itself, when all is said, to the objection that Casella does not deliver the genuine brand of originality which this work so persuasively advertises. There is no settled style. The suite form of the whole, the 17th-century mould of the opening Sinfonia, and the passacaglia pattern of the second movement contrast oddly with the random provenance of the musical idiom, where the harmonic clashes of the Italian madrigal of the Italian Renascence hobnob with those of modern polytonality and the cheek of Rossini is by the jowl of Stravinsky. But at any rate the work is provoking, whether to wrath or enjoyment does not greatly matter, and one certainly wants to hear it again. The pianoforte part could hardly be better played than by the masterly Egon Petri.

Norman O'Neill's 'Three Shakespearean Sketches' (September 15) are the work of an adept at theatre music. Nothing could be more tactfully adjusted to audiences not predominantly musical, and it is therefore inevitable that in the concert-room these pieces must lack impressiveness in proportion to their fitness to the original purpose. The three movements are extracted from the incidental music written for David Belasco's production of 'The Merchant of Venice' at New York six years ago. The first, a 'Rhapsody' descriptive of Shylock, draws the portrait in colours and contours too soft to make a good likeness; indeed, without the quotation in the programme it would not have been recognisable. The 'Nocturne' that foreshadows the love scene between Jessica and Lorenzo has lyrical beauty and an appropriateness that, although a little obvious owing to the use of conventional devices, serves its purpose. Best of all is the final 'Masquerade,' a piece of English music in the German (Sir Edward) tradition, but with a good deal that is different and very neatly contrived. XXX.

---

Mr. Gordon Bryan announces a series of three chamber concerts of unusual interest. On October 19, at 8.15, there will be a Ravel programme, in which the composer will take part, accompanying a group of songs and being pianist in a new work for voice, pianoforte, flute, and violoncello. On October 26 the scheme will be confined to pianoforte music for solo, duet, and two pianofortes (four, six, and eight hands), with a strong team of players. On November 2 there will be chamber music for wind and pianoforte (Mozart, Brahms, Poulenc, Beethoven, &c.), played by Léon Goossens, Richard Newton, F. J. Thurston, Aubrey Brain, and Gordon Bryan.

The Coming Season

First List

ORCHESTRAL CONCERTS IN LONDON

(For provincial orchestral programmes see 'Music in the Provinces')

London Symphony Orchestra.—Sir Thomas Beecham conducts the first of ten concerts on October 15, when the programme will include a Mozart Symphony and Violin Concerto (M. Szigeti) and Delius's 'North Country Sketches.' Albert Coates conducts a Wagner concert on October 29. Subsequent dates and conductors are November 12, Sir Thomas Beecham (Mozart's 'Requiem' and Liszt's thirteenth Psalm, with the Manchester Beecham Opera Choir); November 26, Emile Cooper; December 10, Casals; January 21, John Barbirolli; February 11 ('Ein Heldenleben') and March 11, Abendroth; March 25 and April 8 ('Symphonie Fantastique'), Weingartner.

B.B.C. Symphony Concerts.—Twelve concerts are to be given at Queen's Hall, with ten different conductors. On October 12 Sir Thomas Beecham will conduct Schumann's third Symphony, Delius's 'Brigg Fair,' Lord Berners's 'Fugue,' and his own arrangement of a Handel Ballet, 'The gods go a-begging.' On October 26 Szigeti will give the first performance in England of Casella's Violin Concerto, and Sir Henry Wood will conduct. Five of the later concerts will be choral.

AMATEUR ORCHESTRAS

The Amateur Orchestra of London (Mr. Wynn Reeves).—The season's work includes four Symphonies: Lalo's in G minor, Brahms's third, Glazounov's sixth, and Rachmaninov's second. Two concerts are to be given at Kingsway Hall, on January 14 and April 15. At the first rehearsal (Kingsway Hall Lecture Room, October 9, at 5.30) Mr. Reeves hopes to enrol new violin players and 'cellists.

Barclay's Bank Musical Society (Mr. Herbert W. Pierce and Mr. D. Marblacy Jones).—Concerts at Queen's Hall on December 12 and March 20. The orchestral works include Delius's Pianoforte Concerto and the Overtures to 'The Mastersingers,' 'The Ruler of the Spirits,' 'The Wasps,' and 'Die Fledermaus.'

The Strolling Players Amateur Orchestral Society (Mr. Joseph Ivimey).—The suggested programmes include: (November 29) O'Neill's 'Festal Overture' and 'Two Shakespearean Sketches,' conducted by the composer, and Schubert's Symphony in C; (February 14) a new 'Overture for a Comedy,' by Norman Demuth, Dvorák's Symphonic Variations, and pieces from Mackenzie's 'Colomba'; (April 25) Brahms's 'Academic Festival Overture' and the 'Jupiter' Symphony. The concerts are held at Queen's Hall.

CHORAL CONCERTS

LONDON AND DISTRICT

Alexandra Choral and Orchestral Society (Mr. Allen Gill).—'Hiawatha'; 'Acis and Galatea'; 'The Dream of Gerontius'; concert version of 'Carmen.' On February 12 Mr. Gill will give a lecture on Elgar, with choral and orchestral examples.

Bach Choir, The (Dr. Adrian Boult).—Bach's Magnificat; 'Psalmus Hungaricus' (Kodály); 'The Fire Rider' (Wolf); Schubert's Mass in A flat; Vaughan Williams's Mass in G minor.

Barclay's Bank Musical Society (Mr. Herbert W. Pierce and Mr. D. Marblacy Jones).—'Parcy Reed' (MacCunn); Five Mystical Songs (Vaughan Williams); 'O walk the Heavenly Way' (Bach); glees, part-songs, &c.

Battersea and Wandsworth Choral Union (Mr. F. Wilment Bates).—'The Pied Piper of Hamelin' (Parry); 'Look at the Clock' (Bath).

B.B.C. National Chorus.—November 23, a new choral work on 'The Pilgrim's Progress' by Granville Bantock, conducted by the composer; February 1, 'The Damnation of Faust,' conducted by Sir Hamilton Harty; March 1, 'Blest Pair of Sirens,' conducted by Sir Landon Ronald, and 'The Hillside' (Fogg), conducted by the composer; March 29, Verdi's 'Requiem,' conducted by Gino Marinuzzi; April 12, Mahler's eighth Symphony, conducted by Sir Henry Wood.

Bermondsey Settlement (Choral Section) (Mr. W. H. Bullock).—Carols and miscellaneous; 'The Count of Como' (W. H. Bullock).

Bishopsgate Institute Choral Society.—'The Creation'; Mozart's 'Requiem.'

Bromley Choral Society (Mr. Frederic Fertel).—'Tom Jones'; 'Solomon'; Brahms's 'Requiem.'

Central London Choral and Orchestral Society (Mr. David J. Thomas).—'Les Cloches de Corneville'; 'Tales of Hoffmann' (five performances, in different halls); 'The Redemption.'

City of London Choral Union (Dr. Harold Darke).—Verdi's 'Requiem.'

Croydon Philharmonic Society (Mr. Alan J. Kirby).—'Merrie England'; shanties, madrigals, and part-songs; 'The Dream of Gerontius.'

Dartford Choral Society (Mr. Ernest Leeds).—'A Tale of Old Japan'; 'Judas Maccabæus.'

'Destra' Choir, The (Mr. W. S. Lewis).—'The Messiah'; 'Christmas' Oratorio.

Dulwich Philharmonic Society (Mr. Leslie Regan).—'Ode to St. Cecilia's Day' (Handel); 'A Princess of Kensington' (German); 'The Pied Piper of Hamelin' (Parry); 'The Mystic Trumpeter' (Harty); 'St. Matthew' Passion.

Ealing Choral and Orchestral Society (Mr. Herbert Dawson).—'The Golden Legend'; 'Judas Maccabæus.'

Ealing Philharmonic Society (Mr. Victor Williams).—'The Gate of Life' (Leoni); 'Blest Pair of Sirens'; 'Belshazzar'; 'The Pied Piper of Hamelin' (Parry).

East Grinstead Choral Society (Rev. G. Farrant).—'King Olaf.'

Eltham Choral Society (Mr. Cyril V. Jenkin).—'Hiawatha.'

Grafton Philharmonic Society, Clapham (Mr. W. C. Anscombe).—'Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast'; part-songs and madrigals; 'Merrie England'; 'St. Matthew' Passion.

Grays (Essex) and District Choral and Musical Society (Mr. W. H. Fraser).—'Elijah'; 'Merrie England.'

Harold Brooke Choir, The (Mr. Harold Brooke).—'Belshazzar.'

Harrow and Greenhill Choral Society (Mr. F. W. Belchamber).—'The Song of Hiawatha.'

Hither Green Choral and Orchestral Society (Mr. Ernest Dumayne).—'Cavalleria Rusticana'; 'Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast'; 'Blest Pair of Sirens'; 'St. Paul'; 'The Rebel Maid.'

Insurance Musical Festival Society (Mr. Frank Idle).—'The Rebel Maid.'

Islington Choral Society (Mr. Ronald Chamberlain).—'The Banner of St. George'; 'Hymn to Providence' (Cundell); 'Elijah'; 'The Rebel Maid.'

L.N.E.R. Choral Society (Col. W. Johnson Galloway).—Carols, &c., and 'Hail, gladdening Light' (Gounod), arranged for male voices.

London Choral Society, The (Mr. Arthur Fagge).—'Jesu, Priceless Treasure'; 'The Blessed Damozel' (Julius Harrison, for female voices); Smyth's Mass in D; 'Songs of the Fleet'; 'King Robert of Sicily' (H. R. Hulbert); 'A Masque of the Sea' (Leighton Lucas); 'News from Whydah.'

Penge and District Choral Society (Mr. Alfred B. Choat).—'A Princess of Kensington'; 'The Power of Sound' (Somervell); 'Caractacus.'

People's Palace Choral and Orchestral Societies (Mr. Frank Idle).—'Samson'; 'The Dream of Jubal'; 'A Tale of Old Japan'; 'The Kingdom'; 'The Messiah'; 'Merrie England.'

Philharmonic Choir, The (Mr. C. Kennedy Scott).—March 26, Schubert's Mass in E flat; Brahms's Two Motets, Op. 74; 'The Song of Destiny.' May 30, 'The Hymn of Jesus'; 'Appalachia'; 'Hecuba's Lament' (Holst); 'Walsinghame' (Bax, first performance); 'News from Whydah' (Balfour Gardiner). (For the Royal Philharmonic Society) November 15, Schubert's Mass in E flat, conducted by Sir Hamilton Harty; December 6, 'Hercules,' conducted by Sir Thomas Beecham.

Plumstead Central Hall Choir and Orchestral Society (Mr. W. Wilson).—'Cavalleria Rusticana'; 'Elijah'; 'The Song of Hiawatha'; 'The Messiah.'

Purley Choral Union (Mr. Harold Macpherson).—'The Lord is my Shepherd' (Schubert); 'Coffee Cantata'; 'Peasant Cantata'; 'A Tale of Old Japan.'

St. Michael's (Cornhill) Singers (Dr. Harold Darke).—November 12: 'For the Fallen'; Mozart's 'Requiem'; 'As the leaves fall' (Darke); 'Peace' (Parry). November 13: 'O sing unto the Lord' (Purcell); Schubert's Mass in A flat; 'Watch ye, pray ye' (Bach). November 14: a Bach programme. November 15: 'The Messiah.'

Seven Kings Choral Society (Mr. G. B. Linch).—'Merrie England.'

South-West Choral Society (Mr. Frank Odell).—'The Creation'; 'The Messiah'; 'Tom Jones.'

Tulse Hill: Holy Trinity Choral Society (Mr. Henry F. Hall).—Brahms's 'Requiem'; 'St. Matthew' Passion.

Wanstead Choral and Orchestral Society (Mr. Leslie Regan).—'Dido and Æneas'; Bach's Mass in B minor.

Welwyn Garden City Music Society (Miss Alice Hare).—'John Gilpin'; 'King Olaf'; part-songs; Pergolesi's 'Stabat Mater.'

West London Choral Union (Mr. W. S. Lewis).—'A Tale of Old Japan'; 'The Gate of Life' (Leoni).

West Middlesex Musical Society (Mr. C. Stanley Smallman).—'Hiawatha,' Parts 1 and 2; 'The Banner of St. George'; Part 1 of 'Semele.'

Westminster Choral Society (Mr. Vincent Thomas).—'The Messiah'; 'Jesu, Priceless Treasure'; Elgar's Forty-eighth Psalm; folk-song arrangements by Vaughan Williams; 'King Olaf.'

Willesden Green and Cricklewood Choral Society (Mr. F. W. Belchamber).—Concert edition of 'Carmen'; Choral Fantasy on 'The Mastersingers'; 'King Olaf.'

Wimbledon Church Choral Society (Mr. F. Wilment Bates).—'Merrie England.'

---

PROVINCIAL

Bedford Choral Society (Mr. A. F. Parris).—'The Messiah'; 'Belshazzar.'

Bedford Musical Society (Mr. H. J. Colson).—'The Music-Makers'; Brahms's 'Requiem.'

Bexhill Choral Society (Mr. G. Christian).—'The Messiah'; 'The Banner of St. George'; 'The Golden Legend.'

Birmingham Choral and Orchestral Union (Mr. Joseph H. Adams).—'The Messiah'; 'Tom Jones'; 'Aida'; 'Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast'; 'From the Bavarian Highlands'; 'Bon-bon' Suite.

Birmingham: The City of Birmingham Choir (Mr. G. D. Cunningham).—'Israel in Egypt'; Elizabethan madrigals; 'Sing ye to the Lord' (Bach); 'Golden Journey to Samarkand' (Bantock); Verdi's 'Requiem'; Brahms's 'Alto Rhapsody.'

Bolton Choral Union (Mr. T. Booth).—'Aida'; 'The Messiah'; 'Acis and Galatea'; selection from 'Judith.'

Bournemouth Municipal Choir (Sir Dan Godfrey; chorus-master, Mr. Hadley Watkins).—'A Tale of Old Japan'; 'The Music-Makers'; 'The Messiah'; a Bach Passion ('St. Matthew' or 'St. John').

Bradford Festival Choral Society.—'Liebeslieder'; Boughton's Choral Variations on Folk-Songs; Choral Hymns from the 'Rig Veda'; 'Elijah'; 'The Song of Hiawatha.'

Bristol Choral Society (Sir Thomas Beecham).—Ethel Smyth's Mass in D; 'A Tale of Old Japan'; 'The Messiah'; Choral Symphony (Beethoven); 'The Song of Destiny'; Bach's Mass in B minor.

Bristol Philharmonic Society (Mr. Arnold Barter).—'A Sea Symphony'; 'Come, Redeemer' (Bach); 'The Coming of Christ' (Holst); 'Stabat Mater' (Palestrina); 'A Pageant of Human Life' (Bantock); 'The Apostles.'

Broadstairs and St. Peter's Choral and Orchestral Society (Mr. F. E. Fisher).—'My soul is athirst for Thee' (Bach); 'The Wedding of Shon Maclean.'

Burnley Municipal Choir (Mr. D. Duxbury, chorus-master).—Dvorák's 'Stabat Mater'; 'The Messiah'; 'The Dream of Gerontius.'

Clare (Suffolk) Choral Society.—'King Olaf.'

Colchester Musical Society (Mr. W. F. Kingdon).—'King Olaf'; 'Ode to St. Cecilia's Day' (Parry); 'A Ballad of Dundee' (Wood).

Crewe Philharmonic Society (Mr. R. A. Taylor).—'The Messiah.'

Deal Choral Society.—'Tom Jones.'

Derby Choral Union (Sir Henry Coward).—'A Sea Symphony'; 'The Mystic Trumpeter'; 'The Dream of Gerontius.'

Derby Co-operative Choral Society (Mr. F. J. Stevenson).—'From the Bavarian Highlands'; 'A Tale of Old Japan.'

Dundee Amateur Choral Union (Mr. C. C. M. Cowe).—'Acis and Galatea'; 'A Tale of Old Japan.'

Dunfermline: Viewfield Baptist Church Choral Society (Mr. A. B. Sheddon).—'Israel in Egypt.'

East Herts Musical Society (Mr. W. J. Comley).—'King Olaf'; 'St. Matthew' Passion.

Glasgow Choral and Orchestral Union (Mr. Wilfred Senior).—'Elijah'; 'The Messiah'; 'A Hungarian Psalm' (Kodály); 'Sea Drift' (Delius); 'A Sea Symphony.'

Halifax Choral Society (Dr. A. C. Tysoe).—'The Damnation of Faust'; 'The Messiah'; 'Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast.'

Holme Valley Male-Voice Choir (Mr. Irving Silverwood).—On November 24, 'Die Tageszeitung' (Richard Strauss), for the first time in England; 'Alto Rhapsody'; Hymns from the 'Rig Veda'; 'A Dirge for Two Veterans'; 'A Yarn of Loch Achrae' (Cyril Jenkins).

Holmfirth Choral Society.—'The Messiah'; concert version of 'Carmen.'

Huddersfield Choral Society (Sir Henry Coward).—'The Dream of Gerontius'; 'The Mystic Trumpeter'; 'The Messiah'; selections from 'Israel in Egypt'; 'Ode to the North-East Wind.'

Kirkcaldy Choral Union (Mr. C. C. M. Cowe).—'King Olaf'; 'The Song of Destiny.'

Leeds Choral Union (Sir Henry Coward).—'Samson and Delilah'; 'The Messiah'; 'A Sea Symphony'; Five Mystical Songs and Five English Folk-Songs (Vaughan Williams); 'King Saul.'

Leeds New Choral Society (Mr. H. Bardgett).—'Christmas Oratorio'; 'Acis and Galatea'; 'The Pied Piper of Hamelin'; 'The Three Jovial Huntsmen' (Walford Davies).

Leeds Philharmonic Society (Dr. E. C. Bairstow).—'Semele'; 'The Messiah'; 'Sancta Civitas'; 'The Song of Destiny'; Choral Hymns from the 'Rig Veda.'

Lincoln Musical Society (Dr. G. J. Bennett).—'Alexander's Feast'; 'In Honour of the City' (Dyson).

Liverpool Philharmonic Society (Sir Henry Wood).—First Act of 'Lohengrin'; 'Song of the Rhine Maidens,' from 'Götterdämmerung'; 'Solomon.'

Luton Choral Society (Mr. F. Gostelow).—'The Burden of Babylon' (Bantock), conducted by the composer; 'Merrie England.'

Lynn Musical Society (Mr. A. Heath).—'Acis and Galatea'; 'St. Matthew' Passion.

Maidstone Choral Union and Rochester Choral Society (Mr. F. Wilson Parish).—Schubert concert; 'Sing ye to the Lord' (Bach); 'Blest Pair of Sirens'; Evening Hymn (Balfour Gardiner); 'I was glad' (Parry).

Manchester: The Hallé Choir (Sir Hamilton Harty).—'The Trojans at Carthage' (Berlioz); 'The Messiah'; 'Sing ye to the Lord'; 'The Music-Makers'; 'Mater Ora Filium'; 'Sea-Drift' (Delius); 'Now let the grace'; 'The Flying Dutchman.'

Northampton Musical Society (Mr. C. J. King).—'Acis and Galatea'; selection from Gounod's 'Faust.'

Northwich Philharmonic Society (Mr. J. Patterson Shaw).—'Les Cloches de Corneville'; 'Athalie.'

Nottingham Sacred Harmonic Society (Mr. Allen Gill).—'Acis and Galatea'; 'The Song of Destiny'; 'The Song of Miriam'; 'The Messiah'; 'Sea Drift' (Delius); 'The Mystic Trumpeter'; 'Elijah.'

Paisley Choral Union (Mr. W. Rigby).—'Spring' (from 'The Seasons'); concert selection from 'Faust'; 'The Golden Legend.'

Portsmouth North End Choral Society (Mr. Ernest Birch).—'The Song of Hiawatha'; 'St. Paul.'

Potteries Choral Society (Mr. Carl Oliver).—'The Last Post' (Stanford); 'Men of England' (Ketèlbey); 'For the Fallen.

Ramsgate Choral Society.—'Judas Maccabæus.'

Ravensknowle Vocal Union (Mr. Ernest Cooper).—'Songs of the Fleet'; selection from 'The Mastersingers'; 'The Creation'; 'Tom Jones.'

St. Albans Bach Choir.—Brahms's 'Requiem'; 'Sleepers, wake.'

Sittingbourne and District Musical Society (Mr. W. J. Keech).—'The Yeomen of the Guard'; 'The Rebel Maid'; 'Caractacus'; 'Merrie England.'

South Shields Harmonic Society.—'The Messiah'; 'The Song of Miriam'; 'Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast.'

Stirling Choral Society.—'The Messiah'; 'Judas Maccabæus.'

Stockport Vocal Union (Dr. T. Keighley).—Madrigals and part-songs; 'The Messiah'; 'I Pagliacci.'

Sunderland Philharmonic Society (Mr. R. F. Jarman).—Schubert Centenary concert; unaccompanied part-songs; 'Samson.'

Swansea: Hebron Church Choral Society (Mr. W. H. Thomas).—Cherubini's 'Requiem Mass' in C minor; 'Hiawatha's Departure.'

Warrington Musical Society (Mr. Frank H. Crossley).—'Tales of Hoffmann'; 'Les Cloches de Corneville.'

Weston-super-Mare Choral Society (Mr. Seymour Dossor).—'The Messiah'; 'A Tale of Old Japan'; 'From the Bavarian Highlands.'

Windsor and Eton Choral Society (Rev. B. C. S. Everett).—Part 1 of 'Semele'; 'Lochinvar'; First group of Choral Hymns from 'Rig Veda'; 'Towards the Unknown Region'; Two Princess Songs (Holst).

Wolverton Science and Art Institute and District Choral Society (Mr. C. Kenneth Garratt).—'The Golden Legend'; 'Hear my prayer.'

Yeovil Choral Society (Mr. F. G. Risdon).—'The Wedding of Shon Maclean'; 'The Creation.'

IRELAND

Dublin: Culwick Choral Society (Miss Florence Culwick).—'A Cycle of the Sea' (Gerrard Williams); 'Songs of the Open Air' (Dear); Meyerbeer's ninety-first Psalm; 'Vanity of Vanities.'

Dublin Philharmonic Society (Col. Fritz Braze and Mr. Turner Huggard).—Schubert's Mass in B flat; 'The Messiah'; Brahms's 'Requiem.'

Sligo Musical Society (Mr. Mark Franklin).—'Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast'; 'O God, when Thou appearest' (Mozart).

Music in Wales

Aberystwyth.—The Mountain Ash Male-Voice Choir, newly returned from a tour of the United States and Canada, gave concerts in the University College Hall on September 2 and 3. Taken as a whole the programme was not worthy either of the attainments of this fine body of singers or of the present stage of musical intelligence in the country.

Cardiff.—Some concern is felt owing to the fact that the free public concerts given in the National Museum in Cathays Park have been less well attended than they deserve to be. The National Orchestra of Wales has achieved a high standard, and should receive the encouragement of attendance in large numbers. Those who do go are obviously appreciative, and are well rewarded. The lunch-hour concerts are without doubt a boon to workers in the neighbourhood.

Harlech.—A successful summer school in music took place at Coleg Harlech, between August 18 and 28. The school was directed by Sir Walford Davies, under the auspices of the National Council of Music, the students being mainly music teachers in schools and evening classes, and coming from all parts of England and Wales, with two visitors from Canada. Coleg Harlech exists to provide short courses in technical and general education for adult workers of all kinds. It owes much to the enthusiastic support and influence of the late Lord Haldane.

THE SIENA FESTIVAL OF MODERN MUSIC

Siena has treated us royally. In many ways it is the most delightful of the places yet chosen for the annual Festival of the International Society for Contemporary Music, and every one enjoyed the week with its hospitality, its sight-seeing, and its occasional public outbursts of uncontrolled dislike. The Festival proper consisted of three chamber concerts (at the beautiful Palazzo Chigi Saracini), a morning session for Czecho-Slovakian experiments, and full performances of Stravinsky's 'Les Noces' and Walton's 'Façade.' Extra to these, however, were the two concerts of the Augusteo Orchestra from Rome under Bernardino Molinari, and a concert of unaccompanied polyphonic music under Mgr. Casimiri.

To the English present (more in number than usual) it was both disappointing and gratifying that no less than five of the modern works had already been played in London, not including 'Façade,' to which considerable additions had been made. Of these works let us leave 'Les Noces,' competently performed under Alfredo Casella, to the Stravinsky controversialists. The Ravel Violin Sonata really had little chance from its lifeless performance by Rudolph Kolisch and Jozefo Rosanska, but it does not wear well. I find it empty and thin; the first movement has charm, but the rest, especially the 'Blues' (dragged in for some unaccountable reason), places it among Ravel's failures. The certainty of touch in de Falla's Concerto for harpsichord on the other hand showed it as one of the finest things at the Festival. Though the composer played with great spirit, the Concerto would have sounded better still under a conductor; we missed some of its hard and brittle quality. A trifle too picturesque in its method, this work is without doubt as good as anything de Falla has written.

The obvious sincerity of Frank Bridge's Quartet No. 3 won it praise in certain unexpected quarters. The performance was as good as one could wish, and the Brosa Quartet distinguished itself as the finest ensemble present, both by this and by the performance of Bloch's Quintet, which caused a positive ovation. Undoubtedly the latter is a work of the first class, and stands with the de Falla among the best music of the week.

Unfortunately, the works contributed by Italian composers were the least important of all. Vincenzo Tommasini's Quartet No. 2 seems hardly to find a place among modern music. The harmonic and structural bases are old-fashioned, and the discords merely added. Over its mechanical development and its straining sweetnesses one sees the shadow of Franck. Alfano's Sonata for 'cello and pianoforte (played by Antonio Tusa as well as his short notice of two days would allow) was even less to my taste. It was, indeed, the only thing of its kind at the Festival; but that kind, based upon 'themes' and not ideas, upon enharmonic changes, soaring tunes over arpeggio accompaniments, sentimental recapitulations, luscious ninths and thirteenths and 6-4 chords, and all the hysterical paraphernalia—that kind is so outworn and so unsympathetic to-day that one wonders why anyone goes on writing like that. The work did not ring true.

The first concert contained also works by Karel Haba (Czech), Paul Hindemith (German), and Alexander Zemlinsky (Viennese, but lately from Prague). The first, a Flute and Pianoforte Sonata, undoubtedly has great merit. It is a work of rich colouring and rather full emotion, though it could not be called 'romantic.' I failed to see the point of a curiously obvious tune for the pianoforte in the first movement, and some of the passage work in the third had too little substance; but there is real sense of melody here and also a fine conception in terms of pure sound. A significant work, which showed too clearly the thinness of the musical conception behind the quarter-tonal experiments of the brother, Alois Haba.

The Hindemith was a disappointment. We have heard so much music of this sort from him now that one expects a development, an enriching of his musical mind and experience, which never comes. This 'Klaviermusik' (in ten parts) is too long; there is no instinct for cutting down or self-criticism here, and the music therefore lacks real hard thought. Some of the sounds are exciting to hear. But in the end one realises its facility and superficiality; one knows it is but second-hand Schumann. I once hoped for more from Hindemith.

The first movement of the Zemlinsky Quartet was to me just rather obvious 'modern music,' but the Theme and Variations told a quite different story. Excellent formally, it showed restraint and yet a fullness of feeling that were most welcome. The last movement was obviously the result of profound emotion, but musically I found it overlong and too ebullient. An interesting, but not altogether successful, composition.

Heinz Tiessen's Duo for violin and pianoforte (German) was ruined by an intrusive bell from near by; the second movement is long and difficult, with an unexpectedly romantic tune as second subject. I think a second hearing would increase one's respect for the work. Robert Blun (Swiss) suffers from the influence of Busoni; he is young, and has not found himself yet. His 'Music for Eight Instruments' is quite insignificant, though there is a faint promise of better things to come.

Anton von Webern's tentative and equivocal statements caused an uproar, almost a fight, among the Italian ranks. One cannot understand how these most remote and delicate sounds should cause shouts and threats. Without actually liking this music, I admire it more than the inane fluency of much modern composition. This Trio is like music seen through frosted glass.

The last concert gave us an interesting work by Bohuslav Martinu (Czech), but omitted the Prokofiev. I thought the studied simplicity of the opening failed; the second movement was excited and forceful, but rather dull despite its pace. The Andante introduced a new and most interesting idiom, sombre and passionate and rhapsodic, and quite removed from the commonplaces of the earlier music. The Finale slipped back a little, but ended very well. This work has much excellent music in it, and I look forward to other works by Martinu.

There remain the 'voice-band' from Prague, and 'Façade.' The former is an experiment in quasi-musical recitation, which uses the spoken voice over drums and pianoforte or in unaccompanied spoken harmonies to announce and not sing poems. It has a philosophical justification, it seems to me, when the words are said without repetition; the introduction of a spoken 'figure' damns it. This most novel and exciting entertainment, the invention of E. F. Burian, cannot be imagined without actually hearing it. I hope London will welcome it soon. It was an enormous success at Siena.

'Façade' was given twice, and after some opposition (mostly Italian) met with the success it deserves. As a form of entertainment it cannot be repeated. It suits Miss Edith Sitwell's poems uniquely, and one was, therefore, surprised (and pleased) that so many of those who could not have understood one word enjoyed it. That speaks well for the music, which, quite apart from its vigour and gaiety, its satire and its high spirits, succeeds largely by its skill. 'Country Dance,' for example, is a delightful Trio for flute, clarinet, and 'cello, whose counterpoint would satisfy the most academic. The new numbers are particularly effective. As given at Siena the entertainment was a little long, and could have done with some perfecting of its details. But there is no doubt it caused a sensation, and will be given at more than one Continental capital.

No account of this Festival would be complete without a word of thanks to the town, to those who lent their beautiful buildings and gave their pleasant parties, and to those who organized this jolly week for us. May we one day repay them by bringing the Festival to England!

Hubert J. Foss.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

The Michaelmas term and the Academic year began on Monday, September 17, and it is satisfactory to record that the number of students is well up to the average, which gyrates round about the thousand mark. Verdi's 'Requiem' will be performed at Queen's Hall on November 20, under the conductorship of Sir Henry Wood, and the rehearsals for this important concert are in full swing. The usual fortnightly concerts will be held in the Duke's Hall, the first of the series taking place on Saturday, October 6.

Baron Profumo is offering a prize of a hundred guineas in celebration of the visit of Dohnányi and the Budapest Philharmonic Orchestra to the Academy under the auspices of the R.A.M. Club. The prize is for the composition of an orchestral piece, open to students and members of the Club. The adjudicator will be Dohnányi, and further details will be announced in due course.

F.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC

The Christmas term opened on September 17, with its usual accompaniment of cheerfulness and bustle, and the opening day was made the more interesting by an unusually happy address given by the Director, Sir Hugh Allen, to the students in the Concert Hall. The address dealt with the advantages and disadvantages of present times as compared with the stately spacious Victorian period, and though the case for both was stated impartially, one could not help feeling that the Director was somewhat exercised in his mind as to whether the greatest speed made for the greatest happiness of the greatest number.

The term being yet young it is not possible to record much in the way of achievement, but arrangements are already in hand for a large number of concerts and recitals in the Concert Hall, while as to the Opera Theatre, performances of 'Louise' will be given in October, and a new opera by Dr. Vaughan Williams, on the subject of Falstaff, is already in active preparation.

The College is generally privileged to have some share in the preparations for the principal provincial musical festivals, and this year has been unusually fortunate, for the London rehearsals of the Gloucester Festival and the Leeds Musical Festival were held in the Concert Hall, and it is gratifying to record that Mr. Herbert Sumsion, the new organist of Gloucester Cathedral, earned high praise for his achievement as conductor-in-chief, and that Sir Hugh Allen is sharing with Sir Thomas Beecham the duties of conducting the great Leeds Festival.

HASLEMERE FESTIVAL OF CHAMBER MUSIC

By E. van der Straeten

This year's Festival was held from August 20 to September 1, and comprised twelve concerts apart from the unofficial morning performances. There has been much controversy with regard to the technical quality of the performances, which has been severely censured by some. The highest perfection, of course, lies in a combination of faultless technique and a clear understanding of the musical idea and the power to convey this to the listener. Where both together cannot be obtained, the latter is preferable to the former, and as Mr. Dolmetsch distinctly said that his object is to give a representation of the old 'Hausmusik' (music in the home), in this he has been fully successful. Most important of all, however, he has again made us acquainted with some beautiful old works which cannot be heard anywhere else, and many of them were performed in a manner which reached a high standard of virtuosity. Admirable were all Mr. Rudolph Dolmetsch's harpsichord and gamba performances, Mrs. Dolmetsch's beautiful tone and rendering in gamba pieces, and Mr. A. Dolmetsch's clavichord- and Mr. Miles Tomalin's recorder-playing; and among the vocalists Messrs. Frank Phillips and Tom Goodey and Miss Annis Gray proved themselves to be artists of a high order. Very interesting was the revival, in the music for the dances, of the predecessor of the oboe, the shawm (which has a rough and screaming tone like the chanter of a bagpipe), and the serpent, the bass of the cornet family, which survived all the other members until it was superseded by the ophicleide about the middle of last century. Although it was very interesting to hear the tone of these oft-mentioned instruments, their disappearance cannot be much regretted. The pochette, or dancing-master's fiddle, was also used in the dances, and the power of tone of so small an instrument was quite surprising.

As on former occasions, four of the concerts were reserved for Old English music, including two for concerted music for viols and one for compositions by Purcell; two concerts were devoted to music by Bach, one each to Spanish and French, Italian, French, and Italian and German music; and two were composed of ancient dances interspersed by vocal and instrumental pieces.

Alfonso Ferrabosco's grand and solemn 'Four-Note Pavan' for four viols opened the Festival, and was played again at the end of the eleventh concert as a worthy conclusion of the instrumental programmes. There were some works for viols which we heard for the first time at these Festivals, viz.: Preludium and Fantasy (William Byrd) for five viols; Fantasy for three viols by Giov. Coperario (John Cooper); Suite for four viols, No. 1 in D major, by Matthew Locke; two Fantasies, 'Il Lamento' and 'La Ginandola,' by Thomas Morley, for two treble viols; four pieces for two lyra viols by A. Ferrabosco and William Corkine; a pretty Cuckoo song for soprano, four viols, and recorder, by Richard Nicholson (circa 1600); some popular 15th- and 16th-century tunes for the lute; two Fantasies for the harpsichord, by Orlando Gibbons; and a Suite for two violins, gamba, and harpsichord, by Christopher Simpson. The latter is compiled from 'Twenty-one Pieces for two trebles and bass,' which I take to mean two treble and one bass viol, as I often had these very pretty pieces performed on viols at my concerts for ancient music many years ago; while admitting that they sound quite well on the violins, I still think that they were intended for, and sound better on, viols.

The Spanish-French concert brought, apart from repetitions from former Festivals, a fine Fantasy for five viols, by Cabeçon; 'Gavotte et six Doubles' for harpsichord, by Rameau; Musette for two gambas and harpsichord, by De Caix d'Hervelois; and the brilliant, very difficult, and effective 'Jupiter' for gamba, by Forqueray. The outstanding novelties of the Italian concert were the fine 'Concerto Grosso' in F minor, by Alessandro Scarlatti, which shows originality of thought as well as mastery of form and instrumentation; two harpsichord pieces by Giovanni Picchi; a Madrigal for a voice and viol by Sylvestro Ganassi, author of the 'Regola Rubertina'; and a 'Pass' e mezzo' (with voices) and 'Saltarello' for two violins, viola, tenor, and violoncello, by Horatio Vecchi—all very fine compositions, especially the latter.

The most interesting features of the two Bach concerts were the performance of the Arioso for bass, 'Betrachte meine Seele,' the Aria, 'Erwäge, erwäge,' for tenor, both with two viole d'amore, lute, and gamba, and the contralto Aria, 'Es ist vollbracht,' with gamba obbligato from the 'St. John' Passion. It was perhaps the first occasion on which this supremely beautiful music has been heard with the most effective original accompaniment since Bach's time. The cantata for bass, 'Amore traditore,' is another fine work heard for the first time at these concerts.

The other works, though always welcome, had been heard before, and need therefore not be discussed here. I cannot refrain from recording, however, Mr. A. Dolmetsch's exquisite performance of the Chromatic Fantasia which, perhaps, he never played better than on this occasion; yet I still hold that this work calls for ampler means of expression than the clavichord can give. In the French concert, Marin Marais figured largely in various charming works for viols, which showed, apart from his charming melodious invention, his astoundingly advanced harmonies, the wealth and daring of which manifest themselves in 'Le Labyrinthe' and in the beautiful and very chromatic Caprice for three gambas. The concert opened with Couperin's fine 'Concert Royal' in A, and on the recorders were played some delightful pieces by the same composer, which we had heard before. New, however, was a quaint and pretty 15th-century song with lute and viol.

The Purcell concert brought chiefly a welcome repetition of works heard at the previous Festivals, but also an interesting Chaconne, 'Two in one upon a Ground,' for three recorders (the two upper parts in canon upon a basso ostinato), which was exceedingly well played and had to be repeated. The songs, 'The Airy Violin,' for contralto, and 'Ye gentle spirits of the air,' for soprano, which Miss Cécile Dolmetsch had to repeat, both proved a great success. In the Italian and German concert we heard excellent performances of Handel's Concerto Grosso in G minor, and Chaconne for harpsichord in G major, Kühnel's fine Gamba Sonata in A, two Sonatas by Legrenzi for two violins, alto, tenor, and violoncello with harpsichord, and Corelli's 'Christmas Concerto Grosso.' In one of his characteristic little speeches Mr. Dolmetsch pointed out that in this work and in Bach's 'Passions' the music told the story of the Birth and of the Passion of our Lord far more clearly and vividly than even the words of the Gospels, as music could express ideas which exceeded the power of the word, and even revealed the hidden meaning of these events. The two evenings reserved for ancient dances and popular vocal and instrumental music proved a great attraction to crowded houses.

That wonderfully versatile artist, Mrs. Dolmetsch, had not only designed all the costumes, but even painted a most effective background, besides proving herself a graceful and agile dancer. An Intermedio by Caccini, and Balletto with a choral accompaniment by Horatio Vecchi, were particularly charming, and so were many of the vocal and instrumental interludes, including three part-songs by Henry VIII. and Nicholaus Laneare (Lanier), as well as a Dialogue by John Jenkins and tunes for recorders.

---

ORGANISTS' LONG SERVICE ROLL OF HONOUR

By Charles W. Pearce

Permit me to offer hearty congratulations to Dr. H. J. Edwards upon his remarkable record of sixty-two years' service at the fine old Parish Church of Barnstaple (Devon). May he be blessed with health and strength to continue his Church duty for a long time to come! I somehow confused the date of his appointment to the conductorship of the Exeter Musical Festival Society (1886) with that of the Parish Church organistship, to which he succeeded his father in 1866.

In List II. (No. 129), Mr. Theo Gmür should be credited with fifty (not forty-eight) years of service in the appointment he still holds; and in List III. (No. 210), Mr. F. A. Crate should have been described as the present organist of St. John's (not St. Thomas's) Church, Winchester. As to List III. (No. 247), Mr. W. Stone writes to say that his appointment to St. John's, Weymouth, dates from 1880 (not 1881); he must therefore be credited with forty-eight years' tenure. List III. (No. 206): Mr. A. A. Box's second Christian name is Ashdown (not Anderson). The Rev. E. A. Ingham, Rector of Willoughby, Leicester, writes to say that his father, Mr. Lawrence Ingham (List III., No. 221), was for forty years organist of Holy Trinity, Chester (not Liverpool).

Another instance of juvenile organ-tenure may be seen below in the case of Miss Alice Lean, who at the early age of nine, entered the ranks of duly appointed Church organists.

The many friends of Mr. G. B. Gilbert will sympathise with him for that incurable deafness which has incapacitated him from all professional work, including the dual position he held at West Ham Parish Church and Stratford Town Hall with such distinguished success for so many years. Prof. Percy C. Buck was one of his choir-boys at the Church.

And although Mr. George Riseley is, happily, still capable of continuing his public work at Bristol as a most able conductor, rheumatic trouble, which seriously interfered with his phenomenal pedal-playing, caused his much-regretted retirement from the organistship at Colston Hall.

Again, in thanking those readers of the Musical Times who have helped me in the compilation of this Roll of Honour, may I solicit further favours from them in the future? I shall miss the kindly assistance of my old friend Dr. W. H. Grattan Flood, of Enniscorthy, Ireland, from whom I received a letter shortly before his death—which all of us deplore. Letters and post-cards containing legibly written particulars of long service should reach me not later than October 10 at 'The Paddocks,' Ferndown, Wimborne, Dorset.

LIST IV.—CATHEDRAL, COLLEGIATE, PAROCHIAL, AND OTHER ORGANISTS

(FOR NOT LESS THAN FORTY YEARS, CONTINUOUSLY, IN THE SAME APPOINTMENT)

| No. | Name | Appointment | Years of Tenure |
|---|---|---|---|
| 256 | Baker, Miss Mary ... ... ... ... ... | St. Mary's Parish Church, Southfleet, Gravesend (Kent), 1884 ... ... ... (at present) | 44 |
| 257 | Charlton, James, M.A., Cantab. ... ... ... | Parish Church, Leigh (Lancs), 1869-1913 ... | 44 |
| 258 | Cuzner, George ... ... ... ... ... | St. George's Parish Church, Beckington, Frome (Som.), 1865-1925 ... ... ... ... | 60 |
| 259 | Ferrey, G. ... ... ... ... ... ... | Christchurch Priory (Hants), 1843-93 ... ... | 50 |
| 260 | Fielding, Henry ... ... ... ... ... | Wisley Chapel, High Street, W. Glossop (Derbyshire), 1880 ... ... ... (at present) | 48 |
| 261 | Gaite, W. M. ... ... ... ... ... | St. John the Evangelist's Parish Church, Gt. Horton, Bradford (Yorks), 1882 (at present) | 46 |
| 262 | Gilbert, George Barnard, F.R.C.O. (retired) ... | W. Ham Parish Church, Stratford (London, E.), 1874-1924 ... ... ... ... ... (conjointly with thirty-one years as Borough Organist, Town Hall, Stratford, 1893-1924). | 50 |
| 263 | Gudge, Miss ... ... ... ... ... | Parish Church, Kimbolton (Hunts), 1869-1924 ... | 55 |
| 264 | Hemstock, Arthur (died, 1924) ... ... ... | St. Mary's Parish Church, Diss (Norfolk), 1864-1915 ... ... ... ... ... | 51 |
| 265 | Hiscock, W. ... ... ... ... ... | Christchurch Priory (Hants), 1788-1843... ... | 55 |
| 266 | Lain, Walter (retired) ... ... ... ... | St. Stephen's Parish Church, Notwich (Norfolk), 1882-1928 ... ... ... ... ... | 46 |
| 267 | Lean, Miss Alice (voluntary service) ... ... | St. Melyd's Parish Church, Melidon, nr. Prestatyn (Flintshire, N. Wales), 1876 ... (at present) | 52 |
| 268 | Nicholls, H. F., A.R.C.O. ... ... ... | Congregational Church, Victoria Road, Newport (Mon.), 1887 ... ... ... (at present) | 41 |
| 269 | Pearson, Arthur, Mus. Bac., Oxon. ... ... | St. Paul's Church, Huddersfield (Yorks), 1884 (at present) | 44 |
| 270 | Pyne, James Kendrick, M.A. (Manch.), Mus. D. (Cantuar.) (pupil of Dr. S. S. Wesley) ... | Corporation Organist, Town Hall, Manchester, 1877 ... ... ... ... (at present) (conjointly with thirty-three years at Manchester Cathedral, 1875-1908). | 51 |
| 271 | Richardson, Walter Henry, A.R.C.O. ... ... | Wesleyan Church, Derby, 1879 ... (at present) | 49 |
| 272 | Riley, Bradshaw ... ... ... ... ... | Wesley Church, Accrington (Lancs), 1863-1914... | 51 |
| 273 | Riseley, George (choral and orchestral conductor) | Corporation Organist, Colston Hall, Bristol, 1870-1920 ... ... ... ... ... (conjointly with twenty-two years at Bristol Cathedral, 1876-98). | 50 |
| 274 | Simms, Samuel ... ... ... ... ... | St. Thomas's Church, Stourbridge (Worcestershire), 1810-64 ... ... ... ... ... | 54 |
| 275 | Stevenson, William Robinson (died, 1925) ... | Upperthorpe Unitarian Chapel (rebuilt in 1914 as Unity Church), Sheffield (Yorks), 1882-1924 ... | 42 |
| 276 | Thatcher, Edgar (voluntary service) ... ... | Christ Church, Nailsea (Som.), 1860-1917 ... | 57 |

KARG-ELERT

By Arthur Hutchings

Are there any great modern composers for the organ other than Franck and Karg-Elert, supposing 'modern' to refer to the period since Mendelssohn and Rheinberger? There are, of course, the Frenchmen who, each in his own day, worked with the avowed intention of exploiting the resources of the modern organ for the contrast and colour of the orchestra—and succeeded. But when we have discriminated between the best and the least good of Guilmant, Vierne, and Widor, the question still remains: What composer is there who is great, and modern, and, in the fullest sense of the expression, a master of organ idiom?

The organ, whether it be in church or hall, has a religious dignity unique among media of expression which, it would seem, can only be attained by a composer who has entered into an inner shrine of devotion to the instrument, only to be described by such technicalities as 'organ idiom.' It is a full satisfaction of this demand that causes one to feel that Bach (but not Handel), Mendelssohn, and Rheinberger have, each in his turn, written for the organ of eternity. Of what modern composer can the same be said? One writes in a spirit of humble challenge to budding composers of to-day, for in my opinion the mantle of great organ-writing has fallen on Franck and Karg-Elert alone.

Franck was great wherever he turned, and the organ seemed to be an ideal means of expression for his restrained, mystical, but nevertheless intense genius. There is, of course, Parry, with his beautiful but limited tributes to the organ. Are they really 'modern'? Surely the constructional nature of the Chorale Preludes of Parry and Farrar makes them works of ability rather than genius, so that they are inclined at times to leave the listener just a little cold. Then what of Reger's more ambitious efforts? He is said avowedly to have attempted to be the modern Bach; but does the organist, after sweating to overcome the sheer technical difficulties of Reger, find his labours justified by the result? Not always. Though they may have grasped the full meaning of 'organ idiom,' the chorale-prelude writers are, at their best, somewhat of a retrogression from Franck; though here must be mentioned the notable exception of Vaughan Williams's 'Three Preludes on Welsh Hymn-Tunes.'

At first sight it would seem, then, that the only alternative to the limitations of chorale-prelude manufacturing is the giving to oneself the full rhapsodic licence of the modern orchestral tone-poem, as Herbert Howells has done in his Psalm-Preludes. It may be mere religious conservatism, but it seems to me that some restraining force is needed to satisfy that dignity required for organ idiom which I mentioned above, and about which Dr. Alcock spoke at an R.C.O. meeting last year. Franck found just sufficient of this restraining force in the subject-matter of his 'Three Chorals,' causing one to feel of them as Gray felt of the Grande Chartreuse—'not a cliff, not a mountain, not a precipice, but is pregnant with religion and poetry'; for that is the difficulty—to combine religious with poetic mysticism. From Franck one comes straight to the only other composer who has achieved the same object, being fully modern and yet offering a permanent work of devotion to the dignity of the organ—Sigfrid Karg-Elert.

In his 'Chorale Improvisations,' Karg-Elert, like Franck in his 'Chorals,' found just sufficient restraining influence. The title 'Chorale Improvisations' is significant, for rarely have they the severity of the old chorale prelude. It is as if Franck and Karg-Elert wrote their subject at the top of the paper, fell in love with it, and wrote an essay, the product in the case of Karg-Elert being more exuberant, though less finished. The familiar 'Marche Triomphale,' written upon the tune 'Nun danket alle Gott,' is a good specimen of his method of attack. Instead of following the tune laboriously, the composer becomes bound up with the spirit of the theme, and his essay is 'emotion recollected in tranquillity,' embodying and expressing the feeling which all must have experienced when a service has finished and the spirit of a great hymn-tune lingers half-consciously in the mind. This is what makes the choral improvisation, rather than the choral prelude, so admirable as a concluding voluntary.

No one would be so foolish as to put Karg-Elert on a pedestal. Indeed there are blemishes—moments of overworked chromaticism and cheap modern effects. The dictionary says that Karg-Elert is, or was once, a devotee of 'tone-impressionism.' This is a wide term, and has meant different things to different composers. But in the 'Chorale Improvisations' there is hardly a work that is not of high merit. There are formal chorale preludes, such as the magnificent 'Sleepers, wake,' which, may I be bold enough to say, should live as long as Bach's similar work; on the other hand, there are simple melodies, simply harmonized, such as the delightful little Folk-Tune in G; there are the grandiloquent pieces full of bravura work, such as the 'Jerusalem' Improvisation; and, within each, one can find employed all the resources of modern harmony. There are whole-tone effects, and luscious passages of chromatic harmony and counterpoint, making the work sound, as some one has said of Delius, 'like a deep moving river.' There is often found the Holstian use of a striking succession of unrelated chords, and many other beauties the enumeration of which would be tedious. One can say of Karg-Elert's 'Chorale Improvisations' what cannot usually be said of the chorale prelude, that every piece is a poem—for poems cannot be written to order.

Then why does not Karg-Elert appear in greater abundance in recital programmes? How one welcomed Mr. Sceats's article in the Musical Times of September, 1927, on the much-neglected master. Please, recitalists, may we not have more Karg-Elert?

Musical Notes from Abroad

HOLLAND

The celebrations of the fifty years' jubilee of the existence of the Netherlands Society of St. Gregory, held at Utrecht from August 26 to 30, showed a remarkably high state of Church music, at least so far as the choirs associated with that Society are concerned. Some of the performances by choirs of suburban and village churches, who had made a long journey at their own expense to take part in the Festival, were surprising. There was that, for instance, by a choir from Tilburg of the 'Missa Papæ Marcelli,' under its own local choirmaster, in which the building up of climax upon climax, the sustained emotional force of the recurring waves of sound, was worthy of much larger choirs from the best equipped centres. A new Mass by Jaap Vranken, one of the younger Dutch composers, was both as a composition and as a performance (by a village choir from the frontier between Limburg and Germany), more a technical tour de force than an emotional one, but it deserved the highest praise on this score. Vaughan Williams's Mass in G minor for soloists and double chorus, which I am told is in the regular repertory of the Utrecht Cathedral

Choir, was sung well on the whole, though the extremely delicate pianissimos and the fine balance between the parts were not always achieved. One of the big successes of the Festival was the glorious performance of Diepenbrock's great 'Te Deum,' by the local choral society and orchestra, conducted by Joh. Winnubst, the Cathedral organist. Although evidently not yet fully developed in the technique of conducting, and particularly of orchestral conducting, Mr. Winnubst showed very considerable powers, and in this work produced some remarkably fine effects. His performance of César Franck's Symphony was not so completely successful, but it displayed a careful and individual reading of the score. Even still more interesting was the large number of native works included in the programme, a list which suggested that the influence of Diepenbrock and the work of this and smaller societies is resulting in the formation of a sound, if not yet very original, school of Dutch Church composers. Winnubst himself and Vranken, Hubert Cuypers, Philip Loots, Willem Heydt, J. A. S. van Schaik, Antoon van Schaik, Jan Nieland, Willem van Kalmthout, and Jean Schryvers, all figured in the programmes as composers of long or short works, and in every case with excellent results. Besides these and the works of the old Italian and Netherlands schools there were sung many Gregorian melodies, each choir taking part presenting its own slight modification of a main method. There were also interesting and instructive lectures and demonstrations of all that pertains to Church music, by Mrs. Justine Ward, the head of the Pius X. Institute at New York (who had travelled from America, bringing with her seven girls, taken, for this occasion, from one of her high school classes), by Dr. Cæcilianus Huigens, founder and principal of the Utrecht School of Church Music, and others; and a couple of carillon recitals.

With the middle of September the season at Scheveningen comes to an end, and the climax of interest has been well worked. In this last month we have had no less than three performances of Beethoven's 'Choral' Symphony, one of Mahler's 'Lied von der Erde,' Saint-Saëns's 'Carneval des Animaux,' a programme of Russian works, a Johann Strauss concert, a single programme in which figured Richard Strauss's 'Serenade' for thirteen wind instruments, Rimsky-Korsakov's 'Caprice espagnol,' and Beethoven's Triple Concerto with the Budapest Trio as soloists, and a 'Huldigings' evening for Prof. Schnéevoigt. The concert portion of this last was representative of Schnéevoigt's general policy, and included works by Johan Wagenaar and Alex Voormolen, representing Holland, Sibelius representing Finland, Ravel ('La Valse') the mildly modernist tastes of a portion of his audiences, and Tchaikovsky ('Pathetic' Symphony) the semi-classical popular taste. After this concert a large number of Dutch musicians and music-lovers presented the conductor with a valuable antique Dutch chest, together with an album containing the signatures of the subscribers, besides which he received a number of other valuable presents on his retirement from the position and his departure for America.

A small but interesting point in the biography of Mozart has just been cleared up by the research of Mr. P. T. A. Swildens, who in Cæcilia en he Musiekcollege has an article on the question whether, and on what date, the composer appeared publicly at Utrecht during his tour as a boy round Holland. Mr. Swildens has found a copy of the Utrechtsche Courant of April 18, 1766, in which Leopold Mozart advertised a concert by his two children on April 21, 'in the Music-room on the Vredeburg,' a room probably belonging to the then existent Guildhall, but now long disappeared. In this advertisement Leopold Mozart speaks of his 'zoontje [sonnie], aged nine years,' though he was actually at the time ten years and three months old! Another example of the 'business acumen' of Mozart père!

HERBERT ANTCLIFFE.

Music in the Provinces

(See also under 'Choral Society Programmes')

BIRMINGHAM.—Eight Symphony concerts will be given by the City Orchestra with Dr. Adrian Boult as conductor-in-chief, the first and last dates being October 4 and March 21. The programmes include Malipiero's 'Cimarosiana,' Schubert's Grand Duo in C, orchestrated by Joachim, Frank Bridge's 'The Sea,' Dohnányi's 'Ruralia Hungarica,' Prokofiev's Pianoforte Concerto in C (No. 3), Pfitzner's Overture,' Christ-Elflein,' and the Choral Symphony. Sir Henry Wood will conduct on November 22 and Dohnányi on January 24.

BRADFORD.—Mr. Keith Douglas has arranged to give twelve concerts with the assistance of the Bradford Philharmonic Orchestra, the Leeds Symphony Orchestra, and the West Riding Chamber Orchestra. The works to be played include Delius's Pianoforte, Violin, and 'Cello Concertos, Reger's Variations on a Theme of Mozart's, Satie's 'Gymnopédies,' Deems-Taylor's 'Through the Looking-Glass,' the Scherzo from Scriabin's first Symphony, Sibelius's 'En Saga,' Dohnányi's 'Cello Concerto, and Mr. Douglas's 'Comedy Overture.'——The Bradford Subscription concerts include visits by the Hallé Orchestra under Sir Hamilton Harty and a performance of Kodály's 'Hary Janos.'

BURNLEY.—Four orchestral concerts will be given by the Municipal Symphony Orchestra besides those in which it is to co-operate with the Municipal Choir. Mr. Fred Myers is the musical director. Each concert will be in the hands of a different guest-conductor, and well-known artists have been engaged.

CAMBORNE.—The Cornwall Symphony Orchestra, under Dr. Charles Rivers, will play Brahms's fourth Symphony at Camborne on November 4 and at Truro on November 5.

DERBY.—The thirteenth series of Municipal and County Chamber concerts will be given on October 12, November 9, November 30, and February 15, in each case with artists of the highest standing. During the season of 1927-28 over a thousand people took tickets for the whole series.

GLASGOW.—During the season from November 10 to February 9 the Choral and Orchestral Union will give concerts on every Saturday and Tuesday, all in the evening except the mid-day performance of 'The Messiah' on New Year's Day. A booklet containing the sketch programmes is obtainable from the Manager, at 193, Saint Vincent Street. The principal novelty is a Symphony for organ and orchestra by Marcel Dupré, to be performed for the first time.

LEEDS.—Three concerts are announced by the Leeds Symphony Society, an amateur orchestra under the direction of Mr. Harold Mason. The programmes include the Handel-Elgar Overture and the Prelude to Mackenzie's 'Colomba' (November 24); German's Welsh Rhapsody and the Sailors' Dance from 'Roderigo,' arranged by Cowen (January 26); Smetana's Overture, 'The Kiss,' and Mendelssohn's 'Italian' Symphony (March 23).

LEWES.—The fixtures of the Lewes Music Club include a concert-lecture by Mr. Armstrong Gibbs on 'The Relation of Verse and Music in Song-Writing,' a programme by the Virtuoso String Quartet, and a pianoforte recital by Dohnányi.

LIVERPOOL.—The conductors of the twelve concerts announced by the Philharmonic Society are as follows: October 9, Albert Coates; October 23, Sir Henry Wood (Sibelius's sixth Symphony); November 6, Furtwängler, with the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra; November 20, Sir Hamilton Harty (Suite from 'Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme'); December 4, Sir Henry Wood (Wagner); December 18, Dr. Malcolm Sargent;

January 15, Karl Alwin ('Transvariationen,' by Clemens von Franckenstein); January 29, Sir Henry Wood ('Appalachia'); February 12, Pierre Monteux (Reger's 'Romantic Suite'); February 26, Sir Hamilton Harty; March 12, Sir Henry Wood (Vaughan Williams's 'Pastoral Symphony'); March 26, Sir Henry Wood ('Solomon').——The programme of the Liverpool Repertory Opera Company's fifth season includes: 'The Necklace, a Melomime,' by James Lyon (first performance), 'William Tell,' 'Hugh the Drover,' 'The Immortal Hour,' 'The Golden Goose,' by Holst (first performance), and Stravinsky's 'The Soldier's Tale.'

Manchester. — The Hallé Concerts prospectus (obtainable from Messrs. Forsyth Brothers, 126, Deansgate) gives particulars of twenty-two concerts from October 18 to March 21, all on Thursdays except the extra performance of 'The Messiah' on December 21. All the concerts are to be conducted by Sir Hamilton Harty, except that of November 15, when a modern programme will be given by M. Ansermet. The outstanding items in the programmes are the 'Schubert Prize' Symphony by Kurt Atterburg, Kodály's 'Hary Janos,' and a 'new Concerto' for 'cello and orchestra by Schubert and Cassado.

Margate.—A Festival on the usual lines was held at the Winter Gardens on the evenings of September 9-14, the only unusual feature being the competition of prolonged summer weather. In spite of this, however, the Festival brought in good audiences, and its varied attractions, in music and in personal factors, were well appreciated. The guest-conductors were Sir Landon Ronald, Dr. Malcolm Sargent, and Sir Frederic Cowen, who conducted his 'Fantasy of Life and Love' and 'The Butterfly's Ball.' Mr. A. W. Ketèlbey also introduced his new Suite of 'Fanciful Etchings.' Among the works given under Mr. Bainbridge Robinson were Harold Rawlinson's Overture 'The Maid of Orleans,' Vincent d'Indy's 'La forêt enchantée,' and Kallinnikov's first Symphony. A popular cast of artists included Isolde Menges, Philipowsky, the three Harrisons, and a number of well-known singers.

Southampton.—The works chosen by the Test Valley Orchestra for performance during the season, under the direction of Mr. Frank Bartlett, are Beethoven's eighth Symphony, Haydn's Symphony No. 13 (in G), Brahms's Violin Concerto, and the Siegfried Idyll.

MANCHESTER PROSPECTS

Our Manchester correspondent writes:

The coming season will celebrate the establishment fifty years ago by the late G. Brand Lane of the Manchester Philharmonic Choir. His lamented death last spring deprived him of the opportunity of personal participation in the plans for a fitting celebration. His son, in continuing his father's work, has appointed Mr. Alfred Higson to the chorus-mastership, which will ensure the maintenance of the highest standards in the choir's work. His main business will be the preparation of 'Gerontius' for January 26, when Elgar will come to conduct; a touch of genius is manifested in the choice of Dame Clara Butt as soloist (along with Steuart Wilson and Harold Williams). Few people in England can have heard Clara Butt in this work, and the writer intends to add this experience to a long and varied one of famous singers of the Angel's music. The Lane series provides Manchester with many notable personalities: Paderewski, Pachmann, Cortôt, Casals, Kreisler, and Thibaud; Gerhardt, Chaliapin, and McCormack. The only fly in this precious ointment is the absence of any visit by outstanding orchestras—'Gerontius,' 'The Messiah,' and 'Merrie England' (the latter conducted by Sir Henry Wood) presumably utilising members of the Hallé Orchestra.

Any criticism of the seventy-first Hallé scheme would surely fasten on the fact that in a series of twenty concerts, averaging two and a half hours' duration—say, sixty hours music—orchestral works by native composers occupy an hour, to which must be added three choral items by Elgar, Delius, and Bax, making another hour's music. This bald numerical analysis carries its own condemnation. Can it be pure accident that the symphonic work of Holst, Bax, Vaughan Williams, or the later Sibelius again finds no place, or are we to assume that they come under the ban pronounced by Harty at the annual Hallé meeting in July, in the declaration that there was little music written in the last twelve or fifteen years worth the extra rehearsal necessary for its reasonably adequate presentation? Sir Hamilton on that occasion, and again more recently, made pretty vigorous use of his verbal shillelagh, but will he seriously contend that other societies producing and other men conducting these and numerous other works are all wrong in their judgments, or all know little or nothing about their job? In the absence of some such far-reaching condemnation the average concert-goer or critic is forced to the conclusion that individual predilections are in absolute control. Autocrat that he was, even Richter played works here upon which he set little value, for he recognised the rights of a public, limited to Manchester for its orchestral music, to hear such things occasionally.

And in concluding this argument for the fuller recognition of such composers, might one add the suggestion that the major works and (generally) the more recent ones should be drawn upon rather than the lesser, e.g., Vaughan Williams's 'Pastoral' or 'London' Symphonies represent him more worthily than do the 'Wasps' or the 'Norfolk Rhapsody.' The season as a whole sustains the symphonic splendour of the classics, and affords a first hearing at Manchester of the Columbia Graphophone Company's two-thousand-guinea Symphony by Kurt Atterburg (November 8), Kodály's 'Hary Janos' Suite (December 6), Variations by Hely-Hutchinson (December 13), Ph. Em. Bach's second Sinfonia in E flat (December 6), Eric Fogg's 'June Twilight' (January 10), Prokofiev's 'Three Oranges' Suite (February 21), and Turina's 'Sinfonie Sevillana' (February 28). Dohnányi's visit on January 17 is to afford us a performance of 'Ruralia Hungarica.' Somewhat off the beaten track at big orchestral concerts will be a performance of the rarely heard vocal numbers from the 'Rosamunde' music of Schubert (November 8), and Backhaus's playing of the 'Waldstein' Sonata on October 25, when the programme will include only three other items: Bach's Double Violin Concerto, Elgar's 'Falstaff,' and Brahms's B flat Pianoforte Concerto. There are four orchestral nights devoted solely to Symphonies. The choral nights abandon oratorio for Berlioz's 'Trojans at Carthage' (November 1); Bach, Elgar, Bax, and Delius constitute a remarkable evening on February 7: 'Sing ye to the Lord' and 'Now but the grace,' 'The Music-Makers,' 'Mater ora Filium,' and 'Sea Drift'; and 'The Flying Dutchman' at the final concert on March 14, this choice and the Berlioz 'Trojans' being justified in the official foreword:

> 'Whatever opinions may be held in some quarters regarding the propriety of performing operatic works on the concert platform, such a policy is surely justified in the case of great works which otherwise apparently would never be heard at all in this country.'

Of 'The Flying Dutchman' the same introduction says, '. . . seldom, if ever, seen nowadays on our opera stage.'

Apart from Dohnányi, visits are to be paid us by Medtner (November 22) and Ansermet (November 15).

Obituary

We regret to record the following deaths :

Ernest George Meers, at York, on August 20, in his eightieth year. He was born near Ashford, Kent, and educated at Faversham Grammar School. In 1871 he founded the business of Watts's Ltd., of which he was chairman and managing director at his death. He was a noted athlete, a mountaineer, a great traveller, and a born leader. His interest in music was great, and centred chiefly on the organ. A pupil of the late Dr. F. E. Gladstone, Sir Frederick Bridge, and Sir Walter Parratt, he took his Mus. Bac. at Oxford. He used his ample financial resources generously in the cause of organs and organ-playing, assisting promising students, and giving a helping hand to organ-building funds. He not only gave the organ in Maidstone Parish Church, but also maintained its upkeep. The organ in Borden Church, near Sittingbourne, is another instance of his generosity. Again, the fine three-manual that stood in his house at Chislehurst was offered by him as a gift to the town of Guildford—a gift that had to be declined owing to the lack of a suitable building for its re-erection. At the time of his death he was collaborating with Mr. H. F. Ellingford in a work called ' The Science of Organ Pedalling,' a subject to which he brought a degree of skill that few professional players could equal.

[We give below an Appreciation written by Mr. Ellingford.—Editor.]

In the passing of the late Ernest George Meers (Mus. Bac., Oxon. ; of Warwick's Bench, Guildford ; and formerly of Chislehurst) the musical world, and particularly that section interested in the organ, has lost a very keen enthusiast and patron.

Music was only a side-line, but in this side-line, as in his tennis and chess-playing hobbies, he was an extraordinarily capable exponent. In the late 'eighties he became the Amateur Tennis Champion of England, and he could play an excellent game of chess with the finest players.

Music, though a hobby, was to him a lifelong study. He held a few appointments as organist at some London churches, particularly St. Mark's, Lewisham, and gave the emoluments of these posts to the improvement of the status of the choir and its music. He also played the organ at the performance of Gounod's ' Redemption ' at the old St. James's Hall, London, soon after its production at the Birmingham Festival of 1882.

He was the donor of some fine organs, notably that in Maidstone Parish Church. The voicing of organ pipes, particularly those of the string family, was of especial interest to him, and at his home at Guildford he had a complete voicing machine, where he spent many hours experimenting in that subtle and delightful art.

He had a magnificent organ at Chislehurst, which is destined to go out to Sydney Cathedral, arrangements for the transference being made during the short occupancy of that post by his old friend, the late Dr. Tom Haigh. The small two-manual organ in his house at Guildford is a charming little instrument. It was on this organ that he spent many enjoyable hours in his favourite pastime, viz., organ-pedalling, and the playing of Bach.

In middle life he had lessons in organ-playing for several years, under the late Sir Walter Parratt, at the Royal College of Music, and greatly enjoyed the fun (as he expressed it) of playing some of the great Bach works at the terminal examinations.

It is no exaggeration to say that there are very few organ executants, even amongst the most expert pedal-players, who are possessed of a more facile or cleaner pedal technique than that of Mr. Meers. He made it a study and a science, and his methods and reasoning on the ways and means of footing intricate pedal passages were absolutely sound, and mostly irreproachable.

He was a man of great culture, charming, kind, and generous, and there are many students who will ever remember his practical readiness to assist them to continue their studies.

Herbert F. Ellingford.

Francis Edward Gladstone, at Hereford, on September 5, aged eighty-three. He was a son of the Rev. J. E. Gladstone and a first cousin of William Ewart Gladstone. His first musical instruction was at the hands of Samuel Sebastian Wesley, to whom he was articled at Winchester ; he took his musical degree at Cambridge. After holding the post of organist at Chichester, Llandaff, and Norwich Cathedrals, he was appointed to Christ Church, Lancaster Gate. Subsequently he became a Roman Catholic, and at the time of his death was honorary organist to St. Francis Xavier's, Hereford. For twenty-seven years he was a professor at the Royal College of Music, and he also examined for the Universities of Cambridge, Durham, and London. He wrote a good deal of excellent church and organ music.

Daniel Mayer, the well-known concert agent, in London, on August 23. Born in Westphalia on July 2, 1856, he was brought to England two years later, becoming, and remaining, a British subject. He showed talent as a pianist while still a boy, and was offered a a scholarship at Cologne Conservatory. He preferred, however, to be trained as a civil engineer. At the age of twenty he gave up engineering for music-publishing, joining the firm of Weekes & Co. Later he became interested in the pianoforte trade, and became proprietor of S. & P. Erard. The inevitable contact with famous pianists and other artists led to the foundation in 1891 of the world-famous concert-agency with which he was identified during the remainder of his life.

Howard Talbot, at Reigate, on September 12, aged sixty-three. His real name was Munkittrick, and he was born at New York, coming to England at an early age. After some training as a medical student at King's College, London, he entered the Royal College of Music, where he studied composition under Parry. He met with great success as a composer of light opera and musical comedies, among his best-known works being ' A Chinese Honeymoon,' ' Three Little Maids,' &c. He was also part-composer (with Lionel Monckton) of ' The Arcadians ' and (with Paul Rubens) of ' Three Little Maids ' and ' The Blue Moon.' For many years he acted as conductor at various London theatres.

Emma Carelli, Italian opera singer. She was killed in a motor accident, near Montefiascone, on August 19. Her debut at the Constanzi Theatre, Rome, when she was only twenty-two years old, was followed by a brilliant career in Europe and America, her most famous impersonation being that of Electra in Strauss's opera. She was director of the Constanzi Theatre from 1912 until 1926, when the theatre was taken over by the State. "

W. H. Murray, at Glasgow, in his seventy-ninth year. For many years he was a visiting music-master in Glasgow and Govan Board Schools. He was one of the first members and a one-time President of the Scottish Singing-Masters' Association ; he acted as local secretary for the Tonic Sol-fa College ; and as honorary treasurer of the Glasgow Musical Festival did much useful work.

Arthur M. Friedlander, suddenly, at Brighton, in September. He was an authority on the ancient music of the Synagogue, and had contributed articles on that and kindred subjects to the Musical Times and other journals. For some time he was choirmaster of the Bayswater Synagogue ; and he also composed and arranged music for the Jewish ritual.

Guilio Moretti, at Vedano Olona, aged seventy-eight. He was born and educated musically at Rome. For thirty-one years he was a professor of singing at Milan. In 1902 he came to London, and was appointed professor at the Royal Academy of Music. A few years later, however, he returned to Italy.

James Madison Tracy, at Denver, U.S.A. He was born in 1837, was a pupil of Liszt, and became well-known in the United States as a composer.

Miscellaneous

Admirers of Coleridge-Taylor will be interested to know that Mrs. Coleridge-Taylor is publishing, as a picture postcard, a reproduction of an oil painting by Lilian Canning of the music shed in the garden where the composer used to work. The artist is an exhibitor at the Royal Institution, the Paris Society of Women Artists, &c.

CONTENTS.

| | Page. |
|---|---|
| Schubert and Melodic Design. By Rutland Boughton ... ... | 881 |
| After Playing Schubert's Pianoforte Sonatas. By Erik Brewerton ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 887 |
| The Middle-Classical Schubert. By Eric Blom ... ... ... | 890 |
| 'The Angel of Fire': Prokofiev's New Opera. By Leonid Sabaneev ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 891 |
| Schubert, Lanner, Strauss, and the Waltz. By E. van der Straeten ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 893 |
| Schumann's 'Woman's Love and Life' Cycle: A Reflection. By Lionel R. McColvin... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 896 |
| New Light on Late Tudor Composers. XXXVIII.—William Bathe. By W. H. Grattan Flood ... ... ... ... ... | 897 |
| The Three Choirs Festival. By Harvey Grace ... ... ... | 898 |
| Occasional Notes ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 901 |
| The Musician's Bookshelf ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 904 |
| New Music ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 906 |
| Gramophone Notes. By 'Discus' ... ... ... ... ... | 909 |
| Player-Piano Notes... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 911 |
| Teachers' Department: Easy Pianoforte Music ... ... ... Answers to Correspondents ... ... ... ... ... ... | 912 919 |
| Church and Organ Music... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 921 |
| Hymn-Tune Accompaniment. By Corbett Sumsion ... ... | 921 |
| Congress of the National Union of Organists' Associations. By W. A. Roberts ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 921 |
| The Amateurs' Exchange ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 925 |
| Letters to the Editor ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 925 |
| Sharps and Flats ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 931 |
| Sixty Years Ago ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 931 |
| London Concerts ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 932 |
| The Coming Season: Orchestral and Choral Society Programmes | 933 |
| Music in Wales ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 936 |
| The Siena Festival of Modern Music. By Hubert J. Foss ... | 936 |
| Royal Academy of Music ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 937 |
| Royal College of Music ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 937 |
| Haslemere Festival of Chamber Music. By E. van der Straeten | 937 |
| Organists' Long Service Roll of Honour. By C. W. Pearce ... | 939 |
| Karg-Elert. By Arthur Hutchings ... ... ... ... ... | 939 |
| Musical Notes from Abroad ... ... ... ... ... ... | 940 |
| Music in the Provinces ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 941 |
| Manchester Prospects ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 942 |
| Obituary ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 943 |

MUSIC.

"The Golden Skein." Part-song for Mixed Voices. By Edgar L. Bainton ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... 913

EXTRA SUPPLEMENT given with this number:

"There is a Garden in her Face." Four-part Song. By H. A. Chambers.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

To insure insertion in their proper positions, Advertisements for the next issue should reach the Office, 160, Wardour Street, London, W.1, not later than

MONDAY, OCTOBER 22 (First Post).

DURING THE LAST MONTH

Published by NOVELLO & CO., Limited

BAINTON, EDGAR L.—"The Golden Skein." Part-Song for mixed voices. (No. 1028, The Musical Times.) 3d.

BRADFORD, HUGH.—Seven Characteristic Pieces for Pianoforte. 5s.

FOUR CAROLS FOR CHILDREN (Booklet No. 6). By Blind Composers. 3d.

HARWOOD, BASIL.—Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis in E flat. 6d.

HAVERGAL, CECILIA.—"God's Harvest Voice." (A Harvest Anthem.) 2d.

HANDEL, G. F.—"Horror, confusion!" (Recit.); "Fury with red sparkling eyes" (Air), from "Alexander Balus." For Baritone. 1s.

HYMNS AND TUNES FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL ANNIVERSARY. No. 84. "Fight the good fight" (with optional descant). W. Boyd. 1½d.

KIMMINS, G. T.—Songs from Shakespeare with Dances (Cheap Edition). 2s. 6d.

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW, No. 436, contains the following music in both notations. "Good-night, thou glorious sun." (Arranged as a two-part song.) Henry Smart. "Love me little, love me long." (Unison Song.) Old English. (Tune, "Mad Robin," 1686.) 2d.

SCHOOL SONG SERIES.—Published in two forms. A. Voice Parts in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations, with Pianoforte Accompaniment (8vo). B. Voice Parts only, in Tonic Sol-fa Notation.

| | | A. | B. |
|---|---|---|---|
| No. 1513. | "Talisman." (Unison.) Schumann ... ... ... | — | 1½d. |
| ,, 1514. | "This great world is a trouble." (Unison.) R. Leveridge ... | — | 2d. |
| ,, 1517. | "I vow to thee, my country." (Song for Unison Massed Singing.) Geoffrey Shaw | — | 1½d. |
| ,, 1518. | "A Song of rest." (S.S.A.) H. Walford Davies ... | — | 2d. |
| ,, 1520. | "Sorrow." (Unison.) Pergolesi | 2d. | — |
| ,, 1521. | "Questioning." (Unison.) Salvator Rosa ... ... | 2d. | — |
| ,, 1522. | "Shepherds and Maidens." (Unison.) Antonio Lotti ... | 3d. | — |
| Book 308. | Ten Unison Songs for Junior Classes, by various composers | 1s. | — |
| ,, 309. | Nine Unison Songs for Junior Classes, by various composers | 1s. | — |
| ,, 310. | Ten Unison Songs for Junior Classes, by various composers | 1s. | — |
| ,, 311. | Eight Unison Songs, by various composers ... ... ... | 1s. | — |
| ,, 312. | Nine Unison Songs, by various composers ... ... ... | 1s. | — |
| ,, 313. | Christmas Songs and Carols. Set 7 | 8d. | — |
| ,, 314. | Seven Unison Songs for the higher Divisions, by various composers ... ... ... | 8d. | — |
| ,, 315. | Seven Unison Songs for the higher divisions, by various composers ... ... ... | 1s. | — |
| ,, 316. | Public School (Boys') Songs, by various composers ... ... | 1s. | — |
| ,, 317. | Six Classical Songs, by various composers ... ... ... | 8d. | — |
| ,, 318. | Eight Classical Songs (Sacred), by various composers ... | 1s. | — |
| ,, 319. | Eight Classical Songs, by various composers ... ... ... | 8d. | — |
| ,, 320. | Seven Classical Songs, by various composers ... ... ... | 8d. | — |
| ,, 321. | Seven Classical Songs, by various composers ... ... ... | 8d. | — |
| ,, 322. | Ten Classical Songs, by various composers ... ... ... | 8d. | — |

(Continued on page 946.)

FIRST RECORDS
BY THE # VIENNA
PHILHARMONIC ORCHESTRA
(under its conductor Franz Schalk).

THE high level of the playing of the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra needs no introduction to most music lovers. For the first time it is now possible to obtain in this country records of this Orchestra's performances. As in the case of most other great orchestras of the world, they record only for "His Master's Voice." The work chosen for the Orchestra's recording debut is

BEETHOVEN'S "PASTORALE" SYMPHONY

On five 12-inch Black Label Records, Nos. D.1473 to D.1477, 6/6 each. Issued complete in Album, price £1 : 12 : 6, or records may be purchased separately if desired. Ask to hear these records at your dealer's.

"His Master's Voice"

The World's Greatest Entertainer

The Gramophone Company Limited

Oxford Street London, W.1

DURING THE LAST MONTH—(continued from page 944)

SCHOOL SONG SERIES.—Continued.

| | | A. | B. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Book 323. | Seven Easy Two-part Songs, by various composers ... ... | 1s. | — |
| ,, 324. | Five Two-part Songs, by various composers ... ... ... | 8d. | — |
| ,, 325. | Six Two-part Songs, by various composers ... ... ... | 1s. | — |
| ,, 326. | Six Two-part Songs, by various composers ... ... ... | 1s. | — |
| ,, 327. | Fourteen unaccompanied Trios, by various composers. Staff Notation | 8d. | 6d. |
| ,, 328. | Eight unaccompanied Trios, by various composers ... ... | 8d. | — |
| ,, 329. | Seven unaccompanied Trios, by various composers ... ... | 8d. | — |
| ,, 330. | Nine accompanied Trios, by various composers ... ... | 1s. | — |
| ,, 331. | Five accompanied Trios, by various composers ... ... | 1s. | — |

SCOTT-BAKER, H.—Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis in B flat. 3d.

THIMAN, ERIC H.—"The Rainbow." Song, in two keys, E and G. 2s.

PUBLISHED FOR

THE H. W. GRAY CO., NEW YORK

ANDREWS, M.—"O God, our help in ages past." Hymn-Anthem. (Founded on "St. Anne.") (No. 944, Church Music Review.) 15 cents (8d.)

BARROWS, D. S.—Holy Communion Service, in E. (No. 952, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.)

CALEY, N. H.—Holy Communion Service in E flat. (No. 955, Church Music Review.) 10 cents (6d.).

CRONE, R. F.—Te Deum and Jubilate in G. (No. 957, Church Music Review.) 25 cents (1s.).

EMERY, D. R.—"Praise to God the Angels sing." (Christmas Anthem.) (No. 970, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.).

PEERY, R. R.—"Lead me, O Lord." Sacred Song for middle voice. 50 cents (2s.).

PRISKE, J. M.—"The East is God's." Anthem, with Bass or Alto Solo. (No. 965, Church Music Review.) 10 cents (6d.).

SOWERBY, LEO.—Benedictus es Domine in B flat. (No. 963, Church Music Review.) 15 cents (8d.).

THOMSON, S.—"Seek ye the Lord." Anthem for Solo, Quartet, and Chorus. (No. 972, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.).

TILY, H. J.—"I will lift up mine eyes." Anthem for mixed voices. (Unaccompanied.) (No. 971, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.).

WEBBE, W. Y.—"La Reine des Fêtes." For the Organ. (Nos. 444 and 445, St. Cecilia Series.) $1.50 (6s.).

YOUNG, S.—"In the Oratory." Sacred Song for middle or low voice, with Violin and Harp Obbligatos. 75 cents (3s.).

TENOR WANTED. West-End Church. Must read and sing in tune. £25. Write, "T," 110, Westcombe Park Road, S.E.3

ALTO WANTED. St. Patrick's Cathedral, Armagh. Salary, £100 a year. Duties light. Apply, Dr. Chaundy, Armagh.

ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER WANTED for Christ Church, Accrington. Applications, stating qualifications and salary required, together with recent testimonials, should be sent to the Vicar on or before Saturday, October 6th.

F.R.C.O.: MS., 12 complete playing Test-papers, 3s. 6d.; 150 Ear-Tests, 2s. 6d. A.R.C.O.: 27 Vocal Score Tests, 3s. 6d.; 24 Hymn Tunes for Transposition, 2s.; 150 Ear-Tests, 2s.; 24 Accompaniment Tests, 5s.; Hints on Playing and P. W., 3s. 6d. Up to date. F.R.C.O./L., c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

MUSIC BARGAIN. New and Second-hand, from extensive library of deceased musician. To be SOLD CHEAP. Best editions, classics and modern composers, Organ, Piano, Vocal, Violin, Chamber-music, &c. Write for lists. Box 21, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

VIRGIL CLAVIER FOR SALE. 13 Copies Mendelssohn's "St. Paul." What offers? Mrs. Juleff, Taunton, Somerset.

GRAND NEW ORGAN of the best description. Two manuals (61); 25 Stops, 4 on Pedal. Electric Blowing, £940, including erection. A.R.A.M., Wellington Gardens, Hastings.

AUTHORS and COMPOSERS. Songs and Musical Compositions Revised, Printed, and Published on a Royalty basis. Send MSS. (Words or Music) to The Carlton Publications, 151, Nevill Road, London, N.16.

IMPORTANT TO COMPOSERS.—Send stamp for our latest prospectus on music publishing. The Norman Reed Music Company, 133A, Charing Cross Road, London, W.C.2.

BABY JOY

SUITE FOR PIANOFORTE

BY

R. WALKER ROBSON.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

PRODUCED AT THE GLOUCESTER MUSICAL FESTIVAL

JUST PUBLISHED

Ye Choirs of New Jerusalem

MOTET

For Chorus, Organ and Orchestra

Founded on the ancient Sarum Hymn Melody, "Chorus Novæ Jerusalem"

COMPOSED BY

BASIL HARWOOD

Op. 47.

PRICE ONE SHILLING

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

New Numbers in the "YORK SERIES."

ALLELUIA HAIL WITH GLADNESS.
J. Lamont Galbraith.
Cantata. Price 2s. net.

CROWN OF LIFE.
Noel Hannenford.
Cantata. Price 2s. net.

THE SHEFFIELD CATHEDRAL DESCANTS.
(24 Settings of Popular Hymn Tunes.)
By T. W. Hanforth.
Price 6d.

BANKS & SON, Music Publishers, YORK.

PIANO REPAIRS. "WIGMORE HALL FINISH" denotes a standard not obtainable elsewhere.
THE MOST HIGHLY SKILLED WORKMANSHIP.
THE FINEST MATERIALS (regardless of cost).
PERFECT SATISFACTION.

Wigmore Hall and Piano Galleries, 32-40, Wigmore Street, W.1.

STEINWAY STUDIOS

COMFORTABLY FURNISHED
ELECTRIC LIGHT
CENTRAL HEATING
TELEPHONE LIFT
NEW STEINWAY PIANOS

Full particulars from

STEINWAY & SONS
THE NEW STEINWAY HALL,
1 & 2, GEORGE ST., CONDUIT ST., LONDON, W.1.
'Phone: Mayfair 6641-5.

PIANOS

BY

Bechstein, Bord, Schiedmayer,
Chappell, Rogers, Gors, & Kallmann

and other celebrated makers

The Profession most cordially invited to inspect our large and varied stock of New and Second-hand Pianos. Cash, Hire, or Hire-purchase. Pianos taken in exchange.

Apply for lists:

CHAS. STILES & CO.
74-76, SOUTHAMPTON ROW
LONDON, W.C.1.
'Phone: Museum 0439.

No. 103.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS AND EDUCATIONAL SERIES

THE ART OF PIANOFORTE PRACTISING

WITH AN APPENDIX ON

LEGATO-PEDALLING

BY

C. EGERTON LOWE

Price Two Shillings

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

CRAMER

MAGNIFICENT 1928
LATEST MODELS

| | |
|---|---|
| BABY GRAND ... | 120 Gns. |
| UPRIGHT GRAND | 65 Gns. |
| UPRIGHT PLAYER FULL SCALE LATEST DEVICES | 103 Gns. |

Write for our very generous Hire-Purchase Terms.

J. B. CRAMER & CO., Ltd.,
139 New Bond St., W.1.
46 Moorgate, E.C.2.
128/130 Kensington High Street, W.8.

FERD. KUECHLER'S

(Teacher at the Leipsic Conservatory)

COURSE of VIOLIN INSTRUCTION

is a

TRIUMPH

of practical teaching

TO KNOW IT IS TO RECOMMEND IT

Send for a specimen copy from the publishers, or ask your music-seller to let you have one on approval.

HUG & Co.
MUSIC PUBLISHERS.
LEIPSIC

"Such settings as these cannot do otherwise than tend to popularise the Church Service."—Musical Standard, June 6, 1891.
"Good, effective, easy, and dignified."—Musical Times, April 1, 1891.
"Admirably adapted to meet the requirements of the majority of choirs and congregations." "Deserve extensive recognition and use."—Musical News, September 4 and 25, 1891.
Also recommended by the Guardian, Church Times, &c., &c.

POPULAR CHURCH MUSIC
BY
J. H. MAUNDER

| | Staff Notation. | Tonic Sol-fa. |
|---|---|---|
| CHRISTMAS ANTHEMS. | | |
| Anthem—Christians, Awake ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Once in Bethlehem ... ... ... ... ... | 3d. | 2d. |
| Two Christmas Carols ... ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| SERVICES | | |
| SERVICE IN G ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2s. | 1s. 4d. |
| Or, separately:— | | |
| Te Deum ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Benedicite, omnia Opera ... ... ... | 3d. | 3d. |
| Benedictus ... ... ... ... ... | 3d. | 3d. |
| Jubilate ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Office for the Holy Communion ... ... | 10d. | 8d. |
| Pater Noster from the above ... ... | 3d. | 3d. |
| Amen ditto ... ... | 1½d. | 1½d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| SERVICE IN CHANT FORM (No. 1) ... ... ... | 1s. 4d. | 10d. |
| Or, separately:— | | |
| Te Deum, &c., with Kyrie ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Office for the Holy Communion ... ... | 8d. | 6d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Te Deum in B flat... ... ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in C (partly Unison) | 4d. | 2d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in D ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| ORGAN. | | |
| Voix Seraphique (for Recitals)... ... ... ... | 2s. 6d. | — |
| CHURCH CANTATA. | | |
| Penitence, Pardon, and Peace (for general use) ... | 2s. | 1s. 4d. |

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

TEXT-BOOKS
BY
ALBERT HAM, MUS. DOC., F.R.C.O.

OUTLINES OF MUSICAL FORM
WITH ANALYSES FROM
WELL-KNOWN CLASSICAL WORKS.
Price ... Five Shillings.

"In all respects this is an admirable little work, with no waste, no hiatus of a serious nature, handy in size, and with a practical scheme well carried through."—Musical Times.
DR. C. W. PEARCE, in alluding to the above work, says:
"Quite the best I have ever seen, and I shall lose no opportunity for recommending it."

THE RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC AND ELEMENTARY HARMONY.
THIRD EDITION.
Price ... Five Shillings.

"Dr. Ham's admirable little work may be cordially recommended."—Musical Times.

THE SOLITUDES OF THE PASSION
A PASSIONTIDE CANTATA.
For Solo Voices (Tenor and Baritone) and Chorus, with Hymns for Choir and Congregation.
Price 2s. Words only, 12s. 6d. per 100.

"A useful addition to the store of choral works for use in Lent and Passiontide is Dr. Albert Ham's Cantata, 'The Solitudes of the Passion.' The words are Biblical and well selected. The music is devotional and very singable."—Musical Times.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| MINUET AND TRIO FOR ORGAN ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| PEDAL AND MANUAL SCALES AND ARPEGGIOS ... | 2 | 6 |
| ANTHEMS: The desert shall rejoice. S. or T. Solo and Chorus (S.A.T.B.) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| I heard the Voice of Jesus say. Bar. Solo and Chorus (T.T.B.B.) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 4 |
| PART-SONG: Music, when soft voices die (S.A.T.B.) ... ... | 0 | 3 |

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

TWELVE
INTROITS OR SHORT ANTHEMS

SET 2

| No. | | |
|---|---|---|
| 1. | GIVE EAR UNTO MY PRAYER ... ... ... ... ... | JACQUES ARCADELT |
| 2. | WE WAIT FOR THY LOVING-KINDNESS ... ... ... ... | PHILIP ARMES |
| 3. | THE SACRIFICES OF GOD ... ... ... ... ... ... | HUGH BLAIR |
| 4. | ALMIGHTY GOD, WHO HAST ME BROUGHT ... ... ... ... | THOMAS FORD |
| 5. | SET YOUR AFFECTIONS ... ... ... ... ... ... | ...ALFRED R. GAUL |
| 6. | O GOD, WHOSE NATURE AND PROPERTY ... ... ... ... | ALAN GRAY |
| 7. | REND YOUR HEART ... ... ... ... ... ... | F. A. GORE OUSELEY |
| 8. | COME, LET US WORSHIP ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | PALESTRINA |
| 9. | BEHOLD, GOD IS MY HELPER ... ... ... ... ... ... | JOHN STAINER |
| 10. | I WILL LAY ME DOWN IN PEACE ... ... ... ... | ARTHUR S. SULLIVAN |
| 11. | O GOD OF BETHEL ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | CHRISTOPHER TYE |
| 12. | BLESSED ARE THEY ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | S. S. WESLEY |

PRICE ONE SHILLING
Each Introit may be had separately

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NOVELLO'S EDITIONS

A SELECTED LIST OF SACRED SONGS

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS, except where otherwise stated.

Abbreviations: (S) Soprano; (M-S) Mezzo-Soprano; (C) Contralto; (T) Tenor; (Bar) Baritone; (B) Bass.

| | Range of Lowest Key. |
|---|---|
| FRANZ ABT | |
| Ave Maria (O Lord most Holy). E (S or T) ... ... (1/6) | E—G♯ |
| THOMAS ADAMS | |
| Nearer my God to Thee. E flat (C or B); F (S or T) ... | B♭—E♭ |
| Radiant Morn, The. D (M-S, C, or Bar) ... ... ... | C♯—E |
| Rock of Ages. E (C or Bar); G (S or T) ... ... ... | B—E |
| IVOR ATKINS | |
| Virgin's Lullaby, The. G minor (M-S) ... ... (1/6) | D—F |
| EDGAR L. BAINTON | |
| Song of the Virgin Mother, A. D (M-S) ... ... ... | D—F♯ |
| JOSEPH BARNBY | |
| Elizabeth's Song. G minor (C or M-S) ... ... ... | D—E |
| Soft southern breeze. B flat (Bar); D flat (T) ... ... | D♭—F |
| When I view the Mother holding (Christmastide). D (C or M-S) ... ... ... ... ... ... (1/6) | D—D |
| JOHN F. BARNETT | |
| Rock of Ages, The. E minor (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... | B—F♯ |
| JULIUS BENEDICT | |
| I mourn as a dove. A (S) ... ... ... ... ... (1/6) | D♯—A |
| Lord is very pitiful, The. F (T) ... ... ... ... (1/6) | E—G |
| O thou afflicted. D flat (C) ... ... ... ... (1/6) | A♭—D♭ |
| W. STERNDALE BENNETT | |
| His salvation is nigh them that fear Him. G (Bar); B (T) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... (1/6) | D—E |
| O Lord, Thou hast searched me out. F (C) ... ... (1/6) | C—D |
| Whosoever drinketh of this water. E (B) ... ... (1/6) | B—E |
| A. HERBERT BREWER | |
| Virgin's Cradle Song, The. F (M-S) ... ... ... ... | D—F |
| GERARD F. COBB | |
| It came upon the midnight clear (Christmastide). D (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | D—E |
| WILLEM COENEN | |
| Beyond. D flat (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... ... ... | D♭—F |
| Come unto Me. D (C or B); F (M-S or Bar); G (S or T) | C—D |
| Father, forgive them (Lent). F minor (S or T) ... ... | E—F |
| I shall see Thee again. F (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... | E—F |
| Thou wilt remember us. C (C or B); D flat (Bar or M-S); E flat (S or T) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | B—E |
| ANTONIN DVOŘÁK | |
| Inflammatus et Accensus (Latin words only). D minor (C) | A—E |
| EDWARD ELGAR | |
| Angel's Song, The. C (M-S) ... ... ... ... (1/6) | D♯—E |
| As a Spirit didst thou pass. E flat (T) ... ... ... | F—A |
| PERCY E. FLETCHER | |
| Hark! hark! my soul! C (C or B); E flat (S or T) ... | A—D |
| MYLES B. FOSTER | |
| O for a closer walk with God. C (M-S or Bar); D (S or T) | C—E |
| ALFRED R. GAUL | |
| Eye hath not seen. G (C); B flat (M-S) ... ... (1/6) | B—D |
| Ruth (Entreat me not to leave thee). B flat (M-S or S) (1/6) | C—F |
| CHARLES GOUNOD | |
| Angel hosts descending. F (S or T) ... ... ... ... | C—G |
| Holy Vision, The. D minor (S or T) ... ... ... ... | D—F♯ |
| Jerusalem. A minor (S or T) ... ... ... ... | E—B |
| Nazareth. E flat (C or Bar); F (S or T) ... ... (1/6) | B—F |
| Power and Love. A (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... ... | E—F♯ |
| There is a green hill. D (C or B); E (M-S or Bar); F (S or T)... ... ... ... ... ... ... | C♯—D |
| CARL H. GRAUN | |
| Lo! the heaven-descended prophet. B flat (S) ... ... | E♭—C |

| | Range of Lowest Key. |
|---|---|
| ROBERT KING (Arranged by H. A. CHAMBERS.) | |
| Come, O Thou Traveller unknown. D (C or B); F (M-S or Bar) | C—F |
| CHARLES H. LLOYD | |
| O Father all-creating (Weddings). E (S or T) ... ... | E—G♯ |
| ALEXANDER C. MACKENZIE | |
| Cross and Crown. B flat (S or T) ... ... ... ... | C—G |
| Dormi Jesu (The Virgin's Cradle Hymn) (Latin words only). E (C or M-S) | E—E |
| For lo, the winter is past. B flat and C (T)... ... ... | E—G |
| Lord is my Shepherd, The. G (S) ... ... ... ... | E—G |
| EDWARD J. MARGETSON | |
| Far from my heavenly home. E flat (C or Bar); G (S or T) | B♭—E♭ |
| JOHN H. MAUNDER | |
| O lovely flowers (Harvest). G (C or Bar); A (S or T) ... | B—G |
| BERNHARD MOLIQUE | |
| Pour out thy heart before the Lord. A flat (T) ... (1/-) | E♭—A♭ |
| ALICE A. NEEDHAM | |
| Far from my heavenly home. C minor (C or Bar); D minor (M-S) | C—F |
| HORATIO W. PARKER | |
| Come, Holy Ghost (Whitsun). D (S) ... ... ... | D—G |
| Lo, now the shades of night. A flat (C) ... ... ... | A♭—E♭ |
| Declining now the sun's bright wheel. E flat minor (Bar) | B♭—E♭ |
| C. HUBERT H. PARRY | |
| Ballad of Meshullemeth, The. E flat (C) ... ... ... | B♭—F |
| God breaketh the battle. G (T) ... ... ... ... | D—A |
| Lady! thou Queen of Israel. E flat (S) ... ... ... | D—A♭ |
| Lord is long-suffering, The. (C or M-S) ... ... ... | D—E |
| JOHN POINTER | |
| How shall I sing that Majesty (with Chorus ad lib.) In two keys, C and D | C—G |
| D. PUGHE-EVANS | |
| Lead, Kindly Light. E flat (C or Bar); F (M-S); G (S or T) | C—E♭ |
| Return unto thy rest. E flat (C or Bar) ... ... ... | B♭—E♭ |
| HENRY PURCELL | |
| Now that the sun (Evening Hymn). E flat (C); G (S) ... | B♭—E♭ |
| J. JOACHIM RAFF | |
| Twilight is gently falling, The (Ave Maria). E flat (S or T) | E♭—A♭ |
| ROLAND ROGERS | |
| Lead, Kindly Light. F (C or Bar) ... ... ... ... | A—F |
| FRANZ SCHUBERT | |
| Litany for All Souls' Day. E flat (C or Bar) ... (1/6) | C—E♭ |
| JOHN STAINER | |
| My Maker and my King. D (S) ... ... ... (1/6) | C♯—F♯ |
| ALESSANDRO STRADELLA | |
| O God, have mercy (Pietà Signore). D minor (S or T) ... | D—G |
| ERIC H. THIMAN | |
| Birds, The. C (M-S or Bar); D (S or T) ... ... ... | D—F |
| God of Love my Shepherd is, The. F (C or Bar); A flat (M-S) | A—D |
| In the bleak mid-winter. D (C or Bar); F (S or T) ... | A—E |
| Jesus the very thought of Thee. B flat (C or Bar); D (M-S) | B♭—D |
| My Master hath a garden. F (M-S or Bar); G (S or T) (1/6) | C—F |
| HERBERT W. WAREING | |
| Jesu, Lover of my soul. E flat (M-S or Bar) ... ... | B♭—F |
| H. LANE WILSON | |
| Lord is my Shepherd, The. E flat (C or Bar); F (M-S); A flat (S or T) | B♭—E♭ |

For songs by Bach, Handel, Mendelssohn, &c., see separate lists and catalogues.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

SCHUBERT CENTENARY

COMPOSITIONS BY FRANZ SCHUBERT

CANTATAS, MASSES, Etc.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| Song of Miriam, The (Sol-fa, 8d.; Sol-fa, Welsh words, 8d.) | 1 | 6 |
| Lazarus (Selection only) | 2 | 6 |
| Mass in E flat | 3 | 0 |
| do. A flat | 1 | 6 |
| do. F (Sol-fa, 1s.) | 1 | 6 |
| do. B flat | 1 | 6 |
| do. C | 1 | 6 |
| do. G | 1 | 6 |

SERVICES

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Communion Service in | A flat | 3 | 0 |
| do. | do. B flat | 3 | 0 |
| do. | do. C | 3 | 0 |
| do. | do. E flat | 3 | 0 |
| do. | do. F | 3 | 0 |
| do. | do. G | 3 | 0 |

ANTHEMS

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Christ has risen (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 4 |
| Good it is to thank the Almighty | 0 | 8 |
| Great is Jehovah the Lord (Solo Tenor and T.T.B.B.) (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Great is Jehovah the Lord (with Chorus for S.A.T.B.) (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Lord, in thankful love adoring | 0 | 2 |
| The Lord is my Shepherd. S.S.A.A. (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| do. do. do. S.A.T.B. (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Where Thou reignest (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 4 |

PIANOFORTE SOLOS

PIANOFORTE ALBUMS.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| No. 47. Four Impromptus (Op. 90) | 1 | 6 |
| ,, 48. do. do. (Op. 142) | 1 | 6 |
| ,, 49. Moments Musicals, Adagio and Rondo | 1 | 6 |
| ,, 50. Ten Variations, &c. | 1 | 6 |
| ,, 51. Adagio, Allegretto, &c. | 1 | 6 |
| ,, 52. Five Klavierstücke and Two Scherzi | 1 | 6 |

ORGAN ARRANGEMENTS

For particulars see Novello's Catalogue.

PART-SONGS, Etc.

MIXED VOICES

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| Dance we so gaily | 0 | 4 |
| Forth to the Meadows ("Rosamunde") (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 4 |
| God in the Thunderstorm (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Hail to the Chief (Boat Song) (arranged) | 0 | 3 |
| How merry is life ("Rosamunde") (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 3 |
| Hymn to the Eternal | 0 | 4 |
| To Sylvia. Arranged by John E. West (Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 3 |
| Welcome Spring (Op. 33). A Suite of Vocal Dances: | | |
| 1. Welcome Spring2. How sweet to wander | 0 | 4 |
| 3. Come, O come, dearest4. As the watcher longs5. I'm in no hurry to marry | 0 | 4 |
| 6. When gallant lovers7. An end will I bring to doubt | 0 | 4 |
| 8. Her true love she greeteth9. As dew-drops at morn10. Hark! silv'ry bells chiming | 0 | 4 |
| 11. Tender music all inviting | 0 | 4 |

MALE VOICES

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Far beyond all mortal ken (Chorus of Spirits, from "Rosamunde"). T.T.B.B. (Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 2 |
| Gondolier's serenade. T.T.B.B. (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Hail to the Chief (Boat Song). (T.T.B.B.) (Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 3 |
| Night is cloudless and serene, The. (T. solo, T.T.B.B.) | 0 | 8 |
| Song of the spirits over the waters. (Double chorus, T.T.B.B.) (Sol-fa, 8d.) | 1 | 6 |
| Spectres' Dance, The. T.T.B.B. | 0 | 3 |

FEMALE VOICES

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Five ChorusesOr singly:— | 1 | 6 |
| Coronach (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 4 |
| Glory to the Lord Almighty | 0 | 4 |
| God in Nature. (A. Solo.) (S.S.A.A.) (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| Lord is my Shepherd, The. (S.S.A.A.) (Sol-fa, 2d.) | 0 | 6 |
| do. do., arranged for S.A. (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 4 |
| Serenade. (A. Solo and Chorus. S.S.A.A.) (Sol-fa, 3d.) | 0 | 8 |
| Forth to the Meadows ("Rosamunde") (arranged for Two parts, with three-part Semi-Chorus) (Sol-fa, 1½d.) | 0 | 3 |
| To Sylvia (arranged for S.S., or C.). Staff and Sol-fa combined | 0 | 2 |

SONGS BY FRANZ SCHUBERT

VOL. 1

TWENTY SONGS

FOR A MEZZO-SOPRANO VOICE

SELECTED, EDITED, AND TRANSLATED BY

NATALIA MACFARREN

Price 2*s.* 6*d.*

Praise of Tears.
Knowest thou the land? (Mignon's first song in "Wilhelm Meister").
The Message of Flowers
Nought may'st thou ask me (Mignon's second song in "Wilhelm Meister").
Oh, let me dream till I awaken (Mignon's third song in "Wilhelm Meister").
The greenwood calls.
The full-orbed moon (Romance from "Rosamund").
Hallow'd night, descend.
Huntsman, rest (Ellen's second song in "The Lady of the Lake").
Thro' the pine-wood.
The Summer waves.
Wanderer's night-song
Trust in Spring.
The maiden's lament.
To Mignon.
The passing-bell.
Alinda.
Ave Maria (Ellen's third song in "The Lady of the Lake").
The fisherman.
On the water.

VOL. 2

TWENTY SONGS

FOR A CONTRALTO VOICE

SELECTED, EDITED, AND TRANSLATED BY

NATALIA MACFARREN

Price 2*s.* 6*d.*

The wanderer.
Fisher's song.
The angry bard.
The unlucky fisherman.
Old man's song.
The flight of time.
Litany for All Souls' day.
The weary heart.
Minstrel's treasure.
Soldiers' drinking song.
Sadness.
To the lyre.
Calm at sea.
Lay of the imprisoned huntsman.
Passing to Hades.
Comfort in tears.
Death and the maiden.
Crusaders.
Dithyramb.
Prometheus.

VOL. 3

TWENTY SONGS

FOR SOPRANO OR TENOR

SELECTED, EDITED, AND TRANSLATED BY

NATALIA MACFARREN

Price 2*s.* 6*d.*

The Erl King.
Omnipotence.
Love's unrest.
Rose among the heather.
Sad heart.
The band of roses.
Thou art repose.
Ganymede.
Mignon.
Secrets.
Hark, hark, the lark.
Thee would I greet.
To the beloved one.
Suleika's second song.
Presence of the loved one.
Laughing and weeping.
Margaret's prayer.
By the doorways I will wander.
To a brooklet.
To Sylvia.

VOL. 4

SWAN SONGS

(SCHWANENGESANG)

GERMAN AND ENGLISH WORDS

THE ENGLISH VERSION BY

J. TROUTBECK

Edited, with marks for phrasing, expression, and breathing

BY

ALBERTO RANDEGGER

Price 2*s.* 6*d.*

Love's message—Liebesbotschaft.
The soldier's presentiment—Krieger's Ahnung.
Longings in Spring—Frühlingssehnsucht.
A serenade—Ständchen.
The retreat—Aufenthalt.
In a strange land—In der Fremde.
Departure—Abschied.
Atlas—Der Atlas.
Her portrait—Ihr Bild.
The fishermaiden—Das Fischermädchen.
The town—Die Stadt.
By the sea—Am Meer.
The apparition—Der Doppelgänger.
The pigeon post—Die Taubenpost.

VOL. 5

"THE FAIR MAID OF THE MILL"

(DIE SCHÖNE MÜLLERIN)

GERMAN AND ENGLISH WORDS

THE ENGLISH VERSION BY

J. TROUTBECK

Edited, with marks for phrasing, expression, and breathing,

BY

ALBERTO RANDEGGER

Price 2*s.* 6*d.*

Wandering—Das Wandern
Whither—Wohin.
Halt!—Halt.
Gratitude to the brook—Dankesagung an den Bach.
Evening rest—Am Feierabend.
The question—Der Neugierige.
Impatience—Ungeduld.
Morning greeting—Morgengruss.
The miller's flowers—Des Müller's Blumen.
A rain of tears—Thränenregen.
Mine—Mein.
A pause—Pause.
With the green ribbon—Mit dem grünen Lautenbande.
The hunter—Der Jäger
Jealousy and pride—Eifersucht und Stolz.
The pleasing colour—Die liebe Farbe.
The hateful colour—Die böse Farbe.
Faded flowers—Trockne Blumen.
The miller and the brook—Der Müller und der Bach.
The brook's lullaby—Des Baches Wiegenlied.

VOL 6

"THE WINTER JOURNEY"

(WINTERREISE)

GERMAN AND ENGLISH WORDS

THE ENGLISH VERSION BY

J. TROUTBECK

Price 2*s.* 6*d.*

Good-night—Gute Nacht.
The weathercock—Die Wetterfahne.
Frozen tears—Gefrorne Thränen.
Benumbed—Erstarrung.
The linden tree—Der Lindenbaum.
A flood—Wasserfluth.
On the stream—Auf dem Flusse.
Looking back—Rückblick.
Jack-a-Lantern—Irrlicht.
Rest—Rast.
A dream of Spring—Frühlingstraum.
Loneliness—Einsamkeit.
The post—Die Post.
The grey head—Der graue Kopf.
The raven—Die Krähe.
The last hope—Letzte Hoffnung.
In the village—Im Dorfe
The stormy morning—Der stürmische Morgen.
Delusion—Täuschung.
The sign-post—Der Wegweiser.
The hostelry—Das Wirthshaus.
Courage—Muth.
The mock suns—Die Nebensonnen.
The organ grinder—Der Leiermann.

THIRTY SONGS

NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS, BOOK 273

IN BOTH NOTATIONS

Price 2*s.*

Ave Maria.
Courage.
Cradle Song.
Crusaders.
Erlaf-Lake.
Fishermaiden, The.
Fisherman, The.
Fisher's Song.
Full-orbed Moon, The.
Greenwood calls, The.
Hark! hark! the Lark.
Harper's Song, The.
Huntsman, rest.
Know'st thou the land.
Lay of the imprisoned Huntsman.
Litany.
Longing.
Ode to Joy.
Organ-Grinder, The.
Peace.
Rose among the heather.
Secrets.
Thou art repose.
To Music.
Trout, The.
Trust in Spring.
Wanderer's Night-Song.
Wandering Miller, The.
Whither.
Who is Sylvia?

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

ORGAN MUSIC

SUITABLE FOR PERFORMANCE AT CINEMAS, Etc.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| J. BENEDICT | | |
| Variations on Arne's "Where the bee sucks" ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| DUDLEY BUCK | | |
| At Evening ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| WALFORD DAVIES | | |
| Solemn Melody ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| EDWARD ELGAR | | |
| Contrasts (The Gavotte) ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| PERCY E. FLETCHER | | |
| Fountain Reverie ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| Matinale ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| EDWARD GERMAN | | |
| Morris Dance (Henry VIII.)... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Shepherds' Dance ,, ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Torch Dance ,, ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| R. G. HAILING | | |
| Chanson de Joie... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| KING HALL | | |
| Canzone ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| ALFRED HOLLINS | | |
| Allegretto Grazioso ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Barcarolle... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Berceuse ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Evening Rest ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| In Springtime ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Intermezzo in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Maytime (Gavotte) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Minuet ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Morning Song ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Spring Song ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| EDWARD J. HORSMAN | | |
| The Curfew ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| BERNARD JOHNSON | | |
| Pavane in A ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| S. KARG-ELERT | | |
| Harmonies du Soir ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| EDWIN H. LEMARE | | |
| Andantino in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Chanson d'Eté ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Elegy in G ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Intermezzo in B flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Madrigal ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Minuet Nuptiale ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Pastorale in E ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Reverie in E flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| Romance in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| J. A. MEALE | | |
| Chanson d'Espoir ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| J. RAFF | | |
| Cavatina ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| SCHUBERT | | |
| Ave Maria ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Serenade ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| BERTHOLD TOURS | | |
| Allegretto Grazioso ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Menuetto ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| TSCHAIKOWSKY | | |
| Chanson Triste ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Chant sans Paroles ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Andantino (Symphony No. 4) ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| ERIC WEBSTER | | |
| Berceuse ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| H. DAVAN WETTON | | |
| Andantino in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| H. A. WHEELDON | | |
| Cantilene ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 6 |
| Canzona ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| W. WOLSTENHOLME | | |
| Canzona ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 6 |
| Romanza and Allegretto in E flat ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

TWENTY SHORT AND EASY PIECES

FOR THE ORGAN

SET VI

| No. | | |
|---|---|---|
| 1. | ADAGIO FROM SEXTETT (Op. 81) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | Beethoven |
| 2. | ALLEGRO GRANDIOSO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | Hugh Blair |
| 3. | LARGO IN E FLAT... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | E. Bunnett |
| 4. | MODERATO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | George Calkin |
| 5. | BERCEUSE ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | César Cui |
| 6. | ADAGIO IN D ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | Otto Dienel |
| 7. | POSTLUDE ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | Edmondstoune Duncan |
| 8. | IMPROMPTU IN A ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | A. M. Goodhart |
| 9. | WEDDING MARCH ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | A. Guilmant |
| 10. | MARCH FROM "ODE ON ST. CECILIA'S DAY" ... ... ... ... | Handel |
| 11. | LIEDER OHNE WORTE, No. 9 ... ... .. ... ... ... | F. Mendelssohn-Bartholdy |
| 12. | ALLEGRO IN C ... ... ... ... ... .. ... ... ... ... | Gustav Merkel |
| 13. | ANDANTE ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | Reissiger |
| 14. | POSTLUDE IN F ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | J. Varley Roberts |
| 15. | PRELUDE ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | B. Luard-Selby |
| 16. | PRELUDE IN A ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | Henry Smart |
| 17. | ANDANTE CON MOTO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | Charles Steggall |
| 18. | ALLEGRETTO GRAZIOSO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | Berthold Tours |
| 19. | COMMUNION IN B FLAT ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | Ferris Tozer |
| 20. | CON MOTO ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | John E. West |

Price Four Shillings.

Cloth, Six Shillings.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

NOVELLO'S EDITIONS

ORGAN VOLUNTARIES

BASED ON POPULAR HYMN TUNES

ADAMS, THOMAS

Short Fantasia on 'Abridge' (No. 16, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

Short Fantasia on 'Veni, Creator Spiritus' (No. 46, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

BEST, WILLIAM T.

Preludes on the tunes 'London,' 'Halifax,' and 'St. Bride' (Bk. 3, Best's Collection of Pieces)... ... 3 0

CALKIN, J. BAPTISTE

Study on Pleyel's Hymn (No. 4, Calkin's Compositions) ... ... 3 0

DARKE, HAROLD E.

Three Choral Preludes:
'St. Peter'
'Darwell's 148th'
Theme by Tallis
(No. 60, Original Compositions) (New Series) 3 6

FAULKES, WILLIAM

Alleluya, Festal Prelude on the tune 'Lasst uns erfreuen' (No. 110, Original Compositions) (New Series) ... ... ... ... ... 1 6

Fantasia on the old melody 'Urbs beata' (No. 379, Original Compositions) ... ... 1 6

Festival Prelude on 'Ein' feste Burg' (No. 3, Original Compositions) (New Series) 2 0

HIGGS, HENRY M.

Variations on the tune 'Heinlein' (No. 44, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

LÉFÉBURE-WÈLY, L. J. A.

Processional Hymn, 'Adoro te' (No. 6, 'The Modern Organist') ... ... 3 0

LEMARE, EDWIN H.

Concert Fantasia on the tune 'Hanover' (No. 4, Lemare's Original Compositions)... 4 6

MACFARREN, GEORGE A.

Variations on the tune 'Windsor' (No. 81, Original Compositions) ... ... 1 6

MORGAN, THOMAS J.

Fantasia on the tune 'Twrgwyn' (No. 66, Original Compositions) (New Series) 2 0

PARRY, C. HUBERT H.

Seven Chorale Preludes (1st Set):
'Dundee' 'Melcombe'
'Rockingham' 'Christe, Redemptor omnium'
'Hampton'
'Old 104th' 'St. Ann's'
(No. 1, Original Compositions) (New Series) 5 6

PARRY, C. HUBERT H. (continued)

Seven Chorale Preludes (2nd Set):
'Croft's 136th' 'St. Mary'
'Martyrdom' 'Eventide'
'St. Thomas' 'St. Cross'
'Hanover'
(No. 45, Original Compositions) (New Series) 5 6

PYE, JAMES T.

Introductory Voluntary on the Russian Hymn (No. 446, Original Compositions) ... ... 1 6

SILAS, EDWARD

Fantasia on 'St. Ann's' tune (No. 14, Silas's Original Compositions) ... 2 0

SPARK, WILLIAM

Jerusalem the Golden, with Variations and Finale ... ... ... ... ... ... 2 0

STEPHENS, CHARLES E.

Concluding Voluntary or Fantasia on the Chorale 'St. Mary' or 'Hackney' (No. 13, Original Compositions) ... ... 1 6

Fantasia on Choral 'St. James's' (No. 260, Original Compositions) ... ... 2 0

THORNE, EDWARD H.

Variations on the tune 'St. Luke' (No. 306, Original Compositions) ... ... 3 0

WALLACE, JAMES E.

Chorale Fantasia on the tune 'Heinlein' (No. 75, Original Compositions) (New Series) 3 0

WEST, JOHN E.

Prelude on Dykes's tune 'Requiescat' (No. 37, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

Three Chorale Preludes:
'Winchester New'
'Burford'
'St. Michael'
(No. 47, Original Compositions) (New Series) 3 6

Improvisation on Schultz's tune 'We plough the fields' (No. 43, 'The Village Organist') 1 6

Prelude on Sullivan's tune 'We are but strangers here' (No. 37, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

Prelude on Dykes's tune 'Now the labourer's task is o'er' (No. 37, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

WOODS, F. CUNNINGHAM

Variations on Elvey's tune 'Come, ye thankful people, come' (No. 43, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

THE ORGANIST RECITAL SERIES

WITH PEDAL OBLIGATO. Price 1s. 6d. each.

1. Chansonette ... ... Wilfrid Sanderson
2. Songe d'Amour ... Wilfrid Sanderson
3. Serenata ... ... Wilfrid Sanderson
4. Sincerite ... ... Wilfrid Sanderson
5. Novelette ... ... Wilfrid Sanderson
6. Reverie ... ... Wilfrid Sanderson
7. Brise d'Ete ... ... Wilfrid Sanderson
8. Prelude (Rachmaninoff) / Traumerei (Schumann) Wilfrid Sanderson
9. Priere ... ... ... H. Norsworthy
10. Barcarolle ... ... ... A. H. Leary
11. Pastorella ... ... ... Henry Geehl
12. A Memory ... ... ... L. N. Fowles
13. Triumphal March ... Ernest Newton
14. Allegretto in D ... Ernest Newton
15. Dawn (a prelude) ... .... Henry Geehl
16. La Prière des Anges... ... J. E. Newell
17. Canto Religioso ... ... J. A. Meale
18. For all Eternity, &c.... ... A. Mascheroni
19. Nocturne in G minor, Op. 37, No. 1 Chopin
20. Une Idylle ... ... Edward Elgar
21. The Londonderry Air Arr. Ernest Newton
22. Melodie d'Amour (H. Engelmann) Arr. Ernest Newton
23. Hear my Prayer and O for the wings of a Dove (Mendelssohn) Arr. Ernest Newton
24. The Gentle Maiden ... Arr. Ernest Newton
25. Song of the Volga Boatmen Arr. Ernest Newton

Nos. 1—20 published complete in one Volume, bound, price, 7s. 6d. net.

GOULD & BOLTTLER, 47, POLAND STREET, LONDON, W.1.

JUST PUBLISHED

CONCERT EDITION

OF

TALES OF HOFFMANN

OPERA FANTASTIQUE

BY

J. OFFENBACH

(Arranged by Maurice Jacobson)

Price 5/- net.

For full particulars write to

CRAMER'S CHORAL LIBRARY

Edited by MARTIN SHAW

| | | O.N. | Tonic. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1. | A FAERY SONGGranville Bantock, S.C.T.B. ... | 6d. | 4d. |
| 2. | LAMENT FOR MACLEAN OF ARDGOURArr. Heathcote Statham ... ... | 6d. | 4d. |
| 3. | FALERO, LERO, LOO! (Glee)Vincent Thomas, S.S.C.C. ... ... | 6d. | 3d. |
| 4. | THE WILLOW TREEArr. E. T. Sweeting, S.A.T.B. ... | 4d. | 2d. |
| 5. | TWANKYDILLOArr. E. T. Sweeting, S.A.T.B. ... | 6d. | 3d. |
| 6. | TURMUT-HOEIN'Arr. E. T. Sweeting, T.T.B. .. | 4d. | 2d. |
| 7. | MAN'S MEDLEYVincent Thomas, T.T.B.B. ... ... | 6d. | 3d. |
| 8. | THERE'S NONE TO SOOTHE MY SOUL TO RESTErnest Bullock, S.A.T.B. ... ... | 4d. | * |
| 9. | SERVICEMartin Shaw, S.A.T.B. ... ... | 4d. | * |
| 10. | THE WAUKING O' THE FAULDErnest Bullock, S.A.T.B. ... ... | 6d. | 3d. |
| 11. | COME, TUNEFUL FRIENDSNorman O'Neill, S.A.T.B. ... ... | 6d. | 3d. |

* Old Notation and Tonic Sol-fa together.

Write for Specimen copies to

J. B. CRAMER & CO., LTD., 139, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.1.

REEVES' LIST

FRANZ SCHUBERT, MAN AND COMPOSER, THE CENTENARY BIOGRAPHY. A vivid story of a Charming Personality. By Whitaker-Wilson. With Illustrations of Schubert and his Friends. Thick crown 8vo, cloth, 10s.

ART OF ORGAN ACCOMPANIMENT IN THE CHURCH SERVICES. What to do, and what to avoid. By Walter L. Twinning, F.R.C.O. Cloth, 3s. 6d.; paper, 2s. 4d.

REEVES' DICTIONARY OF MUSICAL BIOGRAPHY: Noteworthy Men and Women of the Past and the Present, about 2,500. Edited by Edmondstoune Duncan, and Others. Crown 8vo, cloth, 4s. 6d.; paper covers, 3s. 6d.

STORY OF INDIAN MUSIC AND ITS INSTRUMENTS. Study of the Present and Record of the Past. With Sir William Jones' celebrated Treatise in full. 19 Plates, chiefly of Instruments, 7 Music Illustrations and Map. By Ethel Rosenthal, A.R.C.M., F.R.G.S. Crown 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d. (Ready November 1st.)

THE GIPSY IN MUSIC.—By Franz Liszt. Englished for the first time by Edwin Evans, Senr., and preceded by an Essay on Liszt and his Work. Gipsy and Jew, Two Wandering Races; Gipsy Life in Relation to Art; Gipsy Music and Musicians. The result of the Author's long Experience and Investigations of the Gipsies and their Music. With portraits of the Author, &c. In two handsome volumes, bevelled cloth, 15s.

FREDERIC CHOPIN, Critical and Appreciative Essay. By J. W. Davison, forty years Music Critic of The Times. 1s. 6d.

COMPOSITIONS (21) BY THREE FAMOUS SIXTEENTH- AND SEVENTEENTH-CENTURY MASTERS, William Byrd, Dr. John Bull, and Orlando Gibbons, being Parthenia, or the First Musick ever printed for the Virginals. Edited by Margaret H. Glyn (author of "Elizabethan Virginal Music and its Composers," &c.). Folio, 12s. 6d., or boards, 15s. Contains 8 compositions by Byrd, 7 by Bull, and 6 by Gibbons.

BORODIN THE COMPOSER AND HIS MUSIC. Descriptive and Critical Analysis of his Works, and Study of his Value as an Art Force. Many references to the Russian Kouchka Circle of Five—Balakirev, Moussorgsky, César Cui, and Rimsky-Korsakov, with Borodin. By G. E. H. Abraham. Portraits. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s. 6d.

VIOLINIST'S ENCYCLOPÆDIC DICTIONARY, by F. B. Emery. Containing the Explanation of about 4,000 Words, Phrases, Signs, References, &c., Foreign and English, used in the Study of the Violin and String Music generally. Second edition. Cloth, 6s. 6d.; paper, 4s. 6d.

CONCISE METHOD OF INSTRUMENTATION. How to Write for the Orchestra and Arrange an Orchestral or Band Score. Illustrated with Music Examples and various large folding Charts, and Index. By Edwin Evans, Senr. 8vo, cloth. Vols. I. and II., 7s. 6d. each. Vol. I., How to Write for Strings, Arrangement of Scoring and Preparation of Parts. Vol. II., How to Write for Wood, Brass, and Drums, and Arrange a Band Score.

"THE IMMORTAL NINE"

BEETHOVEN'S NINE SYMPHONIES Fully Described and Analysed. Complete Account of Thematic Material and auxiliary Motives; Analytical Chart of each Movement; full Technical Descriptions of Developments; Particulars of Formal and Rhythmic Features; Epitomical Tables, &c. 637 Music Examples. By Edwin Evans, Senr., author of "Handbook to the Vocal Works of Brahms," &c. Cloth, Vol. I. (Nos. 1 to 5), 10s. 6d. Vol. II. (Nos. 6 to 9), 10s. 6d.

ART OF VIOLONCELLO PLAYING. Complete Tutor. By E. van der Straeten. Text in English and French. Quarto. Part I., 3s. 6d.; Part II., 4s.

ORGAN OVERTURES, arranged by Edwin Evans. Two fresh issues: Mozart's "Figaro"; Rossini's "Semiramide," 3s. each. (List of some 60 in the Series on application.)

ORGAN WITH PEDAL OBBLIGATO. Rachmaninoff's celebrated Prelude. By Edwin Evans. 2s.

NOTES ON THE INTERPRETATION OF 24 FAMOUS PIANO SONATAS OF BEETHOVEN.—By J. Alfred Johnstone (author of "The Art of Teaching Pianoforte Playing," "Piano Touch, Phrasing, and Interpretation," &c.). 8vo, cloth, 6s.

SOME FAMOUS SYMPHONIES, How to Understand Them. With their Story and Simple Analysis. References also to Gramophone Records. Numerous Portraits. By J. F. Porte. Cloth, 4s. 6d., or in two separate parts, paper, 1s. 6d. each.

THE CENTRAL POINT IN BEAUTIFUL VOICE PRODUCTION.—By H. Travers Adams, M.A. Cloth, 2s.; paper, 1s.

THEORY OF MUSIC FOR YOUNG MUSICIANS. With Answers given to all the Questions, and a Dictionary of necessary Musical Terms. By Mary Sharp. Limp cloth, 1s. 6d.; paper covers, 1s.

"THE CREATION" (Haydn). Performing Edition, edited by G. A. Macfarren. Paper, 3s.; boards, 4s.

LONDON: 83, CHARING CROSS ROAD, W.C.2.
ASK FOR REEVES' FULL LIST "B."

The Lay of St. Cuthbert

WORDS FROM

THE INGOLDSBY LEGENDS

SET TO MUSIC
FOR CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA

By WILLIAM H. SPEER

Vocal Score, 3s.; 1st Violin, 3s.; 2nd Violin, 3s.; Viola, 3s.; Violoncello, 2s. 3d.; Basso, 2s. 3d.; Wind Parts, MS.

PRESS NOTICES

"The Concert given by Mr. Edward Mason's Choir in Queen's Hall on the 6th inst., will further enhance its reputation. The most ambitious work performed was Dr. William H. Speer's 'The Lay of St. Cuthbert,' which received its first performance. The 'Ingoldsby Legends' seem to be in demand by modern composers, and Dr. Speer has chosen one which is well devised for such a purpose. The composer has well realised the humour in the poem, and translated it into musical terms which excited the hearty smiles and cordial appreciation of those privileged to hear it. Cleverness stamps every stanza, but it is never employed to the detriment of the spirit of the work. Its length and treatment rank it high amongst modern productions, and we shall enjoy hearing it again."—Musical News.

"It is a fairly simple piece of musical humour, and delighted the large audience."—Daily Mail.

"Dr. W. H. Speer has done his work in a way that indicates that the subject has won his complete sympathy, and has inspired him to put forward one of his best efforts."—Morning Post.

"The broad humour and whimsical fancies of the text are skilfully reflected and developed in the score."—The Scotsman.

"The 'Lay of St. Cuthbert' may be recommended to the attention of amateur choral societies."—The Referee.

"A brilliant setting of 'The Lay of St. Cuthbert.'"—Musical Standard.

"The 'humorous' cantata, it must be confessed, is usually no laughing matter, but Dr. Speer's work is quite a successful example of its class."—Westminster Gazette.

"Later in the evening came an absolute novelty in the production of a cantata, 'The Lay of St. Cuthbert.' Dr. Speer shows a keen appreciation of its quaint humour, and his strains are appropriate and well devised to impress the dramatic points of the lines. It is worthy the attention of choral conductors in search of a short, light work."—Yorkshire Post.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

New "YEAR BOOK PRESS" Publications

| | |
|---|---|
| UNISON SONGS 7. | THREE-PART SONGS 2. |
| TWO-PART SONGS 4. | FOUR-PART SONGS 2. |
| CHURCH MUSIC 5. | INSTRUMENTAL 3. |

All these are just ready. Approval parcels, Post Free.

H. F. W. DEANE & SONS, THE YEAR BOOK PRESS, LTD., 31, MUSEUM STREET, LONDON, W.C.1.

T. MEE PATTISON'S POPULAR CANTATA

THE ANCIENT MARINER

33rd 1,000.

Vocal Score, 2s. 6d. Choruses only, 1s. 3d.

Band Parts may be hired.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

Save Half the Cost of your Music Library

by buying from Foyle's, who hold an exceptionally wide range of second-hand copies (in good condition) of Orchestral, Vocal, and Pianoforte Music, Oratorios, Operas, Text-Books, Albums, &c., at greatly reduced prices.

Call and examine the stock at leisure, or write asking for Catalogue of Music Dept., mentioning definite requirements.

NEW MUSIC AND TEXT-BOOKS
Supplied on the best terms and quick delivery guaranteed.

THIS MONTH'S SPECIAL OFFER.

Tudor Church Music

Recovered from the archives of Cathedral and other libraries. The work of re-discovery, trans-notation, and editing, carried through by a Committee headed by Sir Richard Terry.

Vol. 1. John Taverner, Part I. ; Vol. 2. William Byrd: English Church Music, Part I. ; Vol. 3. John Taverner, Part II. ; Vol. 4. Orlando Gibbons ; Vol. 5. Robert White ; Vol. 7. William Byrd ; Gradualia, Books I. and II.

Handsome volumes, royal 4to (13-in. × 10-in.).
Published £2 2*s.* per volume. A few copies offered, nearly new, at 21*s.* per volume ; postage 9*d.*
Sent on approval. Quote Offer 122.

FOYLE'S MUSIC DEPT.,
119-125, CHARING CROSS ROAD, LONDON, W.C.2.

No. 91. NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS

SYSTEM IN MUSICAL NOTATION

BY

H. ELLIOT BUTTON

WITH PREFACE BY

SIR EDWARD ELGAR

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE

Extract from Introduction :

The object of this book is to point out to composers, arrangers, and editors, the difficulties they often unwittingly place in the path of executants, and to suggest various means of obviating those difficulties.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

NOVELLO'S ELEMENTARY MUSIC MANUALS

No.
1.—PART-WRITING FOR BEGINNERS, by J. W. IVIMEY. The Rules tabulated are for the guidance of beginners in the Art of Part-writing. Many of them change from rules to recommendations, when the students become more advanced. Bound in linen covers. Price 8d.
2.—LESSONS IN HARMONIZING MELODIES, by CUTHBERT HARRIS. Many elementary students of harmony can satisfactorily add parts to figured basses, but are unable to harmonize even simple melodies. This book gives minute instruction which any student can understand. Part I. Price 2s. 6d.
3.—AN ELEMENTARY MIXED-VOICE SIGHT-SINGING COURSE (Staff Notation through Tonic Sol-fa), by GEORGE LANE. The Exercises are written in the Treble and Bass Clefs, in order that the Book may be used by Male and Female voices in one class. Suitable for Evening Continuation Schools. Part I. Price 8d.
4.—AN ELEMENTARY MIXED-VOICE SIGHT-SINGING COURSE (Staff Notation through Tonic Sol-fa). by GEORGE LANE. Part II. Price 8d.
5.—HINTS TO YOUNG VIOLINISTS, by C. EGERTON LOWE. Price 1s. 6d.
6.—LESSONS IN HARMONIZING MELODIES, by CUTHBERT HARRIS. Part II. Price 2s. 6d.
7.—ADDITIONAL EXERCISES IN HARMONIZING MELODIES, by CUTHBERT HARRIS. Price 8d.
8.—HINTS ON PIANOFORTE TEACHING (chiefly to Boys), by E. D. RENDALL. Price 2s. 6d.
9.—SCHOOL CHOIR TRAINING, by MARGARET NICHOLLS. A Practical Course of Lessons on Voice Production for the guidance of Teachers of Class Singing. Price 3s.
(The Appendix, published separately : Hints on Part-Singing and Exercises, 3d. ; Sol-fa, 3d.)
10.—THE COMPOSITION OF SIMPLE MELODIES, by ROBERT T. WHITE. Price 2s. 6d.
11.—PHYSICAL EXERCISES IN THE INFANT SCHOOL, by MARGARET A. HUGHES. Price 4s. 6d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

TECHNIQUE AND EXPRESSION IN PIANOFORTE PLAYING

BY

FRANKLIN TAYLOR.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

In the course of my experience as a teacher of the pianoforte, an experience extending over many years, certain ideas have from time to time suggested themselves to me which have proved useful—to myself, as enabling me to express more clearly that which I desired my pupils to understand, and to my pupils, as tending to facilitate their comprehension of the various difficulties they have had to encounter, at the same time leading them to perceive the most practical means of overcoming them, and thus accelerating their general rate of progress.

These suggestions relate to both the mechanical and intellectual sides of the study of pianoforte-playing, or briefly, to Technique and Expression, the chief matters implied by the first of these terms being the production of various qualities of tone, the choice of suitable fingering, and the best methods of attacking certain difficulties ; while the second, which may perhaps be more aptly designated the means of expression, includes rhythm, phrasing, variety and gradation of tone, the use of the pedals, et cætera.

WITH NUMEROUS MUSICAL EXAMPLES FROM THE WORKS OF THE GREAT MASTERS.

PRICE, CLOTH GILT, SEVEN SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE NET.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED.

"By the deep–nine!"

A NAUTICAL FANTASY
FOR ∴ MIXED ∴ VOICES

By

ALEC ROWLEY

Vocal Score, 2/6 net.

IT was one of the happiest inspirations to combine in logical sequence many of the well-known British sea songs portraying a journey of a jolly tar from "anchor's a-weigh" to his return to port. Alec Rowley's able part-writing, his sense of colour and balance are splendidly exemplified in "By the deep—NINE!" It is full of interest for singers and listeners. There are jolly tunes and sad tunes, with a rousing finale. Parts of the work are a cappella to afford variety.

The accompaniment is for piano with a second piano ad libitum; it is also scored for orchestra. Time of performance about thirty minutes.

Send 6d. for conductor's specimen copy.

PUBLISHED BY

WINTHROP ROGERS LIMITED,

Sole Agents: Hawkes & Son (London) Ltd.,
Denman Street, W.1.

NOVELLO'S RECENT PUBLICATIONS

FOLIO SONGS

Sacred

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| AS A SPIRIT DIDST THOU PASS. Tenor Solo, from "The Light of Life." ... ... ... Edward Elgar | 2 | 0 |
| BIRDS, THE. In 2 keys, C and D ... Eric H. Thiman | 1 | 6 |
| COME, O THOU TRAVELLER UNKNOWN. In 2 keys, D and F. Melody by Robert King, 1722. Arr. by H. A. Chambers | 2 | 0 |
| GOD OF LOVE MY SHEPHERD IS, THE. In 2 keys, F and A♭ ... ... ... ... ... ... Eric H. Thiman | 2 | 0 |
| IN THE BLEAK MIDWINTER. In 2 keys, D and F Eric H. Thiman | 2 | 0 |
| JESUS, THE VERY THOUGHT OF THEE. In 2 keys, B♭ and D ... ... ... ... ... Eric H. Thiman | 2 | 0 |
| MY MASTER HATH A GARDEN. In 2 keys, F and G Eric H. Thiman | 1 | 6 |

Secular

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| DOLLY (THE MILKMAID). In 2 keys, C and E flat E. Douglas Tayler | 2 | 0 |
| LORDING'S DAUGHTER, THE. In 2 keys, D minor and F minor ... ... ... ... ... Edward German | 2 | 0 |
| RAINBOW, THE. In 2 keys, E and G Eric H. Thiman | 2 | 0 |
| SILVER SWAN, THE. In 2 keys, B♭ minor and C minor Eric H. Thiman | 1 | 6 |
| SONG OF THE VOLGA BOATMEN (arr. by John E. West) | 1 | 6 |
| SPRIG OF SHAMROCK, A (Four old Irish Airs). String Quartet or Pianoforte accompaniment. High or low voice. Adapted and arranged by A. Herbert Brewer | 3 | 6 |

PART-SONGS FOR FEMALE VOICES

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| BLESSED DAMOZEL, THE. S.S.A.A., with Semi-Choruses, 1 and 2 ... ... ... ... ... ... Julius Harrison | 1 | 6 |
| BRIDAL SONG (S.S.A.) ... ... ... Edgar L. Bainton | 0 | 3 |
| GREEN LINNET, THE. Two-Part ... Edgar L. Bainton | 0 | 4 |
| SONG OF THE WATERS, THE. Two-Part. George Rathbone | 0 | 4 |
| TO DAFFODILS. Two-Part in Canon ... Eric H. Thiman | 0 | 3 |
| WHEN THE GREEN LEAVES COME AGAIN. Two-Part Percy E. Fletcher | 0 | 4 |
| WHO IS SYLVIA? Two-Part (arr. by John Pointer) Edward German | 0 | 4 |
| WOODED HILL, THE (Four Two-part Songs): | | |
| No. 1. Early Spring, The ... ... Ethel Boyce | 0 | 4 |
| 2. Summer Heat ... ... ... ... ,, ,, | 0 | 3 |
| 3. Autumn Time ... ... ... ... ,, ,, | 0 | 4 |
| 4. The Holly ... ... ... ... ,, ,, | 0 | 4 |

PART-SONGS FOR MIXED VOICES

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| CAMEL'S HUMP, THE (arranged) ... Edward German | 0 | 4 |
| GOLDEN SKEIN, THE ... ... ...Edgar L. Bainton | 0 | 3 |
| SLEEP (S.A.A.T.B.B.) ... ... ... ... Bernard Johnson | 0 | 4 |
| SONG OF THE VOLGA BOATMEN (S.S.A.A.T.T.B.B.) Arr. by H. Balfour Gardiner | 0 | 4 |
| STARS OF THE SUMMER NIGHT W. A. C. Cruickshank | 0 | 3 |
| THERE IS A GARDEN IN HER FACE H. A. Chambers | 0 | 4 |
| THERE IS A LADY SWEET AND KIND Eric H. Thiman | 0 | 4 |
| TO BLOSSOMS... ... ... ... ... W. G. Alcock | 0 | 3 |

PART-SONGS FOR MALE VOICES

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| CALL, THE (T.T.B.B.) ... ... ... Thomas T. Dunhill | 0 | 4 |
| FAIN WOULD I CHANGE THAT NOTE (T.T.B.B.) R. Vaughan Williams | 0 | 3 |
| IF I WERE YONDER WAVE (T.T.B.B.) Edgar L. Bainton | 0 | 4 |
| IN SILENT NIGHT (T.T.B.B.) German Folk-Song Johannes Brahms | 0 | 3 |
| THE LEE SHORE (T.T.B.B.) ... ... Percy E. Fletcher | 0 | 4 |
| SONG OF THE VOLGA BOATMEN (T.T.B.B.) Arr. by H. Balfour Gardiner | 0 | 4 |

ANTHEMS

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| COME, MY WAY, MY TRUTH, MY LIFE (with Solo for Contralto or Mezzo-Soprano) ... ... Roy Thompson | 0 | 3 |
| HAIL, GLADDENING LIGHT. (Short Anthem for Even-song) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... Hugh Blair | 0 | 3 |
| LET ALL THE WORLD IN EVERY CORNER SING Eric H. Thiman | 0 | 4 |
| O WORSHIP THE KING. (Harvest or General use) Ernest Bullock | 0 | 4 |
| THUS SAITH THE LORD. (Short unaccompanied Anthem for Saints' days or General use) H. C. L. Stocks | 0 | 2 |
| STRIFE IS O'ER, THE ... ... ... Eric H. Thiman | 0 | 4 |

CANTATAS, Etc.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| GOD WITHIN. Motet for Chorus, Orchestra, and Organ A. Herbert Brewer | 1 | 0 |
| JOHN GILPIN. For Female (or Boys') Voices, in Unison (2nd part optional), with Pianoforte accompaniment (2 Violins and percussion optional) ... Colin Taylor | 2 | 0 |
| LOCHINVAR. Ballad for Chorus and Orchestra C. S. Lang | 2 | 0 |

VIOLIN (or 'CELLO) AND PIANOFORTE

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| CRADLE SONG ... ... ... ... Byron Brooke | 2 | 0 |
| NOCTURNE ... ... ... ... Colin M. Campbell | 2 | 0 |

ORGAN

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| ALLELUYA. Festal Prelude on "Lasst uns Erfreuen" W. Faulkes | 1 | 6 |
| BENEDICTION (Wedding Souvenir) ... Alfred Hollins | 1 | 6 |
| CHORALE, "Jesus bleibet meine Freude" (J. S. Bach) arr. by John. E. West | 1 | 6 |
| FANTASIE IMPROMPTU ... ... ... W. G. Alcock | 2 | 0 |
| MAYTIME (Gavotte) ... ... ... ... Alfred Hollins | 1 | 6 |
| PARTITA IN E (Op. 100), in seven movements S. Karg-Elert | 5 | 6 |
| SUITE FROM "BONDUCA" (arr. by Eric H. Thiman) Henry Purcell | 2 | 0 |
| THREE DANCES FROM "HENRY VIII." Edward German ... ... ... ... ... ... ... each | 2 | 0 |
| VARIATIONS ON ARNE'S "WHERE THE BEE SUCKS" (arr. by Chastey Hector) ... Julius Benedict | 2 | 0 |

ORCHESTRAL MUSIC

EGDON HEATH. Gustav Holst.
Full Score, 10*s.* 6*d.*; String Parts (5), 8*d.* each; Wind (13), 7*s.*

MARRIED BEAU, THE (Incidental Music). Suite for Strings with additional Wind and Drum parts ad lib. H. Purcell, edited by Gustav Holst.
Full Score, 6*s.*; Strings (4), 8*d.* each.

SOLEMN MELODY. H. Walford Davies. (Arr. for Brass Band by J. Ord Hume.)
Parts, 3*s.* per set; or separately, 2*d.* each.

Just Published

NEW ORGAN WORK

by

SIGFRID KARG-ELERT

(Op. 100.)

PARTITA in E

1 Entrata
2. Canzona
3. Corrente e Siciliano
4. Rigaudon (Alla Burla)
5. Sarabande
6. Gavotte e Carillon
7. Finale quasi ritorno

Price Five Shillings and Sixpence

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

CHRISTMAS MUSIC

CHRISTMAS CAROLS

Four Books, 4½d. each net. Each containing a selection of Ten Popular Carols.

CHRISTMAS ANTHEMS & GLEES

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Hail, Smiling Morn. A.T.T.B. or T.T.B.B. ... | Spofforth | 2d. |
| Peaceful Gladsome Christmas ... ... | Tenney | 2d. |
| Behold I Bring ... ... ... ... | Goss | 2d. |
| Christmas Anthem ... ... ... ... | Tenney | 2d. |
| Hail, Heavenly Star ... ... ... ... | Challinor | 2d. |
| Sleep, Holy Child ... ... ... ... | Whitley | 2d. |
| Hosanna ... ... ... ... ... | Cooke | 2d. |
| Hark, on the Midnight Air ... ... ... | Bottomley | 2d. |
| To the Humble Shepherds ... ... ... | Bottomley | 2d. |

ORGAN MUSIC FOR CHRISTMAS USE

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Two Christmas Pieces ... | David Clegg net | 2s. |
| Minuet de Noel ... ... | Frederick Lacey net | 2s. |
| Adeste Fideles (variations) ... | Arthur Meale net | 2s. |
| Adeste Fideles ... ... | C. E. Melville net | 2s. |
| Christmas Eve ... ... | E. H. Smith net | 1s. 6d. |

Any or all of the above will be sent "on appro." if desired.

LONDON, W.C.2:

BEAL STUTTARD & Co., Ltd.

29, High Street, New Oxford Street.

FOREIGN MUSIC

A SELECTION OF THE MOST POPULAR CONTINENTAL ORGAN COMPOSITIONS

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| BOËLLMANN.—Fantasie dialoguée, Op. 35 ... ... ... | 3 | 6 |
| —— Suite Gothique, Op. 25 ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4 | 0 |
| —— 2nd Suite, Op. 27 ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 7 | 0 |
| —— 12 Pieces, Op. 16 ... ... ... ... complete | 10 | 0 |
| BONNET.—12 Pieces, Op. 5 ... ... ... ... ,, | 10 | 0 |
| —— 12 Pieces, Op. 7 ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 10 | 0 |
| —— 12 Pieces, Op. 10 ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 10 | 0 |
| —— Poèmes d'Automne (3 Concert Pieces) ... ... ... | 4 | 0 |
| —— Variations de Concert ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 6 |
| BRAHMS.—11 Choral Preludes, Op. 122. 2 Books ... each | 4 | 0 |
| CHAUVET.—Andantino ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 6 |
| DEBUSSY.—12 Pieces (Transcribed for Organ) complete | 8 | 0 |
| DUBOIS.—10 Pieces ... ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 10 | 0 |
| —— 12 Pieces ... ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 10 | 0 |
| —— 12 New Pieces ... ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 10 | 0 |
| FRANCK.—6 Pieces ... ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 10 | 0 |
| —— 3 Pieces ... ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 6 | 0 |
| —— Prelude, Fugue, and Variation ... ... ... ... | 2 | 6 |
| GIGOUT.—10 Pieces ... ... ... ... ... complete | 10 | 0 |
| —— 12 Pieces ... ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 10 | 0 |
| —— Album Grégorien. 2 Books ... ... ... ... each | 8 | 0 |
| KARG-ELERT.—66 Choral Improvisations, Op. 65. 6 Books, each | 5 | 0 |
| —— Nun danket, Op. 65, No. 59 ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| —— Wagner Album (18 transcriptions) ... ... ... ... | 4 | 0 |
| LISZT.—Prelude and Fugue on B A C H ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| RHEINBERGER.—Organ Sonatas, No. 1, 1s. 6d.; No. 2, 2s.; Nos. 3-20 ... ... ... ... ... ... each | 4 | 0 |
| —— 10 Trios, Op. 49. 2 Books ... ... ... ... ,, | 1 | 6 |
| —— 12 Trios, Op. 189. 3 Books ... ... ... ... ,, | 2 | 0 |
| ROPARTZ.—Au pied de l'Autel (60 Pieces) ... ... ... | 8 | 0 |
| SAINT-SAËNS.—3 Rapsodies sur des cantiques bretons, each | 2 | 0 |
| —— 3 Rapsodies sur des cantiques bretons ... complete | 4 | 0 |
| —— Fantasia in E♭ ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 6 |
| —— Le Cygne (transcribed by Guilmant) ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| —— Mon Cœur (Samson and Delilah) ... ... ... ... | 2 | 6 |
| SALOMÉ.—10 Pieces. 2 Books ... ... ... ... each | 8 | 0 |
| —— 12 New Pieces, Op. 59 ... ... ... ... complete | 10 | 0 |
| VIERNE.—Symphony No. 1 ... ... ... ... ... ... | 8 | 0 |
| —— 24 Pieces ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 7 | 6 |
| —— Fantasy Pieces. Books 1-4 ... ... ... each | 4 | 0 |
| WIDOR.—Symphonies, Nos. 2, 3, and 4 ... ... ... ,, | 6 | 6 |
| —— Symphonies, Nos. 1, 6, 7, and 8 ... ... ... ,, | 7 | 0 |
| —— Symphony No. 5 ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 8 | 0 |

Particulars and prices of separate numbers contained in any of the volumes will be sent on request.

If you have any difficulty in obtaining Foreign Music, we invite you to send your inquiries to us. Our Foreign Department holds a large and comprehensive stock of foreign editions, including those of André, Choudens, Costallat, Durand, Heugel, Hug, Hamelle, Leduc, Lemoine, Schlesinger, Simon, Zimmermann, and many others of equal note.

Certain catalogues and lists are available, and will be sent on application.

PIANOFORTE—VOCAL—ORGAN—HARMONIUM
INSTRUMENTAL—ORCHESTRAL.

Inquiries for little-known or unknown works will be welcomed, and any compositions not in stock can be obtained at short notice.

When writing please state which of the above sections is of interest to you.

SCHUBERT CENTENARY

Messrs. Novello have in stock certain of the 21 folio volumes of Schubert's works, forming the Complete Edition as published by Breitkopf & Härtel. List and prices will be sent on application.

London: Novello and Company, Limited.

CHAPPELL & CO.'S
NEW VOCAL DUETS

| | Keys | Compasses—1st voice | Compasses—2nd voice |
|---|---|---|---|
| Montague F. Phillips | | | |
| "April is a Lady" .... .... .... | E♭ | D—G | B♭—C |
| "Shepherdess and Beau Brocade" .... | G | D—G | A♭—D |
| "Sing, Joyous Bird" .... .... .... | C | D—G | C—G |
| | D | E—A | D—E |
| Teresa del Riego | | | |
| "Homing" .... .... .... .... | C | D—G | B—F♯ |
| "Thank God for a Garden" .... .... | B♭ | D—G | G—E♭ |
| Eric Coates | | | |
| "Bird Songs at Eventide" (FOR HIGH VOICES).... | B♭ | F—G | F—A♭ |
| "Bird Songs at Eventide" (FOR HIGH AND LOW VOICES) | B♭ | F—G | D—D |
| Hermann Löhr | | | |
| "Nile Waters" .... .... .... .... | G | C—E | D—G |
| | B♭ | E♭—G | F—B♭ |

PRICE : 2*s.* NET EACH ; BY POST, 2*s.* 1*d.*

CHAPPELL & CO. LTD. 50 NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.1. NEW YORK AND SYDNEY

And may be obtained from all Music Sellers.

JUST PUBLISHED

MANUEL DE FALLA
CONCERTO

FOR

HARPSICHORD (or PIANO), FLUTE, OBOE, CLARINET, VIOLIN, and VIOLONCELLO.

FULL SCORE ... ... 10*s.* net.

MINIATURE SCORE ... 3*s.* „

HARPSICHORD PART. In the press.

Wind and String Parts to be obtained on Hire. Terms on application.

ALTHOUGH this beautiful work was written for the harpsichord and dedicated to MADAME WANDA LANDOWSKA, the eminent exponent of that instrument, it is no less effective for the piano. In any case, all the instrumental parts must be treated as solos; none of them must on any account be doubled, for the piece is, strictly speaking, chamber music. It gives an impression of the kind of music that must have been played in old-time Spain, and it contains ecclesiastical, courtly, and popular elements such as those which influenced the old composers. But MANUEL DE FALLA is too great and too individual an artist merely to imitate an ancient style.

The Concerto makes its delicately archaic impression entirely by modern and personal means. It is one of the most striking and characteristic works the eminent Spanish master has yet written.

"JOTA"

Arranged for VIOLIN AND PIANO by P. KOCHANSKI.

PRICE 3*s.* net.

"SUITE ESPAGNOLE." Complete, 8*s.* net.

J. & W. CHESTER, Ltd., 11, Gt. Marlborough Street, London, W.1.

London:—Printed by NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited, at Novello Works, Soho, and published at 160, Wardour Street, Soho, W.1. Monday, October 1, 1928.

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

FOUNDED IN 1844

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH

No. 1,029—Vol. 69.
Registered at the General Post Office for Canadian Postage.

NOVEMBER 1 1928

Price 6*d.*; Postage, 2*d.*
Annual Subscription, post-free, 7*s.* 6*d*

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY

ROYAL ALBERT HALL

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING

FIFTY-EIGHTH SEASON, 1928-1929

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 24, at 2.30 p.m.

Under the direct patronage and in the presence of
HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN

MASS IN D - - - - ETHEL SMYTH

THE SONG OF MIRIAM - SCHUBERT

and Other Works.

MISS CAROLINE HATCHARD
MISS ASTRA DESMOND
MR. PARRY JONES
MR. STUART ROBERTSON

Conductor - DR. MALCOLM SARGENT

DOUBLE CHORUS OF 850 VOICES
THE NEW SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA AND THE BRITISH WOMEN'S SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
At the Organ - MR. R. ARNOLD GREIR

Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Arena, 7s. 6d.; Balcony (Reserved), 5s.; Unreserved, 3s. 6d.; Gallery (Promenade), 2s.

The Royal College of Music

PRINCE CONSORT ROAD, SOUTH KENSINGTON, S.W.7

Patrons: { HIS MAJESTY THE KING / HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN
President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.
Director: SIR HUGH P. ALLEN, K.C.V.O., M.A., D.Mus., D.Litt.
Registrar: CLAUDE AVELING, M.A.
Bursar: E. J. N. POLKINHORNE, Hon. R.C.M.

COMPLETE MUSICAL EDUCATION
is provided by Teachers of the highest eminence.

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT
Classes are held for pupils under sixteen, whose time is also occupied by their general education.

SPECIAL CLASSES ARE HELD FOR:
Score Reading, Conducting, Training of Teachers, Musical Criticism, and Ballet.

OPERATIC CLASSES
The College possesses a fully equipped College Opera Theatre for an audience of 600.

SCHOLARSHIPS, EXHIBITIONS
Upwards of 70 Scholarships and Exhibitions are provided from a permanent endowment fund.

ENSEMBLE CLASSES
There are Vocal and Instrumental Ensemble Classes, and Pupils sufficiently advanced in this work are given the opportunity of putting their knowledge into practice at College Concerts.

A.R.C.M.

Examinations for Associateship of the College (A.R.C.M.) are held three times a year, in December, April, and September.
Full particulars obtainable from the Registrar.

(PATRONS' FUND)

The Royal College of Music Patrons' Fund for the encouragement of British Composers and Executive Artists, and the S. Ernest Palmer Fund for Opera Study in the Royal College of Music (Founded by Sir Ernest Palmer, Bart, F.R.C.M.). Particulars may be obtained from the Registrar.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, LONDON, N.W.1

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830.

Patrons:
HIS MAJESTY THE KING
HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN
H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AND STRATHEARN, K.G.
H.R.H. THE PRINCESS LOUISE (Duchess of Argyll)

President:
H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AND STRATHEARN, K.G.

Principal:
JOHN B. MCEWEN, M.A., D.Mus., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M.

LENT TERM
BEGINS THURSDAY, 3RD JANUARY, 1929.

STUDENTS' ORCHESTRA.
Conducted by SIR HENRY J. WOOD, D. Mus., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M. Tuesdays and Fridays, 2 p.m to 5 p.m.

TEACHERS' TRAINING COURSE.
Special Course for the Training of Teachers.

CONDUCTORS' COURSE.
FOR THE TRAINING OF CONDUCTORS.

OPERA COURSE.
FOR THE TRAINING OF OPERATIC SINGERS.

ENSEMBLE CLASSES.

SCHOLARSHIPS.
SEVENTY-TWO SCHOLARSHIPS AND EXHIBITIONS FOR ALL SUBJECTS.

L.R.A.M.
Entries for the Christmas Examination will be accepted up to 12TH NOVEMBER, on payment of late fee, 5*s*.

PROSPECTUSES, ENTRY FORMS, and all other information on application.

A. ALGER BELL, Secretary.

Guildhall School of Music

(Founded in 1880 by the Corporation of London, and managed by the Music Committee)

VICTORIA EMBANKMENT, E.C.4

PRINCIPAL: SIR LANDON RONALD, F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M., &c.

PRIVATE Lessons in any single Musical Subject, and STAGE TRAINING in Elocution, Gesture, Dancing, Opera; Classes in Conducting, Fencing, French Classical Drama.

Complete Musical Education at inclusive fees, £12 12*s*. and £14 14*s*. Opera Class, Saturdays. Special Training Course for Teachers (approved by Teachers' Registration Council).

Prospectus and Syllabus of Local Centres and Schools Examinations (open to general public) free.

H. SAXE WYNDHAM, Secretary.

Telephone: Cent. 4459; and City 5566.

WIGMORE HALL STUDIOS.—These splendidly appointed Studios are the recognised centre of the best musical activities in London. Forty-five rooms. Grand Piano in every room. Lift, telephone, and every comfort and convenience. Low inclusive rates. One morning or afternoon per week the minimum time arranged for. Apply, 38, Wigmore Street, W.1.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, LONDON, N.W.1

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT, K.G.

Principal:

JOHN B. MCEWEN, M.A., D. Mus., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M.

LICENTIATESHIP EXAMINATION

SEPTEMBER, 1928

The following CANDIDATES were SUCCESSFUL:

SINGING.—As TEACHERS: Hilda Burton, Mary Louisa Duke, George Duncan, Rubie V. Duncan, George Tattersall Firth, Elizabeth Helen Fordham, Alice Gwendoline Greenwood, Grace Hardie, Irene Jarman, John Morgan Morris, Joseph Westwood Oakley, George Alexander Ritchie, Sarah Hill Sergeant.

As PERFORMERS: Hilda Armstrong Banks, Christina Milne Barclay, Stella Blakemore, Ethel Bungard, Harold Thomas Ching, Dorothy Haigh, Sybil Maude Hill (Easter, 1928), Molly Iverson, Ivan Knox, Beatrice Rosalind Leigh-Hunt, Dorothy Marsden, Sadie McBride, Amy Mountstephen, Freda M. Powell-Tuck, Florence Ramsey, Doris Alice Rockett, Nellie Sandow, Sidney Comber Smith, Nora Frances Emma Stout, Katherine White.

EXAMINERS: F. Percival Driver, J. Frederick Keel, Frederic King, Marcus Thomson.

PIANOFORTE.—As TEACHERS: Helen Nichol Adey, Winifred Eunice Alker, Jessie Carr Allan, Grace Marjorie Eunice Allington, Winifred Astley, Ethel Wilhelmina Atkins, Frederick William Bacon, Hilda Mary Baker, Fred Graeme Ball, Dorothy Beall, Margaret Evelyn Belton, Marjorie Frances Helen Blackaller, Margaret Bloor, Eva Josephine Bowran, Dorothy West Brigden, Phyllis S. Broome, Iren Margaret Caiger, Leonard Arthur Carr, Marion Carson, Lucy Chester, Rae Clements, Vincent Connelly, Dorothy Edna Gwynne Davies, Kathleen Irene Denyer, Juanita V. Dinsdale, Kathleen Mary Drake, Olive K. Dunning, Irene Adeline Ellam, Hilda Mary Elsom, Alice Entwisle, Annie Fitton, May Agnes Forder, Molly Adele Franklin, Minnie Freedman, Gordon Eric Frost, Mary Margaret Fyfe, Margaret Elizabeth Giles, Ethel Goddard, Daisy Muriel Gore, William Eric Gotobed, Gladys Ruth Grant, Eucharis Hadjiandoniou, Barbara Halestrap, Dorothy Hall, Kathleen Hannent, Catherine Hay, Francis A. Haynes, Sybil Maude Hill, Constance Elizabeth Annie Holes, Constance Jackman, Gladys Taylor Jefferson, Marjorie Searle Jones, Ethel Marjorie Kappes, John A. Kennedy, Henriette Ketterer-Dauvaux, Kitty Laity, Margit Ethel Landstad, Edith Sarah Langdale-Smith, John Henry Lightoller, Raie Lundberg, Winefride M. Lyne, Harry David MacGill, May Mander, Dorothy Marshall, Eric A. Marston, Moira Eveleen McAlister, Maud Agnew McClure, Edna M. Myers, James Thomas Neesom, Mabel Raine Nisbet, Morfudd Owen-Jones, Gladys Bessie Palk, Hilda Joan Parker, Cecilia Parkin, Ruth Parry, M. Beryl Peacock, Mary Pearson, Bessie Jeanne Pine, Erna Violet Polyblank, Gladys Emily Rengert, Vera Riley, Frances Claire St. Paul, Donald George Saunders, Kathleen Elizabeth Marie Savage, Herbert Frederick Shaw, Mary Shinton, Mary Parker Skinner, Clarice Gertrude Smith, Marion Evelyn Smith, Nora Ann Spibey, Nellie Spicer, Evelyn Winifred Stapleton, Henry Northrop Steel, Kathleen Tietjen, Daisy E. Tucker, Vera Veira, Phyllis L. Vidler, Elsie Mary Verrall, Annie Waddington, Mary Winifred Walter, Grace Marian Ward, Amelia Wilson, Jack Wolstenholme, Frances Grace Woodcock.

As PERFORMERS: Mary Evelyn Barrow, Henry Ellis, Madge Meiring, Leonard Woodroffe Robinson.

EXAMINERS: Victor G. Booth, York Bowen, Ambrose Coviello, Harold Craxton, Isabel Gray, Thomas B. Knott, Max Pirani, Claude F. Pollard, Charles F. Reddie, A. Wesley Roberts, Percy Waller.

ORCHESTRAL INSTRUMENTS.—VIOLIN.—As PERFORMERS: Hannah Reynolds, Helen Grace Stewart, Arthur Thompson.

BASSOON.—As PERFORMER: Gilbert Vinter.

EXAMINERS: J. H. Alexandra, Marjorie Hayward, James T. Lockyer, J. Solomon, Herbert Walenn, Charles Woodhouse, E. Rowsby Woof.

BANDMASTERSHIP: John Patrick Fortune, John Leonard Judd, George Albert Lawes, George Laurence Read.

EXAMINERS: Adam Carse, B. J. Dale, B. Walton O'Donnell.

PIANOFORTE ACCOMPANIMENT.—Charles Jackson Lockett, Henry Bell Wardell.

EXAMINERS: Welton Hickin, Montague Phillips, Max Pirani.

AURAL TRAINING AND SIGHT-SINGING.—Edith Ashworth, Edith Marion Deveson, Frederick George Painter, Gladys M. Wood.

EXAMINERS: Ernest Read, Leslie Regan, Frederick G. Shinn, D. Mus., Dunelm.

VOICE-CULTURE AND CLASS-SINGING.—Phyllis Annie Duckett, Phyllis M. Gibbon, Grace Hoskyns, Maurice Raymond Kay, Hannah Jane Sharp, William Henry Swinburne, Jean Wightman.

EXAMINERS: Stanley Marchant, D. Mus., Oxon., Ernest Read, Frederick G. Shinn, D. Mus., Dunelm.

ELOCUTION.—As TEACHERS: Dorothy Ainsley, Muriel Baker, Rena Crowe, Florence Mary Davies, Elizabeth Donaldson, Jeannette Hennessy, Hilda E. Johnston, Gwynaeth Mary Gleadow Milburn, Sybil Edith Payne, Cecily Skinner, Doris May Watt, William Lee Webster.

As PERFORMERS: Rhona Margaret Olivia Lindsay, Brenda Upton Neville, Iorwerth Owain Parry.

EXAMINERS: A. Acton-Bond, Wilton Cole, Cecil Martin, Constance Newell, Katie Thomas.

A. ALGER BELL, Secretary.

The Royal College of Organists

THE SOLO-PLAYING TESTS for the next F.R.C.O. EXAMINATION are:

Prelude and Fugue in C minor, J. S. Bach. (Novello, Book 7, p. 64; Augener, p. 168; Peters, Vol. 2, No. 6.)

Choral Prelude, "St. Mary's," Charles Wood, No. 1 of 16 Preludes, Vol. 1. (Stainer & Bell.)

Larghetto from the Quintet, Op. 108, Mozart. Arrangements for the Organ by W. T. Best, No. 20, p. 247. (Novello.)

The 10 selected pieces and the book set for the Essay for the January, 1929, A.R.C.O. Examination, are the same as those set for July, 1928.

All Candidates for the next Examinations must send in their names for Fellowship by December 6th, for Associateship by December 13th. In the case of NEW MEMBERS, proposal forms, duly filled up, must be sent in before November 29. No names will be entered after the above dates.

For the convenience of members, past examination papers have been bound in one volume: Fellowship and Associateship Organ Work, January, 1913, to July, 1927; Paper Work, July, 1924, to July, 1927. Price 4*s.*, to be obtained by members only.

Regulations, List of College Publications, Lectures, &c., may be had on application.

Examples indicating the character and approximate difficulty of the NEW TESTS, set for the first time at the July, 1924, Examinations, may be obtained at the College.

Associateship or Fellowship, 6*d.* each (post free).

N.B.—The College is open daily from 10 to 4.

H. A. HARDING, Hon. Secretary.

Kensington Gore, S.W.7.

96 & 95, WIMPOLE STREET, W.1

TOBIAS MATTHAY PIANOFORTE SCHOOL

Instruction under his teachers, and under his own supervision.

Open to Professionals and Amateurs, and also to Children.

The Staff consists of thirty-nine senior Professors of thorough experience and platform reputation, all trained by the founder.

Special Short Courses for Teachers during term and vacation.

LECTURE-LESSON CLASS by Mr. MATTHAY on the practical teaching of Technique and Interpretation, diagnosis and correction of faults, musical analysis and synthesis, &c., alternate Wednesday evenings.

COMPLETE TRAINING COURSE FOR TEACHERS

(Approved by the Teachers' Registration Council)

This ONE-YEAR Course may be joined at the beginning of ANY TERM.

For further particulars please apply, MRS. MARION COLE, Secretary.

ROYAL MANCHESTER COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Founded 1893. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1923

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF YORK, K.G.

Principal: DR. ADOLPH BRODSKY

Registrar: STANLEY WITHERS, M.A.

Students are requested to enter upon a complete course of Musical instruction, and are not admitted for a shorter period than one year.

Fee for the year, £36. Special fee for Organ Course, £30, and for Wind Instrument Course, £18.

Systematic Course for the training of Teachers, approved by Teachers' Registration Council.

The Prospectus with Scholarship information, Diploma Regulations, and Entry Forms, on application.

THE

SCOTTISH NATIONAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

SESSION 1928-29

The Session consists of Three Terms: September 10 to December 1, December 3 to March 9, and March 11 to June 7.

Complete Musical Curriculum. Day and Evening Classes.

Single Subjects taught.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from:

STUART S. FORSYTH, Secretary,

ATHENÆUM BUILDINGS, GLASGOW.

LONDON SOCIETY OF ORGANISTS

FOUNDED 1913

PRESIDENT FOR 1928: J. PERCY BAKER, MUS. B.

Organists, Assistant-Organists, are eligible. Register of vacant appointments. All particulars on application to the Hon. Secretary.

De Crespigny House, Denmark Hill, S.E.5.

MACKINNON'S MUSICAL MEMORY

endorsed by

THE FEE FOR COMPLETE POSTAL COURSE IS £3 : 3 : 0

COUPON.

(FIX COUPON INSIDE ENVELOPE.)

TO MISS LILIAS MACKINNON,
1, Paultons Square, London, S.W.3.

Without any obligation on my part please send me your free booklet on "Memory Training."

Name .....

Address .....

.....

(S.K.8.)

THE ASSOCIATED BOARD

OF THE R.A.M. AND THE R.C.M.
FOR LOCAL EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING
President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

LOCAL CENTRE EXAMINATIONS (SYLLABUS A)

Written Examinations held in March and November at all centres. Practical Examinations in March-April and November-December at all Centres. Entries for the March-April Examinations close Wednesday, February 6th, 1929.

"SCHOOL" EXAMINATIONS (SYLLABUS B)

Held throughout the British Isles three times a year, viz., March-April, June-July, and October-November. Entries for the March-April Examinations close Wednesday, January 30th, 1929.

ELOCUTION EXAMINATIONS will be held at certain fixed centres in March-April, June-July, and November-December each year. For full particulars see special Elocution Syllabus.

The Board offers annually SIX EXHIBITIONS tenable at The R.A.M. or The R.C.M. for Two or Three Years.

Syllabuses A and B, Elocution Syllabus, Entry Forms, and any further information, may be obtained post-free from:
THE SECRETARY, 14 & 15, Bedford Square, London, W.C.1.

Manchester School of Music

Founded by J. A. CROSS (1892)

Late Principal (1897-1925): ALBERT J. CROSS, A.R.A.M.
Director: LEOPOLD H. CROSS, M.A.

The oldest Institution in Manchester devoted solely to the interests of Music.

All branches of Music taught. Day and evening Private Lessons. Opera Class. Full Orchestral Class. Intermediate and Elementary String Orchestras. Classes for Ensemble Playing, Elocution, Choral Singing, Harmony, Aural Training, &c.

Students prepared for all Royal Academy and Trinity College Exams.

Single Subjects taught. Prospectus from the Secretary, 16, Albert Square.

BIRMINGHAM & MIDLAND INSTITUTE

SCHOOL OF MUSIC

Visitor ... Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M., Mus. Doc., LL.D.
Director ... GRANVILLE BANTOCK, M.A., D. Mus. (Ed.).

SESSION 1927-1928

The Season consists of AUTUMN TERM (September 22 to December 20): WINTER TERM (January 14 to April 11): SUMMER TERM (April 20 to July 4).

Instruction in all branches of Music. Students' Orchestra, Chamber Music, Students' Rehearsals, and Concerts.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from—
H. M. FRANCIS, Secretary.
Paradise Street, Birmingham.

THE LONDON SCHOOL OF SINGING

New Address: 2, Gray Street, Duke Street, W.1 (near Selfridge's)
President: A. NETTLEFOLD
Principal: DAVID GODELL

Instruction in all Vocal Subjects. A thorough musical education if desired.

Special Voice-curing Courses for all vocal defects, caused by over-strain and incorrect production.

Practice with Accompaniste can be obtained at the School at a moderate fee.

Particulars from Secretary, Miss M. HEATH. Mayfair 3819.

THE TONIC SOL-FA ASSOCIATION

The Monthly Meeting will be held on Saturday, November 17th, at 7 p.m., at the King's Weigh House Club, Thomas Street, London, W.1.

LECTURE-RECITAL

"SCHUBERT AND THE GIFT OF MUSIC"
(Schubert Centenary Celebration)
MR. ERNEST FOWLES, F.R.A.M.

Admission Free. Full particulars from the Secretary, Mr. T. H. Warner, L.T.S.C., 82, Ashgrove Road, Goodmayes, Essex.

Gresham College, Basinghall Street, E.C.2

FOUR LECTURES on MUSIC will be given by
SIR WALFORD DAVIES
On TUESDAY, WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY, and FRIDAY, November 13, 14, 15, & 16, at 6 p.m.
The Lectures are Free to the Public.

ARS VIVENDI BREATHING

is a NEW DEPARTURE in HEALTH and VOICE PRODUCTION. . .

NASAL congestion dealt with without need of surgical operations, and all trace of nasal intonation disappears. Throat and chest strengthened, resonance increased, and effects of strain removed.

¶ Diaphragm becomes powerful, ensuring, without fatigue, Ease, Reach, Endurance, and perfect Control of breath. There is no chance of acquiring high vitality or of getting the best results with the voice unless the secret of its action has been mastered. When the diaphragm descends too low, it exerts upon the stomach, liver, and the other organs a pressure which impedes their action, and brings on stomach and liver troubles. In singing, this deleterious effect is intensified, and handicaps the singer.

¶ ARS VIVENDI BREATHING settles the question of the diaphragm once for all. Results prove this conclusively. The following extract is from a letter received from a well-known M.D. and F.R.C.P. (Wimpole Street):

> "Though recognising of late years that I have breathed badly, I have tried without success to remedy matters; but I have been trying for some weeks now to breathe on your plan, and without a doubt I am much better. I have straightened out my back, and filled out my chest, while I digest much better, and am much less short of breath. The practical advantages of your method of breathing must commend themselves to all wise persons. Contrary to what singers teach, I have always advised this as something to be aimed at, but I never saw before HOW TO DO IT."

Ars Vivendi Breathing is a new orientation in Health and Voice Culture, being the outcome of years of research and practice.

Apply, MR. ARTHUR LOVELL
Author of 'Ars Vivendi' (7th Edition), 'Beauty of Tone in Speech and Song,' 'Concentration,' &c.
WIGMORE HALL STUDIOS, LONDON, W.1.

BISHOPSGATE INSTITUTE

230, BISHOPSGATE STREET, E.C.2.
(Near Liverpool Street Station).

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 22nd, at 7.30 p.m.
MENDELSSOHN'S "ELIJAH"
Will be rendered by the Choristers of
THE LONDON CHOIR SCHOOL.

The entire proceeds, after the deduction of expenses, will be devoted to the School Playing Field Fund.

Tickets obtainable from any Chorister, or from
The Secretary, THE LONDON CHOIR SCHOOL,
Phone: Brixton 2124. GROVE LANE, S.E.5.

JOIN THE ORGAN CLUB

(ACTING-PRESIDENT: DONALD PENROSE, Esq.)

AND VISIT

NOV. 10—ST. PETER'S, EATON SQUARE.
NOV. 24—ANNUAL MEETING.
DEC. 8.—DR. TRETHOWAN'S CHAMBER ORGAN.

Further attractive visits to follow.

Entrance Fee, 2s. 6d. Annual Subscription, 10s. 6d.

For full particulars apply Hon. Sec.,
28, HILLMORE GROVE, SYDENHAM, S.E.26.

MODERN CORR. COLLEGE

Principal: Arthur McAlister, B.A. CANTAB.

MATRIC. Successes - 161

(LONDON, DURHAM, DUBLIN.) DURHAM, OCT., 1928.

"Thanks to your excellent and up-to-date Tuition, I have passed the MATRIC. at the FIRST ATTEMPT. After working through your very thorough course I was able to give LENGTHY AND METHODICAL ANSWERS, and it speaks volumes for the Modern Correspondence College that I was able AFTER A LAPSE OF MORE THAN 20 YEARS to work these subjects to the required standard."

A.R.C.O. July, 1928 ∴ NO OTHER THEORETICAL TEACHING.

"I have been prepared entirely by you FROM FIRST PRINCIPLES, and the fact that you have enabled me to pass at FIRST ATTEMPT speaks for itself."

F.R.C.O. Failed 6 times.

"Before taking up your Course
I had failed . . .
SIX TIMES IN SUCCESSION"

L.Mus.T.C.L.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| ART OF TEACHING ... ... | 81 | HARMONY ... | 84 |
| RUDIMENTS ... ... ... ... | 90 | HISTORY ... | 90 |
| COUNTERPOINT ... ... ... | 79 | | |

1st M.B. Sept., 1928.

TOTAL PASSES - - 7

FOUR of the successful Candidates were Students of the M.C.C.

F.T.C.L. July, 1928.

| | |
|---|---|
| ENTRIES ... ... ... | 2 |
| SUCCESSES ... ... ... | 2 |

PLEASE STATE EXAM. OR SUBJECT.

MODERN CORR. COLLEGE SHERWIN ROAD, NOTTINGHAM.

Does Every Pianist Know?

THAT the hand is by no means naturally suited to playing the piano and has to be carefully adapted to its new work ;

THAT the short thumb with its lateral movement, although useful in many passages, comes in for a great deal of sad misuse by the majority of players in the "thumb-under" movement, and is never used for an "up-and-down" movement except at the keyboard ;

THAT the tendons of three of the fingers are by nature tied together in a most provoking manner from the pianist's point of view ;

THAT these are not the only difficulties, for the pianist's "tools" consist of more than his fingers ; the whole arm as far as the shoulder-blade being quite as important in the playing of difficult music ;

THAT there are fifty-nine muscles to be trained in each arm.

Modern music being increasingly complex and more exacting in regard to execution makes a scientific training absolutely indispensable to the successful pianist. The Full and Correct Muscular Development and Special Keyboard Methods of the "From Brain to Keyboard" System will give you this training.

From Brain to Keyboard

Macdonald Smith's System of Pianoforte Playing.

SEND TO-DAY for my illustrated booklet, "Light on Pianoforte Playing." When writing, please say whether you are an Average or Advanced Player. I have also a Course for Beginners.

M. T. MACDONALD SMITH, 94, GOWER STREET, LONDON, W.C.1

"Controlled Relaxation and Weight Touch"

AS APPLIED TO ALL PHASES OF

PIANOFORTE PLAYING

Courses of Correspondence Lessons for Home Study, specially designed for the busy Teacher and Performer as well as for the Amateur and Professional Student.

THIS method, introduced by CHARLES A. GILLETT after many years' close analysis of the actual playing of many of the greatest pianists, has never failed to bring results. To study and practise this system is an inspiration to all ambitious pianists.

Those whose desire it is to attain the highest artistic standard should study this most modern teaching.

Write TO-DAY for FREE EXPLANATORY BROCHURE

The Secretary
The Charles A Gillett Pianoforte School.
11 SOUTH MOLTON ST
LONDON W.1.

Personal Lessons Day and Evening.

Can you memorise?

Can you play from memory with ease and confidence, or do you experience that most unhappy sensation at the end of your performance—that of regrets ?

If you do not memorise the right way, you feel that your memory is not absolutely safe, which makes you just sufficiently nervous to take the edge off your enjoyment in playing.

You can be sure of attaining that sense of certainty, the knowing that there is no risk of breaking down, if you memorise your music by the

MASTER-METHOD OF MEMORY-PLAYING

Take the first step by sending for my descriptive Booklet, which is sent free and post free, stating whether you play the Piano, Violin, 'Cello, or Organ, and if a moderate or advanced player.

MR. REGINALD FOORT, F.R.C.O.,
194, Beacon House, Hemstal Road,
London, N.W.6

THE NORTHERN CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE

Principal: ALBERT JOWETT, Mus. Bac., Oxon.

COMPLETE COURSE IN COMPOSITION

Mr. JOWETT announces to readers of the Musical Times this important Course

In Composition. A most notable success was the celebrated Composer and Pianist, WM. BAINES, who was entirely trained by Mr. Jowett.

The College also offers Coaching for all Important Examinations, MUS. BAC., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Etc.

Specialist Teaching in Singing, Voice-Production, Interpretation, Diagnosis of Faults and Complete Eradication of Faults.

Personal Tuition in LONDON (Wigmore Hall), LEEDS, and NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE.

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED. LYRICS SET TO MUSIC.
ACCOMPANIMENTS FOR SONGS, MELODIES HARMONIZED.

NORTHERN CORRESPONDENCE COLLEGE,
HEATHFIELD, MOORLAND DRIVE, HARROGATE ROAD, LEEDS.

THE NEW SCHOOL OF MUSIC

26, WESTBOURNE GROVE, W.2

Tel.: PARK 7249

Patrons:
THE COUNTESS OF LAUDERDALE
THE LORD BLANESBURGH, G.B.E.
LADY NEISH

Directors:
G. R. GALSWORTHY, A.R.C.M. J. M. SYMONS, M.C., A.R.C.M.
MISS M. E. GALSWORTHY, A.R.C.M.

Day and Evening Tuition in Singing, Piano, Strings, Wind Instruments, &c., and Theory, Composition, Ear-Training, Sight-Reading, Memorising, Elocution, &c.

ORCHESTRAS AND CHORUS
OPEN TO NON-STUDENTS

PREPARATION FOR R.A.M. and R.C.M. EXAMINATIONS

Prospectus on application to the Secretary.

Christmas Vacation Course

MR. F. C. FIELD-HYDE

WILL CONDUCT A

Holiday Course, from Dec. 31 to Jan. 5,

IN

THE ART OF VOICE TRAINING

TEACHERS who are not Vocal Experts should send for particulars for the following reasons:

The Course covers the whole art of voice training.

It deals with all the main controversial matters in vocal principles.

Demonstration Lessons are given to pupils.

The chief methods and their divergences are reviewed.

It includes Lectures on Interpretation.

There is no other Course like it.

It is recommended by hundreds of teachers who have attended previous courses, and who owe thereto greatly increased success.

For details address Secretary,

FIELD-HYDE VOCAL SCHOOL

43, UPPER GEORGE STREET, BRYANSTON SQUARE—LONDON, W.1.

ST. JOHN'S WOOD
PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH
MARLBOROUGH PLACE, ABBEY ROAD, N.W.8.

Saturday, November 10th, at 4 p.m. precisely,
ORGAN AND PIANOFORTE RECITAL

PROGRAMME

1 MENDELSSOHN ... ... Organ Sonata No. 2
2 GUILMANT (a) Scherzo Capriccioso. (b) Pastorale in A. (For Organ and Pianoforte.)
3 BACH ... (a) Trio: "Lord, for Thee my Spirit longs." Sinfonia: "My spirit was in heaviness." March, from "Dramma per Musica." (Transcribed for the Organ by Harvey Grace.)
SCHUBERT ... ... ... (b) Marche Militaire, in D
4 HUMPERDINCK (a) Vorspiel (b) Waldscene From "Hänsel and Gretel" (For Organ and Pianoforte.)
5 VIERNE ... ... Finale (First Symphony)

Solo Organ - - W. IRWIN-HUNT
Solo Pianoforte - MAURICE ELSTEIN

The Church is near Marlborough Road (Met.) and Maida Vale (Tube) and South Hampstead (L.M.S.) Stations, also all 'bus routes along Finchley Road, Abbey Road, and Maida Vale.

Bechstein Grand Pianoforte.
Bishop & Sons, Ipswich, Organ Builders.

Southfields Wesleyan Central Hall,
DURNSFORD ROAD, WIMBLEDON PARK, S.W.

TWO ORGAN RECITALS,
THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 8th, at 8 p.m.,
By MR. G. D. CUNNINGHAM, F.R.A.M., F.R.C.O., Birmingham City Organist.
WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 21st, at 8 p.m.,
By MR. NORMAN ASKEW, F.R.C.O.
Organist and Musical Director, Southfields Central Hall.
Silver Collection. 3-manual Organ by Spurden, Rutt & Co.

SCARBOROUGH
Competitive Musical Festival
Under the Auspices of the SCARBOROUGH TOWNSMEN'S ASSOCIATION.

APRIL 25th, 26th, 27th, 1929
GRAND HALL, THE SPA

SOLO, DUET, QUARTET, CHORAL, ORCHESTRAL, SCHOOL CHOIR, ETC., COMPETITIONS

MR. F. CROMACK, Secretary,
Scarborough Townsmen's Association,
Albert Chambers, 9, Aberdeen Walk, Scarborough.

West Riding Correspondence School

MUS. BAC., F. and A.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., and T.C.L. } SPECIAL COURSES for these Exams. Passes 100%
Terms £1 1s. and £1 10s per Term. Model Workings with each Lesson.
79, NORTHGATE, WAKEFIELD.

ROYAL NATIONAL EISTEDDFOD
LIVERPOOL, 1928.

TO CHORAL SOCIETIES AND OTHERS

THE Eisteddfod Choir Committee are open to purchase or hire Vocal Score copies of BERLIOZ'S "FAUST" (Breitkopf & Härtel's Edition, arrangement by Josef Holbrooke. Staff Notation and/or Tonic Sol-fa). Also Vocal Score copies of Handel s "Israel in Egypt," Staff Notation and Tonic Sol-fa.
Communicate with WM. GEORGE, Hon. Choir Secretary,
EISTEDDFOD OFFICE, 43, RENSHAW STREET, LIVERPOOL.

Cheltenham Spa Open Competitive
MUSICAL FESTIVAL
MAY 9th, 10th, and 11th, 1929.
SYLLABUS and ENTRY FORMS NOW READY.

Send 1d. stamp to Hon. Secretary,
Town Hall Bureau (Dept. 13), Cheltenham Spa.

THE SCHOOL OF ENGLISH CHURCH MUSIC
The College of St. Nicolas, Chislehurst, will be opened in January, 1929. Resident men students can be received on very moderate terms, and there are also facilities for non-resident and women students, and for those desiring short courses. For prospectus and terms, apply to The Secretary, S.E.C.M., 105, Gower Street, London, W.C.1.

Field-Hyde Method of Voice Training
MISS ELSIE DUNIAM-JONES
L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.
Prepares for diploma examinations or concert platform. (3 L.R.A.M. Successes, Easter, 1928.) Failing or faulty voices successfully treated. Single lessons or short courses on Song Interpretation in English, French, or Italian. Auditions free. Vacancy for accompanist-pupil. 17, Cavendish Square, W.1, and at Hendon.

The London Oratorio and Concert Association.
FOUNDED 1912.

THE ASSOCIATION exists for the purpose of bringing Secretaries of CHORAL SOCIETIES, OPERATIC AND MUSICAL SOCIETIES, ETC., into direct communication with capable and reliable Artists, without the intervention of an Agent, and is based on the co-operation of its members. Choral Societies engaging a quartet of soloists for any work, can have the advantage of preliminary rehearsal of the principals by the musical director.

Musical Director: Mr. Hubert Bath.
For Prospectus and List of Artists, address Secretary,
26, GUILFORD STREET, RUSSELL SQUARE, LONDON, W.C.1.

"MASTERY OF THE KEYBOARD"
SIGHT-READING LESSONS
COMPLETE COURSE OF SIX POSTAL LESSONS

The Times: "Deals with the subject systematically from the first stage."
Music: "Goes fully and thoroughly into his subject from every possible standpoint. Cannot fail to be of service."
A PUPIL FROM CHINA WRITES: "My master is a gifted pianist, a minor genius, but he has not the least idea how he sight-reads, and cannot explain."
AFTER SECOND LESSON: "Your course has so far quite revolutionised my playing, and even now I am finding pieces far easier to sight-read."

GEORGE DENHAM, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.,
41, AVONDALE ROAD, S. CROYDON,
and WEEKES'S STUDIOS, 14, HANOVER ST., W.1
('Phone: Croydon 2703)

KETTERING EISTEDDFOD, FEB. 13th to 16th, 1929. Syllabus Free, C. Adams, 108, Windmill Avenue, Kettering.

CORRESPONDENCE COACHING
for EXAMINATIONS

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING
MUS. DOC., LOND., L.R.A.M.

Special Courses as follows :—

(1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work. Xmas, 1928; April, 1929
(2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work. ,, ,, ,, ,,
(3.) Touch and Technique (for Pianoforte Diplomas)
(4.) Trinity College Diplomas. Jan. and April, 1929
(5.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Jan. and July, 1929
(6.) Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc. (London and Durham)
(7.) Separate Subjects

NUMEROUS SUCCESSES

Candidates entering for the first time, and also those who have failed to pass any examination, should write to
DR. SPRANKLING, 46, Clarendon Road, Redland, Bristol. Telephone: Bristol 3033.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. SINGING EXAMINATIONS

CORRESPONDENCE COURSES

Vocal Physiology for Teachers' Exams. and Paper Work, covering all the Subjects required for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Diplomas. (RECENT SUCCESSES.)
HIGHEST RECOMMENDATIONS.
SEND 6*s.* P.O. FOR SPECIMEN LESSON
To ARTHUR BINNS, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., (Singing Teacher), 40, MALSIS ROAD, KEIGHLEY, YORKS.

PAPER WORK BY MUS. B., F.R.C.O.

OVER 1,100 SPECIMEN WORKINGS

"Your lessons and ideas splendid."
"Your excellent models make my attempts look cold."

SUCCESSES (with those for January, 1928) include 3 F.R.C.O. (1 for Jan., 1928). 3 A.R.C.O. 2 L.R.A.M.
2*s.* 6*d.* per lesson and postage.
"E. B.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

Can you 'IMPROVISE' at the Keyboard?

Improvisation or composing at the keyboard, also playing music (which you have heard) by ear, and without the aid of any written music—can be learnt by ANYONE of average intelligence. By means of a short Postal Course I guarantee to teach YOU to do this, to improve your technique, play at sight, and memorise music without any drudgery.
My booklet, "The Piano and its Possibilities," is sent FREE on receipt of a post-card.
MR. H. CRAWFORD, KINGSLEY GREEN, HASLEMERE.

PAXTON'S COMPOSER'S DEPARTMENT
HYMN TUNES REVISED - - 2s. 6d. each.

| | Page. | | Page. | | Page. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Criticism ... | ... 2/6 | Copying (same key) | 1/4 | Harmonization | ... 7/6 |
| Revision | | Transposition ... | 2/- | Fingering ... | ... 2/6 |
| or Rewriting | 7/6 | Organ Registration | 2/6 | Theoretical | |
| Accompaniment | 7/6 | Analysis of form | 2/6 | Assistance | 2/6 |

Compositions of more than four pages subject to reduced inclusive quotation.
BY ARRANGEMENT: Orchestration; Writing Lyrics; Setting Lyrics to Music; Engraving and printing of MSS.
W. PAXTON & CO., LTD.,
22, HIGH STREET, NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.C.1.

ARRANGING, COMPOSING, ORCHESTRATION. All kinds undertaken. Manuscripts revised, accompaniments written, melodies harmonized. Special help; advice to amateurs, beginners. Charles Chadwick, B.A., A.R.C.M., 27, North End Road, Golders Green, N.W.11.

STEINWAY STUDIOS

COMFORTABLY FURNISHED
ELECTRIC LIGHT
CENTRAL HEATING
TELEPHONE LIFT
NEW STEINWAY PIANOS

Full particulars from
STEINWAY & SONS
THE NEW STEINWAY HALL,
1 & 2, GEORGE ST., CONDUIT ST., LONDON, W.1.
'PHONE: MAYFAIR 6641-5.

PIANOS
BY
Bechstein, Bord, Schiedmayer, Chappell, Rogers, Gors, & Kallmann
and other celebrated makers

The Profession most cordially invited to inspect our large and varied stock of New and Second-hand Pianos. Cash, Hire, or Hire-purchase. Pianos taken in exchange.

Apply for lists:
CHAS. STILES & CO.
74-76, SOUTHAMPTON ROW
LONDON, W.C.1.
'Phone: MUSEUM 0439.

"SIMPLEXA" FINGER TRAINER
(Registered No. 692810)
FOR ALL INSTRUMENTALISTS

A simple and very effective appliance for giving strength and flexibility to the fingers.
Recommended by Editor of the Musical Times.

IMPROVED MODEL
Price 2*s.* 6*d.*; postage and packing, 3*d.*
E. C. M., 1, LONGFIELD TERRACE, FOLKESTONE.

THE TECHNIQUER

A BOON TO ALL INSTRUMENTALISTS
Invented and Patented by Mr. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac.

Copy of Testimonial from the renowned organist, ARTHUR MEALE, Esq.
"Westminster Central Hall, June 1, 1928.
"I have used the 'Techniquer' for a great number of years. It is the best means of keeping the fingers supple that I know of. Specially, lately, during convalescence, has it been invaluable, when not being able to endure the fatigue and strain of tonal practice, I have been able to use it for the preservation of finger and wrist suppleness."
Send for list of testimonials and full particulars post free, "Hand Development," with 16 Photos, 1*s.* 6*d.*
Secretary: MISS F. J. FITCH, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M.
21, Boundary Road, N.W.8. 'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

"THE ROTUNDA"

A Journal for those interested in Organs and Organ Music

Vol. ii., No. 3, published September, 1928. (Nos. 1 and 2 still on Sale.)

THE SHELDONIAN THEATRE, OXFORD (Henry Willis); SOME NEGLECTED ORGAN CLASSICS (A. M. Henderson); THE STANDARD CONSOLE OF ARISTIDE CAVAILLÉ-COLL (Reg. J. Whitworth); THE VICTORIAN AGE AND THE ORGAN (Ambrose P. Porter); MUTATIONS AND MIXTURES (W. L. Sumner); CONTRASTS OR AFFINITIES (Havergal Brian); ORGAN RECITALS (Dr. Alfred Hollins); ORGAN AND ORCHESTRA (Eric Blom); SPECIFICATIONS OF ORGANS, ETC., ETC.

Vol. ii., No. 2, published March, 1928.

THE ORGANS OF ST. ANNE'S, SOHO (Henry Willis); TEACHING THE YOUNG IDEA (W. J. Comley); NEGLECTED ORGAN MASTERPIECES (A. M. Henderson); THE ORGAN AND THE MODERN IDIOM (Dr. A. Eaglefield-Hull); IDEALS (Ernest Austin); REVIEWS OF MUSIC, ETC., ETC.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION, 4s. (post free); SINGLE COPIES, 2s. net.

Published by

HENRY WILLIS & SON, LTD., FERNDALE ROAD, LONDON, S.W.9.

CRAMER

MAGNIFICENT 1928 LATEST MODELS

BABY GRAND ... 120 Gns.
UPRIGHT GRAND 65 Gns.
UPRIGHT PLAYER 103 Gns.
FULL SCALE
LATEST DEVICES

Write for our very generous Hire-Purchase Terms.

J. B. CRAMER & CO., Ltd.,
139 NEW BOND ST., W.1.
46 MOORGATE, E.C.2.
128/130 KENSINGTON HIGH STREET, W.8.

FERD. KUECHLER'S

(Teacher at the Leipsic Conservatory)

COURSE of VIOLIN INSTRUCTION

is a

TRIUMPH

of practical teaching

TO KNOW IT IS TO RECOMMEND IT

Send for a specimen copy from the publishers, or ask your music-seller to let you have one on approval.

HUG & Co.

MUSIC PUBLISHERS.
LEIPSIC

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES

MISS LYDIA JOHN
(A.R.A.M., L.R.A.M.), CONTRALTO.

Lecture-Recitals of Folk-Songs, Elizabethan Songs, &c.
Professor of Voice-Production and Singing.
Pupils prepared for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c., Scholarships and Festivals.
28, ALBION ROAD, LONDON, N.W.6.
Lessons given at above address or West-End Studio, Cricklewood Conservatoire of Music, N.W.2; and Highbury Conservatoire, N.5, &c. Primrose 3869.

MISS EVELYNE KING,
L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.
CONTRALTO.
ORATORIO WORK A SPECIALITY.
Concerts, Dinners, At Homes, &c., &c.
Lessons in Voice-Production and Singing.
Coaching in Standard Works.
Speedwell 2209. Apply, 117, Hampstead Way, N.W.11.

HORATIO C. KENNEY
TENOR, WELLS CATHEDRAL.
ORATORIO, CONCERTS, &C.
5, Vicars' Close, Wells, Somerset.

HAROLD KNOWLTON
TENOR.
Soloist, St. Paul's Cathedral.
Shirley, Park Road, Crouch End, N.8. Mountview 5289.

EDWARD REACH
TENOR.
AVAILABLE FOR ORATORIO, CONCERTS, ETC.
Streatham 7888. 12, Maybury Street, London, S.W.17.

LANGDALE BROWN
BASS-BARITONE.
ORATORIOS, CONCERTS, ETC.
29, Sedgeford Road, W.12.

FRANK POULTON
L.R.A.M., L.G.S.M. Singing (Performer).
BASS-BARITONE.
Available for Oratorio or Choral Works.
Fee, 2½ gns. in London.
Quartet of Soloists supplied if required.
Broadcasts this year:
March 14th, 5 G.B.; July 30th and Oct. 11th, 2 LO.
33, Hounslow Ave., Hounslow. Hounslow 1536.

MADAME ALBA
VOICE PRODUCTION.
Singing. Speaking. Dramatic Coach. Talking Film Artists.
Correct Accent.
139, NEW BOND STREET, W.1.

N. ANDREW
MUS. DOC., F.R.C.O., A.R.M.C.M. (Dist.)
Correspondence Lessons in Paper-work for Mus. D., Mus. B., R.C.O., R.A.M., and T.C.L. Examinations.
Pieces Annotated. Courses in Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, and Orchestration.
Terms, &c., Henrietta Street, Ashton-under-Lyne, Lancs.

MR. J. C. BRYDSON, MUS.B.,
SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE TUITION.
Fees from 10*s.* 6*d.* for Ten lessons, according to Course.
Successes at L.R.A.M. paper work, A. & L. Mus. T.C.L., &c.
"Balcary," KEGWORTH, near Derby.

VOICE-PRODUCTION AND SINGING.
ALBERT GARCIA
CARRIES ON THE TRADITIONS OF HIS GRANDFATHER, THE LATE MANUEL GARCIA.
STUDIO: 59, QUEEN'S ROAD, N.W.8.

TO COMPOSERS
NICHOLAS GATTY
MUS. DOC. CANTAB.
is prepared to undertake the revision and arrangement of MSS., and to advise on any matter concerning composition and orchestration.
For terms, &c., apply, 12, Upper George Street, W.1.

ELIZABETH LEVY
L.R.A.M., GOLD MEDALLIST.
PIANO LESSONS (TOBIAS MATTHAY'S METHOD) and Harmony taught by her at pupils' houses or her Studios, Weekes 14, Hanover Street, W.1, and 27, Buckingham Mansions, N.W.6. Phone: Hamp. 3972.

MISS MARY LINDSAY
L.R.A.M. (Teacher's Diploma).
Gives lessons in Voice Production and Singing: coaches for singing examinations; leads and trains choral classes and choirs; also gives lessons on the guitar. Moderate charges for all subjects.
26, Onslow Square, S.W.7. Tel.: Kensington 3627.

ARTHUR MANGELSDORFF
SOLO PIANIST
RUSSIAN MUSIC
CONCERTS AND RECITALS
TALKS AT THE PIANO
For terms, apply to
ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

MR. J. M. MORRIS,
L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. (Teaching Singing), F.T.S.C.
SPECIALISES IN VOICE PRODUCTION AND SINGING.
CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:
Harmony and Counterpoint. L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Paper Work. All Tonic Sol-fa Diplomas. Vocal Physiology and the Art of Teaching Singing for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Diplomas.
Address: 12, FITZALAN PLACE, CARDIFF. Phone: Cardiff 7830.

WILLIAM SANDS
ORGANIST and DIRECTOR OF THE MUSIC, REDDITCH PARISH CHURCH
RECITALIST AND ACCOMPANIST.
For vacant dates, terms, &c., apply to
The Oaks, Mount Pleasant, Redditch, Worcs,
or, 4, Valley Road, Shortlands, Kent.

E. SIMS-HILDITCH
LECTURER AND ADJUDICATOR
Address, 37 Victoria Street, Crewe.

MISS PITT SOPER F.R.A.M.
Professor of Singing, Royal Academy of Music, London.
Prepares Candidates for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Examinations (Teachers and Performers).
For particulars, apply Wigmore Hall Studios.

MISS MARY WILSON, F.R.A.M.
Professor of Singing at the Royal Academy of Music, London,
Receives pupils for Voice Production and Singing. Prepares candidates for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Diplomas as Teacher or Performer. Also gives SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS to candidates entering for the L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Singing Teachers' Diplomas.
Particulars on application.
Address: 10, Harley Street, London, W.1. Phone: Langham 3909.

MISS FRANCES YORKE.—CONTRALTO, Concerts, Masonics, Oratorio. Linden Lea, Sussex Road, North Harrow.

GEORGE A. ARMSTRONG, Mus. Bac., A.R.M.C.M., L.Mus. T.C.L. Correspondence Lessons in all subjects. Preparation for diplomas. 131, Warbreck Drive, Blackpool, N.S.

MR. ALFRED ALLEN, author of From the Organ Loft and a Communion Service in F major, would be happy to give lessons by letter to young writers of Church music. Llanychan, Ruthin, Denbighshire.

MR. J. PERCY BAKER, Mus. B., Dunelm., F.R.A.M., gives Postal Tuition and prepares for Examinations. Personal Lessons (Pianoforte and Theory), at 14, Hanover Street, W.1. Address, 12, Longley Road, Tooting Graveney, S.W.17.

CAPTAIN PERCY BAKER, M.C., F.R.C.O., L.Mus. T.C.L. (Author of "Compend of Musical Knowledge," "Studies in History and Form," &c.). Specialist in Tuition by post for R.C.O., R.C.M., R.A.M., &c., Diplomas. Study Aids, 9*d.* Studies in Modulation, 3*s.*
Send for interesting Pamphlets on Methods.
HAZELDENE, TEWKESBURY.

MISS J. BLAKE, A.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. (Teacher of Singing), prepares pupils L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Exams., as Teacher or Performer. Highest recommendations. Studio, 139, New Bond Street, W.1.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:—

(1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work.
(2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work.
(3.) Interesting Courses of Study in Rudiments, Harmony, Form, &c.

L.R.A.M. Exams. 1910-28... 334 Correspondence Pupils successful.
A.R.C.M. Exams. 1914-28... 90 " " "

MR. E. H. BIBBY, Mus.Bac., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Waterloo Buildings, Piccadilly, Manchester.

In response to many requests, MR. BIBBY begs to announce that he has prepared the following additional CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:

(1.) The "Mus. Bac." Degree.
(2.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Paper Work.
(3.) A.T.C.L. and L.T.C.L. Paper Work. (30 Successes.)
(4.) The Associated Board Examinations in Rudiments, Harmony, and Counterpoint. (21 Successes.)

(Address as above.)

MR. BIBBY also gives PERSONAL Lessons in Manchester. Complete Preparation (Practical and Paper Work) for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L., &c. Address as above.

ALLAN BROWN, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., L. Mus. T.C.L. (Organist and Musical Director, Kingsway Hall), 298, Balham High Road, S.W.17. Telephone: Battersea 0916.

Special preparation for F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O. Also L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. ORGAN EXAMINATIONS.

SINGLE LESSONS and PRACTICE on facsimile R.C.O. inst. Also large four-manual organ. Pieces registered and phrased.

RECENT SUCCESSES IN ORGAN WORK:

| | |
|---|---|
| 1 A.R.C.M., 1920. | 1 L.R.A.M., 1919. |
| 1 L.R.A.M., 1924. | 4 A.R.C.O., 1921. |
| 1 A.R.C.M., 1928. | 3 A.R.C.O., 1922. |
| 2 F.R.C.O., 1922. | 5 A.R.C.O., 1923. |
| 6 F.R.C.O., 1923. | 4 A.R.C.O., 1924. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., 1925. | 8 A.R.C.O., 1925. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., 1926. | 7 A.R.C.O., 1926. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., 1927. | 8 A.R.C.O., 1927. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., 1928. | 9 A.R.C.O., 1928. |

"Hints for R.C.O. Candidates" to be obtained from the Publishers, Reid Bros., 26, Eastcastle Street, Oxford Circus, W.1. 2/8 post free.

FREE LESSONS (in November). Reduced Fees after to really GOOD VOICE in Old Italian Method of Production. West-End Studio. Write, "A. Z.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., PIANOFORTE.—Special Coaching by Arthur Ellershaw, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

CLARINET.—ALAN FRANK (pupil of Chas. Draper) open for pupils, at moderate fees, and engagements. 28, Telford Avenue, S.W.2. 'Phone: Streatham 3456.

FREDERICK GREEN, Mus.B., F.R.C.O., &c. Voice Specialist, Vocal Coach, and Adjudicator. Prep. for A.R.C.M. and L.R.A.M. 1, Newington, Liverpool.

ARTHUR GREGORY, L.R.A.M. (Pianoforte Teacher), educated R.A.M. Teaches Pianoforte, Harmony, Counterpoint, and Form. Examination candidates prepared. Write, 3, Gladys Road, West Hampstead, N.W.6.

FREDERICK C. HAGGIS, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., L.T.C.L., specialises in VOICE-TRAINING and SINGING. Pupils are offered, in addition to private tuition, exceptional advantages in Class-Singing, for the further study of Sight-Singing, Ear-Training, and Interpretation. Address: 14, Hanover St., W.1.

DR. CUTHBERT HARRIS, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE TUITION. 413 Successes in Mus.D., Mus.B., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.O., and the paper-work requirements for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Diplomas in pianoforte playing. For terms, &c., apply to 58, Avondale Road, Gorleston-on-Sea.

DR. CHASTEY HECTOR, D.Mus. Oxon., 1922, L.R.A.M., instructs Candidates personally or by post, for Degrees and Diplomas in Music. "The Downs," Old Shoreham Road, Hove, Sussex.

MISS H. HEALE COACHES for all EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC (at private residence or at West-End Studio), in Pianoforte, Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, Form, Orchestration, "Teaching," Modulation, Transposition, &c. For Terms, &c., apply, Dunraven House, 41, Albert Bridge Road, S.W.11.

HERBERT HODGE, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., Organist and Choirmaster, St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, London, has, since 1908, made a speciality of coaching Candidates for the Organ Playing Examinations of the Royal College of Organists, and can arrange a private course of instruction (or single lessons) to organists visiting London.

SUCCESSES IN ORGAN PLAYING SINCE 1910:

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1910 | ... | 8 | 1919 | ... | 11 |
| 1911 | ... | 10 | 1920 | ... | 7 |
| 1912 | ... | 20 | 1921 | ... | 9 |
| 1913 | ... | 18 | 1922 | ... | 15 |
| 1914 | ... | 25 | 1923 | ... | 15 |
| 1915 | ... | 25 | 1924 | ... | 7 |
| 1916 | ... | 18 | 1925 | ... | 14 |
| 1917 | ... | 2 | 1926 | ... | 11 |
| 1918 | ... | 3 | 1927 | ... | 12 |

5, Streatham Place, S.W.2. Telephone: Streatham 2195.

DR. A. G. IGGULDEN, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE COACHING. Latest Successes: Durham, 1928, Mus. Doc., 3 Final Mus. Bac., and 1st Mus. Bac. passes. Other recent successes, 4 Mus. Doc. and 4 Mus. Bac. Exs., after prelim. course in composition. Over 200 successes at Durham alone, besides R.C.O. Diplomas. The Durdans, Reigate.

A. H. LAWRENCE, Mus.B., F.R.C.O. (Asst.-Organist, Leeds Parish Church). Correspondence tuition in all Subjects. Preparation for Degrees, &c. 72, Castleford Road, Normanton, Yorks.

DR. ORLANDO A. MANSFIELD, Mus. Doc., University of Toronto; F.R.C.O., F.A.G.O., &c., Sirsa House, Cheltenham. Correspondence Lessons, Revision of MSS. Scoring, editing, and arranging. Examination pieces analysed and annotated.

MISS F. HELENA MARKS, Author of "The Sonata: Its Form and Meaning" prepares for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and all other examinations, Pianoforte, Harmony, "Form and Teaching," &c. Personal or Correspondence Lessons in all Paper-Work subjects, including those for L.R.A.M., "Aural Training and Sight-Singing," and A.R.C.M. in "The Teaching of Musical Appreciation," &c. Pupils received and visited for the Pianoforte. Many recent successes L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c.
10, Matheson Road, London, W.14.

FREDERICK MARRIOTT, F.R.C.O., CORRESPONDENCE TUITION for F.R.C.O., A.R.C.O., and L.R.A.M. paper work requirements. 28, Belmont Hill, Lewisham, S.E.13.

DR. H. H. L. MIDDLETON, Mus.Doc., F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Specialist in Pianoforte Playing, Touch, Technique, and Interpretation. Thirty years' experience in preparing for examinations. More than 1,000 of Dr. Middleton's pupils have gained Degrees and Diplomas. Address: Weekes' Studios, 14, Hanover Street, W.1.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L. Exams. Correspondence lessons in Harmony, Form, Teaching, &c. 29 pupils' successes. Moderate terms. Arthur W. Morrison, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c. 39, Clarendon Road, Fulwood, Sheffield.

MR. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M. (Double Dip. Singing and Piano), L.R.A.M., Class A, Performer and Teacher.
Prof. Singing, G.S.M., 1905-1915. Special Lect. on Musical Appreciation to L.C.C.
"Recit. and its Rendering." 1s. 6d. "Vade Mecum for Singers." 6d.
Preparation for all Exams. by Post and Personal Lessons.
Special Courses of Papers: Singing, Piano, Touch, Musical Appreciation, &c.
Nearly 1,000 Successes for Degrees and Diplomas.
Send for Prospectus,
21, Boundary Road, N.W.8. 'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

W. J. FREDERICK PUGH, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., prepares for L.R.A.M. (Aural Culture and Voice Culture Diplomas), A.R.C.M. (Appreciation Diploma). Recent Successes, 34, Wilmington Avenue, Chiswick, W.4. Chiswick 3267.

POSTAL LESSONS.—Successful High-Class Tutor; all subjects for principal examinations. From 1/6 per lesson. Apply G.M.B., c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

POSTAL TUITION by F.R.C.O., F.T.C.L. (Registered Teacher). Any Exam. One guinea ten lessons. Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, &c. Courses in History, Choir-Training, &c., R.C.O. exams. Recent successes: F.R.C.O., July, 1927; A.R.C.O., January and July, 1928: A. Mus. T.C.L., L.T.C.L., F.T.C.L., July, 1928. Address: BM/JRMB, London, W.C.1.

SPENCER SHAW, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.O. (Organist and Musical Director, Whitefields Tabernacle), Tottenham Court Road, W.1. Recitalist. Tuition in Organ, Piano, Harmony, &c. Preparation for Exams.

DR. A. E. TAYLOR. PUPIL GAINED STILLIE Bursary for Cpt.; Gold Medal for Cpt., Ass. Board; Gold Medal for Har., Ass. Board; C. C. Scholarship; A.R.C.O., A.T.C.L., Mus. B. Compositions revised and accompaniments written. Portland Place, Lancaster.

W. G. WEBBER, F.R.C.O. Recitalist, &c. Preparation for Exams. Organ lessons given on new four manual Willis. Address, Christ Church, Westminster Bridge Road, London, S.E.1.

DR. PERCY WOOD, Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O. SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:

(1) Elementary Harmony and Counterpoint.
(2) F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O.
(3) A.R.C.M. (Theory of Music).
(4) Mus. Bac. Degree.

Several recent successes in all these examinations.

R.C.O. EXAMINER says: "Your system is undoubtedly an excellent one."

SUCCESS GUARANTEED—given any pupils with the requisite musical ability for the examination in view.

328 A.R.C.O. Successes since 1909.
195 F.R.C.O. " " "

RECENT SUCCESSES IN PAPER WORK:

| | |
|---|---|
| 2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1918. | 2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1918. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., July, 1918. | 2 A.R.C.O., July, 1918. |
| 1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1919. | 3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1919. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1919. | 3 A.R.C.O., July, 1919. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1920. | 10 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1920. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1920. | 6 A.R.C.O., July, 1920. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1921. | 7 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1921. |
| 6 F.R.C.O., July, 1921. | 8 A.R.C.O., July, 1921. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1922. | 5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1922. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., July, 1922. | 5 A.R.C.O., July, 1922. |
| 8 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1923. | 6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1923. |
| 7 F.R.C.O., July, 1923. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1923. |
| 7 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1924. | 9 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1924. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1924. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1924. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1925. | 8 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1925. |
| 7 F.R.C.O., July, 1925. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1925. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1926. | 6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1926. |
| 6 F.R.C.O., July, 1926. | 6 A.R.C.O., July, 1926. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1927. | 12 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1927. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1927. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1927. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1928. | 12 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1928. |
| 6 F.R.C.O., July, 1928. | 9 A.R.C.O., July, 1928. |

"Tralee," Warwick Road, Cliftonville, Margate.

MARGARET YOUNG, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L. Registered, Pianoforte, Singing, Theory. Personal or Postal Coaching. General Musical Advice. Bawburgh, Norwich.

SYNCOPATED MUSIC (PIANO) taught by Professional Expert. Write, Box 12, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ACCOMPANIST PLAYS FOR SINGERS and INSTRUMENTALISTS at her home in Hampstead. Moderate terms. Box 24, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

SINGER, WITH ACCOMPANIST, L.T.C.L., A.T.C.L., free for Dinners, Concerts, or Drawing-Room. Address, S. Foster, 95, Sinclair Road, Kensington, W.14.

CONDUCTOR (experienced) will GIVE SERVICES to any Choral, Orchestral, or Operatic Society, London or Provinces. Box 38, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

R.C.O. EXAMS.—Finishing lessons given on replica of R.C.O. organ at National Institute for the Blind, London. Apply, Mr. H. V. Spanner, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., 79, Crofton Road, London, S.E.5. Candidates are advised to apply early.

TO COMPOSERS.—Complete and systematic course, by correspondence, in Military Band Instrumentation. Write, Major Charles Hoby, M.B.E., Mus. Doc., Oxon., 80, Warwick Gardens, London, W.14.

THE REVISION OF MSS. is UNDERTAKEN by musical critic and song composer. Lessons in piano, singing, theory. Herbert H. Nelson, 9, Grange Rd., Canonbury, N.1.

LINCOLN CATHEDRAL

There is a VACANCY for an ALTO LAY-CLERK. For particulars, apply to the Chapter Clerk, 7, Bank Street, Lincoln.

ST. STEPHEN'S, DULWICH, next door Sydenham Hill Station, S. Rly. Alto and Tenor required, two services Sunday, one weekly rehearsal. £16. Apply, Organist, 80, West Hill, Sydenham, S.E.26.

CHORISTERS WILL BE REQUIRED for the resident choir-school at the College of St. Nicolas, Chislehurst, which is being opened in January, 1929, by the School of English Church Music. General education will be provided at a first-rate preparatory school. An exceptional opportunity for boys showing musical promise. For particulars apply, The Warden, S.E.C.M., 105, Gower Street, London, W.C.1.

SOLO ALTO (Male) WISHES TO JOIN MALE-VOICE QUARTET. London and Croydon District. Box 26, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

THERE WILL SHORTLY BE A VACANCY for a CONTRALTO in the TUDOR SINGERS. Applicants must be good readers, young and enthusiastic. Applications to the Secretary, The Tudor Singers, 6, Hosack Road, S.W.17.

ALTO WANTED.—ST. ANDREW'S, HOLBORN. £15. Fridays, 6.30; Sundays, 11. and 6.30 Apply, Organist.

THE COMMITTEE of the LONDON ORATORIO AND CONCERT ASSOCIATION have decided to increase the personnel by a Quartet, and invite applications from singers who are good readers, with a repertoire of the standard works. Write Secretary, L. O. & C. Association, 26, Guilford Street, W.C.1.

SOLO TENOR and SOLO BASS REQUIRED for St. Matthew's, Croydon. £20. Apply, Organist, 22, Wellesley Road.

TENOR REQUIRED for CHRIST CHURCH, STREATHAM HILL. Must be good reader. £12. Apply, by letter, to Howard Poole, 240, Parchmore Road, Thornton Heath.

BASS WANTED for St. Mark's, Hamilton Terrace, N.W.8. Good reader essential. £20. Also voluntary TENOR. Apply, A. R. Saunders, 14, Geraldine Road, Wandsworth, S.W.18.

CHRIST CHURCH OXFORD

NOTICE OF MUSIC SCHOLARSHIP.

AN EXAMINATION will begin at 10 a.m. on Tuesday, 20th November, 1928, at Christ Church, for the purpose of electing to a Music Scholarship. While preference will be given to organ-playing, candidates who offer another instrument, or are singers, will also be considered. Candidates for the Scholarship must be unmarried, and not over 22 years of age. Further particulars may be obtained on application to the Very Rev. The Dean, to whom candidates must send their application, not later than Saturday, 10th November.

ORGANIST-CHOIRMASTER REQUIRED for Evangelical Church. Special music at Festivals. Salary, £65. Good references: Churchman. To Vicar, Emmanuel, Northwood, Middlesex.

ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER, Burstow, nr. Horley, Surrey. Fine organ: Choir, male and female. Terms arrange. Rector, Burstow, Surrey.

ORGANIST REQUIRED.—Sub-tropical country. Delightful climate; pleasant social life. Choir-training ability, both sacred and secular, first consideration. Salary and emoluments about £250. Copy of one recent testimonial only. Box 22, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGANIST WANTED.—FREE CHURCH, to work with Choirmaster. Apply, stating salary required, to W. J. Hayes, Park View, Chesham, Bucks.

LANCASTER PARISH CHURCH.—WANTED ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER. Cathedral Services. £120 per annum, and Whit-Sunday Collections. Apply, Vicar.

WANTED.—ALL SAINTS' CHURCH, EXMOUTH. ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER. Salary, £75 per annum. Missa Cantata. Apply, C. Beauchamp Hall, St. Denys, Bellevue Road, Exmouth.

ST. MARY'S CHURCH, FARNHAM ROYAL, BUCKS.—ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER WANTED. £60. New organ; light duties. Experienced choir-trainer essential. Required to reside in district. Apply by letter, Reginald Goss-Custard, 27, Methuen Park, Muswell Hill, N.10.

F.R.C.O., CATHEDRAL TRAINED, RECITALIST, very successful choir trainer (Competition awards), good disciplinarian, DESIRES POST as ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER. Highest references as to character and musical ability. Free January, 1929. Apply, Box 23, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER SEEKS CHANGE, S.E., S.W. Experienced Good disciplinarian. Apply, Box 29, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

WANTED POST.—TEMP. or PER., as Organist or Organist-Choirmaster. Good Accompanist, experienced player. "Organo," 66, Rathcoole Gardens, Hornsey, N.8.

KEEN YOUNG ORGAN STUDENT DESIRES POST as pupil-assistant. Services in return for free practice. Modern instrument. London, South, preferred. Apply, Box 28, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

EXPERIENCED ORGANIST WILLING to do DEPUTY WORK in London on Sundays or week-day evenings. Apply, D. B. Soul, 82, Carleton Road, N.7.

ORGANS (New and Second-hand) for SALE.—Electric and pneumatic action up-to-date. Built or reconstructed. Bedwell & Son, The Cambridge Organ Works, Cambridge.

PEDAL AMERICAN ORGANS.—One, Two, and Three Manuals. Bargains. From £15. Best Makers. Stagg, 45, Grays Inn Road, London, W.C.1.

PLAYER ORGAN, built by Messrs. H. Willis & Sons, Ltd. Open Diapason, 8-ft.; Lieblich bourdon, 16-ft.; Cor do Nuit, 8-ft.; Gamba, 8-ft.; Voix Celestes, 8-ft.; Flute d'Amour, 8-ft.; Orchestral Horn, 8-ft.; Vox Humana, 8-ft. Tremulant, three Couplers. Case in fumed oak. Built 1924. Electric blower. All complete; can be seen any time. Cost £1,500; nearest offer, £550. J. Speight, Moor House, Rishton, Lancs.

GRAND NEW ORGAN of the best description. Two manuals (61); 25 Stops, 4 on Pedal. Electric Blowing. £940, including erection. A.R.A.M., 4, Wellington Gardens, Hastings.

ORGAN FOR SALE.—AMERICAN BELL, 11 Stops and Grand Organ. 4 sets Reeds; 2 treble, 2 bass. Walnut case; height, 6-ft. 8-in. Perfect. Cost, 38 guineas. Price £16. Seen by appointment, 12, Grove Park, Denmark Hill, S.E.5.

SMALL PIPE ORGAN FOR SALE.—Now in Lilburn Tower, Northumberland. One-manual, six Stops, handsome Oak case. Good condition. Suitable for small Church. Also a HARMONIUM, in good condition. Apply, Lilburn Estate Office, Alnwick.

LISZT ORGAN.—2 manuals and pedals, 19 stops; beautiful tone, very fine condition; solid oak, by Mason & Hamlin; also hydraulic blower. Reasonable offer accepted. Seen by appointment, after 6 o'clock, 29, Burgoyne Road, Harringay, N.4.

REED ORGAN.—2 Man., Pedals, 21 Stops. £35. Brett, 49, St. Paul's Road, Highbury, N.1.

TWO-MANUAL CHANCEL ORGAN FOR SALE.—16 Stops; good condition. Bargain. £15. S. E. Brown, Victoria Road, Horley, Surrey.

ORGAN WANTED.—TWO MANUALS AND PEDALS, for small Church, about £250. For particulars, apply, Mr. W. A. Rudling, 30, West Street, Prittlewell, Essex.

ORGAN CLASS (Saturdays, 3 p.m.)
High-Class Individual Tuition. Friendly Interest. Any Grade. Full particulars from W.B.M., c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGAN PRACTICE.—1s. 4d. an hour (pupils, 9d.). Hydraulic-blown, two-manual and pedal organ, at the Fulham School of Music, 2, Edgarley Terrace, S.W.6. Tel: Putney 4208.
ORGAN LESSONS at ST. STEPHEN'S WALBROOK, E.C.4. GEORGE METZLER, F.R.C.O., F.T.C.L.

ORGAN PEDAL ATTACHMENT for PIANO. Complete with Stool. Perfect, £5. Seen by appointment. 15, Murray Avenue, Bromley, Kent.

TWO GERMAN PIANOS FOR SALE.—A pre-war Upright, £35; and new Baby Grand, £115. Both bargains and in excellent condition. "F.R.C.O.," 44, South Road, West Hartlepool, Co. Durham.

PIANO.—SEMI-GRAND: STECK. Excellent condition; fine tone. Cost 200 gns. Price, £100. Write, Box 25, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

HOPKINSON PIANO FOR SALE.—Upright Grand, very little used; excellent condition. £40, or near offer. "St. Martin's," Montpelier, Weston-s.-Mare.

BABY GRAND, GERMAN MAKE.—First-Class Condition. Cost £225; accept £85. Challens, "Shenstone," Blossomfield, Solihull, Birmingham.

GENUINE SMALL-SIZE 'CELLO FOR SALE, by Richard Duke. Price £20, or near offer. "M. B. Y.," 46, Hillcourt Avenue, N.12.

FOR SALE.—VIOLONCELLO, in good condition, belonged to late tutor at R.A.M. £15, or reasonable offer. Seen any time by appointment with R. H. Starkey, 99, Bexley Road, Erith, Kent.

WANTED.—TRAVELLERS, EITHER SEX, to call at Schools with Booklet. Excellent commission. McKerrow, 135, Buchanan Gardens, Willesden, N.W.10.

REQUIRED.—PIANO CONNECTION, or K. and P. Girls' SCHOOL GOODWILL. S. Counties. Coast? "T.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

WANTED.—GOOD MUSIC TEACHING CONNECTION, or would consider Partnership in School of Music. Send particulars to L.R.A.M., Box No. 30, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

A YOUNG LADY, preparing for the Musical Profession, WANTED as ASSISTANT-SECRETARY in London School of Music. Small progressive salary and training in pianoforte or singing. Write, Principal, c/o Dixon's, 195, Oxford Street, W.1.

PALESTRINA.—Choice extracts from, as short anthems, to English words. Set as unaccompanied choral test-pieces at Musical Festivals. Specimens gratis from Dr. H. G. Smith, 31, N. C. Road, Dublin.

CONCLUDING AMEN, adapted from Handel's "Amen" Chorus: on card, 2d., Novello. Free specimen, from C. E. James, Oxford Road, Macclesfield.

ORGAN MUSIC (BACH, SMART, ETC.) FOR SALE. Stamp: List returnable. "B.," Homewood, Hillside, Horsham.

SET OF GROVE'S "DICTIONARY OF MUSIC AND MUSICIANS" (1450-1889). 4 Vols., Red Cloth, Good Condition, £3. Prout's Musical Form; Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, Applied Forms, Musical Form. Good Condition, the lot for 15s. Write, Box 27, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

VOICE-PRODUCTION.—Four Song-Diagrams showing the Exact Modulations. 6d. each, 5s. a dozen for students. McKerrow, 135, Buchanan Gardens, Willesden, N.W.10.

GOOD VIOLIN MUSIC WANTED in exchange for Organ Music. List sent. Marriage, Kennington, Kent.

COMPLETE JAZZ SET FOR SALE.—£12, or singly. Excellent condition. Drums, Ludwig Super B.D., Leeds all-metal floating Smyrna and Zeldian Cymbals, 3 tuned genuine Chinese Tom-Toms, &c. Box 44, Whiteleys, Queen's Road, W.2.

BRITISH LYRIC WRITERS! We are offering £25 CASH, and usual Royalties for best Lyric submitted. Peter Derek, Ltd., Dept. 2049. 106, Charing Cross Road, London, W.C.2.

MUSIC DUPLICATING.—All kinds, any number; perfect copies. Specimens and prices on application to E. Herrick, at 37, Amherst Road, West Ealing, W.

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED
LYRICS SET TO MUSIC, MELODIES HARMONIZED, MUSIC TRANSPOSED AND COPIED, BAND PARTS WRITTEN, MSS. PREPARED FOR PUBLICATION BY A MASTER HAND, ACCOMPANIMENTS OF DISTINCTION WRITTEN TO SONGS.
For terms, write, A. CARRINGTON BRIGGS, Glenholme, Hessle High Road, Hull, Yorks.

A TREATISE ON CONDUCTING.
12,000 WORDS. ILLUSTRATED METHOD. 2s. 6d. Post free; Abroad, 3s. Pre-eminent Technique. It will thoroughly prepare you for the position of "Conductor." M. T. Cooper, M.D., 23, Beech Avenue, Blackpool.

£1,000 PAID FOR LOSS OF HANDS.—Temporary loss of use: right hand, £8 per week; left hand, £6. Many other benefits. Annual premium, £3. Instalments arranged. Defence Ltd., 40, King William Street, E.C.4.

AURAL TESTS.—L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and other examinations. SPECIAL PAPER showing how to obtain success in these important tests. All candidates should secure this paper. Write, enclosing 4s. 6d., to "Aural Tests," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ESSAY.—A.R.C.O., Jan., 1929. Six special new Model Essays (3rd series), on the book "The Scope of Music," with Hints on how to write the Essay. Most Important. Also 1st and 2nd Series of 6 Essays on this book. Price, each series, 4s. 6d. Enclose P.O. to "Essays," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

MUSIC COPIED, DUPLICATED, ETC. Artistic and Exact. Poems, Lyrics, and Hymns printed. S. Eccleston, Breachwood Green, Welwyn, Herts.

F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O. PLAYING TESTS in Book, MS.; also Ear-Tests, and exhaustive hints. Successful coaching, up-to-date. "F.R.C.O.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

PIANO PEDALS, with Octave Coupler
This wonderful invention supersedes all Piano Pedals, and is a Master Patent.
St. George's Hall, Liverpool, 9th April, 1921.
"The simplicity of the attachment, and the clever sixteen-feet, eight-feet, or both combined, 'OPTIONAL OCTAVE' contrivance astonished me.
"I was delighted with the Pedal touch and with the variety in that touch, which your Attachment makes possible. It is very responsive to the movements of the feet, and is reliable."
HERBERT F. ELLINGFORD, Mus.Bac., Oxon., F.R.C.O.
Owing to increased output, we have reduced the price of our Popular Model to 14 guineas cash. Deferred payments if desired.
Write for Lists, Prices, and Clients' Opinions and References to
THE MALKIN PATENT PEDAL CO., LTD.,
NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LYME.
London Address: 34, Spencer Hill, Wimbledon, S.W.19.
Please mention this paper when writing.

PIANO REPAIRS. "WIGMORE HALL FINISH"
denotes a standard not obtainable elsewhere.
THE MOST HIGHLY SKILLED WORKMANSHIP.
THE FINEST MATERIALS (regardless of cost).
PERFECT SATISFACTION.
WIGMORE HALL AND PIANO GALLERIES, 32-40, Wigmore Street, W.1.

A SELECTED LIST OF MUSIC SUITABLE FOR USE ON ARMISTICE DAY

MEMORIAL HYMNS

*Crossing the Bar ... ... ... J. Barnby 2d.
,, ,, ... ... C. H. H. Parry 1½d.
*God of our fathers, known of old ... J. B. Dykes 1½d.
,, ,, ,, ... G. C. Martin 1½d.
,, ,, ,, ...E. W. Naylor 1½d.
Hush! for amid our tears ... H. A. Chambers 1½d.
(Words only, 2s. 100.)
,, ,, ... C. H. H. Parry 1½d.
(Words only, 2s. 100.)
Lie still, beloved, lie still ... ... C. H. Lloyd 1½d.
(Words only, 3s. 100.)
Sleep on, beloved ... ... ... J. Stainer 2d.
Sleep thy last sleep ... ... ... J. Barnby 3d.
Thou art gone to the grave ... ... J. Barnby 3d.
To mourn our dead we gather here ... A. Sullivan 1½d.
(Words only, 3s. 100.)
We love God's Acre round the Church
J. V. Roberts 1½d.
(Words only, 3s. 100.)

MEMORIAL ANTHEMS

Beloved, it is well ... ... ... C. H. Lloyd 3d.
Christ will gather in His own ... A. Gray 3d.
*Comes, at times, a stillness ... ... H. Oakley 3d.
,, ,, ,, ... H. H. Woodward 4d.
Crossing the Bar (T.T.B.B.) ... T. F. Dunhill 3d.
,, ,, (S.A.T.B.) ... C. L. Williams 3d.
,, ,, (A.T.T.B.) ... ,, ,, 3d.
* ,, ,, (S.A.T.B.) ... H. H. Woodward 3d.
Earth does not hold ... ... E. H. Thiman 3d.
Give rest, O Christ (Kieff Melody) Ed. by W. Parratt 2d.
,, ,, (T.T.B.B.) ,, ,, 2d.
(Words only, 2s. 100.)
*God shall wipe away all tears ... J. T. Field 3d.
,, ,, ,, (arranged as a Trio for boys' or female voices) ... ... J. T. Field 4d.
*He wants not friends that hath Thy love G. Shaw 4d.
*How blest are they ... ... P. Tschaikowsky 6d.
*Into Thy gracious hands ... ... E. Bullock 3d.
*Radiant morn hath passed away, The
H. H. Woodward 3d.
Rest in the Lord ... ... C. L. Williams 2d.
Righteous souls that take their flight H. Skeats 2d.
Sleep thy last sleep ... ... ... W. Carroll 2d.
Sorrow not for those that sleep (Soprano Solo and Two-part Chorus)... ... ... H. Blair 4d.
*Souls of the righteous, The ... ... G. Elvey 3d.
,, ,, ,, (Soprano Solo and Chorus)
M. B. Foster 4d.
,, ,, ,, ... ... E. V. Hall 2d
,, ,, ,, (Quartet and Chorus)
H. H. Woodward 4d.
*Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace J. B. Calkin 3d
,, ,, ,, (A.T.T.B.) ,, 3d.
,, ,, ,, ,, A. D. Culley 3d.
* ,, ,, ,, T. T. Trimnell 3d.
* ,, ,, ,, (S.A.T.T.B.) S. S. Wesley 4d.
* ,, ,, ,, C. L. Williams 3d.
*Worship (Unison, for Massed Voices) G. Shaw 3d.
* ,, (S.A.T.B.) ... ... ... ,, 4d.
(Words only, 1s. 6d. 100.)

HYMNS OF THANKSGIVING AND PEACE

Come, Lord, and rule (with optional descant)
E. H. Thiman 2d.
From East and West ... ... ... J. B. Dykes 1½d.
(Words only, 3s. 100.)
God of our fathers, unto Thee A. M. Goodhart 1½d.
(Words only, 2s. 100.)
Lord of Hosts, Who hast endued us W. Parratt 1½d.
(Words only, 3s. 100.)
Lord of our fathers, Thou didst blend G. C. Martin 1½d.
(Words only, 2s. 100.)
O God of Glory, King of Kings most high
J. Langran 1½d.
(Words only, 2s. 100.)
Praise the Lord: to-day we raise ... J. Barnby 1½d.
(Words only, 2s. 100.)
Thanks be to God ... ... ... G. C. Martin 1½d.
(Words only, 3s. 100.)
To Thee our God we fly ... ... J. Armistead 1½d.
(Words only, 2s. 100.)
,, ,, ,, ... H. W. Davies 1½d.
(Words only, 2s. 100.)

THANKSGIVING AND PEACE ANTHEMS

*All people that on earth do dwell ... John E. West 3d.
Give peace in our time, O Lord F. W. Wadely 3d.
*Hymn of Peace (Soprano Solo and Chorus)
W. H. Callcott 3d.
I will extol my God ... ... ... John E. West 4d.
Let us now praise famous men ... A. J. Silver 4d.
,, ,, (T.T.B.B.) ...E. H. Thorne 4d.
,, ,, ... ... S. S. Wesley 4d.
*Light in darkness (Soprano and Tenor Solos and Chorus) ... ... ... D. C. Jenkins 4d.
*Lord hath done great things, The ... John E. West 6d.
Peace lives again ... ... ... J. F. Bridge 4d.
,, ,, (A.T.B.B.) ... ... ,, ,, 4d.
*Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem ... E. V. Hall 6d.
*Ten thousand times ten thousand (Soprano Solo and Chorus) ... ... ... E. V. Hall 4d.
,, (Baritone Solo and Chorus) F. Tozer 6d.
We have heard with our ears ...E. W. Naylor 6d.
*What are these ... ... ... J. Stainer 4d.

CHORAL WORKS

For the fallen. Set to Music for Chorus and Orchestra ... ... ... C. B. Rootham 2s. 6d.
*Spirit of England, The (Three Poems). Set to Music for Tenor or Soprano Solo, Chorus, and Orchestra ... ... ... Edward Elgar 4s.
Or separately :—
1.*Fourth of August, The ... ... ... 1s. 6d.
2.*To Women ... ... ... ... 1s. 0d.
3.*For the fallen ... ... ... ... 1s. 6d.
*With proud thanksgiving (Chorus arr. from above) 8d.

Compositions marked * may be obtained in Tonic Sol-fa.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Mandeville Place, Manchester Square, London, W.1

President:
THE RT. HON. THE EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, K.P., G.C.V.O., C.B.E.

Chairman of Board and Director of Studies:
Professor J. C. BRIDGE, M.A., Mus.D., F.S.A.

November 7th, 21st, and 28th, at 3 p.m.—Student's Invitation Concerts.

November 14th, at 3 p.m.—Lecture.

The College provides INSTRUCTION and TRAINING in all Musical Subjects (Instrumental, Vocal, and Theoretical) and Dramatic and Operatic Elocution. The Lessons are arranged to meet the convenience of both day and evening students. Entry may be made for any number of Subjects—from one to the Full Course. The College is open to beginners as well as to the more proficient student; pupils under 16 years of age are received for the Junior School at reduced fees.

The ORCHESTRAL, CHORAL, the OPERATIC, and CHAMBER MUSIC CLASSES are open to sufficiently competent persons who are not College Students for other subjects.

Tuition in the Rudiments of the Theory of Music, Harmony, Counterpoint, Form, Instrumentation, Composition, and the Art of Teaching is also given by Correspondence.

Particulars of the Teaching Department, with list of Professors, Fees, Scholarships regulations, &c., and the Syllabuses of the Diploma and Local Examinations, free on application to the undersigned.

C. N. H. RODWELL, Secretary.

JUST PUBLISHED

MENDELSSOHN SONG ALBUM

EDITED BY
Sydney Northcote
(Professor, G.S.M.)

New English Versions
BY
R. H. Elkin

CONTENTS:

1. ON WINGS OF SONG (Auf Flügeln des Gesanges)
2. IS IT TRUE? (Frage)
3. GREETING (Gruss)
4. O YOUTH (O Jugend)
5. THE FALCON (Wartend)
6. ON THE LAKE (Schilflied)
7. THE MOON (Der Mond)
8. A HUNTING SONG (Jagdlied)

IN TWO EDITIONS:
Low Voice, and Medium or High Voice.

PRICE COMPLETE, 3*s.* 6*d.* NET.
(Each song is also issued separately at 1s. 6d. net)

ELKIN & CO., LTD.,
20, KINGLY STREET, REGENT STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

BROADWOOD PIANOS

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD

SACRED MUSIC FOR CHRISTMAS

| | Price |
|---|---|
| DERING, RICHARD. | |
| Whom saw ye, Shepherds? (6 parts) ... ... ... | 4d. |
| GOSS, JOHN. | |
| Behold, I bring you good tidings ... ... ... | 3d. |
| HANDL, JACOB. | |
| Behold, thou shalt conceive ... ... ... ... | 4d. |
| HOPKINS, E. J. | |
| Let us now go even unto Bethlehem ... ... ... | 3d. |
| LASSO, ORLANDO DI. | |
| Let Zion resound with praise ... ... ... ... | 4d. |
| Whom saw ye, Shepherds? (5 parts) ... ... ... | 4d. |

CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

| | |
|---|---|
| ADAMS, THOMAS. | |
| SIX CHRISTMAS CAROLS. Price, In one volume separately, each | 9d. 3d. |
| BRIDGE, J. FREDERICK. | |
| (Repeatedly featured at the Albert Hall by the Royal Choral Society.) | |
| Ring out with jocund chime ... ... ... ... | 3d. |
| A Babe ys borne I wys ... ... ... ... ... | 3d. |
| Welcome, Yule... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3d. |
| Christmas Day... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3d. |
| When Christ was born ... ... ... ... ... | 3d. |
| Yonder in Bethlehem ... ... ... ... ... | 3d. |
| THE STAR OF THE EAST. A Fantasy for Contralto Solo (ad lib.) and Chorus (S.A.T.B.) ... ... ... ... ... ... | 9d. |
| CHRISTMAS CAROLS. A selection of 25 (Ancient and Modern) ... ... | 1s. |

ORGAN MUSIC.

| | |
|---|---|
| BACH, J. S. | |
| Two Preludes on "In dulci jubilo" (from book of selected Chorale Preludes). Steingraber Edition 2172 ... ... | 4s. |
| GRUNDMANN, A. | |
| AT CHRISTMAS EVE. Three Pastorales. Steingraber Edition 2018 ... ... | 2s. |

BOSWORTH & Co., LTD.,
8, HEDDON STREET, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.1.

JUST PUBLISHED

THE DESCANT CAROL BOOK

A COLLECTION OF
WELL-KNOWN CAROLS

| No. | CONTENTS: |
|---|---|
| 1 | A VIRGIN UNSPOTTED |
| 2 | GOOD CHRISTIAN MEN, REJOICE |
| 3 | GOOD KING WENCESLAS |
| 4 | I SAW THREE SHIPS |
| 5 | SHEPHERDS! SHAKE OFF YOUR DROWSY SLEEP |
| 6 | THE FIRST NOWELL |
| 7 | WHAT CHILD IS THIS? |
| 8 | WHILE SHEPHERDS WATCHED |

PRICE EIGHTPENCE
May also be had separately: Nos. 1-7, 2*d.* each; No. 8, 1½*d.*

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

From the drawing by Kriehuber.

The Musical Times

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

NOVEMBER 1 1928

(For List of Contents see Page 1040.)

SCHUBERT AND MELODIC DESIGN

By Rutland Boughton

(Concluded from October number, page 887)

Having to some extent traced the course of Schubert's divergence from the Italian viewpoint of Mozart to the real originality of the folk-singer, carrying with him all that he could of those additional powers of instrumental expression which had been evolved by Beethoven, and remembering that he was still fain of large forms and of dramatic expression, we find that towards the end of his seventeenth year he has established his idea of song-form according to the following principles:

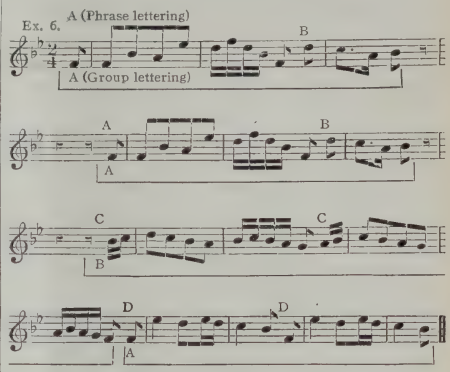
1. Verse form in preference to the cheap and easy Da Capo;
2. The paramount importance of the vocal line;
3. A definite reversion to the manner of folk-song, enriched by the possibilities of melodic growth disclosed by Beethoven and akin to the methods of the builders of Gothic—offering solid chunks of tune within a large musical design, much as figure-sculpture was incorporated into the general scheme of cathedral building;
4. The most economical relation between the vocal and instrumental parts—a thing which Beethoven had failed to effect; and
5. The establishment of the cyclical form outlined by Beethoven in 'An die ferne Geliebte,' but spoiled by the greater composer's last-minute reversion to the fussy Italian opera coda.

It only remains to analyse songs from one of Schubert's three cycles, to show how the first three principles were carried out in the fullness of his powers. I choose the 'Müllerlieder.'

The advantage of the cyclical form to Schubert lay in the fact that he could explore a larger world of experience and maintain the more exquisite nature of his own special art-form, with its somewhat parochial view-point. As compared with the cosmic adventures of Beethoven, Schubert was as a villager staying at home, watching clouds and stars, men and women, sometimes reading a book, but never ashamed of his limitations and even asserting their value. The 'Müllerlieder' offer expressions of such a natural and simple life, and their melodic design is the sort that best reveals such a life. I do not propose to take space here and perhaps bore the reader with a record of the complete analysis I have made, unless my conclusions are disputed and the Editor wishes. Enough here now to give its results.

Of the twenty songs which make up the 'Müllerlieder' nine are in verse form, four use the Da Capo, and the remainder are 'written out.' An example of each should serve our present purpose.

The first song, 'Das Wandern,' is one of simple verse-form:



That, I think, needs little comment. It grows according to Nature rather than to plan. The themes issue from each other, and while the relation of the last phrases to the earlier ones is obvious, it is much to be doubted whether they were deliberately so arranged; they were, I imagine, the subconscious echo of the earlier phrases in the composer's mind. Though I have simplified the analysis by reducing its details to the shortest units of phrase-form, it is quite clear that 'Das Wandern' is couched in one of the commonest forms of folk-song, namely AABA, but developed with delicious melodic skill, in that the B or contrasting phrase is repeated sequentially, and the return of the A phrase hinted rather than declared. The phrase units are lettered above, and the related groups below, the music-type.

Of the four songs which use the Da Capo the most interesting is, perhaps, 'Mein!'

From the drawing by Kriehuber.

The Musical Times

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

NOVEMBER 1 1928

(FOR LIST OF CONTENTS SEE PAGE 1040.)

SCHUBERT AND MELODIC DESIGN

BY RUTLAND BOUGHTON

(Concluded from October number, page 887)

Having to some extent traced the course of Schubert's divergence from the Italian viewpoint of Mozart to the real originality of the folk-singer, carrying with him all that he could of those additional powers of instrumental expression which had been evolved by Beethoven, and remembering that he was still fain of large forms and of dramatic expression, we find that towards the end of his seventeenth year he has established his idea of song-form according to the following principles:

1. Verse form in preference to the cheap and easy Da Capo;
2. The paramount importance of the vocal line;
3. A definite reversion to the manner of folk-song, enriched by the possibilities of melodic growth disclosed by Beethoven and akin to the methods of the builders of Gothic—offering solid chunks of tune within a large musical design, much as figure-sculpture was incorporated into the general scheme of cathedral building;
4. The most economical relation between the vocal and instrumental parts—a thing which Beethoven had failed to effect; and
5. The establishment of the cyclical form outlined by Beethoven in 'An die ferne Geliebte,' but spoiled by the greater composer's last-minute reversion to the fussy Italian opera coda.

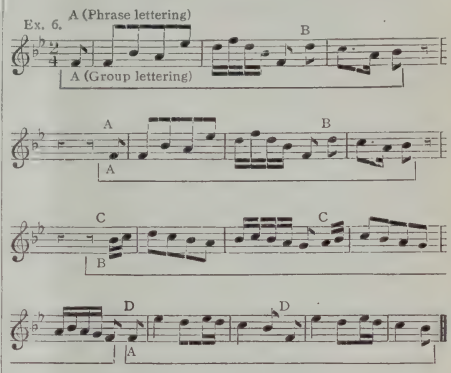
It only remains to analyse songs from one of Schubert's three cycles, to show how the first three principles were carried out in the fullness of his powers. I choose the 'Müllerlieder.'

The advantage of the cyclical form to Schubert lay in the fact that he could explore a larger world of experience and maintain the more exquisite nature of his own special art-form, with its somewhat parochial view-point. As compared with the cosmic adventures of Beethoven, Schubert was as a villager staying at home, watching clouds and stars, men and women, sometimes reading a book, but never ashamed of his limitations and even asserting their value. The 'Müllerlieder' offer expressions of such a natural and simple life, and their melodic design is the sort that best reveals such a life. I do not propose to take space here and perhaps bore the reader with a record of the complete analysis I have made, unless my conclusions are disputed and the Editor wishes. Enough here now to give its results.

Of the twenty songs which make up the 'Müllerlieder' nine are in verse form, four use the Da Capo, and the remainder are 'written out.' An example of each should serve our present purpose.

The first song, 'Das Wandern,' is one of simple verse-form:

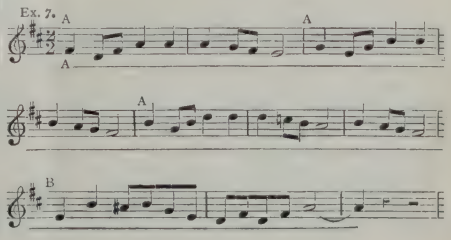
Ex. 6.

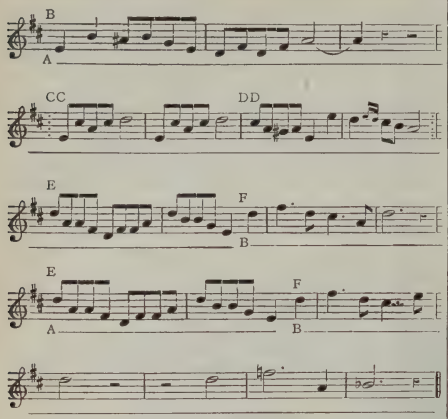


That, I think, needs little comment. It grows according to Nature rather than to plan. The themes issue from each other, and while the relation of the last phrases to the earlier ones is obvious, it is much to be doubted whether they were deliberately so arranged; they were, I imagine, the subconscious echo of the earlier phrases in the composer's mind. Though I have simplified the analysis by reducing its details to the shortest units of phrase-form, it is quite clear that 'Das Wandern' is couched in one of the commonest forms of folk-song, namely AABA, but developed with delicious melodic skill, in that the B or contrasting phrase is repeated sequentially, and the return of the A phrase hinted rather than declared. The phrase units are lettered above, and the related groups below, the music-type.

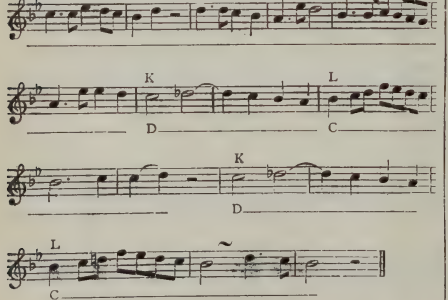
Of the four songs which use the Da Capo the most interesting is, perhaps, 'Mein!'

Ex. 7.





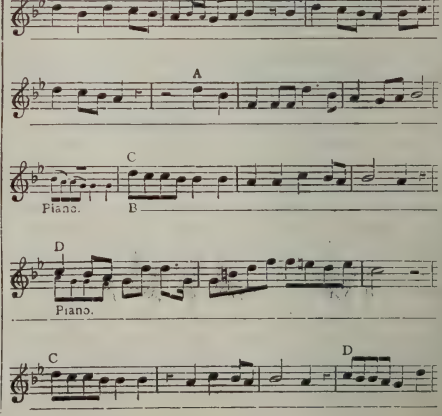
Here the melodic growth is more involved and interesting, but the folk-form is at the root of it all. A is twice repeated sequentially, the second time being extended Beethovenwise; B is so closely related to A that one hesitates to name it as a distinct phrase, and I was only prevented from doing so by the need to show the essential difference between the Italian methods most perfectly used by Mozart and the natural methods used by Schubert, the former wasteful, the latter economical of melodic form; therefore I have given the Italian form an advantage in the comparison by naming all differing phrases as new ones, even when the likeness is close as in A and B above. C, D, and E are also related to A; so the whole lovely melodic growth from A to F is really the development of a single tune-thought, and the entire section might fairly be lettered ABAB. The F as marked above is extended on its repetition to form a link with the next section:



A similar method is pursued here. H and J are closely related to G, L is derived from the second (varied) statement of J; so that in this section we might almost have lettered the analysis as CDCDC.

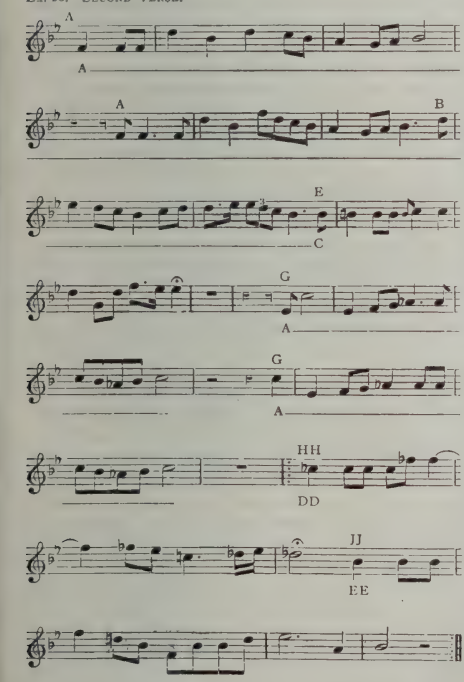
Then follows the Da Capo with, however, an additional three bars extending the F phrase. Schubert does not always use the same words in his Da Capos (or whatever the right plural is for the poor things); here he does—but with what a difference of intention and effect! The Italian form is to gather up a dissolute collection of phrases into an appearance of moral stability. Schubert's Da Capo is a necessity indicated by the dramatic expression. In all the lovely universe the miller's maid is the loveliest thing, and the lover is not going to end his song on any note but just his possession of her. I do not know whether the return to the first verse was or was not indicated by Wilhelm Müller, the author of the words; and Schubert was quite capable of undertaking such a thing on his own account. Here it is of importance for us to understand the poetic nature of this Da Capo, arising in the same sort of feeling as many refrains in folk-songs, and not at all in a formal need to complete a work of art in an approved fashion.

Of the seven more complex forms in the 'Müllerlieder' perhaps the most interesting is No. 12—'Pause.' To deprive this of its pianoforte part is partly to hide the line of the melodic design; but as no one will deny that the artistic value of Schubert's accompaniments is much higher than of those derived from the Italian tradition, even when handled with the genius of a Mozart, the student will understand that the beauty of the complete design is enormously enhanced by the thematic material presented by the pianoforte. Here we have only to establish the folk-influence in one of the more complicated examples of Schubert's art:



In this song also we find that the plan of setting phrase against phrase is associated with an advanced conception of thematic evolution. B is so definitely derived from A that it scarcely deserves naming as a separate phrase. The germ of the phrase labelled C is first stated in the accompaniment, and by its repetition there during the next phrase relates D both to A and to C. Perhaps it would be straining a point to suggest E as being related to A, but its step movement within the interval of a fourth certainly makes an aural impression of relationship, and F is more obviously evolved from C:

Ex. 10. Second Verse.



G, again, issues from A, while H and J have the effect of being entirely new material. So in the first half of the song there are two distinct phrase-groups, one derived from A, the other from C, with E as an interpolation. In the second half the influence of A is heard in five phrases out of ten, again a separate E phrase gives the awaited balance to the isolated theme in verse 1, and instead of the C phrases of the first verse there are two new phrases. Therefore if we ignore the manner in which the themes are varied in the course of their evolution, and name them in phrases according to their origin, as above underwritten, the complete song should be lettered AAAABBBBCBBAAACAA DEDE.

I fear that the very sight of that tiresome alphabetical plan will frighten some readers; but—and especially if they are composers—I think the matter is worth consideration, because it shows how, within a very narrow range of thematic invention and with the strictest regard for architectural order, a great variety of melodic design is possible. Consider that out of the twenty-one vocal phrases of the song, fifteen issue from the two chief phrases (those marked A and C). Trace the manner of the evolution of the ideas: how, for instance, A is stated, repeated with a decoration, repeated again in part twice over,* repeated again with a variation in the launching of it; how it unites with C to colour the D phrase, is stated again in the second verse, yet again with another variation, how its B-form is raised a scale-degree and varied, so that it almost sounds like a new thought, how it is twisted round in its G-form—all that is an example of natural economy and vital increase beside which the formal balance of phrases in a Mozart Symphony and the thematic irresponsibility of 'Voi che sapete' are respectively enchained and wasteful.

The comparison is important, for it is the musical translation of life itself. The Renaissance spirit with its popes who were poisoners and its princes who were brigands developed a formal art which was comparatively expressionless and a luxury art which was extravagant; those were the things which attained their most perfect and least harmful expressions, first in Palladian architecture and meaningless ornament, finally in the Mozart Symphony and opera. The suppressed Christian spirit was all the time seeking an equivalent for the lost expression of its Gothic cathedrals. That urgent reaction is best proved in music by Beethoven's efforts to regain mastery over polyphonic forms, and by Schubert's efforts to re-establish the common music of the folk. Such a song as 'Pause' is significant not only in its beauties but in what appear to be at first its imperfections. The song is not condemned before composition to a Da Capo or any other formula; it grows from phrase to phrase according to the immediate need for expression, and when it must throw out an odd theme for the sake of reality it does so without regard to immediate consequences, just as for true expression of feeling Schubert had to use the E phrase which at first stands out in disconnected fashion, so far as the first verse is concerned. But such unbalance is borne in mind and, when opportunity offers, a due though not exact counterpart is found in the later construction of the song. Many such unbalances occurred in the building of the Christian cathedrals; and not all of them found their balanced completion, for the Renaissance spirit intervened with its square, domineering, and hopeless conception of life and beauty. Again, at the end of his song Schubert was faced with a fresh demand from his poet—a question which carried the song into what were unexplored emotions and possibilities. For them he must find entirely new phrases, launched into the unknown as the builders of Gothic launched their towers and steeples. It would be easy to cavil at false details such as the harmonic and melodic affirmation of the final words which need the less emphatic cadence of a question, and are set as if the question had already been answered. Schubert was no perfect musician; but we are not here concerned with his petty deficiences. All we need to realise is that his art is fine in spite of its imperfections, and it is fine because he re-established the common tongue of folk-music as the basis of his art, and developed it according to laws of real life and natural growth, rather than according to the rules of orthodox musicians. So he offers many good examples of song which invert the principles of the Renaissance: for it was not Schubert's spirit but his form which was economical; it was not his form but his spirit which was lavish—sometimes so extravagant that his form tumbled down with the weight that he put upon it.

* Compare also the form of the first four phrases with that of the tune from the Choral Symphony, 'Das Wandern,' and hundreds of folk-songs of the same form.

SCHUBERT'S BIRTHPLACE

---

THE MIDDLE-CLASSICAL SCHUBERT

By Eric Blom

(Concluded from October number, page 891)

The Vienna of the early 19th century was not a great artistic environment. Beethoven towered out of it, if we survey it from Schubert's standpoint and therefore overlook him, in magnificent isolation. Sir Henry Hadow's assertion* that the three greatest artistic periods are the Athens of Pericles, the England of Elizabeth, and the Vienna of the last half of the 18th and the first quarter of the 19th century, is incomprehensible, not only because one wonders where the Italian Renascence and Paris under the last three Bourbons before the Revolution come in, but because one looks in vain for the great artists outside music who are presumably needed to constitute a great Viennese era.

As regards poetry—to return to Schubert's own time—we have only to look at his songs to find how lamentably his surroundings failed to provide more than passable lyrics. Painting was the likeable but uninspired genre art of which Schwind was the chief exponent. In the drama Grillparzer stood alone, appointed a classic by his own conscience and high-minded aims. The other and greater classical plays that were regularly performed came from Germany and abroad: Goethe, Schiller, Lessing, Shakespeare, Corneille, Racine, Calderon, Lope de Vega. The opera imported Cherubini, Spontini, and Rossini, the lighter French wares, and, more cautiously, Méhul, Spohr, and Weber. For the rest the theatre was entirely frivolous. Kotzebue and Schubert's friend Bauernfeld provided society comedy of some merit, but the type of light theatrical entertainment that was truly characteristic of Vienna had only a local significance and no artistic value. It was the kind of popular play of which Raimund and (after Schubert's time) Nestroy were the great representatives, a queer mixture of romantic fairy-tale, farce, mild satire, Singspiel, and sentimental comedy.

* Quoted by Karl Kobald in his 'Franz Schubert.'

Among the composers who provided songs for these shows people with no greater names than Umlauf, Wenzel Müller, and Joseph Drechsler were the most successful.

Schubert himself, with 'Die Zauberharfe,' had no success in this style, though one feels that it should have suited him ideally with a little more luck in the matter of libretti. For in pieces such as these people of his own standing and outlook played a great part. The humble citizens were here deemed worthy of becoming dramatic protagonists in the place of gods, princes, and heroes. The plays were maudlin and human, tinged with sadness and comedy that went far towards neither extreme, smug and naïve—in short, they represented just the kind of life that was Schubert's own—mildly romantic, moderately dissipated, kindly, short-sighted, warmly emotional without frenzy, full of ideals that stopped short of heroic sacrifices. Above all, they were unencumbered by pre-occupations with taste.

The citizen art-lover of Vienna in the early 19th century certainly had no taste in the sense that the cultured classes of Paris and London had. Schubert himself had none in that sense. He followed the fashions affected by his fellows without discrimination. In the churchyard poetry full of bones and decay, in the versified ghost stories which are too ridiculous even to be creepy, he wallowed with the best of them. The innumerable poems extolling the charms of individual Minnas and Emmas and Lauras, the personalities of which leave us cold, were as real to him as if each concerned his latest flame at the time of writing. The early ballads with all the trappings of recitative and diminished seventhry were so many momentous dramas, so many miniature opere serie to him. He had no sense of humour (though surely a love of fun and even of horseplay) and no literary judgment. It is true that he wrote in this vein :

> 'Yes, you see, a good poem at once draws something sensible out of me ; melodies come flowing along so fast that one would jump for joy. With a bad poem nothing will go aright ; you plague yourself and only dry stuff comes forth.'

But this means nothing except that Schubert simply did not know a good poem from a bad one, or how else could he, before and after this declaration, have turned out song after song indifferently to great and to paltry poetry ? Of course, a good poem would often draw great music from him. In the early 'Gretchen am Spinnrade' and 'Erlkönig' he was urged to an incredibly sudden florescence of mature power by the experience of encountering Goethe's work among the vast poetical rubbish-heap in which he rummaged after fuel for his creative fire. But does this prove, what is disproved in a hundred instances elsewhere, that he had taste ? Does it not rather show that he possessed, in its default, an extraordinary artistic instinct ?

Since he brought his genius into the midst of this happy-go-lucky Viennese period, instinct served Schubert a great deal better than taste would have done. In the circumstances he was fortunate in escaping the gift of a share of the latter commodity so disproportionate to that of his environment as to become an embarrassment. The simpering poetry, the plodding folk-music, and the shirt-sleeved domestic theatre with which he was surrounded would have driven an artist of keener sensibility into inarticulate disdain. Thanks to his unsophisticated, comfortable mentality he could produce great art of a kind without æsthetic qualms. What he lacked in artistic fastidiousness he more than replaced by an astonishingly responsive emotional nature, happily paired with immense technical facility. That this kind of spontaneous outpouring, uncontrolled by mental vigilance, is responsible for a vast amount of indifferent music from his pen is a misfortune almost nullified by his astounding productivity. It is, one might say, a misfortune he bears alone—that of having every scrap of his writing perpetuated in a complete edition such as a composer more aware of his permanent importance would have circumvented by a timely process of selection and destruction. We need not share in the mischief, for if we are wise, we shall ourselves make the choice, and if we retained only one-tenth of Schubert's published work we should still have a rich treasure.

Perhaps we are, after all, better qualified to select than Schubert himself would have been. One may well doubt whether he was a wholly trustworthy judge of his own work. Not only did he produce indifferent work complacently ; he did great work only half-consciously. Kobald tells us in his well-documented book that Schubert would often, on happening to hear a work he had written some time before, show astonished delight at finding that he could have composed anything so fine. The view that he did not finish the eighth Symphony because he felt he could not maintain its quality is certainly erroneous ; he would have cheerfully written a merely agreeable Scherzo and a poor Finale, and not even been clearly aware that they fell off. The case would not have been an isolated one ; existing examples of such inequality within one work can be cited (the C minor Pianoforte Sonata, for instance).

Schubert was never assertive about his art, as Beethoven was about his, nor prone to confide any self-satisfaction to others, as Mozart did in his letters. This lack of confidence was a personal trait, but it was also in part due, once again, to his environment. He could hardly be expected to know that he was a great composer

SCHUBERT'S GRAVE AT VIENNA. HIS BODY WAS BROUGHT HERE IN 1888

if those who surrounded him did not know it. Beyond his circle of friends he was scarcely noticed by his fellow-citizens until nearly the end of his career. We cannot even be sure that he ever met Beethoven, who certainly did not know him intimately or seek his acquaintance, and who only on his deathbed became aware of the remarkable distinction of Schubert's songs. None of these were heard in public until 1821, when Vogl sang 'Erlkönig.' About 1819 Bauernfeld wrote that Schubert composed between cares and worries, unknown, without name, his talent appreciated only by a few friends. In 1820 'Die Zauberharfe' and the operetta, 'Die Zwillingsbrüder,' were treated by the critics with greater or less benevolence as the works of an obscure beginner, and the latter had with the public only the kind of success that a musical comedy would have nowadays. It was ignored by musicians. 'Rosamunde,' in 1823, was professionally cold-shouldered in much the same way, and within two years of Schubert's death it was still possible for Eybler, who became Court Capellmeister in succession to Salieri, and for a post under whom Schubert had applied to the Emperor, to frustrate the appointment by saying that he had never heard a single work of the applicant's. Even at the very end of his career the critics were still guarded and patronising. One of them pointed out maliciously after a concert that Schubert's friends did not stint applause, while another ranked him with the smaller stars which pale before the comet in the musical firmament, the comet being no other than Paganini.

It is fair to add that Schubert himself was bowled over by Paganini's witchery. In his appraisement of others he was no more sure than in his self-knowledge. In Weber's operas he liked, or deplored the absence of, only the qualities he wished to find there. 'Freischütz' attracted him for what it had of Lieblichkeit, 'Euryanthe' he disliked because it was lacking in Gemütlichkeit. That is it, Gemütlichkeit, that easeful and homespun German cheeriness for which no other language has a precise word; for this above all he strove to find a new musical expression, and it is the greatest triumph of his personality to have found the ideal artistic utterance of this most characteristic aspect of the Viennese middle class. He is nowhere more wholly and lovably himself than in the beslippered contentment of such a song as 'Der Einsame,' nowhere more at ease with his Muse than where he echoes the popular entertainments of the Sperl, the Tivoli, or the Prater, and is, in company with his fellow-citizens, noble and sentimental in waltz time. He had less than any great composer a notion that he was a classic. His art is humble, familiar, averse to riding the high horse. But if it is pedestrian, it was the first music to teach us this—that one possessed of instinctive genius need not ostentatiously bestride Pegasus in order to be a great poet.

IMITATION AND SUGGESTION

By W. S. Drew

I.

We shall probably avoid some of the confusions that are often to be found in discussions about art if we attack the question of song-interpretation by considering first what happens to the listener. We may go and see a picture which is hung in some gallery whenever we please with a fair amount of confidence that it will be, for all practical purposes, the same on each occasion. This kind of thing is not true of a song, and the reason for it may be seen by considering what it is reasonable to suppose is meant by the term. It is used in a way that implies that a song is something that has a kind of independent existence like a picture. But the 'song' which we buy is no more than a set of printed instructions from the composer how to produce a certain series of sounds: it does not have a real existence as a set of stimuli to the listener until some one actually starts singing. Of the various interpretations that the listener may hear, which is really the song? The poor thing seems to be reduced to a kind of hypostatical condition similar to that of the imaginary ideal player in the golf world, so that if some one sang badly he might be said to be 'four down to Bogey.'

The only person who is in a position to settle the matter definitely is the composer himself. The composing really consists in the orderly arrangement of his thoughts, and not in the writing down of the conventional signs for such thoughts on paper, though this latter process may be of assistance to him.

So far as the listener is concerned, when he goes to a concert to hear some new work the song is what he hears from the singer. The singer's business is to produce the vocal equivalent of the ideas of the composer as nearly as possible. His power to do so depends primarily upon his ability to interpret to himself all the signs which the composer has written, and afterwards upon his ability to turn these into the auditory stimuli which will cause the imagination of the listener to work in certain specific directions. The painter can paint his own picture, the composer usually has to get some one else to do this for him. If he is not a singer himself he can do no more than give his interpreter a set of instructions; if he is composing a symphony or opera he can never do more than that.

But even now we have not gone quite far enough, for the song finally has its being in the brain of the listener. Anatole France sums up the matter in words that I have quoted elsewhere:

> 'En vain la main de l'artiste sera inspirée et savante, le son qu'elle rendra dépend de la qualité de nos cordes intimes.'

Thus a singer with a voice of a particular quality may, by the singing of a few words, arouse in a sensitive listener feelings and associations of which the singer himself is quite ignorant. Vivid visual memories may be aroused in the minds of certain listeners by the singing of a song such as 'Morgen,' of Strauss; and if the singer is himself weak in the visualising faculty they may be memories and imaginings which not only do not occupy him as he sings but also are almost impossible for him at any time. Thus in singing, as in other arts, it is by no means only a matter of direct communication of thought from the 'expresser' to the 'impressed'; so that the answer to the question whether the singer can arouse in an audience thoughts which he has not experienced himself, and suggest to them memories of experiences which he has not been through himself (in the ordinary acceptation of the phrase), is, to adopt the simple language of our legislators, in the affirmative.

The question of communication of thought may also be considered by trying to imagine what is going on in the minds of half a dozen people listening to the same singer. The exact thoughts of each are determined by his own previous experiences: the exciting cause, the singing, is the same for each, but the predisposing causes vary for each individual, and hence the results, though they may have a family resemblance, will all be different.

It is not necessary to have had a very wide experience of amateur and professional singing to know that our thoughts while we listen to some singers are certainly not those which are occupying the singers at the time, nor are they necessarily or even probably thoughts that they have had exactly at any time. Everyone knows, too, that a well-practised song must be done automatically to a large extent. It would not be necessary to stress such obvious facts if we did not hear so much about the 'expression' of the artist and so little about the 'impression' of those to whom he addresses himself. In the song called 'Shepherd, see thy horse's foaming mane,' one of the Hungarian melodies arranged by Korbay, one may sing 'with this bludgeon do I strike him dead,' and sing it effectively, without ever having been within measurable distance of killing some hated rival with a heavy stick. Most schoolboys have been irritated at one time or another into trying to punch some one's head. Jealousy is, I believe, not an uncommon feeling among the young, so that every young singer has the required experience ready to hand. It is the words in a song of this kind which supply the suggestion of the greater intensity of emotion. We need claim no more experience for that interesting person, the artist, than that which enters into the ordinary conventional life of every normal human being. The artist's distinguishing peculiarity, perhaps, is that he is more sensitive to certain kinds of experience, but you do not need to be continually pricking yourself with a pin to remind yourself that it hurts.

It is unlikely, however, that there should not be some foundation for the conventional way of regarding this question of self-expression on the part of the artist. The truth is that real experience is useless to him without what may be called artistic experience. He may get on with only a small amount of the former provided he is continually undergoing the latter, which is dependent upon what may be called re-impression, either deliberate or instinctive. The artist who paints a picture steps back from it to look at it and see what kind of effect it has on his own imagination. In doing this he is hampered by knowing what effect he meant the picture to produce, so it is easy to see why artists are sometimes bad critics of their own work, and why they attach an exaggerated importance to some example of it that other people may not regard as interesting.

These considerations also enable us to look with the indulgence born of comprehension upon the extraordinary antics of the followers of some freak school of art. A man may be so constituted by nature and environment that a peculiarly-shaped smudge on a canvas may always call up the idea of an elephant, whereas another curious set of curves may be the sign of a soul in anguish. A medley of colour-smudges with green as the predominant shade and the above two symbols in the foreground might always bring back to him the memory of his feelings when he was lost in the jungle as a child. As the artist looks at such a picture, which he labels 'Fear of the Jungle,' he sees signs that he recognises, and hence may be satisfied that he has 'expressed himself' adequately. And so he has—but to whom? To himself and to a small coterie who happen to have the key to these associations. And even though these associations may only be those of having had indigestion during a visit to the Zoo, we cannot deny the term 'work of art' to something merely because it appears to us frivolous or disagreeable. We reserve the term 'great artist,' however, for one who uses a language of more universal intelligibility.

The artist, whether he be poet, painter, actor, or singer, has to be continually making experiments on himself so that he may be able to judge the effect of his conventional signs upon the imagination of those other people to whom his art is addressed. The artist who does his work 'for Art's sake' is really doing it for his own sake; that is to say, he is addressing himself. It is obvious that nothing will save his work from oblivion if there is not at some time found a body of people whose responses to his work are similar to his own. Every sincere artist works very largely in this way—to please himself in the first instance. If he makes his living by his art he has to consider his public, and this may have a bad effect on his sincerity. But this necessity is by no means the unmixed evil that some esoterics would have us believe. An effort to make himself clear to the uninitiated is often a very salutary discipline for any artist.

. . . . . .

If this two-fold nature of the artist's business were kept more definitely in view, it would do much to clear up a good deal of vagueness and obscurity in the teaching and discussion of art in general and of singing in particular. I have quoted elsewhere a remark made by a distinguished singer about the interpretation of a song by Brahms, but it is so useful for our present purpose that no excuses need be made for quoting it again. We are told that during the singing of 'Feldeinsamkeit' 'dissolution of the soul in the universe must sound forth in the singer's tone.' It was one of Phil May's characters, I believe, who suggested that in order to catch a rabbit one should hide behind a hedge and make a noise like a turnip. It is on a somewhat similar principle, I suppose, that in order to charm an audience with the beauty of 'Feldeinsamkeit' one should appear on a platform and make a noise like a soul dissolving in the universe. The inquiring singer may reasonably ask what is the 'tone' that will contain this high-sounding but vague emotion. He might—using for the purpose a 'tone' in which bewilderment or even indignation 'sounded forth'—ask 'What on earth (or in the universe) do you mean by that?' Putting aside for the moment the lèse majesté of such a question to a successful singer, let us try to answer it more or less in the terms of 'busy common sense.'

The song tells of some one lying in long grass; he can hear the sounds of a summer day, but can see nothing except the clouds passing across the sky, and he has a feeling of remoteness that makes him imagine he has been dead a long time and is travelling through boundless space. I make no excuse for the baldness of this paraphrase, for it is precisely the business of the poet, the composer, and the singer to put the matter in a way that is acceptable to the artistic susceptibilities of the people who are listening to the song. The instruction to the singer then becomes something of this kind: 'You must attempt to arouse in the minds of your listeners memories of the feelings, emotions, or moods they have experienced when lying at rest on a calm summer day looking at the clouds passing across the sky.' In this form the piece of instruction does not sound nearly so grand as before, but it has the modest merit of being clearly intelligible as far as it goes. So clear, in fact, that the next inevitable question is not 'What does that mean?' but 'How am I to do that?' In general, the answer to this question is 'by using in certain ways all the technique which you have at your command.'

And the answer to the next inevitable question, 'Which ways?' involves the whole business of the teaching of interpretation, which consists essentially in showing why the use of the voice in certain ways will produce certain effects in the minds of the listeners. For, though in ultimate analysis all things are inexplicable, it is yet possible to go a considerable way in answer to the question why a certain effect is produced by a certain sound or collection of sounds presented in a particular way.

It is a pleasing exercise for the eloquent teacher to make up phrases descriptive of the emotions which the 'tone' is intended to convey. But if by 'tone' is meant quality of vocal sound, the amount of specific suggestion which it can make unaided by words, emphasis, and melody is very small. In any case instructions of this kind shirk the real difficulty, namely, that of demonstrating the relation between vocal cause and suggestive effect on the imagination.

(To be concluded.)

---

THE CRISIS IN THE TEACHING OF THEORY

By Leonid Sabaneev

Any thoughtful teacher of musical theory—anyone whose function it is to enlighten the young generation of composers, to guide it to mastery in the sphere of creative work, to transmit to it the experience of the creative genius of the past—cannot but find himself in a tragical situation at the present time. What is he to teach? How is he to teach? Where are the truths of musical experience in which he can conscientiously instruct the young? And where the basis and criterion of musical beauty? What is he to teach if he is not to become ridiculous in the eyes of his pupils, who see everything that he tells them, everything that is imparted to them in the 'experience of music,' refuted hourly by the practice of contemporary creative work? How can the teacher now correct the student and say, 'this is not good,' or 'this is good'? Why is one good and the other bad, when the perspicacious student can immediately produce a pile of contemporary works by the leading geniuses of the moment in which everything that is 'bad' and nothing that is 'good' will be found? And when the student is able then and there to announce to the disconcerted teacher that the very authors of all these 'bad' and 'forbidden' things are recognised geniuses; to declare that even the professor himself will not venture to assert plainly that everything written by a 'master,' an admitted modern genius, is not musically 'good'!

I say, further, that the teacher's recognition of the tragedy astonishes me less than the fact that it is very inadequately realised by the bulk of those called to be professors of musical theory and composition. An overwhelming majority of them do not understand the immensity of the tragi-comedy of the situation—teaching an unknown something in the name of nobody knows what. . . .

I am inclined to ascribe this passive attitude in face of the tragedy (which—I cannot conceal it—is essentially the tragedy of mastery and tradition and of the concept of musical beauty) simply to the most unfortunate fact that the intellectual level of music teachers is generally far below that of their technical knowledge and skill. The teacher is ordinarily either a composer, or a composer who has not 'come out'; a man rarely accustomed to render to himself a profound account of the fundamental facts and bases of the musical plane of things; a man seldom familiar with æsthetics, and hardly ever habituated to thinking in abstract terms. It is no secret, of course, that musical science is only emerging, and emerging with great difficulty, from a state of non-existence; and that what has hitherto been known to us under the name of 'musical science' is nothing more than musical quackery, a pharmacopœia, a collection of more or less antiquated formulæ gathered from the past experience of music by men who may have been excellent musicians, but who had little aptitude or fitness for the examination of phenomena. Musical science does not yet exist in the form which it should assume. One cannot blame those musicians, great and small, who collected the experience of bygone years and sincerely believed that the formulæ they compiled were the actual laws governing creative work and not merely partial instances of those laws—one cannot blame them for the fact that they were not scholars born, but only artists or craftsmen, and were, therefore, included in the category of men characterised by the habit of thinking in isolated, concrete facts and not in general terms; often, indeed, of not thinking at all, but simply 'experiencing.'

This tragedy is by no means new—I believe it has existed for more than a hundred years. Only now has it become intolerable to the logical thinker; in earlier times it was endurable, and the necessity for logical thought in the musical realm was not so urgent. The conflict between 'theory' and practice goes back to a very remote period. It is typical of the 'alogical' thinking of most musicians that these conflicts were never regarded by them as serious or particularly threatening; they saw in them charming anecdotes, interesting stories of how Beethoven used consecutive fifths, and so on. Furthermore, the whole of the musical culture of the romantic 19th century was carried on as a matter of principle under the badge of musical anarchy. The rupture between practice and theory was already perceptible at the beginning of that century. Previously the teacher was at ease, and could honestly and with a clear idea instruct his pupils in the formulæ of beauty, confident that deviation from them meant the destruction of the phenomenon of beauty. This idyll lasted for some three centuries only—until the beginning of the 19th century, when the rupture to which I have referred took place. For some reason it was not regarded seriously, but was looked upon as an interesting example, worthy to be imitated, of the self-will of the artist of genius; as the assertion of the artist's unlimited and undivided authority over the musical element, and the utter inconceivability of formulating the conditions of the musically beautiful. From this clearly evident fact that the existing theory could neither explain nor justify certain of the new phenomena which were beyond question beautiful, they came to the too hasty and quite unscientific conclusion that, on the whole, theories of any kind were superfluous and could account for nothing in the new phenomena. The anarchical and hypertrophied 'freedom-loving' ideas of the 19th century in music were reflected in the entire loss of any interest in the continuance of the work of broadening the theoretical basis underlying the new phenomena of musical beauty. Under such conditions any desire to 'theorise' was dispelled, a further contributory cause to this result being the fact that, as a rule, amongst musicians the representatives of profound theoretical thought were few and far between; the majority of the theorists were either compilers of a naïve type or pure formalists, completely detached from the living realities of music.

I am not, of course, discussing the fact that the idea of the 'unnecessariness' of any kind of theory was organically ruinous to mastery and tradition, without which art in general falls into a series of autonomous and culturally unconnected phenomena. More than that; it was simply illogical, since any natural philosopher unable forthwith to discover the laws governing a phenomena would be equally entitled at once to lay down his arms and declare that the phenomenon was not subject to law. Such phenomena may be said to be non-existent. And the appearance of a similar idea in music provides exceptional evidence of the feeble thinking prevalent in this domain.

However this may be, for upwards of a century the pleasant and charming anecdotal gulf between the theory and the practice of art, the heroic enthusiasm for the exploits of those who have destroyed theory and nevertheless have created beautiful things—all this has grown so enormously that it is no longer a laughing matter. Why, to this very day music has no theoretical foundation, even beneath such universally-recognised phenomena as Beethoven, as Wagner, Grieg, Debussy. Essentially the whole of the music of the 19th century, to say nothing of the 20th, is living illegally on musical territory, and nobody troubles himself about it.

Musical law, like every other law, begins to be needed when evil-minded persons make their appearance and take advantage of the simplicity and innocence of those about them. So long as the men around are orderly it is possible to picture to oneself the general anarchical prosperity of the idealists. The music of the 19th century was saved just because it was this utopian realm of absolutely honest and sincere workers. The motives of the composer were honest and sincere, the destruction by him of the old norms and laws was always and only the result of an inner stimulus to the creation of a new beauty, which he found instinctively. Composers of the 'revolutionary' type of Wagner or Debussy; or of the Russians Moussorgsky and Scriabin, did not suspect the insignificance of their 'revolutionism' and subversion of laws in comparison with the rigid observance of the laws and organic norms of art to be found in their own works. Possibly this fact has never been grasped by the still childish and feeble habit of thought in the sphere of musical theory, but it exists nevertheless. So long as there is a desire for beauty alone, anarchism in music may be accepted as the normal state, though it does not in any way abolish the necessity of the active theoretical recognition of the laws of that beauty. These laws are simply not destroyed, since they are protected, not so much by the 'theory' as by the intuition of the composer.

With all its tragedy the present situation of the musical theorist, who is left without any real baggage of knowledge and facts, contains a great deal of comedy. We all know that, notwithstanding the existing state of affairs and the hourly negation of every law of practice, the professors continue to teach in the schools of music, with a persistence and a stolidity worthy of a better cause—what? The very thing which was of no use a hundred years ago. They teach it rigidly and mechanically, in order subsequently to inform the astonished pupil that everything they have imparted to him is unnecessary to his musical life, and the sooner he forgets it the better. It would be difficult to imagine a greater mockery of the toil and labour and the psychology of the pupil. The pedagogue of this naïvely formal type, propounding the recipes, long since obsolete, for a bygone musical felicity, cannot even regard his occupation as a kind of gymnastics for the pupil, an original method of developing the musical muscles wherewith to acquire mastery. Mastery nowadays is promoted by entirely different muscles, and it would be unnecessary to invent another system of gymnastics for them. It must be admitted that this monastic teaching, isolated from the world and life, is simply a meaningless affair.

It becomes still more meaningless when the teacher of theories bequeathed by Hucbald and Rameau turns out to be at the same time an admirer of Stravinsky or Hindemith, and thereby cuts away the ground from under his feet. The strange thing is that there are very many such. Nobody troubles about logic—it is merely a question of carrying out a formal programme. And how Rameau is bound up with the Hindemith practice is of no interest to anyone.

In our days the strangeness of the situation is increased by a further series of circumstances, which, on the one hand, characterise this alogical and, in the final reckoning (though involuntarily and passively), unprincipled world; and, on the other, expose the essential nature of the contemporary musical snobism. We know that it was peculiar and natural to the romantic to profess an anarchical position and to reject theory in the name of intuition. But the fashionable tendencies of the day affirm the contrary; formalism and mastery stand at the head of the corner. Now, mastery certainly presupposes a tradition. What sort of tradition? Of course it cannot be that which Bach or Mozart had. But no other has yet been formulated, and consequently this is a sham, imaginary tradition and a sham, imaginary mastery. It is, again, a game of chess without rules for the moves, and a supposition that all the same it is generally 'possible' to win. In the ages of formalism and mastery all art was nothing else than the knowing how to create the beautiful under the given rigid conditions. But in order that a mastery of this knowledge should be manifested it was absolutely necessary that there should be conditions. It is impossible to write a sonnet apart from the metre of the sonnet and at the same time to display a 'mastery.' Contemporary music alone knows how to perform this trick, and thereby it shows us that there is no actual mastery here but only a false, snobbish conception of it, plus an utter indifference to the fact that it should be endowed with the lineaments of reality.

There is one way out of the tragedy—we must create a scientific theory which it would be no shame to teach; we must attempt, modestly it may be at first, but seriously, to formulate the conditions sufficient and indispensable to the manifestation of the phenomenon of the musically beautiful. In a subsequent article I should like to discuss the basic principles upon which this theory should be constructed. It ought first of all to recognise the existing phenomena of music, to take possession of them and absorb them. We have no theory which would explain the principles of Wagner's style, nor even of Beethoven's. Hitherto musical theory as a whole (and this is both characteristic and ridiculous) has never set itself the task of discovering the laws of a given style, but has invariably sought at once to 'grasp the ungraspable'—to formulate the general laws, whereas the advance of any scientific theory from the special to the general is easier and more natural. Nay, more, it is the only way, since it permits us to evade the most difficult and fatal question for the theory of art—the question of appreciation.

In studying the laws of an accomplished, finished style we are operating with something quite concrete, real, and definite. We have no desire whatever to make the formulated laws of Mozart's style, let us say, obligatory for Wagner. Furthermore we can investigate the properties and features of a style which is unpleasing to us personally, in which we see no beauty. The question of appreciation is quite distinct from the question of the investigation of style. There may be beautiful styles and styles which are unbeautiful, but appreciation itself is a function of the sociological conditions, the period, the personality, and the tastes of the group to which the individual belongs. I envisage the construction of a theory of music on principles differing entirely from the ordinary prescriptions attempted by the musical quack. Appreciation and its various forms should not become a kind of 'fate' forcing itself upon theory, but one of the questions which are subject to investigation. Instead of absolute and categorical appreciations of the beautiful in music there should be 'conditional appreciations'—the beautiful for such and such a group, or for such and such an age and society. And there should be an inquiry into the connection between a musical phenomenon and the advent of appreciation in just these groups.

All this is unexplored, or almost unexplored, territory. But the construction of the theory must be prompt, because musical activity is wide-awake, and the musical world is more and more inundated with phenomena concerning which it may be said a priori that they ought not to have genuine, real, truthful, positive appreciation in any groups—their success and their prevalence are due entirely to the state of confusion existing in a considerable section of the musical world. In every age the appreciation of the beautiful has been more or less clear-cut—it is a marked feature of the periods of sound culture. Our era is characterised by the very fact that appreciation is in a chaotic state, that as a phenomenon it is very often a lack of appreciation—and this is a sign of the decadence of the times. The beautiful is beginning to be found where the conditions do not in any way justify such appreciation. The confusion is particularly evident in those cases in which the appreciation is formulated in antinomic terms, such as 'beautiful because of its ugliness,' or 'ugly because of its beauty.'

Formulations of this kind are most often to be found in the columns of critical tirades. They indicate confusion of thought, the return of musical reception to its primeval chaotic condition, the barbarisation of reception. Musical theory has, apart from its purely abstract, scientific significance, a practical, working application—it should facilitate the development of mastery, i.e., the combination of certain known practices which make it easier to incarnate the beautiful and to attain the fundamental categories of harmoniousness, suitability, brevity, and so forth. These are æsthetic laws which no one dares to impugn, and yet I have never found them in formulated musical treatises. They include such requirements as the harmoniousness of the whole (and therefore the establishment of a conception of that harmoniousness), laconicism (the absence of longueurs), and variety (the freedom from monotony)—all these are axioms of the beautiful, and from them are deduced all the partial manifestations of this principle. If we penetrate deeply into the essential nature of art and the creative process, we shall have to give the priority to these fundamental principles over the actual artistic effectiveness.

The principles of beauty are eternal and axiomatic, but artistic effectiveness is in its essence only such approximation to the ideal as the limits of man's powers will permit. The laws of beauty are absolute and mathematical, the laws of artistic styles and appreciations are relative and transitory. The great artists themselves have sinned against the law, and in this there is nothing unnatural or shameful—it must not be thought that genius is impeccable. There are longueurs in Schubert (though they are 'divines'); there is incoherence in such giants as Beethoven and Wagner; even Bach has his bad compositions. Genius does not determine the standard of beauty—it is only the faculty of intuitively guessing at beauty and its principles. Genius can and does make mistakes. Theory must take this into account, and in seeking for the principles of beauty and its incarnation must look for them, not in the special and specific but in the general and generic, in that which is made clear from the combination of revealed beauty created by man.

A theory of this kind, and of this kind alone, can help and not hinder creative work, can develop mastery instead of merely playing with the term and leaving the budding composer to put his own interpretation upon it. The tragic situation of the music teacher, who does not know what to teach, what to proclaim, what to avoid, will then disappear. The low level of culture amongst the mass of musicians (and even of theorists) has hitherto prevented the construction of a scientific theory of music. What we have is either the 'continuation of a prescription,' or the formal combination of antiquated rules useless to anybody; or, in recent times, certain pseudo-scientific but altogether fantastic and meaningless theories, which are presented authoritatively and without appeal, as a sort of divine revelation unsupported by argument, and are promptly transformed into the doctrine of a certain sect. These efforts of the theoretical temperament are almost less desirable than the complete absence of any theory, since they impose more and more despotic restrictions on creation, and at the same time offer no guarantee of beauty.

(Translated by S. W. Pring.)

---

A concert will be given at Central Hall, Westminster, on the evening of November 22, in aid of the Hospital for Sick Children, Great Ormond Street, W.C. Many distinguished soloists have promised to assist, and the Band of the Scots Guards will play. The King and Queen of Portugal will be present.

THE PIANOFORTE DUETS OF SCHUBERT

By E. G. Porter

It being much easier in these days to get two pianists into one room than it is to get two pianofortes, there is some hope that the old-fashioned pianoforte duet may come into favour again. A century ago it must have been a fairly common pleasure, for there seems to have been a brisk demand for Schubert's works in this form, eighteen of his duets being published during the last seven years of his life; many of them imposing numbers on a large scale running into twenty or thirty pages of printed music.

They form an important part of Schubert's output, and should indeed receive more attention than has at present been given to them. The complete list will no doubt surprise those who have not yet properly explored this field. They fall into six groups:

| | | Published |
|---|---|---|
| Marches and Dances | | |
| Three Heroic Marches | Op. 27 | 1824 |
| Six Marches | Op. 40 | 1826 |
| Three Military Marches | Op. 51 | 1826 |
| Grand Funeral March | Op. 55 | 1826 |
| Heroic March | Op. 66 | 1826 |
| Two Characteristic Marches | Op. 121 | 1830 |
| Children's March | | |
| Four Ländler | | |
| Six Polonaises | Op. 61 | 1826 |
| Four Polonaises | Op. 75 | 1827 |
| Variations | | |
| On a French Song, in E minor | Op. 10 | 1822 |
| On an Original Theme, in A flat | Op. 35 | 1825 |
| On a Theme from Hérold's 'Marie' | Op. 82, No. 1 | 1827 |
| On an Original Theme. Introduction and Variations, in B flat | Op. 82, No. 2 | 1860 |
| On French Themes. Andantino and Variations, in B minor | Op. 84 No. 1 | 1828 |
| Overtures | | |
| In F | Op. 34 | 1825 |
| In D | | |
| In C | | |
| Sonatas | | |
| Allegro moderato and Andante | | |
| Sonata in B major | Op. 30 | 1825 |
| Sonata in C | Op. 140 | 1835 |
| Sonata in C minor ('Unfinished') | | |
| Rondos | | |
| Rondo brillant in E minor | Op. 84, No. 2 | 1828 |
| Rondo in A | Op. 107 | 1829 |
| Rondo in D | Op. 138 | |
| Divertissements | | |
| Hungarian | Op. 54 | 1826 |
| In E minor | Op. 63 | 1826 |
| Phantasie in F minor | Op. 103 | 1829 |
| Lebensstürme | Op. 144 | |
| Fugue | | |
| In E minor | Op. 152 | |

The Marches and Dances are (with the exception of the 'Heroic March') all simply constructed on the March and Trio form, and rely for their attractiveness on a lively and continuous flow of melody, on figured accompaniments of most engaging rhythm, and on rich harmonies and striking modulations. There is not one, even of the shortest (some of which only occupy the double page), that does not display the genius of the composer in some way or other.

Of the 'Heroic Marches' the first is distinctly in Beethoven style, the subject being constructed on the notes of the tonic chord with a stately stepping bass, while the gentler trio consists of the same subject-matter converted into the major key with a short but very strong modulatory episode. The other two Marches of this set are more elaborate, the marches proper being complex pieces of workmanship of great vigour to which the trios very melodiously form a striking contrast, the trio to No. 2 having an especially lovely theme.

It would be difficult to choose the best of the Six Marches (Op. 40), for they all have special points of interest—such as the gentle trio of No. 1; the vigorous opening of the second, with the powerful movement of its bass and delightfully contrasted trio; the sforzando surprises of No. 3; and the alarming modulations of No. 6. The fifth is no doubt a favourite with many on account of the solemn majesty of its themes. It is an Andante movement opening in E flat minor, and the second subject, which is in F sharp minor, has a rising figure of peculiar melancholy that works its way gently into the relative major.

The first of the three Military Marches is as justly famous as the above six marches are unjustly neglected; the other two are short works of an ingenuity that lacks inspiration. The Characteristic Marches are of no great merit as music, although their irresistible rhythm in six-eight time makes them vivacious quick marches for real use.

The Funeral March was written at the death of Alexander I., and the Heroic March for the coronation of Nicholas I. In the trio of the former the persistent drum rolls, although effective to the listener, make the bass part very uninteresting for the player; but there is plenty of variety in the latter work, which abounds in startling changes of tone and rhythm, and is remarkable rather for its breadth than for its depth.

The Children's March is a little souvenir of Schubert's happy time at Gratz, in 1827, when Madame Pachler persuaded him to compose a little duet for herself and her son Faust, then seven years old. In a covering letter he wrote, 'I'm afraid it will not meet with your approval, as I don't feel myself particularly well qualified for writing things in this style.'

Several of the Variations are masterpieces, the two sets on original themes being especially beautiful. Schubert has kept fairly closely to the original themes in all cases, but has also shown the greatest originality in their treatment, and he always attains a beauty and interest that are somewhat lacking in Beethoven's Variations; also he shows that, contrary to his own belief (and that of many others), he had a considerable gift for contrapuntal writing.

Op. 10 was dedicated to Beethoven 'by his admirer and worshipper F. Schubert,' and consists of seven straightforward variations on a sixteen-bar melody with a concluding Tempo di Marcia of a hundred and twelve bars in fantasia style, in which the theme is broken up and stated in various parts, together with quotations from the counter-subjects of the previous variations.

The eight variations on a simple theme from Hérold's 'Marie' were referred to on publication as a work 'that must truly be numbered among the best of the moderns,' but neither this nor Op. 84, No. 1, are to be compared with the two sets on original themes. In these, Schubert was not satisfied with the simple skeleton themes on which most variations are based, but wrote somewhat similar to the first, modulates from B flat minor to the tonic cadence by way of C major! The variations are elaborately planned, and each part of the score is full of interest to listener and performer alike, the eighth and concluding one changing from common time to twelve-eight, and like the Finale of Op. 10 it contains a strong modulatory passage. The introduction and variations in B flat, although a smaller work, are just as charming and make a splendid piece for home performance.

SCHUBERT'S ORGAN IN THE LICHTENTALER CHURCH

beautiful little subjects that are themselves masterpieces in miniature.

In Op. 35 the theme is a delightful little melody of twenty-four bars, and although in the key of A flat, the first sentence modulates to B flat minor and closes in C minor; the middle sentence has a most charming canon in the octave between treble and tenor; and the last sentence, although

The Overtures are in the usual form, those in F and D having most impressive introductions and finales of great vivacity. The latter was composed in 1817, and the Introduction and Finale were afterwards enlarged by Schubert to form parts of what is now known as the 'Rosamunde' Overture. The work in C is not quite so fine, although like all the duets it is very pleasant to perform, as are also the Allegro moderato and Andante in C—evidently two movements of an unfinished sonata.

As the Marches will delight those who love a melody, so will the more classical-minded find in the Sonatas their chief pleasure, for they are as delightful aurally as they are mentally. They do not generally rise to very great heights, it is true, but they have a more closely knit form than is commonly the case with the solo Sonatas.

Op. 30, with its tender second subject in D flat and an enchanting second movement is well worth a close analysis, although it is a very light work; but the Sonata in C major (Op. 140) occupies twenty double pages and is built on orchestral lines. Here again the second subject is announced in the tenor in a very remote key, and there is a splendid Coda to the first movement. The other three movements suggest the influence of Beethoven more than any other of Schubert's music. The slow movement opens with Schubertian strains, but changes later to the more pithy phraseology of the slow movement of Beethoven's second Symphony, and the Scherzo also reflects the influence of that work. The Finale, Hungarian in character, is more in the manner of the Finale to Beethoven's fourth Symphony, but in spite of these traits (and even because of them) the work is most interesting.

It is the 'Unfinished' Sonata that is by far the greatest, and, like the 'Quartet-Satz,' is one of Schubert's most 'finished' works. It consists of ten double pages, and is full of romantic originality. The introductory Adagio of four bars announces the chief theme of the work—a falling chromatic phrase that is utilised throughout with the utmost ingenuity. It becomes the first subject of the first movement, which opens as a fugue in four parts, after which the subject is developed for three pages without a break. There is no proper second subject, but its place is taken by a more lyrical form of the motto theme in the relative major. A re-statement of the fugal opening leads without a break to an Andante amoroso in which the chromatic motto becomes a preliminary figure to the chief subject, and this in turn leads to an Allegro constructed on a variant of the motto. This splendid movement comes to a close in F minor, and is followed by a fragmentary Adagio (fifteen bars) of great dramatic power.

Of the Rondos, that in E minor is indeed brilliant, but nothing more; that in D is a shorter but pleasant work, the one in A being by far the finest. It contains both infinite variety and a unity that is achieved by constant reference to the two chief subjects and their accompanying figures, one of the most important of the latter being a demisemiquaver turn that first occurs in the tenor in bar six; the whole concludes with an exquisite little Coda.

The Hungarian Divertissement is probably the best known of all the duets (with the exception of the March in D), and is a long and elaborate work of fourteen double pages. It is a splendid precursor of the Liszt Rhapsodies, and is full of the fiery passion of the Hungarian peasantry, but contains little reference to their deep vein of melancholy. The chief subject and a Largo movement of the Fantasia in F minor are also Hungarian in character, but the work also includes a brilliant Scherzo and Trio, and the two final pages consist chiefly of a long and finely worked out fugal episode, concluding with a brief quotation of the opening subject.

The Divertissement, Op. 63, is in march form on French tunes, and like most of the works on non-original themes, is a much inferior composition; along with the Fugue, it is rather a study than an artistic production. The 'Lebensstürme' also, while being a very good work technically, is strictly confined to purely poetic storms, and contains no reference at all to real life. It is merely a high-class salon piece.

Music in the Foreign Press

A SKETCH-BOOK OF BEETHOVEN'S AT MOSCOW

In the September Melos, M. Ivanof-Boretsky writes:

'In 1922 was discovered, among the materials transferred to the Central Archives at Moscow, a hitherto unknown sketch-book of Beethoven's, consisting of fifty sheets of staved paper. The first twenty-eight contain sketches for the String Quartet, Op. 132, and the following twenty-two sketches for the String Quartet, Op. 130. This book, together with the one belonging to de Roda (and described by him in the Rivista Musicale Italiana, 1905), fills the gap between the one sketch-book of 1824 and the six of 1825-26 described by Nottebohm.'

In the same issue, Alfred Rosenzweig describes a sketch (on a single sheet of staved paper, probably torn out of a sketch-book) which turned up at Vienna last year:

'The sketch refers to the String Quartet, Op. 18, No. 2 (middle section of the Adagio); but part of it was used only five years later in the "Kreutzer" Sonata (bridge-passage in the first movement, from the forty-sixth bar).'

A CATALONIAN COMPOSER OF CHURCH MUSIC

In the August Revista Musical Catalana, Lluis Millet praises Lluis Romeu's 'Cants Franciscans.' In the same issue appear very favourable comments on the same composer's 'Missa del Roser,' recently performed at Rome.

ARTHUR HONEGGER

The September Rassegna Musicale contains a very thoughtful essay on Honegger, by Guido Pannain:

'There are two Honeggers: the lyric, most human composer of "David" and "Judith," whom the writer unreservedly admires, and the merely skilful composer of things such as "Horace Victorieux" and "Pacific 231." In his chamber music, in the Pianoforte Concertino, the uncertainty of Honegger's musical aims is made manifest. All told, unless he is dealing with the human voice (and preferably with choral music) he loses himself in his quest for egregious, mechanically ingenious details. He is not capable of producing interesting abstract patterns in sounds (as, for instance, Hindemith), but needs the stimulus of some definite emotion tending to a naturally lyrical form of expression. In "Antigone," however, he fell a victim to the snare of theoretical considerations; and the work, in consequence, is not only an artistic sin in itself, but a profanation of the Greek masterpiece.'

THE HISTORY OF THE SAXOPHONE

In the September Musik, Eugène Rosenkaimer points out that although the saxophone is said to have cropped up in 1846 (date of the patent which covers the invention), Adolphe Sax had built, as early as 1844, an example of the instrument, which was shown to Rossini and praised by him. It was used at a concert given that very year at the Salle Herz at Paris, the player being Sax himself.

But in the Signale (August 15) Fritz Rose traces the saxophone back to the 17th century. The Museum of the Florence Conservatorium, he tells us, has recently acquired an instrument, built by Dom Domenico del Mela (b. 1683), which is the prototype of the modern saxophone.

THE FIRST UPRIGHT HAMMERKLAVIER

The same del Mela, he continues, may be the inventor of the upright Hammerklavier:

'We have the description of a Hammerklavier built in 1711 by Bartolomeo Cristofori, of Padua. But it seems probable that del Mela was the first to build one on the principle already applied in the vertical spinet (clavicytherium). The Florence Museum owns an example of 1739, the clavier of which consists of forty-five keys.'

THE SECRET OF THE CONDUCTORLESS ORCHESTRA

In the September Zeitschrift für Musik, Alfred Malige writes:

'Orchestral playing without a conductor implies no secret, no "trick"; it is merely an extension of the methods of chamber-music playing. There may be no "conductor" standing at his desk, but there is always some one who "conducts" in the actual sense of the word. Supposing the leader has ensured the proper tempo for the first two chords of the "Eroïca"; at the third bar the 'celli take the lead, which a few bars further goes to the first violins. So far as a lead is necessary, it is taken by the instruments that give out the leading melody. At times it is not the leader who establishes the right tempo—e.g., in the first movement of Beethoven's Violin Concerto it will be the player at the kettledrums. When the melody happens to be distributed among many instruments, it is the principal accompanying parts that provide the lead. Entries are secured by watching the lips, the bow, or the eyes of the performers who have the lead at the moment. All this constitutes a splendid means of educating both players and listeners—which should be enough to justify the practice.'

MUSIC AT WEIMAR BEFORE THE TIME OF LISZT

In La Musique (September), Julien Tiersot calls attention to the work done at Weimar by the French composer Hippolyte Chelard, who was Kapellmeister there from 1836 to 1848—when Liszt succeeded him:

'From the very moment of his appointment Chelard evinced a live interest in the doings of contemporary composers. In 1841 he was in touch with Schumann; in 1843 he was of great assistance to Berlioz. He could have done far better than he did had he been more active. As it is, he inclined to remissness, and was eventually superseded by Liszt, for whose advent he had paved the way.'

AN OPINION ON 'BORIS GODUNOV'

In the September Zeitschrift für Musik, S. Kordy, the London correspondent, expresses the following view, which I beg the Editor's leave to include in this column, although I feel that its proper place is in 'Sharps and Flats':

'At Covent Garden we have had "Boris Godunov," with Chaliapin. But not even Chaliapin's wonderful performance could save the work, which is tedious beyond measure, and will soon be relegated to the bookshelf and —so far at least as London is concerned— forgotten.' M.-D. CALVOCORESSI.

Gramophone Notes

BY 'DISCUS'

COLUMBIA

That Brahms is steadily becoming a composer for the rank and file is evident. It is one of the best signs of advancing musical taste that his Symphonies and (in a lesser degree, of course) his chamber music are being enjoyed by many who hitherto had no ears for anything but a few of the Hungarian Dances and Waltzes. Here is the most attractive of his Symphonies—the fourth—played by the New York Symphony Orchestra under Walter Damrosch. This is good sound playing and recording. There are conductors whose watchword seems to be 'Brighter Brahms'; Damrosch is content to let the music say its say without underlining or endeavouring to make purple patches in a work whose appeal lies rather in logical consistency. He may even be accused of going to the other extreme, taking a somewhat prosaic view, and missing some of the mellow—even genial—glow of the music. But the clarity of his reading is an asset. From start to finish I found the set very enjoyable. For the student of development and construction the first movement of this Symphony is one of the best of lessons; with the minimum of effort he can follow the growth of the tiny germ—the opening three notes, D, C sharp, D—from which the bulk of the movement grows (L2151-55).

Various suites made up from Bizet's incidental music to 'L'Arlésienne' have been compiled, but that these have not exhausted the good things is shown by the selection just recorded, wherein are several numbers rarely heard in the concert-room. The players are the Paris Orchestre Symphonique, with a lively chorus, conducted by Pierre Chagnon. The performances have the vivid character that such first-rate theatre music needs. The Carillon, the Farandole, 'Marche des Rois' (sung by the chorus), are particularly good; and the familiar Adagietto, Prelude, and other old friends come off well (4988-92).

For those who like—or at least have no objection to—their Schubert cut up in dollops and strung together, there is 'Schubertiana,' arranged by Herman Finck, and played by his orchestra. The extracts begin with the 'Erl-King' and end with the 'Marche Militaire,' sampling en route the songs and the pianoforte, chamber, and orchestral music (9480-81).

But the pick of this month's basket, for vividness and realism, is the record of the orchestra and chorus of La Scala, Milan, in the 'Storm' and 'Fire and Tempest' from Verdi's 'Otello.' This must be heard to be believed. Soloists, chorus, and orchestra alike let it rip to some purpose. Here is a 'best seller' (9483).

Ethel Leginska as a gramophone player is new to me. She has been recorded in a biggish dose of Schubert—the six 'Moments Musicaux' and the four 'Impromptus.' This is good, honest, clean playing, with an unflagging rhythm that is a good set-off against some lack of subtlety. In fact the records are a very good argument for being content with the right notes in their right places (good time and rhythm), plus a reasonable amount of dynamic variety. Any music worth its salt makes a surprisingly good show thus performed; it gains little, and often loses much, by being liberally 'interpreted.' The 'Moments Musicaux' are on 4887-90; the 'Impromptus' on 9476-78.

Two first-rate string quartet recordings are of the Léner party in Debussy's Quartet (L2141-44), and the Musical Art Quartet in the A minor of Schubert (9442-45). The latter is a new combination, apparently. If so, its debut is successful, both in choice of work and in performance. The Léner players are on the showy side in the Debussy, and the power is at times too great for the style of the music. But a performance so live and vivid almost disarms criticism.

Albert Sammons plays Kreisler's version of the Indian Lament from Dvorák's Sonatina—a good example of what may be done with very simple material—and his own 'Bourrée,' an essay in the antique style with more freshness than is usual in things of the kind (9484).

A fine bit of playing is that of Joseph Szigeti in a Sonata of Tartini, and the Finale of Beethoven's Op. 30, No. 3 (D1629-30). The Tartini is an object-lesson in broad phrasing and double-stopping. The Beethoven is brilliantly dashed off, but the pianist is too modest. This piece is not a violin solo, but a duo for violin and pianoforte.

The Colne Orpheus Glee Union is heard (at a considerable distance, too) in a couple of glees—Spofforth's 'Come, bounteous May' and Goss's 'O thou whose beams.' In both the singing is so strenuous as to suggest shouting. Fine voices, but not well used—or, rather, over-used (4987). The charm of Dora Labbette's voice cannot (or should not) make us overlook a bad fault in her singing of Sullivan's 'Orpheus, with his lute' and the Londonderry Air (to Weatherley's words, 'Danny Boy'). She dawdles badly. It may not matter much what singers do to the Sullivan song, but they should have more respect for one of the world's great tunes. Moreover, Miss Labbette is slightly flat at times (9479).

John Coates teaches us how a song ought to move. The record of Morley's 'It was a lover and his lass' shows how much our enjoyment of a song depends on two constituents that most singers partially overlook—the rhythm and the words. Two other short songs are on this record—Whittaker's 'Diaphenia' and a poorish setting by Cripps of 'O mistress mine.' In all three Coates's voice shows little sign of passing years; it is to be hoped that he will go ahead with recording before the inevitable decline becomes marked (4985).

Alexander Kipnis is recorded in half a dozen Schubert songs. He has a fine, sonorous voice, but I dislike his tendency to scoop in attack. The habit adds to the lugubriousness already involved in his choice of songs—'Der Doppelgänger' and 'Aufenthalt' (L2135); 'Der Lindenbaum' and 'Am Meer' (L2136); 'Der Wegweiser' and 'Der Wanderer' (L2134).

---

H.M.V.

Those of us who are lukewarm concerning Beethoven's 'Pastoral' Symphony are hardly likely to be converted by the performance of the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra, conducted by Franz Schalk (D1473-77). The records raise the question of power-scale in an acute way. What should we say of a concert-hall performance of this work in which the general impression of the first movement was fff? That is the effect of the records in an ordinary room, and the countryside suggested is surely Hampstead Heath.

The 'Scene by the Brook' is similarly riotous. The Scherzo suffers less, and the 'Storm' gains. Probably a good deal of experimenting with needles might give a satisfactory scale of power, but why should the gramophonist be expected to put right what ought never to have been wrong? I don't object to loud records; on the contrary, I've never yet found one too loud, even in a small room, provided the music called for great power. We want our records to give us all the grades from ppp to fff; but we are not satisfied when their bottom grade is forte.

In a lesser degree this same fault appears in the records of the 'Lohengrin' Prelude, played by the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra under Stokowski. The over-keen tone of the strings is fatal to the atmosphere that this piece should evoke (D1463).

Far better (though of no great interest musically) is the record of the Overture to Wolf-Ferrari's 'Secret of Susanna,' and 'The Song of the Nightingale,' from Napravnik's 'Don Juan.' The players are La Scala, Milan, Orchestra, conducted by Panizza (D1488).

By far the best of the orchestral records is that of the Philadelphia players in a couple of Bach transcriptions—the Prelude in E flat minor from Book 1 of the '48,' and the Chorale Prelude, 'Ich ruf' zu dir.' At first sight it might seem that the E flat minor piece wouldn't bear transference from the keyboard to the orchestra; but it is remarkably effective. Of course, it loses in intimacy, but the loss is more than balanced by the epic character of the result. Much the same remark might be made concerning the Chorale Prelude. I started both sides of the record with misgivings, but was converted. For big and intensely expressive playing, faithfully reproduced, this record will not easily be beaten (D1464).

Clarity and refinement are the prime virtues in the performance of Schubert's 'Trout' Quintet by Backhaus, Mangeot, Howard, Withers, and Hobday. The pianoforte tone is excellent (as is usual with Backhaus); balance is good, save in one variation, where the theme is in the bass; here the pianist seems to have made too little allowance for the recording difficulties, so the structure is top-heavy and the tune is hardly heard. Otherwise this is a charming set of records (D1484-87).

We have all admired John Amadio's dexterity, and most of us have wished that he would display it in music more worthy than the show pieces he has usually selected. It is pleasant, therefore, to hear him in a couple of movements from a Flute Concerto by Mozart—tuneful stuff, delightfully played (C1533).

Harold Samuel's playing of Schubert's Moment Musical in F minor strikes me as being mechanical. On the same record are two Schubert Waltzes, and the well-known Gluck-Brahms Gavotte (C1551).

An attractive Schubert number is the Military March in E flat, arranged and played by Backhaus. With it is a most engaging contrast—Triana, from Albeniz's 'Iberia.' Playing and recording are well up to the high Backhaus standard (DB1125).

The palm for instrumental virtuosity this month goes to the record of Mischa Levitzki playing Rubinstein's Staccato Study and the Paganini-Liszt 'Campanella.' The Rubinstein is mere fireworks—but what a display! One's principles as to putting purely musical values first weaken before such brilliance as this, and I own (without qualm) that I encored it (D1489).

There is an interesting batch of organ records—first-rate music, admirably played. But what is to be said of the recording? Those of us who play the instrument, and who know the works well, can enjoy the records, because we can mentally supply deficiencies (usually in the bass) and disentangle the obscurities. Less favoured gramophonists must wonder at times what it 's all about. The clearest of the set are those of Dr. Bairstow playing Bach's B minor Prelude and Fugue, and a Chorale Prelude on 'Come, Saviour of the World.' The pace is on the quick side, and I should have liked more delicate and expressive registration for the Chorale Prelude—but the exigencies of recording no doubt prevented this (C1534-35).

The confusion is naturally most marked in the record of Harwood's 'Pæan,' played by Harry Goss-Custard on the Liverpool Cathedral organ. The vast spaces destroy clarity, but give a rich obscurity that has an impressiveness of its own (C1536).

The Fugue from Reubke's Sonata is brilliantly played by Thalben Ball, and there is enough detail to make the record enjoyable—even exciting—to those who don't know the work well (B2788).

Stanley Roper plays Debussy's 'Little Shepherd' and Alec Rowley's 'South Wind.' In the latter the solo stop is at times over-loud, and in both pieces the tremolo is apt to confuse (B2465).

The choir of the Temple Church sings Wesley's 'Blessed be the God and Father.' Over-refined in the quieter passages, I feel, but excellent in the final chorus (C1541).

The best of the vocal solo records is that of Olczewska in Handel's 'Lascia ch' io pianga,' and 'Mon cœur s'ouvre à ta voix' from 'Samson and Delilah.' If all contraltos had such voices . . . ! (D1465).

NATIONAL GRAMOPHONIC SOCIETY

Haydn's B flat Quartet ('The Sunrise') is so well-known and attractive that one would expect it to need no aid from the Society. It is played by the International String Quartet. The tone is on the steely side. The work fills five sides of Nos. 109-111, the remaining space being given to a beautiful four-part Fantasia of Purcell, in which the tone is far better.

A flute Quartet is out of the usual run, and the Society has done well to record a truly charming example in Mozart's Quartet in D for flute (René le Roy) and three strings (Mangeot, Howard, and Withers). It would be difficult to overpraise the delicacy of tone and the beautiful phrasing of the flautist. The only fault in the balance is an occasional tendency to drown the flute in some of its low, quiet passages (112-113).

Wireless Notes

By 'Ariel'

It was unfortunate that the part in the Leeds Festival broadcast programme that we all wanted specially to hear—the choral works—came through badly. Perhaps the hall was to blame. Let us hope so, at least; otherwise it will appear that the problems of broadcasting a big choir have not been solved. It cannot be held that so far choral music has been transmitted with a clarity and balance equal to that of the orchestral broadcasts; and until the disparity is made good we shall not be able to get full enjoyment from the Wireless National Chorus. The formation of this body is a fine stroke on the part of the B.B.C. If the choir proves to be as good as report leads us to expect, it should enable the Corporation to do much for choral singing and composition. I mention the latter point because it is obvious that the National Chorus will be able to give a hearing to works that, on box-office grounds, or on the score of difficulty, stand a poor chance of performance by ordinary choirs. It is to the credit of the B.B.C., too, that membership is dependent on the singers' belonging to some established choral body. Without such a safeguard two or three hundreds of picked singers might have deserted the London and suburban bodies to which they belong. We shall discover the quality of the National Chorus on November 23, when it is to give the first performance of Bantock's new work founded on Bunyan's 'Pilgrim's Progress.'

The departure of Mr. Percy Scholes to Switzerland closes a noteworthy series of musical Talks. Mr. Scholes was, I believe, the first of the regular critics engaged by the B.B.C. Since then, dramatic and literary critics have come and gone, but Percy has gone on—I had almost said 'for ever.' I think the actual period is about five years. This is a long innings, but the merit lies less in its duration than in the retention of freshness and enthusiasm till the very end. Keen critics make a keen public, and the virtue of keenness was possessed by P. A. S. in no common degree. Probably he was sometimes bored or tired, but I defy any listener to prove that he ever showed it. He takes with him to his mountain fastness the hearty thanks of legions of listeners.

Musicians are delighted to find Mr. Ernest Newman now added to the weekly bill of wireless fare. His engagement by the B.B.C. indicates a notable conversion. Mr. Newman has never vilified broadcast music as Sir Thomas Beecham has done, but I recall some pretty drastic things written by him a few years ago. Some of them were justified, however, and a good deal of improvement has taken place since, both in programmes and transmissions. Sir Thomas's diatribes are on another footing. At what date do you suppose he said as follows?

'Ever since the beginning of the present century there has been committed against the unfortunate art of music every imaginable sin. But all previous crimes and stupidities pale before this latest attack on its fair name, the broadcasting of it by means of wireless. . . . . The performance of music through this or any other kindred contrivance cannot be other than a ludicrous caricature. . . . . If the wireless authorities are permitted to carry on their devilish work, in ten years' time the concert halls will be deserted.'

This was written in the Evening Standard not ten or fifteen years ago, but only two. And his even more violent outburst about wireless music sounding like all the hogs in all the hoggeries of the world, was released a few days before he himself conducted a couple of broadcast concerts a few weeks ago. He must not be surprised if in future nobody takes him seriously save when he is conducting (and not always then, even).

---

I was unable to hear the broadcast of the Liverpool Philharmonic Society's concert on October 9. It is as well, perhaps; for I should have been goaded into profanity. I gather from a wrathful correspondent that the 'Enigma' Variations were cut off midway, in order to make way for eagerly awaited news concerning a depression that was most unexpectedly approaching by way of Iceland. Had there been a long and important studio concert to follow, the curtailing of Elgar's work would be understandable. But the guitar recital and the two plays might surely have waited a few minutes. Such annoying incidents ought to be easily avoidable. Either the timing of the Liverpool programme was bad, or the concert started late. Both faults are a nuisance in the concert-hall; they are immeasurably worse when the audience is spread over the whole country.

---

An organist-reader asks me to express his regret (which he is sure is shared by many organists and church-choir members) that the B.B.C. National Symphony Concerts are to be given always on Friday evenings—the time on which almost all choir practices are held. The choice of day is certainly unfortunate, inasmuch as it will rule out a large number of folk who would certainly be among the most appreciative listeners. Nothing can be done in the way of alteration this season, I imagine; but the point is not too small for the B.B.C. to note, against the time when they are arranging a future series.

---

I well remember that in the early days of the 'Proms.' many London organists felt sore that the Beethoven-cum-Bach night fell on Friday. I was one of them, and as my church happened to be well within a mile of Queen's Hall, I used to get over the practice quickly when a favourite Symphony or 'Brandenburg' was on tap, and sprint to the Hall in time for at least a good part of my shillingsworth of standing room.

---

In my last notes I expressed disagreement with a Daily Mail article by Mr. Aldous Huxley, and also with an anonymous paragraph in Musical News. Both expressed the view that broadcasting (among other things) had driven music out of the home. I argued from my own experience, and from that of friends, that few, if any, people who were really fond of singing or playing had ceased their activities because of the wireless. I added that we do not expect accuracy in musical matters from a novelist writing in the Daily Mail, but that a musical journal should know better than to indulge in sweeping statements about music being 'literally ousted from the home.' The Musical News writer is now indignant with me, and asks, 'Why not expect accuracy in musical matters from a man because he is a novelist?' I have only one reason, and it is a sound one: more inaccuracies about music have been written by novelists than by any other body of literate men. Mr. Huxley may be that rare bird, a novelist who knows all about music; but the article I quoted showed him to know very little about keen amateur musicians. The Musical News writer, after failing to show Mr. Huxley's qualifications to deliver an opinion on the subject at issue, goes on:

'But that is not the point. This matter is not really a musical matter at all. It is merely a matter of fact. Shall I, just because I happen to be writing in a musical journal, pretend that my powers of observation have deserted me? Is anyone really prepared to say that there is anything wrong with my unadorned statement that the gramophone, wireless, joy-riding, and dancing have ousted music from the home? I only wish he honestly could.'

Dear Sir (or Madam, as some lack of logic seems to indicate), I am not only prepared to say that your unadorned statement is wrong: I've said it already, and I here and now repeat it. Moreover, your statement was not 'merely a matter of fact.' It was a point for argument. I argued it accordingly. Why don't you?

Player-Piano Notes

ÆOLIAN

Audiographic.—Some of this series of rolls are open to question on the ground that they impose on the music a programme of which the composer never dreamt. On the other hand, it is all to the good when a roll gives us a composer's own idea concerning the performance and meaning of his music. Nothing better in this way could be desired than the first roll of Stravinsky's 'Fire Bird.' We have the composer's life, told by himself, followed by his own performance of his transcription of the work. There are portraits of Stravinsky at various ages from three-and-a-half, an analysis of the 'Fire Bird' from both literary and musical sides, and the roll contains running indications of the orchestration, &c. No praise can be too high for this enterprise and its fulfilment. The music comes out clearly, and (despite the absence of orchestral colour) with astonishing picturesqueness. There will be few players who, hearing and seeing this roll, will not eagerly look forward for the five that are to follow in completion of the 'Fire Bird' (D759).

Duo-Art.—Mozart's Overture to 'The Magic Flute' is far more successful than most pianoforte reductions of orchestral works, owing chiefly to its contrapuntal interest and the character of the scoring. It makes a wholly delightful roll, and Rudolph Ganz and Ernest Hutcheson give a capital performance, specially notable for its clarity (536).

Shura Cherkassky shines more on the technical than on the interpretative side in Schumann's 'Spring Night,' transcribed by Liszt. He 'fusses' with it; hence a lack of continuity in the melodic line (7200). Godard's 'The Butterflies' Dance' is pleasant, and well played by Guiomar Novaes (7187). Another work of the same type, but with considerably more interest in it, is Glazounov's 'Grande Valse de Concert.' It is a sparkling thing, and the pianist, Princess Jacques de Broglie, only just misses giving a first-rate performance by hanging up the rhythm unnecessarily here and there (7199).

There should be a welcome for a Delius roll. The transcription for two pianofortes of his 'Autumn' (No. 1 of 'North Country Sketches') conveys much of the original colour, and comes off unexpectedly well for a work so essentially orchestral. Such a transcription depends a great deal on the players, and it could hardly be better served than by Percy Grainger and Ralph Leopold. One hopes that the other three sketches are to follow, at the hands of the same performers (7190).

Liszt's transcription of Bach's Fantasia from the Organ Fantasia and Fugue in G minor is not an unqualified success. It is an example of organ music that cannot be effectively produced on anything else but the original medium. If Percy Grainger had been less deliberate in his performance of it, the lack of sustaining tone might not have been so apparent. It is a pity the fugue is not issued with this roll. Its clarity and continuity give the necessary reply and contrast to the Fantasia, which, heard alone, seems incomplete and unsatisfying (7161).

Hand-played.—Paquita Madriguera serves up Liszt's 'Consolation' (No. 3) in short lengths. There is no attempt at a line of any description, melodic or rhythmic. The effect is so curious as to make one imagine that the defect is due rather to the cutting than to the artist's conception (A1095*d*).

There is a fine performance of Chopin's Nocturne in C minor (Op. 48, No. 1) by Harold Bauer. It is unnecessary to comment further on this, or on Josef Hofmann's playing of Schytte's sprightly 'Forest Elves' (A1101).

Last, but by no means least, in this section we have Rudolph Reuter in Tchaikovsky's delightful 'Humoreske' (A1099). These last three rolls are exceptionally good in all respects.

Metrostyle.—There is nothing thrilling here. Handel's charming Minuet from 'Berenice' (arranged by W. T. Best) needs careful handling if it is not to degenerate into a mechanical stumping rhythm (T303926).

There is a pleasant 'Serenade' by Strelezki (T30393*b*), a 'Valse Mystique' by Wachs (T30396*a*), and 'Sylvia,' very sentimental and commonplace, by Oley Speaks (T30394*a*).

The dance rolls are many, as usual, and there are three songs—the 'Waltz Song,' from 'Tom Jones' (German), played by Edward Lawrence (26907); 'Thanks be to God' (Dickson), played by Frank Stanton (26905); 'Wake up!' (Phillips), played by Charles Blackmore (26906).

BLÜTHNER

Animatic.—When all has been said against pianoforte transcriptions of orchestral music, it has to be admitted that the best of them give a good idea of a work—analogous to an engraving of a painting. Indeed, they come very near to the original, given a player with imagination and some knowledge of the orchestration. A roll of the Prelude to 'Tristan and Isolde' is well up to the highest standard of arrangements, and is well played by Julius Prewer (55021). There are two well-contrasted little pieces by MacDowell, 'From old Fairy Tales,' Nos. 1 and 2. Cernikoff gives them warmth, without over-emphasising the composer's sentimental side (55533).

Meyerbeer's 'Robert the Devil' Fantasia (arranged by Liszt) still has a kick in it, though nowadays we need something more than an occasional thunder in the bass for the depiction of devilry. However, it is highly entertaining for those who can overlook the weak middle section (55543).

Here are three Chopin rolls, all exceptionally good, and concerned with some of the less hackneyed works. The Study in F (Op. 10, No. 9) is played by Francis Planté, who, though otherwise good, hangs up the time in places (55767). Backhaus maintains a fine rhythm throughout another study, Op. 10, No. 10 (55766), and Scharwenka gives a delightful performance of one of the most graceful of the Waltzes, Op. 69, No. 1 (58802).

In Liszt's 'La Leggierezza' Wijsmann has ample opportunities to display the delicacy and brilliance of which he is capable. As an example of clarity and all the other pianoforte-playing virtues this is a fine roll to set before the student (58133).

'Asturias,' from Albeniz's 'Suite Espagnol,' is not so immediately attractive as other numbers from the same Suite. It hangs about over-much, but it has the advantage of Maria Cervantes's sympathetic playing; her rapid repeated notes are particularly good (55488).

Something quite out of the ordinary, and very charming, is Pierné's 'Nocturne en forme de Valse.' The player is Wijsmann, whose performance of a Liszt work has been commented on above (58149).

We do not hear much of Rubinstein's work nowadays. 'Cracovienne' is a good specimen, and is given a first-rate performance by Chop-Groenevelt (59751). Oswin Keller keeps things going well in Mendelssohn's 'Perpetuum Mobile.' The bright little work (like a good deal of neglected Mendelssohn pianoforte music) comes up fresh and smiling (55197).

There is a pot-pourri of German student songs—'Old Heidelberg'—by Oscar Klose. The compiler has made no attempt at avoiding the commonplace; he has just taken the songs as they are and strung them together, but the tunes are so good that even this casual arrangement makes pleasant hearing. The pianist is Hans Klinger (59475).

There are three ordinary rolls, and, incidentally, an exciting time for the player-pianist who wishes to let himself go. If he wants quantity, there is Tchaikovsky's 'La Tempête' (57549-50). Of course, it is too much for the pianoforte, but it is very well cut, and there is some satisfaction in making such good thunder. Flotow's 'Stradella' Overture is also very good fun to play. This too is well cut, and entirely manageable—a good four-hand arrangement (51464). D. G.

New Music

PIANOFORTE

In some ways the most interesting music of this month's batch is Adam Carse's Variations on a Theme in D, published by Augener. Though not pretending to any great originality, the music has a thoughtfulness and character that cannot fail to impress the musician. Such self-restraint and dignity as we find here are bound to command respect. If a man is not ashamed to express sincerely his own thoughts for what they are worth, without affectation or display, he is sure of a modest audience, even if he cannot hold the attention of the world or some considerable part of it, as the geniuses do. Mr. Carse's pianoforte writing is well suited to what he has to say. It is effective, clean, and moderate in its demands, and the whole work has a fine steadiness of style and craftsmanship. The variations ought certainly to find place in the programme of some pianist with sufficient sense of form to do justice to the design of the work as a whole.

Very different from this unassuming music is Kaikhosru Sorabji's 'Le jardin parfumé,' a poem for pianoforte published by Curwens. This work came for review some months ago, and I have since been struggling with the appalling difficulties of the thing, both technical and otherwise. It seems an unnecessary precaution on the composer's part (see the title-page) to reserve to himself the rights of performance for all countries, because so very few pianists could play it, and of those few, so minute a proportion would. Difficulty of this sort seems quite unreasonable and capricious. Many passages could be written in simpler form without loss of effect, and with a saving of endless labour to the would-be performer.

Musically the work is an attempt to extend the explorations of Scriabin; the influence of that writer is seen in the method of pianoforte lay-out and to some extent in the actual music. But it has not Scriabin's logic, nor the firm foundation of practicality that came from his experience as a player and conductor. Many of the sounds produced are extremely beautiful; anyone can make them on a good modern grand by putting down both pedals, playing a pp bass chord with gentle rumblings attached, and then breathing gently (one hardly dares say 'playing' in this perfumed air) on the upper parts of the instrument, 'Jamais plus fort que pp du commencement jusqu'à la fin,' as the composer says. If the neophyte then concentrates on the ppp he will soon find himself 'enveloppé d'une langueur chaude et voluptueuse' (Oh, Scriabin!)—again quoting the composer.

But, given these beautiful sounds, what then? Well, you just go on, as long as you feel like it or your family will stand it. There is no logical structural basis at all in Mr. Sorabji's work that is to be discovered by the ordinary musician, and this is why the whole thing seems so pointless.

It is not like that with Bartók. Here are two Elegies, sent by Edward Organ, of Birmingham, and obtainable from him. They are strong meat musically, and they are difficult to play; but they are not difficult in the same way as Mr. Sorabji's work is. These problems are soluble; these difficulties are able to be overcome; the composer has seen to that. We are not asked to do impossible tricks with our hands and minds at the same time. And as with the manner so with the matter. Bartók's meaning does not come through at once; one doesn't ask that; but it comes through in time, and then one sees the logic of the whole thing, the growth and culmination of the movement. Like all the Bartók I know, these pieces have a fine fervency and directness; they are early-ish works (1909, Op. 8*b*) and not so terse and concentrated as the later, but they have a tone of real authority and power.

A volume of 'Seven Characteristic Pieces' by Hugh Bradford, published by Novellos, shows a sensitive and thoughtful mind, but not always the ability to turn an idea into a connected and consecutive movement. The attempt to attain unity by constant reference to some slight figure is always an artifice, and sometimes here becomes artificial. 'Valse Gracieuse' is probably the most effective number, as here the formal problems are best solved.

Two pieces by Maurice Besly come from Winthrop Rogers and, like all his music, are spontaneous, and written with a knowledge of effect that raises them above the ordinary level. Cyril Jenkins's 'Autumn Rêverie' has no such distinction of touch, but is commonplace both in matter and in style (Joseph Williams). Ludomir Rozycki's 'The Poultry-Yard' is cleverly written; the chatterings, crowings, gobblings, and other noises are suggested rather than portrayed, which is something, but the piece does not amount to much. Roy Agnew's 'The Windy Hill' is fluent and not very self-critical, and will want very good performance if its interest is to be maintained. Leopold Ashton's 'Esquisses,' a set of five short pieces, is tuneful and well-written music—unpretentious, but of a very considerable charm and real musicianship. 'Gondoliera' is a specially attractive number. These last three are all Augener publications.

The best things among several transcriptions are the 'Dance of Terror,' from de Falla's 'El Amor Brujo,' which makes a playable and effective pianoforte piece, and Craxton's brilliant setting of an Eccles 'Trumpet Tune' (Oxford University Press). 'Brilliant' does not imply difficulty; it means that the composer has left out rather than put in a lot of notes. The notes that are there are very telling. The tune is a good one, and the setting a model of what such things should be. Antoine Konstant makes Gurlitt's Prelude, Op. 107, No. 1, sound like a Chopin étude; what with the black keys, the flying octaves, and the general air of bravura, the little work will hardly know itself. It sounds very effective in its new form. Augeners are the publishers.

Lord Berners's 'Intermezzo' and 'Hornpipe,' from 'The Triumph of Neptune,' are not at all far-reaching music, and when they appear as pianoforte pieces have to leave behind a good deal of what they can ill afford to lose (Chesters). The Andante from Gabriel Fauré's second Quintet suffers too. Beautiful though some of it is, it is not an entirely satisfactory pianoforte solo. Gustave Samazeuilh is the arranger, Durands the publishers. 'Invocation à Aphrodite,' an extract from Henri Sauget's ballet 'La Chatte,' has an attractive beginning and end, but is rather feeble in the middle. It is graceful, but not anything more. Edward Organ stocks it. T. A.

---

SONGS

The first nine songs issued by Novellos in the John Coates edition form a very unequal batch. They differ widely both in style and in quality, but the one thing they all have is sincerity, and this explains how some songs of very inferior workmanship and no individuality of outlook may have proved telling in performance by a singer whose art might lend distinction even to music in itself thoroughly banal. At the top undoubtedly stands Felix White's 'Laughing Cavalier,' a spirited setting of a poem by Shirley which shows the poet in very different mood from that of his better-known 'The glories of our blood and state.' The song has a swinging rhythm and a vigorous, almost slapdash, vocal line that give the music a fine air of abandonment, comparable with that of the splendidly written words. D. C. Thomson's 'The Knight of Bethlehem' is already pretty well known, and is a good example of the second kind of Coates song—the rather amateurish and slightly precious work with little energy behind it, but an undoubted neat charm—a very good type of drawing-room song. Other good specimens of this sort are Walter Whitaker's 'Diaphenia' and A. R. Cripps's 'O mistress mine,' and these are preferable to 'The Knight of Bethlehem' because they deal neatly with small subjects (for a perfect lyric may be a small subject), whereas that other song deals neatly with a different sort of subject, which needs depth and real simplicity—two qualities which this music does not possess. Last come such songs as Mabel Ackernley's 'Sunset Dreams,' frankly old-fashioned, poorly written, but sincere, and F. G. Russell's 'Roses in December,' a fit setting of some crude and sensational words by G. A. Studdert-Kennedy. In every case one can see the something in the song that might enable Mr. Coates with his art and personality to 'get it over the footlights,' but some of the works do not stand the test of print and study.

From Joseph Williams come two very well-written songs by Colin M. Campbell. Both are light and graceful in style, with a fresh turn of melody. ''Tis true I never was in love' is the more attractive of the two, but there are happy touches also in 'There is a lady sweet and kind.' Edgar Bainton's 'Young love lies dreaming' (same publishers) is quiet and thoughtful, with a keen perception of the beautiful poem.

Two songs by Edmund Duncan-Rubbra (Oxford University Press) are firm in handling, but not equally individual in matter. 'A Prayer' is very striking; its close grip of the intimate and deeply-felt poem, and its own directness of utterance, give it real power. 'Invocation to Spring' is less personal; its first phrase is almost a cliché of the post-Vaughan Williams school, and in spite of its attractive texture and beautiful finish this song does not reach the level of the other.

Some of the Stanford songs issued since that composer's death have not been up to his standard, but 'A Japanese Lullaby,' just issued by Cramer, is worthy to rank with the best of his smaller songs. It has a tender charm and a lilt that will appeal to everybody; and musicians will find its delicacy of handling a source of pleasure. The light touch is so firm, the gesture so distinguished, the whole thing so satisfying in its musicianship. From the same publishers is Alec Rowley's 'Sheep'; W. H. Davies here achieves a big effect by concealing till the end of his poem the real force of the emotion, and the composer succeeds in matching this restraint. When the last stanza comes it is made even more telling by the strong, rolling rhythm, in which, perhaps, it is not too fanciful to find a suggestion of the ship's motion. This is a good song.

Greville Cooke's 'Bereft' (Joseph Williams) is a fluent and commonplace work resembling in style the less individual songs of Sir Landon Ronald. Charles Cerné's 'Notturno' depends for its effect on its use of the very high notes of the soprano voice, supported by thick chords. It is a song of a certain atmosphere but not of real distinction (Winthrop Rogers). Very much more musicianly is Eric Thiman's 'The Rainbow' (Novello). This composer's work seems always to have some note of individuality, as well as firmness of touch, and the present example is no exception.

There are some fascinating things in Warlock's selection from Bataille's 'Airs de différents auteurs,' which is published by the Oxford University Press under the title of 'French Ayres.' The rhythmic subtleties are most attractive, and one would have to go a long way to find a more satisfying work than 'Quoi? ne suis-je?'—the first song in the volume—or 'Heureux qui se peut plaindre.' Someone has used of these early French songs the expression 'malicious grace,' and there is a good deal of justification for it, but there is beauty here too of a more placid kind.

Curwens send two volumes, one of Handel songs arranged by Arthur Somervell, the other of twenty-four Scottish songs 'Collected and arranged by Owen Mase.' Somervell's edition of ten well-chosen Handel numbers is thoroughly practical, and will do a good thing in bringing these works to a wider public. The edition is less suitable for the student than that of the Oxford University Press (which does not include the songs chosen by Dr. Somervell), because it gives fewer particulars as to source, orchestration, and the circumstances of the song; and there is no ready means of knowing what filling-up the editor has felt it necessary to add. But for the ordinary consumer of songs the lack of this information is no great loss. Some will not always feel Dr. Somervell's words to be in keeping with the dignity of Handel's music, but at any rate they are better than stiff, exact translations.

The songs in the other volume are 'collected' by Mr. Mase not in the sense of having been discovered by him; he has taken tunes for the most part well known, and tried to find the best versions, both of music and words. He puts some really lovely tunes into a handy, practical form, and there is no excuse for not singing them. Mr. Mase's settings are generally effective, and most effective when plainest, but at times, as in 'Ca' the yowes,' he can be extremely irritating with his hackneyed little pseudo-modernisms.

I keep for last three songs by Herbert Hughes which are a very long way above the average. 'The Distance' is a beautiful little work, with its simple method of achieving just the right sense of atmosphere. 'A Love-Letter' (which brings to our notice a splendid and unknown Elizabethan lyric) is more robust and, with its generous sweep of melody, gives an impression of real power. But surely in the reprint of the words which prefaces the song there is a wrong punctuation at the end of stanza three. That full stop after 'endeavour' cannot be right, and it will seem to many to be the one blemish in a fine song that the sentence could not be carried on in the music as it clearly should be in the poem. It would be interesting to know why a careful writer chose this particular way of setting the words; it looks as if there must be some reason, but it is difficult to imagine a good enough one. 'Come, let us now resolve at last' has an 18th-century lyric less direct and more artificial than the finely frank love-letter. It says much for Mr. Hughes's close feeling for his words that some sense of this difference of mentality shows in the music. The charmingly-mingled note of persuasion and apology, with a brave unreal air of confidence and some shamefacedness—that is a long way of expressing what the music very neatly and truly conveys in a setting that moves (except perhaps for one questionable harmonic adventure) steadily and strongly. Like the early song-writers, this composer leaves accentuation partly (at any rate in the last example) to the singer. Intelligence is therefore wanted, if bad accentuation is to be avoided; given this, a very happy flow is maintained. These are three very interesting songs, and Augeners are the publishers. T. A.

---

NEW SONG BOOKS

Twenty-four new song books appear in the edition known as 'Novello's School Songs.' The price of all except one is either eightpence or a shilling, and for that you get from five to fourteen songs. These are not 'throw-outs'—the kind of thing offered in cheap bundles because they won't sell. They are not even 'remainders'; every song is chosen because it is currently popular, and the books are real bargains. Books 308, 309, and 310 contain unison songs for junior classes; 311 and 312 contain easy unison songs; a particularly handy collection is 313—seven Christmas songs and carols; 314 and 315 are for the higher divisions (in unison); 316 has six public school (boys') songs; in 317 to 322 are sets of classical songs (Handel, Purcell, Schubert, Bach, Brahms, and all the best). No. 318 contains sacred songs that every soloist in Sunday School and P.S.A. meeting should get—far better than the usual so-called 'sacred' ditty. Grown-up singers, who complain of the expense of songs and whose repertory remains therefore restricted, can get, for three and fourpence—no more than the price of two shop ballads—thirty-eight pieces, at least a score of which any bright-minded singer with a soul above trash will thoroughly enjoy at sight, and which may be sung at any concert with the certainty of giving worthy pleasure to all hearers.

There are four books of two-part songs (323 to 326); 323 is marked 'easy.' The remaining books (327 to 331) contain trios, the first three books of which are unaccompanied, and the last two accompanied. Girls' choirs, often unable to spend much on music, and chary of buying many separate copies, will be particularly glad to have a book such as 327, with no fewer than fourteen pieces, ranging from a 17th-century French pastoral, and Old English songs, to Mozart, Abt, Sullivan, and Holst. This book (only) is published in two editions, Staff and Sol-fa. Nearly every song in all the books can be had separately. Those who like a good supply of modern pieces will notice that the names of Sterndale Bennett, Walford Davies, Parry, Stanford, Holst, and the younger writers often appear in these books, which worthily maintain Novello's reputation for the cheap printing of good stuff.

I have mentioned above the value to soloists of most of the cheap books of songs issued by Novellos. Many will already know their four larger books of 'Classical Songs,' each containing some thirty or more. Now comes a fifth book, of twenty-five, all in Sol-fa and Staff, which should be a class-room treasure as well as a soloist's handy book. The compass and the difficulty are reasonable, and young singers could have no better introduction to 'the classics.' Such books of songs often contain pieces beyond the capacity of the young; this book does not, but it must not be thought that it contains only slight pieces. There is 'The Erl-King,' Handel's 'Or let the merry bells,' and Purcell's 'Hark! the echoing air,' with its florid ecstasy of delight, besides some finely expressive sustained airs—a perfect training ground for technique and taste, as well as a companion for the experienced hand who knows his good things of old, and will be glad to have them in this cheap and handy form. The book costs half-a-crown (paper boards 3*s*. 6*d*.).

W. R. A.

---

STRING MUSIC

The Oxford University Press publishes a set of Six Airs arranged for 'cello (or violin) and pianoforte by John Barbirolli. The Airs in question are excellent, and we shall not quarrel with the editor because he includes amongst them Rameau's 'Tambourin,' which is anything but an 'air.' More questionable is the rough-and-ready method by which the 'cello part has been made accessible to the violinist. To retain the key and transpose an octave higher is to ignore one of the most important problems of adaptation. The A string is the most brilliant of the four strings of the 'cello—it is the weakest string in the violin. In all these 'Airs' the most effective violin strings—E and G—are neglected. The G string is used once only, and in one piece only; all the five Airs can be played on the violin without touching the E string by going no higher than the fifth position. The fingering also is more careful in the 'cello than in the violin part.

There exist some excellent editions of Mozart's Minuet (from Divertimento in D) for violin and pianoforte. But that is no reason why we should not welcome with open arms one more version of this very popular piece, especially as it has the advantage of Spencer Dyke's editing (Joseph Williams). It is neat in appearance and carefully annotated. A good salon piece—not difficult, yet effective—is Cyril Jenkins's 'Mood-Phantasy' for violin and pianoforte, and Cedric Sharpe's 'Five Little Solos' for violoncello fulfil admirably the purpose for which they were intended—presumably the provision of little solos for little soloists. Both are published by Joseph Williams.

FLUTE

A full Sonata in three movements for flute by a modern composer must be something of a rarity, and I imagine flautists will be glad to add to their repertory Theodor Blumer's Sonata for flute and pianoforte (Wilhelm Zimmermann, Leipsic). It is a substantial piece of work showing considerable ingenuity—a trifle solid on the whole, which, however, is not surprising, since modernity has no place for that mood of serenity where the flute reveals its most poetic qualities, and which makes the beauty, never equalled again, of the flute solos of Bach.

ORCHESTRA

Thomas F. Dunhill's lively 'Sailor Dance' has been arranged for string orchestra by Sydney Robjohns (Joseph Williams). Mr. Dunhill's part-writing is so clear that it leaves the adapter with a very easy problem to solve. Mr. Robjohns, however, has done it well enough, and avoids successfully anything that might daunt the timid amateur. F. B.

MIXED-VOICE

Ernest Bullock sets 'There 's none to soothe my soul to rest' in simple, sound fashion, with fluent but not overworked contrapuntal entries, and also arranges 'The Wauking o' the Fauld' with equal grace. Norman O'Neill sub-titles 'Come, tuneful friends'—'A four-part song in the Victorian manner.' These 'manners' are sometimes dangerous. Instead of making the man, they may for the moment mar him. Mr. O'Neill takes no harm, but he might well have been a bit more adventurous. Choirs fond of the obvious should try it. Heathcote Statham tastefully arranges the 'Skye Boat Song' for mixed voices. I like its lightness. He has found a good way to keep the song floating. All these are for S.A.T.B. (Cramer).

'When Eva kissed Mary' is an unaccompanied carol by Cuthbert Osmond (words by Sheila Kaye-Smith). It runs prettily. E. T. Chapman aims at broad, swinging effects in 'All creatures of our God and King,' and partly succeeds. I do not feel that the rather long piece keeps up in power all the way. Some of the accompaniment chords have tenths, which will have to be spread. That top B flat for 'a few picked voices,' fff, near the end, comes on a nasty vowel—'lu.' The voices, if not very well picked, will surely be plucked. J. G. Cameron's 'A Merry Time' (Darley's song about May) is a straightforward piece of writing, rather too jog-trotty for my liking. Choirs that want something quite easy, in a happy vein, and that are not Blue Ribboners (cave 'Topful of wine,' near the end), might look at this. (Speaking of Blue Ribboners, I am reminded of a bit I read the other day from an old Musical Times, telling how at a festival thirty years ago the local licensed victuallers gave a cup as a prize, which a visiting temperance choir won. Problem of conduct: should they have taken it?) (Year Book Press, all S.A.T.B.)

It is a long time since we had any Byrd. Here is his S.S.A.T.B. madrigal, 'Delight is dead,' edited and arranged by Bernard Jackson. This is apparently a hitherto unrecorded piece, for I do not find the poem in Fellowes's book. There is quiet depth and force in the writing, which is not very complex. The piece is fairly long—about ninety bars, and costs 8*d*. (Oxford University Press).

Chesters send 'Sei Madrigali a cinque voci,' by Frescobaldi, edited by Boghen. These five-part pieces are issued with Italian words only, and without a short-score reduction. We have in print very few examples of Frescobaldi's vocal work. This collection (dating from his time at Antwerp, 1608, when he was about thirty) shows a free hand, working with keen vigour, able to draw striking contrasts and swing out a shapely vocal line—much the impression we have got from his organ music. There is nothing here, though, of his chromaticism, and less subtlety than the best of our own composers could show. The pieces would make good score-reading tests, though they are above A.R.C.O. standard, since they are in five parts (four treble clefs and a bass); still, candidates who want to be really comfortable about their score-reading might try them.

The vocal score of the new romantic light opera, 'The Mermaid,' by George A. Birmingham and Sydney H. Nicholson, is issued by Curwens at 7*s*. 6*d*. The story is one of the many centring upon the mermaid's red cloak, which will give any man who can snatch it power over its owner. The theme is treated lightly, as you might expect, knowing the author, and Mr. Nicholson has made his music simple and unpretentious. There is some good, bold, eight-part writing for the soloists, with the four-part chorus going at the same time—the sort of work that not many writers of light operas are fit for. There are two Acts, but only one scene is required. There are thirteen singing characters (which can be taken by eleven people), with one—the mermaid—who does not sing (but I thought all mermaids did). I fancy amateurs would relish this work, perhaps all the more because it does not depart too violently from the models of which they are fond; yet it has sufficient individuality to stand the competition of most of the new native light operas. W. R. A.

MALE-VOICE

Chwatal's 'Lovely Night' (T.T.B.B.) is a simple song in the old-fashioned mid-last-century style. Sullivan's 'The long day closes' is too well-known to need more than mentioning in its present form, for A. (or T.) T.B.B. (Novello).

PART-SONGS FOR CHILDREN'S AND FEMALE VOICES

Some new arrangements by Ernest Newton are of 'Old King Cole,' 'The Minstrel Boy,' a 'Serenade' by Raff, and a 'Canadian Boat Song' in which words and music are stated to be by Tom Moore. These are in two parts, in the older style, without much contrapuntal interest. Freer crossing would improve such things. The tune of 'The Minstrel Boy' will work in canonic imitation at both two and four beats' distance. Why not give us a taste of that? (Gould & Bolttler).

Dr. Kitson makes an effective setting of Ogilvie's 'The Hoofs of the Horses.' I am not quite clear what is meant by the note below the author's name: 'By permission of A. W. Ridley & Co., from the setting as a ballad by C. V. Stanford.' This needs an alert player. H. Hollinrake's 'Frolic' goes lightly, with some staccato. It is rather choppy, and not very interesting. These two are for S.S. D. W. Stewart describes his setting of Marlowe's 'Come, live with me,' as for S.A. The lower part goes down only to B, but its tessitura is fairly low. The song growls a bit, the sopranos having little high relief. Its tune is pleasant, but again there is little flexibility, the rhythm being jog-trotty. H. Middleton's 'In a Valley' (S.S.) gets a little lift into the tune. It has a good deal of resource in short space, and suits singers of some experience.

Bainton's 'Lycidas' (to Milton's fine 'Lycidas is not dead') is for S.S.A., unaccompanied, has simple richness, and would be enjoyed by choirs that can feel the beauty of poetry. Ambrose Porter's 'Cradle Song' (Watts's 'Hush, my dear') has imagination in its simplicity (S.S.S.—an unusual combination; choirs weak in altos will be glad to know of this) (Year Book Press).

Bainton has another song, a setting of Fletcher's 'Bridal Song,' for S.S.A. ('Roses, their sharp spines being gone'). This is accompanied. It has a sweet savour, and should be tasted delicately. It will be liked, for it is not too difficult. Henry Smart's old favourite, 'Good-night, thou glorious sun,' is now arranged for S.S. in the most straightforward way. Bound with it is a delicious little unison song, 'Love me little, love me long,' to the Old English tune of 'Mad Robin' (Novello).

G. A. Alcock sets 'Weep you no more, sad fountains,' for S.A., with care and fitness, treating the lovely words affectionately (Williams).

The 'Oxford Descant Series' includes four sheets so far, each giving two songs: 'All through the night' with 'The Lass of Richmond Hill,' 'Silent, O Moyle,' with 'How should I your true love know?' 'Kelvin Grove' with 'Afton Water,' and 'Charlie is my darling' with 'Yeo, Sir.' These are some of the best—most musicianly—descants I know. They are by W. G. Whittaker, and the vigorous accompaniments are also by him. 'Robin Goodfellow' is a cantata by G. H. Jones. The choruses are for S.S., and the accompaniment is designed for orchestra. It is an agreeably sprightly affair, giving scope for most of the resources of a well-trained choir, without being at all extravagant. The pianoforte and-vocal score costs 2*s*. 6*d*. (Oxford University Press).

Erik Chisholm's 'Cradle Song' (poem by Padraic Colum, 'O men from the fields') is for S.S.A. (or M.-S.). Its harmony strikes me as restless. A good choir could probably give it the eerie feeling sought after. Most of it is very delicate, and pp.

UNISON

The autumn leaves begin to fall fast in song-land. Perhaps that is not the happiest way to describe the shower of school music, since it may give an impression of sadness and decline. Rather, I read it as a sign of fertilisation; the fallen leaves make grand mould for growing more plants; the showers of part-songs (the best of them) fertilise the young mind. The standard here is far better than in some departments of composition. There are, I make bold to say, fewer really poor children's songs issued than really poor orchestral novelties. The numbers don't compare, but the quality of school music improves, and that of the novelties gets worse, if possible. I sometimes grumble a little at the lack of real freshness, device, and depth of understanding in many children's songs, and, judging on the only standard that can be admitted—that of serious music in any form—the criticism is fair. Still, there is little that is really bad, and not much that falls below a decent level of workmanship, in school music. The grown-up pieces hit the mark less often, but even they rarely are weak, maudlin, or in any way trashy. The weakest of all are not mentioned. There is space, in general, only for things that in some degree claim at least a moment's notice from a musician.

I am always glad to see the 'classics,' ancient or more recent, well represented. From Novellos come several such issues, mostly suitable for singers with some little experience. There is Pergolesi's 'Sorrow' and Weber's 'Lonely am I now no longer' (from 'Preciosa'), both to be sung in broad, smooth style; Lotti's (1667-1740) sweetly lilting 'Shepherds and Maidens'; Berlioz's fine 'The King of Thule,' of which higher-division singers can make much; Salvator Rosa's expressive 'Questioning' (a familiar old tune, containing a trill, which could be omitted); Pearsall's brisk 'O who will o'er the downs' (with an optional descant); the Old English 'O willow, willow' (bound up with Stanford's quietly happy 'Summer and Winter,' arranged for S.S. by 'H. A. C.'); Mozart's dapper 'Little Spinner'; and Purcell's rumbustious 'I'll sail upon the dog-star,' edited by Cummings. Geoffrey Shaw gets, I think, an 'inner' with his setting for massed voices of Spring-Rice's 'I vow to thee, my country.' The sentiment is excellent; only, can any modern citizen of the world always give his country 'the love that asks no questions'; and is such love worth having? The thought in the second verse makes the song suitable for use in Sunday School and church, as well as outside. Two other unison songs are by Cecil Sharman: 'The Coalman,' for advancing juniors, and 'If I had any money,' described on the cover as Grade 3, but really pretty easy, and quite manageable by juniors (Novello).

Of three songs by Jessie Furze, 'The Rock-a-bye Lady' moves in graceful sweeps (moderately easy),

'I had a dove' is slow and requires fine shaping, and 'Daisies' attempts rather more than most such simple songs—not quite successfully, but promisingly. The composer has a soul above the four-square phrase, but, like many others, having decided not to touch earth so frequently and monotonously, she doesn't always quite know how to keep flying like the swallow, with graceful swoops and poises that give the feeling of variety or rest, without the interruption of coming to earth. The avoidance of four-squareness, and the solution of the big problems that immediately crop up (not the least being that of accentuation), is a problem well worth working at; but not everyone is a Stanford. Young composers of children's music ought to ponder him well, with Parry as a second study. Cecil Sharman's 'The March Past' does a simple thing neatly, and Bainton's 'The Little Celandine' is a superior piece, asking for fine phrasing—a happy essay this (J. Williams).

Charles Wood's 'The Seas of England' (poem by de la Mare) has a distinctive flavour; try it. Hubert Middleton's 'Marching Song' (another setting of Stevenson's 'Bring the comb and paper') has the Scots snap, and so needs brightness and precision; it is neatly done. E. T. Chapman sets Christina Rossetti's 'Is the moon tired?' with crushy chords and portamento. I doubt if this is best as a unison song. It feels as if it needs one singer. I think it doesn't quite come off. D. W. Stewart gives us yet another hunting song, setting old Ravenscroft's 'The hunt is up.' The music fits the words very well, but with all respect to those who put forth such songs, I suggest that we have no right to invite children to sing about hunting at all. Happily public feeling is growing stronger about the abominable cruelty of the business, and I beg all readers to have nothing whatever to do with any song, however delightful in itself, that gives children the idea that this travesty of sport is a right and proper pursuit for any human being. How can we teach kindness to animals in one lesson, and sing about cruelty in the next?

H. E. Watts's 'A Fairy Madrigal' ('Come, let 's begin to revel it out') is a bright if conventional piece, the animation of whose accompaniment has the air of a neat harmony exercise. J. A. Westrup's 'Come, here is adieu to the city' (R. L. S.'s words) swings along bluffly, in twelve-eight, without any great effort to be original (Year Book Press).

Evelyn Sharpe's 'Stars all dotted over the sky,' a carol-song, has a touch of freshness, and is easy, needing chiefly good tone-colouring (Cramer).

The Musician's Bookshelf

'A Handbook for Choralists.' By Harvey Grace. [Novello, 1*s.* 6*d.*]

The sub-title of this little gold-mine is 'Studies in Sight-singing and Choral Technique and Expression.' In the exercises the author has had the collaboration of Dr. Bairstow and Dr. Darke, and Messrs. Dunhill, Geoffrey Shaw, Julius Harrison, and Beethoven, the last being represented by some of his capital rounds.

I wish every festival would aim at having a sight-test in nearly all its classes. It might be made a voluntary addition to the class, at first; with a little judicious coaxing, and some well-chosen remarks by one or two adjudicators, soon there would be created an atmosphere in which it would be considered not quite the thing to shirk the test. It is ridiculous to suppose that singers so intelligent as those we have in most of our competition choirs could not, if they cared to take a little trouble, read perfectly comfortably at sight. I look to the time when we shall have got back the conditions of the madrigal period, when, if one could not make at least some sort of a shot at reading, people asked where one had been brought up. The ideal, to my mind, would be a compulsory sight-test in every appropriate class, the marks to count in the total just as do those for singing the prepared piece. But it would be folly at once to impose such a test at most festivals. Some of them, but not a great many, have a fair number of sight-tests already.

Mr. Grace begins with a chapter full of the meatiest suggestions about sight-singing, summing up his ideas by tabulating the virtues of good reading—confidence, unanimity, good rhythm and phrasing, with pure blending, right balance, and correctness of tuning. On these he enlarges a little, and then, in the chapter on 'Choral Technique and Interpretation,' goes on to consider all the headings of the marking sheet issued by the Federation of Festivals—Accuracy, Diction, Tone, Rhythm, Phrasing, Interpretation and General Effect, each heading having its sub-titles. Under Accuracy, for instance, he points out how time values may be distorted, what are the difficulties in getting correct intonation, and how the bad kind may be corrected; and he suggests that the sub-heading Attack should be added to the sheet. (One or two festivals that use their own sheets print Attack and Release, I know.)

So he goes on, taking every heading in turn, and showing how much there is to work at in every department. Conductors are apt to try to do too many things at a time. Even an old choir cannot juggle with six ideas at once. A young one needs coaxing and discipline in order to get it to see how much there is to learn. There comes in the delightful power of the experienced conductor. Festival competition is so keen that nothing but the best will do. How often one has to beg singers to lay their tone-levels in each piece, and stick to them! How satisfying is the sense of bold, subtle, and sure building-up that the well-trained choir gives!

Here are a few phrases, taken at random, to show the book's quality of thought and suggestiveness: 'A pause should never be merely a haphazard suspension of activities. It must have emotional, dramatic, or musical significance . . .'; 'The habit of good breathing . . . is a natural result of good phrasing. No choir ever yet phrased well without breathing well'; 'Our melodies should by their clearness of definition and their sostenuto suggest the cantabile of a good violinist or wood-wind player'; 'Tonic Sol-fa should be made the basis of all choral work, even though the Staff notation be used'; 'No sight-singing exercise is an entire failure if everybody keeps going until the last note'; 'Wrong time makes wrong notes.'

He insists that sight-singing need not be a penance. Exercises should be sung with style; thus two virtues may be practised at once. He has found ten to fifteen minutes a week during the first few months of the winter's work sufficient. A definite period of the practice should be allotted to this, and a separate class formed, if possible, for the members who need intensive study.

I am glad he names, as one means of treating bad intonation, the giving up unaccompanied singing for a time, until some keen accompanied practice, with insistence on listening to each other and to the pianoforte, has improved the ear's discrimination. Very few singers know when they are losing or gaining pitch. How can they treat this difficulty unless they have some standard?

The exercises, which set all kinds of pretty little problems, are short enough not to fatigue the attention, and they bovrilise the difficulties or virtues admirably. Some of the headings to these are: 'For brightness of tone and style'; 'For verbal freedom and unanimity'; 'For diction' (H. G.'s setting of the question about P.P.'s pickled pepper'); 'For graceful rhythm and diction'; 'For expression and intonation'; 'For chromatic harmony, time-values, and expression'; 'For simple enharmonic modulations and grey tonal effects'; 'For rhythm, attack, and quiet singing at a quick speed.'

I hope that conductors will see that every singer in their choirs has a copy of the book. Reading it, they will acquire a new respect for their leader's office, a wider view of their own capacities, and a heartening resolution to lay their shoulders to the wheel, and their minds to their voices, as never before. W. R. A.

---

'Schubert's Songs.' By Richard Capell. [Ernest Benn, 15*s*.]

Readers of the Musical Times know that matter appearing over the initial 'C.' is always something that must be neither missed nor skipped. It may be a pithy concert notice, a lengthy review, or an occasional article; in all alike readers have come to look for penetrating criticism, set forth in a style lighted from time to time by an arresting thought, or an original turn of phrase. Among the best of Mr. Capell's recent contributions were three articles on Schubert. They prove to have been samples in advance of this book—a handsomely produced volume of about three hundred large pages, well supplied with music-type illustrations, and excellently documented and indexed.

Although Schubert's instrumental music is sufficient to ensure his immortality, it is as a song composer—the song composer, in fact—that we first think of him. A separate study of this side of his output was, therefore, needed.

Mr. Capell is probably the first writer to deal fully and appreciatively with Schubert's poets. Poets, do we say? Poetasters, rather, in all but a few cases. Yet no body of writers so numerous—they run to near a hundred, and have a long chapter and a copious index all to themselves—can be lightly waved aside. Not a man of them, even the most pedestrian, but played his part as a motive and channel for the Schubertian stream. Not always did the best poet inspire the best songs. Wilhelm Müller, for example, was a pseudo-peasant rhymer who, says Mr. Capell, looks childish by the side of the genuine article Burns. There is bathos in the 'Schöne Müllerin':

> 'The Schubertian will, for all that, keep a soft spot for the amiable author, but for whom we should not have had the two inestimable song-cycles. Müller, with his suggestions of waterside greenery embowering an idyll of lowly love, and again, of the frost-bound countryside, the frame of a more desperate passion, tapped a well of musical poetry in Schubert. We cannot be Schubertians without being a little Müllerian also.'

The fact is (as Mr. Capell points out) that although no German poet of the time was too great for Schubert to tackle, the smaller fry were usually good enough. 'Perhaps lesser but still good poetry is the sort which generally is most apt for music.' We see this in the English field. A fluent, superficial Moore 'sets' and sings better, as a rule, than the more cogent and poetic Browning; and often the mere hack versifier and purveyor of so-called 'lyrics' leaves the admitted poets behind in serviceability to the composer.

Mr. Capell, however, disposes of the idea that poetry didn't matter to Schubert; and he is justly impatient over the stock remark about Schubert's ability to set a menu to music:

> 'Schubert had a simple but clear view of the poetry he wanted for his music. The innuendo in the saying about the bill of fare is that, out of the abundance of his music, he set any text that happened to lie in his way, quite uncritically. How little true that is can be seen from the fact that tradesmen's catalogues were, after all, as accessible to Schubert in 1820 as they were in 1920 to Darius Milhaud, who actually did choose to set a nursery-gardener's price list.'

A stray leaf or so from the laurel wreaths destined for Schubert this year may well go to the little army of poets without whom there would have been no Schubert, or a different one. Incidentally, readers of this book will thank them for having inspired one of its best chapters.

The plan of the book could not be bettered. Mr. Capell leads off with chapters on 'Schubert's Sentiment,' 'Schubert's Poets,' and 'Schubert's Style,' and having thus set the scene, takes us through the whole of the songs in chronological order. Eleven chapters are devoted to them, a chapter usually covering the output for a year. Each chapter opens with a few biographical details, and also glances at the composer's other works written during the period.

The biographical thread is neatly woven in. Though condensed, it is never bald, and only the reader who is avid for petty details of a life which, in the ordinary sense, was uneventful, will need anything more. After all, Schubert's life was composition, and at the end of the book one has a surprisingly complete view of it, because the discussion of the music is never interrupted for more than a page or so. The astounding fecundity of the man is thus graphically shown.

The Goethe songs, the 'Maid of the Mill,' and the 'Winter's Journey,' have each a special chapter. The entire song output is passed in review, the lesser items having at least mention; detailed discussion is given to the outstanding songs—which, be it noted, are not always the best-known. It is a real feat to deal thus with so vast a collection of works written in one medium, and to maintain the sense of freshness until the end. The musico-critical vocabulary is shown to be anything but limited, after all!

Four Appendices follow. No. 1 gives a list of the songs as they appear in the ten volumes of Mandyczewski's edition (Breitkopf & Härtel), with references to the volume and page for each song in the B. & H. Popular Edition, and in the Peters Edition of Friedlander. The source of the words is also given.

Appendix 2 deals with the poets in alphabetical order, giving the titles of their songs and their number in the complete edition. In Appendix 3 is a list of gramophone records, with brief critical comments. The reader who reaches the end of the song-chapters wondering why he has seen no mention of the famous 'Adieu' ('notorious' is Mr. Capell's word for it) will be enlightened by Appendix 4, which exposes its spuriousness.

Could a piece of work be more thoroughly done?

At the beginning of this review reference was made to the author's critical insight. Throughout it is applied both to the songs and to their interpretation. Take this one extract—chosen almost at random—as a sample of acute perception vividly expressed. Mr. Capell is discussing 'Rastlose Liebe':

> 'The song has a tempestuous dynamic new in Schubert, but which we are on the point of finding again in "Erlkönig." The melody rides a whirlwind of semiquavers, while the bass beats its way upwards. The veering between major and minor, the chromatic harmonies, and the modulations all help to suggest wild weather in this astonishing piece of musical imaginativeness. The wind slackens just a little in the G major section, but in a moment it is up again, blowing protests aside and driving the protester precisely there whence will and activity were to have rescued him, back into the thick of love. It is not too much to say that Schubert has here explained Goethe. The poem threw out hints of a mixed mood, turbulent and triumphant, that wanted music to give it coherence; and this is done by the waves of sounds that waft the song from E minor to victorious E major again.'

As to interpretation, what singer could fail to see the necessity for accurate time and rhythm in 'Aufenthalt' after reading this note:

> 'In performance it is important to preserve the squareness of the 2-4 subjects against the unceasing triplets—to maintain one's foothold, so to say, against the beating of wind and rain.'

And take this, about the 'Doppelgänger':

> 'The composition is the finest of all achievements in the matching of music and verse. It is transparently simple. To the singer it does not present just the same technical difficulties as "Am Meer"; but what gifts of passion and imagination does it not demand? In point of purely technical requirements the pp calls for the art of speaking tonefully and tunefully "on the breath." This pianissimo lies rather low. The fff rises an octave and a minor sixth above the lowest note. Transposition to A minor is reasonable. But the peculiar demands of the song are not so much technical as visionary. They place the "Doppelgänger" out of the reach of the ordinary singer. The uncanny scene and the mingling of distress and irony in the man's mood (for it is not a simpleton's ghost story, and Heine while he suffered sneered)—these things require a touch of genius in the rendering.

Yet one more extract, this time about the 'Erlkönig':

> 'The "Erlkönig" commonly suffers from the singer's self-importance. The music tells so much that it is impertinent to be too explanatory. Ventriloquism is out of place. Schubert has set the father's phrases low, the boy's are high, the Erl-king's are pianissimo. The singer had best use his normal voice for all three, avoiding fancy tricks. The song is, of course, exacting to the last degree. The Erl-king's pianissimo cannot be too soft, but it must be a tense, distinct, and full-throated softness. The fortissimos in the last page cannot be too powerful, but to shout here, instead of singing, is an outrage. The singer who commands a pure tone at these extremes has the technical foundations, and the less he thinks of "word-painting" the better. It remains for him to subjugate himself to the movement of the music, and to blot out from his mind all things except the horrifying vision.'

No singer of Schubert—which is to say no serious song-singer—can afford to miss the help given over and over again in these pages.

The extract concerning the 'Erlkönig' reminds us to quote, for its own sake and also as a specimen of the odd and interesting things scattered about the book, the letter written by another Franz Schubert, a violinist, concerning the song. Spaun, on behalf of the composer, had sent the manuscript to Breitkopf & Härtel, who suspected a misuse of the name of the old fiddler, and submitted the song to him for confirmation. His answer is, as Mr. Capell says, 'almost too good to be true':

> 'The Cantata "Erlkönig" is not my composition, but I shall make a point of getting in touch with whoever forwarded that claptrap to you, so as to find out what fellow it is that is thus misusing my name.'

Finally, the book has a merit specially to the point just now: it will send the reader to a host of fine songs that are rarely or never heard. Is it too much to anticipate, or at least to hope, that some of our leading concert-singers will also be sent on the same quest? The Centenary will have missed fire on the song side if it leaves teachers and professional singers content with their old limited Schubert repertory. There is really no excuse for such slackness; this book does all but put the copies under their very noses.

On p. 107 Mr. Capell says in a foot-note that Prof. Tovey's essay on Schubert in 'The Heritage of Music' is 'the finest piece of criticism in Schubertian literature.' We thought so, too, until we had read this book. The essay has now an equal, at least.

'Franz Schubert's Letters and Other Writings.' Edited by O. E. Deutsch. Translated by Venetia Savile. Foreword by Ernest Newman.
[Faber & Gwyer, 6s.]

Music and Letters (Schubert Number). By A. H. Fox-Strangways, H. Plunket Greene, Walter Ford, Steuart Wilson, B. Schofield, Ernest Walker, O. E. Deutsch, H. C. Colles, Donald Tovey, A. E. Brent-Smith, F. Bonavia, Eric Blom, and N. C. Gatty.
[14, Burleigh Street, W.C.2, 5s.]

Schubert was no great letter-writer. This slim and pretty book might have been given more interest by the inclusion of letters to Schubert, and of correspondence between members of his circle of friends. The principal letters were written during the few summers in which he was away from Vienna, and the best things in them have often been quoted. The 'other writings' are fragments from the lost diary and that singular and moving autobiographical sketch, 'My Dream.' The four letters here published for the first time are not of great importance.

Mr. Newman's introduction is interesting. (Can he write otherwise than interestingly?) But it is brief, and we shall expect from him one day a development of the theory that a musician's prose is invaluable for the light it throws on the processes of his musical thought. On the face of it the theory looks rather unpromising. 'Wagner's highly involved prose . . ,' says Mr. Newman, 'is manifestly the product of the same mind that endlessly interweaves musical motive with motive.'

Most people would surely say that this was anything but manifest. Could anyone have guessed that the musical magician would have been such an unutterable bore in his pamphlets and books? Schubert, the most copious of composers, was the most reluctant of letter-writers.

A man and his art are, of course, parts of the same entity, but need we trouble ourselves so much with the dull parts?—with Ruskin's verse?—with Ingres's violin-playing? At this rate musical criticism will have to embrace phrenology and the art of fortune-telling from handwriting.

'A man's music is his best self, the self when the accidents are stripped off'—this sentence in the Editor's essay in the Centenary number of Music and Letters is admirably true of Schubert, if not, perhaps, of all composers, since there have been artists whose lives were more interesting than their work.

Mr. Fox-Strangways takes exactly the opposite point of view to Mr. Newman's. The music is everything, the 'accidents' negligible. He would (if we read him aright) dismiss biography as an impertinence. In Schubert he has pretty good ground for the argument, for the music is so ample and self-explanatory, and the rest of the life so dull. But to make a principle of it is another thing. Mr. Newman has with him a lively human instinct, namely, our desire to know all that is to be known about a subject that interests us supremely. The Johnsonian cannot have too much Boswell. And then surely there does exist music (e.g., Liszt's) which is almost incomprehensible without its historical background.

Anyhow, both Mr. Newman's and Mr. Fox-Strangways's articles are excellent reading, and if any musical debating club is in want of a topic the two of them should be taken and threshed out.

This October number of Music and Letters is as good as was to be expected after the memorable Beethoven number of 1927. It will be prized by all Schubertians. It is indeed the English book of the Centenary. Mr. Plunket Greene writes with eloquence and glowing feeling on the songs. Mr. Colles on the classicism and romanticism in Schubert is not to be missed. Mr. Bonavia, writing on the chamber music, must be reproached for leaving off too soon. Before turning the page we hoped he was going to expatiate on the whole series of Schubert's chamber works. A treatise from his pen on such a subject would have been well worth having. There is a misprint, G minor for D minor, on p. 370, and again later in the article.

The most substantial article is Prof. Tovey's on 'Tonality.' Perhaps it is enough to say here that all who read his 'Beethoven' in Music and Letters and his 'Schubert' in 'The Heritage of Music' last year will go to it eagerly and will not be disappointed. There might have been an article by some Schubertian pianist on the Sonatas; and the choral works are neglected. But the singer receives in this Music and Letters a delightful present, namely, a score of the Editor's song-translations. These are what English singers have been waiting for (without knowing it) for generations. Most of the new set are comparatively unfamiliar songs, but not one is not worth knowing, and the happiness of A. H. F.-S.'s versions will give the English singer a special pleasure in them. There is a temptation to quote from several—from 'Die Spinnerin,' 'Der Wanderer' (the Schlegel song), 'Die Vögel,' and 'Am Flusse.' Here are some lines from 'Sehnsucht' (Goethe):

'The sun set in fire, and of gold was his throne;
She, walking in beauty, knew not he was gone,
And where, by the water, the meadow she trod,
The shadow grew deeper and deeper the road.'

Here is 'Am Flusse' (Goethe), a poem twice set by Schubert, and it is an open question whether the D minor or the D major setting is the more lovely:

'Lie there, my flowers of song and sonnet,
Upon oblivion's wave lie there.
No lad shall wear you in his bonnet,
No girl with you shall crown her hair.
My faith you sang, my love you taught her;
She scorns my love and mocks my faith.
Let water take you, writ in water,
For love no longer lived is death.'

Finally in this Schubertian budget we find Dr. Gatty's reconstruction of the fragmentary 'Gretchens Bitte,' a beautiful song which will now assuredly enter the repertory from which it has hitherto been excluded by the mischance that mutilated Schubert's manuscript. C.

---

'Franz Schubert.' Von Karl Kobald.
[Vienna: Amalthea Verlag.]

This is a book of nearly five hundred pages. There are six chapters, not all of the same value or design. The impression remains that this is not one book, but rather a collection of pamphlets. The biographical chapter (the second), goes over familiar ground without anything very new, and that on Schubert's art is trifling.

What Kobald does give us is a quantity of information about Schubert's friends and acquaintances, and about the Vienna of his time. All this may not be really pertinent to the study of the music, but it is often quaint and interesting. Kobald gives us facts, he gives us correspondence, and about seventy capital illustrations. The connection with Schubert is sometimes very slender, but if we are interested in his life all this helps to form a background. Not only Schubert's letters are here, but also correspondence between Schwind and Schober, between Kupelwieser and his betrothed, and so on. Add to that the fact that it is a comely book, printed on good paper not in black letter but in roman, and it will be seen that Kobald may claim a place on one's shelf. Unfortunately he is not thorough. The attention he gives to the personages is capricious, and while some are dealt with in two or three different places others (e.g., Craigher) are left out. There is much overlapping, there is a paucity of dates, and there is no index. C.

'Franz Schubert: Man and Composer.' By C. Whitaker-Wilson.

[Reeves, 10*s.*]

Mr. Whitaker-Wilson's book is naïve and disarming. He must forgive the reader's scepticism, but really he should quote his authorities when he gives his account of Schubert's schoolmastering days, an account that explains, as has never been explained before, how Schubert found time for that astonishing production of music in 1815:

> 'So he begged off some of the less important afternoon classes; in the mornings he set the boys "something to write" (which he scarcely ever found time to correct). . . . Occasionally his conscience would prick him, and he would fling the score into the desk and teach hard for the best part of a morning; at others he would sit and dream of Gluck's "Iphigenia" . . .'

But whence the information? Where the source? Or is modern biography a mere guesswork?

We have been told times without number lately that Schubert wrote six hundred songs; but six hundred is not enough for Mr. Whitaker-Wilson. He has, therefore, made another one out of the Impromptu in A flat, setting to it some verses of his own, beginning, 'Ave, Maria! 'Tis night on the sea.' To such ineptitudes are we led through the present-day passion for centenaries. C.

BOOKS RECEIVED

[Mention in this list neither implies nor precludes review in a future issue.]

Proceedings of the Musical Association: 54th Session, 1927-28. Pp. 129. Leeds: Whitehead & Miller, 2*s.*

B.B.C. Handbook, 1929. Pp. 480. B.B.C., Savoy Hill, 2*s.*

'A Short History of Music.' By Alfredo Untersteiner. Pp. 349. John Lane, 7*s.* 6*d.*

'The Enjoyment of Music.' By Basil de Selincourt. Pp. 52. Hogarth Essays, Second Series, No. 16. Hogarth Press, 2*s.* 6*d.*

'Worcester Mediæval Harmony.' By Dom Anselm Hughes, O.S.B. Pp. 149. The Plainsong and Mediæval Music Society, 25*s.*

'Bach.' By Eric Blom. The Mayfair Biographies. Pp. 30. Murdoch, 1*s.* 6*d.*

'Musical Instruments and their Music,' 1500-1750. By Gerald R. Hayes. Pp. 63. Oxford University Press, 4*s.* 6*d.*

'Opera Synopses.' A Guide to the Plots and Characters of the Standard Operas. By J. Walker McSpadden. Pp. 368. Harrap, 5*s.*

Handel's Oratorio 'The Messiah.' By Edward C. Bairstow. Oxford University Press, 1*s.* 6*d.*

'The Concert-Goer's Library.' By Rosa Newmarch. Vol. i. Oxford University Press.

Occasional Notes

We have received the annual Report of the National Institute for the Blind, a substantial, well-illustrated, and remarkable publication. It should be read by all who are interested in the splendid work now being done on behalf of the blind. The part played by music in the Institute continues to develop in importance. Braille music has been published there for over sixty years, and a very comprehensive repertory is now available for blind performers. In addition, the Music Department looks after the welfare of blind musicians and musical students; arranges lectures and recitals; furthers the publication in ordinary music-print of works by blind composers; and arranges for the employment of blind pianoforte-tuners.

The Institute's text-books on the Revised (1922) Braille Music Notation have recently been examined closely by Braille experts throughout the world, with the result that the Institute is declared to have made 'a most important step towards the universal adoption of Braille,' and that 'both sighted and blind teachers have long desired such help.'

A copy of the Report may be had from the Institute, 224-228, Great Portland Street, W.1.

Her Majesty The Queen will honour with her presence the Royal Choral Society's concert at the Albert Hall on Saturday, November 24. The programme will consist of Dame Ethel Smyth's Mass in D and some Schubert works.

So much interest was roused by the Gloucester Festival performance of Honegger's 'King David' that it may be worth while giving readers timely notice that the work will be done at Cambridge, in the original stage-play version, by the Cambridge University Musical Society on March 1.

Although Sullivan's 'Golden Legend' is sniffed at in some quarters to-day there are still plenty of folk who wish it were more frequently performed. We point out, therefore, that it will be heard at the Crystal Palace on December 1, at 7.30, when the Crystal Palace Choral and Orchestral Society will perform it for the first time in their history. Mr. Hedgcock promises an unusual and attractive scheme for the Society's second concert (February 9)—a programme of humorous and light music, including Walthew's 'Pied Piper,' Thomas Wood's 'Master Mariners,' Grainger's 'I'm seventeen come Sunday,' &c.

The Archbishop of Canterbury has conferred the degree of Doctor of Music on Mr. Basil Johnson, who was for many years organist and music-master of Rugby School, and more recently Precentor and Organist of Eton College.

While teachers of singing in this country continue to argue concerning the methods of producing good singing, the Perfect Voice Institute, Chicago, has got down to brass tacks and settled the question. It proves to be a simple matter after all. 'Caruso's Secret Revealed!' shouts the Perfect Voice Institute at the head of a column advertisement; and proceeds:

'A post-morten (sic) of Caruso's throat showed a superb development of his Hyo-Glossus muscle—the basic reason for his tremendous vocal power.'

The moral is plain—a mere matter of logic:

'Strengthen YOUR Hyo-Glossus—and YOUR Voice will be Powerful, Rich, and Compelling.'

That all-important muscle was no monopoly of Caruso's. No; little as you may have suspected it:

'YOU have a Hyo-Glossus muscle. But you never use it because the nerve center in the brain controlling this muscle is dormant.'

All you have to do, therefore, is to take a P.V.I. course of correspondence lessons in the control of this muscle. The exercises may be practised 'in the privacy of your own home.' [Good.] 'They are silent.' [Even better.] 'The results are sure. 100 per cent. Improvement Guaranteed.' [Best of all!] Yet a doubt creeps in just as we are about to apply for the 'Inspiring Book, FREE.' Surely, anybody who had at his fingers' ends the secret of Caruso's voice would find it far more profitable to go ahead and sing like Caruso, than to give away Inspiring Books and tout for correspondence pupils?

The disinterestedness of the P.V.I. reminds us of the thousands of sellers of racing tips who, knowing beforehand to a certainty the winner of the 3.30, sell the information in sixpennyworths instead of getting rich on it themselves. So, at the risk of missing what the advertisement advises us may be the first step in our career, we prefer to linger on with an atrophied Hyo-Glossus.

From the Knickerbocker Press (U.S.A.):

'MOVE AGAINST JA♫♫

'DUBLIN, Sept. 6 (AP).—The congress of the Gaelic league has appointed a committee to see if something can be done about the neglect of native dances in favor of American jazz.'

The move against jazz seems to have been started at once by the composit♫♫.

We do not look to the society columns of our daily press for news of musical progressiveness, so it was with pleasure that we read the following (the writer is describing the playing of a fashionable dance band at a West-end cabaret):

'One of the features of the performance was the introduction of a harp into the orchestra. It proved most effective.'

Our easily-impressed fashionable chatterer goes on to tell us that the conductor has made other experiments as well:

'His musicians are seated on a platform turreted like an ancient castle, the sides of which are painted in triangles of red, gold, and silver. The chairs and the three pianofortes are similarly painted. The musicians themselves wear dinner-jackets of dark-grey'— which seems a comparatively tame get-up beside a turreted band-stand and pianofortes (three, too!) and chairs in red, gold, and silver. The conductor who thus dashingly introduced a harp into his orchestra is only twenty years old. What bold innovations may one not expect of him when he grows up? No wonder he was presented during an interval with four laurel wreaths—which is three more than are ever handed to mere musicians who conduct real orchestras without trimmings.

From the Milwaukee (Wis.) Journal:

'WILL PARTY who found a Waltham electric piano No. 73875 along the side of the road between Pewaukee and Hartland, on the night of January 31 or early morning of February 1, 1928, get in touch with . . ., &c. Reward offered for return of piano, or information of its whereabouts.'

So careless of these transport people, to go dropping pianos about by the roadside!

The debate concerning the introduction of women players into orchestras hitherto composed entirely of men drags on, with scarcely a sign of logic in either pros or cons. One woman player wrote an open letter to Sir Thomas Beecham, saying, in effect, 'You are quite right, Sir Thomas, in your view that we have not one first-class orchestra in the country. As our permanent orchestras consist entirely of men, save for a few women harpists, the remedy is obvious: give the women a chance!'

The lady forgets that the present lowish standard of orchestral playing is due to shortage of rehearsal. Will experienced women be less affected by that drawback than the present seasoned men players?

On the other side, we find men, and some conductors, frankly saying that they object to women in the orchestra because of the restraint their presence imposes on the men. Is their vocabulary so limited and lurid? One player said to the Daily Mail music critic: 'We are just like men at any other job—we don't much like working with women.' Crass, out-of-date prejudice! Besides, don't likes and dislikes in such cases depend somewhat on the women?

The odd thing is that nobody seems to think it worth while to argue the point on its musical merits—nobody but Sir Henry Wood, that is. He frankly prefers the tonal effect brought about by a proportion of women string players, and we feel there is a good deal in his view.

We end with two prime examples of non-reason: One 'anti' wrote to the Daily Mail pointing out that women had not sufficient strength, and he cited a page of Wagner that taxed even men to the utmost. But in the normal course of a concert season, how often is that page played? His contention was too much for a 'pro' who replied that as women can now swim the Channel they can be relied on to manage the page in question. This argument would be what Mr. Swiveller called a 'clincher'—if our orchestras were composed of Channel swimmers.

Teachers' Department

ASSOCIATED BOARD PIANOFORTE EXAMINATIONS FOR 1929: NOTES ON THE STUDIES AND PIECES

By Ernest Fowles

The programme set by the Associated Board for 1929 is one of the best on record. Great variety between the various numbers has been secured, and dull, academic music rigorously excluded. All the studies chosen are useful, and as a rule direct the student, and incidentally the teacher, to concentrate upon matters of important technical significance.

The music of the pianoforte is so much more extensive than when the Board started its activities some forty years ago that a danger must always exist of crowding out those masters of music who were the founders, not only of pianoforte music but of music itself—in its modern acceptation, at least. It is therefore distinctly encouraging to find the name of Bach in five of the eighteen lists, and it may seem ungracious to suggest that a movement by the great master might always and most fitly be included in each of the three lists of the Intermediate and Advanced Grades.

Beethoven, naturally, suffers from a lack of detached pieces suitable for the time-allowance of an examination, but this cannot be said, for instance, of Schumann. His name appears but twice, and never in the more difficult grades.

After all, the Associated Board does not exist to promote the sale of new music. Like a university, it bases its practice upon the best accepted thought of the day. For this reason it would be impossible to complain if all the lists (excluding, for obvious reasons, the two lowest Divisions) were limited to the music of composers acknowledged and revered of all men. Since, however, it seems to be decreed that in practically every list a piece by a modern living writer—whether known or unknown—should be included, it only remains to congratulate those who have actually selected the pieces upon the excellence of their judgment. In virtually every case these particular pieces reveal real musical interest.

The following notes have been written after an exhaustive study of the problems they present individually to the teacher. The various speeds are primarily suggested for those who are timid in judging such matters for themselves. Nevertheless, the speed-numbers here given are in no sense to be regarded as final. Slower tempi will sometimes have to be adopted, notably in studies as well as in pieces which present particular keyboard difficulties. On the other hand, mentally and physically nimble players will be free to increase the pace of various numbers, except, of course, in those cases where the element of speed is an integral feature of the prevailing thought and style.

PRIMARY DIVISION.—LIST A

No. 1. Burgmüller. Study in C, Op. 100, No. 1.—Although in the Primary Division, this study presupposes a proper preparation of the hand. Observe in every bar the alternate employment of each side of the hand. Hence, the candidate must know something of the elements of rotatory and lateral hand-adjustments. Finger action isolated from such adjustments must be studiously avoided. For this reason the direction moderato should be carefully heeded. The final tempo may be about crotchet 116-120.

No. 2. Mozart. Minuet in F.—Reveals the importance of clearly cut time-shapes. The two quavers of each first beat impinge upon the second beat, and this feature is characteristic of the whole. It will be found a useful expedient first to clap or tap the figures before they are heard as a part of the music. The middle section—bars 17 to 24—may be slightly more robust, but the style of the whole should incline to grace, even to tenderness, as befits a slender dance-tune by Mozart. An average tempo may be crotchet 120.

No. 3. Thomas F. Dunhill. 'A Celtic Lullaby.'—Observe the scale upon which this is written, the effect of the music being greatly enhanced by the avoidance of a harmonic leading-note. In music there is often a subtle charm in reiteration. That is the case here. The first four bars are the making of the piece. They anticipate the first two sounds of the tune and must be played with that in mind. The tune itself should be scanned vocally; the effective extension at bars 17-19 will then be remarked and observed in performance. One slight though important point may be missed—the inner part in bars 11 and 12. Let the whole be played with a slight and graceful swing, at about dotted crotchet 69.

PRIMARY DIVISION.—LIST B

No. 4. Bertini. Study in D, Op. 137, No. 9.—There is more in this simple piece than at first appears. Note, for instance, the difference in style of the middle section. The first and last sections are rhythmically similar, whereas the middle section is changed in texture and scansion. Thus, bars 9 to 12 form one four-bar rhythm. Though somewhat difficult for the minds of children, bars 13 to 23 may be regarded as one long rhythmic phrase, the advantage being that the rhythmic squareness of the whole is broken up and the music becomes more interesting. Observe, in particular, the touch-markings, the left hand being alternately legato and staccato. The middle section should be relatively brighter, and the five crotchets in bars 23 and 24 played with an anticipatory effect attending the return of the main thought. Tempo, about crotchet 120.

No. 5. Purcell. Gavotte in G.—For the tempo, emphasis should be rather on the moderato than upon the allegro, say about crotchet 116. The piece is formed upon strict rhythmic lines, and these should be clear to the player. Thus, the theme contains two-bar rhythms, whereas the two episodes (bars 8-16 and 24-32) are of four-bar groups. Here, Purcell displays his power in dance-characterisation, for the older form of the gavotte usually marched along in two-bar rhythms. The phrase-marks should be dutifully observed, the one exception, perhaps, occurring in bar 14, the left-hand part of which should obviously be phrased as the right-hand part of bar 9. It is vital to remark that the music is cast in simple Rondo shape with three statements of the leading thought.

No. 6. Leslie Fly. 'Sherwood Forest.'—The romance of Robin Hood is almost as popular as the Arthurian legends. All young people love

(Continued on page 1014.)

On this, the Christmas Morn

CAROL-ANTHEM

Words by E. T. Phillips Music by J. Job

London: Novello and Company, Limited; New York: The H. W. Gray Co., Sole Agents for the U.S.A.

Copyright, 1928, by Novello and Company, Limited

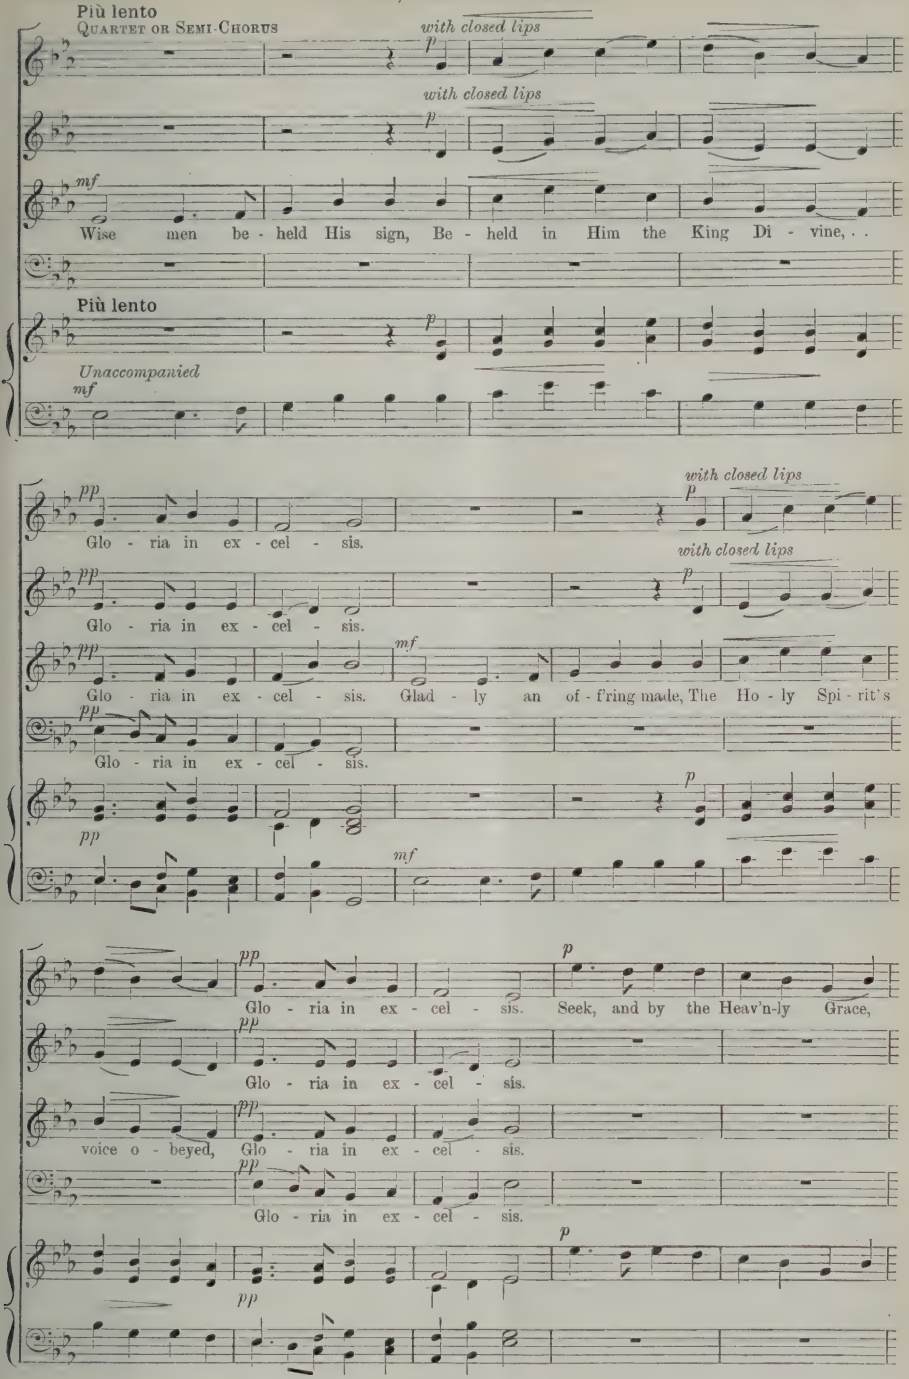
Hea - ven's arch with an - thems rang,
Thus the won-drous love of God
Chorus
love to men,
round was shed,
Glo - ria in ex - cel - sis.
Heav'n with an - thems rang,
Thus the love of God
Glo - ria in ex - cel - sis.
Heav'n with an - thems rang,
Thus the love of God
Glo - ria in ex - cel - sis.
An - thems rang,
Love of God
Glo - ria in ex - cel - sis.
f Gt.
Ped.
Man.
dim. e rall.
Hea - ven's choir of An - gels sang . .
Sanc - ti - fied the poor a - bode, . .
Glo - ria in ex - cel - - sis.
Ped.



Più lento
Quartet or Semi-Chorus with closed lips
p
with closed lips
p
mf
Wise men be - held His sign, Be - held in Him the King Di - vine, . .
Più lento
p Unaccompanied
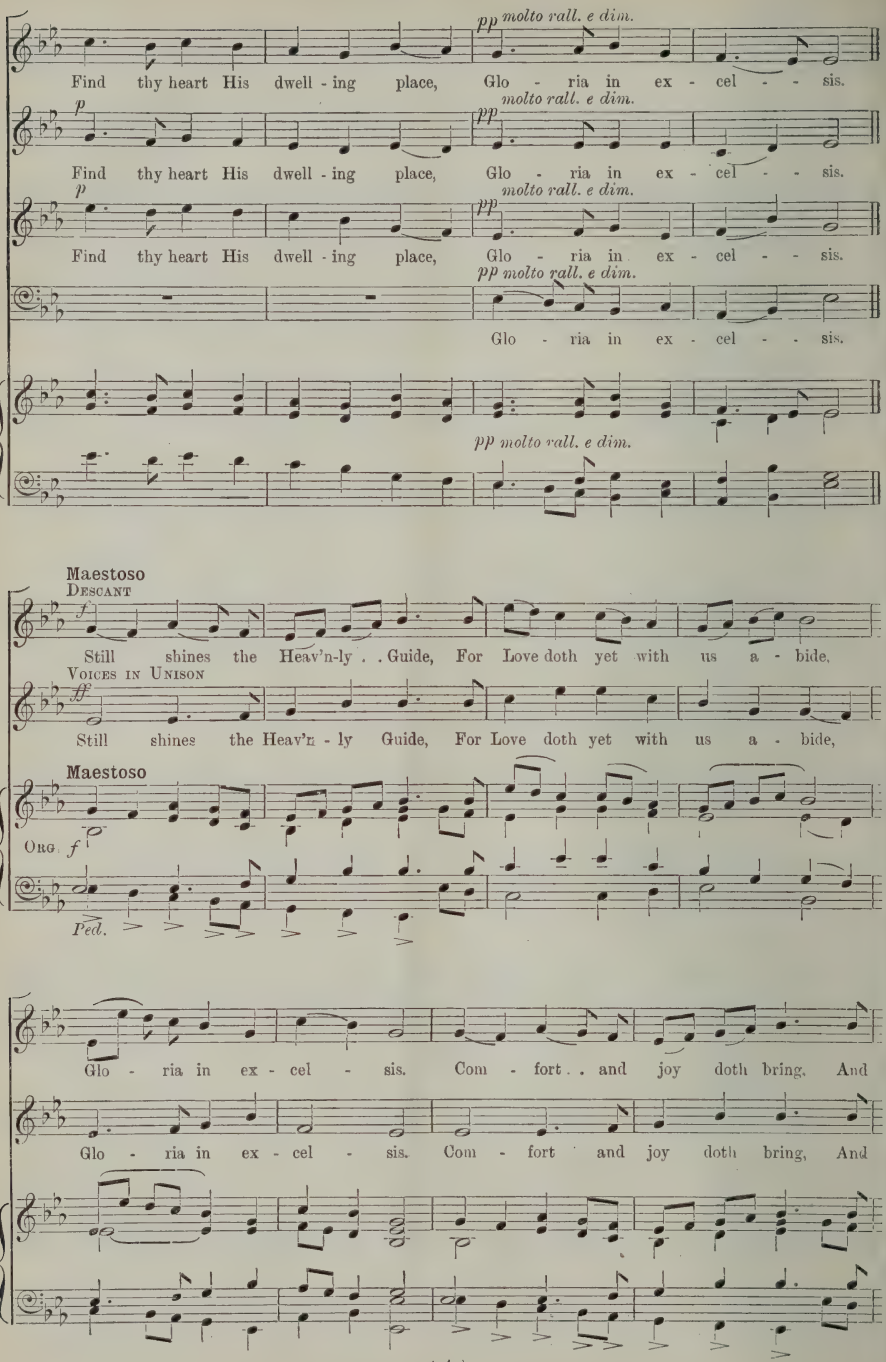
mf
pp
Glo - ria in ex - cel - sis.
with closed lips
p
with closed lips
p
pp
Glo - ria in ex - cel - sis.
pp
mf
Glo - ria in ex - cel - sis. Glad - ly an of - fring made, The Ho - ly Spi - rit's
pp
Glo - ria in ex - cel - sis.
p
pp
mf
pp
p
Glo - ria in ex - cel - sis. Seek, and by the Heav'n-ly Grace,
pp
Glo - ria in ex - cel - sis.
pp
voice o - beyed, Glo - ria in ex - cel - sis.
pp
Glo - ria in ex - cel - sis.
p
pp



pp molto rall. e dim.
Find thy heart His dwell - ing place, Glo - ria in ex - cel - - sis.
p
pp molto rall. e dim.
Find thy heart His dwell - ing place, Glo - ria in ex - cel - - sis.
p
pp molto rall. e dim.
Find thy heart His dwell - ing place, Glo - ria in ex - cel - - sis.
pp molto rall. e dim.
Glo - ria in ex - cel - - sis.
pp molto rall. e dim.
Maestoso
Descant
f
Still shines the Heav'n-ly . . Guide, For Love doth yet with us a - bide, Voices in Unison
ff
Still shines the Heav'n - ly Guide, For Love doth yet with us a - bide, Maestoso
Org. f
Ped.
Glo - ria in ex - cel - sis. Com - fort . . and joy doth bring, And Glo - ria in ex - cel - sis. Com - fort and joy doth bring, And still we hear the An - gels sing Glo - ria in ex - cel - sis.

still we hear the An - gels sing.. Glo - ria in ex - cel - sis.
Soprano
ff
Hal - le - lu - jah, Hal - le - lu - jah, Hal - le - lu - jah, Alto
ff
Hal - le - lu - jah, Hal - le - lu - jah, Hal - le - lu - jah,
Tenor
ff
Hal - le - lu - jah. Hal - le - lu - jah,
Bass
fff
Hal - le - lu - jah,
ff
Man.
Ped.
Molto allargando
fff con forza
Hal - le - lu - jah! Glo - ria in ex - cel - - - - sis.
fff con forza
Hal - le - lu - jah! Glo - ria in ex - cel - - - - sis.
fff con forza
Hal - le - lu - jah! Glo - ria in ex - cel - - - - sis.
fff con forza
Hal - le - lu - jah! Glo - ria in.. ex - cel - - - - sis.
Molto allargando
fff con forza

(Continued from page 1008.)

'Ivanhoe,' where they meet Robin Hood, Friar Tuck, and the rest of the merry fellows. The music seems to speak of a rollicking care-free life and, accordingly, should be played with a slight touch of robustness, but without exaggeration. With this idea in the mind, it is easy to perceive the pertinence of the dactyls from bar 2 onwards, and the need for their proper accentuation—long, short, short. Note that the prevailing thought fades away at the close, as in a dream. Tempo, between crotchet 120 and 132.

PRIMARY DIVISION.—LIST C

No. 7. Le Couppey. Study in B flat, Op. 10, No. 9.—The third section is unprinted, and in consequence the young student will be liable to lose sight of the form of the whole. This tendency is, of course, often displayed in the case of 'repeats.' The study itself is on the two-note slur, and for this reason it is a pity that the editors have not taken out the misleading dots. The rest and phrase-mark are sufficient to show the meaning. Carry on carefully to each quaver, playing the latter with softer tone than the crotchet and observing its strict value as a quaver. It will help to repeat a trochaic word, such as on-ward, to illustrate the effect required. Render the middle section (bar 17 to end of notation) with more vigour than the first and last sections. The study is really susceptible of some æsthetic charm. Tempo, crotchet 116.

No. 8. Colin Hood. 'Poll Parrot.'—A pleasant reminder of Crusoe's parrot who, to the great consternation of his master, awakened him by crying 'Robin Crusoe!' The points of imitation carry out the idea of a kind of colloquy between Crusoe and his clever bird. Musically, this piece is important, for it asks for some independence between the two hands. The iambic figuration (short, long) with which it starts may be helpfully contrasted with the trochees (long, short) of No. 7. Note that the middle section (from last quaver of bar 4 to third crotchet of bar 8) is played in a higher light, so to speak. The direction rather primly imports a touch of humour into the scheme, and may be regarded as affecting the tempo—crotchet 104.

No. 9. Annie M. Crisp. 'In Olden Style.'—A very effective and useful piece. The direction Tempo di Gavotta must be remembered as a precaution against too great a speed. Comparative daintiness and a consciousness of the older styles are special needs. It is important to scan the music aright. The main thought consists of two four-bar groups. The middle section (bars 16 to 24) scans in two two-bar rhythms followed by one of four bars. No points of actual separation, commas, &c., should, however, be made in the middle section, the groupings being primarily mental. Note the need for absolute independence between the hands. The music of both parts—left hand and right hand—must be mentally grasped in the horizontal sense belonging to music of this type. Tempo, about crotchet 126.

ELEMENTARY DIVISION.—LIST A

No. 10. Czerny. Study in C, Op. 599, No. 80.—The tempo obviously depends upon the triplets. Crotchet 72 is an average speed, but this should be increased if possible. The study implies proper preparation of the hand (cf. No. 1). If studied with care and ultimately played with freedom, it will develop the agility side of playing. Every passage, including even the first six bars, seems to emphasise the need for rotational freedom. Bars 9 to 12 on the second page are particularly useful in that respect.

No. 11. Haydn. Minuet and Trio from Sonata in D.—A word with regard to the form, a point so needful to examine. 'Only when the form is clear to you will the spirit be also.' Incidentally, it is possible to misinterpret this sage counsel, and to make the understanding of form the most prominent feature of appreciation! Form is one only of the many facts of music, but it is at least as important as any. Here we observe two distinct phases of three-part form. The Minuet is itself an example, the middle section being bars 9 to 14. The Trio is a further instance, with a middle section between bars 16 and 23. Then, the work as a whole and in a larger sense is itself in three-part form, the Trio necessarily being the middle section. A movement of this kind should first be played to candidates, perception of the form being primarily grasped through the ear. The florid passages of the Minuet will, to many, disturb the rhythmic basis of the dance, and this must be guarded against. A tempo at crotchet 88 ought to be sufficient to keep the music alive. Note the rhythmic groupings of the Trio, so characteristic of Haydn.

No. 12. Thomas F. Dunhill. Tambourin in G.—A jolly dance-tune which, however, does not quite carry out the old Provençal dance of the name. In the latter, the tambour (drum) was used persistently and nearly always on the main accents. Mr. Dunhill offers what may be termed a subjective side of the dance. He leaves the drum largely to the imagination, and is content to present the merry side of the music, somewhat after the manner of the many-sided jig. At the same time, teachers should know Rameau's celebrated 'Tambourin.' They will then be in a better position to adapt their interpretation to the needs of this particular piece. Crotchet 92 is an average speed, but it may be increased almost ad lib.

ELEMENTARY DIVISION.—LIST B

No. 12. Loeschhorn. Study in F, Op. 65, No. 25.—Emphatically a piece for the promotion of cantabile. To this end, the pace should be about crotchet 100. Singing tone requires room to move for both mind and hand. The shape of this piece should be noted. First section, bars 1 to 8; middle section, 9 to 12; third section, 13 to 16, a disguised and abbreviated return of the first thought; coda, 16 to the end. Perception of this kind is of the greatest assistance in helping young students to understand something of the elementary make-up of instrumental music.

No. 14. J. S. Bach. Prelude in C minor.—A reminder of the lute in the last days of its passing, for which instrument Bach wrote this delightful piece. It is natural to connect it in thought with the first Prelude of the '48.' The charm of either is in the simple, yet penetrating and personal, harmony. I advise its practice in chordal form until the beauty of the harmonic expression dawns upon the student. The tone-markings are, of course, not Bach's, and may be changed or modified according to the taste and perception of the player. Taste is, in fact, the key to the interpretation, with which is naturally bound up the tempo. The latter may be as slow as crotchet 92, or faster if required by the temperament of the player.

No. 15. Felix Swinstead. Giocoso.—The term giocoso clearly refers less to tempo than to style. The element of gaiety is enhanced by the staccato effects throughout. The music is straightforward, and owes much of its charm to this cause. Hence it should be played straightforwardly, with suitable accentuation and sharply defined rhythm. Slight latitude in this respect may occur at the rhythmic extension in bars 17 to 22 and, obviously, in the concluding section. The music itself is a very congenial example of Mr. Swinstead's art. The tempo may be minim 88 or faster.

ELEMENTARY DIVISION.—LIST C

No. 16. Hilliger. Study in A.—A very searching study—that is, in view of the presumed standard of the candidates. The foundation of the whole is a good knowledge of keyboard scale activities. A study of this kind may do much to develop quickness of ear, eye, and hand; on the other hand, if practised in ignorance of the early principles of touch, it will do irreparable harm. For example, the power to make free lateral and rotational adjustments of the hand is fundamentally necessary. This is one of the reasons why many pianoforte teachers defer the practice of the scale until these matters have been satisfactorily dealt with. Perhaps in the near future this aspect of the case will be recognised by those who select the studies for these lists. In the present case, the teacher will be careful to temper the wind to the shorn lamb, and, accordingly, will let the tempo be no higher than the student can manage, having regard to his manipulative powers at the moment. Consequently, I hesitate in suggesting as an average speed, crotchet 104.

No. 17. Dussek. Lesson in C, Op. 16, No. 1.—An opportune reminder of a composer who did good work for our art during the lifetime of Beethoven. It is said of him that his power in 'singing touch' was remarkable. The piece is clearly a sonata movement, simple yet complete in form. The tempo is obviously dominated by the triplets of the second subject. After a preliminary glance at the whole, it would be politic to start actual practice with these triplets, ascertaining the general pace from them and not from the matter of the first page. Ultimately, the speed could be in the neighbourhood of crotchet 116. The difference in style between the respective areas of the first and second subjects is marked not only by the presence or absence of the triplets, but by the need to use a modified form of cantabile in every passage which contains no triplets. The two zones of musical interest will then be apparent, and an effective interpretation will follow.

No. 18. Walter Carroll. 'Mermaid's Lullaby.'—It is somewhat difficult to preserve the lullaby suggestion underlying this very delightful and sensitive piece. If taken too slowly, there is a danger of reducing the wider triple movement to a narrow one, making an unconscious accent on every beat. Perhaps, on the whole, dotted crochet 60 is suitable. I remember an objector to a piece in the 1928 lists on the score that it encouraged children to think slightingly of consecutive fifths! Dr. Carroll seems also to be an offender. Let us thank Heaven that the old order of academic dry-as-dusts is passing away, and that we are beginning to realise that every effect is legitimate when purpose is behind it. Dr. Carroll's fifths in bars 1 and 2 are unearthly, mystic. That is just as they should be, for the player is also a listener who listens for 'sweet bells over the bay.' There you have the key to the whole piece, with its innocent charm and suggestion of fairy lore.

LOWER DIVISION.—LIST A

No. 19. Heller. Study in A flat, Op. 47, No. 23.—Although straightforward in texture, this little piece will gain greatly from slight touches of rubato, and since a higher grade has been reached, this ought not to be impossible. Care must, however, be taken not to 'pattern' the figure of the first bar, and thus bring about a kind of musical wallpaper design. Pedalling, too, now comes into the foreground. That given here is quite good, though it must be remembered that in the use of the pedal, no signs on paper can really take the place of the ear. Perfect unanimity on the part of the hands is needful in bars 3, 7, &c.; that is, the passage must sound as though played by one hand. The last line demands some power in interpretation so as to avoid the commonplace in rhythm and sound. It is strange that so much charm can be manifest in a piece which merely consists of four statements of a simple theme, the explanation being the rhythmic variety in the third and fourth statements. Tempo, about quaver 96.

No. 20. Schubert. Allegretto in C minor.—The master's sole appearance in this the year of his Centenary! The piece is of a fugitive character, and derives its effect from the setting of its two thoughts, each being played against the other, the two being united by the element of contrast. This fact dominates the whole interpretation. To suggest a suitable speed-number is almost impossible. Many students of this standard will find difficulty in managing the chordal section at a real allegretto tempo, and this points to an expediently slower pace for that section. On the other hand, the comparative vivacity of the first section ought not to be sacrificed. On the whole, dotted crotchet 88 might be an average tempo. The phrase-marks, I take it, are the customary ones. They might with advantage have been revised, particularly in the light of modern thought upon the subject of phrasing. It will be observed that the rhythmic outlines seem often to be at variance with the time-grouping. This does not matter, provided that the student carry on in every case to the concluding unit of the phrase.

No. 21. Schumann. Lento, Op. 68, No. 21.—Schumann gave no name to this exquisite little piece. Instead, he prefixed three stars, as though to hint that the meaning of the music must remain a matter for the imagination. His direction Lento e con espressione perhaps gives a clue. He wishes the strains to express a course of subdued thought, in half-light, so to speak, special attention being given to the personal side as revealed by tone. To 'sing' the phrases and with markedly personal tone is, indeed, the primary condition of success. Some difficulty will here be experienced, notably when the hand has at the same moment a sung sound and accompanying sounds, as well as in the points of imitation towards the close. Pedal markings have been attempted, but it is clearly impossible to indicate the pedal in music of this kind, except in a superficial degree. Melodic as well as harmonic pedalling is needed, and the collaboration of the two is always a problem to the elementary. The tempo may vary between crotchet 52 and 60.

No. 22. Colin Taylor. 'The Little Russian Dancer.'—A very characteristic tune, played throughout in strict time, and, in that respect, varied only in the one place indicated. The impetus, in fact, should be kept up to the end, with no slackening at the final cadence. In all probability, secco refers to imagined soft drum-beats, and this points to their proper staccato rendering with no pedal. Note that extreme lightness is the key throughout; further, that this quality is not really disturbed by the two or three tone-summits. The dancer must always be in the mind, always light, always charming and vivacious. The piece is a good study in staccato playing, but the staccato must be of the right quality and produced in the proper way. The tempo may be dotted crotchet 112 or faster.

LOWER DIVISION.—LIST B

No. 23. Schäfer. Study in B flat, Op. 119, No. 9.—Useful in passing from hand to hand in passages which sound, or which ought to sound, as though played by one hand. The device is common in keyboard music, and this is an opportunity to bring it before the student. Personally, I should render each of the passages in bars 20-22 and 22-24 in one phrase-unit, thus affording further practice in the same device. The study is grateful both to ear and hand. The enterprising teacher will not fail to direct the student to mark the modulations; also, to describe the nature of the form which is founded upon the three-part design. Let the general tempo be crotchet 92, varied slightly in either direction according to the capacity of the student.

No. 24. Hummel. Scherzo in A.—The strong metrical grouping in four bars throughout seems to place the music in 12/16 time. Personally, I am worried by the barriers presented to thought by the multitudinous bar-lines. The 12/16 idea will help many teachers to view the music in this larger sense. At any rate, it will prevent them from narrowing down the rhythm to its present pettifogging appearance on paper. To preserve its intended effect as a Scherzo, the music requires at least dotted crotchet 60, and should go faster. There are no real keyboard problems, though the need should be noted for a melodic treatment of the quavers in bars 53-56, attained through proper means of rotation. Let the music sparkle, without heaviness of style.

No. 25. Benjamin Godard. 'Balancelle,' Op. 149, No. 4.—A felucca is a charming sight. In calm weather feluccas merely undulate on the Mediterranean, but in stormy weather, when the winds are high, they rush along at an incredible speed. Godard is thinking of the balancelle, or felucca, moving gracefully along to the tune of a light breeze. Mark that he attains his effect by the nature of his time-grouping. Let the mind pass from bar to bar (not from beat to beat) like the felucca from wave to wave, and the effect is immediate. Follow faithfully every mark of nuance, and let the tempo be in the neighbourhood of dotted crotchet 52.

No. 26. Eric Grant. 'Fairy Cavalry.'—A very imaginative piece to be played with great delicacy of feeling and with a Mozartian definition. The tone-marks must, of course, be strictly observed; but with no exaggeration, as befits the idea underlying the music. Even the lifeguardsmen of the fairy host must march and rattle their sabres, but they do both with the lightness of their kind. Avoid the pedal save in the places indicated. The last five chords are wonderfully effective, and seem to intimate the waking from the fairy vision. The chords themselves refer back to one of the old church modes. Tempo, about crotchet 96.

LOWER DIVISION.—LIST C

No. 27. Loeschhorn. Study in G, Op. 66, No. 4.—My remarks under No. 16 apply here also. At the same time, this study is of a far less searching kind. Here, we have plain scale-passages, and in no instance do the semiquavers appear in both hands. This being the case, the candidate will be expected to prove his skill by a proportionately higher speed, crotchet 112 at least, and faster if possible. Bars 11 and 12 are probably the most difficult. The little-finger side of the hand is engaged, and free hand adjustments are necessary at the turning of each 'corner.'

No. 28. Haydn. Finale from Sonata in D.—One of Haydn's completely square movements, each section being compounded of four-bar rhythms. The compensation for this, if compensation be needed, is the fragrance of the style, the wealth of personal touches, and the delicacy of the decorations. The form is an interesting combination of the Rondo and Variation. The first thought occurs under three guises; the second under two. Although a very restrained use of rubato is, of course, not excluded, it should be employed sparingly and in an all but concealed manner. The great need is to play the music in a thoroughly Haydn-like style. Many of the phrase-marks are misplaced, or, at least, not brought up to date. Pedalling is rarely necessary. Tempo, between crotchet 96 and 104.

No. 29. Gade. Elegy, Op. 19, No. 1.—A kind of musical sonnet. The lyric element is in evidence throughout, and in structure and content the piece is prophetic of the short pieces of Grieg. The need for adequate cantabile never ceases from start to finish. The first sound and the last, with every melodic sound between, must be sung with fervour and with that touch of wistfulness nearly always associated with the more slowly-moving examples of Scandinavian music. Note the position of the great climax in bar 27. The passage beginning at bar 17 carries the mind forward to this climax, and while there is no pronounced accretion of tone until just before the focal point, the style of the whole passage is restless as though betokening the approach of a moment of stress. Scholarly rubato and sensitive pedalling are alike essential. Tempo, about quaver 88.

No. 30. Harold E. Darke. 'A Marching Tune.'—I have tried this at various speeds and have concluded that crotchet 80 represents the best tempo. After all, it is not music intended for the act of marching, but for recalling the spirit, the atmosphere and strenuosity of the act. That is to say, it is the mental and subjective similitude of a march. Indeed, it is difficult to recall a march-tune which more adequately fulfils the function. The two tunes of which it is formed are, so to speak, rhythmic rivals; in carrying on the spirit of the movement, each tries to get the better of the other! Inspired by a march, it should be played like one, rubato subtleties being for the once ignored.

HIGHER DIVISION.—LIST A

No. 31. Czerny. Study in E flat, Op. 636, No. 12.—A particularly useful study. It should be practised staccato as well as legato; also, staccato in one hand, legato in the other. These expedients are specially valuable when the technique of the arpeggio is in the more elementary stages. Not the least of the benefits arising from this study is the attention claimed by the various tone-changes. When the practice of isolated arpeggios has been a little mechanical in that respect, this study will prove to students the immensity of the improvement wrought by variations of tone. A distinct aim, for instance, should be the making of a full cres. and dim. in the dominant seventh at bar 6. A good average tempo is crotchet 126.

No. 32. J. S. Bach. Two-part Invention in G minor.—A feast for those with prepared minds. Those not so fortified must at least be sincere; then, most probably, the gods will vouchsafe insight and power to overcome the difficulties—for there are difficulties, chiefly of the mental kind. It is of no use to take it to the keyboard with no understanding of its make-up. The music consists of two melodic thoughts which always work happily together. These thoughts should first be practised separately. The first is in the right-hand part, and may be said to extend to the first sound of bar 3; the second is in the left-hand part, and extends from the second note of bar 1 to the first of bar 3. The modifications and metamorphoses of both should be examined and marked by the student on the copy. Then, and then only, the whole may be taken to the instrument and studied section by section. The annotation given of two graces is only approximately correct, but it is the popular one and will serve. Average tempo, about crotchet 63.

No. 33. Schumann. 'Phantasietanz,' Op. 124, No. 5.—One of Schumann's pieces which recall the character 'Florestan' of the David-Guild. In emotional significance it is perhaps beyond the majority of those who enter in this Division; hence there is a danger of the impetuosity losing its force and of the music becoming limited in emotional range. The prominent part is, of course, in the left hand, but the semiquavers of the right hand must not be regarded as a mere accompaniment, heard in the background as it were. The whole texture is engaged in the expression of the thought, and this is partly evident from the octave echo throughout of the left-hand part. A convenient average pace may be crotchet 72, but players of agile thought may increase this with advantage.

No. 34. Benjamin Godard. 'Barcarolle Crépusculaire,' Op. 149, No. 5.—As in No. 25, the composer takes us to Southern Europe, the explanation being that, in the sensuous rhythms of that part of the world, he found a grateful basis for his somewhat light art. It is easily possible to drift into a sentimental reading of this music. Parenthetically, we may wonder if the Associated Board had that in mind in choosing the piece! Assuredly, an examination room is the last place in the world in which to be sentimental. The tempo I suggest is dotted crotchet 54. A higher number would make the movement more living, but it is necessary to think of what will happen at bar 20 onwards, at the last page, and at the middle section. Godard directs stresses on the second and third beats of bar 1, &c. These, however, should not be regarded as metrical; otherwise the player will turn each bar into three of simple triple time. The main accent on the first of each bar must be dominant, if only to preserve the barcarolle rhythm.

HIGHER DIVISION.—LIST B

No. 35. Duvernoy. Study in C, Op. 120, No. 13.—A very fine study for rotational hand adjustment. Remark that, though the passages are in similar motion, the rotation is in contrary movement. This points to practice with separate hands. There is no escape from this necessity, save only in the case of those who have acquired a perfectly free hand rotation. The tempo for the examination may be about crotchet 112, but the passages should be practised at a large variety of speeds. Although the study consists entirely of uniform notes without phrase-markings, rhythm must not be forgotten, progression towards the incoming accents being at least a matter of equal importance.

No. 36. Handel. Courante from Suite 13.—A form of the dance which, in many respects, is peculiar to Handel. Teachers should look up the subject and discover the differences between the French and Italian forms of the Courante as well as the reasons why this example differs from both. The texture here is quasi-contrapuntal, in which, however, the main interest is allotted to the upper part, this being melodically expressed throughout. Touches of part-writing occur in many places, and, in this connection, the movement of the bass part demands special care. The tone-markings are quite good, and may be followed at the discretion of the teacher. The phrase-marks are often misleading, and should have been revised. A moderate but average tempo is crotchet 112.

No. 37. Beethoven. Theme and Five Variations on 'Nel cor più non mi sento.'—The tie-sign in bar 2 must first be noticed. Obviously the notes should not be tied; their verbal association negatives it. A dot, instead of the quite sensible though easily-to-be-misinterpreted accentual sign, should have been placed under the first note. Make the theme thoroughly vocal. The second section climbs steadily to the climax in bar 14. Tempo, dotted crotchet 60. Var. 1: A rippling decoration of the theme, with plenty of light and shade; the sforzandi to be proportioned in tone to the passages in which they occur. Tempo, practically the same as theme. Var. 2: The first piano indication is questionable. As a rule, this variation is played in strong tone-contrast to the first and at a higher speed, say about 69. The piano after the pause is authentic, and precedes the vigorous cres. with which the Variation ends. Var. 3: Same tempo as theme. Extreme grace is the key to interpretation. The sforzandi are slight stresses of a quasi-humorous nature. Var. 4: In great contrast and at about 52. A soft, tender singing tone, great care being taken with the two-note phraselets, the first sound of each of which should be slightly and affectionately stressed. Var. 5: Resume tempo of theme and the rippling style of Var. 1, intensified by the effect of increased speed induced by the triplets and by a general lightness and elegance of style.

No. 38. Edouard Schütt. 'Sérénade du Village,' Op. 60, No. 6.—The tempo is important. Grazioso manifestly tempers allegro. Approximately, minim 76 should be satisfactory, but the whole ought to be played with comparative freedom. On the other hand, the guitar-like figures require extreme cleanness and clearness, and these, at least, should be played in strict time. Passages like that in bars 11-14 open up possibilities for personality in interpretation. The direction molto leggiero must be remembered throughout. Singing tone is imperatively necessary in every phrase of the predominant tune. In brief, a realisation of the light character of the music, reminiscent of the 'serenades' we have to listen to in our hotels in Southern Europe, should help greatly in the general interpretation.

(To be concluded.)

AN AMERICAN UNIVERSITY SUMMER SESSION

By W. G. Whittaker

Educational schemes in the United States are very different from those at home. If one wishes to take a degree in the old country, say in arts or science, one attends a single university, generally three years for a pass, four for an honours degree. A small group of subjects is selected and adhered to throughout. In a pass degree possibly one or two subjects are dropped in the later years. Preparation is generally made in schools for the particular branch which will be taken up, and lines are pursued which ensure considerable advancement in the chief subjects before a university is reached. But in America methods are not so rigid. There is much more diversity in preparation, in university curriculums, in attainment. Four years are generally required for a B.A. The first two are devoted to a kind of general education (often about equal in standard to the closing two years of a secondary school here), the third and fourth to more specialised study. It is not always necessary to keep to one university. A degree is obtained by an accumulation of so many 'credits.' A 'credit' involves attendance at a certain number of lectures, with a certificate of competency at the end of them. In many cases a certain proportion of these 'credits' may be obtained at other universities, by attendance at evening lectures, or at summer sessions. One finds that a student takes, say, two years of a degree course, and, through financial inability to complete, must needs seek a post of some sort and attend evening classes and summer sessions in order to make up the necessary qualifications. School teachers will obtain appointments in schools on a lower qualification, and work stage by stage up to a higher.

There is a certain amount of restriction with regard to subjects of study, but not nearly so much as we exercise in British universities. It is possible to attend widely-varying courses which would not be permitted with us. For instance, I came across one student who was taking geology, philosophy, and music; another was doing ornithology and music. We may criticise this method, but there is a great deal to be said for it under the circumstances which exist in that country. With such problems as they have to face, there is bound to be a considerable amount of experiment and a certain degree of latitude to enable people working under many varied conditions to secure the benefits of a university education. It is easy to sneer at the encouragement offered by this system to the habit of obtaining a smattering of knowledge in many subjects, with advanced attainment in none, but it has certain commendable features, one of which I shall refer to at a later stage. Our own conditions and those existing across the Atlantic are so very different that only an intimate knowledge of both can enable one to judge each plan fairly.

American schools have very long summer vacations, on account of the extreme temperature. To compensate, those at Christmas and Easter are short. As a result of the long mid-year vacation and the method of building up degrees, the system of summer sessions has sprung up at universities. These extra terms last six weeks, and the courses are arranged so that 'credits' may be obtained in almost all subjects. They attract enormous numbers. Columbia University, in New York City, enrolled no fewer than eighteen thousand students this summer. The session at which I had the honour of lecturing was held at the famous Cornell University, in the town of Ithaca, which lies in the Five-Finger Lakes region in the State of New York. No more ideal situation could be found. The whole district is most beautiful—lakes, forests, glens, picturesque and romantic. The Campus, or University grounds, extends to over two thousand acres, with agricultural experimental fields stretching for miles behind. It stands on the top of the steep hill which overlooks Cayuga Lake. Woods, lakes, mighty gorges, are found within the Campus, to say nothing of innumerable handsome and well-equipped buildings. On the material side, American universities lack nothing.

The teaching staff numbered about two hundred. Something like three hundred courses were offered, on all manner of subjects. Much of the teaching was done by lecturers and professors from other universities; this interchange for a few weeks in the summer is beneficial to both staff and university. There were five courses in music, each for an hour a day, except Saturdays and Sundays, the morning session lasting from eight till one, after which there were no statutory duties. Assistant-Prof. Mead, the acting-organist of Cornell, taught harmony; Prof. Paul Weaver, of the University of North Carolina, gave a course on 'Music in Public Schools' ('An introduction to the general problem of school music; its value as an educational subject; principles underlying class-room methods; practical suggestions for elementary and high-school situations') and a 'Teachers' Course in the Appreciation of Music' ('An exposition of the methods which may be used to advantage in arousing real appreciation in pupils of the best forms of music').

To myself were allotted one on 'Musical Appreciation: Form and Design,' which I utilised for an intensive study of certain selected forms, and one on 'The History of Modern Music.' Rules with regard to attendance were very strict; students who wished to be absent even for a day or two presented their reasons to the Dean.

I also gave a series of five public evening lectures—one on 'North-Country Folk-Music,' the other four on 'Living British Composers.' I found that our contemporary music was scarcely known. Names like Elgar and Delius were merely vague shadows to the majority of the audience; Bax had never been heard of at all!

On Sunday and Tuesday evenings Prof. Mead gave an organ recital. There were two concerts by visiting artists. A choir was organized by Prof. Mead for the Sunday morning services, with two rehearsals a week. A summer chorus was organized by Prof. Weaver for the study of polyphonic music. I heard this body after it had been rehearsing three weeks, and was astonished to find how far it had advanced in choral technique and in the real understanding of a type of music with which many of its members had not been previously acquainted. It spoke volumes for the personality and the real aptitude for handling choral material possessed by the conductor.

With regard to my own lectures: the majority of the students attended in order to secure 'credits.' On the other hand, there was a good proportion of men and women who came out of pure interest—engineers, mathematicians, and others asked permission to attend, and they were among the keenest members of the class. The variety of nationalities was bewildering. My registers contained Polish, Russian, German, French, Danish, and Chinese names, in addition to all varieties of Anglo-Saxon. A large number of the students were Hebrews, enthusiastic and responsive; some of the best work of the session was done by them. The general standard of knowledge on entrance was not high, but the students were amazingly keen and energetic. Indeed, the energy of the American student is astounding. Ornithological excursions necessitated rising at 4 a.m. Many students attended lectures without a break from eight till one. In the afternoon there were geological excursions, 'hitch-hiking' parties (where you pretend to walk but ask the first motorist for a lift; indeed, you set off with the intention of not walking at all!), 'hiking' expeditions (where you really walk), and all manner of games; in the evening, public lectures (sometimes there were three at the same hour), plays (every university has its dramatic instructor), or concerts. If there was an hour off in the middle of the morning, when an English student, no doubt wisely, would be lying on his back on the greensward under the trees, the American student would race off, in a temperature of ninety in the shade, to utilise the time for tennis. This amazing energy was shown also in their work for me. I could wish for no more conscientious, hard-working body of students, even if at times there was a tendency to mistake energy and prolixity for real acquirement of culture. One striking difference from Old-Country conditions was noticeable: where students were familiar with much music it was nearly always orchestral works. They viewed music from the angle of concert-goers, and, generally speaking, that of habitués of orchestral concerts; music in the home was not so much cultivated. Of the real appreciation of music by the average student there was no doubt. I was present at an organ recital on a hot, beautiful summer evening, when wild horses would not have dragged an English person within doors. Prof. Mead gave a tough programme, without any concessions—Bach, Franck, Reger, Widor, Vierne—and the summer choir sang Palestrina, Vittoria, Tchaikovsky. Yet Sage Chapel was crowded to the doors; white, yellow, black, and brown peoples were there—a strange medley, but all listening intently.

We have summer courses, no doubt, but they are mostly short and are on different lines from these. Compared with the opportunities afforded to American teachers of improving their musical knowledge, those in England are very small. Again, where may an engineer or mathematician gain an understanding of music during his vacation? Where do we find intelligent people of varied occupations meeting together to study the art in common? We may joke about certain aspects of American musical life, we may cast aspersions on its taste, but we must recognise that there are enormous and unprecedented forces at work to create and maintain artistic interest and adequate knowledge. Results are already beginning to show, and while we muddle along and let things take their own course, Americans are putting forward their best efforts to make art take its rightful place in life. If we do not intend to be left behind we must cry again, 'Wake up, England!'

POINTS FROM LECTURES

The Oxford Summer Course in Music Teaching has already had notice, and, somewhat belated, brief attention may be paid to a few of the later and weightier lectures. Dr. Percy Buck's four 'neglected points in musical education' were: history, criticism, taste, and form.

History, Prof. Buck said, was behind all understanding, but history existed only because things changed—anything that remained unchanged had no history. The technique by which art was expressed was changing continually, and it was possible to arrive at an understanding of technique only when it was studied on an historical basis. Criticism was neither fault-finding nor the expression of personal preference; it meant just appraisement of both merits and defects, and only began after the word 'Because.'

The growth of form Prof. Buck discussed in a further lecture. Nothing, he continued, affected a person's feelings so much as persistent rhythm. 'There are very few things that make me want to kill friend or foe, but the reiterated rhythm of anybody drumming his fingers on the breakfast table makes me feel positively murderous.' Form was the basis of all art, and it was by thinking and becoming familiar with it that we would realise that a composer who developed a new form was not inane, and that we merely did not understand idiom. He recollected that twenty years ago he considered Debussy's music absolutely inane, but now it was perfectly clear and simple. In the same way he believed that our grandchildren will roar with laughter if we tell them that we ever found Stravinsky difficult. Probably by that time he will be considered simple and old-fashioned.

Mr. Geoffrey Shaw, at Oxford, referred to Tonic Sol-fa, and said that when this system was introduced musicians were very conservative, and condemned it without examination. The present official attitude (he spoke as H.M. Inspector of Music in Schools) was one of belief in the system, but disbelief in the notation.

Miss Mabel Chamberlain put the child's point of view in regard to notation. The Staff notation, she said, was difficult to learn, being full of inconsistencies which were puzzling to children; her experience led her to advocate using the Tonic Sol-fa notation as a stepping-stone to the Staff. Nowadays some people called Tonic Sol-fa old-fashioned, but a thing was only old-fashioned when it was superseded by something better, and so far nothing better than Tonic Sol-fa as an introduction to the Staff had been produced.

At Norwich a vacation course was held, which kept specially in view the needs of conductors at competition festivals. Mr. Herbert Wiseman was director, a most practical and helpful one. Students were given opportunities of conducting the singing of folk-songs and hymns, Mr. Wiseman frankly criticising the weak points in their work. The chief stumbling-blocks were the failure to give a definite beat to start the music and to secure a clean cut-off. With regard to musical appreciation, he said there was too much talking and too little doing. It was no new subject. A convincing appeal was made for the use of the Tonic Sol-fa system as a help in reading the Staff notation. By his use of Sol-fa methods—mental effects, hand-signs, French time-names, ear-training, rhythmical modulator practice—and his lively and varied style, Mr. Wiseman's plans found favour.

The new Professor of Music at Sheffield University, Mr. F. H. Shera, addressed the local Organists' and Choirmasters' Association on 'Modern Harmony.' Such an audience could listen to illustrations with understanding. Modern harmony, Prof. Shera said, was at present an almost uncharted sea to many of them, and was the result of endless experiments. Some were destined to failure, but others had survived, crystallised into success, and become rules. Sounds which at first appeared crude and ugly in the extreme were now accepted as everyday facts; for example, Debussy was first regarded as a freak, and Scriabin, who was the last word in modernity, had now almost vanished from the concert programme. Some modern composers, such as Béla Bartók and the Dutchman Pijper, were writing in two and even three keys, but at present these can only be regarded in the light of experiments.

Dr. Sydney H. Nicholson announced that a School of English Church Music has been established at Chislehurst. He explained how musicians could be sent to instruct people in small places. Speaking of Church choirs, he said, 'By all means have women in the choirs if you like. I see no reason why women should not be in choirs, and I see no reason why they should be camouflaged as choir-boys if they are. But for heaven's sake do not fill up all the places there are until you have all the boys available first. Give the boys preference partly on musical grounds. As I go about the country I see boys in choirs, and the choirmen's seats mostly filled with grey-headed men. We must keep our boys now so that they will fill the men's places later. The future of Church music lies largely with the choir-boys, and we must do something to encourage them and promote their interest in every way.'

Speaking of Schubert's 'Erl-King' as an illustration of graphic power, Mr. Peter Latham, at a Liverpool Rotary luncheon, said, 'If ever you hear a singer hanging on to the high notes and thereby stopping the galloping horse, please knock him down, with my compliments. The whole atmosphere of the song is killed—as if anybody's high notes were worth that!'

It was the view of a Leeds organist, choirmaster, and pianoforte soloist at the Leeds 19 Club that all the average man understood or wished to understand of the music he appreciated was that it was enjoyable and satisfied him; but it should be quite as possible for him to read music as to read books, with his feet on the hob. The business man who went to the opera appreciated it more than the average musician, because he sat back and, in his ignorance, listened to the beauty of the music and thoroughly enjoyed it. He did not know sufficient to criticise it, and that was where the critic did not get the same pleasure. The speaker was Mr. F. Morat.

In the course of a lecture at Belfast, Mr. C. J. Brennan mentioned some awkward words for singers: 'twelfth,' 'breadths,' 'nymphs,' and so forth. Poets gave them little problems like 'disturb'st,' 'o'erwhelm'st,' 'hold'st,' 'lurk'dst,' &c. The only way was to speak the words very slowly, forming the consonants in their order, and yet joining them together. Then they should speed up. The subject was 'Voice Production,' and it was the first of a series of lectures designed to assist candidates preparing for the examinations of the Society of Professional Musicians at Ulster.

A doubly-distilled pessimist gets a good press and plenty of 'miserable-sinner' supporters. Sir Thomas Beecham was in that characteristic mood in criticising the musical condition of the country, at the Leeds Luncheon Club. The chairman said he felt that every word uttered by Sir Thomas was true. Some of his barbed 'points' were that, whilst nearly every other country that was not promised a renaissance had gone ahead, this country was the only one in the civilised world that was not only immeasurably below their standard, but had unmistakably fallen back from the level it occupied twenty-five years ago. The level of English singing was immeasurably below what it was twenty-five years ago; the level of choral singing was just about the same in certain places—of which Leeds was perhaps one—but in others it was much lower; there was not in the whole of the country—with all respect to the orchestra that was playing at the Leeds Festival—an orchestra that was in the front rank, according to the estimates of certain Continental countries, and certainly the United States. 'You have that superannuated, obsolete, disgusting, noisy, horrid form of making music in superabundance, known as the brass band. Out of the open window comes this terrible sound of mechanical music, this grinding, this strangling, this grunting, like all the hogs out of all the hoggeries in the world. Think of gramophone records. . . . I have never heard one yet that I consider to be music. London, with a population of eight millions, has not an opera house. He wanted to see seventy thousand members of the League of Opera, and not the present thirty thousand. There were only five hundred members at Leeds, a number not worthy of that great city, which was trading on a musical reputation that, to say the least, was on a somewhat insecure foundation. J. G.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

Questions must be of general musical interest. They must be stated simply and briefly, and if several are sent, each must be written on a separate slip. Our 'Answers to Correspondents' Column closes on the 14th of the month. We cannot undertake to reply by post.

N. J. H.—(1.) In Bach's C minor Prelude for organ the should be regarded as the equivalent of the quaver triplets. It is wrongly printed in the edition referred to, which was published before such inconsistencies of notation in old composers were fully realised. (2.) We fear we cannot help you in regard to the 'cuts' in the 'St. John' Passion. You must be guided by the ability of your choir, as well as by the time at your disposal for performance. Any arrangement that ensures contrast and cohesion will be right.

Puzzled.—Your fox-trot song strikes us as being quite a good sample of a poor model. It is not unsuitable for publication, for apparently nothing is too bad in the fox-trot line. Probably if your name were well-known in the dance-music world the publisher would swallow it, and ask for more. You say that your teacher advises you to have nothing more to do with that class of music. So do we.

Organist.—No book on musical history deals specially with the period named. Consult Colles's 'The Growth of Music' (Oxford University Press) or the Stanford-Forsyth 'History of Music' (Macmillan). In addition look up the biographies of the chief composers of the period in 'Grove' and in the 'Dictionary of Modern Music and Musicians' (Dent).

B. H. R.—We know of no book dealing specially with the construction of electric organs. A mass of information on organ construction generally is in Thomas Elliston's 'Organs and Tuning' (Weekes, 25*s*.). Refer also to articles in the new 'Grove'; or to the article, 'Organ,' by D. Batigan Verne, in the new edition of the 'Encyclopædia Britannica.'

Eccles.—(1.) Walford Davies's tune to 'Mine eyes have seen the glory' is in 'Hymns of the Kingdom' (Oxford University Press). (2.) Franck's Andantino in G minor for organ is published by Costallat, Paris. It may be obtained from Novello's, price 2*s*.

G. B. L.—The term 'All rights reserved' is a general indication that a work is copyright. Details as to the various rights—performing, mechanical, broadcasting, &c., are dealt with in the agreement between composer and publisher.

G. L. C.—We have had no first-hand experience of either of the memory-training methods you name. Judging from report, however, we think that No. 1 is to be preferred. We do not suggest any books, as the coach will do that.

D. C.—(1.) Yes; Mr. Reginald Goss-Custard and Mr. Harry Goss-Custard are related. They are brothers. (2.) Mr. Basil Maine was for a short period assistant-organist at Durham Cathedral.

W. G. C. L.—The main point concerning the 'Twelfth Mass' is that Mozart didn't write it. Who did write such a poor work matters less, and so we've never troubled to find out.

E. M. N.—We have no copy of the Study at hand, so we cannot answer your inquiry. When asking questions of this kind you should send a copy, or write out the passage concerned.

M. S.—The theme you quote is the main subject of the slow movement from Mendelssohn's 'Italian' Symphony. It is generally known as 'The Pilgrims' March.'

S. R.—For information concerning Christmas carols refer to Dr. J. W. Phillips's book 'Christmas Carols: their Origin, Music, and connection with mystery plays' (Routledge).

Vocal.—For our opinion as to the course of study, 'Caruso's Secret Revealed,' look at 'Occasional Notes.'

A. W., Junior, asks where he can obtain copies of the comic opera 'The Dandy Fifth' by Clarence Corni [?]. It is now out of print. Can readers help?

Last month 'S. E. H.' inquired as to the publisher of John Hughes's hymn-tune 'Cwm Rhondda.' A large number of readers have kindly replied that the tune may be had in leaflet form, O.N. and T.S. notations combined, from the Red Dragon Press, 43, Penarth Road, Cardiff, post free, 2*d*.

In reference to our reply to 'G. W. S.' in last month's number, Mr. Douglas G. Rogers kindly points out that Parry's Scherzo in F is for pianoforte (not organ), and is published by Ashdown.

THE SCHOOL OF ENGLISH CHURCH MUSIC

The project for founding a School of English Church Music is making rapid headway. The proposal was first put forward on December 6 last, at a meeting held in the Jerusalem Chamber, Westminster Abbey; and in less than a year a property has been acquired at Chislehurst, where the 'College of St. Nicolas' will be opened early in January. On St. Nicolas Day, December 6 next, there will be another meeting in the Jerusalem Chamber at 6 p.m., where the details will be explained. Meanwhile, the prospectus of the College is in the Press, and will be available very shortly. Accommodation will be provided at first for about twenty resident men students, and non-resident and women students will also be received; a temporary chapel will be fitted up in one of the rooms to serve till a permanent chapel can be built; and there will be a small resident choir-school for boys, the nucleus of which will be formed with several of the boys from the late Duke of Newcastle's private Choir School at Clumber Park, which is to be closed at the end of the year. Dr. Sydney H. Nicholson will be the first Warden of the College.

Though so much has been accomplished in a very short time, the effort is still largely a venture of faith; for greatly increased support is absolutely necessary if the scheme is to mature and to be placed on a permanent basis. Such help can be given by those who are able and willing to send donations or annual subscriptions; but every church choir in the country has its duty in this matter. Many can benefit directly by what the School has to offer; others should help to bear the financial burden for the sake of those less fortunate than themselves. Therefore every church choir is urged to become affiliated, whether from cathedral, town church, or country village; the obligation is that they definitely undertake to do what they can to promote the cause of good music in church, and that they undertake to support the School to the extent of at least one pound per annum.

Three main points of policy may be mentioned here :

(1.) The School is established to give practical help rather than to criticise.

(2.) The School aims at giving training in Church music of all styles and periods, the simple as well as the more elaborate, and without prejudice in favour of any one type of music or of churchmanship.

(3.) The School offers assistance only to choirs, parishes, or individuals, that become affiliated with it, and does not offer advice except where help is asked.

Full particulars and forms of affiliation can be obtained from the Secretary, S.E.C.M., 105, Gower Street, London, W.C.1.

A. F. HESSE AND HIS ORGAN MUSIC

By Stanley Lucas

Life being short, and music so abundant, it is clear that we cannot hope to do much more than touch the fringes of the whole gigantic musical output. Even in the single department of organ composition, there are necessarily hundreds of works that are never likely to come our way. And of course this impossibility of knowing everything partly accounts for the neglect of certain composers. But only partly, for sometimes they are more or less ignored because we wrongly regard them as, for example, old-fashioned or dull. Word goes round that So-and-So is a musty old fellow, and thereafter he is damned as such, on mere hearsay, by those who lack that ' precious charity which puts itself to the trouble of understanding '—and of finding out the truth for themselves.

Not a few composers are ill-spoken of by players who really know little or nothing of them and their work, but are always ready to express an opinion of the second-hand variety. And among these composers is Hesse. Many of us, with a rooted idea that he is pedantic, dry-as-dust, hopelessly out-of-date, and the rest of it, have long since relegated him to the shelf for those reasons. As a fact, he is a good deal more interesting and far less academic (in the derogatory sense of that term) than is generally supposed. Certainly his music deserves to be more widely-known and played than it is.

This solid—but by no means always stolid—old German has undoubtedly been ' in dusty sequestration wrapt too long,' and those who are over-prone to accept conventional notions without personal investigation of the matter might do worse than remember that, as Bruyère said, ' the converse of what is currently reported about people and things is often the truth.'

Messrs. Augener earn and should have our thanks for publishing recently a selection from Hesse's organ works, in two volumes. The first contains twenty-nine short Preludes and Postludes, the second eleven bigger compositions—the Variations in A and A flat, the Toccata in A flat, and a couple of Preludes and Fugues. Reviewing them, Mr. Harvey Grace said :

> He [Hesse] wrote some admirable music ; his contrapuntal and fugal writing are first-rate ; he could turn out genuine tunes, and in attractive power he is streets ahead of the great army of lesser Germans, such as Rink, Töpfer, Eberling, &c. . . . It may be dreadfully old-fashioned taste, but I have thoroughly enjoyed renewing acquaintance with the best of these works.

For what little it matters, I have been playing Hesse fairly regularly for years, because I like him. Yet I confess that until this review appeared I occasionally had misgivings on the score of my own taste. I have them no longer, since what is good enough for Harvey Grace is good enough for me ; and I shall continue to play Hesse with an easy mind. It is in the hope of giving some slight fillip to his reputation among my fellow organists that I write this article—without apologies.

A few biographical notes may be useful. Adolf Friedrich Hesse, the son of an organ builder, was born at Breslau on August 30, 1809, and died there on August 5, 1863. He received organ, pianoforte, and theoretical lessons from two Breslau organists —Friedrich Wilhelm Berner and E. Köhler. The former was also Köhler's tutor, organist at the Church of St. Elizabeth, Breslau, music-teacher at the College, and later director of the Royal Academical Institute for Church Music. (It is good to know that, thanks to Dr. Sydney Nicholson, this country is now to have a school for the training of Church musicians—including parsons.) Berner was also a fairish composer, though his compositions—mostly sacred—remain chiefly in MS.

In 1827, Hesse became Berner's assistant at St. Elizabeth's, quitting that post at the end of four years on being appointed ' first [principal] organist ' of the Bernhardinerkirche (otherwise the Church of the Bernardines) at Breslau, where he stayed till his death. As a player he won great renown, and attracted no little attention by his performances at St. Eustache, Paris, where, in 1844, he opened the new organ in the presence of a vast congregation. The Parisians are said to have been astounded by his pedalling. In 1851 he came to London and played several of the organs at the old Crystal Palace, then in Hyde Park. Here again he enhanced his already enviable reputation, in spite of the ' unequal temperament ' of some of the instruments, which drew from him an emphatic protest. At home, in Breslau, he was visited by ' a constant stream of admirers from far and near.' For many years he directed the symphony concerts of the Breslau Theatre Band.

His most important compositions are for the organ, and comprise preludes, fugues, fantasias, studies, &c. But he wrote also an oratorio, ' Tobias,' six symphonies, overtures, cantatas, motets, one pianoforte concerto, one string quintet, two string quartets, and pianoforte pieces. Yet, as is the case with Rheinberger, it is by his organ music that he deserves to be and, one is optimistic enough to think, will be remembered.

His ' Practical Organist,' which contained twenty-nine pieces, including the once-familiar ' God Save the King ' Variations, was edited by Lincoln and published years ago by Novello. And a complete collection of the organ works, under the editorship of Charles Steggall, was laid before (then enthusiastic) organists by Messrs. Boosey.

In point of tunefulness, organists on the look-out for something short, melodious, and suitable for service use, can be confidently recommended to buy the first of the two Augener volumes. And recitalists might let us hear from time to time selections from the second (there is a well-known London player who often includes the A major Variations in his programmes).

Hesse's music, or the greater part of it, is almost as effective on a small as on a big organ; and this alone is a pretty sure indication of its merit. It is calculated to serve as a wholesome corrective to some too-prevalent features of modern organ-writing—'pianistic' style, restless tonality, and fidgety registration. It is just blunt, honest, straightforward music. Fine as is so much of the present-day output, there is still, or ought to be, ample room for music that was written at a time when the organ offered less scope for digital display and dazzling 'colouring' than it does now.

Nobody would pretend that Hesse is a great composer, but we can do with plenty of writing of the type in which he is more than passably good. For me, at all events, in my simplicity, one of the choicest virtues of his music is that it seems to breathe a sort of good-natured homeliness; and this, too, is something for which we should be grateful in these days.

Somehow there appears to be growing up a generation of organists whose half-assumed sophistication, while it becomes them badly, prevents them from acknowledging the worthiness of music not written in the style of very up-to-date composers—especially Frenchmen. And by the same token they often fail to recognise, even to themselves, the value of a good, simple bit of music when they see it. The study of Hesse—he is really worth studying—and of the music of our early English organ composers, would do these gentlemen a power of good—technically (as providing a sound, true organ legato style) as well as mentally.

Church and Organ Music

ROYAL COLLEGE OF ORGANISTS

At a Council meeting, held on Saturday, October 13, Dr. E. C. Bairstow was elected President of the College.

H. A. HARDING,
Hon. Secretary.

---

The recently appointed organist of Coventry Cathedral—Dr. Harold Rhodes—has done well, we think, to make a detailed statement of his policy, in the shape of an article in the Cathedral journal (St. Michael's Magazine), entitled 'Music in Worship.' There are Cathedral services that repel by their coldness, owing to the absence of congregational singing; there are others in which one's edification during the singing of the choir is liable to be ended at any moment by the unwarranted joining in by some members of the congregation. Both evils may be avoided by a realisation, on the part of all concerned, that there is a definite place in the Cathedral service, hardly less than in that of the Parish Church, for the singing of the congregation. Dr. Rhodes points out that some music is for the choir alone, and some for congregation and choir. If the congregation is to do its part worthily, some preparation is necessary. He therefore advocates the holding of regular Sunday evening congregational practices before the service. He proposes this, not merely that the singing of familiar music may be better, but in order that the congregation may be taught new tunes:

> 'The necessity of confining the choice of hymn-tunes to those that are well-known, means that the changes have to be rung on a limited number of hymns—good, bad, and indifferent—while scores of magnificent tunes, including many of the finest ever written, remain unsung. Congregational practices would be a means of introducing these into the regular service, with a corresponding enrichment of our range of music and an increase in its spiritual power.'

Dr. Rhodes announces also his intention of organizing the musical resources of the city with a view to the extra-liturgical performance in the Cathedral of fine works for chorus and orchestra. As he has been appointed conductor of the Philharmonic Society, this plan should come to fruition. We hope Coventry folk will give such practical enthusiasm the backing it deserves.

---

A series of recitals is now being given by Mr. W. Irwin-Hunt at St. John's Wood Presbyterian Church (Marlborough Place, Abbey Road) on the second Saturday of each month, at 4 p.m. The programmes are well designed, organ classics and transcriptions being varied by vocal, violin, and pianoforte music. Readers who are interested in the combination of organ and pianoforte should note that the November and January recitals are largely devoted to that form of music-making, the items being Guilmant's Scherzo Capriccioso and Pastorale, Prelude and Wood-Scene from 'Hansel and Gretel,' and the 'Emperor' Concerto.

---

Mr. Herbert W. Sumsion gave the recital at the opening of the new organ at Muswell Hill Congregational Church on September 21. His programme included Bach's Fantasia and Fugue in C minor, Howells's Rhapsody No. 1, and Elgar's Imperial March. Mr. Keith Falkner sang arias by Bach, Schubert, and Dvorák. The new organ, built by Messrs. Walker, is a three-manual of twenty-three stops and twelve pistons.

---

Parry's 'Blest Pair of Sirens' was sung at Holy Trinity, Tulse Hill, during a musical recital after the evening service on October 7. The programme included also Michael Wise's 'Abide with me,' Noble's 'Come, O Thou Traveller unknown,' Bridge's 'God's goodness,' and Mendelssohn's second Organ Sonata. Mr. Henry F. Hall conducted, and Mr. Leslie H. Cox played the organ.

---

We are glad to find that the new edition of the 'Encyclopædia Britannica' includes an up-to-date article of about seven thousand words on the organ from a constructional point of view. The writer is Mr. D. Batigan Verne, whose literary work is well known to readers of this journal. Mr. Verne is editor of Messrs. Willis's house-organ, The Rotunda.

---

Mr. Matthias Turton's many English friends will be interested to hear that he has left his post at St. Andrew's, Chatham, Ontario, and has been appointed to Walmer Road Baptist Church, Toronto. At this Church there is a choir of seventy-five and a large organ. Mr. Turton's new address is 4, Spadina Road, Toronto.

---

Long-service records in the organ-loft are not confined to this country. Miss Jane Reichenberg has just completed sixty years as organist of St. Joseph's (R.C.) Church, Hobart, Tasmania. Warm admiration for her work was expressed at a reception attended by local organists of all denominations.

---

Brahms's 'Requiem' was performed at St. George's Cathedral, Capetown, on September 18, by the Cathedral Choir (augmented) and the Capetown Orchestra. Newspaper report speaks very highly of the work of all concerned. Mr. Alban Hamer conducted.

'Israel in Egypt' was performed in Viewfield Baptist Church, Dunfermline, recently, by the Church choir and an orchestra drawn from the local Amateur Orchestral Society. Mr. A. B. Sheddon conducted.

---

Messrs. Rushworth & Dreaper have reconstructed the organ at All Hallows' Church, Allerton, Liverpool. The instrument is now a three-manual of thirty-five stops and ample accessories.

---

The Walker organ in Richmond (Surrey) Parish Church, built as a 'prepared' organ in 1907, is being overhauled, and the Choir organ inserted, by Messrs. J. W. Walker.

---

Beethoven's Mass in C will be sung, with orchestral accompaniment, at All Saints', Clifton, on November 4, at 11, and Bach's Magnificat on the evening of November 5.

---

The organ at Christ Church, Marylebone (a three-manual Bishop), has been reconstructed and enlarged by Messrs. Bishop.

---

RECITALS

Mr. Alfred Allen, St. Thomas's, Rhyl—Prelude and Fugue in G, Mendelssohn; Variations on an Old English Melody, Geoffrey Shaw; Trio on 'Franconia,' Ernest Farrar; Postlude on 'Martyrs,' Harvey Grace.

Mr. George Ryan, St. Lawrence Jewry—Prelude, Fugue, and Variation, Franck; Scherzo in A flat, Bairstow; Prelude in B minor, Bach.

Miss Emmie Bowman, Parish Church, Barkway—Adagio and Allegro Fugato, Stanley; Chorale Preludes on 'St. Peter,' Darke, and 'Nun danket,' Karg-Elert; Bridal March and Finale, Parry.

Mr. Arthur E. Watts, St. Andrew-by-the-Wardrobe, E.C.—Choral in A minor, Franck; Chorale Prelude on 'St. Mary's,' Charles Wood; Suite Gothique, Boëllmann; Prelude on 'Hampton,' Parry.

Mr. A. M. Hawkins, St. Lawrence Jewry—Reverie on 'University,' Harvey Grace; Adagio in E, Frank Bridge; Cantabile (Symphony No. 6), Widor; Two Sketches, Schumann.

Mr. Cyril Pearce, All Saints', Mundesley-on-Sea—Largo and Fugue in A minor, William Russell; Cradle Song, Harvey Grace; Chorale Prelude, 'Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring,' Bach; Intermezzo and Scherzo, Rheinberger.

Mr. A. C. Edwards, Holy Trinity, Aberystwyth—Fantasia in E minor, Silas; Concerto in B flat, Handel; Fantasia and Fugue in G minor, Bach; Sonata No. 1, Guilmant; Scherzo in G minor, Bossi.

Mr. John Pullein, Cromer Parish Church—Fantasia and Fugue in C minor, Bach; Pastorale, Franck; Two Chorale Preludes, Parry; Tuba Tune, Norman Cocker.

Mr. Leonard Foster, St. Lawrence Jewry—Sonata No. 6, Mendelssohn; Rhapsodie in D, Saint-Saëns; Fugue in E flat, Bach; Maestoso (Sonata in C sharp minor), Harwood.

Mr. C. S. Richards, Hexham Abbey—Fantasia in F, West; Three Chorale Preludes, Charles Wood; Fantasy-Prelude, Macpherson; Symphony No. 1, Vierne; Passacaglia in C minor, Bach.

Mr. Harold E. Atkinson, St. Lawrence Jewry—Caprice, Wolstenholme; Sonata No. 1, Bach; Prelude on the Old 132nd Psalm, Wood.

Mr. Philip Miles, St. Alban-the-Martyr, Westcliff-on-Sea—Pastorale, Bossi; Prelude and Fugue in G minor, Bach; Two Canons, Philip Miles; Intermezzo (Sonata No. 8), Rheinberger.

Mr. W. E. Fairclough, Christ Church, Folkestone—Rhapsody on a Breton Melody, Saint-Saëns; Prelude on 'Puer nobis nascitur,' Healey Willan; Evening Song, Bairstow; Sonata No. 1, Borowski.

RECITALS—continued

Miss Lilian Coombes, National Institute for the Blind—Epilogue, Healey Willan; 'A Fancy,' John Stanley; Pièce Idéale, J. Weatherdon.

Mr. G. Stephen Evans, Old Cathedral Church, Llanbadarn Fawr, Aberystwyth—Overture ('Semele'); Sonata in the Style of Handel, Wolstenholme; Prelude and Fugue in C minor, Bach.

Mr. G. W. Harris Sellick, Middleton Parish Church—Prelude on 'Eventide,' Parry; Sonata in G, Elgar; 'Symonds Yat,' F. H. Wood; Marche Héroïque, Brewer.

---

APPOINTMENTS

Mr. C. E. Blyton Dobson, choirmaster and organist, Holy Trinity, Nottingham.

Mr. A. Martin Hawkins, choirmaster and organist, Holy Trinity, Upper Tooting, S.W.

Mr. H. F. Latham, choirmaster and organist, All Hallows', Bristol.

Mr. J. H. Lush, choirmaster and organist, Parish Church (St. Mary's), Portsea.

Mr. William Marsden, choirmaster and organist, All Hallows' Parish Church, Tottenham.

Mr. Bertram J. Orsman, choirmaster and organist, Church of St. Alban-the-Martyr, Holborn, E.C.

Mr. William Rains, choirmaster and organist, St. Andrew's Church, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada.

Mr. Mervyn Williams, choirmaster and organist, Waterford Cathedral.

---

THE LEEDS FESTIVAL

A good deal of adverse comment has been made on the absence of any novelties from the programme of the foremost English Festival. It has been an important feature in the policy of the Leeds Festival in the past to bring forward new works, and it is plainly more healthy for our musical life if we can employ Festival resources either to revive some forgotten work of the past, or to attune our ears into sympathy with modern life through something more congruous with it than Brahms, who was the composer most generously represented at Leeds last month. There are, however, two replies to this quite valid objection. Sir Thomas Beecham expressed one when he said that it all depended on whether you could find any new works worth bringing forward, and the other is that it is worth while sometimes to hear routine works superlatively well done. The justification of the last Leeds Festival was that it proved that Beethoven's Mass in D can be sung, and that the London Symphony Orchestra can, with the allowance of a few lapses, be made to play really well. Choral singing is not one of the things in English music over which we have to shake our heads at the present time, but it would be wonderfully inspiring if the Leeds Choir could be sent on tour throughout England to show that power is possible without screaming sopranos or raucous tenors, that not all basses are baritones, and that without the mechanical discipline of foreign choirs balance of tone and intelligent interpretation can produce the most satisfying as well as the most thrilling performances.

The choir, then, justified the Festival and demonstrated its own worth in Sir Thomas Beecham's reading of 'The Messiah' (no small feat for hardened Yorkshiremen who annually overwork that unfortunate oratorio as no Southerner outside the Royal Choral Society would have the shame to do), in a brilliant performance of Brahms's 'Requiem,' in a supple and sensitive performance of Delius's 'Sea Drift' (the nearest approach to a modern choral work except Bax's little motet 'Mater Ora Filium,' repeated from the last Festival), and in the Mass in D, which proved once for all that, close-wrought and intense as it is, it is still music that may be heard, not merely read, to be understood. The Mass in D was followed after lunch at the same concert by Schubert's C major Symphony. There were other notable moments in the Festival, but this concert was, from beginning to end, on a level of such sustained inspiration as to last in the memory for a lifetime. The bigness of Beethoven, interpreted with Sir Hugh Allen's breadth of vision, the purity of Schubert, played with the finish that Sir Thomas Beecham alone of English conductors can command—are what we seek in many concerts but rarely find outside Festival conditions. No one doubts the greatness of the Mass, but most of us have had to struggle with it in many hearings before its sublimity stood out clear. No one questions the purity of Schubert's Symphony, but at the Promenades a version of it was played into which mud in the shape of extra drum-notes had been deliberately inserted. Those who were fortunate enough to be at Leeds now know what is the essence of those great works.

A concert consisting entirely of Cantatas and Concertos of Bach brough us nearer to disappointment than anything else. Sir Hugh Allen took some time to grip the orchestra and, since the choir had not much to do, we went from one short work of Bach's to another without the spell finding time to work. Matters were not helped by the shapeless pianoforte-playing in the fifth 'Brandenburg' Concerto, and though the big unaccompanied choruses 'Be not afraid' and 'Now shall the grace' (Cantata No. 50) were nobly, though somewhat stolidly, sung, it was not till after lunch, when 'The Heavens shout' (Cantata No. 31) came on, that we got as far into the heart of Bach as we had expected to get in 'Wachet betet' (Cantata No. 70), with which the concert opened. One heard regrets expressed that time was 'wasted' on the 'Peasant' Cantata but, since it was a day of small works, the choice seemed more than justified because it throws such a delightful side-light on Bach's character. Miss Dorothy Silk and Mr. Keith Falkner seemed equally at home with him in this as in his Sunday moods.

Vaughan Williams's 'Pastoral Symphony' was not a disappointment exactly, but it must be mentioned in any account which attempts to balance the great experiences of the Festival with the comparative failures. I prophesy that in five years' (or less) time Sir Thomas Beecham will have come to understand Vaughan Williams as he now understands Delius. But he was manifestly out of sympathy with it, and even when, as the result of some curious noises in the first movement, he had recourse for the first time to a printed score the playing had less than its proper confidence and tranquillity. All the other Symphonies conducted by Sir Thomas, even including that ill-scored oddity the 'Rhenish' Symphony of Schumann, were presented in a manner such as we rarely enjoy at Queen's Hall. The L.S.O. was playing under the same conductors for a fortnight on end, and, though a trumpeter was once missing at an important moment, he had not sent any deputy to break up the ensemble thus obtained. So that Beethoven's second Symphony, played like Beethoven and not like overgrown Mozart, the Schubert already described, Tchaikovsky's No. 4, with all its daintiness, the great Double Concerto of Brahms (in which Miss May and Miss Beatrice Harrison played the solo parts with the requisite mutual understanding and the spacious style), and Strauss's grandiose 'Ein Heldenleben' were all played with a precision and vividness that is too rare in ordinary experience of British orchestral playing.

A number of small modern works were inserted by Sir Thomas Beecham into the very conservative scheme originally drafted by the committee. These were Lord Berners's amusing (so-called) Fugue in C minor, Walton's subtler, more satirical, but equally entertaining 'Façade' Suite, and a modest (and pleasant) March by Henry Gibson, founded on the Gaelic pipetune 'Temptation.' This had been played as an interlude during the last Russian Ballet season, but was otherwise new. Some numbers of Stravinsky's Ballet Suite 'Apollo Musagetes' were played and proved nugatory and insipid.

The soloists were mostly singers and players with Festival experience behind them. Mr. Denis Noble, however, who undertook the long narration in Delius's 'Sea-Drift' and a similar but smaller part in Parry's 'Job,' added to his reputation, for if his voice is not very sympathetic in quality he has style. Mr. Keith Falkner was excellent in Bach, and brings the right qualities to 'Job'; he has established his claim to be a singer of Festival rank. It was good to hear Miss May Harrison once more; her clean tone and intellectual outlook are valuable in Bach and Brahms.

It remains to collect together a few scattered impressions of the smaller choral works which added to the pleasure and interest of programmes in which big things predominated. Beginning at the end, one must congratulate Mr. Norman Strafford, the chorusmaster, who conducted Parry's ever-green and most appropriate 'Blest Pair of Sirens.' He did not quite succeed in Bax's motet in getting the flexibility he desired, but his work in making the choir the efficient and delicately responsive instrument it proved itself to be in the hands of its chief conductors was plain to be seen all through, and his appearance on the platform in these two works at the last concert only made his excellence as a conductor the plainer. At the first evening concert Handel's 'Ode to St. Cecilia' was revived. It is a delightful work, but Sir Thomas Beecham's re-scoring, and his retention of the feeble lute (played by Mr. Carl Dolmetsch), made an incongruous medley. In this work, as in 'The Messiah,' one felt that while Sir Thomas's intentions in the matter of tempi are excellent, he sometimes gives us too much of a good thing, and that pace has its dangers. In Brahms's 'Requiem,' strangely enough, he was not quick enough in the middle section of the second number, and while it was a wonderful performance in all the vivid and consolatory parts, it was open to the criticism that he hardly realised how strong in Brahms's mind was the inconsistent and opposite idea of Fate.

Debussy's 'The Blessed Damozel' was sung in French, which was perhaps rather a pity; it is a lovely little work. Haydn's 'Spring,' from 'The Seasons,' made a delightful episode. Berlioz's 'Te Deum' is one of those astonishing works that one likes to hear because they are like nothing else. Through it runs the grand, flamboyant spirit that shows the genius and at the same time the hollowness of its composer's thought. No wonder Berlioz has always been impossible to place. Certainly his 'Te Deum' is, but it is, at any rate, in place at a big Festival.

And so, though there was no novelty, there was at any rate abundant variety of interest at a Festival which at least one auditor enjoyed to the pitch of almost continuous excitement. F. H.

ORGANISTS' LONG SERVICE ROLL OF HONOUR

By Charles W. Pearce

May I express regret that the final 'n' was omitted from the name of Miss Gudgen in List IV., No. 263, last month? Since List IV. was printed, I have been informed that both Dr. J. Kendrick Pyne and Mr. George Riseley have retired from active service. The former is now resident at Ilford (Essex).

It is evident that there is a humorous side to everything; from which even such a Roll as this is by no means exempt. To a clerical correspondent who said that his opinion of forty years' continuous service from the same organist could perhaps be fittingly expressed in the words of Psalm xcv. 10, I replied that an organist's audi alteram partem view of clerical ways in general was that stated in Psalm cxxxix. 5.

In thanking those readers of the Musical Times who have assisted me in the compilation of these Lists, may I solicit further help from organ-tuners and others who in their periodic visits to various churches in different parts of the country may be able to discover long-service records which deserve inclusion in the Organists' Long Service Roll of Honour? Letters, &c., containing legibly written particulars, should reach me not later than November 10, at 'The Paddocks,' Ferndown, Wimborne, Dorset.

LIST IV.—CATHEDRAL, COLLEGIATE, PAROCHIAL, AND OTHER ORGANISTS

(FOR NOT LESS THAN FORTY YEARS, CONTINUOUSLY, IN THE SAME APPOINTMENT)

| No. | Name | Appointment | Years of Tenure |
|---|---|---|---|
| 277 | Bairstow, Jonathan ... ... ... ... | St. Paul's Church, Denholme Gate, Bradford (Yorks), 1875-1918 ... ... ... ... | 43 |
| 278 | Bonstead, William ... ... ... ... | St. Andrew's Kirk, Ballarat (Victoria, Australia), 1887 ... ... ... ... (at present) | 41 |
| 279 | Burn, William (son of the previous organist) ... | Parish Church, Kendal (Westmorland), 1738-91 | 53 |
| 280 | Grant, Charles John (uncle of W. J. G., organ-builder, Frome) ... ... ... ... ... | Parish Church of St. Mary, Berkley (Glos), 1878-1918 ... ... ... ... ... | 40 |
| 281 | Heap, Alfred ... ... ... ... ... | Parish Church, Pollokshields, Glasgow (Scotland), 1881-1922 ... ... ... ... ... | 41 |
| 282 | Hendry, Rowland (died, November 14, 1909) ... | Parish Church, Bradford-on-Avon (Wilts), 1866-1909 ... ... ... ... ... ... | 43 |
| 283 | Hillier, J. T. ... ... ... ... ... | Parish Church, Swanage (Dorset), 1883 (at present) | 45 |
| 284 | Hirst, Samuel C. ... ... ... ... ... | Parish Church of St. Mary, Dundee (Scotland), 1865-1915 ... ... ... ... ... | 50 |
| 285 | Hume, Arthur William Montague ... ... | Parish Church of St. Margaret, Barking (Essex), 1874-1917 ... ... ... ... ... | 43 |
| 286 | Johnson, James T. (voluntary service) ... ... | Baptist Church, Kidderminster (Worcs), 1872 (at present) | 56 |
| 287 | Leighton, Thomas ... ... ... ... ... | Christ Church, Latchford, Warrington (Lancs), 1877 ... ... ... ... (at present) | 51 |
| 288 | Mason, Richard ... ... ... ... ... | St. Augustine's Church, Shaw Street, Liverpool, 1877 ... ... ... ... (at present) | 51 |
| 289 | Millington, Henry ... ... ... ... ... | Parish Church, Trowbridge (Wilts), 1864-1906 ... | 42 |
| 290 | Oakshott, George (grandfather of the organist of All Saints', Castle Cary (Som.), appointed in 1927, at the age of fourteen) ... ... ... | St. Philip's Church, Reigate (Surrey), 1883 (at present) | 45 |
| 291 | Parkin, William (father-in-law of C. E. Blyton Dobson, F.R.C.O.) ... ... ... ... | Primitive Methodist Church, Radcliffe Street, Nottingham, 1887 ... ... (at present) | 41 |
| 292 | Peacock, H. E. (violinist and vocalist) ... ... | St. Mary's (Episcopal) Church, Glengate, Kirriemuir Angus, Forfar (Scotland), 1885 (at present) | 43 |
| 293 | Prosser, Henry T. ... ... ... ... ... | Parish Church, Rode, Frome (Som.), 1865-1915... | 50 |
| 294 | Scarisbrick, Thomas ... ... ... ... | Parish Church, Kendal (Westmorland), 1822-69 | 47 |
| 295 | Smith, Owen ... ... ... ... ... | Wesleyan Church, Raunds (Northants), 1854-1903 | 49 |
| 296 | Watkin, George ... ... ... ... ... | Holy Trinity Church, Murton (Durham), 1878 (at present) | 50 |
| 297 | Winder, Smallwood ... ... ... ... | St. Thomas's Church, Kendal (Westmorland), 1883 ... ... ... ... (at present) | 45 |

Letters to the Editor

THE TORONTO MUS. BAC.

Sir,—My attention has been called to a letter in your September issue, written by Mr. T. H. Hill, of Buckland, Dover. Mr. Hill is apparently incensed at the idea that any semblance of recognition should be given in England to musical degrees conferred by the University of Toronto, implying that such degrees fall more or less into that category of 'bogus' distinctions against which the musical profession in England has been compelled to wage so vigorous a war. It is unfortunate that Mr. Hill should have seen fit to express himself in such unmeasured terms without acquainting himself with the facts. The University of Toronto, which has during the past hundred years stood for all that is best in Canadian life and has nurtured leaders in every profession, stands in need of no vindication against such attacks as that of Mr. Hill. Yet, Sir, in case others among your readers may still be unable to distinguish between a state of things existing in the early 'nineties and that existing to-day, I shall be obliged if you will allow me sufficient space to make the matter clear.

The unfortunate policy of Trinity College in conferring musical degrees through an agency and in absentia upon Old Country musicians did, indeed, lead to the entirely justifiable protests of Sir John Stainer and Dr. T. L. Southgate, quoted by your correspondent, and subsequently to the establishment of the Union of Graduates in Music. Regarding the standards exacted by Trinity College thirty-five years ago, I am unable to speak at first hand. I have, however, the assurance of at least one well-qualified musician, who holds a Mus. D. degree from the University of Dublin, that it was by no means as low as was generally supposed. In the case of the two gentlemen whose names appear on Dr. Pearce's list, their possession of the F.R.C.O. diploma should convince even the most insular Englishman that they are not entirely lacking in musicianship. Be that as it may, the policy of conferring degrees by examination in absentia is one which no one at the present day would defend—certainly not I. That policy, however, had nothing to do with the University of Toronto, which has never conferred any degrees under such conditions, and which has always insisted upon a high standard in its examinations.

The University of Trinity College remained an entirely separate body until the year 1903; several years before its amalgamation with the University of Toronto it had ceased to confer degrees of the type mentioned, and since 1903 it has ceased to confer separate degrees, except in Divinity. The abandonment of the policy objected to was brought about largely through the instrumentality of Dr. Albert Ham, a musician whose name is honourably known in English musical circles, and whose long and valued connection with the Faculty of Music of Toronto University has proved a source of great strength.

Mr. Hill suggests that Dr. Pearce, in listing these degrees (in your August, not your July number, by the way), implies that they are to be regarded as 'quite equal' to those of Oxford and Cambridge. Had Dr. Pearce omitted the names of the universities there might have been some cause for confusion; as it is, the matter is made clear and your readers are free to 'recognise' or not to 'recognise' such degrees as they see fit.

Regarding the value of Toronto degrees, it might perhaps be more fitting on my part to allow others to speak; nevertheless, as one who has gained both Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc. degrees at Oxford by examination, and who has for some years past been engaged as an examiner at Toronto, I feel myself in a position to testify that our standards here are exceptionally high. The requirements of any University Calendar are not necessarily an indication of a high standard, but it may not be out of place to remark that in this instance they are, if anything, more exacting than those of most British universities. Anyone may verify this by applying to the Registrar for a Calendar. Nearly all our examiners are holders of English musical degrees, the value of which is better appreciated here than is, apparently, the value of Canadian degrees in England. This is not surprising when one considers the comparative age of the two countries and the fairly large proportion of Old Country musicians resident here. When I add that the proportion of successful candidates for the final examinations last May was less than 20 per cent.—a fact that is, no doubt, to be deplored from many points of view—I give at least an indication of a desire on the part of the University to guard jealously the prestige of her name. Mr. Hill may be assured that anyone coveting this particular 'Colonial' degree will not be able to obtain it 'through the post,' and that the achievement of such a desire will not be accomplished without the aspirant's tasting to the full the joys and sorrows of hard work. As to 'expense,' although Mr. Hill has seen fit to raise the question, I do not propose to waste my time in searching the schedules of different universities for purposes of comparison; if fees happen to be lower here than in England, it is obviously to the advantage of the serious student of music, who is, frequently, 'as many young barristers are, an impecunious party.'

In conclusion, I must thank Mr. Hill for giving me an opportunity to remove an impression which, I fear, still prevails in some of the musical backwaters of England, although I am happy to say that I have found no traces, among the leaders of English musical life, of the somewhat offensive attitude which Mr. Hill sees fit to adopt.

Whether Toronto degrees in music are 'recognised' in England is a matter which, so far as I know, has never been discussed by the principal body concerned, namely, the Union of Graduates in Music. It is obvious that for geographical reasons, Toronto is not included among the universities whose graduates are admitted to membership. I have yet to learn that the reasons are other than geographical. If, at any time, the Union of Graduates in Music should decide to alter its policy and include in its membership holders of degrees conferred by universities outside the British Isles, it will doubtless examine the credentials of each university with the greatest care. I, for one, would have no fear of the result so far as Toronto is concerned. For the present, however, the question is of minor importance, for the proportion of Canadian musicians in England is very small, and we in Canada can well assess the value of our educational institutions for ourselves. We, also, are afflicted with holders of 'bogus' degrees and diplomas—some of them, I regret to say, emanating from England—but whether 'recognised' or no, we shall continue to demand from our students a musical standard of which we have no reason to be ashamed.—Yours, &c.,

Ernest MacMillan, Mus. Doc. (Oxon.), F.R.C.O.
(Dean of the Faculty of Music, University of Toronto).
Toronto Conservatory of Music.

---

Sir,—I was much surprised to read (in your October issue) that Dr. C. W. Pearce is in favour of having the in absentiâ Toronto Mus. Bac. degrees, granted many years ago through an agency set up in this country, recognised, and thus placed on an equality with degrees granted by our home universities, such as Oxford, Cambridge, and Durham.

Dr. Pearce says that he has retained his ad eundem Toronto Mus. Doc., and seems to suggest that if that degree is worth having, the Toronto Mus. Bac. must be worth having too. But this is not so. An ad eundem degree (granted on the strength of Dr. Pearce's Cambridge Mus. Doc.) is one thing; and a Mus. Bac. granted to candidates not already holding a similar degree, after some sort of examination not held at the university granting it, quite another!

Dr. Pearce thinks that 'it is always better to let bygones be bygones,' and expresses the hope that the proposal made to the Union of Graduates in Music five years ago (which would apparently include recognition of this Toronto in absentiâ Mus. Bac.) may be realised before long. Surely not! To recognise degrees granted by Dominion universities held within recent years under proper test-conditions would be one thing; to recognise degrees obtained through the post many years ago, quite another.

If the latter are to be recognised, then, instead of spending much time and money in obtaining a genuine home degree, all would-be musical graduates should obtain one from America (or some other place now granting them without examination at the university), and then wait for some future Dr. Pearce to arise in years to come and get it accepted as genuine.

And holders of 'diplomas' from proprietary colleges of music should take heart! Stick to your 'letters,' hoods and falsehoods; if you wait long enough your 'slices of the alphabet' may be classed as quite equal to—the Toronto in absentiâ Mus. Bac.!—Yours, &c.,

T. H. Hill.
St. Andrew's Parish Church, Buckland-in-Dover.

---

Sir,—Though undesirous of entering into controversy, I beg leave to offer a few comments on the letter re 'The Toronto Mus. Bac.' in the September issue of your paper.

Personally, I should not compare the Toronto degree in music with that of Oxford or Cambridge, but neither, I imagine, would Dr. C. W. Pearce. Possibly your correspondent meant to imply no such comparison, and used the word 'latter' to apply strictly to the '&c.' of his sentence.

As to musical or other degrees 'obtained' through the post, I have nothing to say, and must confess ignorance of the fact that such procedure is—if it be—possible! If postal tuition for a degree examination be meant, then I fail to see why such should be decried between this country and the Dominions or America, any more than within the bounds of one and the same country.

What specially induces me to write is a desire for fair play. I presume conditions are similar in other Dominions to those obtaining in Canada; of the latter country I can speak only as I found it, and with the realisation that maybe my experience was limited.

However, whilst holding an appointment on the pianoforte staff of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, which institution is the pioneer of its kind in the country, and owns the University of Toronto (since 1921) as its governing body, I had the opportunity of noting something of the state of education generally, and of music in particular, at Toronto. As a result of such observation I can testify that whatever may have been the condition of things thirty-five years ago, at the present time there is very sound and progressive work being carried on at Toronto by both the institutions mentioned. A span of thirty-five years has made a huge difference in most ways, and in my estimation Canada is leaping forward in every sense of progress and development; she at least wastes little time on depreciation, and concerns herself chiefly with the appreciation of the traditions she acknowledges as British—and methinks in particular as English—and in following up and developing as far as possible all that appeals to her as finest and most worthy therein. —Yours, &c.,

IVY BRUNSKILL.

232, Blackburn Road,
Accrington, Lancs.

CUTTING OUT THE MIDDLEMAN

SIR,—My letter in the Musical Times for September has called forth quite a big batch of letters in support of the idea, but as they advance no new suggestions, I need not trouble you with them.

An agent who, I feel convinced, does a bona fide business, writes a serious answer; he asks if artists did advertise their addresses and, in consequence, received letters from concert-givers, would they answer the letters sent them? Curiously enough he says, 'We can't get them to reply. We have just pulled up a vocalist for taking twenty days to answer a request for terms.

Another sentence is worth quotation: 'If an artist is to get up his work and keep his voice in good trim he has no time . . . to do his correspondence'! But the gem of the letter is, 'We have an application for the terms of a singer. We have spent much time, money, and labour to get his address, but so far without success'; and further, 'I have been connected with artists for nearly forty years, and . . . found the majority of them distinctly bad correspondents.'

If the artists would do as I suggested, this worthy agent would find his labours greatly lightened and his (legitimate) task made much easier. If an artist cannot (or will not) find time to answer a business letter, he cannot be surprised if his career is unsuccessful. 'God helps those who help themselves' applies to artists equally with business men.—Yours, &c.,

S. MIDGLEY.

12, Oak Avenue,
Bradford.

ORGANISTS' SECURITY OF TENURE

SIR,—I read with interest (and sympathy for the victim) your article and accompanying letter on the above subject. My sympathy arose because I had been similarly treated. Although at the time possessing no actual diplomas or other qualifications, I had had experience as a parish church and cathedral chorister (I was at Lincoln under Dr. Bennett), and was preparing for the usual examinations. I, also, had favourable comments on my work made to me by the vicar, and was appearing to give every satisfaction.

Imagine my feelings when, after a choir practice, I was calmly told that I must resign. The vicar gave as his reason the fact that I was not old enough, although I was eighteen, and it was only a large village. I submitted to his decision after a struggle, and was told to accept three months' payment in lieu of notice. This was because, before he dismissed me, he had already appointed my successor, whose only qualification was that he was a B.A. (his Church work was quite a side-line and an afterthought). Of course, the B.A. may be an excellent musical (!) degree. I agree with you that there ought to be a legal remedy for this sort of thing.—Yours, &c.,

J. L. BROUGH.

51, Norfolk Street,
Boston, Lincs.

SIR,—I read with amazement the account (October Musical Times, p. 923) of the scandalous treatment accorded to 'an unusually well-equipped all-round musician' by his vicar and churchwardens.

I hope our leading musicians and others who are frequently invited to recommend organists for vacant positions will use every endeavour to see that the victim of this ill-treatment (a Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., and L.R.A.M.) be re-appointed to a suitable and congenial post where his gifts will be duly appreciated.—Yours, &c.,

HERBERT HODGE.

[Readers who ask why the R.C.O. does nothing in this matter may be reminded that the College made a strong effort in 1917, whey they organized and presented a petition to the Archbishops of Canterbury and York. The signatories included the then President (Sir Alexander Mackenzie), the Council, Cathedral organists other than those on the Council, representatives of Organists' Associations, &c. On November 9, 1917, the Archbishop of Canterbury received a deputation, consisting of Drs. Harding, Harford Lloyd, Richards, Macpherson, and Shinn, Prof. Buck, and Mr. S. W. Pilling, representing the National Union of Organists' Associations. A verbatim report of the proceedings was issued by the College, and perhaps copies may still be had. The matter was discussed pretty fully in the Musical Times of August, 1922, but we will gladly open our columns to any practical suggestions, briefly and temperately expressed.—EDITOR.]

THE LARYNX AGAIN

SIR,—Perhaps you will insert a few words from one who is neither scientist nor musician, but who does possess a larynx, which he has long misused, and is now learning to treat properly. For many years I preached in a fashion which threw a strain upon my throat, and I was not always successful in making myself heard. I am now learning, under the tuition of your correspondent, Mr. E. C. White, not to pull my larynx (whether up, down, or in any other direction), but to let the poor thing alone, and to produce my voice from the sinuses. My larynx is now enjoying a prolonged and, I hope, permanent rest-cure. In the meantime, I can preach without strain or fatigue even in a good-sized church, and have reason to believe that I am heard easily even at the end of the building.—Yours, &c.,

W. R. WHATELY (M.A.).

NEED BOYS' VOICES BREAK?

SIR,—It has been said that religion, politics, and voice-production are controversial subjects to which there is no finality. The language of science and the language of æsthetics are different. The two cannot be spoken at once. The attempt to do so means confusion. As an example we have the terminology of vocalism. There is no science of voice-production, but there are many conflicting views. Nobody has yet succeeded in discovering exactly how the voice is made.

Now here is a nice question: Ought boys' voices to break? By well-understood methods it is possible to produce good tone from the average choir-boy. But when Nature begins to make laryngeal and other adjustments on her own account, boys have to cease singing, and later on begin again. Some voices settle down gradually, others collapse more or less. Is not the breaking or cracking of the boy's voice due to the effort to continue singing at too high a pitch? Would not all boys' voices settle down gradually if the upper notes were discarded soon enough, and the downward extension encouraged when the lower notes begin to display a firmer timbre?

There will be no rush on the part of choirmasters to experiment, but nevertheless, the lack of male vocalists, especially tenors, for choral societies may possibly be due to the uniform treatment of boys' voices, when Nature decrees that each is an individual. —Yours, &c.,

W. R. LEAVER.

77, St. Andrew's Drive, Skegness.

GIULIO MORETTI: A CORRECTION

SIR,—I suppose you have few subscribers who can claim to have been such so far back as 1875, but I have within the last few days seen the bound copy of your intensely useful publication for that year, and every year I have religiously bound these (some I regret to find have been stolen in moving house).

In the issue of this month you have given a notice of the death of Maestro Giulio (not Guilio, as persistently altered) Moretti.

I wish to correct an error as to his age, which you gave in your October issue as seventy-six. His daughters write to me to state that he was born on August 7, 1845, at Rome, and that he studied music at St. Cecilia in that city, and for many years sang in the principal opera houses of Italy, having a magnificent bass voice. I may, perhaps, be permitted to add that he had many notable pupils, the best known here being Giovanni Zenatello (who sang in 'Otello' at Covent Garden as lately as 1926), Giuseppe Maggi, Signora Norelli, Alexander Bevan, Elizabeth Burgess, Reginald Somerville, Cynlais Gibbs, Stuart Edwards, Conway Dixon, and many others. As I was so intimately acquainted with the late famous teacher, I should deem it a favour if you would supplement the notice so far as you are able, as I am sure it would be very gratifying to his daughters.—Yours, &c.,

18, Bina Gardens, S.W.5. ARMINE BEVAN.

'BACK' TO BACH

SIR,—At the risk of being permanently classed as 'one of those people who are always writing to the Musical Times' (a little lower than the angels who are perpetually writing to The Times), I must ask you for further space in which to point out a confusion of thought which appears to me to be inherent in a remark made by the writer of last September's 'Occasional Notes,' and which is current enough otherwise to be worth a certain amount of public exposure.

Apropos of Mr. Arnold Bax's denunciation of the 'Back to Bach' movement, your writer says: 'There is too much "going back" among composers to-day. . . . Worst of all . . . going back to Hucbald. Why not a little farther?' It is clearly implied that going back, historically, is a retrograde tendency, and the more retrograde, the further you go back.

But chronological succession must never be confused with spiritual priority. In music, of all things in the world, everything that matters is timeless. Some composers, and some listeners, of to-day may be going back to Bach in conscious reaction from the hectic emotionalism with which they identify modern music and also, in some degree or other, the work of 19th-century composers. I would suggest, however, that the majority of those who are now, in apparently increasing numbers, joining in the Bach movement, do so in the considered belief that when Byrd and Mozart and Wagner, and the rest, have each thrilled and impressed us in their own unique and marvellous way, there remains about Bach's music a concentration and unity of purpose, a degree of spiritual exaltation, which no other composer has yet touched. In a word, his is the music which goes the furthest. We may go back to Bach (or to any other composer we care to name) as to that which is fundamental and 'from the beginning,' and at the same time he may remain the last and most refreshing name in the whole account of our musical experience. The Bach movement has chosen Bach, then, not because he is so much behind our own time, but because he is so much in advance of it. All men of genius are visionaries to some extent, and Bach, who pierced through many of the mists of his own time, is still seen to be moving ahead of the point to which most of us are able to penetrate, with all the superior advantages of our longer cultural inheritance. And the 'Back to Hucbald' movement, if any, is by no means analogous, Hucbald having been (unless my musical scholarship is at fault) a great professor but not a great practitioner of the musical art, though, like some musicians of to-day, he may well have been unaware of the fact.

Further, living composers who feel that they will be lucky if they add as much to our musical experience as Bach did, may reasonably inquire as to the methods by which he advanced so rapidly from fugue to fugue, and cantata to cantata, until the good became the supreme. But not without the exercise of their intelligence, if I may say so! The study of the Chorale-Preludes, for example, will encourage them, not necessarily to write for the organ, or in fugal form, or with a 'programme,' or using chromatic harmony, but rather to experiment patiently on popular material (provided it is congenial), not relying too much on colour-effects (the organ being the most colourless instrument in existence), and, on the other hand, taking pains to vary the structural plan according to the working material, and to carry it out thoroughly and at the same time poetically, welcoming what expressive chords uncompromising counterpoint may bring. And so with the infinite variety of the Organ Fugues, and the '48,' and the Passions. . . . Well, if works such as these do not assist composers in that patient probing for their finest selves on which their artistic success must depend, I am no judge of musical character. At any rate, J. S. B.'s pupils have included such minor composers as W. A. Mozart, L. van Beethoven, R. Wagner, J. Brahms, and C. Franck.—Yours, &c.,

A. E. F. DICKINSON.

[Mr. Dickinson has missed the point of our 'Occasional Note.' In the sense expounded by Mr. Dickinson we went 'back to Bach' when we were a mere nipper, and have stayed there. But we object to the 'going back' to any old composer, even John Sebastian himself, if the result is to lead us to adopt his idiom. Nothing is easier for an average well-taught student than to write like any or all of the dead composers—so far as idiom is concerned. Hence the recent—and still active—stream of new works made aggressively 'English' by the liberal use of Tudor clashes and false relations; the sham mediæval motets that exploit a few modal cadences and primitive contrapuntal methods; and Chorale Preludes on typically English hymn-tunes, written in the style of Bach, oblivious of the misfit in styles, and blind to the fact that the result is merely the Bach letter without the spirit.—EDITOR.]

SOME SCHUBERT CORRECTIONS

SIR,—One or two little slips in the articles on Schubert in the Musical Times of August and September may, perhaps, be corrected, for although unimportant in themselves they are likely to be repeated through having appeared in your valuable magazine.

Schubert's C minor Symphony, the E flat Trio, and the Violin Fantasia are all said (p. 690 and p. 788) to have been composed in his last year. The date of the first was 1816, and that of the two other works 1827.

Is the fifth paragraph on p. 689 quite accurate? Salieri, the musical director of the Court chapel, observing the choir-boy's talent, got Ruziczka, the conductor of the school orchestra, to give him lessons. Later on, Salieri himself took him as a private pupil. But is it known that he thought Schubert knew all Ruziczka could teach him?

The article speaks of ten Symphonies (p. 689). We know the seven finished and the two unfinished (E and B minor). Where is the tenth?

The translation of the Drinking Song from 'Antony and Cleopatra' used by Schubert was not by his friend Mayrhofer, but by Ferdinand von Mayerhofer. The translation of 'Hark, hark, the lark' was not by Mayrhofer, but by A. W. von Schlegel; and that of the songs from 'Ivanhoe' and 'The Pirate' not by Storck but by Baron Craigher.

What is the sonnet by Dante referred to on p. 788?—Yours, &c.,

SCHUBERTIAN.

'COMPOSER'S NAME WANTED'

Sir,—Your correspondent Mr. H. Stubington inquires concerning the composer of six Concertos in the keys of C, F, D, G, B flat, and E flat. They were composed by J. S. Schroeter.

I have an old volume of these Concertos (no doubt similar to your correspondent's), with the title-page intact. This title-page reads as follows:

'Six Concertos for the Harpsichord or Pianoforte, with Accompanyments for Two Violins, a Tenor and Bass. Composed and Dedicated to T. E. Banker, Esqr., by J. S. Schroeter. London. Opera V. Price 15*s*. Printed for Willm. Napier, No. 474, Strand. N.B.—The Harpsichord Part of the above Concertos may be had separate, price 10*s*. 6*d*., and the Accompanyments, price 5*s*.'

I will not vouch for the accuracy of the name 'T. E. Banker, Esq.,' as it is so excessively ornamented with flourishes that it is difficult to read, but the composer's name is quite clear in large, plain capitals.—Yours, &c.,

104, Fulton Road, Walkley, Sheffield. Henry Cooper.

---

Sir,—Could you or any of your readers inform me as to the composer or publisher of 'England's Glory'? I have tried many music shops without success.—Yours, &c., W. H. H. Peters.

111, Stroud Green Road, N.4.

---

THE SOCIETY OF AUTHORS

Sir,—We do not propose to take up your space by replying in detail to Mr. Herbert Thring's personalities. What we ask from the Society of Authors is a definite pronouncement upon certain features of musical copyright which its accredited agent does not attempt to deal with, presumably because he is not able to do so. The mere enumeration of the many prominent authors and playwrights who constitute the Committee of Management of the Society of Authors leaves us quite cold.

Personally, we attach no value to names. We only attach value to the use those in high places make of them.

Obviously, literary property is the principal concern of the Authors' Society. On the other hand, the Society does include a certain number of composers among its members.

We therefore definitely ask the Society of Authors:

1. What steps has it taken, or is it taking, to protect the composer against the confiscation of a free market, by gramophone-record manufacturers, for the exploitation of his brain property?
2. What steps did it ever take to assist in the suppression of the music piracies which at one time threatened to annihilate music composers' copyright altogether?
3. Has it taken a single step to secure for composers those performing rights in their music to which by law they are entitled?

Under the circumstances, by what title does Mr. Thring interfere in the composers' business?

Music composers are notoriously poor, not because of the villainy of music publishers, but because their creations, although just as essential to the enjoyment and relaxation of their fellow-citizens as books, can only be enjoyed through audition. Every member of the public, presumably, can read. What percentage of the public can play the pianoforte or any other musical instrument? That is where the justice of the performing fee for music comes in. Meanwhile, to protect such rights as the composer possesses, he has to turn to the music publisher to fight for him, and to find the money to fight for him. Mr. Herbert Thring's gross misstatement that Mr. William Boosey gave evidence at the Board of Trade Inquiry that any extra remuneration awarded on royalty records would not benefit the composer is a statement for which we trust the Committee of Authors has occasion to blush. Mr. Boosey distinctly stated that any extra award would be divided among the composers, authors, and publishers according to the prevalent rates, in most cases forty per cent. to the composer, thirty per cent. to the author, and thirty per cent. to the publisher, and in some few cases fifty per cent. to the composer and fifty per cent. to the publisher. A not unreasonable division, surely, when one calculates what it costs to fight for the composer's rights.

In his early days Mr. Thring used to spend much of his time attacking book publishers, until certain authors of repute silenced him by informing him that the said publishers were honourable men and friends of theirs. Thereupon Mr. Thring, who, like certain small animals in natural history, is never happy unless he can discharge a certain amount of venom, claimed to have discovered the fact that Barabbas, after all, was a music publisher. No one really pays much attention to Mr. Thring personally. He only borrows his importance from the fact that he is the secretary of the Society of Authors. But so long as he retains that position the Society is responsible for his intellectual discoveries. Since Mr. Herbert Thring is so ready with the names of the many eminent men who constitute the Committee of the Society, we make a direct appeal to any one of the following gentlemen, viz., Sir James Barrie, Mr. Arnold Bennett, Mr. John Galsworthy, Mr. John Masefield, and Mr. Bernard Shaw, to state through your columns whether or no they consider it a scandal that the composer should not only be deprived of a free market in which to dispose of his work, but should not even have the control of the price at which his compositions are to be retailed to the public through mechanical contrivances. Meanwhile, we protest against the Society's accredited agent wrapping himself round in their mantles and skipping upon the copyright stage like a kind of Pagliacci, merely to cut irrelevant capers.—Yours, &c.,

50, New Bond Street, W.1. Chappell & Co.

---

THE NATURE OF HARMONY

Sir,—I think that all impartial readers of this correspondence will agree that Dr. Shirlaw's statement that I am 'still unable to understand this process of inversion' is simply discourteous. The discussion arose from the fact that Dr. Shirlaw informed the world that the chord of E minor was an inversion of the chord of C major (Musical Times, March, 1928, p. 211), which, of course, it is not. At the side of these chords he placed certain figures as a proof of his theory, quite forgetting that his figures indicated one set of facts as applied to the former chord, and a totally different set of facts as applied to the latter. In the first instance they gave the vibration ratios calculated from C; in the second they gave the string lengths calculated from $e^{III}$. They proved nothing.

With regard to the different kinds of minor triads, his remark about the tuning of my pianoforte is merely an attempt at drawing a red herring across the scent. I never suggested that 6 : 7 : 9 and 16 : 19 : 24 were desirable chords. But Dr. Shirlaw knows that much greater musicians than either he or I have regarded the nineteenth harmonic as the origin of the minor triad.

The only conclusion at which I have been able to arrive, after a perusal of Dr. Shirlaw's lucubrations concerning 'The Nature of Harmony,' is that he is under the impression that the fact that the fifth can be divided into two unequal thirds, and that the relative position of these thirds can be changed, is a discovery of his own. Parturiunt montes, nascetur ridiculus mus.—Yours, &c., Arthur T. Froggatt.

---

MUSIC AND THE HOROSCOPE

Sir,—Miss Snell's letter in your October issue is interesting. It may in some way explain why in musicians' birthday-books some spaces are filled with signatures whilst others are absolutely empty. Then again, how frequently one observes some sort of connection between the various people who have either written their names in the same daily space in such books, or who appear there in print. For instance, under the date August 22 will be found the names of Sir A. C. Mackenzie, Drs. W. H. Cummings and T. L. Southgate, Mr. Edward Silas, and Achille C. Debussy. Of these, the first two were contemporaneous heads of big music schools, in each of which the third was a constant visitor, the fourth a teacher, and the fifth well represented there by his music. Just one more batch of horoscopic (?) coincidences. December 5 I share as a birthday with Sir Frederick Bridge, so long and closely associated with me at Trinity College of Music until, in 1924, he died, and I resigned on account of ill-health. December 5 was also shared as a birthday by Marie Krebs and Dr. F. Ludwig Nohl, the latter a well-known Mozart editor and biographer. Moreover, Mozart himself died on this day, and so, too, did a great admirer of his, my old friend Dr. Ebenezer Prout. Yet again, Mozart was born at Salzburg in 1756; I, sed longo intervallo, first saw the light at Salisbury in 1856. Can such slight but noticeable similarity both in date-figures and place-names be in the very least degree credited to astrologic influence, or are they purely accidental coincidences if that? In conclusion, may I say that the year 1891—the centenary of Mozart's death—was to me a time of great anxiety, but marked by a most favourable 'turning-point.'—Yours, &c.,

C. W. PEARCE.

Ferndown, Dorset.

The Amateurs' Exchange

Under this heading we insert, free of charge, announcements by amateur musicians who wish to co-operate with others.

Baritone vocalist wishes to meet accompanist for mutual practice. Classical music. Morning, afternoon, or evening, at the following address, or in central London.—VOCALIST, 12, Bartholomew Villas, Bartholomew Road, N.W.5.

Pianist wishes to meet lady violinist or 'cellist for mutual practice. Good sight-reader.—MISS H. HANDFORD, 17, Clifford Road, E. Finchley, N.2.

Baritone wishes to meet pianist for mutual practice. S.E. district, between Herne Hill and Penge.—J. J., c/o Musical Times.

Pianist and 'cellist wish to join violinist for weekly trios. Classics. Notting Hill district.—F. G., c/o Musical Times.

Pianist (two years R.A.M. student) wishes to meet violinist or 'cellist for mutual practice. One or two evenings weekly.—A. J., 32, Bessborough Road, Harrow, Middlesex.

Lady pianist and 'cellist (gentleman) wish to meet violinist for mutual practice of classical music. Wimbledon or district.—PIANO, c/o Musical Times.

Contralto wishes to meet other voice or voices for practice. Duets, trios, quartets, &c. In or near Bristol.—MISS BRANKER, The Bungalow, Ableton Lane, Severn Beach, nr. Bristol.

Lady pianist wishes to meet violinist and 'cellist to form trio for practice. Must be enthusiastic.—Miss V. NEWMAN, 28, Wearside Road, Lewisham, S.E.13.

Viola and 'cello players required to join violins and pianoforte. Practices fortnightly.—M. D., 19, Wyatt Park Road, Streatham Hill, S.W.2.

Pianist wishes to meet violinist and 'cellist, also singers (male), for practice of classical music, commencing with fairly easy works. Birmingham and district.—W. J. C., c/o Musical Times.

Lady viola player seeks practice with other strings. Chamber music preferred. Streatham or neighbourhood.—OMEGA, c/o Musical Times.

Accompanist required by violinist for mutual practice, with class.—Write, 30, Revelow Road, S.E.4.

Lady pianist (L.R.A.M.) wishes to meet vocalist or instrumentalist for mutual practice. Bromley.—O. M. B., c/o Musical Times.

Violinist (lady) wishes to meet advanced pianist for mutual practice.—229, Rotton Park Road, Edgbaston, Birmingham.

Singer (lady) wishes to meet accompanist for mutual practice. Preferably mornings. N.W. district.—VIEHOFF, 23, Boundary Road, St. John's Wood, N.W.8.

Violinist and 'cellist wish to meet another violinist and viola player for the practice of string quartets. Any district near London.—NORTH, c/o Musical Times.

Violinist and pianist wish to meet other instrumentalists (string and wind) to co-operate on week-day evenings, or Sundays, in performance of classical and modern works. Large library. Experienced players only.—EDWARD W. ORGAN, 8, Mayfield Road, Acocks Green, Birmingham.

Pianist, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., wishes to meet advanced string players for mutual practice of classical music. Kingston or Surbiton districts.—G. M., c/o Musical Times.

Gentleman, A.R.C.M., with wide orchestral playing experience and knowledge of works, wishes to give services as conductor to amateur orchestral society. London.—P. S., c/o Musical Times.

Sharps and Flats

The pendulum swung full circle.—(Newman Flower's 'Franz Schubert: The Man and his Circle.)

What did it do, we wonder, when Papa Haydn wrote his 'Clock' Symphony?—Punch.

Berlioz was the worst musician of all the great musical geniuses. He had astounding genius, and he could not harmonize a simple waltz correctly.—Maurice Ravel.

If you teach a boy to blow a saxophone, that boy will never blow a safe.—Edward Schill, New Jersey (advocating compulsory music instruction as a deterrent of crime).

It is time I was dead. I have taken a dislike to humanity. Everything seems to have changed.—Pachmann.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

It is possible now to give full particulars of the generous offer of Baron Albert Profumo, whereby young composers of the Royal Academy, and members of the R.A.M. Club will have a chance of winning the handsome prize of a hundred guineas.

To commemorate the visit of Prof. Ernst von Dohnányi and the Budapest Philharmonic Orchestra to the Royal Academy of Music, under the auspices of the R.A.M. Club, on Saturday, June 16, 1928, Baron Profumo has generously offered a prize of a hundred guineas (£105) for the composition of a piece for orchestra, under the following conditions:

(1.) The work must be for full orchestra, in the nature of an overture or symphonic poem, and should take from ten to twenty minutes in performance.

(2.) It must be written specially for this competition, and must neither have been performed nor published.

(3.) All present students of the Royal Academy of Music and all members of the R.A.M. Club are elegible to compete.

(4.) The last day for receiving manuscripts will be Monday, July 1, 1929.

(5.) All manuscripts (MSS.) should be sent to the Secretary of the Royal Academy of Music, York Gate, London, N.W.1, signed by a nom de plume. This nom de plume must be written on the outside of a sealed envelope, which should contain the name and address of the competitor.

(6.) Every care will be taken of the works submitted, but the Royal Academy of Music will not be responsible for any loss or damage to these.

Prof. Ernst von Dohnányi has kindly consented to act as adjudicator.

One of the principal events in November will be the orchestral and choral concert at Queen's Hall on Tuesday afternoon, the 20th, at 3 o'clock, when Verdi's 'Requiem' will be performed under the conductorship of Sir Henry Wood.

By the time these lines are in print, the Royal Academy Schubert Centenary concert will be a thing of the past, as it is due to take place on October 29 in the Duke's Hall. We shall, however, have something to tell readers in next month's issue, for the programme is full of interest. F.

The following awards have been made: Bach Scholarship (any instrument or voice) to Patrick O'Connor Cory (pianoforte) (London), John Hamilton and Muriel Kemp being highly commended, and Vera Towsey and Peggy Male commended; Dove Scholarship (violin) to Elspeth M. C. Swanson (London); Sainton Scholarship (violin) to Bernard H. Moonshine (London); Henry Smart Scholarship (organ or composition) to W. Myers Foggin (composition) (Newcastle-on-Tyne); Tuer Scholarship (contraltos) to Muriel Middleton (London), Freda E. Townson being highly commended; Elizabeth Stokes Scholarship (pianoforte) to Cyril W. Gell (Bedford), Marion McTurk and Sylvia Shapiro being very highly commended, and May J. Walker and Rosalie Helliwell commended; Thalberg Scholarship (pianoforte) to Cimbro Martin (London); John Stokes Scholarship (baritones) to Robert N. Fulton (London); Thomas Threlfall Scholarship (organ) to Walter H. J. Emery (Tilshead); Goring Thomas Scholarship (composition) to Mary M. Couper (London); Sainton-Dolby Scholarship (contraltos) to Phœbe M. Thomas (Troedynhiw); Blumenthal Scholarship (composition) to Yelland Richards (Leighton Buzzard), Ethel M. Winfield being highly commended, and Mansel Thomas and Monica Myatt commended; Ada Lewis Scholarship (pianoforte) to Marion McTurk (London), Gordon Felmingham being very highly commended; Ada Lewis Violin Scholarship to Gordon N. Mutter (Mortlake), Beatrice E. Marr being commended.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC

The principal fixtures of the past month were three recitals, a chamber concert, and two orchestral concerts, in the Concert Hall, two performances of Charpentier's 'Louise' in the Opera Theatre, and a Patrons' Fund rehearsal for executive artists. In addition, on October 19, the College welcomed the distinguished French composer, M. Maurice Ravel, for whom the orchestra, under Dr. Adrian Boult, played a Symphonic Fragment from the Ballet 'Daphnis and Chloe'; and on October 24, the German Singers very kindly arranged to give a private recital to the students, the programme consisting of vocal and instrumental music, followed by a 'Puppet Show' of Mozart's 'Bastien and Bastienne.'

From so many items of interest it is not possible to select more than a few for comment. The two performances of 'Louise' represented, perhaps, the College's most ambitious effort, both performers and orchestra, under Dr. Malcolm Sargent, reaching a high standard. The part of Louise was played by Mabel Ritchie and Margery Smith on successive nights, the interpretation of each showing many individual points of excellence, both vocally and dramatically. Trefor Jones and Helmar Fernback as Julien, wrestled successfully with an unsympathetic character. Richard Watson and Meriel Green took the parts of Father and Mother on both occasions, and succeeded admirably in realising the the significance of the first and last Acts. Mr. Cairns James produced the opera with his usual skill, and Mr. H. Procter Gregg was responsible for the organization of the performances, as well as for the scenery and mounting.

The first Patrons' Fund orchestral rehearsal of the term, on October 19, gave a hearing to four artists: Miss Doris Ross in Beethoven's G major Pianoforte Concerto, Miss Leila Hermitage in Dvorák's Violin Concerto, Miss Muriel Hart in Jacob's Viola Concerto, and Mr. Kennedy McKenna in an air from Tchaikovsky's 'Eugen Onegin.' Under Dr. Adrian Boult's direction, and aided by the New Symphony Orchestra, these soloists succeeded in creating a favourable impression on a large audience.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC

It is with deep regret that the death of Dr. E. F. Horner is recorded. His first connection with the College was as a member of the teaching staff in 1912, and he had held the appointment of Director of Examinations since 1916. His keen interest in the well-being and work of the College is well known, and he made many friends in connection with his visits to local centres—not only at home but in Australia, South Africa, West Indies, &c. During his Directorship the numbers examined were more than doubled. His health had caused anxiety for some time, but the last few weeks developed a very critical state and he passed away peacefully in his sleep on October 8.

The funeral service was held at St. Mary's Church, Paddington, where the Rev. Dr. W. J. Foxell, Chaplain to the College, officiated. The Ladies' Choir from the College was present, and led the singing. The College was fully represented, the Chairman and many members of the Corporation being present, together with representatives of the examining, teaching, and clerical staffs. The University of London, the Royal College of Music, Royal College of Organists, and other institutions were also represented.

The death of Sir J. Agg Gardner, a Vice-President of the College, is also recorded with much regret.

The Colman Prize, awarded to the candidate gaining the highest position among the Licentiates at the diploma examinations during the year, has been gained by Mr. Leonard Woodroffe Robinson, of London.

The number of entries for the diploma examinations held in July shows a very large increase on previous figures.

Distributions at local centres were held at Manchester, Frome, Brighton, Southampton, Colchester, Dundee, Edinburgh, Shields, Sunderland, Newcastle, Birmingham, Birkenhead, and Ryde, at which the College was represented.

Two very pleasant functions took place recently at the College in celebration of the golden wedding of Dr. Joseph C. Bridge and his wife: the first on Friday, October 5, when the members of the Board presented to Dr. and Mrs. Bridge a gold and ivory paper knife, and the second on Wednesday, October 10, when the teaching staff gave a handsome tray.

UNIVERSITY OF DURHAM

The following have satisfied the examiners, September, 1928:

FINAL EXAMINATION FOR MUS. BAC.

Cyril J. Ball, Edith Marion Bathurst, John Howie, Thomas P. Miles, Charles H. Phillips, Samuel M. Popplestone, Douglas Rayner-Smith, Joseph G. Wardale.

J. C. Bridge,
E. T. Sweeting,
A. C. Tysoe
(Examiners in Music).

The Coming Season

SECOND LIST

ORCHESTRAL CONCERTS IN LONDON

THE ROYAL PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.—Eight concerts at Queen's Hall on Thursday evenings at 8. The dates, conductors, and works of greatest interest are as follows: November 1, Sir Landon Ronald, first performance in England of a Pianoforte Concerto by Medtner, with the composer as pianist. November 15, Schubert's Mass in E flat, sung by the Philharmonic Choir under Mr. C. Kennedy Scott; Strauss's 'Don Quixote' and a Berlioz selection conducted by Sir Hamilton Harty. December 6, 'Hercules,' sung by the Philharmonic Choir under Sir Thomas Beecham. January 17, Mr. John Barbirolli, Delius's Concerto for violin and violoncello. January 31, Mr. Basil Cameron, Goossens's Sinfonietta. February 21, Mr. Albert Coates, a Wagner programme. March 21, Sir Thomas Beecham, Delius's 'Appalachia.' April 18, Sir Henry Wood, Bloch's Symphony 'Israel,' Sibelius's 'Tapiola.'

THE INSURANCE ORCHESTRAL SOCIETY OF LONDON (Mr. Harold Rawlinson) will give concerts at Queen's Hall on January 16 and April 26. Among the works chosen for performance are the 'Hebrides' Overture, the Bach-Elgar Fugue, and Sullivan's 'Henry VIII.' Suite.

CHORAL CONCERTS

LONDON AND DISTRICT

CENTRAL CROYDON MUSICAL SOCIETY (H. Leslie Smith).—First Concert: Works by Coleridge-Taylor, including 'Kubla Khan' and 'Three Choral Ballads'; Second Concert: 'The Song of Miriam' (Schubert); 'Hervé Riel' (Walford Davies); 'Spring's Message' (Gade); 'For Empire and King' (Fletcher); 'Hey nonny no' (Smyth).

ORIANA MADRIGAL SOCIETY, THE (Mr. C. Kennedy Scott).—December 18, miscellaneous concert at Æolian Hall, with the English Folk-Dance Society; March 5, Handel's 'L'Allegro ed il Pensieroso' at the Royal College of Music; May 28, Elizabethan music at Æolian Hall.

ST. JAMES'S (CLAPHAM) CHORAL SOCIETY (Mr. C. Hastings Kirby).—'The Rose Maiden'; 'Acis and Galatea.'

SOUTH LONDON PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY (Mr. Frank Greenfield).—'Cavalleria Rusticana'; 'Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast'; 'Blest Pair of Sirens'; 'Faust.'

WIMBLEDON (1914) CHORAL SOCIETY (Mr. Norman Askew).—'The Pied Piper of Hamelin' (Parry).

WOODFORD CHORAL SOCIETY.—'The Peasant Cantata' (Bach); 'Samson.'

WOODSIDE CHORAL SOCIETY (Mr. Norman Appleton).—'The Lay of the Bell' (Romberg).

---

PROVINCIAL

ARBROATH CHORAL UNION.—'Hymn of Praise.'

ARUNDEL CHORAL SOCIETY (Mr. Norman Demuth).—'Lochinvar' (Charles Wood); 'Faire is the Heaven' (Harris); and a new eight-part Motet by the conductor.

BANSTEAD MUSICAL SOCIETY.—'Job.'

BATH CHORAL AND ORCHESTRAL SOCIETY (Mr. H. T. Sims).—Brahms's 'Requiem'; madrigals; 'The Song of Hiawatha.'

BEER CHORAL SOCIETY (Mr. Arthur Billingsley).—'Maritana'; 'Come, let us sing' (Mendelssohn).

BERKHAMSTED CHORAL SOCIETY (Mr. W. London).—'The Cradle of Christ' (J. F. Bridge); 'Abide with us.'

BLACKBURN ST. CECILIA AND VOCAL UNION (Mr. E. C. Robinson).—'The Damnation of Faust.'

BOGNOR PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY (Mr. Norman Demuth).—'Sea Wanderers' (Bantock); 'A Spring Canticle' and 'Hey nonny no' (Ethel Smyth).

BOSTON CHORAL SOCIETY (Dr. Bernard Jackson).—'Requiem' (Brahms).

BRADFORD OLD CHORAL SOCIETY (Mr. Wilfrid Knight).—'The Hillside' (Eric Fogg); 'The Mystic Trumpeter' (Harty); 'The Messiah'; 'Samson and Delilah.'

BROMSGROVE MUSICAL CLUB (Mr. I. Burnell).—'King Olaf.'

CHESHAM CHORAL SOCIETY (Mr. R. B. Green).—'The Martyr of Antioch'; 'The Creation.'

DARTFORD CHORAL SOCIETY (Mr. Ernest Leeds).—'A Tale of Old Japan'; 'Judas Maccabæus.'

DONCASTER MUSICAL SOCIETY (Mr. H. A. Bennett).—Act 2, 'Orpheus'; 'Dido and Æneas'; 'Great is Jehovah' (Schubert); 'Requiem' (Mozart); 'The Messiah'; 'Voces Clamantium'; 'Blest Pair of Sirens.'

EXETER ORATORIO SOCIETY (Mr. T. H. W. Armstrong).—'Acis and Galatea'; 'The Song of Hiawatha.'

GRAYS CHORAL AND MUSICAL SOCIETY (Mr. W. H. Fraser).—'Elijah'; 'Merrie England.'

HUCKNALL PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY (Mr. Henry Dobson).—'Merrie England.'

IPSWICH: ST. MARY-LE-TOWER SPECIAL CHOIR (Mr. G. C. Gray).—'Requiem' (Brahms); 'St. Matthew' Passion.

KIDDERMINSTER CHORAL SOCIETY (Mr. J. Irving Glover).—'The Black Knight'; 'The Song of Miriam'; 'Requiem' (Mozart); 'Hear my Prayer'; 150th Psalm (Franck).

MELTON MOWBRAY CHORAL SOCIETY.—'The Messiah,' conducted by Dr. Malcolm Sargent; 'The Black Knight,' conducted by Dr. Gordon Slater.

NEWCASTLE BACH CHOIR (Dr. W. G. Whittaker).—Madrigals by Weelkes; 'Mater ora filium' (Bax); 'The Golden Goose' (Holst); 'Flos Campi' and 'Concerto Accademico' (Vaughan Williams); a Northumbrian-Cumbrian concert; Bach's Mass in B minor; four Church Cantatas by Bach; Mass in four parts by Byrd; Tallis's Motet in forty parts.

NEWPORT CHORAL SOCIETY (Mr. Arthur E. Sims).—'The Song of Hiawatha'; Mass in B minor.

NORTH SHIELDS Y.M.C.A. PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.—'The Creation'; 'The Messiah'; 'Requiem' (Brahms).

NORTH STAFFS DISTRICT CHORAL SOCIETY (Mr. John James).—'Elijah'; 'The Messiah'; 'Merrie England.'

NORWICH PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY (Dr. Heathcote Statham).—'The Pied Piper'; 'Toward the Unknown Region'; 'The Mystic Trumpeter' (Harty).

PAR CHORAL SOCIETY (Mr. C. S. Edwards).—'The Messiah.'

ROCHDALE PHILHARMONIC ORCHESTRAL AND CHORAL SOCIETY (Mr. F. Leach).—November 6, 'God in the Thunderstorm' and 'The Song of the Spirits over the Waters' (Schubert); 'Forward through the glimmering darkness' (Parry); 'Bushes and Briars' (Vaughan Williams); 'Rhinemaidens' Song' (Wagner); March 19, 'The Dream of Gerontius'; December 4, 'The Messiah.'

ST. AUSTELL PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY (Mr. W. Brennand Smith).—'Il Trovatore'; 'Stabat Mater' (Dvorák).

SHOREHAM CHORAL AND ORCHESTRAL SOCIETY (Mr. Shepherd C. Lewery).—'Hear my Prayer'; 'Hymn of Praise.'

STOURBRIDGE CONCERT SOCIETY (Mr. A. R. Gibbs).—'King Olaf'; 'Judas Maccabæus.'

TAUNTON CHORAL SOCIETY (Mr. Herbert Knott).—'The Song of Miriam'; 'The Song of Hiawatha'; 'Requiem' (Brahms).

Tonbridge Choral Society (Mr. George J. Kimmins).—'The Song of Miriam'; 'Great is Jehovah'; 'The Lord is my Shepherd'; 'Phaudrig Crohoore'; 'The Messiah.'

Whittlesey Choral Society (Dr. Hayward Scott).—'Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast.'

Worcester Festival Choral Society (Sir Ivor Atkins).—'Tannhäuser.'

IRELAND

Belfast Philharmonic Society (Mr. E. Godfrey Brown).—October 19, 'The Surrender of the Soul to Everlasting Love' (Cornelius); Five Operatic Choruses (Handel), arranged and orchestrated by Sir Henry Wood; November 16, 'The Song of Songs' (Bantock); February 8, 'The Music-Makers'; 'The Warden of the Cinque Ports' (Lyon); March 15, 'Acis and Galatea'; 'The Messiah.'

Competition Festival Record

Heanor.—At the second annual Festival an increase of entries meant three days (October 4-6) of competitions. The first prizes in the chief choral contests were taken by Miss Berresford's Ladies' Choir, Kirkby-in-Ashfield Male-Voice Choir (Mr. A. Fowler), and Langley Mill Harmonic Society (Mr. J. Morton).

Mexborough.—The twelfth Festival (October 5 and 6) produced solo-singing of a high class in the six classes from bass to soprano. In a special competition among the six winners Mr. J. H. Lee, the tenor, was judged the best artist. Mexborough Oxford Road (Mr. J. W. Watts) was the winning female-voice choir, and Cudworth Y.M.C.A. (Mr. Jolley) earned the highest marks of the Festival.

London Concerts

PROMENADE NOVELTIES

Schönberg's orchestral transcription of two Chorale Preludes of Bach aroused interest on September 20. A good deal of Bach's organ music can be effectively scored, but, as a whole, the Chorale Preludes should be left to the medium and the place for which they were written. Only on an organ, and in a church, can they make their proper effect. These transcriptions of Schönberg's, however, failed—not on the ground of principle, but by reason of maladroit scoring. The background in 'Schmücke dich' was far too prominent, and the use of brass was entirely out of place. This exquisite music, if it had to be scored, needed no more than a string quintet (the double-bass playing with violoncello) for the background, and a flute for the Chorale. The second of the Schönberg examples was the short piece on the Teutonised form of the 'Veni Creator.' This was less unsuccessful, but the orchestral bass for the cantus firmus proved to be a feeble substitute for the pedal stops of a big organ.

The miscellaneous fare provided for Saturday, September 22, included three small orchestral works which obviously pleased the packed audience. Two of these—J. B. McEwen's 'The Jocund Dance,' for strings, and Strauss's 'Burlesque,' for pianoforte and orchestra—while not new, were probably fresh to most listeners. Dr. McEwen's unpretentious little work consists of four short dances, charming and neatly-written, which, as the double-bass is optional, could be played effectively by a string quartet. The Strauss work, which dates from 1884-85, made a ready appeal with its delightful mingling of suave melodiousness and piquant humour. Mr. James Ching gave an admirably fluent performance of the pianoforte part. Eric Fogg's new orchestral work, 'June Twilight,' received its first performance a few months ago under Sir Dan Godfrey at Bournemouth. It is an undeniably clever work, and contains some decidedly attractive writing, much of it of a vigorous, exuberant character which seemed, however, scarcely in keeping either with the title or with the quiet opening section. Yet there is an orthodox quality in its invention which rather disappoints us in the adolescent composer. When he was very young Eric enjoyed the reputation of lion cub among composers, but now that he is Mr. Fogg his behaviour is becoming quite genteel. He merges with other young men of his age. This music is quite of the type, well groomed, orthodox in sentiment, saying the right things. We hope Mr. Fogg will soon outgrow these proprieties and throw out some more boyish oats.

The novelty on September 29 was Gordon Jacob's Overture 'Clogher Head.' It is named after an Irish cape, and is a well-made bit of programme music. There is much sound, strong writing, and the scoring, both in the finely vigorous opening subject and in the quiet, expressive sections, is consistently sure.

Here is another composer who shows a fine gift for turning out music and compelling our respectful admiration for the product. High-sounding, deeply-felt, skilfully-worked—these are the calculated praises that give the show away. 'Clogher Head' lacked thrill. Not a loved moment survived the listening. As to the truth of the landscape-painting, one must run down to the nearest wind-swept promontory before presuming to judge.

Mr. Arthur Bliss conducted the Double Fugue from his 'Colour Symphony' on October 4, and the audience acclaimed it with joy. Mr. Bliss has done nothing better than this—that is, he has never dressed up a better musical guy. The description should appeal to him, for he has disowned and banned flesh and blood in music. The Double Fugue has a most engaging leer. Cheek by jowl with it stood—of all things in the world—Vaughan Williams's 'Pastoral Symphony.'

The final novelty of the season was Miss Dorothy Howell's Overture, 'The Rock' (October 6). It is a charmingly picturesque, imaginative little work, the outcome of a visit to Gibraltar. Local colour is deftly suggested, and the whole thing is touched off with lightness and skill. It had a very favourable reception, which was acknowledged by the composer in person.

When the season ended, about 11 p.m., on October 6, the au revoir to Sir Henry Wood was heard all over England. Wireless transmission had a lot to do with it, but it was more than that.

XXX.

THE LONDON STRING QUARTET

The L.S.Q. is not well treated by Londoners. It has been allowed to range itself with such institutions as the Tate Gallery and Ken Wood, which one is determined to visit but 'not this time.' It was distressing to see Æolian Hall more empty than full for the concert on September 22, especially when one knew that less than half a mile away a large crowd was watching a pianist. The programme and the playing were admirable. First Beethoven's Op. 59, No. 3, then a new Suite in the Old Style by H. Waldo Warner, the viola player of the Quartet. This was fresh and green music, growing from the 'old style' as nature intended, and far different from the usual paper formations. The Sarabande was especially good. The third work was the great Quintet, Op. 163, of Schubert, with Mr. Cedric Sharpe as extra 'cello. It was well played—how well we only knew a week or two later when the same work was attempted by a scratch crew of five first-class individual players, untrained as an ensemble.

M.

B.B.C. SYMPHONY CONCERTS

Sir Thomas Beecham conducted the season's opening concert (October 5). Two of the items had been played at Leeds a week or so before—Schumann's 'Rhenish' Symphony and the Fugue of Lord Berners. Beecham gave us his usual good brand of Delius playing in 'Brigg Fair'; Mozart's 'Eine kleine Nachtmusik' also found him at his best; but the outstanding success was probably the conductor's Suite from Handel, arranged for the Russian Ballet performance of 'The gods go a-begging,' and now heard for the first time in the concert-hall. The ballet may or may not be seen again; its music will surely prove to be one of the most popular of réchauffés. G.

SINGERS OF THE MONTH

Chaliapin sang at the Albert Hall on October 14. The great man was at his best. In song after song one could not, with the intensest scrutiny, detect a technical flaw, and it goes for granted that his personality cast a spell over the huge audience. Martini's 'Plaisir d'Amour' gave censure an opportunity. Chaliapin pulled the melody out of its natural shape in an indefensible way. But the Russian songs were one and all marvellously sung. Chief in one's memory lingers a scene from 'Prince Igor.'

Mr. Topliss Green sang at Æolian Hall on October 17. He has a useful, vigorous, bass-baritone voice which was telling in rumbustious songs, but which lacked minor graces and subtlety.

Mr. Dale Smith sang an ambitious programme at Æolian Hall. One carried away an impression of pleasant tone, good words, good manners, and in the main well-directed musical aims. But the seeker after fine shades, intensity, brilliance, or, indeed, any of the effects that spring from consummate breath control, would have been disappointed. (Breath control signifies more than the mere ability to last comfortably through a phrase.) The style was that of an easy-going elocutionist. Schubert's 'Doppelgänger' (unfortunately called 'Doppelgander' on the programme) was beyond Mr. Smith's present resources, but 'Hark! hark! the lark' was tastefully sung, and Wolf's 'Alles endet was entstehet,' from the Michelangelo songs, was among Mr. Smith's successes.

Mr. David Hutcheson, a tenor who was heard at Wigmore Hall, was a good singer in the making, but inclined to be fussy. Often he seemed to be battling with his music. The effect of a few charming moments was more than once cancelled by efforts to score interpretative points. The sustained phrase 'Und warum ich nun weine,' in Schubert's 'Lachen und weinen,' was beautifully sung, but in Brahms's 'Meine liebe ist grün' the high notes were reckless. They were strident and quite out of keeping. Mr. Hutcheson did really well in Henschel's 'Wie melodie aus reiner sphäre.' Contradictions of tone and style disappeared. The song seemed to speak for itself.

Mr. Frank Phillips (Wigmore Hall) gave us manly, unaffected singing. He is someone I would willingly hear again. His low and middle notes were especially good, resting as they did on a solid chest wall. The programme was on the melancholy side. It began with Bach's 'Amore traditore' and reached, by way of Schubert's 'Der Leiermann' and Schumann's 'Belshazzar,' the four 'Serious Songs' of Brahms. Mr. Phillips did not attempt much variety of tone-colour. It was comfortable, solid singing. With such a good breath reserve he could easily have lightened his high notes, even to the extent of the exclusive use of the 'mixed voice' above C or C sharp. The inevitable tightening of breath, due to the singer's carrying his chest tones too high, precluded easy access to the natural resonances, and several promising climaxes were spoilt owing to the meagre quality of the extreme high notes. Mr. Phillips's breath capacity seems to be exceptional. It was a feat to sing the phrase 'So I returned and did consider all the oppressions done beneath the sun' (in Brahms's 'Biblical Songs') all in one breath.

Miss Hortense Houghton (Wigmore Hall) sang a curious but interesting batch of songs, mainly modern, and collected from many climes. It needed a commanding singer to make them all sound well, and Miss Houghton was hardly that. She was at the mercy of her songs. When a long, sustained line was asked for, the singer boxed up her tones, so that the voice sounded dull. It warmed when she had an opportunity for characterisation. Miss Houghton's words could have been better. 'Yea or Nay' sounded like 'Yee or Nee.'

A few words will sum up Miss Nancy Dyer's performances (Wigmore Hall). She owns a sympathetic, flexible, lightly-poised soprano voice. The cultivation of bigger and firmer tones is the next step. This need not involve any sacrifice of her present quality, but it will lead to a more dynamic enunciation (a particular necessity in such music as Armstrong Gibbs's 'Five Eyes'), and in general a more stimulating effect.

Mr. Kennedy McKenna, who sang at Æolian Hall, was already known at the Old Vic. In some ways mufti suited him better than motley. His light tenor fitted a programme which included several old Italian favourites and songs by Schubert and Brahms. Mr. McKenna's soft singing was charming. He had fervour too.

Miss Linda Seymour (Wigmore Hall) sang 'La Mort de Didon,' from Berlioz's 'Les Troyens,' a song by Malipiero, and 'Have mercy, Lord,' from the 'St. Matthew' Passion. The singer's best notes were her highest. These often had a fine ringing quality. Miss Seymour did not allow her tone to grow hard when attacking, and many shapely phrases must be set to her credit. Perhaps she will be well advised to take up her whole voice a tone or so, for her low notes, though often sung with the right laxity, sounded rather weak. Miss Seymour has real gifts.

H. J. K.

LONDON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

The L.S.O. season began on October 15 with a tame performance of a Handel Concerto Grosso. Nobody minded, for we know our Beecham. There was Delius to follow, and plenty of Mozart.

After Sir Thomas had given the 'North Country Sketches' to a war-time audience they were untouched until this revival, except for a rumoured performance in Yorkshire. It seems queer that after as many as two performances, or one, the only available orchestral parts should be full of wrong notes. Were all these wrong notes played in 1915, and in Yorkshire? This time they cost us the fourth sketch, entitled 'The March of Spring,' for there had been time to patch up only the first three. But the first three were worth coming a long way to hear.

In numbers one and two, 'Autumn' and 'Winter Landscape,' we get, elaborated and refined, Delius's power of describing material things and their essence in terms of beautiful sound and thought. Here his canvas is smaller than those of Appalachia and Paris, and in concentrating his form he concentrates his invention, and achieves an intensity of diction that is lacking in so much of his broader work. There is no time for the Delian habit of wandering round the point.

The same is true of number three, 'The Dance,' but all the same the piece does not explain itself. What is the charade that harries the life out of an innocent tune? The persecution is a scene of splendour, but one wants to know the reason. If one merely wants to listen, then this piece, and the other two as well, are sheer orchestral genius at its greatest. When Sir Thomas Beecham gives us the fourth sketch, as he promised to do, we hope he will also repeat the first three.

After this, the conductor, the orchestra, and a last-minute soloist, Miss Jelly d'Aranyi, gave a pretty impromptu performance of Mozart's D major Violin Concerto. A Symphony in C major then told most of us how little we knew of Mozart who only the fashion know. This thirty-fourth Symphony contains one of the most perfect of slow movements and a finale that for spontaneity and jollity is unequalled anywhere. The music of the stormy hunt from 'The Trojans' ended a good concert. M.

Music in the Provinces

BATH.—A new season of orchestral concerts at the Pump Room was opened in the presence of the Mayor and a number of Aldermen and Councillors. Mr. Jan Hurst conducted a programme consisting of the Overture to 'Der Freischütz,' and lighter pieces. This is the 224th concert season at the Pump Room. Mr. Hurst intends to give as much prominence as he can to the music of British composers, and he would be glad to hear of works that still await a hearing.

BEDFORD.—On October 1 the Bedford Music Club listened to a concert by the English Singers, who sang, besides Elizabethan music, Purcell's 'Come unto these yellow sands' and 'Full fathom five.'

BIRMINGHAM.—The concert given by the City Orchestra under Dr. Adrian Boult on October 4 was an example of what promises to be a particularly interesting series. The programme consisted of the Handel-Elgar Overture in D minor, Beethoven's Violin Concerto (played by Mr. Dushkin), Malipiero's Suite 'Cimarosiana,' and Brahms's first Symphony.——The first Sunday concert was given on October 7 by the City Police Band at the West-End Picture House under Mr. Walter O'Donnell, who conducted his 'Gaelic Fantasy.'——Miss Fanny Davies, Mr. Paul Beard, and Mr. Hock opened the Philharmonic Mid-day Concerts with a programme of Trios.——On October 1 the B.N.O.C. brought its new production of 'Lohengrin' to the Prince of Wales's Theatre, where it was acclaimed.

BOURNVILLE.—In the course of their west-country tour the German Singers came to Bournville on October 8. After witnessing a Morris Dance by the Bournville Folk-Dancers they gave their secular programme, and afterwards produced their puppets, who in turn gave a Morris.

BRADFORD.—Mr. Keith Douglas opened a series of concerts with the Philharmonic Orchestra on September 30 by introducing Delius's 'Cello Concerto to the composer's native town. Miss Beatrice Harrison was the soloist. Max Reger's Variations on a Theme by Mozart and Beethoven's eighth Symphony were also in the programme. Mr. Douglas made the interesting announcement that the subscription list for these concerts has increased eight hundred per cent. since last season. Concerts are to be given every fortnight.

BRISTOL.—The German Singers gave two recitals on October 2, a secular programme at the Folk House, and a sacred programme at the Cathedral. The latter included choral music by Johann Walther, Schütz, Prætorius, and Bach, instrumental accompaniments being played on strings, flutes, lute, and an old recorder.——Ireland's Fantasy-Trio in A minor was played in the Little Theatre on October 6 by the Cardiff B.B.C. Trio.

BURNLEY.—The winter season of the Municipal Symphony Orchestra opened on Sunday, October 7, under the direction of Mr. E. R. O'Malley. The Symphony was Tchaikovsky's fourth.

HARROGATE.—Mr. Cameron gave an all-Russian programme on September 13. A fortnight later he conducted Haydn's 'Oxford' Symphony, Vaughan Williams's Folk-Song Suite, and a little-known Pianoforte Concerto in C minor by Mozart, played by Miss Marion Keighley Snowden. The intervening concert was conducted, in aid of the Imperial Opera League, by Sir Thomas Beecham, whose programme included Mozart's Symphony in C (No. 34), a Concerto Grosso of Handel, and a Ballet Suite made by Sir Thomas out of sundry pieces by Handel.

HASTINGS.—The annual Musical Festival will be held at the New Music Pavilion on November 21-24. The conductors will be Sir Landon Ronald, Mr. Basil Cameron, Sir Thomas Beecham, and Sir Henry Wood. Mr. Cameron's regular winter season of concerts was due to open on October 27.

HUDDERSFIELD.—The musical season opened on October 3 with a concert by the English Singers.——On October 7 Mr. J. Fletcher Sykes conducted the Philharmonic Orchestra in two movements from Schubert's C major Symphony and the Symphonic Variations of Franck, with Mr. Harold Sykes as pianist.

LANCASTER.—A Schubert Centenary recital was given at the Art Gallery on October 10 by Mr. Arnold Dowbiggin. A quartet of string players gave the Andante from Op. 29.

LIVERPOOL.—Mr. Sam Vickers, with the assistance of Miss Daisy Kennedy and four principals of the B.N.O.C., opened his twelfth season of orchestral concerts at Philharmonic Hall on October 6.——At the first Philharmonic Concert Sir Hamilton Harty (in the absence of Mr. Albert Coates) conducted Schubert's Symphony in C minor (the 'Tragic').——At the Cathedral, on October 9, the German Singers sang Bach's 'Come, Jesu, come,' in the course of a typical and interesting programme of sacred German choral music. Instrumental works, mostly Elizabethan, were contributed by the Liverpool and Oxford Consort of Viols.

MANCHESTER.—The syllabus of the municipal concerts at the Free Trade Hall announces ten concerts from October 29 to March 4. All the concerts take place on Monday evenings, except the children's Christmas concert to be given by the Hallé Orchestra and Chorus on the afternoon of December 21. The principal works in the programmes are: 'Judas Maccabæus' (the Hallé Chorus and Orchestra, under Sir Hamilton Harty); 'The Golden Legend' (the Bolton Choral Union, under Sir Hamilton Harty); Glazounov's Symphony in E flat; a Concerto for six drums and orchestra by Tausch, to be played by Mr. Willem Gezink; 'The Song of Hiawatha' (the Hallé Chorus and Orchestra, under Sir Hamilton Harty); and six of Brahms's 'Gipsy' Songs, specially orchestrated by Eric Fogg.

NELSON.—The Nelson Clef Club is holding ten Tuesday evening meetings from October 9 to March 12. The November programmes consist of the Blackpool Festival Competition Music on November 6 and a Schubert evening with the Nelson Glee and Madrigal Society, under Mr. T. Hartley, on November 27.

NORWICH.—The largest audience of recent years assembled on October 6 for the first of the Municipal Concerts. Mr. Maddern Williams conducted Boyce's Suite in E and Coleridge-Taylor's 'The Bamboula'; the Chelsea Singers sang fifteen pieces; and Miss Irene Scharrer played three arrangements of Chorales by Bach and Ravel's 'Ondine.'——The first Sunday concert was given on October 7, with a light orchestral programme.——Quartets by Haydn (Op. 76, No. 5) and Borodin (No. 1) were given by the Norfolk String Quartet on September 27.——St. Mary's Choir and the Norwich Chamber Orchestra joined forces on October 11 in a performance of 'Semele' under Mr. Cyril Pearce.

PLYMOUTH.—On September 29 the Plymouth Orpheus Society, with a choir of nearly three hundred voices, gave a concert performance of 'Lohengrin' under Mr. David Parkes.

PORTSMOUTH.—On September 30 the orchestra of the Royal Marines, under Lieut. R. P. O'Donnell, played German's Theme and Six Diversions and a Pianoforte Concerto in G minor by Norman Demuth.

ROCHDALE.—The programme given by Rochdale Ladies' Prize Choir under Madame M. H. Turner on October 2 included Bantock's 'Elfin Music,' Corder's 'Invocation,' Mackenzie's 'Rhyme of the Four Birds,' and Julius Harrison's 'Cuckoo Flowers.'

SWINDON.—Mr. Edgar P. Monk conducted the Swindon Symphony Orchestra on October 7 in an unfamiliar Pianoforte Concerto by Haydn, played by Mr. Francis Hill, and in Balfe's Overture 'Le Puits d'Amour.'

YORK.—The annual concert of the York Male-Voice Choir was given, under Mr. J. L. Slater, on October 3. The programme included Schubert's 'Victory' and 'The Wise Man's Song,' arranged by Dr. E. C. Bairstow, and Elgar's 'The Herald.'

Music in Scotland

EDINBURGH.—Miss Myra Hess gave pianoforte recitals at Edinburgh and Glasgow. Her programme consisted of four items only—a set of Haydn Variations, a late Beethoven Sonata, Chopin's Funeral March Sonata, and Schumann's 'Carnaval.' Her playing showed a considerable development in breadth and vigour without losing any of its former notable qualities, and her performances made a very considerable impression.

GLASGOW.—The Reid Symphony Orchestra gives eight concerts, from November 1 to March 14, under Prof. Tovey. The programmes include the Schubert C major Symphony which Joachim scored from the Grand Duo, John Powell's 'Negro Rhapsody' for pianoforte and orchestra, Dvorák's second Symphony, Somervell's 'Normandy' Variations for pianoforte and orchestra, Ethel Smyth's Mass in D, Schumann's Concerto for four horns, Delius's Violoncello Concerto, Reger's 'Serenade' (Op. 95), and Bruckner's sixth Symphony.——The Léner String Quartet provided the programmes at the tenth annual Chamber Music Week of seven concerts, promoted by the Glasgow Orpheus Choir. Eighteen complete string quartets were performed, and a number of quartet movements. The players showed greater freedom and breadth of style than on any previous visit, and were received with increasing enthusiasm as the week proceeded. At the close of the series, it was announced that the Orpheus Choir, having spent over £1,000 on these concerts in the course of ten years, and having other paths to explore, did not intend to continue any longer to promote the concerts, but proposed the formation of an independent Glasgow Chamber Music Society, and was prepared to contribute substantially to any Guarantee Fund which might be raised. The proposal had an excellent reception, and there are solid grounds for hoping that the projected Chamber Music Society may materialise.——Mr. Philip Halstead (pianoforte) and Miss Bessie Spence (violin), assisted by Mr. D. E. Nichols (viola) and Mr. John B. Dickson ('cello), gave a Brahms recital, comprising the C minor Trio, the D minor Violin Sonata, and the Pianoforte Quartet in A major. The recital was largely attended, and the audience showed no lack of appreciation.——The first of the Glasgow University annual series of organ recitals was given by Dr. Sydney Nicholson, who took occasion to make an appeal for his new School of English Church Music.——Miss Héloise Russel-Fergusson gave a Hebridean song recital, and Miss Isobel Wright a pianoforte recital.——Sir Ivor Atkins lectured to the Glasgow Society of Organists on 'The more intimate Organ Works of Bach.'——The Glasgow Orpheus Choir (Mr. Hugh S. Roberton) gave a 'command' performance at Balmoral Castle before The King and Queen, the Duke and Duchess of York, and a large house party. The choir was in its best form. A programme of an hour's duration was sung. There was considerable enthusiasm, and several extra pieces were given at the request of Their Majesties. At the close, Mr. and Mrs. Roberton and the President of the Choir, Mr. F. H. Bisset, were presented to Their Majesties, and subsequently, at The King's personal request, all the members of the Choir were presented to the Royal party. The proceedings were marked throughout by a complete absence of any kind of formality and an easy bonhomie.

PERTH.—Mr. W. Fred Hartley (Dundee) gave a pianoforte recital of standard works. Miss Phyllis Graves sang a number of songs.

SEBASTIAN.

Music in Wales

ABERYSTWYTH.—The College concerts were resumed on October 11, when Prof. de Lloyd conducted the Orchestral Union in Beethoven's first Symphony and two works by Bach. The Choral Union is rehearsing Parts 3 and 4 of the 'Christmas Oratorio,' and hopes to take up Elgar's 'King Olaf' shortly.

BANGOR.—The University College Weekly concerts, which were instituted in 1920, are being continued during the present session. This year's series will include six special concerts at which a number of important works, to be performed by distinguished artists visiting the Bangor Musical Club, will receive a preliminary performance. Amongst such works may be mentioned the Elgar String Quartet, Mendelssohn's Octet, the Fauré Violin Sonata, and Vaughan Williams's 'Concerto Accademico.' Other items of interest promised at the weekly concerts are the 'Brandenburg' Concerto No. 3, Ferrari's Serenade for string orchestra, Holst's Fugal Concerto, and the Seven Bagatelles for string quartet by McEwen.——Six lecture-concerts for children will also be given at the College during the session, and the Choral and Orchestral Society will combine in two concerts, the second of which will be devoted to Bach's 'St. Matthew' Passion.——The Director of Music, Mr. E. T. Davies, is delivering a course of eighteen open lectures on musical topics of general interest.

CARDIFF.—The Museum concerts given by the National Orchestra of Wales, conducted by Mr. Maurice Braithwaite, were attended by over four thousand people during the first three weeks of the autumn season. The Wednesday mid-day concerts, which are particularly planned for students, have included such items as Corelli's Concerto Grosso for two violins, Borodin's second Symphony, and Concertos by Handel for flutes, oboes, bassoons, strings, and clavier, as well as Mozart Symphonies. The Thursday and Saturday Symphony and Popular concerts in the City Hall were resumed on October 4.——Mr. W. A. Richards, for many years accompanist of the Cardiff Musical and the Cardiff Orchestral Societies, died suddenly on September 22.

Musical Notes from Abroad

GERMANY

PIZZETTI'S 'DEBORAH E JAELE' AT HAMBURG

Of all the Italian composers Casella is the most active propagandist for his own cause, Pizzetti the least known to the German public. It is easy to understand why Pizzetti's opera 'Deborah e Jaele,' first performed about five years ago at La Scala, Milan, has not found its way into other European countries. It is too serious a work, as is proved by the title itself. People are afraid of sacred matters in opera. They want to be entertained. The principle of Pizzetti's work, quite contrary to that of Casella, Malipiero, and Respighi, is sincerity. Operatic effect is not important for him. Effect will come, he thinks, from the heart of his dramatic poem. He speaks to the opera-goer as a poet and as a priest. In spite of this, he has seen his work not only conducted by Toscanini, but performed with theatrical effect.

Werner Wolff, Kapellmeister at the Hamburg Stadttheater, who has a certain predilection for Italian opera, gave the first German performance of the 'Deborah e Jaele' on September 27. He wanted the German public to become acquainted with a composer whose seriousness, he thought, would be welcome to the particularly serious people of this town. In this respect he was not disappointed, though, of course, the lack of operatic entertainment made itself felt here also. The drama proved very impressive, whereas the music seemed rather pale. Its purity of style cannot be denied. It goes counter to all that is called modernity. The score, in its beautiful simplicity, was performed as effectively as possible under the excellent conductor; among the singers Emmy Land, who sang as Jaele, gave her part more adequately than Sabine Kalter, who was Deborah. On the whole, it was a personal success for Pizzetti, who attended the performance.

'The Egyptian Helen' at Berlin

The Berlin Staatsoper could not, of course, dispense with Richard Strauss's last opera, in spite of the very cool reception it had received. Since all his works, except the ballet 'Whipped Cream,' are in the Berlin repertory, 'The Egyptian Helen' had to be added to them. But with all the respect due to the composer, it must be said that the impression it left on the hearer was even less favourable here than at Dresden. The public of the première was no doubt bored by the libretto, which, while its literary standard could not be contested, sinned against the theatre. Although most people already knew what happened, or rather did not happen, between Menelaus and Helen, this did not help to elucidate the events of the opera. Nor was Richard Strauss's music strong enough to overcome Hofmannsthal's shortcomings. It does not seem necessary to me to discuss a work which has been the subject of a rather long article in one of my last notices. The situation remains unchanged, or rather it has changed for the worse, for it must be added that not even the greatest admiration for Strauss as the most interesting musical figure at the beginning of the 20th century could counteract the boredom caused by this work. The public remained unexpectedly cool. Leo Blech, conductor of the first Berlin performance, put more emphasis upon the pseudo-lyricism of Act I. In this he followed the advice of the composer, who, with a remarkable lack of self-criticism, attaches particular value to some phrases which, to those familiar with his anterior works, appear to be devoid of substance. Maria Müller sang the part of Helen very nobly, Maria Rajdl was a charming Aithra, but Rudolf Laubenthal, a tenor much praised in the Metropolitan Opera, was a complete failure in every respect. Friedrich Schorr, as the African prince Althair, distinguished himself by his powerful voice. The words of Hofmannsthal's libretto remained unintelligible. The bad pronunciation of his verses was like a vengeance of the singers upon the librettist.

An Orchestra without a Conductor

The Leipsic Symphony Orchestra, apparently encouraged by the example of the Moscow Persimfans Orchestra, has abolished conductorship, making up its mind to form a real republican ensemble. It was heard at Berlin for the first time in the Volksbühne, where collective art finds its home. The men of the orchestra played a Beethoven programme, and gave a more or less exact interpretation of some of the world's best-known music. This was the more astonishing as not a single trace of a leader giving signs could be noticed. The men of the orchestra were, of course, sitting so that they could see each other. It would, however, be too much to say that the absence of the conductor did not make itself felt. Though the performance was exact, it had no personal character. If the orchestra had been first-rate, it would have given better ground for critical comparisons. But it was proved that, in certain cases, an orchestra consisting of men conscious of their artistic responsibility may do without a conductor. If this were generally known, it would teach a little modesty to certain conductors, if the public would only permit the lesson.

Adolf Weissmann.

ITALY

Milan

As the re-awakening of music after its summer sleep, the Siena Festival claims first attention. There we had the great pleasure of meeting many English musicians and critics, including Mr. Hubert Foss, who covered the event for this paper. It was a matter of surprise that the North took so little interest in the Festival, but of the many maestri I have met and spoken with since, the majority have displayed but the slightest interest. As far as the press was concerned, the event was dismissed with a cursory notice. Just now Italy is undergoing a change. One can feel undercurrents that tend towards a retraction of fifty years. A few years ago, unless a programme contained something novel or an unknown composer's name, public interest was at bedrock. But apparently overdoses of modernism are as dangerous as a glut of fresh fruit to a child. The desire for more dies. To-day this phase is passing, and both public and critics are demanding more serious music: I would almost say more religious. Not of the religious-according-to-programme type, but of the sort that Bach wrote—a fine augury indeed. It must be admitted that Italy does not get light fare, and attempts to produce this form are nothing short of futile. A single visit to a variety show will convince one of that. Nothing more atrocious either in conception or performance could possibly be imagined. And this side by side with the fact that to-day, unless a symphonic programme is simply weighted down by heavy names, no one goes.

At the Dal Verme Theatre there has been the customary autumnal season, 'Otello,' 'Norma,' 'La Tosca,' 'Traviata,' 'Werther,' and 'Turandot' being the operas performed. The season has not been too successful either commercially or artistically. There have been the usual complaints, not unjustified, of the power of the dollar when it comes to buying jobs for singers and keeping serious artists out of work. It is said that a certain member of the cast this year paid the sum of thirty thousand liras for the privilege of singing the title-rôles of several operas. This practice is so common nowadays that no one expects to hear a serious performance.

The first of the Symphony concerts organized by the Ente Concerti Orchestrali of La Scala took place the second week in October. Prior to the opening of the Opera there are to be three of these concerts, and up to the time of writing there have been two. Toscanini is the conductor, and the selection of his programmes bears out what I mentioned above regarding the desire for spirituality. The first evening he gave us Mozart's Symphony in D. The arrangement of the programme was chronological, and in their just order were included, other than the Mozart, the second Suite from Ravel's 'Daphnis and Chloe,' the Overture to Paer's opera 'Sargino,' Pizzetti's 'Tre Canzone,' for soprano and string quartet, and Busoni's 'Berceuse Elegiaca.' Ravel and Mozart, if one may use their names so, were the favourites, and enjoyable also were the three Pizzetti songs. Mercédès Llopart was the singer, but did the works less than justice. These songs require a treatment quite beyond the powers of the average Italian operatic soprano.

The second concert consisted of a Sonata of 1610 by Monteverdi, Bach's forty-sixth Cantata, Zoltán Kodály's Hungarian Psalm, and the Intermezzo from Franck's 'Redemption.' Strong meat. The Monteverdi was originally composed for eight instruments, and in its present form is a transcription by Molinari. The liturgical theme 'Sancta Maria' really forms the base of the work. The Bach was particularly good hearing, though much was left to be desired of the choir and soloists. There are no singers at Milan who can do Bach as he should be done. Undoubtedly the success of the evening was the Kodály. It is composed to a 16th-century Hungarian version of the 55th Psalm of David. This work is of the most absolute Hungarianism, and notwithstanding the Biblical quality this characteristic was most evident. Kodály is, judging by this work, one of the strongest writers extant, and able to revivify and raise to the heights of art the unpromising material at his disposal. The Hungarian Psalm unites a dramatic strength with religious plaintiveness. A solo tenor part was sustained by Granda, the possessor of a fine fresh voice.

Charles d'If.

Obituary

We regret to record the following deaths :

Egbert Foster Horner, in London, on October 10. He was born on February 11, 1864. A pupil of Sir Frederick Bridge, he became organist of St. Alphege, Southwark, in 1884, afterwards holding posts at St. Barnabas, Tunbridge Wells, and St. John's, Westminster. Graduating Mus. Bac. at Durham in 1895, he obtained his Doctor's degree five years later. For many years he was a prominent figure in the musico-educational world, being Dean of the Faculty of Music at London University, Examiner for Musical Degrees at London, Durham, and Birmingham Universities, visiting Examiner at the Birmingham and Midland Institute, Member of the Council of the Royal College of Organists, &c. For some years he was hon. secretary to the Union of Graduates in Music. By his death Trinity College of Music suffers a heavy loss, as he was not only Director of Studies there, but also Professor of harmony and counterpoint.

Edmund Whomes, at Bexley Heath, on September 11, aged seventy-six. He was founder and principal of the firm of Whomes, Ltd., pianoforte manufacturers and music sellers. An excellent musician, he held posts as organist and choirmaster at Christ Church, Bexley Heath, St. John's, Woolwich, and St. Mary Cray Parish Church. For several years he conducted the Bexley Heath Orchestral Society and the Royal Arsenal Choral Society, and over a long period was a prominent figure in all kinds of local musical and dramatic activities.

Sir George Power, at Kensington, on October 17, in his eighty-second year. Educated at Cheltenham and Trinity College, Dublin, he proceeded to study singing in Italy under Lamperti and other masters. He made his debut at the Opera House at Malta early in the eighteen-seventies. In England he achieved success as a regular and prominent member of the cast in the early operas of the Gilbert and Sullivan series. Subsequently he became a well-known teacher of singing.

Edgar Barratt, at Glasgow, a well-known pianist, accompanist, and teacher, and composer of several popular salon pieces.

Miscellaneous

We have received the annual Reports of those two excellent organizations, the South Place Sunday Popular Concerts and the Sunday Evening Concert Society. The former is at present without a settled habitation, but is as busy and successful as ever at the City of London School, where it is 'at home' on Sundays at 6.30. This season—the forty-third—began on October 7 with the 1,031st concert. The Sunday Evening Concert Society is a mere infant in comparison, being only eight years old, but it is a lusty one. Last season it gave a hundred and one concerts, and it renews activities with a modest balance in hand, and an excellent prospectus. The concerts take place at the Working Men's College, Crowndale Road, N.W., on Sundays at 6.30.

The chamber music competition for prizes amounting to £2,000, organized by the Musical Fund Society of Philadelphia, resulted as follows: The first prize (£1,200) has been shared between Béla Bartók and Alfredo Casella, and the second (£800) between H. Waldo Warner and Carlo Jachino (Italy). Over six hundred competitors submitted works. This is Mr. Warner's second success in American contests of the kind; a few years ago he won a prize of £200 for a Pianoforte Trio in the Coolidge Competition.

The League of Arts Saturday concerts during November will consist of recitals by Sybil Eaton (3rd), the Westminster String Quartet (10th), and Joan Elwes and Virginia McLean (17th). On the 24th the League Choir will sing Mozart's 'Requiem,' conducted by Geoffrey Shaw. The concerts take place at the Victoria and Albert Museum at 3. Admission is free, but you are asked to buy a sixpenny programme for the good of the cause.

The Amsterdam Society for the Promotion of Music is celebrating its Centenary by offering a prize of 2,500 guilders (about £200) for a choral and orchestral work, with or without soloists. The competition is open to composers of every nationality. Entries close on March 1, 1929. Full particulars from the General Secretary, Society for the Promotion of Music, 33, Nic. Maesstraat, Amsterdam.

DURING THE LAST MONTH

Published by NOVELLO & CO., Limited

BAINTON, EDGAR L.—"And I saw a new heaven." (Anthem.) (No. 1155, Octavo Anthems.) 4d.

BAYNON, ARTHUR.—"Up hill down dale." (Ten short pieces for pianoforte.) 2s.

BOOTH, E. W. E.—"Benedicite, omnia Opera," in C. 2d.

BRAHMS, JOHANNES.—"O rend the heavens" (Motet), Op. 74, No. 2. (No. 1160, Octavo Anthems.) 4d.

CLASSICAL SONGS, Vol. 5. Twenty-five Songs by Various Composers. 2s. 6d.; paper boards, 3s. 6d. (For contents see page 1050.)

JOB, J.—"On this the Christmas morn." (Carol-Anthem.) (No. 1029, The Musical Times.) 3d.

LANG, C. S.—"Remember, O thou man." (Carol-Anthem.) (No. 1158, Octavo Anthems.) 4d.

NOVELLO'S CHRISTMAS CAROLS:

No. 439. "His Dwelling." George Rathbone ... 1½d.
,, 440. "Magi! see the star o'erhead." George Rathbone ... ... 1½d.
,, 441. "The Seven Joys of Mary." C. S. Lang ... ... ... ... 1½d.

PICKARD-CAMBRIDGE, W. A.—"Quare tristis es, anima mea?" ("Wherefore sorrowful, O my spirit.") Motet for S.S.A.T.B. 6d.

SALT, C. A.—"O Lord my God!" (Unaccompanied Anthem with Organ Interludes.) 2d.

SCHOOL MUSIC REVIEW, No. 437, contains the following music in both notations. "The Jackdaw." (Unison Song.) F. W. Wadely. 2d.

SCHOOL SONG SERIES.—Published in two forms. A. Voice Parts in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations, with Pianoforte Accompaniment (8vo). B. Voice Parts only, in Tonic Sol-fa Notation.

| | | A. | B. |
|---|---|---|---|
| No. 1523. | "Fox-cubs, beware." (Junior Unison Song.) German Folk-Song ... ... ... ... | 2d. | — |
| ,, 1526. | "A Christmas Song." (Unison Song.) George Rathbone | 2d. | — |
| Book 332. | Progressive Sight-Tests. A complete course for school classes. (Unison.) Staff Notation ... | 6d. | — |
| ,, 333. | Ditto ditto Tonic Sol-fa | — | 6d. |
| ,, 334. | Ditto ditto (Two- and Three-part.) Staff Notation | 6d. | — |
| ,, 335. | Ditto ditto Tonic Sol-fa | — | 6d. |

DURING THE LAST MONTH—continued.

SCHUBERT, FRANZ.—"The Lord is my Shepherd." (Arranged as a two-part song.) (No. 244, Two-Part Songs.) 4d.

STEWART, C. HYLTON.—Five Short and Easy Pieces founded on Hymn-tunes. (No. 115, Original Compositions for the Organ.) (New Series.) 2s.

SWANTON, F. C. J.—"Hail! gladdening Light." (Evening Hymn.) 2d.

THIMAN, ERIC H.—"O Father, Who didst all things make." (Unaccompanied Anthem for Evensong.) (No. 1156, Octavo Anthems.) 3d.

—— "Earth does not hold." (Anthem for Armistice Day.) (No. 256, Short Anthems.) 3d.

—— "Come, Lord, and rule." (Hymn for Armistice Day.) (No. 1153, Parish Choir Book.) 2d.

TONIC SOL-FA SERIES:

No. 2566. "O what a lovely magic hath been here." (Four-part song.) GRANVILLE BANTOCK ... ... 3d.

,, 2567. "In silent night." (German Folk-Song), arranged by JOHANNES BRAHMS. (Re-arranged for T.T.B.B.) ... ... ... ... 2d.

,, 2568. "O Strength and Stay." (Anthem.) ERIC H. THIMAN... ... ... 2d.

,, 2569. "Let all the world in every corner sing." (Anthem.) ERIC H. THIMAN ... ... ... ... 3d.

WADELY, F. W.—"O God of Wisdom." (Full Anthem for Civic Service or General use.) (No. 1157, Octavo Anthems.) 4d.

WORTH, A.—Two Vesper Hymns. "The day hath passed away" and "Evening shadows gather." 3d.

PUBLISHED FOR

THE H. W. GRAY CO., NEW YORK

ANDREWS, M.—"Abide with me." (Hymn-Anthem.) (No. 966, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.).

—— "First Nowell, The." (Carol-Anthem.) (No. 959, Church Music Review.) 20 cents (10d.).

—— "Strife is o'er, The." (Hymn-Anthem.) (No. 962, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.).

ASHTON, J. N.—"O little town of Bethlehem." Three-Part Song for Women's Voices and Organ. (No. 967, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.).

BACH, J. S.—"Benediction." Response for Mixed Voices (arranged by Philip Gordon). (No. 943, Church Music Review.) 10 cents (6d.).

BEETHOVEN.—"Let the words of my mouth." Short Anthem with Tenor or Soprano Solo (arranged by F. E. Ward). (No. 968, Church Music Review.) 10 cents (6d.).

CALEY, N. H.—"In the end of the Sabbath." Anthem for Easter with Soprano Solo. (No. 958, Church Music Review.) 15 cents (8d.).

DE COSTER, P. D.—"Benedicite." (Shortened form.) For Solo Quartet, Chorus, and Organ. (No. 982, Church Music Review.) 25 cents (1s.).

—— "How sweet the Name." Anthem for Solo Quartet and Chorus. (No. 950, Church Music Review.) 25 cents (1s.).

ELY, C.—"Jubilate Deo." (No. 984, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.).

—— Te Deum Laudamus in C. (No, 979, Church Music Review.) 20 cents (10d.).

EMERY, D. R.—"Holy, Holy, Holy." Anthem for Mixed Voices. (No. 980, Church Music Review.) 20 cents (10d.).

JEWELL, L.—"Bugles of Dreamland, The." (S.S.A.A.) (No. 369, Church Music Review.) 20 cents (10d.).

KORESTCHENKO.—Scherzo for the Organ (arranged by E. A. Kraft). (No. 424, St. Cecilia Series.) 75 cents (3s.).

LUCKE, K. E.—Allegretto for the Organ. (No. 455, St. Cecilia Series.) 75 cents (3s.).

—— Meditation for the Organ. (No. 456, St. Cecilia Series.) 75 cents (3s.).

MACKINNON, HUGH A.—"This endries night I saw a sight." (Carol for Mixed Voices.) (No. 960, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.).

MATTHEWS, J. S.—"Ye Pious Folk." (Carol for Mixed Voices.) (No. 981, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.).

PEELE, D. — Marche Burlesque for the Organ. (No. 432. St. Cecilia Series.) 75 cents (3s.).

—— Marche Fantastique for the Organ. (No. 437, St. Cecilia Series.) 75 cents (3s.).

PRISKE, J. M.—"Whereso'er thou walkest." Anthem with Baritone Solo. (No. 975, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.).

THOMPSON, W. H.—Te Deum Laudamus in D. (No. 956, Church Music Review.) 20 cents (10d.).

VORIS, W. R.—"Come, faithful people." (Palm Sunday Carol.) (No. 976, Church Music Review.) 15 cents (8d.).

—— "Into the woods my Master went." Anthem for S.S.A.A. (No. 969, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.).

—— "Into the woods my Master went." Anthem for T.T.B.B. (No. 974, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.).

WARD, F. E.—"He that maketh peace." Anthem for S.A.T.B. (No. 978, Church Music Review.) 15 cents (8d.).

—— "O Worship the King." Carol-Anthem. (No. 940, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.).

WEBBE, W. Y.—"Hark, the glad sound!" Anthem for Advent with Alto Solo. (No. 977, Church Music Review. 12 cents (6d.).

WILLIAMS, D. Mc. K.—Holy Communion Service in A flat. (No. 986, Church Music Review.) 30 cents (1s. 6d.).

WILLIAMS, W. (arranged by).—"Jesu, Word of God incarnate." (Old Italian Chorale.) (No. 948, Church Music Review.) 10 cents (6d.).

CONTENTS.

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| Schubert and Melodic Design. By Rutland Boughton ... ... | 977 |
| The Middle-Classical Schubert. By Eric Blom ... ... ... | 980 |
| Imitation and Suggestion.—I. By W. S. Drew ... ... ... | 983 |
| The Crisis in the Teaching of Theory. By Leonid Sabaneev ... | 985 |
| The Pianoforte Duets of Schubert. By E. G. Porter ... ... | 989 |
| Music in the Foreign Press. By M.-D. Calvocoressi ... ... | 991 |
| Gramophone Notes. By 'Discus' ... ... ... ... | 992 |
| Wireless Notes. By 'Ariel' ... ... ... ... ... | 994 |
| Player-Piano Notes... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 995 |
| New Music ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 997 |
| The Musician's Bookshelf ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1002 |
| Occasional Notes ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1006 |
| Teachers' Department: Associated Board Pianoforte Examinations for 1929: Notes on the Studies and Pieces. By Ernest Fowles ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1008 |
| An American University Summer Session. By W. G. Whittaker ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1018 |
| Points from Lectures ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1019 |
| Answers to Correspondents ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1021 |
| The School of English Church Music... ... ... ... ... | 1021 |
| A. F. Hesse and his Organ Music. By Stanley Lucas ... ... | 1022 |
| Church and Organ Music... ... ... ... ... ... | 1023 |
| Royal College of Organists ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1023 |
| The Leeds Festival... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1024 |
| Organists' Long Service Roll of Honour. By Charles W. Pearce | 1025 |
| Letters to the Editor ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1026 |
| The Amateurs' Exchange ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1031 |
| Sharps and Flats ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1031 |
| Royal Academy of Music ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1031 |
| Royal College of Music ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1032 |
| Trinity College of Music ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1032 |
| University of Durham ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1032 |
| The Coming Season: Orchestral and Choral Society Programmes | 1033 |
| Competition Festival Record ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1034 |
| London Concerts ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1034 |
| Music in the Provinces ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1036 |
| Music in Scotland ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1037 |
| Music in Wales ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1037 |
| Musical Notes from Abroad ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1037 |
| Obituary ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1039 |
| Miscellaneous ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1039 |

MUSIC.

'On this, the Christmas Morn,' Carol-Anthem. By J. Job 1009

TWO EXTRA SUPPLEMENTS are given with this number:

'Remember, O thou man.' Carol-Anthem. By C. S. Lang.

'Earth does not hold.' Unison Anthem for Armistice Day. By Eric H. Thiman.

REQUIRED A GOOD VIOLA PLAYER (Lady preferred) for a first-class amateur quartet meeting in North London. Particulars to 225, Holly Lodge Mansions, Highgate, N.6.

FOR SALE.—Old-established ORGAN BUILDING, Tuning, and Repairing business in the North of England. Good connection. Principals only. Apply, Box 32, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

WANTED.—St. Bartholomew-the-Great, West Smithfield, SOLO BOY and TWO CHORUS LEAD BOYS. Good remuneration, and expenses. Apply, Choirmaster and Organist, Mr. Anderson Shaw, c/o the Church.

WANTED.—TWO-MANUAL PEDAL ORGAN, in exchange for Piano (value 35 gns.). Particulars to 3, Blende Road, Llandilo, Carm.

ORGANIST-CHOIRMASTER WANTED.—Testimonials essential. Stipend, £50. Keen choir. January. Vicar, West Malvern, Worcestershire.

ORGANIST (not Choirmaster) REQUIRED immediately for country church. Services fully choral; definite churchmanship essential. £30 p.a. Write, stating age, qualifications, and experience, to Rector, Burwash, Sussex.

ASSISTANT-ORGANISTSHIP OR SOLE CHARGE desired by young organist. Previous experience. (Letters only), M. T., 1, Landseer Street, Battersea, S.W.11.

ORCHESTRETTE ORGAN FOR SALE.—Recording and Manual. Cost £800; as new. Bargain price. Apply, Ann, 31, Baker Street, W.1.

SINGING LESSONS REQUIRED by lady in exchange for accompanying. W. London area. Box 31, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

YOUNG SINGERS
Their Voice Cultivation and Preservation.

A concise, comprehensive, up-to-date guide to all engaged in teaching voice-production, enunciation, and singing to boys and girls

By JAMES BATES

To be obtained from:—
MESSRS. STAINER & BELL, 58, Berners Street, London, W.1.

Price One Shilling and Twopence, post free.

All smoking affects the throat!

Pipe, cigar or cigarette—no matter which—the delicate membranes of the throat object to smoke, which eventually produces irritation, either mild or severe. To prevent this, take an 'Allenburys' Glycerine and Black Currant Pastille occasionally between smokes and let it dissolve in the mouth. Containing pure glycerine and the luscious fruit juice of ripe black currants, they are delightfully soothing.

Your Chemist Stocks them

In Tins, 2 oz. 8d., 4 oz. 1/3, 8 oz. 2/3. 1 lb. 4/3

Allenburys Glycerine & Black Currant PASTILLES

NOVELLO'S CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

LATEST NUMBERS

| No. | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 398. | O lovely voices of the sky ... | W. G. Alcock | 2d. |
| 399. | This Day ... ... | Gerrard Williams | 1½d. |
| *400. | Hark! what mean those Holy voices | A. Sullivan | 4d. |
| *401. | Four Christmas Carols ... ... ... | | 2d. |
| | 1. In Bethlehem, that noble place | B. J. Dale | |
| | 2. Sleep, Holy Babe! ... | R. W. Robson | |
| | 3. The First Christmas Night | W. H. Sangster | |
| | 4. There dwelt a King ... | John E. West | |
| | (Words only, 4s. per 100.) | | |
| *402. | Silent Night ... ... ... | Franz Grüber | 2d. |
| 403. | Carols of Bethlehem ... ... | C. W. Pearce | 2d. |
| | 1. No room in the Inn. 2. The heavenly host. 3. Our "House of Bread." | | |
| 404. | Good King Wenceslas... ... | Geoffrey Shaw | 2d. |
| *405. | O lovely voices of the sky (Unison) | Cuthbert Harris | 1½d. |
| *406. | Ditto. (Four Voices) | Cuthbert Harris | 2d. |
| 407. | His Birthday Keep ... | A. M. Goodhart | 1½d. |
| 408. | Christmas Cradle Song ... | J. F. Bridge | 1½d. |
| 409. | Carol, Carol, tenderly, sweetly | J. F. Bridge | 1½d. |
| 410. | Rejoice, the Christ has come | Stanley Marchant | 1½d. |
| *411. | The shepherds found Theeby night | Geoffrey Shaw | 3d. |
| 412. | The Carollers ... ... ... | E. Bunnett | 1½d. |
| 413. | The stars are shining bright and clear ... ... Carol, sweetly carol ... | E. Bunnett | 1½d. |
| 414. | Christmas Bells ... ... ... | E. Bunnett | 1½d. |
| 415. | A Child this day is born Hark! what mean those Holy Voices ... | E. Bunnett | 1½d. |
| 416. | The Angel's Carol ... ... | E. Bunnett | 1½d. |
| 417. | While shepherds watched Angels from the realms of glory ... ... | E. Bunnett | 1½d. |
| 418. | A Christmas chime ... ... | E. Bunnett | 1½d. |
| 419. | A Cradle Song ... ... | A. H. Brewer | 1½d. |
| 420. | Gather the holly-bough... | H. E. Watts | 1½d. |
| 421. | The Three Wise Men ... | Alfred Hollins | 1½d. |
| 422. | The Holly and the Ivy... | Geoffrey Shaw | 1½d. |
| 423. | There is no rose... ... | Gerrard Williams | 1½d. |
| *424. | The Christ-Child (Unison) ... | G. Rathbone | 2d. |
| 425. | All Christian men ... | H. A. Chambers | 1½d. |
| 426. | I saw three Kings ... ... | G. Rathbone | 1½d. |
| 427. | O come this day ... ... | H. G. Ley | 1½d. |
| 428. | All hail with joy ... ... | Chastey Hector | 1½d. |
| 429. | Rosa Mystica ... ... ... | B. J. Dale | 4d. |
| 430. | Cradle Song ... ... ... | B. J. Dale | 4d. |
| 431. | O lovely voices ... | H. A. Chambers | 1½d. |
| 432. | The Christ-Child (Four Voices) | G. Rathbone | 2d. |
| 433. | A Lullaby Carol ... ... | Geoffrey Shaw | 2d. |
| 434. | While shepherds watched | C. Lee Williams | 1½d. |
| 435. | The First Nowell (with Descant) | Traditional | 2d. |
| 436. | Good King Wenceslas (with Descant) | ,, | 2d. |
| 437. | Balulalow ... ... | Roy Thompson | 1½d. |
| 438. | Sing we how the Heavenly Star | Roy Thompson | 1½d. |
| 439. | His dwelling ... ... ... | G. Rathbone | 1½d. |
| 440. | O Magi! see the star o'erhead | G. Rathbone | 1½d. |
| 441. | The Seven Joys of Mary ... | C. S. Lang | 1½d. |
| 442. | A Virgin unspotted (with Descant) | Traditional | 2d. |
| 443. | What Child is this (with Descant) | Old English | 2d. |
| 444. | Good Christian men, rejoice (with Descant) | Old German | 2d. |
| 445. | I saw three ships coming sailing in (with Descant) ... ... ... | Traditional | 2d. |
| 446. | Shepherds, shake off your drowsy sleep (with Descant) ... ... | Besançon Carol | 2d. |

* Also published in Tonic Sol-fa.

CANTATAS FOR CHRISTMAS

THE HOLY CHILD

FOR SOPRANO, TENOR, AND BASS SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORGAN

THE MUSIC BY

T. ADAMS.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence;
Tonic Sol-fa, Eightpence.
Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

THE NATIVITY

FOR SOPRANO, TENOR, AND BASS SOLI AND CHORUS

With Hymns to be sung by the Congregation

(THE WORDS AND HYMNS SELECTED)

THE MUSIC BY

T. ADAMS.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence;
Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.
Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

†CHRISTMAS ORATORIO

THE MUSIC BY

J. S. BACH.

Divided into six sections, intended originally for separate performance on the three days of Christmas, New Year's Day, New Year's Sunday, and the Festival of the Epiphany.

Price, Paper Cover, Three Shillings.
Boards, 4s.; Cloth, 6s.
Vocal Parts, One Shilling and Sixpence each.
Parts 1 and 2, 1s. 6d.; Parts 3 and 4, 1s. 6d.;
Parts 5 and 6, 1s. 6d.
Tonic Sol-fa, Parts 1 and 2, 8d.; Parts 3 and 4, 1s.
Book of Words, complete (per 100), 12s. 6d.
Books of Words, Parts 1 and 2 (per 100), 6s. 6d.

†CHRISTIANS, GRAVE YE THIS GLAD DAY

(CHRISTEN ÄTZET DIESEN TAG!)

A Christmas-Day Cantata (S.A.T.B. Soli)

Edited by J. E. WEST. English Words by C. AVELING.

THE MUSIC BY

J. S. BACH.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

†BEFORE THE PALING OF THE STARS

A CHRISTMAS HYMN

(FOR VOICES AND ORCHESTRA)

THE WORDS BY

C. ROSSETTI.

THE MUSIC BY

B. J. DALE.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence;
Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.

THE COMING OF THE KING

CANTATA FOR FEMALE VOICES

THE WORDS BY

H. M. BURNSIDE.

THE MUSIC BY

M. B. FOSTER

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence;
Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.
Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

†CHRISTMAS EVE

FOR CONTRALTO SOLO, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

THE MUSIC BY

N. W. GADE.

Price, Paper Cover, One Shilling and Sixpence;
Boards, Two Shillings and Sixpence;
Tonic Sol-fa, Sixpence.

CHRISTMAS CANTATA

FOR SOLI AND CHORUS

THE WORDS BY

R. D. BETJEMANN.

THE MUSIC BY

J. HARRISON.

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.
Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

†FIRST CHRISTMAS MORN

THE WORDS BY

S. J. STONE.

THE MUSIC BY

H. LESLIE.

Price, Vocal Score, Four Shillings.
Vocal Parts, Eightpence each.
Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

BETHLEHEM

FOR FOUR SOLO VOICES AND CHORUS

Interspersed with Hymns to be sung by the Congregation

THE WORDS WRITTEN AND ARRANGED BY

E. C. NUNN.

THE MUSIC BY

J. H. MAUNDER.

Price Three Shillings;
Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling and Sixpence.
Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

†THE STORY OF BETHLEHEM

FOR SOPRANO, TENOR, AND BASS SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORGAN.

THE WORDS BY

S. WENSLEY.

THE MUSIC BY

J. E. WEST.

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence;
Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.
Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

† Full Score and Orchestral Parts may be had.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

ANTHEMS, &c., FOR CHRISTMAS

RECENTLY PUBLISHED.

GEORGE RATHBONE.
HOW BEAUTIFUL UPON THE MOUNTAINS
Price 4d.; Tonic Sol-fa, 3d.

P. E. FLETCHER.
NOW ONCE AGAIN
CAROL-ANTHEM.
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.
Ditto, Female Voices, Fourpence.

H. W. JONES.
THERE WERE SHEPHERDS
Price Fourpence.

GEORGE RATHBONE.
AND WE BEHELD HIS GLORY
Price Fourpence: Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

SELECTED LIST.

A. ADAM.
O HOLY NIGHT
ARRANGED AS ANTHEM FOR SOPRANO (OR TENOR) SOLO AND CHORUS.
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Three-Halfpence.

T. ADAMS.
ARISE, SHINE, O JERUSALEM
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

T. ADAMS.
THOU ART MY SON
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

W. G. ALCOCK.
BREAK FORTH INTO JOY
Price Fourpence.

E. C. BAIRSTOW.
OF THE FATHER'S LOVE BEGOTTEN
Price Fourpence.

C. BAYLEY.
GLORY TO GOD IN THE HIGHEST
Price Threepence: Tonic Sol-fa, Three-Halfpence.

J. F. BRIDGE.
IN THAT DAY
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

E. BUNNETT.
ARISE, SHINE, FOR THY LIGHT IS COME
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

E. BUNNETT.
BEHOLD, I BRING YOU GOOD TIDINGS
Price Threepence.

E. BUNNETT.
IN THE BEGINNING WAS THE WORD
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

H. A. CHAMBERS.
ARISE, SHINE, FOR THY LIGHT IS COME
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

P. E. FLETCHER.
RING OUT, WILD BELLS
FESTIVAL CAROL
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Fourpence.
Ditto, T T.B.B., Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Fourpence.
Ditto, S.S.A., Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.
Ditto, S.A., Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

M. B. FOSTER.
CHRIST'S INCARNATION
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

CH. GOUNOD.
NAZARETH
ARRANGED FOR BARITONE SOLO AND CHORUS.
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

E. V. HALL.
WHILE SHEPHERDS WATCHED
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

A. HOLLINS.
SING, O HEAVENS
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

C. H. LLOYD.
REJOICE GREATLY, O DAUGHTER OF ZION
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

A. W. MARCHANT.
O COME, REDEEMER OF MANKIND
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

J. H. MAUNDER.
SING, O HEAVENS
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

G. SHAW.
HOW FAR IS IT TO BETHLEHEM
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.
Ditto, Unison Setting, Twopence.
Ditto, S.S.C., Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

C. V. STANFORD.
WHILE SHEPHERDS WATCHED
Price Fourpence.

B. STEANE.
LET US NOW GO EVEN UNTO BETHLEHEM
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

B. STEANE.
SING, O HEAVENS
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

A. S. SULLIVAN.
SING, O HEAVENS
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

J. E. WEST.
A SONG OF JOY
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

A. W. WILSON.
WITH ALL THY HOSTS
Price Twopence.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

"Such settings as these cannot do otherwise than tend to popularise the Church Service."—Musical Standard, June 6, 1891.
"Good, effective, easy, and dignified."—Musical Times, April 1, 1891.
"Admirably adapted to meet the requirements of the majority of choirs and congregations." "Deserve extensive recognition and use."—Musical News, September 4 and 25, 1891.
Also recommended by the Guardian, Church Times, &c., &c.

POPULAR CHURCH MUSIC
BY
J. H. MAUNDER

| | Staff Notation. | Tonic Sol-fa. |
|---|---|---|
| CHRISTMAS ANTHEMS. | | |
| Anthem—Christians, Awake | 4d. | 3d. |
| Once in Bethlehem | 3d. | 2d. |
| Two Christmas Carols | 4d. | 3d. |
| SERVICES | | |
| SERVICE IN G | 2s. | 1s. 4d. |
| Or, separately:— | | |
| Te Deum | 4d. | 3d. |
| Benedicite, omnia Opera | 3d. | 3d. |
| Benedictus | 3d. | 3d. |
| Jubilate | 4d. | 3d. |
| Office for the Holy Communion | 10d. | 8d. |
| Pater Noster from the above | 3d. | 3d. |
| Amen ditto | 1½d. | 1½d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis | 4d. | 3d. |
| SERVICE IN CHANT FORM (No. 1) | 1s. 4d. | 10d. |
| Or, separately:— | | |
| Te Deum, &c., with Kyrie | 4d. | 3d. |
| Office for the Holy Communion | 8d. | 6d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis | 4d. | 3d. |
| Te Deum in B flat | 4d. | 3d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in C (partly Unison) | 4d. | 2d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in D | 4d. | 3d. |
| ORGAN. | | |
| Voix Seraphique (for Recitals) | 2s. 6d. | — |
| CHURCH CANTATA. | | |
| Penitence, Pardon, and Peace (for general use) | 2s. | 1s. 4d. |

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

TEXT-BOOKS
BY
ALBERT HAM, Mus. Doc., F.R.C.O.

OUTLINES OF MUSICAL FORM
WITH ANALYSES FROM
WELL-KNOWN CLASSICAL WORKS.
Price ... Five Shillings.

"In all respects this is an admirable little work, with no waste, no hiatus of a serious nature, handy in size, and with a practical scheme well carried through."—Musical Times.
Dr. C. W. PEARCE, in alluding to the above work, says:
"Quite the best I have ever seen, and I shall lose no opportunity for recommending it."

THE RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC AND ELEMENTARY HARMONY.
THIRD EDITION.
Price ... Five Shillings.

"Dr. Ham's admirable little work may be cordially recommended."—Musical Times.

THE SOLITUDES OF THE PASSION
A PASSIONTIDE CANTATA.
For Solo Voices (Tenor and Baritone) and Chorus, with Hymns for Choir and Congregation.
Price 2s. Words only, 12s. 6d. per 100.
"A useful addition to the store of choral works for use in Lent and Passiontide is Dr. Albert Ham's Cantata, 'The Solitudes of the Passion.' The words are Biblical and well selected. The music is devotional and very singable."—Musical Times.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| MINUET AND TRIO FOR ORGAN | 2 | 0 |
| PEDAL AND MANUAL SCALES AND ARPEGGIOS | 2 | 6 |
| ANTHEMS: The desert shall rejoice. S. or T. Solo and Chorus (S.A.T.B.) | 0 | 3 |
| I heard the Voice of Jesus say. Bar. Solo and Chorus (T.T.B.B.) | 0 | 4 |
| PART-SONG: Music, when soft voices die (S.A.T.B.) | 0 | 3 |

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

READY SHORTLY

A HANDBOOK FOR CHORALISTS

BY

HARVEY GRACE

CONTAINING HINTS ON SIGHT-SINGING AND CHORAL TECHNIQUE AND EXPRESSION.

Thirty-four Studies specially composed by Edward C. Bairstow, Harold Darke, T. F. Dunhill, Julius Harrison, Geoffrey Shaw, and the Author. Six Rounds by Beethoven

WITH A FOREWORD BY

SIR WALFORD DAVIES

PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NATIONAL INSTITUTE FOR THE BLIND

(REGISTERED UNDER THE BLIND PERSONS ACT, 1920)

CHRISTMAS CAROL BOOKLET No. 6

FOUR CAROLS

Intended to be Sung by CHILDREN

WORDS BY

BLIND POETS

MUSIC BY

BLIND MUSICIANS

Both Words and Music being Prize Compositions, the result of a Literary and Musical Competition organized by the National Institute for the Blind.

PRICE THREEPENCE

A FREE GRANT of the necessary copies will gladly be made to CHURCHES or SCHOOLS willing to set apart a Collection in aid of the far-reaching work which the NATIONAL INSTITUTE FOR THE BLIND conducts on behalf of the Blind of the British Empire.

Applications for free copies (stating how many desired) should be addressed to the Secretary, Music Department, National Institute for the Blind, 224-6-8, Great Portland Street, London, W.1.

Published by NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED, 160, WARDOUR STREET, LONDON, W.1.

POPULAR CHRISTMAS ANTHEMS

COMPOSED BY EDWIN A. CLARE

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| *BEHOLD, I BRING... ... ... ... ... ... | 34th 1000 | 4d. |
| *SING, O HEAVENS ... ... ... ... ... | 24th 1000 | 4d. |
| *CHOIRS OF ANGELS ... ... ... ... ... | 12th 1000 | 4d. |
| *GOODWILL TO MEN ... ... ... ... ... | 21st 1000 | 4d. |
| *WE HAVE SEEN HIS STAR ... ... ... ... | 26th 1000 | 4d. |
| *BLESSED BE THE KING... ... ... ... ... | 8th 1000 | 4d. |
| A SAVIOUR, CHRIST THE LORD ... ... ... | 7th 1000 | 4d. |
| THE PRINCE OF PEACE... ... ... ... ... | 21st 1000 | 4d. |
| Favourite MAGNIFICAT and NUNC DIMITTIS in D | 31st 1000 | 6d. |

Full of flowing melody and effect. Sung at a Choir Festival.

*Those marked * may also be had in tonic Sol-fa.*

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1. New York: THE H. W. GRAY CO., Sole Agents for the U.S.A.

OVER EIGHT MILLION COPIES OF CALEB SIMPER'S Compositions in Church Music now sold.

NEW CHRISTMAS ANTHEMS, Etc.

COMPOSED BY CALEB SIMPER

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| *WITH ANGELS SING. New ... ... ... ... ... | 8th Edit. | 4d. |

Melodious and expressive Solo. Irresistible Choruses with running parts which will delight the singers.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| *GLORY SHONE AROUND... ... ... ... ... | 10th Edit. | 4d. |
| *PEACE AND GOODWILL ... ... ... ... ... | 11th Edit. | 4d |
| *A SON IS GIVEN ... ... ... ... ... ... | 10th Edit. | 6d. |
| *THE PRINCE OF PEACE ... ... ... ... ... | 6th Edit. | 4d. |
| *AND ON EARTH PEACE ... ... ... ... ... | 6th Edit. | 4d. |

NEW CAROLS.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| *THE SONG OF LOVE. *STAR OF THE MORNING ... | each | 1½d. |
| *O SOFTLY TREAD. *JOYFUL CAROLS SINGING ... ... | each | 1½d. |
| *HEARKEN TO THE CHRISTMAS BELLS ... ... ... ... | | 1½d. |
| *LET BELLS OF NOËL RING ... ... ... ... ... ... | | 1½d. |
| *GOODWILL AND PEACE. *O CAROL EXULTANT... ... | each | 1½d. |
| GOD IS OUR REFUGE ... ... ... ... ... ... | 9th Edit. | 8d. |

Short Work. Solos and Choruses. Occupies about 18 minutes.

Very Popular Voluntary Books, 2s. each. Over 200,000 sold.

Recent Nos., Books 11 and 12. Seventeen Pieces in each, written on Two Staves with Pedal-part indicated.

*Those marked * are also issued in Tonic Sol-fa.*

London: A. WEEKES & Co., 14, Hanover Street, Regent Street, W.1. Chicago, U.S.A.: CLAYTON F. SUMMY Co., 429, S. Wabash Ave.

WEEKES & CO.'S Choral Works for Christmas

CHRISTMAS EVE

SOPRANO (OR TENOR) SOLO AND MALE-VOICE CHOIR

By STANLEY MARCHANT, Mus.D.

Vocal Score, 1s. 6d.

A beautiful setting of a translation of Words by MARTIN LUTHER. Vocally, most effective. About 15 minutes.

Orchestral Parts can be hired

STORY OF THE INCARNATION

TENOR SOLOS AND CHORUS

By J. VARLEY ROBERTS, Mus.D.

Vocal Score, 1s. 6d. Words only, 1½d.

Easy and melodious Cantata, with Carols interspersed, bearing on passages of Scripture sung by Narrator. About 35 minutes.

THE ANGELS' MESSAGE

TENOR AND TREBLE SOLOS AND CHORUS

By E. VINE HALL

Vocal Score, 1s. Sol-fa (Choruses), 4d.

Short, easy, tuneful Cantata of five numbers. About 12 minutes.

THE SHEPHERDS AND THE MAGI

SOPRANO, TENOR, AND BASS SOLOS AND CHORUS

By CYRIL BOWDLER, Mus.D.

Vocal Score, 2s. Words with Hymn-Tunes, 3d. (22s. 6d. per 100)

Words only, 2d. (15s. per 100)

A beautiful devotional setting for mixed choirs and Parish Church Choirs

A musicianly and melodious work. 40 minutes.

Send for Specimens on appro.

POPULAR ANTHEMS FOR CHRISTMAS

BY CALEB SIMPER

43 Separate Anthems, of which 2,500 Editions have been printed.

Special List and Approval Specimens on application.

GEORGE BELCHER

| | |
|---|---|
| And the Angel said (for Treble Voices) (O.N. only) | 3d. |
| His Only Begotten Son ... ... ... ... ... | 4d. |
| A Righteous Branch ... ... ... ... ... | 4d. |

ARTHUR BERRIDGE

| | |
|---|---|
| The Wise Men came from lands afar ... ... ... | 4d. |
| Brightest and Best ... ... ... ... ... | 4d. |
| Christmas Morn ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4d. |
| Thy King cometh unto thee ... ... ... ... | 4d. |
| The Lord is come! ... ... ... ... ... | 4d. |

REV. E. VINE HALL

| | |
|---|---|
| Rejoice, O Daughter of Zion ... ... ... ... | 4d. |
| Behold, I bring you good tidings ... ... ... | 4d. |
| God from on High hath heard ... ... ... ... | 4d. |
| Glory to God in the Highest ... ... ... ... | 4d. |
| All my heart this night rejoices ... ... ... | 4d. |

All Anthems also in Sol-fa at 3d. each

THREE OUTSTANDING CAROLS

| | |
|---|---|
| Angels from the Realms of Glory ... | C. Lee Williams |
| Soft and White ... ... ... ... | Harold B. Osmond |
| We be Kings from lands afar ... ... | Armstrong Gibbs |

1½d. each, both notations

Send for a Selection on appro.

A. WEEKES & CO., LTD., 13 & 14, HANOVER STREET, LONDON, W.1.

CAROLS BY JOSEPH C. BRIDGE.

1. ON CHRISTMAS NIGHT ... ... ... ... ... 3d.
2. AWAY WITH GRIEF ... ... ... ... ... 3d.
3. THE MERRY CHRISTMAS MORN ... ... ... 3d.
4. HOLY NIGHT ... ... ... ... ... ... 2d.
5. AWAKE THE VOICE (S.S.A. only) ... ... ... ... 4d.
6. CHRISTMAS IN THE FIELDS (Béarnais Melody) ... 2d.
7. WHEN CHRIST WAS BORN (Chester Mystery Play)... 3d.
8. REJOICE WITH HEART AND VOICE (Old French Melody) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... 2d.
9. THE SHEPHERDS' CAROL (Coventry Mystery Play) 3d.
10. LULLABY (Coventry Mystery Play) ... ... ... ... 2d.
11. ACROSS THE SNOW ... ... ... ... ... 2d.
12. THE SHEPHERDS HAD AN ANGEL (S.S. only) ... 2d.
13. ON BETHLEHEM'S HILL ... ... ... ... ... 3d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

CHRISTMAS CAROLS

By R. WALKER ROBSON

LO! NEW-BORN JESUS ... ... ... ... ... ... 3d.
O'ER THE MEADOWS (2nd Edition) ... ... ... ... 2d.
SLEEP, HOLY BABE ... ... ... ... ... ... 1½d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

T. MEE PATTISON'S POPULAR CANTATA

THE ANCIENT MARINER

33rd 1,000.

Vocal Score, 2s. 6d. Choruses only, 1s. 3d.

Band Parts may be hired.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED

The Magnificat & Nunc Dimittis

Set to Music in the key of B flat, for S.A.T.B.; the Accompaniment ad lib.

BY

H. SCOTT-BAKER

Price Threepence.

N.B.—The Compass of the Tenor Part is within the range of the Baritone Voice.

To be sung with rhythmical accentuation in the style of Plain Chant.

Specimen Copy gratis on application. "Clovelly," York Road, Woking.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

CHRISTMAS ANTHEMS

BY

E. W. S. WATSON

THE RANSOMED OF THE LORD.
HARK! THE GLAD SOUND.
REJOICE GREATLY.
HARK HOW ALL THE WELKIN RINGS.

PRICE: Old Notation, 4d.; Tonic Sol-fa, 3d.

Specimen copies gratis and post free to the Clergy and Choirmasters.

THE NORTHERN MUSIC CO.,
147, TURNPIKE LANE, HORNSEY, LONDON, N.8

THE ORGANIST RECITAL SERIES

WITH PEDAL OBBLIGATO. Price 1s. 6d. each.

1. Chansonette ... ... Wilfrid Sanderson
2. Songe d'Amour ... Wilfrid Sanderson
3. Serenata ... ... Wilfrid Sanderson
4. Sincerite ... ... Wilfrid Sanderson
5. Novelette ... ... Wilfrid Sanderson
6. Reverie ... ... Wilfrid Sanderson
7. Brise d'Ete ... ... Wilfrid Sanderson
8. { Prelude (Rachmaninoff) / Traumerei (Schumann) } Wilfrid Sanderson
9. Priere ... ... ... H. Norsworthy
10. Barcarolle ... ... ... A. H. Leary
11. Pastorella ... ... ... Henry Geehl
12. A Memory ... ... ... L. N. Fowles
13. Triumphal March ... Ernest Newton
14. Allegretto in D ... Ernest Newton
15. Dawn (a prelude) ... ... Henry Geehl
16. La Prière des Anges... ... J. E. Newell
17. Canto Religioso ... ... J. A. Meale
18. For all Eternity, &c.... ... A. Mascheroni
19. Nocturne in G minor, Op. 37, No. 1 Chopin
20. Une Idylle ... ... Edward Elgar
21. The Londonderry Air Arr. Ernest Newton
22. Melodie d'Amour (H. Engelmann) Arr. Ernest Newton
23. Hear my Prayer and O for the wings of a Dove (Mendelssohn) Arr. Ernest Newton
24. The Gentle Maiden ... Arr. Ernest Newton
25. Song of the Volga Boatmen Arr. Ernest Newton

NOS. 1—20 PUBLISHED COMPLETE IN ONE VOLUME, BOUND, PRICE 12s. 6d. NET.

GOULD & BOLTTLER, 47, POLAND STREET, LONDON, W 1

CHRISTMAS MUSIC

• • • • • •

THE OXFORD BOOK OF CAROLS

By PERCY DEARMER, R. VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, and MARTIN SHAW

Music Edition, complete, 6s. net. Words Edition with notes, 4s. 6d. net

Cheap Words Edition, 1s. and 1s. 6d. net

Many of the Carols can be obtained separately

BACH'S CANTATAS

Edited by W. G. WHITTAKER, with English words by C. SANFORD TERRY

No. 122. 'Sing we the Birth'.
Vocal score, 1s. 9d. Choruses only, 9d.

No. 121. 'Lord Christ, we now Thy praises sing'.
Vocal score, 2s. Choruses only, 1s.

VARIOUS CANTATAS

HAROLD DARKE, 'Ring out, ye crystal spheres' 2s.

F. C. HAPPOLD and R. R. BROOME, 'The Finding of the King'. A Nativity Play 3s.

ROBIN MILFORD, 'The Shoemaker'. Children's operetta 3s. 6d.

Orchestral accompaniment may be hired to all above

CAROLS AND CHRISTMAS SONGS

THE OXFORD CHORAL SONGS

UNISON

1. E. L. BAINTON, 'Ring out Wild Bells' 3d.
10. PETER WARLOCK, 'Adam lay Ybounden' 3d.
11. PETER WARLOCK, 'Balulalow' 3d.
15. PETER WARLOCK, 'Tyrley Tyrlow' 4d.
28. HERBERT HOWELLS, 'Holly Song' 3d.
59. ROBIN MILFORD, 'The Gracious Time' 3d.
60. ROBIN MILFORD, 'A Frosty Christmas Eve' 4d.
61. ROBIN MILFORD, 'When at night I go to sleep' 3d.
62. ROBIN MILFORD, 'Lo, Here are Shepherds' 3d.
65. TAYLOR HARRIS, 'Come, Sing and Dance' 4d.
66. LILIAN SMITH, 'Christmas' 3d.
67. HARRY FARJEON, 'Carol' 3d.
72. PERCY JUDD, 'Christmas' 3d.
84. E. MARKHAM LEE, 'Here a little child I stand' 3d.
87. E. J. MOERAN, 'Christmas Day in the Morning' 3d.
96. E. L. BAINTON, 'A Christmas Carol' 3d.

TWO PART

101. E. L. BAINTON, 'Old Winter' 5d.
113. HERBERT HOWELLS, 'My Master hath a garden' 4d.
136. WADDINGTON COOKE, 'While Shepherds watched' 4d.
367. RICHARD DERING, 'Above Him stood the Seraphim' 4d.

THREE PART

211. J. M. JOSEPH, 'The Three Kings' 5d.
212. J. M. JOSEPH, 'Adam lay Ybounden' 4d.
213. J. M. JOSEPH, 'Of one that is so fair and bright' 5d.
*507. W. H. BELL, 'Hymn to the Virgin' 6d.
*508. W. H. BELL, 'The Maiden that is Makeles' 5d.
*509. W. H. BELL, 'Mater ora filium' 6d
*510. W. H. BELL, 'The Flower of Jesse' 6d.

MIXED VOICES

*251. PETER WARLOCK, Three Carols ('Balulalow', 'Tyrley Tyrlow', and 'The Sycamore Tree') 1s.
706. E. DUNCAN RUBBRA, 'The Virgin's Cradle Hymn' 3d.
713. ARNOLD FOSTER, 'The Coventry Carol' 5d.
714. HEATH GRACIE, 'I sing of a maiden' 3d.
718. HEALEY WILLAN, 'The Three Kings' 5d.

* Orchestral accompaniment can be hired

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS

95 WIMPOLE STREET, W.1

NOVELLO'S EDITIONS

ORGAN VOLUNTARIES

BASED ON POPULAR HYMN TUNES

ADAMS, THOMAS — s. d.
Short Fantasia on 'Abridge' (No. 16, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6
Short Fantasia on 'Veni, Creator Spiritus' (No. 46, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

BEST, WILLIAM T.
Preludes on the tunes 'London,' 'Halifax,' and 'St. Bride' (Bk. 3, Best's Collection of Pieces)... ... 3 0

CALKIN, J. BAPTISTE
Study on Pleyel's Hymn (No. 4, Calkin's Compositions) ... ... 3 0

DARKE, HAROLD E.
Three Choral Preludes:
'St. Peter'
'Darwell's 148th'
Theme by Tallis
(No. 60, Original Compositions) (New Series) 3 6

FAULKES, WILLIAM
Alleluya, Festal Prelude on the tune 'Lasst uns erfreuen' (No. 110, Original Compositions) (New Series) ... ... ... ... ... 1 6
Fantasia on the old melody 'Urbs beata' (No. 379, Original Compositions) ... ... 1 6
Festival Prelude on 'Ein' feste Burg' (No. 3, Original Compositions) (New Series) 2 0

HIGGS, HENRY M.
Variations on the tune 'Heinlein' (No. 44, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

LÉFÉBURE-WÈLY, L. J. A.
Processional Hymn, 'Adoro te' (No. 6, 'The Modern Organist') ... ... 3 0

LEMARE, EDWIN H.
Concert Fantasia on the tune 'Hanover' (No. 4, Lemare's Original Compositions)... 4 6

MACFARREN, GEORGE A.
Variations on the tune 'Windsor' (No. 81, Original Compositions) ... ... 1 6

MORGAN, THOMAS J.
Fantasia on the tune 'Twrgwyn' (No. 66, Original Compositions) (New Series) 2 0

PARRY, C. HUBERT H.
Seven Chorale Preludes (1st Set):
'Dundee' 'Melcombe'
'Rockingham' 'Christe, Redemptor omnium'
'Hampton'
'Old 104th' 'St. Ann's'
(No. 1, Original Compositions) (New Series) 5 6

Seven Chorale Preludes (2nd Set):
'Croft's 136th' 'St. Mary'
'Martyrdom' 'Eventide'
'St. Thomas' 'St. Cross'
'Hanover'
(No. 45, Original Compositions) (New Series) 5 6

PYE, JAMES T. — s. d.
Introductory Voluntary on the Russian Hymn (No. 446, Original Compositions) ... ... 1 6

SILAS, EDWARD
Fantasia on 'St. Ann's' tune (No. 14, Silas's Original Compositions) ... 2 0

SPARK, WILLIAM
Jerusalem the Golden, with Variations and Finale ... ... ... ... ... ... 2 0

STEPHENS, CHARLES E.
Concluding Voluntary or Fantasia on the Chorale 'St. Mary' or 'Hackney' (No. 13, Original Compositions) ... ... 1 6
Fantasia on Choral 'St. James's' (No. 260, Original Compositions) ... ... 2 0

STEWART, C. HYLTON
Five Short and Easy Pieces, founded on Hymn Tunes:
'Caithness' 'Croft's 136th'
'Babylon's Streams' 'St. Peter'
'Aberystwyth'
(No. 115, Original Compositions) (New Series) 2 0

THORNE, EDWARD H.
Variations on the tune 'St. Luke' (No. 306, Original Compositions) ... ... 3 0

WALLACE, JAMES E.
Chorale Fantasia on the tune 'Heinlein' (No. 75, Original Compositions) (New Series) 3 0

WEST, JOHN E.
Prelude on Dykes's tune 'Requiescat' (No. 37, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6
Three Chorale Preludes:
'Winchester New'
'Burford'
'St. Michael'
(No. 47, Original Compositions) (New Series) 3 6
Improvisation on Schultz's tune 'We plough the fields' (No. 43, 'The Village Organist') 1 6
Prelude on Sullivan's tune 'We are but strangers here' (No. 37, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6
Prelude on Dykes's tune 'Now the labourer's task is o'er' (No. 37, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

WOODS, F. CUNNINGHAM
Variations on Elvey's tune 'Come, ye thankful people, come' (No. 43, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

CRAMER'S LIBRARY of ORGAN MUSIC by BRITISH COMPOSERS

Edited by MARTIN SHAW

SET II.

| | | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1. | EXULTATION ... ... ... ... ... ... ... CHASTEY HECTOR | 2 | 0 |
| 2. | A GROUND (Evening Hymn) ... ... HENRY PURCELL (arr. Harvey Grace) | 2 | 0 |
| 3. | PROLOGUE ... ... ... ... ... ... ... L. HENNIKER | 2 | 0 |
| 4. | PRELUDE ON TWO CHRISTMAS CAROLS (The First Nowell and The Virgin Unspotted) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... J. B. ROOPER | 2 | 0 |
| 5. | RHAPSODY IN C MAJOR ... ... ... ... HEATHCOTE D. STATHAM | 3 | 0 |
| 6. | CARILLON ... ... ... ... ... ... ... GODFREY SCEATS | 1 | 6 |
| 7. | INTRODUCTION AND TOCCATA ... WILLIAM WALOND (arr. Harry Wall) | 3 | 0 |
| 8. | TWO ORGAN CHORAL PRELUDES ... ... ... GEOFFREY SHAW | 2 | 0 |
| 9. | VARIATIONS ON THE QUARTER CHIMES OF MALINES ... J. MATTHEWS | 2 | 0 |
| 10. | A FANCY ... ... ... ... ... ... JOHN STANLEY (arr. Harry Wall) | 2 | 0 |

For full particulars, write to:

J. B. CRAMER & CO., LTD., 139, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.1

ORGAN MUSIC

SUITABLE FOR PERFORMANCE AT CINEMAS, ETC.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| J. BENEDICT | | |
| Variations on Arne's "Where the bee sucks" ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| DUDLEY BUCK | | |
| At Evening ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| WALFORD DAVIES | | |
| Solemn Melody ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| EDWARD ELGAR | | |
| Contrasts (The Gavotte) ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| PERCY E. FLETCHER | | |
| Fountain Reverie ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| Matinale ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| EDWARD GERMAN | | |
| Morris Dance (Henry VIII.)... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Shepherds' Dance ,, ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Torch Dance ,, ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| R. G. HAILING | | |
| Chanson de Joie... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| KING HALL | | |
| Canzone ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| ALFRED HOLLINS | | |
| Allegretto Grazioso ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Barcarolle... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Berceuse ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Evening Rest ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| In Springtime ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Intermezzo in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Maytime (Gavotte) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Minuet ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Morning Song ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Spring Song ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| EDWARD J. HORSMAN | | |
| The Curfew ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| BERNARD JOHNSON | | |
| Pavane in A ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| S. KARG-ELERT | | |
| Harmonies du Soir ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| EDWIN H. LEMARE | | |
| Andantino in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Chanson d'Eté ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Elegy in G ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Intermezzo in B flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Madrigal ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Minuet Nuptiale ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Pastorale in E ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Reverie in E flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| Romance in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| J. A. MEALE | | |
| Chanson d'Espoir ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| J. RAFF | | |
| Cavatina ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| SCHUBERT | | |
| Ave Maria ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Serenade ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| BERTHOLD TOURS | | |
| Allegretto Grazioso ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Menuetto ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| TSCHAIKOWSKY | | |
| Chanson Triste ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Chant sans Paroles ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Andantino (Symphony No. 4) ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| ERIC WEBSTER | | |
| Berceuse ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| H. DAVAN WETTON | | |
| Andantino in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| H. A. WHEELDON | | |
| Cantilene ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 6 |
| Canzona ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| W. WOLSTENHOLME | | |
| Canzona ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 6 |
| Romanza and Allegretto in E flat ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

JUST PUBLISHED

NOVELLO'S CLASSICAL SONGS

BY VARIOUS COMPOSERS

VOLUME 5

CONTENTS.

| TITLE. | COMPOSER. | TITLE. | COMPOSER. |
|---|---|---|---|
| BLACKSMITH, THE ... ... | BRAHMS | LONELY AM I NOW ... ... | WEBER |
| COME UNTO HIM ... ... | HANDEL | LOVELY WOODS ... ... ... | LULLY |
| ERL-KING, THE ... ... | SCHUBERT | OR LET THE MERRY BELLS | HANDEL |
| HARK! THE ECHOING AIR ... | PURCELL | QUESTIONING ... ... | SALVATOR ROSA |
| IF WITH ALL YOUR HEARTS | MENDELSSOHN | SERENADE, A ... ... | SCHUBERT |
| I'LL SAIL UPON THE DOG-STAR | PURCELL | SHEPHERD, THE ... ... | WEBER |
| IN THE GOLDEN MORN | TSCHAIKOWSKY | SHEPHERDS AND MAIDENS ... | LOTTI |
| KING OF THULE, THE ... | BERLIOZ | SORROW ... ... ... | PERGOLESI |
| KNOTTING SONG, THE ... | PURCELL | SWEET ECHO ... ... ... | LAWES |
| LADYBIRD ... ... | SCHUMANN | SWEET ROSE AND LILY ... | HANDEL |
| LET ME WANDER ... ... | HANDEL | TALISMAN ... ... | SCHUMANN |
| LITTLE SPINNER, THE ... | MOZART | WHERE THE BEE SUCKS ... | SULLIVAN |
| | | WILLOW SONG, THE ... ... | SULLIVAN |

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE
Paper Boards, 3*s.* 6*d.*

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

BESLY'S CONCERT VERSION OF BIZET'S "CARMEN"

most popular because most practicable

Vocal Score, 2/6 net.

Performed, among others, by

NEWBURY CHORAL SOCIETY.
BECKENHAM CHORAL SOCIETY.
LIVERPOOL FRIENDLY SOCIETY.
WEYBRIDGE CHORAL SOCIETY.
SEDGLEY MUSICAL SOCIETY (WORCS.).
PETERBOROUGH CO-OPERATIVE CHORAL SOCIETY.
CRANLEIGH SCHOOL CHORAL SOCIETY.
MALVERN COLLEGE.
HANDSWORTH CHORAL SOCIETY.
LEATHERHEAD SCHOOL.
CENTRAL CROYDON MUSICAL SOCIETY.
SUTTON MUSICAL SOCIETY.
BUNGAY CHORAL SOCIETY.
UXBRIDGE CHORAL SOCIETY.
OXFORD HARMONIC SOCIETY.
WELLINGTON COLLEGE (BERKS.).
HUNSTANTON CHORAL SOCIETY.
ASHFORD (MDDX.) CHORAL SOCIETY.
DERBY CO-OPERATIVE CHORAL SOCIETY.
BERKS, BUCKS, AND OXON. MUSICAL FESTIVAL.
UNIVERSITY COLLEGE SCHOOL (HAMPSTEAD).
LIVERPOOL VICTORIA MUSIC SOCIETY.
ST. ALDATE'S CHORAL SOCIETY (OXFORD).
KING EDWARD'S SCHOOL (STOURBRIDGE).
WOKING MUSICAL SOCIETY.
TONBRIDGE CHORAL SOCIETY.
CHELTENHAM GENTLEMAN'S COLLEGE MUSIC SOCIETY.

Send 6d. for Specimen Copy.

WINTHROP ROGERS, LTD.

SOLE AGENTS: HAWKES & SON (LONDON) LTD.
DENMAN STREET, LONDON, W.1.

PRODUCED AT THE GLOUCESTER MUSICAL FESTIVAL

JUST PUBLISHED

Ye Choirs of New Jerusalem

MOTET

For Chorus, Organ, and Orchestral

Founded on the ancient Sarum Hymn Melody, "Chorus Novæ Jerusalem"

COMPOSED BY

BASIL HARWOOD

OP. 47.

PRICE ONE SHILLING

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED

UP HILL DOWN DALE

SHORT PIECES

FOR THE

PIANOFORTE

BY

ARTHUR BAYNON

1. Squirrels at play
2. The Woodland Dell
3. The Old Mill
4. The Fairy Ring
5. Autumn Song
6. By the Duckpond
7. The Song of the Milkmaid
8. The Hay Wain
9. The Reapers' Song
10. In the Wood

Price Two Shillings

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

NOVELLO'S EDITIONS

A Selection of Music for Violin and Pianoforte

By MODERN BRITISH COMPOSERS

THOMAS ADAMS

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| Rêverie d'Amour ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

LEOPOLD ASHTON

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Quatre Esquisses. Complete ... ... ... ... ... | 4 | 0 |
| 1. En Causant. 3. Autrefois. | | |
| 2. Paillettes. 4. Mot de la fin. | | |

ERNEST AUSTIN

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Sweet Night ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

WILLIAM H. BELL

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Cradle Song ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

A. HERBERT BREWER

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Auf Wiedersehen ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Dreaming ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

BYRON BROOKE

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Cradle Song ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

COLIN M. CAMPBELL

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Nocturne ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

ADAM CARSE

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Suite in four movements. Complete ... ... ... ... | 4 | 0 |
| 1.*Gavotte. 3. Minuet. | | |
| 2. Slumber Song. 4. Moto Perpetuo. | | |
| * Also separately ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Four Norwegian Melodies. Complete ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| 1. Shepherdess' Sunday, The 3. Little boy from | | |
| 2. Norwegian Folk-Dance Tistedalen, A | | |
| 4. Wedding March from Sogn. | | |

HAMILTON CLARKE

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Romance ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

FREDERIC H. COWEN

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Four English Dances in the Olden Style. Complete ... ... | 4 | 6 |
| 1. Stately Dance. 3. Graceful Dance. | | |
| 2. Rustic Dance. 4. Country Dance. | | |
| Minuet d'Amour (arranged by Gustav Holst) ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Rêverie ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

H. WALFORD DAVIES

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Solemn Melody ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Sonata in D minor ... ... ... ... ... ... | 6 | 0 |

JOHN D. DAVIS

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Six Pieces. Complete ... ... ... ... ... ... | 5 | 6 |
| 1. Polonaise. 3. Mazurka. 5. Romance. | | |
| 2. Barcarolle. 4. Legend. 6. Serenade. | | |
| Arioso ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Canzona (In Modo Antico) ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Gavotte and Musette ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

THOMAS F. DUNHILL

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Souvenir des Montagnes Bleues ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

ERNEST FARRAR

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Celtic Suite. Complete ... ... ... ... ... | 4 | 6 |
| 1. Dalna. 3. Eily (After Fiona Macleod). | | |
| 2. The laughter of Scathach. | | |

BATTISON W. HAYNES

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Idyll ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Three Dances in Canon. Complete ... ... ... ... | 4 | 6 |
| 1. Gavotte. 2. Minuet. 3. Waltz. | | |
| Also separately ... ... ... ... ... each | 2 | 0 |
| Westwood Gavotte ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

ARTHUR HINTON

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Suite in four movements ... ... ... ... ... ... | 7 | 6 |

JOSEPH HOLBROOKE

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Berceuse ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| Caprice ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| Nocturne ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Souvenir de Printemps ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Valse Serenade ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |

THEODORE S. HOLLAND

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Romance in A ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

JOHN IRELAND

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Bagatelle ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

OLIVER KING

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Morceaux de Salon. 12 Pièces Caracteristiques. Complete ... | 5 | 6 |
| 1. Romance. 5. Sérénade Orientale. 9. Meditation. | | |
| 2. Albumblatt. 6. Impromptu. 10. Song without Words. | | |
| 3. Nocturne. 7. Elegy. 11. Mélodie. | | |
| 4. Chant d'Espoir. 8. Adieu. 12. Danse Hongroise. | | |

EDWIN H. LEMARE

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Andantino in D ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Andantino in D (two Violins) ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Chant sans Paroles ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

C. HARFORD LLOYD

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Duo Concertante ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4 | 6 |
| Four Characteristic Pieces. Complete ... ... ... ... | 4 | 6 |
| 1. In Moto d' una Sonata. 3. Mazurka. | | |
| 2. Cavatina. 4. Moto Perpetuo. | | |
| Six Easy Pieces. Complete ... ... ... ... ... | 4 | 6 |
| 1. Bridal March. 3. Lament. 5. Melody. | | |
| 2. Lullaby. 4. Minuet and Trio. 6. Valse. | | |

JAMES LYON

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Autumn ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

HAMISH McCUNN

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Romance in G ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

ROBERT H. MACDONALD

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Romance ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

JOHN B. McEWEN

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Six Highland Dances ... ... ... ... ... each | 2 | 0 |

WILLIAM McNAUGHT

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Barcarolle ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Caprice ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

JAMES C. MARKS

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Reverie ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

FRANK MOIR

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Melody in A ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

ERNEST NEWTON

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Cavatina in G ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Eight Easy Melodies for Young Beginners... ... ... | 4 | 0 |

BERTRAM W. O'DONNELL

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| A Slumber Song ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

PERCY PITT

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Bagatelles. Complete ... ... ... ... ... | 5 | 6 |
| 1.*Air de Ballet. 3.*Romance. 5.*March. | | |
| 2.*Lamento. 4. Souvenir. 6.*Amoroso. | | |
| 7.*Gavotte. 8.*Moto Perpetuo. | | |
| * Also separately ... ... ... ... ... each | 2 | 0 |
| Ballade ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 6 |

ALFRED PRATT

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Chanson de Mai ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Chanson d'Octobre ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

WILLIAM H. REED

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| A la Campagne ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Chanson Sérieuse ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Mazurka brillante ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

JOSEPH L. ROECKEL

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Graceful Dance ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Six Pieces. Complete ... ... ... ... ... ... | 7 | 6 |
| 1. In Modo Antico. 3. Staccato-Etude. 5. Tempo di Gavotta. | | |
| 2. Preghiera. 4. Souvenir de Valse. 6. Romanza. | | |
| Also separately ... ... ... ... ... each | 2 | 0 |

CECIL J. SHARP (arr. by)

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Four Folk-Airs. Complete ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| 1. Jenny on the moor. 3. The lark in the morn. | | |
| 2. Mary on the silvery tide. 4. The green wedding. | | |

MARTIN F. SHAW

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Reverie ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

CHARLES V. STANFORD

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Suite for Violin and Orchestra arr. for Violin and Pianoforte ... | 11 | 6 |
| Three Intermezzi. Complete ... ... ... ... ... | 6 | 0 |

ARTHUR SULLIVAN

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Three Dances from 'The Tempest.' Complete ... ... ... | 4 | 6 |
| 1. Masque. 2. The Banquet Dance. | | |
| 3. Dance of Nymphs and Shepherds. | | |

EDWARD H. THORNE

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Cavatina ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

FRANK E. TOURS

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Three Dances. Complete ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4 | 6 |

HERBERT W. WAREING

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Six Pieces. Separately only ... ... ... ... each | 2 | 0 |
| 1. May Day Festival. 3. Romance. 5. Légende. | | |
| 2. At Killee. 4. Pastoral Dance. 6. Saltarello. | | |

H. WALDO WARNER

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Elégie ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Scherzo ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

JOHN E. WEST

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Aspiration ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| In the Spring ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Intermezzo ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Maypole Dance ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

WILLIAM WOLSTENHOLME

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Allegretto ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Idyll ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Meditation ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Polonaise ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

For compositions by Coleridge-Taylor, Elgar, German, Mackenzie, and Parry, also for Albums of Music for Violin and Pianoforte, see separate list.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

NOVELLO'S EDITIONS

A SELECTED LIST OF SONGS

BY

MODERN BRITISH COMPOSERS

PRICE 2*s.* EACH; those marked * 1*s.* 6*d.*

Abbreviations: (S) Soprano; (M-S) Mezzo-Soprano; (C) Contralto; (T) Tenor; (Bar.) Baritone; (B) Bass.

IVOR ATKINS

| | Range of Lowest Key. |
|---|---|
| Elleen. E flat (Bar.); F (T) ... ... ... ... ... | B♭—E |
| My true love hath my heart. E flat (C or M-S) ... ... | B♭—F |
| Thou art come. D (M-S or B) ... ... ... ... ... | B—G |
| Too late. C (C or Bar.); E flat (M-S); F (S or T) ... | G—E |
| *Virgin's Lullaby, The. G minor (M-S) ... ... ... | D—F |
| Year 's at the Spring, The. C (M-S)... ... ... ... | D—F |

GRANVILLE BANTOCK

| | |
|---|---|
| *In a myrtle shade. D flat (S or T) ... ... ... ... | D♭—A♭ |
| Love's Secret. F (T) ... ... ... ... ... ... | E—G |
| Wild Flower's Song, The. C (S or T) ... ... ... ... | D—G |

RUTLAND BOUGHTON

| | |
|---|---|
| Four Songs: | |
| 1. To Freedom ... ... D } (C or Bar.) | G♯—E |
| 2. The Dead Christ ... ... E minor } | A♯—F |
| 3. Fly, messenger, fly ... F } (S or T) | F—G |
| 4. Standing beyond time ... A♭ } | C—G |

HERBERT E. CRIMP

| | |
|---|---|
| Sonny. B flat (B); C (Bar.) ... ... ... ... ... | B♭—D |
| Vine, The. F (T) ... ... ... ... ... ... | C—A |

BENJAMIN J. DALE

| | |
|---|---|
| Two Songs from Shakespeare: | |
| 1. O mistress mine. D (Bar.); F (T) ... ... ... | B—E |
| 2. Come away, death. D flat (Bar.); E (T) ... ... | D♭—E♭ |

JOHN D. DAVIS

| | |
|---|---|
| Compromise. G (C or Bar.) ... ... ... ... ... | E♭—E♭ |
| Could aught of song. G (C or Bar.); B flat (S or T) ... | D—E |
| Good-Night. G (S or T) ... ... ... ... ... | D—G |
| If but 'twere mine. E flat (C or Bar.) G (S or T) ... | C—D |

EDGAR F. DAY

| | |
|---|---|
| Night in the desert. D (Bar. or C); G (S or T) ... ... | B—E |

THOMAS F. DUNHILL

| | |
|---|---|
| Four Songs from Vagabondia. (Bar.) | |
| 1. Sea Gipsy, The. D minor ... ... ... ... | B—E |
| 2. Rover's Song, A. F ... ... ... ... | C—D |
| 3. Daisies, The. C ... ... ... ... | C—F |
| 4. Hill Song, A. D ... ... ... ... | B—E♭ |

ERNEST B. FARRAR

| | |
|---|---|
| *Brittany. E flat (Bar. or B); F (M-S); G (S or T) ... | B♭—E♭ |
| O mistress mine. F (Bar.); A flat (T). ... ... ... | C—F |
| Two Pastorals: | |
| a. Come you, Mary. B flat (Bar.); C (T) ... ... | D—F |
| b. Who would shepherd pipes forsake. E flat (Bar.); G (T)... ... ... ... ... | B♭—F |
| Two Songs: | |
| a Diaphenia. G (Bar. or B); B flat (T) ... ... | B—E |
| b. Lover's Appeal, The. D minor (Bar. or B); F minor (T) ... ... | B♭—D |

BASIL GRAHAM

| | |
|---|---|
| Dreamland and you. D flat (C or Bar.) ... ... ... | B♭—D♭ |
| Within your eyes. E flat (B); F (C or Bar.); G (S or T)... ... ... | B♭—E♭ |

HAMILTON HARTY

| | |
|---|---|
| Across the door. C (C or M-S) ... ... ... ... | B—F |
| Cradle Song, A. A minor (C) ... ... ... ... ... | D—E |
| Drover, A. C minor (Bar.) ... ... ... ... ... | C—F♯ |
| Homeward. C minor (Bar. or B) ... ... ... ... | C—E |
| Rachray Man, The. D minor (M-S) ... ... ... ... | C—F |
| Rann of Wandering, A. B flat (S or T) ... ... ... | D—F♯ |
| Stranger's Grave, The. G minor (Bar.) ... ... ... | C—F |
| Wake Feast, The. D minor (Bar.) ... ... ... ... | C♯—E |

JOSEPH HOLBROOKE

| | |
|---|---|
| Come, let us make love deathless. B flat minor (S or T) ... ... ... ... ... ... | F—A♭ |
| I heard a soldier. A (B or Bar.) ... ... ... ... | D—F |
| My own sad love. B (Bar. or B) ... ... ... ... | D♯—E |
| O dreamy, gloomy, friendly trees. B flat (S or T)... ... | C—A |
| Requital, The. A (T) ... ... ... ... ... ... | E—F♯ |

J. ST. A. JOHNSON

| | |
|---|---|
| Fiddler, The. A minor (Bar.) ... ... ... ... ... | C—F |
| Sandy the Piper. E (Bar.) ... ... ... ... ... | C♯—F♯ |

WILLIAM McNAUGHT

| | |
|---|---|
| Dancing at the Lurgan. D (C); E (M-S); G (S) ... ... | B—E |
| In Derry Vale (The Londonderry Air) (arranged). E flat (S or T) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | B♭—G |
| Piper, The. D (B); E flat (C or Bar.); F (M-S) ... ... | D—D |

JOHN POINTER

| | Range of Lowest Key. |
|---|---|
| Come to me, gentle sleep. A (S or T) ... ... ... | E—G |
| Farewell. C (C or Bar.) ... ... ... ... ... ... | G♯—F |
| How shall I sing that Majesty (with Chorus for S.A.T.B. ad lib.). C (Bar. or M-S); D (S or T) ... ... | C—G |
| I love thee. F (T) ... ... ... ... ... ... | E—A |
| I loved a lass, a fair one. E flat (Bar.); F (T) ... ... | C—F |
| I sigh for night's sweet coming. G (C or Bar.); B flat (S or T) ... ... ... ... | G—F |
| Lordly Gallants. E (Bar.) ... ... ... ... ... | C♯—F♯ |
| Love's Philosophy. E (Bar.); A flat (T) ... ... ... | B—E |
| Lullaby, A. E flat (C) ... ... ... ... ... ... | B♭—E♭ |
| Rosamond. D minor (Bar.); F minor (T) ... ... ... | B—F♯ |
| Shall I wasting in despair. F (T) ... ... ... ... | D—A |
| Two Little Songs: | |
| a. Lark, The. F (M-S) ... ... ... ... ... | D—F |
| b. Bumble-Bee, The. B flat (M-S) ... ... ... | F—G |
| When all the world is young. G (S or T) ... ... ... | D—G |

HAROLD RHODES

| | |
|---|---|
| Evening Confession, An. B♭ minor (B) ... ... ... | F—D♯ |
| Woman's Love, A. C (T) ... ... ... ... ... | E♭—G |

CYRIL B. ROOTHAM

| | |
|---|---|
| Four Dramatic Songs: | |
| 1. Imagination. B flat (S or T) ... ... ... ... | E♭—B♭ |
| 2. Unwelcome. A (S or T)... ... ... ... ... | D♯—G♯ |
| 3. St. Andrews. G minor (S or T) ... ... ... | D—G |
| 4. Over the Hills. E minor (T) ... ... ... ... | D—A |
| Vignette, A. D flat (C) ... ... ... ... ... ... | C—E♭ |

ETHEL M. SMYTH

| | |
|---|---|
| Four Songs for M-S or Bar.: | |
| 1. Odellette. C minor ... ... ... ... ... | C—A♭ |
| 2. Dance, The. E minor ... ... ... ... ... | B—E |
| 3. Chrysilla. E flat ... ... ... ... ... | B♭—F |
| 4. Anacreontic Ode. F minor ... ... ... ... | C—G |

ERIC H. THIMAN

| | |
|---|---|
| *Birds, The. C (M-S or Bar.); D (S or T) ... ... ... | D—F |
| God of Love my Shepherd is. F (C or B); A flat (M-S or Bar.) ... ... ... | A—D |
| In the bleak mid-winter. D (C or Bar.); F (S or T) ... ... ... ... | A—E |
| Jesus the very thought of Thee B flat (C or B); D (M-S or Bar.) ... ... ... | B♭—D |
| *My Master hath a garden. F (M-S or Bar.); G (S or T) ... ... ... ... ... | C—F |
| The Rainbow. E (C); G (S) ... ... ... ... ... | B—E |
| The Silver Swan. B flat minor (M-S or Bar.); C minor (S or T) ... ... | D♭—F |

LEONARD J. WALKER

| | |
|---|---|
| My life is like a garden. B flat (C or B); C (M-S or Bar.); D (S or T) ... ... | B♭—E♭ |
| Summertime of Love, The. B flat (C or B); C (M-S or Bar.); D (S or T) ... ... | B♭—E♭ |
| There 's a pathway through the heather. D flat (C or Bar.); E flat (M-S); F (S or T) ... ... | D♭—F |

JOHN E. WEST

| | |
|---|---|
| Cheerily O! C (B); D (Bar.); F (T) ... ... ... | G—D |
| *Song of the Volga Boatmen (arranged). C (B); D (Bar.); F (T) ... ... ... ... ... | C—C |

FELIX WHITE

| | |
|---|---|
| Golden Slumbers. F (M-S); G (T) ... ... ... ... | C—F |
| Sing care away. E flat (Bar.); F (T) ... ... ... ... | B♭—F |
| Thou hast left me ever, Jamie. D minor (M-S); E minor (S) ... ... ... ... | C♯—F |

GERRARD WILLIAMS

| | |
|---|---|
| Bailiff's daughter of Islington, The (arranged). E flat (B or Bar.) ... ... ... ... ... ... | D—E♭ |
| *Despair. F♯ minor (C or Bar.); A minor (S or T) ... | B—E |
| Love outwitted (Duet for Voice and Pf.). C (T) ... ... | C♯—A |
| March Morning. C (C); E flat (M-S) ... ... ... | C—D |
| Time. A minor (C or Bar.); C minor (S or T) ... ... | A—E |
| Two Songs: | |
| 1. Absence. Low, Medium, High ... ... ... | B♭—E♭ |
| 2. Serenade. " " " ... ... ... | B—D |

For songs by Elgar, Fletcher, German, Mackenzie, Parry, Stanford, &c., see separate lists.

LONDON: NOVELLO & COMPANY, LIMITED

NOVELLO'S RECENT PUBLICATIONS

FOLIO SONGS

SACRED

s. d.

AS A SPIRIT DIDST THOU PASS. Tenor Solo, from "The Light of Life" ... ... ... Edward Elgar 2 0

BIRDS, THE. In 2 keys, C and D ... Eric H. Thiman 1 6

COME, O THOU TRAVELLER UNKNOWN. In 2 keys, D and F. Melody by Robert King, 1722. Arr. by H. A. Chambers 2 0

GOD OF LOVE MY SHEPHERD IS, THE. In 2 keys, F and A♭ ... ... ... ... ... Eric H. Thiman 2 0

IN THE BLEAK MIDWINTER. In 2 keys, D and F Eric H. Thiman 2 0

JESUS, THE VERY THOUGHT OF THEE. In 2 keys, B♭ and D ... ... ... ... ... Eric H. Thiman 2 0

MY MASTER HATH A GARDEN. In 2 keys, F and G Eric H. Thiman 1 6

SECULAR

DOLLY (THE MILKMAID). In 2 keys, C and E flat E. Douglas Tayler 2 0

LORDING'S DAUGHTER, THE. In 2 keys, D minor and F minor ... ... ... ... ... Edward German 2 0

RAINBOW, THE. In 2 keys, E and G Eric H. Thiman 2 0

SILVER SWAN, THE. In 2 keys, B♭ minor and C minor Eric H. Thiman 1 6

SONG OF THE VOLGA BOATMEN (arr. by John E. West) In 3 keys, C, D and F ... ... ... ... ... ... 1 6

SPRIG OF SHAMROCK, A (Four old Irish Airs). String Quartet or Pianoforte accompaniment. High or low voice. Adapted and arranged by A. Herbert Brewer 3 6

PART-SONGS FOR FEMALE VOICES

BLESSED DAMOZEL, THE. S.S.A.A., with Semi-Choruses, 1 and 2 ... ... ... ... ... Julius Harrison 1 6

BRIDAL SONG (S.S.A.) ... ... ... Edgar L. Bainton 0 3

GREEN LINNET, THE. Two-Part ... Edgar L. Bainton 0 4

SONG OF THE WATERS, THE. Two-Part. George Rathbone 0 4

TO DAFFODILS. Two-Part in Canon ... Eric H. Thiman 0 3

WHEN THE GREEN LEAVES COME AGAIN. Two-Part Percy E. Fletcher 0 4

WHO IS SYLVIA? Two-Part (arr. by John Pointer) Edward German 0 4

WOODED HILL, THE (Four Two-part Songs):

No. 1. EARLY SPRING, THE ... ... Ethel Boyce 0 4
2. SUMMER HEAT ... ... ... ... ,, ,, 0 3
3. AUTUMN TIME ... ... ... ... ,, ,, 0 4
4. THE HOLLY ... ... ... ... ,, ,, 0 4

PART-SONGS FOR MIXED VOICES

CAMEL'S HUMP, THE (arranged) ... Edward German 0 4

GOLDEN SKEIN, THE ... ... ... Edgar L. Bainton 0 3

SLEEP (S.A.A.T.B.B.) ... ... ... ... Bernard Johnson 0 4

SONG OF THE VOLGA BOATMEN (S.S.A.A.T.T.B.B.) Arr. by H. Balfour Gardiner 0 4

STARS OF THE SUMMER NIGHT W. A. C. Cruickshank 0 3

THERE IS A GARDEN IN HER FACE H. A. Chambers 0 4

THERE IS A LADY SWEET AND KIND Eric H. Thiman 0 4

TO BLOSSOMS... ... ... ... ... W. G. Alcock 0 3

PART-SONGS FOR MALE VOICES

s. d.

CALL, THE (T.T.B.B.) ... ... ... Thomas F. Dunhill 0 4

FAIN WOULD I CHANGE THAT NOTE (T.T.B.B.) R. Vaughan Williams 0 3

IF I WERE YONDER WAVE (T.T.B.B.) Edgar L. Bainton 0 4

IN SILENT NIGHT (T.T.B.B.) German Folk-Song Johannes Brahms 0 3

THE LEE SHORE (T.T.B.B.) ... ... Percy E. Fletcher 0 4

SONG OF THE VOLGA BOATMEN (T.T.B.B.) Arr. by H. Balfour Gardiner 0 4

ANTHEMS

AND I SAW A NEW HEAVEN ... ... Edgar L. Bainton 0 4

COME, MY WAY, MY TRUTH, MY LIFE (with Solo for Contralto or Mezzo-Soprano) ... ... Roy Thompson 0 3

HAIL, GLADDENING LIGHT. (Short Anthem for Evensong) ... ... ... ... ... ... Hugh Blair 0 3

LET ALL THE WORLD IN EVERY CORNER SING Eric H. Thiman 0 4

O FATHER, WHO DIDST ALL THINGS MAKE. (Unaccompanied, for Evensong) ... ... Eric H. Thiman 0 3

O GOD OF WISDOM... ... ... ... F. W. Wadely 0 4

O REND THE HEAVENS. (Motet) ... Johannes Brahms 0 4

O WORSHIP THE KING. (Harvest or General use) Ernest Bullock 0 4

REMEMBER, O THOU MAN (Carol Anthem) ... C. S. Lang 0 4

THUS SAITH THE LORD. (Short unaccompanied Anthem for Saints' days or General use) H. C. L. Stocks 0 2

STRIFE IS O'ER, THE ... ... ... Eric H. Thiman 0 4

CANTATAS, ETC.

GOD WITHIN. Motet for Chorus, Orchestra, and Organ A. Herbert Brewer 1 0

JOHN GILPIN. For Female (or Boys') Voices, in Unison (2nd part optional), with Pianoforte accompaniment (2 Violins and percussion optional) ... Colin Taylor 2 0

LOCHINVAR. Ballad for Chorus and Orchestra C. S. Lang 2 0

VIOLIN (OR 'CELLO) AND PIANOFORTE

CRADLE SONG ... ... ... ... Byron Brooke 2 0

NOCTURNE ... ... ... ... Colin M. Campbell 2 0

ORGAN

ALLELUYA. Festal Prelude on "Lasst uns Erfreuen" W. Faulkes 1 6

BENEDICTION (Wedding Souvenir) ... Alfred Hollins 1 6

CHORALE, "Jesus bleibet meine Freude" (J. S. Bach) arr. by John. E. West 1 6

FANTASIE IMPROMPTU ... ... ... W. G. Alcock 2 0

FIVE SHORT AND EASY PIECES, founded on Hymn-Tunes ... ... ... ... ... C. Hylton Stewart 2 0

MAYTIME (Gavotte) ... ... ... ... Alfred Hollins 1 6

PARTITA IN E (Op. 100), in seven movements S. Karg-Elert 5 6

SUITE FROM "BONDUCA" (arr. by Eric H. Thiman) Henry Purcell 2 0

THREE DANCES FROM "HENRY VIII." Edward German ... ... ... ... ... ... each 2 0

VARIATIONS ON ARNE'S "WHERE THE BEE SUCKS" (arr. by Chastey Hector) ... Julius Benedict 2 0

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

Oratorios for Christmas and Easter at Bargain Prices.

Having at present a large stock of the Oratorios mentioned above — all second-hand in good condition — we offer them at bargain prices. Ask us to send Oratorio Bargain List 122.

FOYLE'S MUSIC DEPT.,
119-125, Charing Cross Road, London, W.C.2.

No. 103.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS AND EDUCATIONAL SERIES

THE ART OF PIANOFORTE PRACTISING

WITH AN APPENDIX ON

LEGATO-PEDALLING

BY

C. EGERTON LOWE

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED

SOLEMN MELODY

BY

H. WALFORD DAVIES

ARRANGED FOR

BRASS BAND

BY

J. ORD HUME

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS PER SET

Separate parts, 2d. each

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

NOVELLO'S ELEMENTARY MUSIC MANUALS

No.

1.—PART-WRITING FOR BEGINNERS, by J. W. IVIMEY. The Rules tabulated are for the guidance of beginners in the Art of Part-writing. Many of them change from rules to recommendations, when the students become more advanced. Bound in linen covers. Price 8d.

2.—LESSONS IN HARMONIZING MELODIES, by CUTHBERT HARRIS. Many elementary students of harmony can satisfactorily add parts to figured basses, but are unable to harmonize even simple melodies. This book gives minute instruction which any student can understand. Part I. Price 2s. 6d.

3.—AN ELEMENTARY MIXED-VOICE SIGHT-SINGING COURSE (Staff Notation through Tonic Sol-fa), by GEORGE LANE. The Exercises are written in the Treble and Bass Clefs, in order that the Book may be used by Male and Female voices in one class. Suitable for Evening Continuation Schools. Part I. Price 8d.

4.—AN ELEMENTARY MIXED-VOICE SIGHT-SINGING COURSE (Staff Notation through Tonic Sol-fa). by GEORGE LANE. Part II. Price 8d.

5.—HINTS TO YOUNG VIOLINISTS, by C. EGERTON LOWE. Price 1s. 6d.

6.—LESSONS IN HARMONIZING MELODIES, by CUTHBERT HARRIS. Part II. Price 2s. 6d.

7.—ADDITIONAL EXERCISES IN HARMONIZING MELODIES, by CUTHBERT HARRIS. Price 8d.

8.—HINTS ON PIANOFORTE TEACHING (chiefly to Boys), by E. D. RENDALL. Price 2s. 6d.

9.—SCHOOL CHOIR TRAINING, by MARGARET NICHOLLS. A Practical Course of Lessons on Voice Production for the guidance of Teachers of Class Singing. Price 3s.
(The Appendix, published separately: Hints on Part-Singing and Exercises, 3d.; Sol-fa, 3d.)

10.—THE COMPOSITION OF SIMPLE MELODIES, by ROBERT T. WHITE. Price 2s. 6d.

11.—PHYSICAL EXERCISES IN THE INFANT SCHOOL, by MARGARET A. HUGHES. Price 4s. 6d.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

TECHNIQUE AND EXPRESSION IN PIANOFORTE PLAYING

BY

FRANKLIN TAYLOR.

EXTRACT FROM PREFACE.

In the course of my experience as a teacher of the pianoforte, an experience extending over many years, certain ideas have from time to time suggested themselves to me which have proved useful—to myself, as enabling me to express more clearly that which I desired my pupils to understand, and to my pupils, as tending to facilitate their comprehension of the various difficulties they have had to encounter, at the same time leading them to perceive the most practical means of overcoming them, and thus accelerating their general rate of progress.

These suggestions relate to both the mechanical and intellectual sides of the study of pianoforte-playing, or briefly, to Technique and Expression, the chief matters implied by the first of these terms being the production of various qualities of tone, the choice of suitable fingering, and the best methods of attacking certain difficulties; while the second, which may perhaps be more aptly designated the means of expression, includes rhythm, phrasing, variety and gradation of tone, the use of the pedals, et cætera.

WITH NUMEROUS MUSICAL EXAMPLES FROM THE WORKS OF THE GREAT MASTERS.

PRICE, CLOTH GILT, SEVEN SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE NET

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED

NEW ORGAN WORK

BY

SIGFRID KARG-ELERT

(Op. 100.)

PARTITA IN E

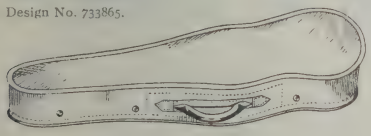
1 Entrata
2. Canzona
3. Corrente e Siciliano
4. Rigaudon (Alla Burla)
5. Sarabande
6. Gavotte e Carillon
7. Finale quasi ritorno

PRICE FIVE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

PROTECT YOUR VIOLIN CASE!
"HILSON" VIOLIN
CASE COVERS
Regd. Design No. 733865.



BROWN CANVAS. BRITISH THROUGHOUT
No Straps. Simplicity itself.
PERFECT PROTECTION and THOROUGHLY WATERPROOF
Ask your Music Dealer to show you one.
PRICES: Quality A, 12/6; B, 15/6; C, 19/6
MAKERS: HENRY HILL & SONS,
9 & 10, CHRISTMAS STREET,
ESTB. 1887. BRISTOL Tel. 3105

New Numbers in the "YORK SERIES."

ALLELUIA HAIL WITH GLADNESS.
J. LAMONT GALBRAITH.
Cantata. Price 2s. net.

CROWN OF LIFE.
NOEL HANNENFORD.
Cantata. Price 2s. net.

THE SHEFFIELD CATHEDRAL DESCANTS.
(24 Settings of Popular Hymn Tunes.)
By T. W. HANFORTH.
Price 6d.

BANKS & SON, MUSIC PUBLISHERS, YORK.

MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS
By T. A. BEVIS

"Excellent Setting. It is simple, and has many effective points. I much hope it will be widely used."—DR. W. G. ALCOCK.

PRICE FOURPENCE.

WEEKES & CO., HANOVER STREET, LONDON, W.1

FOREIGN MUSIC

A SELECTION OF THE MOST POPULAR CONTINENTAL ORGAN COMPOSITIONS

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| BOËLLMANN.—Fantasie dialoguée, Op. 35 ... ... ... | 3 | 6 |
| —— Suite Gothique, Op. 25 ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4 | 0 |
| —— 2nd Suite, Op. 27 ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 7 | 0 |
| —— 12 Pieces, Op. 16 ... ... ... ... ... complete | 10 | 0 |
| BONNET.—12 Pieces, Op. 5 ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 10 | 0 |
| —— 12 Pieces, Op. 7 ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 10 | 0 |
| —— 12 Pieces, Op. 10 ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 10 | 0 |
| —— Poèmes d'Automne (3 Concert Pieces) ... ... ... | 4 | 0 |
| —— Variations de Concert ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 6 |
| BRAHMS.—11 Choral Preludes, Op. 122. 2 Books ... each | 4 | 0 |
| CHAUVET.—Andantino ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 6 |
| DEBUSSY.—12 Pieces (Transcribed for Organ) complete | 8 | 0 |
| DUBOIS.—10 Pieces ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 10 | 0 |
| —— 12 Pieces ... ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 10 | 0 |
| —— 12 New Pieces ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 10 | 0 |
| FRANCK.—6 Pieces ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 10 | 0 |
| —— 3 Pieces ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 6 | 0 |
| —— Prelude, Fugue, and Variation ... ... ... ... | 2 | 6 |
| GIGOUT.—10 Pieces ... ... ... ... ... complete | 10 | 0 |
| —— 12 Pieces ... ... ... ... ... ,, | 10 | 0 |
| —— Album Grégorien. 2 Books ... ... ... ... each | 8 | 0 |
| KARG-ELERT.—66 Choral Improvisations, Op. 65. 6 Books, each | 5 | 0 |
| —— Nun danket, Op. 65, No. 59 ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| —— Wagner Album (18 transcriptions) ... ... ... ... | 4 | 0 |
| RHEINBERGER.—Organ Sonatas, No. 1, 1s. 6d.; No. 2, 2s.; Nos. 3-20 ... ... ... ... ... ... each | 4 | 0 |
| —— 10 Trios, Op. 49. 2 Books ... ... ... ... ,, | 1 | 6 |
| —— 12 Trios, Op. 189. 3 Books ... ... ... ... ,, | 2 | 0 |
| ROPARTZ.—Au pied de l'Autel (60 Pieces) ... ... ... | 8 | 0 |
| SAINT-SAËNS.—3 Rapsodies sur des cantiques bretons, each | 2 | 0 |
| —— 3 Rapsodies sur des cantiques bretons ... complete | 4 | 0 |
| —— Fantasia in E♭ ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 6 |
| —— Le Cygne (transcribed by Guilmant) ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| —— Mon Cœur (Samson and Delilah) ... ... ... ... | 2 | 6 |
| SALOME.—10 Pieces. 2 Books ... ... ... ... each | 8 | 0 |
| —— 12 New Pieces, Op. 59 ... ... ... ... complete | 10 | 0 |
| VIERNE.—Symphony No. 1 ... ... ... ... ... ... | 8 | 0 |
| —— 24 Pieces ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 7 | 6 |
| —— Fantasy Pieces. Books 1-4 ... ... ... ... each | 4 | 0 |
| WIDOR.—Symphonies, Nos. 2, 3, and 4 ... ... ... ,, | 6 | 6 |
| —— Symphonies, Nos. 1, 6, 7, and 8 ... ... ... ,, | 7 | 0 |
| —— Symphony No. 5 ... ... ... ... ... ... | 8 | 0 |

Particulars and prices of separate numbers contained in any of the volumes will be sent on request.

If you have any difficulty in obtaining Foreign Music, we invite you to send your inquiries to us. Our Foreign Department holds a large and comprehensive stock of foreign editions, including those of André, Choudens, Costallat, Durand, Heugel, Hug, Hamelle, Leduc, Lemoine, Schlesinger, Simon, Zimmermann, and many others of equal note.

Certain catalogues and lists are available, and will be sent on application.

PIANOFORTE—VOCAL—ORGAN—HARMONIUM
INSTRUMENTAL—ORCHESTRAL.

Inquiries for little-known or unknown works will be welcomed, and any compositions not in stock can be obtained at short notice.

When writing please state which of the above sections is of interest to you.

SCHUBERT CENTENARY

Messrs. Novello have in stock certain of the 21 folio volumes of Schubert's works, forming the Complete Edition as published by Breitkopf & Härtel. List and prices will be sent on application

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

Years Ahead

The past is present only in careful, painstaking construction ; for the Chappell Piano is the really modern instrument embodying the inventive genius of the present age, and designed exclusively for to-day and the future. In many important features, the Chappell Piano is far ahead of the times, and will be "up-to-date" for some time to come. That is why the Chappell is becoming ever more and more the Piano chosen by the great musicians.

THE CHAPPELL PIANO CO. LTD.
50, NEW BOND ST., LONDON, W.1.

CHAPPELL

CHRISTMAS CAROLS

FARWELL, E. "ALL YE WHO ARE TO MIRTH INCLINED" ... ... ... 1½d.

SAWYER, F. J. "I HEARD THE ANGELS YESTERNIGHT" ... ... ... 2d.
(Solo or Duet) with accompaniment of Pianoforte (or Harp) and Harmonium ad lib.

SAWYER, F. J. "SOFTLY FELL THE SHADES OF EVENING" ... ... ... 2d.

SAWYER, F. J. CAROLS FOR THE SEVEN FEASTS OF CHRISTMAS
for two or four voices ... ... ... ... ... each 1d.
Complete, 4d.

1. For Christmas Day.
2. For the Feast of St. Stephen.
3. For the Feast of St. John the Evangelist.
4. For the Feast of the Holy Innocents.
5. For the Feast of the Circumcision.
6. For the Feast of the Epiphany.
7. For the Feast of the Purification.

SAWYER, F. J. SIX CHRISTMAS CAROLS ... ... ... ... complete 6d.

1. I Heard the bells of Heaven all ringing.
2. Rocking so slowly.
3. Three Wise Kings of the Rhine.
4. While Shepherds Watched.
5. Good Christians all rejoice.
6. God Bless you all, good Gentlemen.

BYRD, W. "O MAGNUM MYSTERIUM" (Edited by H. B. COLLINS) ... 4d.
Motet for four voices for Christmas and the Circumcision.

COOPER, DR. R. "GLORIA IN EXCELSIS DEO" (Edited by H. B. COLLINS) ... 4d.
A Short Motet for Christmas Day for four equal voices (S.S.S.A.).

WRIGHT, T. "NESCIENS MATER" (Edited by H. B. COLLINS) ... ... ... 4d.
Motet for four men's voices on the plainsong for Christmas and the Circumcision.

J. & W. CHESTER, Ltd., 11, Gt. Marlborough Street, London, W.1.

London:—Printed by NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited, at Novello Works, Soho, and published at 160, Wardour Street, Soho, W.1, Thursday, November 1, 1928.

REMEMBER, O THOU MAN

CAROL FOR

UNISON VOICES (CHORUS ad lib.) AND ORGAN

WORDS FROM RAVENSCROFT'S MELISMATA (1611)

MUSIC BY

C. S. LANG

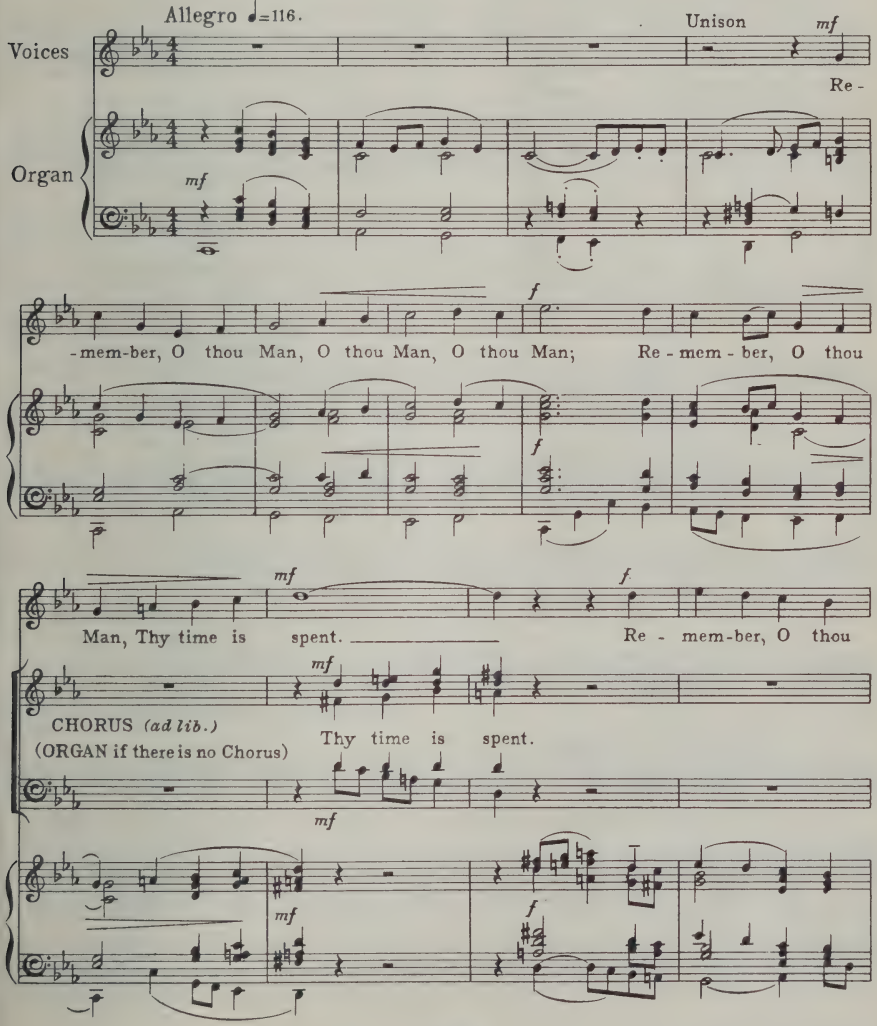
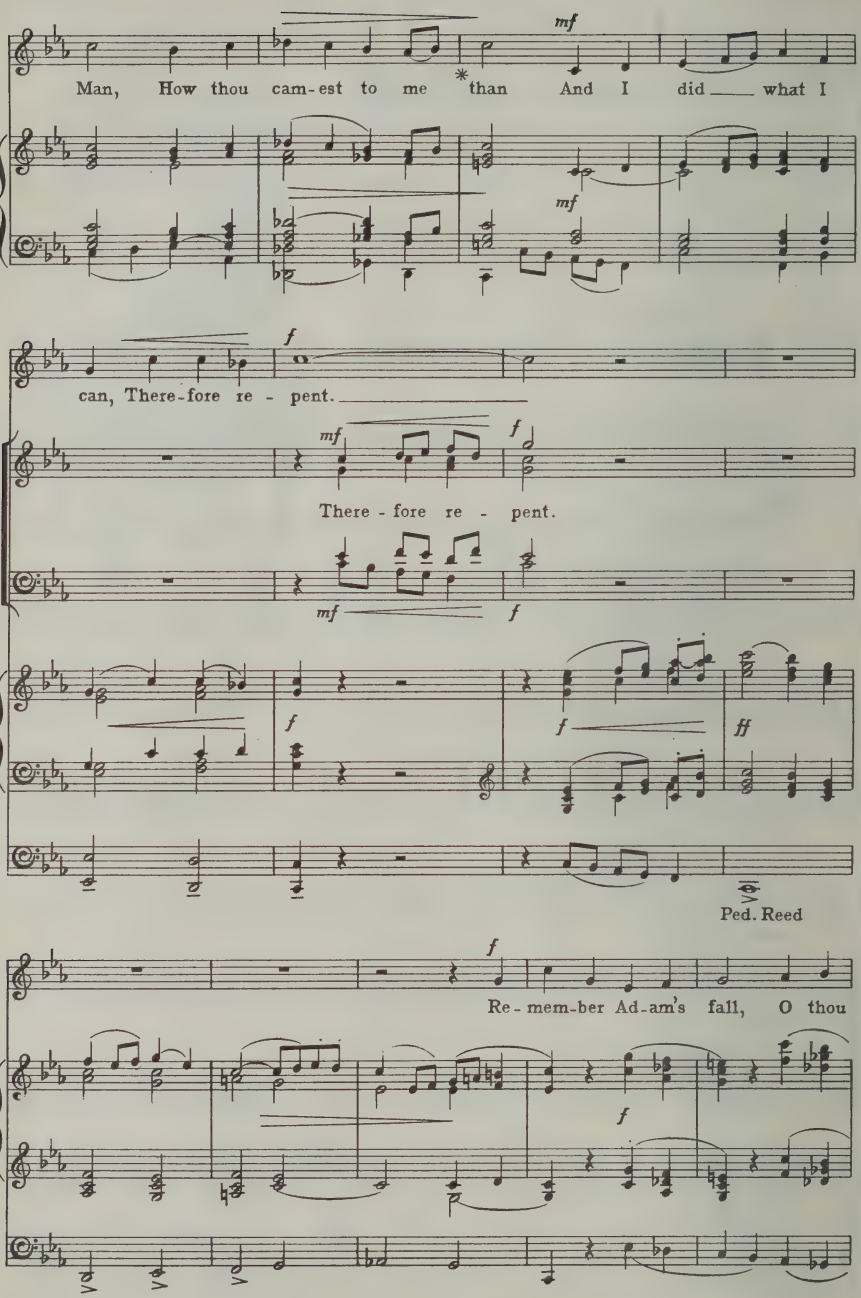
Op. 12

London: NOVELLO & COMPANY, Limited; New York: The H.W. GRAY Co, Sole Agents for the U.S.A.

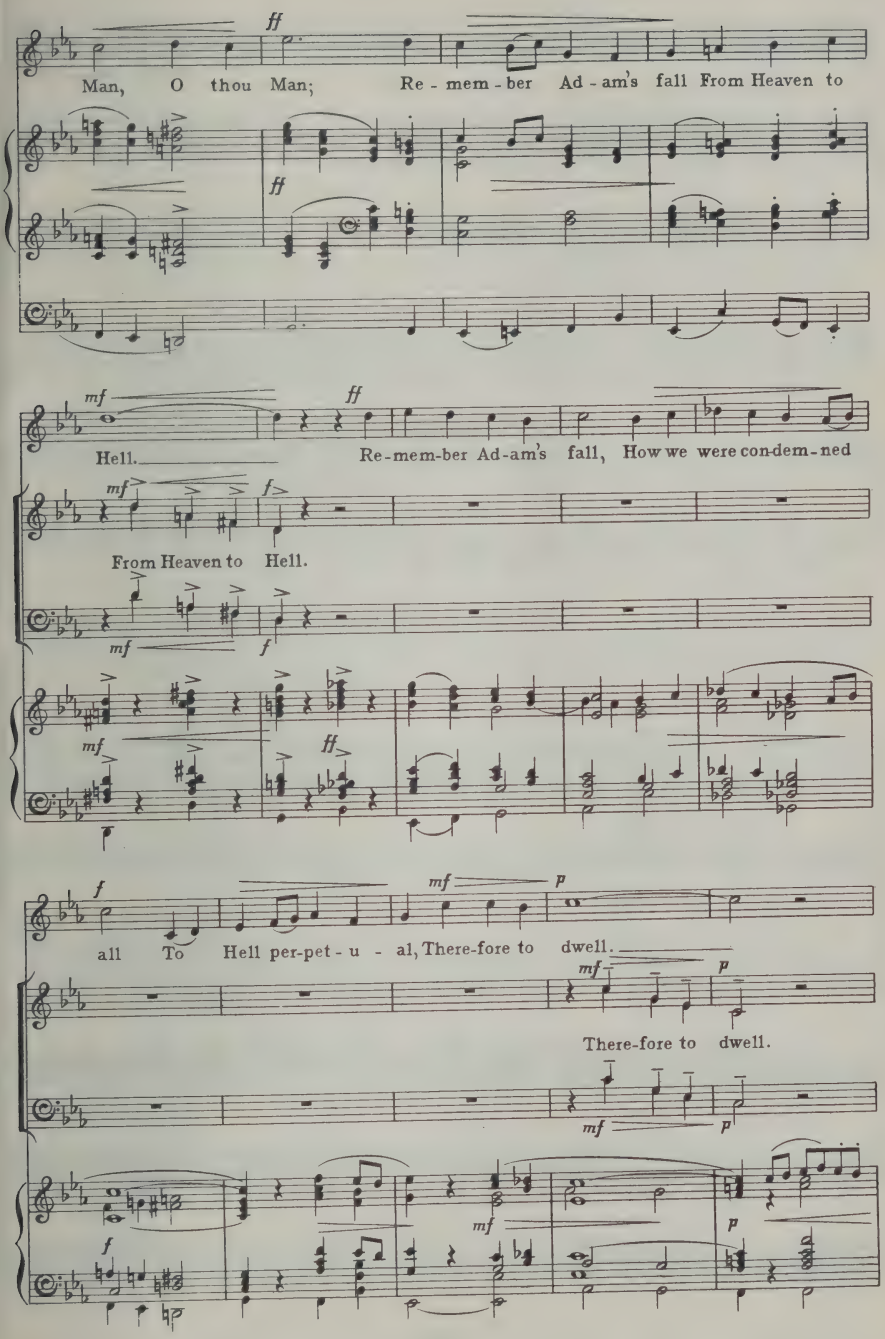


Allegro ♩=116.
Voices
Organ
Unison
mf
Re -
-mem-ber, O thou Man, O thou Man, O thou Man; Re - mem - ber, O thou
f
Man, Thy time is spent. Re - mem-ber, O thou
CHORUS (ad lib.)
(ORGAN if there is no Chorus)
Thy time is spent.

Copyright, 1928, by Novello & Company, Limited MADE IN ENGLAND.



* Old form of 'then'



Man, O thou Man; Re - mem - ber Ad - am's fall From Heaven to Hell. Re-mem-ber Ad-am's fall, How we were con-dem-ned
From Heaven to Hell.
all To Hell per-pet - u - al, There-fore to dwell.
There-fore to dwell.

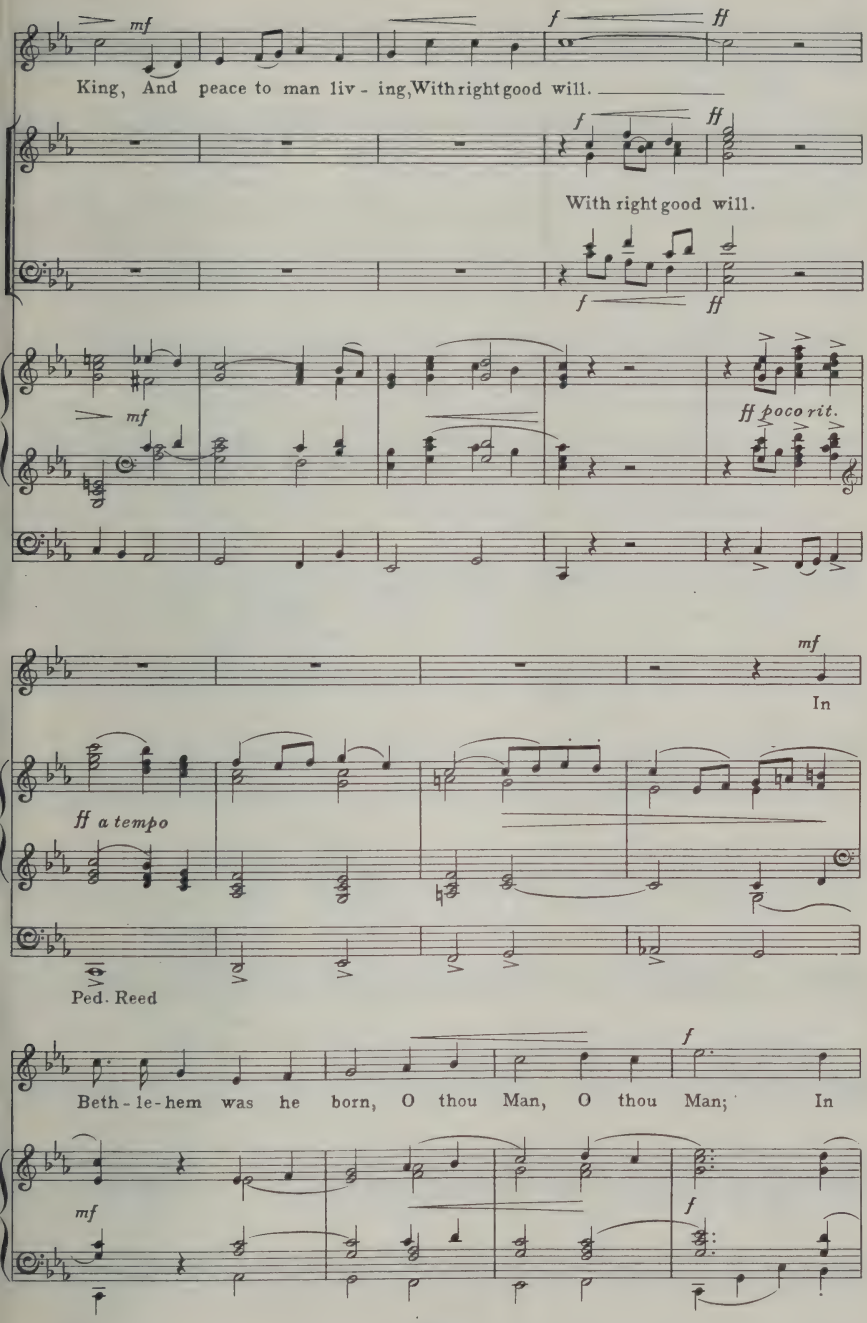
The An - gels all did sing, O thou Man, O thou Man; The An - gels all did sing On Si - on Hill. The An-gels all did sing Prais-es to our heaven-ly
On Si - on Hill.



mf
f
ff
King, And peace to man liv - ing, With right good will.
f
ff
With right good will.
f ff
mf
ff poco rit.
mf
In ff a tempo
Ped. Reed
f
Beth - le - hem was he born, O thou Man, O thou Man; In mf
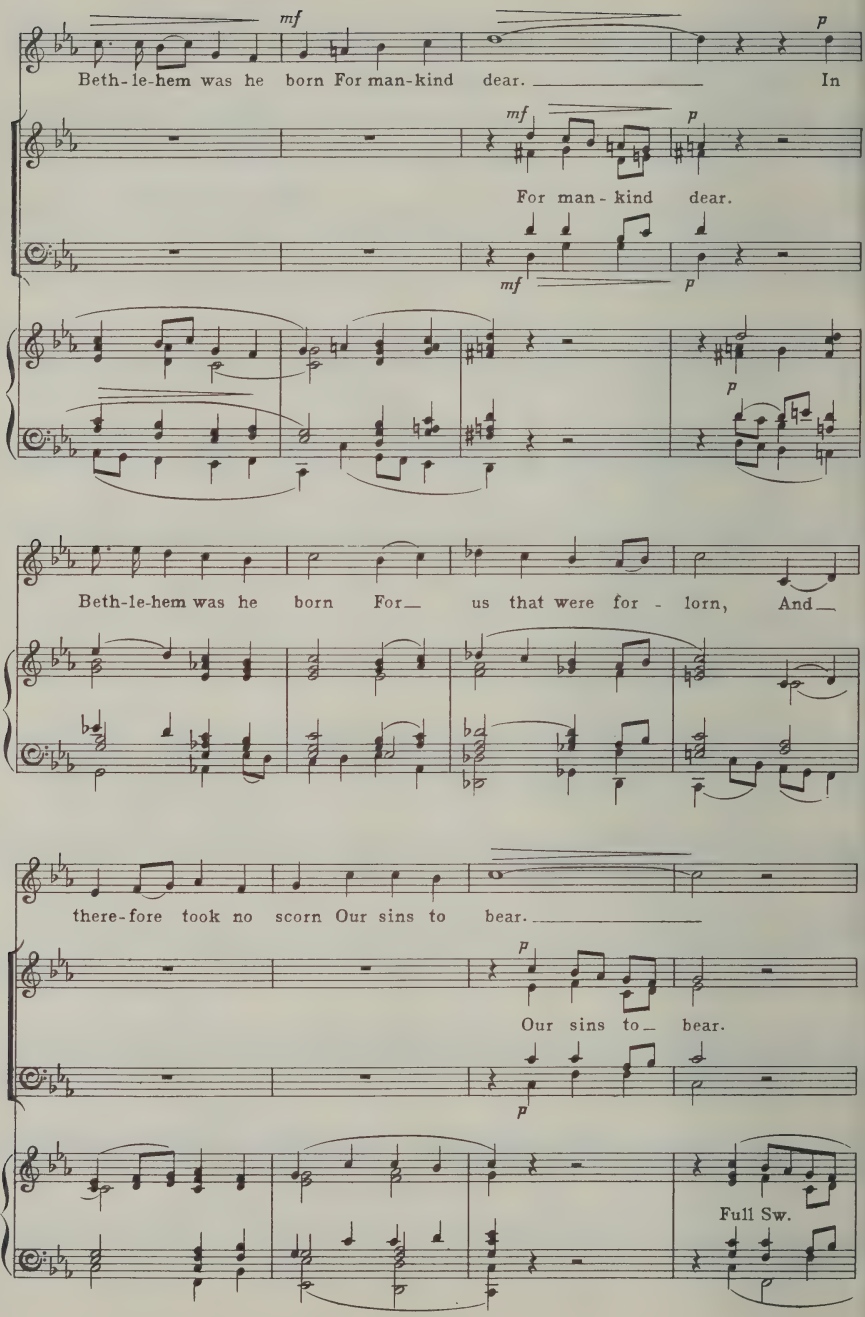
f



mf
p
Beth-le-hem was he born For man-kind dear. In mf
p
For man-kind dear.
mf
p
p
Beth-le-hem was he born For us that were for-lorn, And there-fore took no scorn Our sins to bear.
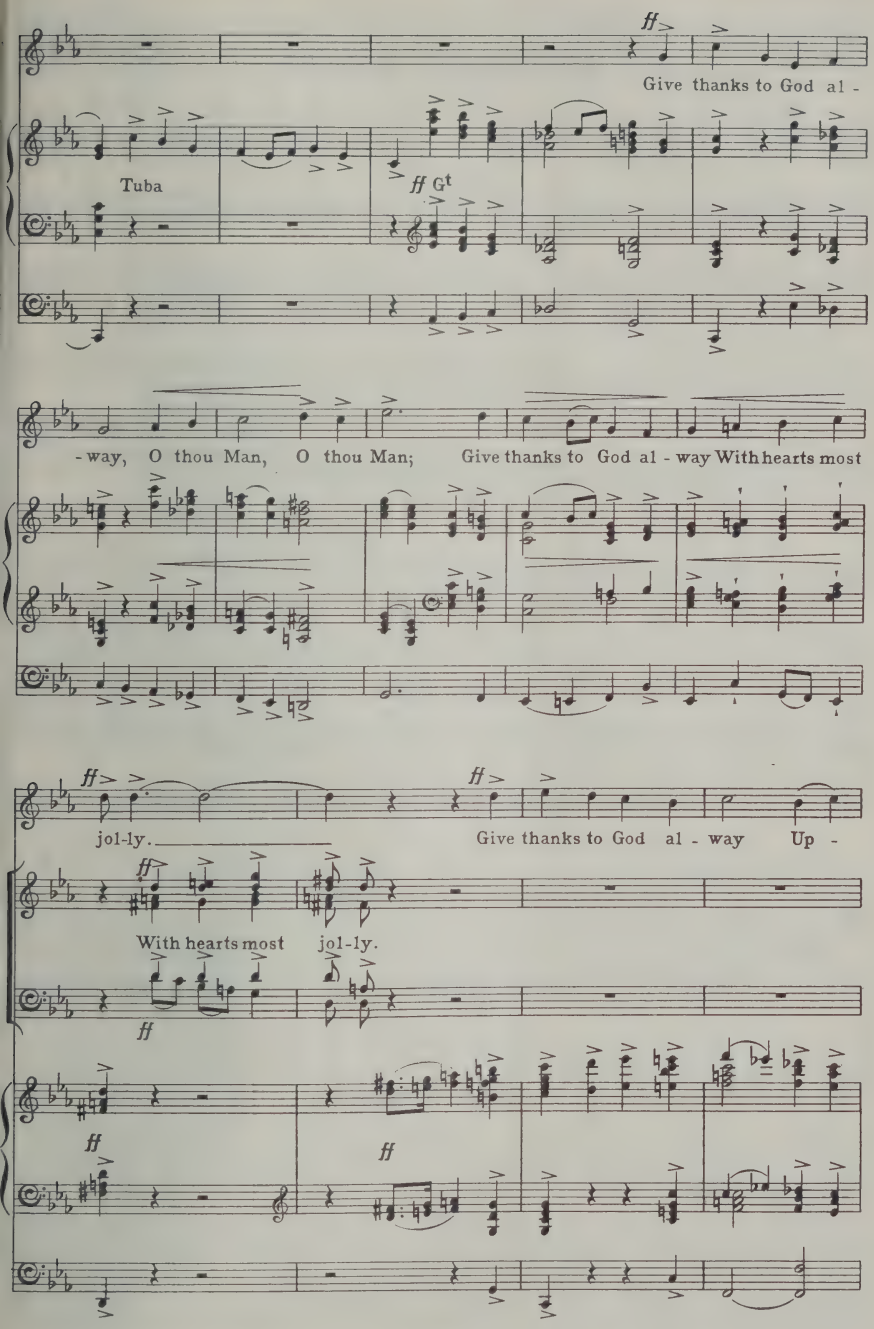
p
Our sins to bear.
p
Full Sw.



Give thanks to God al -
Tuba
ff Gt
- way, O thou Man, O thou Man; Give thanks to God al - way With hearts most jol-ly.
Give thanks to God al - way Up -
With hearts most jol-ly.

Novello & Company, Ltd. Engravers & Printers. 15440

No. 256 NOVELLO'S SHORT ANTHEMS Price (3d)

Earth does not hold

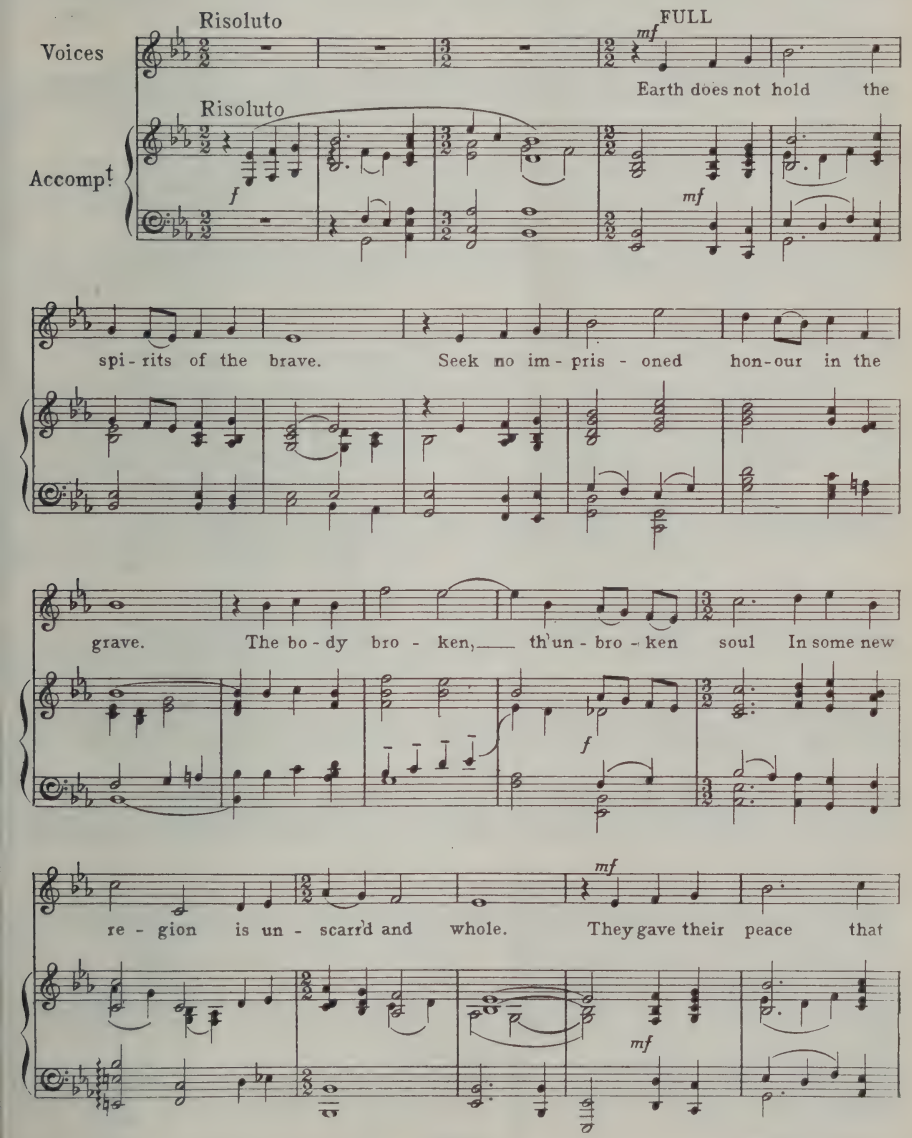
ANTHEM FOR ARMISTICE DAY

Words by PATIENCE ROSS Music by ERIC H. THIMAN

London: NOVELLO & COMPANY, Limited; New York: The H.W. GRAY Co, Sole Agents for the U.S.A.



Risoluto
FULL Voices
mf
Earth does not hold the Risoluto
Accomp.t
f
mf spi - rits of the brave. Seek no im - pris - oned hon-our in the grave. The bo - dy bro - ken, th'un - bro - ken soul In some new
f
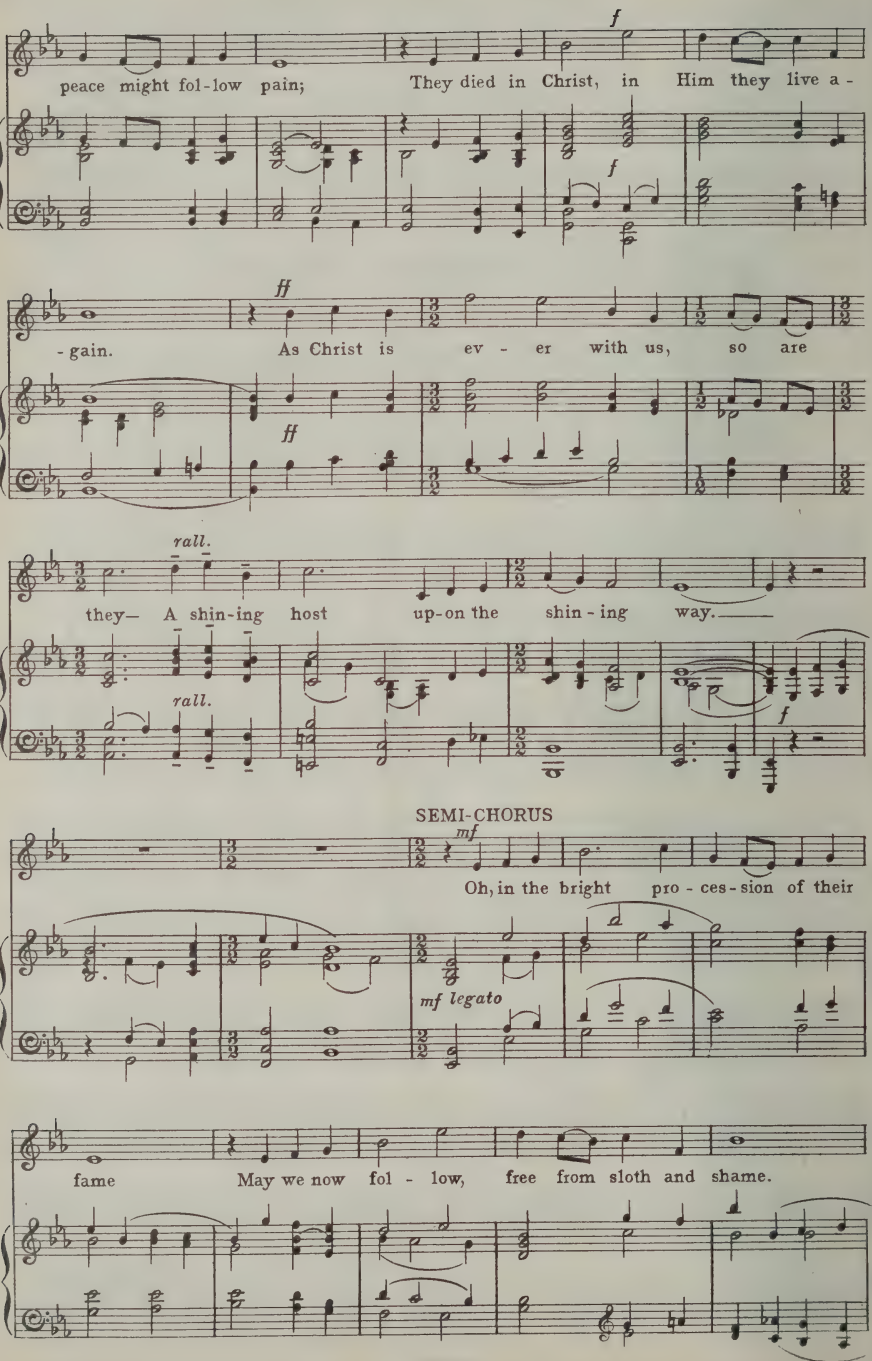
mf re - gion is un - scarr'd and whole. They gave their peace that
mf



peace might fol-low pain;
They died in Christ, in Him they live a-gain.
As Christ is ev - er with us, so are
rall.
they— A shin-ing host up-on the shin - ing way.
rall.
SEMI-CHORUS
Oh, in the bright pro - ces - sion of their mf legato
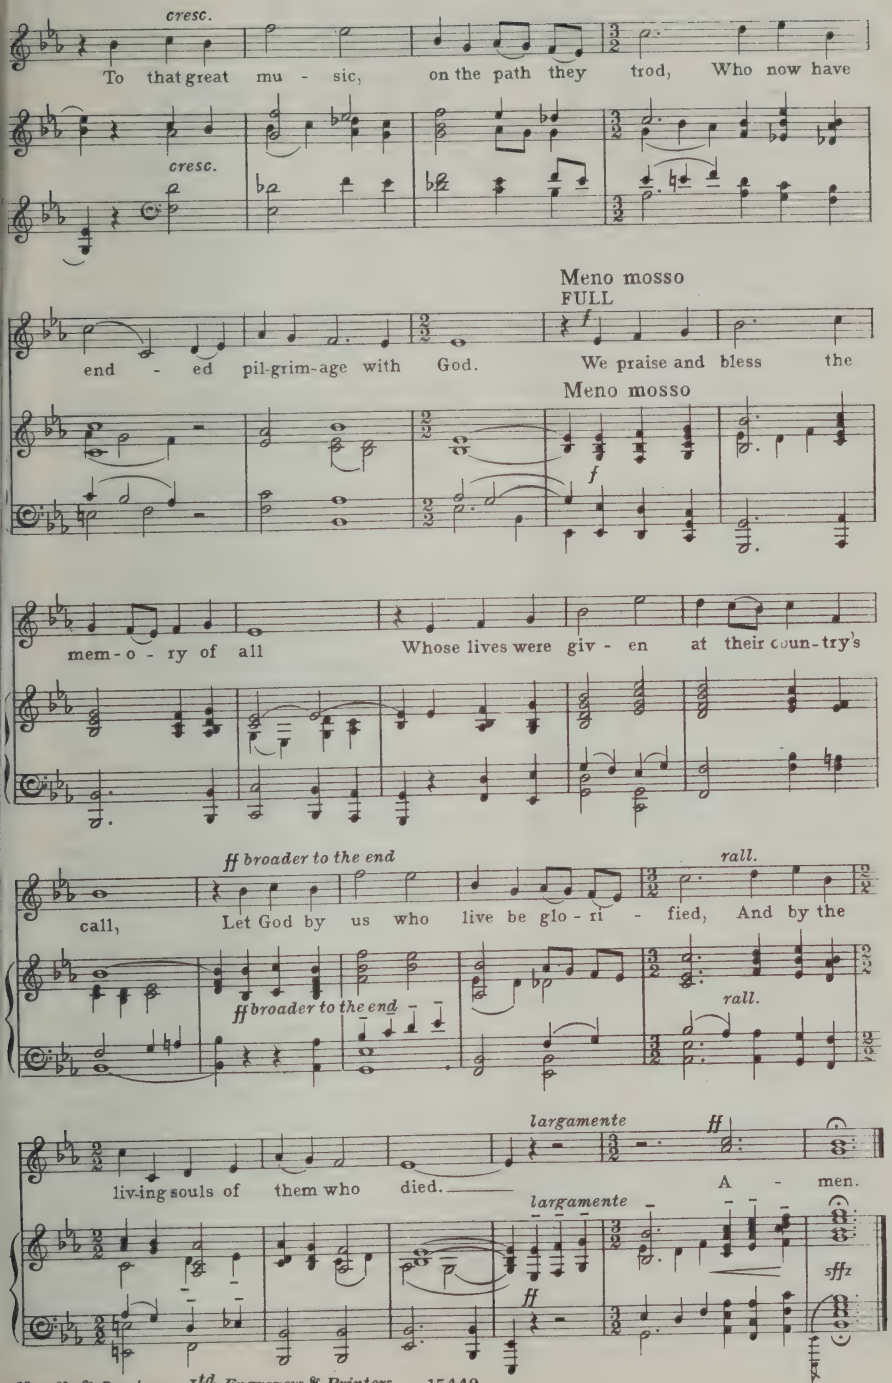
fame
May we now fol - low, free from sloth and shame.



cresc.
To that great mu - sic, on the path they trod, Who now have cresc.
Meno mosso
FULL
end - ed pil-grim-age with God. We praise and bless the Meno mosso
mem-o - ry of all Whose lives were giv - en at their coun-try's ff broader to the end
rall.
call, Let God by us who live be glo - ri - fied, And by the ff broader to the end
rall.
largamente
ff
liv-ing souls of them who died. A - men.
largamente
sffz

Novello & Company, Ltd. Engravers & Printers. 15449

NOVELLO'S
SHORT ANTHEMS.

A SERIES OF SHORT & EASY ANTHEMS.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1. | God, Who is rich in mercy ... ... | G. M. Garrett | 2d |
| 2. | When my soul fainteth within me ... | ...J. F. Bridge | 2d. |
| 3. | Praised be the Lord daily ... ... | ...J. B. Calkin | 2d. |
| 4. | The great day of the Lord is near ... | G. C. Martin | 2d. |
| 5. | Teach me Thy way, O Lord ... ... | W. H. Gladstone | 2d. |
| 6. | Who are we, O Lord ... ... ... | ...C. H. Lloyd | 2d. |
| 7. | Our soul on God with patience waits ... | G. M. Garrett | 2d. |
| 8. | I will magnify Thee ... ... ... | ... B. L.-Selby | 2d. |
| 9. | Blessed is he... ... ... ... ... | ... B. L.-Selby | 2d. |
| 10. | Beloved, now are we ... ... ... | E. H. Thorne | 2d. |
| 11. | Grant, we beseech Thee ... ... ... ... | J. Booth | 2d. |
| 12. | The pillars of the earth are the Lord's ... | B. Tours | 2d. |
| 13. | O Lord, my trust ... ... ... ... ... | King Hall | 2d. |
| 14. | Rejoice greatly ... ... ... ... | H. H. Woodward | 2d. |
| 15. | O Lord, rebuke me not ... ... ... ... | H. Lahee | 2d. |
| 16. | Try me, O God ... ... ... ... ... | C. Wood | 2d. |
| 17. | Christ is not entered into the Holy Places ... | E. Faning | 2d. |
| 18. | In this was manifested ... ... ... ... | ...C. H. Lloyd | 4d. |
| 19. | Lo, the winter is past ... ... ... ... | H. Gadsby | 4d. |
| 20. | And I saw another angel ... ... ... | C. V. Stanford | 3d. |
| 21. | If thou shalt confess ... ... ... | C. V. Stanford | 3d. |
| 22. | It is of the Lord's mercies ... ... | E. H. Thorne | 2d. |
| 23. | O God, Whose nature and property ... ... | Alan Gray | 2d. |
| 24. | Arise, O Jerusalem... ... ... ... ... | O. King | 2d. |
| 25. | For it became Him... ... ... ... ... | O. King | 2d. |
| 26. | Blessed is the man that endureth temptation ... | O. King | 2d. |
| 27. | The Lord is in His holy temple... ... | J. W. Elliott | 2d. |
| 28. | Thou shalt shew me the path of life ... ... | Alan Gray | 2d. |
| 29. | To Thee do I lift up my soul ... ... ... | King Hall | 3d. |
| 30. | Beloved, if God so loved us ... ... ... | J. Barnby | 2d. |
| 31. | The Lord is the true God... ... ... ... | J. Barnby | 4d. |
| 32. | Let the words of my mouth ... ... ... | Hugh Blair | 2d. |
| 33. | O most merciful ... ... ... ... | ...J. W. Elliott | 2d. |
| 34. | The salvation of the righteous ... ... ... | C. Vincent | 2d. |
| 35. | Beloved, let us love one another ... ... | G. F. Cobb | 2d. |
| 36. | Arise, O Lord, into Thy resting place... ... | G. F. Cobb | 2d. |
| 37. | I will wash my hands ... ... ... | A. D. Culley | 2d. |
| 38. | God so loved the world ... ... ... | M. Kingston | 2d. |
| 39. | O ye that love the Lord ... ... ... | ...J. W. Elliott | 2d. |
| 40. | Come unto Me, all ye that labour ... | M. Kingston | 2d. |
| 41. | The sacrifices of God ... ... ... ... | H. Blair | 2d. |
| 42. | I will go forth in the strength of the Lord God | H. Blair | 2d. |
| 43. | O praise God in His holiness ... ... ... | H. Blair | 2d. |
| 44. | O ye that love the Lord ... ... | S. Coleridge-Taylor | 3d. |
| 45. | Ponder my words, O Lord ... ... | ...A. D. Culley | 2d. |
| 46. | Jesu, Who from Thy Father's throne | F. C. Woods | 4d. |
| 47. | Have mercy upon me, O God ... ... ... | J. White | 2d. |
| 48. | Jesu, Word of God incarnate (Ave Verum) ... | J. White | 2d. |
| 49. | Shew me Thy ways, O Lord ... ... | J. V. Roberts | 4d. |
| 50. | The Lord opened the doors of Heaven | F. C. Woods | 2d. |
| 51. | Watch ye, and pray... ... ... ... | G. R. Vicars | 3d. |
| 52. | The path of the just ... ... ... | J. V. Roberts | 2d. |
| 53. | O Lord, correct me ... ... ... ... | J. Coward | 2d. |
| 54. | I will arise ... ... ... ... ... | C. Wood | 2d. |
| 55. | The Angel of the Lord ... ... ... ... | Alan Gray | 2d. |
| 56. | Jesu, Saviour, I am Thine ... ... ... | B. Steane | 2d. |
| 57. | O Lord, Who hast taught us ... ... | A. G. Iggulden | 2d. |
| 58 | Almighty and everlasting God ... ... ... | J. S. Smith | 2d. |
| 59. | Come, let us worship ... ... ... ... | Palestrina | 2d. |
| 60. | Give ear unto my prayer (Ave Maria)... ... | Arcadelt | 2d. |
| 60.* | Give ear unto my prayer (English words only) | Arcadelt | 2d. |
| 61. | Lead me, Lord ... ... ... ... | S. S. Wesley | 2d. |
| 62. | Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life | C. F. Bowes | 2d. |
| 63. | Wherewithal shall a young man ... | ...John Alcock | 2d. |
| 64. | Jesus said unto the people ... ... | J. Stainer | 2d. |
| 65. | Let us come boldly ... ... ... | ...C. H. Lloyd | 2d. |
| 66. | These are they which follow ... ... ... | J. Goss | 2d. |
| 67. | O Lord, give ear unto my prayer ... | W. H. Cummings | 3d. |
| 68. | Whom have I in heaven but Thee ... ... | G. J. Elvey | 3d. |
| 69. | O Wisdom ... ... ... ... ... ... | J. Stainer | 2d. |
| 70. | O Lord and Ruler ... ... ... ... ... | J. Stainer | 2d. |
| 71. | O Root of Jesse ... ... ... ... ... | J. Stainer | 2d. |
| 72. | O Key of David ... ... ... ... ... | J. Stainer | 2d. |
| 73. | O Day-spring ... ... ... ... ... | J. Stainer | 2d. |
| 74. | O King and Desire ... ... ... ... | J. Stainer | 2d. |
| 75. | O Emmanuel ... ... ... ... ... | J. Stainer | 2d. |
| 76. | Rejoice, O ye people ... ... ... | Mendelssohn | 2d. |
| 77. | Thou, Lord, our refuge ... ... ... | Mendelssohn | 2d. |
| 78. | Above all praise ... ... ... ... | Mendelssohn | 2d. |
| 79. | Lord, on our offences ... ... ... | Mendelssohn | 2d. |
| 80 | Let our hearts be joyful ... ... ... | Mendelssohn | 2d. |
| 81. | For our offences ... ... ... ... | Mendelssohn | 2d. |
| 82. | I heard a voice from heaven ... ... | G. M. Garrett | 2d. |
| 83. | The Lord redeemeth the soul ... ... | ...J. B. Calkin | 2d. |
| 84. | O send out Thy light ... ... ... | ...J. B. Calkin | 3d. |
| 85. | If any man sin ... ... ... ... | ... T. Adams | 2d. |
| 86. | I heard a voice from heaven ... ... ... | Alan Gray | 2d. |
| 87. | The steps of a good man ... ... ... | F. Cambridge | 4d. |
| 88. | The Lord is nigh unto them ... ... | W. H. Cummings | 2d. |
| 89. | O perfect Love ... ... ... ... | H. E. Button | 2d. |
| 90. | Awake up, my glory ... ... ... ... | F. Iliffe | 2d. |
| 91. | Fret not thyself because of the ungodly ... | F. Iliffe | 2d. |
| 92. | I look for the Lord, my soul doth wait for Him | F. Iliffe | 2d. |
| 93. | Lord, I call upon Thee, haste Thee unto me | F. Iliffe | 2d. |
| 94. | My song shall be of mercy and judgment ... | F. Iliffe | 2d. |
| 95. | O worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness | F. Iliffe | 2d. |
| 96. | The Lord is King, He sitteth between the Cherubims | F. Iliffe | 2d. |
| 97. | Worship and praise the Lord ... ... ... | F. Iliffe | 2d. |
| 98. | Bread of the world in mercy broken ... | John E. West | 3d. |
| 99. | Turn Thee again, O Lord ... ... | A. Sullivan | 2d. |
| 100. | Mercy and truth are met together ... | A. Sullivan | 3d. |
| 101. | The Peace of God ... ... ... ... | J. Rheinberger | 2d. |
| 102. | Come unto Me ... ... ... ... | H. Hiles | 3d. |
| 103. | If any man sin ... ... ... ... | H. Hiles | 2d. |
| 104. | O Saving Victim ... ... ... ... | J. Stainer | 3d. |
| 105. | Prevent us, O Lord ... ... ... | A. H. Brewer | 2d. |
| 106. | While we have time ... ... ... | H. W. Parker | 4d. |
| 107. | Holy, Holy, Holy ... ... ... ... | F. Cellier | 2d. |
| 108. | Deliver me, O Lord ... ... ... | J. Stainer | 3d. |
| 109 | Why art thou so vexed, O my soul ... | C. Macpherson | 3d. |
| 110 | Whom the Lord loveth ... ... ... | C. Macpherson | 4d. |
| 111. | {I am not worthy / The Heavenly Word} ... ... ... | C. L. Williams | 4d. |
| 112. | O perfect Love ... ... ... ... | C. L. Naylor | 3d. |
| 113. | O Lord, grant the King ... ... ... | W. Child | 3d. |
| 114. | Give rest, O Christ... ... ... ... | ... —— | 2d. |
| 115. | Sing to the Lord ... ... ... ... | ... Tye | 2d. |
| 116. | Let my prayer be set forth ... ... | G. C. Martin | 2d. |
| 117. | {Let Thy hand be strengthened / Behold, O God, our Defender} ... | G. C. Martin | 3d. |
| 118. | Let my prayer come up ... ... ... | H. Purcell | 2d. |
| 119. | O hearken Thou ... ... ... ... | A. Sullivan | 2d. |
| 120. | Lo! the day of rest declineth ... ... | H E. Button | 2d. |
| 121. | Why art thou so heavy, O my soul ... | Gibbons | 2d. |
| 122. | Almighty God, Who hast me brought ... ... | T. Ford | 2d. |
| 123. | Hide not Thou Thy face ... ... ... | R. Farrant | 2d. |
| 124. | How dreadful is this place ... ... ... | M. J. Monk | 2d. |
| 125. | Blessed be Thou, O Lord God ... ... | ...C. H. Lloyd | 3d. |
| 126. | Arise, O Lord ... ... ... ... | F. A. J. Hervey | 2d. |
| 127. | Deliver us, O Lord ... ... ... ... | A. Batten | 2d. |
| 128. | Lord, we beseech Thee ... ... ... | A. Batten | 2d. |

LONDON : NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

(June—1928)

THE MUSICAL TIMES

AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR

FOUNDED IN 1844

PUBLISHED ON THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH

No. 1,030—Vol. 69.
Registered at the General Post Office for Canadian Postage.

DECEMBER 1 1928

Price 6*d.*; Postage, 2*d.*
Annual Subscription, post-free, 7*s.* 6*d.*

ROYAL CHORAL SOCIETY

ROYAL ALBERT HALL

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING

FIFTY-EIGHTH SEASON, 1928-1929

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 15, at 2.30 p.m.

CAROLS

MISS MEGAN FOSTER
MR. JOHN GOSS

Conductor - DR. MALCOLM SARGENT

SATURDAY, JANUARY 5, 1929, at 2.30 p.m.

MESSIAH - - - - - HANDEL

MISS DORA LABBETTE
MISS ETHEL BARKER
MR. WALTER WIDDOP
MR. HAROLD WILLIAMS

DOUBLE CHORUS OF 850 VOICES
THE NEW SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
At the Organ - MR. R. ARNOLD GREIR

Conductor - DR. MALCOLM SARGENT

Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Arena, 7s. 6d.; Balcony (Reserved), 5s.; Unreserved, 3s. 6d.; Gallery (Promenade), 2s.

The Royal College of Music

PRINCE CONSORT ROAD, SOUTH KENSINGTON, S.W.7

Patrons: { HIS MAJESTY THE KING / HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN

President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

Director: SIR HUGH P. ALLEN, K.C.V.O., M.A., D.Mus., D.Litt.

Registrar: CLAUDE AVELING, M.A.

Bursar: E. J. N. POLKINHORNE, Hon. R.C.M.

EASTER TERM.

The Easter Term will commence on Monday, January 7th, 1929.

Entrance Examination on or about January 2nd.

The new edition of the Prospectus may be obtained post free on application to the Registrar.

COMPLETE MUSICAL EDUCATION
is provided by Teachers of the highest eminence.

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT
Classes are held for pupils under sixteen, whose time is also occupied by their general education.

SPECIAL CLASSES ARE HELD FOR:
Score Reading, Conducting, Training of Teachers, Musical Criticism, and Ballet.

OPERATIC CLASSES
The College possesses a fully equipped College Opera Theatre for an audience of 600.

SCHOLARSHIPS, EXHIBITIONS
Upwards of 70 Scholarships and Exhibitions are provided from a permanent endowment fund.

ENSEMBLE CLASSES
There are Vocal and Instrumental Ensemble Classes, and Pupils sufficiently advanced in this work are given the opportunity of putting their knowledge into practice at College Concerts.

A.R.C.M.

Examinations for Associateship of the College (A.R.C.M.) are held three times a year, in December, April, and September.
Full particulars obtainable from the Registrar.

CLAUDE AVELING, Registrar.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, LONDON, N.W.1

Instituted 1822. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1830
(Telephone: Langham 1950)

Patrons:
HIS MAJESTY THE KING
HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN
H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT
AND STRATHEARN, K.G.
H.R.H. THE PRINCESS LOUISE (Duchess of Argyll)

President:
H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT
AND STRATHEARN, K.G.

Principal:
JOHN B. MCEWEN, M.A., D. Mus., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M.

LENT TERM
BEGINS THURSDAY, 3RD JANUARY, 1929.

STUDENTS' ORCHESTRA.
Conducted by SIR HENRY J. WOOD, D. Mus., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M. Tuesdays and Fridays, 2 p.m to 5 p.m.

TEACHERS' TRAINING COURSE.
Special Course for the Training of Teachers.

CONDUCTORS' COURSE.
FOR THE TRAINING OF CONDUCTORS.

OPERA COURSE.
FOR THE TRAINING OF OPERATIC SINGERS.

ENSEMBLE CLASSES.

SCHOLARSHIPS.
SEVENTY-TWO SCHOLARSHIPS AND EXHIBITIONS FOR ALL SUBJECTS.

L.R.A.M.
Examinations during the Summer, Christmas, and Easter Vacations.

PROSPECTUSES, ENTRY FORMS, and all other information on application.

A. ALGER BELL, Secretary

Guildhall School of Music

(Founded in 1880 by the Corporation of London, and managed by the Music Committee)

VICTORIA EMBANKMENT, E.C.4

PRINCIPAL: SIR LANDON RONALD, F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M., &c.

SPRING TERM begins JANUARY 7.

PRIVATE Lessons in any single Musical Subject, and STAGE TRAINING in Elocution, Gesture, Dancing, Opera; Classes in Conducting, Fencing, French Classical Drama.

Complete Musical Education at inclusive fees, £12 12*s.* and £14 14*s.* Opera Class, Saturdays. Special Training Course for Teachers (approved by Teachers' Registration Council).

Prospectus and Syllabus of Local Centres and Schools Examinations (open to general public) free. Students can commence at any time. H. SAXE WYNDHAM, Secretary.

Telephone: Cent. 4459; and City 5566.

WIGMORE HALL STUDIOS.—These splendidly appointed Studios are the recognised centre of the best musical activities in London. Forty-five rooms. Grand Piano in every room. Lift, telephone, and every comfort and convenience. Low inclusive rates. One morning or afternoon per week the minimum time arranged for. Apply, 38, Wigmore Street, W.1.

The Royal College of Organists

THE SOLO-PLAYING TESTS for the next F.R.C.O. EXAMINATION are:

Prelude and Fugue in C minor, J. S. Bach. (Novello, Book 7, p. 64; Augener, p. 168; Peters, Vol. 2, No. 6.)

Choral Prelude, "St. Mary's," Charles Wood, No. 1 of 16 Preludes, Vol. 1. (Stainer & Bell.)

Larghetto from the Quintet, Op. 108, Mozart. Arrangements for the Organ by W. T. Best, No. 20, p. 247. (Novello.)

The 10 selected pieces and the book set for the Essay for the January, 1929, A.R.C.O. Examination, are the same as those set for July, 1928.

All Candidates for the next Examinations must send in their names for Fellowship by December 6th, for Associateship by December 13th. In the case of NEW MEMBERS, proposal forms, duly filled up, must be sent in before November 29. No names will be entered after the above dates.

For the convenience of members, past examination papers have been bound in one volume: Fellowship and Associateship Organ Work, January, 1913, to July, 1927; Paper Work, July, 1924, to July, 1927. Price 4*s.*, to be obtained by members only.

Regulations, List of College Publications, Lectures, &c., may be had on application.

Examples indicating the character and approximate difficulty of the NEW TESTS, set for the first time at the July, 1924, Examinations, may be obtained at the College.

Associateship or Fellowship, 6*d.* each (post free).

N.B.—The College is open daily from 10 to 4.

H. A. HARDING, Hon. Secretary.

Kensington Gore, S.W.7.

THE ASSOCIATED BOARD

OF THE R.A.M. AND THE R.C.M.
FOR LOCAL EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC

Patron: HIS MAJESTY THE KING
President: H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

LOCAL CENTRE EXAMINATIONS (SYLLABUS A)

Written Examinations held in March and November at all centres. Practical Examinations in March-April and November-December at all Centres. Entries for the March-April Examinations close Wednesday, February 6th, 1929.

"SCHOOL" EXAMINATIONS (SYLLABUS B)

Held throughout the British Isles three times a year, viz., March-April, June-July, and October-November. Entries for the March-April Examinations close Wednesday, January 30th, 1929.

ELOCUTION EXAMINATIONS will be held at certain fixed centres in March-April, June-July, and November-December each year. For full particulars see special Elocution Syllabus.

The Board offers annually SIX EXHIBITIONS tenable at The R.A.M. or The R.C.M. for Two or Three Years.

Syllabuses A and B, Elocution Syllabus, Entry Forms, and any further information, may be obtained post-free from:

THE SECRETARY, 14 & 15, Bedford Square, London, W.C.1.

96 & 95, WIMPOLE STREET, W.1

TOBIAS MATTHAY PIANOFORTE SCHOOL

Instruction under his teachers, and under his own supervision.

Open to Professionals and Amateurs, and also to Children.

The Staff consists of thirty-nine senior Professors of thorough experience and platform reputation, all trained by the founder.

Special Short Courses for Teachers during term and vacation.

LECTURE-LESSON CLASS by Mr. MATTHAY on the practical teaching of Technique and Interpretation, diagnosis and correction of faults, musical analysis and synthesis, &c., alternate Wednesday evenings.

COMPLETE TRAINING COURSE FOR TEACHERS
(Approved by the Teachers' Registration Council)

This ONE-YEAR Course may be joined at the beginning of ANY TERM.

For further particulars please apply, MRS. MARION COLE, Secretary.

THE

SCOTTISH NATIONAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

SESSION 1928-29

The Session consists of Three Terms: September 10 to December 1, December 3 to March 9, and March 11 to June 7.

Complete Musical Curriculum. Day and Evening Classes.

Single Subjects taught.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from:

STUART S. FORSYTH, Secretary,
ATHENÆUM BUILDINGS, GLASGOW.

ROYAL MANCHESTER COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Founded 1893. Incorporated by Royal Charter, 1923

President: H.R.H. THE DUKE OF YORK, K.G.
Principal: DR. ADOLPH BRODSKY
Registrar: JOHN HOLME

Students are requested to enter upon a complete course of Musical instruction, and are not admitted for a shorter period than one year.

Fee for the year, £36. Special fee for Organ Course, £30, and for Wind Instrument Course, £18.

Systematic Course for the training of Teachers, approved by Teachers' Registration Council.

The Prospectus with Scholarship information, Diploma Regulations, and Entry Forms, on application.

Manchester School of Music

Founded by J. A. CROSS (1892)

Late Principal (1897-1925): ALBERT J. CROSS, A.R.A.M.
Director: LEOPOLD H. CROSS, M.A.

The oldest Institution in Manchester devoted solely to the interests of Music.

All branches of Music taught. Day and evening Private Lessons Opera Class. Full Orchestral Class. Intermediate and Elementary String Orchestras. Classes for Ensemble Playing, Elocution. Choral Singing, Harmony, Aural Training, &c.

Students prepared for all Royal Academy and Trinity College Exams.

Single Subjects taught. Prospectus from the Secretary, 16, Albert Square.

BIRMINGHAM & MIDLAND INSTITUTE

SCHOOL OF MUSIC

Visitor ... Sir EDWARD ELGAR, O.M., Mus. Doc., LL.D.
Director ... GRANVILLE BANTOCK, M.A., D. Mus. (Ed.).

SESSION 1927-1928

The Season consists of AUTUMN TERM (September 22 to December 20); WINTER TERM (January 14 to April 11); SUMMER TERM (April 20 to July 4).

Instruction in all branches of Music, Students' Orchestra, Chamber Music, Students' Rehearsals, and Concerts.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from—

H. M. FRANCIS, Secretary.

Paradise Street, Birmingham.

LONDON SOCIETY OF ORGANISTS

FOUNDED 1913

PRESIDENT FOR 1928: J. PERCY BAKER, Mus. B.

Organists, Assistant-Organists, are eligible. Register of vacant appointments. All particulars on application to the Hon. Secretary.
De Crespigny House. Denmark Hill, S.E.5

THE LONDON SCHOOL OF SINGING

New Address: 2, Gray Street, Duke Street, W.1 (near Selfridge's)
President: A. NETTLEFOLD
Principal: DAVID GODELL

Instruction in all Vocal Subjects. A thorough musical education if desired.

Special Voice-curing Courses for all vocal defects, caused by over-strain and incorrect production.

Practice with Accompaniste can be obtained at the School at a moderate fee.

Particulars from Secretary, Miss M. HEATH. Mayfair 3819.

Mendelssohn Scholarships Foundation.

A MENDELSSOHN SCHOLARSHIP of the value of £200 per annum is offered for competition.

The qualification for election is "a decided talent for music, exhibited in Composition."

Candidates of either sex, being single and natives of Great Britain, or any part of Ireland, are eligible for election, provided that they are under the age of 30 on the 31st March, 1929, when the list of entries will be closed.

Further particulars may be obtained from the Hon. Secretary,
MR. J. F. R. STAINER, THE OLD RECTORY, ASHTEAD, EPSOM.

R.C.O. EXAMS.—Up-to-date Lessons on Pieces Tests, and Paper Work. F.R.C.O./L., c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

NORTHERN CORR. COLLEGE

Principal:

ALBERT JOWETT, Mus. Bac., Oxon.

COMPLETE COURSE IN COMPOSITION.

A most notable success was the celebrated Composer and Pianist,

WILLIAM BAINES,

who was entirely trained by Mr. JOWETT.

COACHING FOR EXAMINATIONS:

Mus. Bac., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Trinity College, &c.

SPECIALIST TEACHING IN SINGING, VOICE-PRODUCTION, INTERPRETATION; Diagnosis of Faults and

COMPLETE ERADICATION OF FAULTS.

Personal Tuition in

LEEDS, NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE, HARROGATE.

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED.

LYRICS SET TO MUSIC, ACCOMPANIMENTS WRITTEN TO SONGS, &c.

State Exam. or Subject.

HEATHFIELD, MOORLAND DRIVE, HARROGATE ROAD, LEEDS.

Acquire the Perfect Piano Technique -

And ONLY SOURCE OF BEAUTIFUL and FINELY GRADED TONE through THE MODERN TEACHING OF "APPLIED WEIGHT TOUCH," based on THE REAL USE and PRACTICAL APPLICATION OF MUSCULAR RELAXATION and ITS CONTROL -

A PROVED and DISTINCTIVE METHOD GIVING IMMEDIATE and PERMANENT RESULTS - - - - - - - -

THIS METHOD MAY BE SUCCESSFULLY ACQUIRED BY A COURSE OF CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS, DESIGNED FOR HOME STUDY - - - - - - - -

A Teacher of the piano writes: October 14th, 1928.

"In your method there is something for every difficulty and every kind of pupil."

F.R.C.O. writes: October 21*st*, 1928.

"One cannot, of course, measure the value of your Course in terms of £ s. d., but it is certainly far above the fee paid, if one looks at it in that light. Its real value to the keen student must be apparent to anyone who takes the Course."

Write or call to-day for full particulars—

THE SECRETARY,

The Charles A. Gillett Pianoforte School

11, SOUTH MOLTON STREET, LONDON, W.1.

PERSONAL LESSONS DAY AND EVENING.

MEMORISE YOUR MUSIC

BY MEANS OF THE

Mackinnon Method

A CORRESPONDENT WRITES:—

"I am very delighted with Lessons 1 and 2.

I followed your instructions carefully and to my great delight and amazement I found I had quite memorised the pieces for the first Lesson as well as the Bach Prelude in just under 40 minutes, and what is more, I simply cannot forget them.

I can't make a mistake. Your System, as the other testimonials show, is wonderful—It 's magical.

The uncanny part to me is that I have spent hours and days in trying to memorise a piece and could never properly manage it, and then to find I could memorise THREE PIECES in less than an hour!"—5/10/28.

THE FEE FOR THE COMPLETE COURSE OF SIX POSTAL LESSONS IS £3 : 3 : 0.

SEND FOR FREE BOOKLET

(FIX COUPON INSIDE ENVELOPE).

To MISS LILIAS MACKINNON, 1, Paultons Square, London, S.W.3.

Without any obligation on my part please send me your free booklet on "Memory Training."

Name.....

Address.....

(S.A. 9.)

BATTERSEA POLYTECHNIC
LONDON, S.W.11.

PRINCIPAL:
G. F. O'RIORDAN, B.Sc. (Eng.), M.I. Mech.E., M.I.A.E.
HEAD OF MUSIC DEPARTMENT:
W. HERBERT HICKOX, Mus. D., F.R.C.O., F.G.S.M.

CLASSES IN THEORY OF MUSIC, HARMONY, and COUNTERPOINT.
UNIVERSITY COURSES for DEGREES and HIGHER EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and L.G.S.M., Associated Board of the R.A.M. and R.C.M.
Class and Private Lessons in MUSICAL APPRECIATION and AURAL TRAINING, SOLO AND SIGHT SINGING, PIANOFORTE, VIOLIN, VIOLA, VIOLONCELLO, and DOUBLE-BASS.
ORCHESTRA AND CHORAL CLASS.
Lessons on CONCERT ORGAN (Reconstructed and Modernised). Preparation for R.C.O. Examinations.
SPECIAL CLASSES FOR TEACHERS. (Recognised by the London County Council).
Next term begins Monday, January 14th, 1929.
Particulars of all Classes on application to the Principal.

THE LONDON
Musical Competition Festival
President: H.H. PRINCESS HELENA VICTORIA
Chairman: DR. R. WALKER ROBSON, F.T.C.L., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.
Vice-Chairman: DR. W. J. PHILLIPS, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M.

THE TWENTY-FOURTH ANNUAL COMPETITIONS,
2nd to 16th MARCH, 1929,
CENTRAL HALL, WESTMINSTER.
CONCERTS BY PRIZE-WINNERS, 21st, 23rd, & 25th MARCH.
Subject to future confirmation, prizes distributed by H.H. PRINCESS HELENA VICTORIA,
VISCOUNTESS SANDHURST,
SIR RICHARD PAGET, BART., AND LADY MURIEL PAGET,
AND MRS. WALKER ROBSON.
Many Choral, Vocal, Pianoforte, and String Events, also Organ, Theory, Elocution, Country Dances, &c.
£100 Daily News Scholarship.
Two Nine-Guinea Trinity College Exhibitions.
Many other valuable Prizes.

Apply for Syllabus (postage 1*d.*): Mr. T. LESTER JONES (Hon. Secretary), 130, Belgrave Road, Wanstead, London, E.11.

SCARBOROUGH
Competitive Musical Festival
Under the Auspices of the SCARBOROUGH TOWNSMEN'S ASSOCIATION.

APRIL 25th, 26th, 27th, 1929
GRAND HALL, THE SPA

SOLO, DUET, QUARTET, CHORAL, ORCHESTRAL,
SCHOOL CHOIR, ETC., COMPETITIONS

MR. F. CROMACK, Secretary,
Scarborough Townsmen's Association,
Albert Chambers, 9, Aberdeen Walk, Scarborough.

WEST LONDON MUSICAL FESTIVAL
OAKLANDS CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH,
UXBRIDGE ROAD, SHEPHERDS BUSH, W.12.
TWENTY-FIFTH ANNUAL EISTEDDFOD
Thursday, February 7th, 1929, at 6.30 p.m.
Preliminary Contests, February 5th and 6th.
Send stamped, addressed envelope for full particulars, to the Hon. Secretaries, 77, Castleton Avenue, Wembley Park, Middlesex.

S. JAMES, MUSWELL HILL.—RECITALS; H. & H. organ. December 1 and 8, at 5.45; December 12, at 8, with Choir.

ARS VIVENDI BREATHING
is a NEW DEPARTURE
in HEALTH and VOICE CULTURE . . .

IT is the outcome of years of research and practice, and its beneficial effect is felt very speedily.

It is the straight road to the goal, and saves time and labour frequently spent in vain. It is notorious that a large proportion of those who study singing are obliged to abandon it through voice and throat troubles, or nervous break-down. This is due to the intimate connection between voice and health. Wrong use of voice, whether in singing, speaking, or ordinary conversation, implies constriction of throat, which produces nervous strain, leading to nervous exhaustion. Right use of voice raises nervous tone, and improves the health.

¶ In the ARS VIVENDI SYSTEM, nasal congestion is dealt with without need of surgical operation, and all trace of impure intonation disappears; throat and chest are strengthened; effects of prolonged strain are removed, while the diaphragm becomes stronger day after day.

Its result is speedy improvement in EASE OF PRODUCTION, CONTROL OF BREATH, ENDURANCE, REACH, RESONANCE, and QUALITY OF TONE.

This is what makes the difference between success and failure.

It would be easy to fill a volume with the striking testimony that has been given from time to time to the efficacy of ARS VIVENDI BREATHING. The following extract is from a letter recently received from a well-known M.D., F.R.C.P. (Wimpole Street):

"Surely the practical advantages of your method of Breathing must commend themselves to all wise persons. Contrary to what singers teach, I have always advised this as something to be aimed at,
BUT I NEVER SAW BEFORE HOW TO DO IT."

Apply, MR. ARTHUR LOVELL
Author of 'Ars Vivendi' (7th Edition), 'Beauty of Tone in Speech and Song,' 'Concentration,' &c.
WIGMORE HALL STUDIOS, LONDON, W.1

DEGREES IN MUSIC
DURHAM MATRICULATION
LONDON MATRICULATION
PREPARATION BY CORRESPONDENCE
On a thoroughly individual system, ensuring to each Student the closest care and attention.
The following are a few extracts from successful pupils' letters:—
"The way you anticipated the form which the questions asked at the examination would take (and in some cases the actual questions themselves), is wonderful."
"This agreeable result is due to your skilful tuition, and to the skill and patience of yourself and staff I owe very much."
"I much appreciated all the papers you set me, and all the interesting notes without which I should most probably have failed."
For Terms, Testimonials, &c., Address—
MR. J. CHARLESTON, B.A. (Hons. Oxford and Lond.),
14, ELSHAM ROAD, KENSINGTON, W.14.

ARE YOU SATISFIED WITH YOUR PIANO PLAYING?
AND CAN YOU IMPROVISE AT THE KEYBOARD, PLAY FROM MEMORY, AND READ READILY AT SIGHT?
If not, you are not making full use of your abilities—your methods are faulty. I can train you by means of an original Postal System—in your own home and in your leisure time to revolutionise all your playing, to learn Improvisation, play by ear, from memory, to read at sight, and to gain real enjoyment from your Piano.
The Lessons are arranged for you personally, are illustrated from life, and are sent at intervals to suit your convenience, by post.
Send a post-card to-day for my booklet, "The Piano and its Possibilities," which gives you a full description of my System, with a form for free advice and opinion on your case.
The book is sent free, and post free, and is a lesson in itself.
MR. H. CRAWFORD, KINGSLEY GREEN, HASLEMERE.

ORGAN CLASS (Saturdays, 3 p.m.)
High-Class Individual Tuition. Friendly Interest. Any Grade. Full particulars from W.B.M., c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

MODERN CORR. COLLEGE

Principal: Arthur McAlister, B.A. CANTAB.

MATRIC. Successes - 161

(LONDON, DURHAM, DUBLIN.) DURHAM, OCT., 1928.

"Thanks to your excellent and up-to-date Tuition, I have passed the MATRIC. at the FIRST ATTEMPT. After working through your very thorough course I was able to give LENGTHY AND METHODICAL ANSWERS, and it speaks volumes for the Modern Correspondence College that I was able AFTER A LAPSE OF MORE THAN 20 YEARS to work these subjects to the required standard."

A.R.C.O. July, 1928 ∴ NO OTHER THEORETICAL TEACHING.

"I have been prepared entirely by you FROM FIRST PRINCIPLES, and the fact that you have enabled me to pass at FIRST ATTEMPT speaks for itself."

F.R.C.O. Failed 6 times.

"Before taking up your Course
I had failed . . .
SIX TIMES IN SUCCESSION"

L.Mus.T.C.L.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| ART OF TEACHING ... ... | 81 | HARMONY ... | 84 |
| RUDIMENTS ... ... ... ... | 90 | HISTORY ... | 90 |
| COUNTERPOINT ... ... ... | 79 | | |

1st M.B. Sept., 1928.

TOTAL PASSES - - 7

FOUR of the successful Candidates were Students of the M.C.C.

F.T.C.L. July, 1928.

| | |
|---|---|
| ENTRIES ... ... ... | 2 |
| SUCCESSES ... ... ... | 2 |

PLEASE STATE EXAM. OR SUBJECT.

MODERN CORR. COLLEGE SHERWIN ROAD, NOTTINGHAM.

Does Every Pianist Know?

THAT the hand is by no means naturally suited to playing the piano and has to be carefully adapted to its new work ;

THAT the short thumb with its lateral movement, although useful in many passages, comes in for a great deal of sad misuse by the majority of players in the "thumb-under" movement, and is never used for an "up-and-down" movement except at the keyboard ;

THAT the tendons of three of the fingers are by nature tied together in a most provoking manner from the pianist's point of view ;

THAT these are not the only difficulties, for the pianist's "tools" consist of more than his fingers ; the whole arm as far as the shoulder-blade being quite as important in the playing of difficult music ;

THAT there are fifty-nine muscles to be trained in each arm.

Modern music being increasingly complex and more exacting in regard to execution makes a scientific training absolutely indispensable to the successful pianist. The Full and Correct Muscular Development and Special Keyboard Methods of the "From Brain to Keyboard" System will give you this training.

SEND TO-DAY for my illustrated booklet, "Light on Pianoforte Playing." When writing, please say whether you are an Average or Advanced Player. I have also a Course for Beginners.

From Brain to Keyboard

Macdonald Smith's System of Pianoforte Playing.

M. T. MACDONALD SMITH, 94, GOWER STREET, LONDON, W.C.1

"FINGER MAGIC."

HOW THE MASTER MUSICIAN IS MADE.

"I have been reading a little booklet which I have termed 'Finger Magic,' and I would very much like to place this book in the hands of every pianist, violinist, and 'cellist in the Kingdom.

"We all know that the secret of the virtuosi does not consist in the amount of time they expend in instrumental practice—one recently stated that he often does not touch the instrument for a week, and another has affirmed that musicians are positively superstitious about practice. The secret of the success of the great masters must therefore be looked for in another direction than in the capacity for hard grinding practice on orthodox lines, and I have been experimenting with a system which may well prove to be a solution, or at any rate to a large extent.

"The system to which I refer develops the hands not by practice in the ordinary sense, but by a series of exercises, based on sound psychological as well as physiological laws, and the descriptive booklet, issued by the Cowling Institute, contains some astonishing letters from musicians which would convince me, even if not backed up by my own experience, that the quickest and easiest way to develop the strength and flexibility of the wrist and fingers so essential to pianists, violinists, and 'cellists is to perform the operation away from the instrument, when the mind can be centred upon that object alone.

"I anticipate that within a measurable period the knowledge contained in this little booklet, and in the lessons given by the Cowling Institute, will form part of the curriculum of every teacher and be a necessary equipment of every violinist, 'cellist, and pianist."—

ERNEST JAY, F.R.C.O.

NOTE.—The booklet referred to above may be obtained free of all cost on application to Secretary, T., Cowling Institute, 71, Albion House, New Oxford Street, London, W.C.1.

"MASTERY OF THE KEYBOARD"

SIGHT-READING LESSONS

COMPLETE COURSE OF SIX POSTAL LESSONS

The Times: "Deals with the subject systematically from the first stage."

Music: "Goes fully and thoroughly into his subject from every possible standpoint. Cannot fail to be of service."

A PUPIL FROM CHINA WRITES: "My master is a gifted pianist, a minor genius, but he has not the least idea how he sight-reads, and cannot explain."

AFTER SECOND LESSON: "Your course has so far quite revolutionised my playing, and even now I am finding pieces far easier to sight-read."

GEORGE DENHAM, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.,
41, AVONDALE ROAD, S. CROYDON,
and WEEKES'S STUDIOS, 14, HANOVER ST., W.1
('Phone: Croydon 2703)

"SIMPLEXA" FINGER TRAINER

(Registered No. 692810)

FOR ALL INSTRUMENTALISTS

A simple and very effective appliance for giving strength and flexibility to the fingers.
Recommended by Editor of the Musical Times.

IMPROVED MODEL
Price 2*s.* 6*d.* ; postage and packing, 3*d.*

E. C. M., 1, LONGFORD TERRACE, FOLKESTONE.

MUSIC STUDIOS FOR LESSONS OR PRACTICE. Large Room for Students' Concerts, Orchestral Rehearsals, &c. Open 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Five mins. from Oxford Street. Apply, Studio Secretary, Marylebone Music Studios, 72, 73, 74, High Street, Marylebone, W.1.

CUNNINGHAM FAREWELL RECITAL

By special request G. D. CUNNINGHAM, ESQ., will give a farewell organ recital (prior to his American Tour) on Saturday, December 15th, 1928, at 3 o'clock, at St. Luke's Church, Redcliffe Square, Earls Court.

The programme consisting of some of the more important works to be played in America, will be as follows:

1. Fantasia and Fugue in G minor ... BACH
2. Pastorale ... ... ROGER DUCASSE
3. Sonata—94th Psalm (Complete) T. REUBKE
4. Scherzo ... ... ... GIGOUT
5. Fantasia and Fugue on the name B A C H MAX REGER

DECEMBER 1st, at 3 p.m.:

DR. HAROLD DARKE

DECEMBER 8th, at 3 p.m.:

MAITLAND FARMER

ST. JOHN'S WOOD

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

MARLBOROUGH PLACE, ABBEY ROAD, N.W.8.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 8th, 1928, at 4 p.m.

ORGAN AND SONG RECITAL

I.

CÉSAR FRANCK ... Choral No. 1

II.

HANDEL ... (a) "Oh! had I Jubal's Lyre" ("Joshua")
BYRD ... ... (b) "Cradle Song"
CACCINI... ... (c) "Amarille"
(Songs with Pianoforte Accompaniments)

III.

BACH ... (a) { Sinfonia to Part II. of "The hungry shall eat"
Sinfonia: "Wailing, Crying, Mourning, Sighing"
COLERIDGE-TAYLOR
(b) "Andante" from Violin Concerto in G minor
(Arranged for Organ by J. Stuart Archer)
GRAINGER (c) "Shepherd's Hey"

IV.

EVELYN SHARP ... (a) "The Silent Pool"
NORMAN PETERKIN (b) "The Water Maiden"
BACKER GRONDAHL (c) "Eventide"
BACKER GRONDAHL (d) { "Blåaveis"
JARNEFELT... ... { "Titania"
(Songs with Pianoforte accompaniments)

V.

CHERUBINI ... ... Overture, "Anacreon"

Solo Organ - - - W. IRWIN-HUNT
Soprano - - - - KARIN OHMAN
At the Pianoforte - KATE LEVENTON

The Church is near Marlborough Road (Met.), Maida Vale (Tube), and South Hampstead (L.M.S.) Stations, also all bus routes along Finchley Road, Abbey Road, and Maida Vale.

The Organ by Bishop & Son, London and Ipswich. Bechstein Grand Pianoforte.

ST. PETER'S CHURCH, EATON SQUARE, S.W.1.

Saturday, December 29th, at 3 p.m. Christmas Recital.

THE PROGRAMME WILL INCLUDE: Christmas Concerto (Corelli); Rhapsody on Christmas Themes (Gigout); Two Preludes on 'In dulci jubilo' (J. S. Bach); Paraphrase of a Carol Tune (Quef); Christmas Chimes (d'Antalffy); Carillon-Sortie (Mulet); Two Noëls (d'Aquin); Allegretto (Vierne); Christmas Postlude (Harvey Grace).

Sunday, December 30th, at 6.30 p.m. Carol Service.

ORGANIST and DIRECTOR OF THE CHOIR: MR. C. H. TREVOR.

JOIN THE ORGAN CLUB

(ACTING-PRESIDENT: DONALD PENROSE, ESQ.)

AND VISIT

DEC. 8.—DR. TRETHOWAN'S CHAMBER ORGAN.
DEC. 15—ST. LUKE'S REDCLIFFE SQUARE.

ALSO ANOTHER LARGE ORGAN IN THE SAME NEIGHBOURHOOD.

FURTHER ATTRACTIVE VISITS TO FOLLOW.

Entrance Fee, 2s. 6d. Annual Subscription, 10s. 6d.

For full particulars apply Hon. Sec.,
28, HILLMORE GROVE, SYDENHAM, S.E.26.

SCOTTISH EPISCOPAL CHURCH

CATHEDRAL CHURCH OF ST. MARY, EDINBURGH

The Organistship of the above being vacant, applications are invited. Full Choral evensong daily.

Further particulars may be had on application to Mr. Wm. M. Craig, 122, E. Trinity Road, Edinburgh.

Applications to be accompanied by copies of testimonials and qualifications.

CITY OF HOBART, TASMANIA

REMODELLING OF ORGAN

Tenders will be received up to 12 noon on Monday, the 7th January, 1929 for the remodelling of the Town Hall Organ.

Plans may be seen at the Office of the Agent-General for Tasmania, Australia House, Strand, London, W.C.2, and specifications, conditions of tendering, and tender forms obtained there.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

W. A. BRAIN, Town Clerk, Town Hall, Hobart, Tasmania, Australia.

The London Oratorio and Concert Association.

FOUNDED 1912.

THE ASSOCIATION exists for the purpose of bringing Secretaries of CHORAL SOCIETIES, OPERATIC AND MUSICAL SOCIETIES, ETC., into direct communication with capable and reliable Artists, without the intervention of an Agent, and is based on the co-operation of its members. Choral Societies engaging a quartet of soloists for any work, can have the advantage of preliminary rehearsal of the principals by the musical director.

Musical Director: Mr. Hubert Bath.

For Prospectus and List of Artists, address Secretary,
26, GUILFORD STREET, RUSSELL SQUARE,
LONDON, W.C.1.

PIANO PEDALS, with Octave Coupler

This wonderful invention supersedes all Piano Pedals, and is a Master Patent.

St. George's Hall, Liverpool,
9th April, 1921.

"The simplicity of the attachment, and the clever sixteen-feet, eight-feet, or both combined, 'OPTIONAL OCTAVE' contrivance astonished me.

"I was delighted with the Pedal touch and with the variety in that touch, which your Attachment makes possible. It is very responsive to the movements of the feet, and is reliable."

HERBERT F. ELLINGFORD, Mus.Bac., Oxon., F.R.C.O.

Owing to increased output, we have reduced the price of our Popular Model to 14 guineas cash. Deferred payments if desired.

Write for Lists, Prices, and Clients' Opinions and References to

THE MALKIN PATENT PEDAL CO., LTD.,
NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LYME.
London Address: 34, Spencer Hill, Wimbledon, S.W.19.
Please mention this paper when writing.

The
Levinskaya Christmas Holiday Course
for Pianists and Teachers

DECEMBER 31st to JANUARY 5th

(Opening Reception, Sunday, Dec. 30th, at 8.30 p.m.)

Invitations sent on application.

12 LECTURES 6 DEMONSTRATIONS
3 MASTER-CLASSES

"Invariably the pupils played with a technical confidence and a feeling for tone-colour that could only have sprung from the influence of a wise directing mind."—Daily Telegraph, May 25th, 1928.

REMARKABLE TRIBUTES FROM PAST MEMBERS:

FIRST COURSE, SUMMER, 1927

An A.R.C.M., L.R.A.M., L.I.S.M., &c., writes:

"Why is one so helpless to express one's gratitude for all you have given us within this week? You have really solved the problem round which I myself have been groping so long." G. M HUDSON.
The Studio, 28, Sellons Avenue,
August 6th, 1927. Harlesden, N.W.

A School Principal, Secretary Music Teachers' Association, writes:

"The 'wonder' of last week is still with me, and I seem to be inspired. . . . The Lectures thrilled me . . .
MARY E. KIDNER.
August 10th, 1927. Pembroke House School, Norwich.

A Teacher of 20 years' experience, writes:

"Each Lecture had so much food for thought, especially in the controversial points connected with technique . . .
ALICE LAW.
November 14th, 1927. 13, Beaconsfield Place, Aberdeen.

SECOND COURSE, CHRISTMAS, 1927-28

A School Music Mistress writes:

"I have talked so much of you, your lectures, your personality, and the hundred-and-one experiences of that week, that I have 'enthused' all the folk here to rush for your help." M. A. MCNAUGHTON.
January 13th, 1928. 15, Orrell Lane, Aintree, Liverpool.

The Head of Music of Guildford High School, writes:

"Thanks to your vivid and intensely artistic presentation of your philosophy of music, I am able to return to my teaching full of enthusiasm and hope."
M. R. LOUGHBOROUGH.
January 16th, 1928. Wynnstay, Guildford.

An L.T.C.L. writes:

"You combine the Artist, the Scientist, and the Teacher in one." C. H. M. RICHARDSON (Ellison).
March 12th, 1928. 31, Clarence Road, Wood Green, N.22.

THIRD COURSE, SUMMER, 1928

A well-known Musician writes:

"Your child-pupils were nothing short of marvellous—from 7 to 14 years—they were alike Pianists in the full and proper sense of the word." HUBERT BROWN.
Clarendon Chambers, Waterloo Street,
August 9th, 1928. Birmingham.

A Teacher at the Trinity College, London, writes:

"I must write to tell you how delighted I am that I decided to attend your holiday course. . . . my pupils are playing better already, although the term has barely started." WINIFRED VINCENT.
Cherry Tree, Hatch End,
October 14th, 1928. Middlesex.

Write for Complete Syllabus of Lectures and Demonstrations, Fees, Residential Terms, &c., to Secretary.

LEVINSKAYA PIANOFORTE COLLEGE
(The only Residential in London)
2, LEINSTER GARDENS, HYDE PARK, W.2.
PADDINGTON 0370.

THE TECHNIQUER
A BOON TO ALL INSTRUMENTALISTS
Invented and Patented by Mr. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac.

Copy of Testimonial from the renowned organist, ARTHUR MEALE, ESQ.

"Westminster Central Hall, June 1, 1928.

"I have used the 'Techniquer' for a great number of years. It is the best means of keeping the fingers supple that I know of. Specially, lately, during convalescence, has it been invaluable, when not being able to endure the fatigue and strain of tonal practice, I have been able to use it for the preservation of finger and wrist suppleness."

Send for list of testimonials and full particulars post free, "Hand Development," with 16 Photos, 1s. 6d.

Secretary: MISS F. J. FITCH, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M.
21, Boundary Road, N.W.8. 'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. SINGING EXAMINATIONS

CORRESPONDENCE COURSES

Vocal Physiology for Teachers' Exams. and Paper Work, covering all the Subjects required for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Diplomas. (RECENT SUCCESSES.)

HIGHEST RECOMMENDATIONS.

SEND 6*s.* P.O. FOR SPECIMEN LESSON
To ARTHUR BINNS, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., (Singing Teacher), 40, MALSIS ROAD, KEIGHLEY, YORKS.

Field-Hyde Method of Voice Training

MISS ELSIE DUNIAM-JONES
L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M.

Prepares for diploma examinations or concert platform. (3 L.R.A.M. Successes, Easter, 1928.) Failing or faulty voices successfully treated. Single lessons or short courses on Song Interpretation in English, French, or Italian. Auditions free. Vacancy for accompanist-pupil. 17, Cavendish Square, W.1, and at Hendon.

PAPER WORK BY MUS. B., F.R.C.O.

OVER 1,100 SPECIMEN WORKINGS

"Your lessons and ideas splendid."
"Your excellent models make my attempts look cold."

SUCCESSES (with those for January, 1928) include 3 F.R.C.O. (1 for Jan., 1928). 3 A.R.C.O. 2 L.R.A.M.

2s. 6d. per lesson and postage.

"E. B.," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

JUST OUT

THE PIANOFORTE and HOW TO STUDY IT
By ALEXANDER M. GIFFORD, L.R.A.M.

(Enables anyone to become a proficient Pianist even without personal instruction.)

Price 3*s.* From the Author, 25, Granville Park, S.E.13, or from MESSRS. MORLEY, LEWISHAM.

A.R.C.O. ESSAY. — SIX SPECIMENS with ADVICE. Compiled by eminent contributor to famous Encyclopædia. Price 5*s.* Personal lessons (correspondence or "Viva"), by arrangement. Eustace Pett, 32, Lynton Road, Acton, W.3. 'Phone: Chiswick 0948.

F.R.C.O./L.—MS., 12 comp'ete playing Test-papers, 3*s.* 6*d.*; 150 Ear-Tests, 2*s.* 6*d.* A.R.C.O.: 27 Vocal Score Tests, 3*s.* 6*d.*; 24 Hymn Tunes for Transpositions, 2*s.*; 150 Ear-Tests, 2*s.*; 24 Accompaniment Tests, 5*s.*; Hints on Playing and P.W., 3*s.* 6*d.* Up to date. F.R.C.O./L., c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS REVISED

LYRICS SET TO MUSIC, MELODIES HARMONIZED, MUSIC TRANSPOSED AND COPIED, BAND PARTS WRITTEN, MSS. PREPARED FOR PUBLICATION BY A MASTER HAND, ACCOMPANIMENTS OF DISTINCTION WRITTEN TO SONGS.

For terms, write, A. CARRINGTON BRIGGS,
Glenholme, Hessle High Road, Hull, Yorks.

MUSIC DUPLICATING.—All kinds, any number; perfect copies. Specimens and prices on application to E. Herrick, at 37, Amherst Road, West Ealing, W.

CORRESPONDENCE COACHING
for EXAMINATIONS

DR. NORMAN SPRANKLING
MUS. DOC., LOND., L.R.A.M.

Special Courses as follows :—

(1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work. Xmas, 1928; April, 1929
(2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work. " " " "
(3.) Touch and Technique (for Pianoforte Diplomas)
(4.) Trinity College Diplomas. Jan. and April, 1929
(5.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Jan. and July, 1929
(6.) Mus. Bac. and Mus. Doc. (London and Durham)
(7.) Separate Subjects

NUMEROUS SUCCESSES

Candidates entering for the first time, and also those who have failed to pass any examination, should write to
Dr. SPRANKLING, 46, Clarendon Road, Redland, Bristol. Telephone: Bristol 3033.

GLOUCESTER CATHEDRAL
ALTO LAY-CLERK REQUIRED.
Candidates should be under 35, and Communicants. Good reader essential. Duties: Sunday Services; Evensong five days, and Matins three days each week. Salary, £110. Additional fees, £10 to £12 a year.
Applications, with testimonials (copies), should be sent, not later than December 8th, to Mr. HERBERT W. SUMSION, Mus. Bac., Millers Green, Gloucester.

THE SCHOOL OF ENGLISH CHURCH MUSIC
The College of St. Nicolas, Chislehurst, will be opened in January, 1929. Resident men students can be received on very moderate terms, and there are also facilities for non-resident and women students, and for those desiring short courses. For prospectus and terms, apply to The Secretary, S.E.C.M., 105, Gower Street, London, W.C.1.

RAMPTON STATE INSTITUTION FOR MENTAL DEFECTIVES, Nr. RETFORD, NOTTS.
ATTENDANTS—(Single).
EXPERIENCED VIOLINISTS, EXPERIENCED DOUBLE-B. STRING BASS.
Wages at present, 52*s.* per week (including war bonus, which is subject to fluctuations in the cost of living), rising to 66*s.* 3*d.* per week, with lodging, washing, and uniform. Board is provided, and charged for at cost price—at present 14*s.* per week.
Subject to certain conditions, this post is pensionable under the Civil Service Superannuation Acts.
Applications, stating age, experience, references, &c., should be made to the Medical Superintendent.

PAXTON'S COMPOSER'S DEPARTMENT
HYMN TUNES REVISED . . 2*s.* 6*d.* each.

| | Page. | | Page. | | Page. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Criticism ... | ... 2/6 | Copying (same key) | 1/4 | Harmonization | ... 7/6 |
| Revision | | Transposition | ... 2/- | Fingering ... | ... 2/6 |
| or Rewriting | 7/6 | Organ Registration | 2/6 | Theoretical | |
| Accompaniment | 7/6 | Analysis of form | 2/6 | Assistance | 2/6 |

Compositions of more than four pages subject to reduced inclusive quotation.
BY ARRANGEMENT: Orchestration; Writing Lyrics; Setting Lyrics to Music; Engraving and printing of MSS.
W. PAXTON & CO., LTD.,
22, HIGH STREET, NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.C.1.

AURAL TESTS.—L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and other examinations. SPECIAL PAPER showing how to obtain success in these important tests. All candidates should secure this paper. Write, enclosing 4*s.* 6*d.*, to "Aural Tests," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ESSAY.—A.R.C.O., Jan., 1929. Six special new Model Essays (3rd series), on the book "The Scope of Music," with Hints on how to write the Essay. Most Important. Also 1st and 2nd Series of 6 Essays on this book. Price, each series, 4*s.* 6*d.* Enclose P.O. to "Essays," c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

PALESTRINA.—Choice extracts from, as short anthems, to English words. Set as unaccompanied choral test-pieces at Musical Festivals. Specimens gratis from Dr. H. G. Smith, 31, N. C. Road, Dublin.

Perfect Memorising can be taught with ease, certainty, and confidence, and without the monotony of constant repetition. Thousands of promising musicians have failed to achieve the success they deserve through the inability to trust their memory. You can be sure of attaining that sense of certainty, the knowing that there is no risk of breaking down, if you memorise your music by the

MASTER-METHOD
OF MEMORY-PLAYING

No one who can play from the music need be a failure

SUCCESS GUARANTEED OR FEE REFUNDED
NO KNOWLEDGE OF HARMONY REQUIRED

Take the first step to-day by sending for my descriptive Booklet, which is sent free, and Post free on request, stating whether you play the Piano, Violin, 'Cello, or Organ, and if a moderate or advanced player.

MR. REGINALD FOORT, F.R.C.O.,
104, BEACON HOUSE, HEMSTAL ROAD,
LONDON, N.W.6

All smoking affects the throat!

Pipe, cigar or cigarette—no matter which—the delicate membranes of the throat object to smoke, which eventually produces irritation, either mild or severe. To prevent this, take an 'Allenburys' Glycerine and Black Currant Pastille occasionally between smokes and let it dissolve in the mouth. Containing pure glycerine and the luscious fruit juice of ripe black currants, they are delightfully soothing.

Your Chemist Stocks them

In Tins, 2 oz. 8d., 4 oz. 1/3, 8 oz. 2/3, 1 lb. 4/3

Allenburys
Glycerine & Black Currant PASTILLES

PROFESSIONAL NOTICES

MISS IRENE BONAS
SOPRANO.
RECITALS, CONCERTS, AT-HOMES, ORATORIO.
"Fazeley," Alfreton Road, Sutton-in Ashfield, Notts. Tel. 252.

GLADYS CURRIE
SOPRANO
BRAHMS'S REQUIEM (Southwark Cathedral, November 3):
"The soprano solo was beautifully sung by an anonymous singer, whose art faithfully portrayed the religious emotion of words and music without obtruding herself upon the attention of a deeply-appreciative congregation."—Daily Telegraph.
BY THE WATERS OF BABYLON (LISZT) (Queen's Hall):
"Miss Gladys Currie sang the solo with much beauty of voice."—Daily News.
BRAHMS'S REQUIEM (Queen's Hall):
"Miss Gladys Currie's pure and sustained tone made the fifth number the most completely successful of the whole great series."—The Times.
59, Shalimar Gardens, Acton, W.3. Phone: Chiswick 2364.

MISS LYDIA JOHN
(A.R.A.M., L.R.A.M.), CONTRALTO.
Lecture-Recitals of Folk-Songs, Elizabethan Songs, &c.
Professor of Voice-Production and Singing.
Pupils prepared for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c., Scholarships and Festivals.
28, ALBION ROAD, LONDON, N.W.6.
Lessons given at above address or West-End Studio, Cricklewood Conservatoire of Music, N.W.2; and Highbury Conservatoire, N.5, &c. Primrose 3869.

HAROLD KNOWLTON
TENOR.
Soloist, St. Paul's Cathedral.
Shirley, Park Road, Crouch End, N.8. Mountview 5289.

EDWARD REACH
TENOR.
AVAILABLE FOR ORATORIO, CONCERTS, ETC.
Streatham 7888. 12, Maybury Street, London, S.W.17.

LANGDALE BROWN
BASS-BARITONE.
ORATORIOS, CONCERTS, ETC.
29, Sedgeford Road, W.12.

WALTER ADRIAN
VOICE-PRODUCTION AND SINGING
Over FIVE HUNDRED awards at Musical Competition Festivals.
One hundred and twenty-seven Prizes. Six Gold Medals.
ONE Bingham Road, Croydon, and West-End Studios.

VOICE-PRODUCTION AND SINGING
MR. ALBERT GARCIA
Hon. A.R.C.M., F.G.S.M.,
DIRECT DESCENDANT OF THE GARCIAS
CARRIES ON THE TRADITIONS OF HIS FAMILY AS TAUGHT TO HIM BY HIS FATHER, THE LATE GUSTAVE GARCIA.
For terms, &c., apply, 59, QUEEN'S ROAD, N.W.8.

MISS MARY LINDSAY
L.R.A.M. (Teacher's Diploma).
Gives lessons in Voice Production and Singing; coaches for singing examinations; leads and trains choral classes and choirs; also gives lessons on the guitar. Moderate charges for all subjects.
26, Onslow Square, S.W.7. Tel.: Kensington 3627.

MR. J. M. MORRIS,
L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. (Teaching Singing), F.T.S.C.
SPECIALISES IN VOICE PRODUCTION AND SINGING.
CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:
Harmony and Counterpoint. L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Paper Work. All Tonic Sol-fa Diplomas. Vocal Physiology and the Art of Teaching Singing for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Diplomas.
Address: 12, FITZALAN PLACE, CARDIFF. Phone: Cardiff 7830.

MISS PITT SOPER F.R.A.M.
Professor of Singing, Royal Academy of Music, London.
Prepares Candidates for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Examinations (Teachers and Performers).
For particulars, apply Wigmore Hall Studios.

MISS MARY WILSON, F.R.A.M.
Professor of Singing at the Royal Academy of Music, London,
Receives pupils for Voice Production and Singing. Prepares candidates for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Diplomas as Teacher or Performer. Also gives SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE LESSONS to candidates entering for the L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Singing Teachers' Diplomas.
Particulars on application.
Address: 10, Harley Street, London, W.1. Phone: Langham 3909.

N. ANDREW
MUS. DOC., F.R.C.O., A.R.M.C.M. (Dist.)
Correspondence Lessons in Paper-work for Mus. D., Mus. B., R.C.O., R.A.M., and T.C L. Examinations.
Pieces Annotated. Courses in Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, and Orchestration.
Terms, &c., Henrietta Street, Ashton-under-Lyne, Lancs.

MR. J. C. BRYDSON, Mus.B.,
SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE TUITION.
Fees from 10*s.* 6*d.* for Ten lessons, according to Course.
Successes at L.R.A.M. paper work, A. & L. Mus. T.C.L., &c.
"Balcary," KEGWORTH, near Derby.

TO COMPOSERS
NICHOLAS GATTY
MUS. DOC. CANTAB.
is prepared to undertake the revision and arrangement of MSS., and to advise on any matter concerning composition and orchestration.
For terms, &c., apply, 12, Upper George Street, W.1.

ARTHUR MANGELSDORFF
SOLO PIANIST
RUSSIAN MUSIC
CONCERTS AND RECITALS
TALKS AT THE PIANO
For terms, apply to
ARTHUR ELLARSHAW, 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

WILLIAM SANDS
ORGANIST and DIRECTOR OF THE MUSIC, REDDITCH PARISH CHURCH
RECITALIST AND ACCOMPANIST.
For vacant dates, terms, &c., apply to
The Oaks, Mount Pleasant, Redditch, Worcs,
or, 4, Valley Road, Shortlands, Kent.

E. SIMS-HILDITCH
LECTURER AND ADJUDICATOR
Address, 37 Victoria Street, Crewe.

MADAME ALBA.—PROFESSOR of SINGING. (Italian bel canto.) Voice Production; Breath control. Terms, £10 10*s.* Course of 12 Lessons. Audition by appointment. Studio, 139, New Bond Street, W.1.

GEORGE A. ARMSTRONG, Mus. Bac., A.R.M.C.M., L.Mus. T.C.L. Correspondence Lessons in all subjects. Preparation for diplomas. 131, Warbreck Drive, Blackpool, N.S.

MR. J. PERCY BAKER, Mus. B., Dunelm., F.R.A.M., gives Postal Tuition and prepares for Examinations. Personal Lessons (Pianoforte and Theory), at 14, Hanover Street, W.1. Address, 12, Longley Road, Tooting Graveney, S.W.17.

CAPTAIN PERCY BAKER, M.C., F.R.C.O., L.Mus. T.C.L. (Author of "Compend of Musical Knowledge," "Studies in History and Form," &c.). Specialist in Tuition by post for R.C.O., R.C.M., R.A.M., &c., Diplomas. Study Aids, 9*d.* Studies in Modulation, 3*s.*
Send for interesting Pamphlets on Methods.
HAZELDENE, TEWKESBURY.

MISS J. BLAKE, A.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. (Teacher of Singing), prepares pupils L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Exams., as Teacher or Performer. Highest recommendations. Studio, 139, New Bond Street, W.1.

L. R.A.M., A.R.C.M., PIANOFORTE.—Special Coaching by Arthur Ellarshaw, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. 497, Coventry Road, Birmingham.

CLARINET.—ALAN FRANK (pupil of Chas. Draper) open for pupils, at moderate fees, and engagements. 28, Telford Avenue, S.W.2. 'Phone: Streatham 3456.

FREDERICK GREEN, Mus. B., F.R.C.O., &c. Voice Specialist, Vocal Coach, and Adjudicator. Prep. for A.R.C.M. and L.R.A.M. 1, Newington, Liverpool.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:—

(1.) L.R.A.M. Paper Work.
(2.) A.R.C.M. Paper Work.
(3.) Interesting Courses of Study in Rudiments, Harmony, Form, &c.

L.R.A.M. Exams. 1910-28... 334 Correspondence Pupils successful.
A.R.C.M. Exams. 1914-28... 90 " " "

MR. E. H. BIBBY, Mus. Bac., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., Waterloo Buildings, Piccadilly, Manchester.

In response to many requests, MR. BIBBY begs to announce that he has prepared the following additional CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:

(1.) The "Mus. Bac." Degree.
(2.) A.R.C.O. and F.R.C.O. Paper Work.
(3.) A.T.C.L. and L.T.C.L. Paper Work. (30 Successes.)
(4.) The Associated Board Examinations in Rudiments, Harmony, and Counterpoint. (21 Successes.)

(Address as above.)

MR. BIBBY also gives PERSONAL Lessons in Manchester. Complete Preparation (Practical and Paper Work) for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L., &c. Address as above.

ALLAN BROWN, F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., L. Mus. T.C.L. (Organist and Musical Director, Kingsway Hall), 298, Balham High Road, S.W.17. Telephone: Battersea 0916.

Special preparation for F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O. Also L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. ORGAN EXAMINATIONS.

SINGLE LESSONS and PRACTICE on facsimile R.C.O. inst. Also large four-manual organ. Pieces registered and phrased.

RECENT SUCCESSES IN ORGAN WORK

| | |
|---|---|
| 1 A.R.C.M., 1920. | 1 L.R.A.M., 1919. |
| 1 L.R.A.M., 1924. | 4 A.R.C.O., 1921. |
| 1 A.R.C.M., 1928. | 3 A.R.C.O., 1922. |
| 2 F.R.C.O., 1922. | 5 A.R.C.O., 1925. |
| 6 F.R.C.O., 1923. | 4 A.R.C.O., 1924. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., 1925. | 8 A.R.C.O., 1925. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., 1926. | 7 A.R.C.O., 1926. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., 1927. | 8 A.R.C.O., 1927. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., 1928. | 9 A.R.C.O., 1928. |

'Hints for R.C.O. Candidates" to be obtained from the Publishers, Reid Bros., 26, Eastcastle Street, Oxford Circus, W.1. 2/8 post free.

ARTHUR GREGORY, L.R.A.M. (Pianoforte Teacher), educated R.A.M. Teaches Pianoforte, Harmony, Counterpoint, and Form. Examination candidates prepared. Write, 3, Gladys Road, West Hampstead, N.W.6.

FREDERICK C. HAGGIS, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., L.T.C.L., specialises in VOICE-TRAINING and SINGING. Pupils are offered, in addition to private tuition, exceptional advantages in Class-Singing, for the further study of Sight-Singing, Ear Training, and Interpretation. Address: 14, Hanover St., W.1

DR. CUTHBERT HARRIS, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE TUITION 413 Successes in Mus. D., Mus. B., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.O., and the paper-work requirements for L.R.A.M. and A.R.C.M. Diplomas in pianoforte playing. For terms, &c., apply to 58, Avondale Road, Gorleston-on-Sea.

MISS H. HEALE COACHES for all EXAMINATIONS IN MUSIC (at private residence or at West-End Studio), in Pianoforte, Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, Form, Orchestration, "Teaching," Modulation, Transposition, &c. For Terms, &c., apply, Dunraven House, 41, Albert Bridge Road, S.W.11.

DR. CHASTEY HECTOR, D. Mus., Oxon., L.R.A.M., instructs Candidates personally or by post, for Degrees and Diplomas in Music. Compositions revised. "The Downs," Old Shoreham Road, Hove, Sussex.

HERBERT HODGE, F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M., Organist and Choirmaster, St. Nicholas Cole Abbey, London, has, since 1908, made a speciality of coaching Candidates for the Organ Playing Examinations of the Royal College of Organists, and can arrange a private course of instruction (or single lessons) to organists visiting London.

SUCCESSES IN ORGAN PLAYING SINCE 1910:

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1910 | ... | 8 | 1919 | ... | 11 |
| 1911 | ... | 10 | 1920 | ... | 7 |
| 1912 | ... | 20 | 1921 | ... | 9 |
| 1913 | ... | 18 | 1922 | ... | 15 |
| 1914 | ... | 25 | 1923 | ... | 15 |
| 1915 | ... | 25 | 1924 | ... | 7 |
| 1916 | ... | 18 | 1925 | ... | 14 |
| 1917 | ... | 2 | 1926 | ... | 11 |
| 1918 | ... | 3 | 1927 | ... | 12 |

5, Streatham Place, S.W.2. Telephone: Streatham 2195.

DR. A. G. IGGULDEN, Mus. Doc. Dunelm., F.R.C.O. SPECIALIST IN CORRESPONDENCE COACHING. Latest Successes: Durham, 1928, Mus. Doc., 3 Final Mus. Bac., and 1st Mus. Bac. passes. Other recent successes, 4 Mus. Doc. and 4 Mus. Bac. Exs., after prelim. course in composition. Over 200 successes at Durham alone, besides R.C.O. Diplomas. The Durdans, Reigate.

A. H. LAWRENCE, Mus.B., F.R.C.O. (Asst.-Organist, Leeds Parish Church). Correspondence tuition in all Subjects. Preparation for Degrees, &c. 72, Castleford Road, Normanton, Yorks.

DR. ORLANDO A. MANSFIELD, Mus. Doc., University of Toronto; F.R.C.O., F.A.G.O., &c., Sirsa House, Cheltenham. Correspondence Lessons. Revision of MSS. Scoring, editing, and arranging. Examination pieces analysed and annotated.

MISS F. HELENA MARKS, Author of "The Sonata: Its Form and Meaning" prepares for L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., and all other examinations, Pianoforte, Harmony, "Form and Teaching," &c. Personal or Correspondence Lessons in all Paper-Work subjects, including those for L.R.A.M., "Aural Training and Sight-Singing," and A.R.C.M. in "The Teaching of Musical Appreciation," &c. Pupils received and visited for the Pianoforte. Many recent successes L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c.
10, Matheson Road, London, W.14.

DR. H. H. L. MIDDLETON, Mus. Doc., F.R.C.O., L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M. Specialist in Pianoforte Playing, Touch, Technique, and Interpretation. Thirty years' experience in preparing for examinations. More than 1,000 of Dr. Middleton's pupils have gained Degrees and Diplomas. Address: Weekes' Studios, 14, Hanover Street, W.1.

L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., A.T.C.L. Exams. Correspondence lessons in Harmony, Form, Teaching, &c. 29 pupils' successes. Moderate terms. Arthur W. Morrison, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., &c. 39, Clarendon Road, Fulwood, Sheffield.

MR. R. J. PITCHER, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., A.R.C.M. (Double Dip. Singing and Piano), L.R.A.M., Class A, Performer and Teacher.
Prof. Singing, G.S.M., 1905-1915. Special Lect. on Musical Appreciation to L.C.C.
"Recit. and its Rendering," 1s. 6d. "Vade Mecum for Singers." 6d.
Preparation for all Exams. by Post and Personal Lessons.
Special Courses of Papers: Singing, Piano, Touch, Musical Appreciation, &c.
Nearly 1,000 Successes for Degrees and Diplomas.
Send for Prospectus,
21, Boundary Road, N.W.8. 'Phone: Maida Vale 1715.

W. J. FREDERICK PUGH, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.M., prepares for L.R.A.M. (Aural Culture and Voice Culture Diplomas), A.R.C.M. (Appreciation Diploma). Recent Successes, 34, Wilmington Avenue, Chiswick, W.4. Chiswick 3267.

POSTAL LESSONS.—Successful High-Class Tutor; all subjects for principal examinations. From 1/6 per lesson. Apply G.M.B., c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

POSTAL TUITION by F.R.C.O., F.T.C.L. (Registered Teacher). Any Exam. One guinea ten lessons. Harmony, Counterpoint, Fugue, &c. Courses in History, Choir-Training, &c., R.C.O. exams. Recent successes, F.R.C.O., July, 1927; A.R.C.O., January and July, 1928; A. Mus. T.C.L., L.T.C.L., F.T.C.L., July, 1928. Address: BM/JRMB, London, W.C.1.

THE REVISION OF MSS. is UNDERTAKEN by musical critic and song composer. Lessons in piano, singing, theory. Herbert H. Nelson, 9, Grange Rd., Canonbury, N.1.

R.C.O. EXAMS.—Finishing lessons given on replica of R.C.O. organ at National Institute for the Blind, London. Apply, Mr. H. V. Spanner, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., 79, Crofton Road, London, S.E.5. Candidates are advised to apply early.

TO COMPOSERS.—Complete and systematic course, by correspondence, in Military Band Instrumentation. Write, Major Charles Hoby, M.B.E., Mus. Doc., Oxon., 80, Warwick Gardens, London, W.14.

SPENCER SHAW, L.R.A.M., A.R.C.O. (Organist and Musical Director, Whitefields Tabernacle), Tottenham Court Road, W.1. Recitalist. Tuition in Organ, Piano, Harmony, &c. Preparation for Exams.

DR. A. E. TAYLOR. PUPIL GAINED STILLIE Bursary for Cpt.; Gold Medal for Cpt., Ass. Board; Gold Medal for Har., Ass. Board; C. C. Scholarship; A.R.C.O., A.T.C.L., Mus. B. Compositions revised and accompaniments written. Portland Place, Lancaster

HERBERT WEATHERLY, F.R.C.O., ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER, St. John's Church, Wilton Road, S.W., has a few vacancies for pupils. Fine electric 3-manual organ. For terms, apply, St. John's, Wilton Road.

W. G. WEBBER, F.R.C.O. Recitalist, &c. Preparation for Exams. Organ lessons given on new four-manual Willis. Address, Christ Church, Westminster Bridge Road, London, S.E.1.

DR. PERCY WOOD, Mus. Doc. Oxon., F.R.C.O. SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE COURSES:

(1) Elementary Harmony and Counterpoint.
(2) F.R.C.O. and A.R.C.O.
(3) A.R.C.M. (Theory of Music).
(4) Mus. Bac. Degree.

Several recent successes in all these examinations.

R.C.O. EXAMINER says: "Your system is undoubtedly an excellent one."

SUCCESS GUARANTEED—given any pupils with the requisite musical ability for the examination in view.

328 A.R.C.O. Successes since 1909.

195 F.R.C.O. " " "

RECENT SUCCESSES IN PAPER WORK:

| | |
|---|---|
| 2 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1918. | 2 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1918. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., July, 1918. | 2 A.R.C.O., July, 1918. |
| 1 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1919. | 3 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1919. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1919. | 3 A.R.C.O., July, 1919. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1920. | 10 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1920. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1920. | 6 A.R.C.O., July, 1920. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1921. | 7 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1921. |
| 6 F.R.C.O., July, 1921. | 8 A.R.C.O., July, 1921. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1922. | 5 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1922. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., July, 1922. | 5 A.R.C.O., July, 1922. |
| 8 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1923. | 6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1923. |
| 7 F.R.C.O., July, 1923. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1923. |
| 7 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1924. | 9 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1924. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1924. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1924. |
| 4 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1925. | 8 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1925. |
| 7 F.R.C.O., July, 1925. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1925. |
| 5 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1926. | 6 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1926. |
| 6 F.R.C.O., July, 1926. | 6 A.R.C.O., July, 1926. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1927. | 12 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1927. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., July, 1927. | 10 A.R.C.O., July, 1927. |
| 3 F.R.C.O., Jan., 1928. | 12 A.R.C.O., Jan., 1928. |
| 6 F.R.C.O., July, 1928. | 9 A.R.C.O., July, 1928. |

"Tralee," Warwick Road, Cliftonville, Margate.

TIRED VOICES REMEDIED for SONG and SPEECH. Natural Diction in English and other languages. Interpretation, Breath Control.
Edna Hoff, Victoria 2288. Telephone for Appointment.

CONDUCTOR (experienced) will GIVE SERVICES to any Choral, Orchestral, or Operatic Society, London or Provinces. Box 38, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

TO ORGANISTS, CONDUCTORS, &c.— CONTRALTO, Gold Medallist, experienced and enthusiastic, will accept engagements for expenses fee. Would also like to hear of other vocalists requiring reliable Contralto for quartets, duets, &c. W. Clapton, 23, Groombridge Road, E.9.

PIANIST, Experienced, would like to meet STRING PLAYERS for quartet and quintet practice. Professional or good amateur. Afternoons or evenings. Box 43, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, London, W.1.

FRENCH HORN PLAYER desires engagements as PRINCIPAL in Symphony, Chamber, or miscellaneous Concerts. N.W. counties. Highest experience and references. Box 42, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

SOLO and CHORUS MEN SUPPLIED for Church Services, Weddings, &c.; also for Choral Society Concerts. All men on register are experienced, and can if necessary be engaged at short notice. Apply, G. Hugh Weedon. 485, Green Lanes, Harringay, N.4. 'Phone: Holborn 6966.

CHORISTERS WILL BE REQUIRED for the resident choir-school at the College of St. Nicolas, Chislehurst, which is being opened in January, 1929, by the School of English Church Music. General education will be provided at a first-rate preparatory school. An exceptional opportunity for boys showing musical promise. For particulars apply, The Warden, S.E.C.M., 105, Gower Street, London, W.C.1.

SOLO BOY WANTED for famous West-End Church. Experienced. Salary, £30-£4 oper annum. Write, Box 36, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

CHOIR-BOYS WANTED. St. Luke's, Redcliffe Square (Earl's Court Station). Ages 9 and up. Good pay and expenses. Apply, Maitland Farmer, The Vestry.

SOPRANO, TENOR, and CONTRALTO (paid) REQUIRED for Highgate Presbyterian Church. Letters to W. F. Jenkins, 47, Stanhope Gardens, N.6.

TEMPLE CHURCH.—An ALTO WANTED. Competent reader. Apply, BY LETTER ONLY, to the Director of the Choir, The Temple Church, E.C.2.

WANTED.—PAID ALTO. St. Luke's, Kew Gardens. Suit local man. Write, Rowe, 5, Park Road, Teddington.

SOLO TENOR REQUIRED for WEST-END CHURCH. £30 per annum. Duties: Weekly Rehearsal, and two Sunday Services. Write, Box 40, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ST. MICHAEL'S, Chester Square, S.W. TENOR WANTED. Salary, £20 per annum. Good sight-reader essential. Apply, above address, to R. Goss-Custard.

TENOR CHORISTER WANTED for City Church. Stipend, about £16. Particulars to Mr. Guthrie, 23, Cornwall Road, Stroud Green, N.

TENOR WANTED. St. John's Church, Wilton Road, S.W.1, by Christmas. Good reader essential. Salary £25 per annum. Apply, Herbert Weatherly, F.R.C.O., Choirmaster, St. John's.

WANTED, by well-known TENOR, position as SOLOIST in Church Choir. Any denomination. Wide oratorio experience. Apply, Box 44, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

BASS WANTED. — St. Stephen's, Gloucester Road, S.W.7. Good reader essential. £20. Write, Choirmaster.

BASS REQUIRED.—N. Kensington. PLAIN-SONG. £12 per annum. Communications to H. B., 54, Highlever Road, W.10.

WANTED.—BASS. For first-class professional MALE-VOICE QUARTET. Present Bass retiring. Must not be too old: a quick reader and a good musician. Apply (with photograph), stating age, and previous experience, to Box No. 39, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

CORNISH Seaside Parish REQUIRES now Communicant ORGANIST-CHOIRMASTER. Salary, £48. Write, stating age and experience, to Vicar, Looe, Cornwall.

ORGANIST (Voluntary) WANTED for CHORAL SOCIETY visiting London Churches, giving oratorios. Scope. "C.," 20, Wiltshire Road, Brixton, S.W.9.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED for the Roupell Park Wesleyan Church, Norwood Road, London, S.E.27 (opposite Tulse Hill Station). Fine organ: Three-Manual. All applications to be made by letter to the Church Secretary, J. C. Hall, 24, Harborough Road, Streatham, S.W.16, stating experience, qualifications, and salary required.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER, A.R.C.O., experienced, SEEKS POST. Moderate salary. Free Church in London. Good accompanist. Excellent references. Apply, Box 41, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER REQUIRED for Parish Church, Whitchurch, Shropshire. Salary, £50. Fine three-manual organ. The town and district offer splendid opening. Applications, with qualifications, to the Rector, Whitchurch, Shropshire.

ORGANIST-CHOIRMASTER REQUIRED for St. Stephen's, East Putney, S.W.15. Experienced. Evangelical Communicant, Congregational singing; sound musician essential. Fine organ; good salary. State references to Vicar.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED for St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Redhill and Reigate. Must be capable musician with experience of Church work. Salary up to £100 p.a. Full details of qualifications, &c., to A. W. Wilkins, Almora, Belmont Road, Reigate.

ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER WANTED for Nonconformist Church in Brixton district. Honorarium £40 per annum. Must be thoroughly efficient in both capacities. Application by letter, stating age, previous experience, and enclosing references, to Secretary, 57, Calbourne Road, Balham, S.W.12.

THE SERVICES of an ORGANIST and CHOIRMASTER will be REQUIRED shortly at Victoria Road Nonconformist Church. Apply by letter, addressed to the Secretary, giving age, qualifications, previous appointments, and other necessary information.

WANTED, ORGANIST who has EXPERIENCE as Choirmaster, for Holly Park Wesleyan Church, Crouch Hill, W.4, early in the New Year. Apply, stating qualifications and salary required, Harry G. Munt, 15, Coolhurst Avenue, N.8.

ORGANIST AND CHOIRMASTER, keen, experienced, SEEKS CHANGE. Nonconformist. North of Thames. Write, Box 35, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ASSISTANT-ORGANISTSHIP OR SOLE CHARGE desired by young organist. Previous experience. (Letters only), M. T., 1, Landseer Street, Battersea, S.W.11.

FOR SALE.—Westminster Model Bell ORGAN. Two manuals. Radiating and concave pedals. 16 Stops, usual Couplers. Excellent condition. With electric motor blower. Seen by appointment. Sommerville, 74, Westmoreland Road, Bromley, Kent.

FOR SALE.—Norman & Beard PEDAL ATTACHMENT, WITH STOOL; in good condition. £15. Apply, Gale, 15, Gilston Road, S.W.10.

ORGAN PEDAL ATTACHMENT and STOOL. Very little used. Set by Willis; cost £12 12s. Wanted, £6 6s. 5, Grove Avenue, Muswell Hill, N.10.

ESTEY ORGAN.—EXCELLENT CONDITION. 13 stops. Price, £26. 109, The Avenue, N.17.

ORGANS (New and Second-hand) for SALE.—Electric and pneumatic action up-to-date. Built or reconstructed. Bedwell & Son, The Cambridge Organ Works, Cambridge.

PEDAL AMERICAN ORGANS.—One, Two, and Three Manuals. Bargains. From £15. Best Makers. Stagg, 45, Grays Inn Road, London, W.C.1.

ORGAN WANTED.—The SMALLEST Organ made by the Positive Organ Co. Particulars to J. G. Evans, Claremont Cottage, Tunbridge Wells.

SACRIFICE for QUICK SALE.—Two-manual ORGAN, Estey's largest. R.C.O. pedals. Special reeds, and Church organ Console. Write, BM/GDNX, London, W.C.1.

FOR SALE.—BECHSTEIN UPRIGHT. Good condition. £65. Apply, Box 37, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ANGELUS CABINET PIANO-PLAYER. In perfect condition. With 80 rolls of music. Cheap for quick sale. M. Hutchinson, 73, Chester Terrace, S.W.1.

BECHSTEIN GRAND PIANO for SALE.—Length 6-ft. Ebony case. Recently thoroughly re-conditioned. Price £150 or near offer. May be seen any time. F. R. Wade, The Park, Market Deeping, near Peterborough.

BIJOU UPRIGHT GRAND by Challen & Son. Good condition. Overstrung. Full Trichord. Ebonised case 50 Guineas. H., 23, Gordon Avenue, Twickenham.

MASSIVE UPRIGHT GRAND by GÜNTHER. Ebonised case, with ORGAN PEDAL attachment; action and appearance perfect. £45. Walker. 47, Ulundi Road, Blackheath, S.E.3.

PLAYER-PIANO, "Famous Steck." 88-note. Equal new. Perfect tone. £110; cost £200. Appointment. 91, Albert Road, Ilford, Essex.

LADY would like temporarily to HOUSE GOOD PIANOFORTE, have tuned, and kept as own. Bechstein. In exchange for occasional use for duets for two pianofortes. "L. M. D.," 30, Montserrat Road, Putney, S.W.15.

A LADY wishes to dispose of her HARP—Erard. Good condition, very low price. Box 33, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

TEACHING CONNECTION for SALE.—N.E. Port. Organ, Pianoforte and Singing, and Choir Training. Recommend for post of Organist and Choirmaster of Nonconformist Church. Box 45, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

OSTROVSKY MACHINE for Hand Development. Produces wonderful results. Cost £20. No reasonable offer refused. Mr. White, Lismore, Granville Road, Barnet, Herts.

FOR SALE.—A large quantity of MUSIC arranged for PIANOFORTE (4 hands), in well-bound Vols. As good as new. Comprising almost all the orchestral and chamber works of Brahms, Beethoven, Mozart, Schumann, Schubert, Mendelssohn, &c., as well as Bach's organ works. All greatly reduced in price. Full list on application. Dr. Iggulden, The Durdans, Reigate.

FOR SALE.—Organ, pianoforte, and violin music. List on application to Miss I. Bond, Airlie, Summerdown Road, Eastbourne.

WANTED.—Vielle, Pipe and Tabor, Shawm, Clavicytherium, Spinet, Ruckers Harpsichord, Recorder (Set if possible), Musette, and Cristofori Pianoforte. Head, 1, Woodstock Studios, Bedford Park, London, W.4.

WANTED to BUY.—New or Second-hand Copy of "Joseph Guarnerius: His Works and His Partners," by Horace Petherick. Write, Box 30, "The Music Mirror," 22, High Street, New Oxford Street, London, W.C.1.

COMPOSITIONS by EDWARD S. CRASTON, Mus. Bac., performed in Great Britain and the Colonies, with acceptance: "They that go down to the sea in ships," 4d. (Anthem composed at sea); "The Lord ordereth," 3d. (Anthem for Confirmation). London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

AUTHORS and COMPOSERS.—SONGS and MUSICAL COMPOSITIONS WANTED for publication. We compose Music to Lyrics. Send MSS. (Words or Music) to The Carlton Music Agency, 151, Nevill Road, London, N.16.

IMPORTANT TO COMPOSERS.—Send stamp for our latest prospectus on music publishing. The Norman Reed Music Company, 133A, Charing Cross Road, London, W.C.2.

MUSIC DUPLICATED, lowest terms. G. Rowland, 95, Chandos House, Palmer Street, Westminster, S.W.1.

A TREATISE ON CONDUCTING.

12,000 WORDS. ILLUSTRATED METHOD. 2s. 6d. Post free; Abroad, 3s. Pre-eminent Technique. It will thoroughly prepare you for the position of "Conductor." M. T. Cooper, M.D., 23, Beech Avenue, Blackpool.

£1,000 PAID FOR LOSS OF HANDS.—Temporary loss of use: right hand, £8 per week; left hand, £6. Many other benefits. Annual premium, £3. Instalments arranged. Defence Ltd., 40, King William Street, E.C.4.

PIANO REPAIRS. "WIGMORE HALL FINISH" denotes a standard not obtainable elsewhere.
THE MOST HIGHLY SKILLED WORKMANSHIP.
THE FINEST MATERIALS (regardless of cost).
PERFECT SATISFACTION.
WIGMORE HALL AND PIANO GALLERIES, 32-40, Wigmore Street, W.1.

STEINWAY STUDIOS

COMFORTABLY FURNISHED
ELECTRIC LIGHT
CENTRAL HEATING
TELEPHONE LIFT
NEW STEINWAY PIANOS

Full particulars from

STEINWAY & SONS
THE NEW STEINWAY HALL,
1 & 2, GEORGE ST., CONDUIT ST., LONDON, W.1.
'PHONE: MAYFAIR 6641-5.

PIANOS

BY

Bechstein, Bord, Schiedmayer,
Chappell, Rogers, Gors, & Kallmann

and other celebrated makers

The Profession most cordially invited to inspect our large and varied stock of New and Second-hand Pianos. Cash, Hire, or Hire-purchase. Pianos taken in exchange.

Apply for lists:

CHAS. STILES & CO.
74-76, SOUTHAMPTON ROW
LONDON, W.C.1.
'Phone: MUSEUM 0439.

JUST PUBLISHED

No. 104.—NOVELLO'S MUSIC PRIMERS AND EDUCATIONAL SERIES

A HANDBOOK FOR CHORALISTS

BY

HARVEY GRACE

CONTAINING HINTS ON SIGHT-SINGING AND CHORAL TECHNIQUE AND EXPRESSION.

Thirty-four Studies specially composed by Edward C. Bairstow, Harold Darke, T. F. Dunhill, Julius Harrison, Geoffrey Shaw, and the Author. Six Rounds by Beethoven

WITH A FOREWORD BY

SIR WALFORD DAVIES

PRICE ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

CRAMER

MAGNIFICENT 1928 LATEST MODELS

| | |
|---|---|
| BABY GRAND ... | 120 Gns. |
| UPRIGHT GRAND | 65 Gns. |
| UPRIGHT PLAYER | 103 Gns. |

FULL SCALE
LATEST DEVICES

Write for our very generous Hire-Purchase Terms.

J. B. CRAMER & CO., Ltd.,
139 NEW BOND ST., W.1.
46 MOORGATE, E.C.2.
128/130 KENSINGTON HIGH STREET, W.8.

FERD. KUECHLER'S

(Teacher at the Leipsic Conservatory)

COURSE of VIOLIN INSTRUCTION

is a

TRIUMPH

of practical teaching

TO KNOW IT IS TO RECOMMEND IT

Send for a specimen copy from the publishers, or ask your music-seller to let you have one on approval.

HUG & Co.

MUSIC PUBLISHERS.
LEIPSIC

NOVELLO'S CHRISTMAS CAROLS. LATEST NUMBERS

| No. | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 398. | O lovely voices of the sky ... | W. G. Alcock | 2d. |
| 399. | This Day ... ... | Gerrard Williams | 1½d. |
| *400. | Hark! what mean those Holy voices | A. Sullivan | 4d. |
| *401. | Four Christmas Carols ... ... ... | | 3d. |
| | 1. In Bethlehem, that noble place | B. J. Dale | |
| | 2. Sleep, Holy Babe! ... | R. W. Robson | |
| | 3. The First Christmas Night | W. H. Sangster | |
| | 4. There dwelt a King ... | John E. West | |
| | (Words only, 4s. per 100.) | | |
| *402. | Silent Night ... ... ... | Franz Gruber | 3d. |
| 403. | Carols of Bethlehem ... ... | C. W. Pearce | 3d. |
| | 1. No room in the Inn. 2. The heavenly host. 3. Our "House of Bread." | | |
| 404. | Good King Wenceslas... ... | Geoffrey Shaw | 3d. |
| *405. | O lovely voices of the sky (Unison) | Cuthbert Harris | 1½d. |
| *406. | Ditto. (Four Voices) | Cuthbert Harris | 3d. |
| 407. | His Birthday Keep ... | A. M. Goodhart | 1½d. |
| 408. | Christmas Cradle Song ... | J. F. Bridge | 1½d. |
| 409. | Carol, Carol, tenderly, sweetly | J. F. Bridge | 1½d. |
| 410. | Rejoice, the Christ has come | Stanley Marchant | 1½d. |
| *411. | The shepherds found Thee by night | Geoffrey Shaw | 3d. |
| 412. | The Carollers ... ... ... | E. Bunnett | 1½d. |
| 413. | The stars are shining bright and clear ... ... Carol, sweetly carol ... | E. Bunnett | 1½d. |
| 414. | Christmas Bells ... ... ... | E. Bunnett | 1½d. |
| 415. | A Child this day is born Hark! what mean those Holy Voices ... | E. Bunnett | 1½d. |
| 416. | The Angel's Carol ... ... | E. Bunnett | 1½d. |
| 417. | While shepherds watched Angels from the realms of glory ... ... | E. Bunnett | 1½d. |
| 418. | A Christmas chime ... ... | E. Bunnett | 1½d. |
| 419. | A Cradle Song ... ... | A. H. Brewer | 1½d. |
| 420. | Gather the holly-bough... | H. E. Watts | 1½d. |
| 421. | The Three Wise Men ... | Alfred Hollins | 1½d. |
| 422. | The Holly and the Ivy... | Geoffrey Shaw | 1½d. |
| 423. | There is no rose... ... | Gerrard Williams | 1½d. |
| *424. | The Christ-Child (Unison) ... | G. Rathbone | 2d. |
| 425. | All Christian men ... | H. A. Chambers | 1½d. |
| 426. | I saw three Kings ... ... | G. Rathbone | 1½d. |
| 427. | O come this day ... ... | H. G. Ley | 1½d. |
| 428. | All hail with joy ... | Chastey Hector | 1½d. |
| 429. | Rosa Mystica ... ... | B. J. Dale | 4d. |
| 430. | Cradle Song ... ... ... | B. J. Dale | 4d. |
| 431. | O lovely voices ... | H. A. Chambers | 1½d. |
| 432. | The Christ-Child (Four Voices) | G. Rathbone | 2d. |
| 433. | A Lullaby Carol ... ... | Geoffrey Shaw | 3d. |
| 434. | While shepherds watched | C. Lee Williams | 1½d. |
| 435. | The First Nowell (with Descant) | Traditional | 2d. |
| 436. | Good King Wenceslas (with Descant) | ,, | 2d. |
| 437. | Balulalow ... ... | Roy Thompson | 1½d. |
| 438. | Sing we how the Heavenly Star | Roy Thompson | 1½d. |
| 439. | His dwelling ... ... ... | G. Rathbone | 1½d. |
| 440. | Magi! see the star o'erhead ... | G. Rathbone | 1½d. |
| 441. | The Seven Joys of Mary ... | C. S. Lang | 1½d. |
| 442. | A Virgin unspotted (with Descant) | Traditional | 2d. |
| 443. | What Child is this (with Descant) | Old English | 2d. |
| 444. | Good Christian men, rejoice (with Descant) | Old German | 2d. |
| 445. | I saw three ships coming sailing in (with Descant) ... ... ... | Traditional | 2d. |
| 446. | Shepherds, shake off your drowsy sleep (with Descant) ... ... | Besançon Carol | 2d. |

* Also published in Tonic Sol-fa.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

JUST PUBLISHED

NOVELLO'S CLASSICAL SONGS

By VARIOUS COMPOSERS

VOLUME 5

CONTENTS.

| TITLE. | COMPOSER. | TITLE. | COMPOSER |
|---|---|---|---|
| BLACKSMITH, THE ... | BRAHMS | LONELY AM I NOW ... | WEBER |
| COME UNTO HIM ... | HANDEL | LOVELY WOODS ... ... | LULLY |
| ERL-KING, THE ... ... | SCHUBERT | OR LET THE MERRY BELLS | HANDEL |
| HARK! THE ECHOING AIR ... | PURCELL | QUESTIONING ... | SALVATOR ROSA |
| IF WITH ALL YOUR HEARTS | MENDELSSOHN | SERENADE, A ... ... | SCHUBERT |
| I'LL SAIL UPON THE DOG-STAR | PURCELL | SHEPHERD, THE ... ... | WEBER |
| IN THE GOLDEN MORN | TSCHAIKOWSKY | SHEPHERDS AND MAIDENS ... | LOTTI |
| KING OF THULE, THE ... | BERLIOZ | SORROW ... ... ... | PERGOLESI |
| KNOTTING SONG, THE ... | PURCELL | SWEET ECHO ... ... ... | LAWES |
| LADYBIRD ... ... | SCHUMANN | SWEET ROSE AND LILY ... | HANDEL |
| LET ME WANDER ... ... | HANDEL | TALISMAN ... ... | SCHUMANN |
| LITTLE SPINNER, THE ... | MOZART | WHERE THE BEE SUCKS ... | SULLIVAN |
| | | WILLOW SONG, THE ... | SULLIVAN |

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE
Paper Boards, 3s. 6d.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC

Mandeville Place, Manchester Square, London, W.1

President:

THE RT. HON. THE EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, K.P., P.C., G.C.V.O., C.B.E.

Chairman of Board and Director of Studies:

Professor J. C. BRIDGE, M.A., Mus.D., F.S.A.

December 5th, at 3 p.m.—Invitation Concert by Junior School Students.

December 6th, at 3 p.m.—Invitation Chamber Music and Choir Concert at the Grotrian Hall, Wigmore Street, W.1.

December 8th.—Last day of entry for the January next Diploma Examinations to be held at the College and at certain approved Centres, also for the next open competition for Scholarships, including several University Degree Scholarships.

December 12th, at 3 p.m.—Invitation Orchestral Concert at Queen's Hall, Langham Place, W.1. (Sole lessees of the Hall, Chappell & Co.)

January 14th.—Lent Term begins.

The College provides INSTRUCTION and TRAINING in all Musical Subjects (Instrumental, Vocal, and Theoretical) and Dramatic and Operatic Elocution. The Lessons are arranged to meet the convenience of both day and evening students. Entry may be made for any number of Subjects—from one to the Full Course. The College is open to beginners as well as to the more proficient student; pupils under 16 years of age are received for the Junior School at reduced fees.

The ORCHESTRAL, CHORAL, the OPERATIC, and CHAMBER MUSIC CLASSES are open to sufficiently competent persons who are not College Students for other subjects.

Tuition in the Rudiments of the Theory of Music, Harmony, Counterpoint, Form, Instrumentation, Composition, and the Art of Teaching is also given by Correspondence.

Particulars of the Teaching Department, with list of Professors, Fees, Scholarships regulations, &c., and the Syllabuses of the Diploma and Local Examinations, free on application to the undersigned.

C. N. H. RODWELL, Secretary.

THE MUSIC OF ERIC FOGG

THE attention of musicians and music-lovers in general is invited to the Compositions of ERIC FOGG, whose work is being increasingly performed, and is steadily gaining in appreciation.

His choral work, "THE HILLSIDE" (Soprano and Baritone Soli, Chorus, and Orchestra), has been performed by the Hallé Society, and will be given at the B.B.C. Symphony Concert on March 1st next year; his Orchestral Tone-Poem, "JUNE TWILIGHT," has been given by SIR DAN GODFREY at Bournemouth and at a recent Promenade Concert at Queen's Hall, London, while further performances are booked with SIR HAMILTON HARTY, in Manchester, and MR. ADRIAN BOULT, in Birmingham.

His songs are frequently sung and broadcast—one of them, "PEACE," has been recorded both by DAME CLARA BUTT and MR. DALE SMITH for COLUMBIA; others, such as "SPINDRIFT," "THE DEVON MAID," and "HUNTING SONG OF THE SEEONEE PACK," are in the répertoires of many leading singers.

MESSRS. ELKIN, who publish these works, will be glad to send copies on approval to any readers of THE MUSICAL TIMES who would like to judge for themselves.

ELKIN & CO., LTD.,
20, KINGLY STREET, REGENT STREET,
LONDON, W.1.

BROADWOOD PIANOS

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD

SACRED MUSIC FOR CHRISTMAS

| | Price |
|---|---|
| DERING, RICHARD. | |
| Whom saw ye, Shepherds? (6 parts) ... ... ... | 4d. |
| GOSS, JOHN. | |
| Behold, I bring you good tidings ... ... ... | 3d. |
| HANDL, JACOB. | |
| Behold, thou shalt conceive ... ... ... ... | 4d. |
| HOPKINS, E. J. | |
| Let us now go even unto Bethlehem ... ... ... | 3d. |
| LASSO, ORLANDO DI. | |
| Let Zion resound with praise ... ... ... ... | 4d. |
| Whom saw ye, Shepherds? (5 parts) ... ... ... | 4d. |

CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

| | |
|---|---|
| ADAMS, THOMAS. | |
| SIX CHRISTMAS CAROLS. Price, In one volume | 9d. |
| separately, each | 3d. |
| BRIDGE, J. FREDERICK. | |
| (Repeatedly featured at the Albert Hall by the Royal Choral Society.) | |
| Ring out with jocund chime ... ... ... ... | 3d. |
| A Babe ys borne I wys ... ... ... ... ... | 3d. |
| Welcome, Yule... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3d. |
| Christmas Day... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3d. |
| When Christ was born ... ... ... ... ... | 3d. |
| Yonder in Bethlehem ... ... ... ... ... | 3d. |
| THE STAR OF THE EAST. | |
| A Fantasy for Contralto Solo (ad lib.) and Chorus (S.A.T.B.) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 9d |
| CHRISTMAS CAROLS. | |
| A selection of 25 (Ancient and Modern) ... ... | 1s |

CHRISTMAS COMMUNITY SINGING.

ALBERT W. KETÈLBEY'S

A DREAM OF CHRISTMAS

A special feature of this number for pianoforte is the opportunity afforded by the composer for the audience to join in the singing of the carol "Christians Awake," which makes it specially suitable for Community Singing.

Small Orchestra, 3s. Full Orchestra, 4s.
PIANO SOLO, 2s.

BOSWORTH & CO., LTD.,
8, HEDDON STREET, REGENT STREET, LONDON, W.1.

INCREASED PRICE

On and after January 1, 1929, the price of the following

PSALTERS

(Words only)

CATHEDRAL PSALTER, No. 2

NEW CATHEDRAL PSALTER, Nos. 61 and 71

ENGLISH PSALTER, Imp. 32mo

BARLESS PSALTER, Imp. 32mo

BIBLE PSALTER, Imp. 32mo will be increased from 1*s.* 6*d.* net, to

TWO SHILLINGS NET

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

The Musical Times
AND SINGING-CLASS CIRCULAR
DECEMBER 1 1928
(FOR LIST OF CONTENTS SEE PAGE 1138.)

THE PROBLEM OF THE CONDUCTOR: AND A PROPOSED MECHANICAL SOLUTION

BY LEONID SABANEEV

The problem of the conductor has its turn in the musical life of our time. The orchestra has now become the centre of musical events, and the conductor is the 'master of souls' of the musical world, as the pianist was in the age which is past. The whole of our musical life is developed under the sign of orchestra and conductor, and yet, so far as the performance of music is concerned, there are few branches whose essential nature and theory have been less studied and are so little known as the art of the conductor.

Everyone is aware, in the first place, that conducting is a very strange and mysterious business. We see the rôle filled, on the one hand, by really first-class musicians, the quintessence of musical culture, genuine masters of music in every respect. On the other hand, we are surprised to come across decidedly poor musicians, failures as solo performers, who are attracted to conducting. But this is not so astonishing as to find that, in this sphere, it is extremely difficult to know if a celebrated conductor is really a fine musician, and if his fame and his ability to dominate the orchestra are based on actual knowledge; or whether, on the other hand, the whole thing is founded on a certain kind of 'mutual misunderstanding.' Now, any pianist or violinist is an actual performer; he is responsible for every note he plays, and all of them pass through him. The conductor is usually in command of a fine orchestra, an effective force of experienced musicians, who also are the actual players; and if the conductor disappears temporarily, or entirely (as in the experiment of the 'Persimfans,' the Moscow Conductorless Orchestra), the performance is not annulled, though its quality may suffer. It is very difficult to decide what qualities in a performance must be credited to the orchestra as such, and what to the conductor, since the result is always presented to us in a blended form, and is generally, and quite unjustly, attributed to the conductor. To many of us it is no secret that not a few conductors trade exclusively on the first-rate abilities of the orchestras under them, since they themselves have no essential qualifications for the post, except that their presence 'does not interfere with the playing of the orchestra.' And with a good orchestra this often proves sufficient to obtain a decent, and even a fine, performance.

In actual fact the conductor, like the orchestra, is historically the result of a slow, gradual, and purely empirical evolution. He derives from the precentor, the first violin, and the 'leading musician' generally. Hence his function is a blending of a number of different things. On the one hand he is simply an apparatus for obtaining the unit of the metre—the artistic common denominator of the tempo, as it were—without which the individual performance of each member of the orchestra would inevitably be reflected in the combination of the whole. On the other hand, though he not always is, he wants to be, a musical stage-manager, the 'producer' of a musical piece, who works out the nuances and gives effect to his idea of the composition. However, we must not be carried away by the comparison and parallel of the conductor and the stage-manager. In a dramatic work a great deal is left unwritten by the author—I refer to the stage setting, for which, as a rule, he merely provides suggestions; it is for the stage-manager to apply his creative powers to the development of these suggestions. But the musical conductor has no such scope; when all is said and done, in the text of a symphony nearly everything is set down in its proper place, and individual variations must be kept within very modest limits if they are not to become caricatures. The sphere of free improvisation by the conductor is very restricted, though he finds it profitable to maintain an opinion or legend to the contrary.

In music the metrical function and the duties of the stage-manager are performed by the conductor, by extremely primitive and archaic methods, strikingly reminiscent of the Middle Ages in which they originated. Actually, we see that he simply has no real means of transmitting to the orchestra the artistic sensations which animate him from moment to moment. Between him and the orchestra there is a supposititious connection, based on a certain mutual hypnosis. Despite the generally accepted opinion, the conductor does not 'play on the living instrument of the orchestra'; he is merely present, from time to time supplying the performers with certain correctives, but never being really sure that the response is analogous to the response of the keys to the pianist or of the bow to the violinist. In the vast majority of cases in which a first-class conductor is concerned, the part that he plays amounts essentially to little more than the presence at the performance of an authoritative musician, thanks to whom all the artists of the orchestra strive to give of the best that is in them. Only thus can we explain the otherwise incomprehensible phenomenon 'from the realms of the mysterious'—the phenomenon of the famous conductor who arrives and immediately obtains without rehearsal, or discovers with the first rehearsal, a complete change in the playing of the orchestra. For the same reason the appearance at the conductor's desk of a great or authoritative musician who may even be nothing of a conductor always results in a good performance, provided he does not get in the way with his presence and his indications.

The signs or conventional indications available to the director for the transmission of his sensations to the orchestra are amazing in their primitiveness and poverty. They amount to indications of the tempo—very few in number—and dynamic indications; the latter represent nothing definite and vary with every conductor. In addition to his artistic rôle the conductor has to play the part of an organizer, and by his knowledge to fill the gaps in the orchestral player's knowledge. Here again we have an expression of his historic heritage. Originally his duties were of this purely economic nature, and the purpose for which he was appointed was the attainment of the most harmonious results with the least number of rehearsals. The musicians who were performing a composition did not know it from beginning to end, but the conductor did; they played from the music, and he supplied their deficiencies by his signs, and particularly by indicating the entries of the individual instruments, thus sparing them the wearisome and uncertain counting of their rests.

The purely economic part of orchestral conducting manifestly had nothing in common with artistry, and was based upon the low average level of musical culture in the orchestra, and the fact that in an orchestral performance it was usually assumed that the players were not thoroughly acquainted with their parts in the general ensemble. Indications of tempo, entries, and dynamic effects—there you have essentially the entire répertoire of the conductor's intervention in an orchestral performance. At the same time it must be borne in mind that, thanks to the primitive method by which these signs are produced, many of them are missed by the players, who are guided merely by their instinct and the general rhythm of the music, and often do not look at the conductor and his vague and frequently inopportune signals. It may be asserted that even first-class conductors are prone to indulge in quite useless and incomprehensible signs, which, if carelessly interpreted, would throw the orchestra into utter confusion. The conductor often 'fills in his spare time' with movements of his hands, head, and body, which lead to no result and are of no use to anyone; he does this from an instinctive (unconscious) desire to maintain the impression of his constant reaction on the orchestra, whereas in fact the reaction is of a 'here-and-there,' sporadic character. In this there is much of a sort of naïve and involuntary mutual mystification. The conductor wants to feel that he evokes these sounds and their variations, and the orchestra somehow finds it agreeable to have a director personifying its artistic will, but in actual fact the completeness of the performance depends entirely on the general musical feeling of all the members of the orchestra, or of a majority of them.

With many of the famous conductors of the present day I have observed a great deal of quite unconcealed mystification, posing, 'showing-off,' and frequently an employment of utterly useless gestures, which had no effect on the performance because the players instinctively refrained from reacting to them. I have also noticed frequent cases of the absence of any indications of the tempo—which, by the way, is by many conductors regarded as the 'supreme attribute,' but is really based on the mere fact that these very conductors are working with expert orchestras who have a perfect knowledge of the musical literature of the world, and if they were half asleep could play by heart any Beethoven Symphony or Strauss poem. I say nothing of the very frequent mistakes in respect of tempo, when the conductor confuses the orchestra, and again the situation is saved by the players' knowledge of the work, and by the fact that at the right moment they cease to pay any attention to the conductor.

All this is so. And yet the conductor is necessary; without him things do not go as well as they should—witness the experiment of the Moscow 'Symphonic Ensemble,' an experiment, I repeat, which is very interesting and instructive. But it is necessary to clear up the functions of the conductor, to divest him of the haloes he has accumulated, and to put him in his proper and indispensable place.

We all know that good orchestras like to play under a good conductor. This provides a special type of the artistic enjoyment of ensemble playing. Between conductor and orchestra a connection should be established of such a nature that the latter sees in the conductor's intentions the concentration and realisation of its own artistic aims, whilst the conductor feels as though he himself were playing through the medium of the orchestra. In the issue both prove to be a delusion, but one of those sublime delusions so frequent in art. If the conditions in which the conductor finds himself are such that his intentions are carried out by the orchestra absolutely and with mechanical accuracy—just as the keys respond to the intentions of the pianist—the sense of collectiveness (the fascination and enchantment of the ensemble) disappears, and the orchestra becomes a vast individual instrument. Meanwhile every musician is aware that the feeling of delight produced by ensemble playing is of quite a special order, and cannot be connected with other musical sensations.

But if the complete subjection of the orchestra to the will of the conductor is inconceivable, it must not therefore be assumed that everything in this world is felicitous and natural. Nowadays we witness the pampering and excessive exaltation of the conductor. The technique of conducting—that strange phantom of whose nature no conductor has ever been able to tell us anything pertinent—is not something that requires to be perfected, as I imagine it has yet to be born. Up to the present it has only a mythical existence in the shape of a few conventional gestures, which are not well established, and after all are not called for in the performance of a composition, nor require implicit obedience. It is this lexicon of signs that needs to be improved and supplemented, and made into a real language of symbols instead of a collection of casual gestures, most of which have a personal significance. It may very well be that the conductor of the future will in general abandon his 'parade' position at the head of the orchestra—a position similar to that of the legendary leaders of armies in days gone by. Much of the conductor's fascination and authority and of the ascription to him of everything that proceeds from the orchestra is due to his physical position above the orchestra, baton in hand.

It must, of course, be admitted that, of itself, the accepted method of indicating the tempo by means of the movements of the almost invisible end of a slender stick, with the entire absence in general (and with many conductors, in consequence of their special qualities, in particular) of any centre of the metrical indication—it must be admitted that this method cannot produce a clear and distinct metre, and that if the latter is forthcoming it is in spite of, and not thanks to, the baton. Further, there is nothing inconceivable in the invention of an apparatus or instrument that would indicate the tempo and rhythm more plainly and accurately to each member of the orchestra. This instrument could be manipulated by the orchestral musician who is called the conductor. It would be a special instrument of rhythm and nuance—and this is what the rôle of the conductor essentially amounts to. Meanwhile, without such an instrument he manages with his hands and head, with his movements and his baton. This is no longer sufficient, and it is necessary to provide an instrument that shall be more tractable and shall transmit his intentions to the players more clearly and exactly.

Nuance is in a still more lamentable state than rhythm and tempo, as it has not even a general symbolical language. Where dynamics are concerned conductors show their intentions by primitive and rather savage methods—sometimes rising on their toes or sinking to the ground, sometimes making more or less exaggerated flourishes with the baton, and often accompanying their gestures with mimicry, which may be expressive but is usually far from æsthetic.

Meanwhile there is no technical impossibility in the construction of a conducting instrument, whose indications of the dynamics would be less reminiscent of the language of the Cannibal Islands and would have a more cultured aspect. I have prepared a scheme for such an instrument, which should at least guarantee that, so far as the conductor is concerned, the indications of tempo and nuance would be clear. It should communicate to the orchestra as a whole and to each member separately the general metre and tempo, the nuances of rhythm, tempo, and dynamics, the structure of the phrase, and even the entries of the individual players. This instrument consists of a special keyboard, with separate registers for accelerations and nuances, and the electric mechanism transmits all these indications to each member of the orchestra. The conductor thus becomes above all things the actual controller of the artistic side of the orchestra. He can then enter into the part of each player and give him the necessary cues at any given moment in the course of the performance, without confusing his neighbours. The possibility of thus dealing individually with the members of the orchestra enables the conductor to obtain more light and shade in the playing. With a tranquil mind—though undoubtedly sore at heart—he can abandon his prominent and elevated position, consoling himself with the fact that the leaders of armies no longer ride in glittering uniforms at the head of their troops. Nowadays they stay quietly, but more profitably, with the staff, and it is time for him to remain with the musical staff, whence, however, he can more effectively dominate the artistic side of a performance.

I do not think that this evolution will seriously affect tradition, as the tradition of conducting is still quite young. It was not until the beginning of the last century that the leader of the orchestra became the conductor pure and simple; the modern type of baton was introduced only in the 'sixties; and it was nearing the end of the 19th century when he mounted a dais and stood with his back to the audience. The time has now come for him to hide himself behind his instrument again, in the depths of the orchestra, whence he can conduct the musical operations with greater authority and confidence. The arrival of such an instrument must simultaneously bring to an end the conductor's mannerisms and posings, and the occupation of the position by inferior musicians. It is quite possible that the announcement of these intentions of the conductor publicly, in the form of a language of symbols clear to everybody, may also prove to be a beneficent action; and that the audience will not lose very much by being deprived of the sight of a leader who transmits his intentions to the orchestra by more or less Hottentot methods. Of this there can hardly be any doubt—that the plastic value of the conductor as an artistic object usually represents a very considerable negative quantity.

(Translated by S. W. Pring.)

IMITATION AND SUGGESTION

II.

By W. S. Drew

In his book 'Du Chant,' Reynaldo Hahn tells the story of an opera-singer who, during the rehearsal of the Toreador's song from 'Carmen,' sang the words 'Et songe en combattant qu'un œil noir te regarde' with a very fierce expression on his face. When asked by the conductor why he did this he replied, 'Mais, c'est pour imiter le regard du taureau.' The most remarkable part of this confusion, as Hahn rightly goes on to point out, lies not in supposing that the dark eye belonged to the bull instead of the beautiful lady who was watching, but in the absurd idea that the singer must project himself into or imitate in some way anything about which he is singing. This is a kind of artistic disease that might be called 'onomatopœia,' and, carried into ordinary life, would make the sufferer suppose that his warning to a friend, 'mind the step,' could not be efficacious unless he demonstrated the danger by stumbling over the step himself.

The same kind of mistake is made in a more subtle form when it is laid down as an unalterable law that men must not sing women's songs, nor women men's. Whether this is incongruous or no depends on several things, but on the majority of occasions all incongruity is removed if the singing is good enough. Must 'Der Tod und das Mädchen' be sung as a duet? If it is replied that, in spite of the 'der,' Death is sexless, who is going to provide the voice suitable to the occasion? The girl herself calls him 'Knocken*mann*,'* But there is no escape from the difficulty in Massenet's 'Ouvre tes yeux bleus,' for the second verse is the girl's reply to the man's invitation in the first. This might quite easily be sung as a duet, and yet no one seems to think it is necessary. Finally we come to such songs as the folk-song 'William Taylor,' where there is narrative to start with, then a man speaks, and afterwards a girl. This on the onomatopœic principle seems to want three genders—or perhaps only two singers and a chorus.

Yet there are reasons why it is a good practical rule for members of each sex to restrict themselves to what are apparently their own songs; one, at least, is connected more with the conditions under which singing usually has to be done than with the art itself. A singer is usually visible to the audience, so that one may hear remarks suitable for a woman but see a man. In any case, one hears remarks more proper for one sex given out by the kind of voice naturally associated with the other. This, it would seem, must inevitably cause a feeling of incongruity. But in certain songs, as has already been suggested, all incongruity is removed if the singing is good enough, for a man's voice may be lightened to suggest that of a woman; the reverse may also be done, but not so easily, for the simple reason that it is easier to cut out lower partial tones than to put them in. Moreover, the use of a heavy so-called 'chest-voice' in women is liable to be attended with certain disadvantages to the vocal instrument as a whole.* Meantime the bass with an unalterably dramatic tone will do well to avoid words such as 'I love the merry, merry sunshine,' or those expressing a longing to be a butterfly, while the light soprano may reasonably exclude from her répertoire a song that begins with the statement 'My wealth 's a burly spear and brand.'

For the purpose of indicating where certain misunderstandings lie with regard to 'interpretation' in the art of singing—and doubtless it is not only in the art of singing that such things occur—we will take as an illustration the song 'Robin Adair.' A purely imaginary but by no means unparalleled lesson might start by an explanation such as the following: 'In this poem a young girl laments the absence of the man on whom she has set her affections. She explains that all the occupations that are usually regarded as pleasant have lost their attraction since he has gone, and finally she confesses the constancy of her affection in spite of the cooling of his.'

It is apparently sometimes supposed that this changing of the neat words of a poem into a banal prose version is of real assistance to the singer, whose failure to sing the song properly is judged to be due to an inability to understand the words. Reynaldo Hahn's singer might, perhaps, fail to grasp the main outlines of the story in the poem 'Robin Adair' at a first reading, but we may pay singers as a class the small compliment of supposing that he is an exception. A failure to sing a song properly is often due to lack of appreciation of a poem, but this is not a want of a kind that can be satisfied by the supplying of a prose version. If someone does not respond to a poetic stimulus he cannot be induced to respond to it by having it taken away. And the supplying of a prose version is no more than equivalent on the positive side to telling a child, who has made a very bad drawing of a cow, that its picture is not meant to represent a horse but a cow. The child knows that already; what he wants to know further is the kind of marks on paper that will arouse the idea of a cow in others, or even in himself.

Another thing that the pupil may be told is to try to put herself in the position of the girl who has been deserted by her lover. But do people who have been deserted sing songs about it in public to others? I think not. Goldsmith makes Olivia do it in 'The Vicar of Wakefield,' but this indecorous incident is one of the blemishes on that charming work. The singer spoken of above, if he took up the teaching of art, would perhaps tell the child artist to put himself in the place of the cow and try to imagine what it felt like to have horns, or, relinquishing imagination as an uncertain guide, would suggest drinking a glass of milk before starting to draw, so that the spirit of the cow should pervade the being of the artist and flow out through his pencil. The mysteries of art do not lie in these direct sympathies; it is not necessary to be or to have been a cow in order to draw one.

* Even a skeleton is allowed a sex. See Tennyson's 'Vision of Sin.'

* 'L'Art de chanter une chanson.' Yvette Guilbert.

All arts have their conventional signs, the meaning of which must be known to those to whom they are addressed. This is very obvious in singing, though less so in acting, where there are people moving and speaking in a comparatively natural way, or in arts such as painting and sculpture, where there is apparently an attempt to imitate natural objects. Any work within the limits of any of these arts may fail because the amount of mere imitation is either overdone or not done enough, for both these faults cramp that imaginative activity which it is the prime duty of art to stimulate.

In the particular example we have chosen, the problem the singer has to solve is to find the vocal signs which are necessary to make the audience imagine feelings similar to those of Robin Adair's deserted lady. When the words and music of a song are good the singer's chief concern is to see that both receive adequate attention. This seems too obvious to need stating, but it has to be realised that to do so involves a high degree of musical and literary taste backed up by a first-class technique. Most of us have come across the kind of sentimental morass created by an attempt to make up for inadequate thought or technique by so-called expression. Some modern composers seek to make their song fool-proof by crowding the vocal line and accompaniment with instructions. Schubert, at any rate, was convinced that such things were unnecessary. If we divide singers into two classes, those who have studied the words intelligently and those who have not, it is plain that the vast majority of such instructions are useless to the first class and meaningless to the second.

But we seem very little nearer to any definite indications of the right way to sing the song.* What exactly has to be done to suggest scorn here, indifference there, and melancholy throughout, to arouse in those of the audience fitted to feel such things the memories and emotions that come back to those who have suffered the desolation of being deprived of a beloved companion?

It has already been suggested that direct and identical experience in itself is of very little value, so that it is luckily unnecessary that anyone should subject herself to the pain of being deserted before attempting this song. It is not necessary to be in love at the time, or even to have been in love before; art is neither identity* nor imitation.† Those who still cling to the idea of the necessity of exact experience must face the awkward conclusion that on the same principle you cannot represent a dying man on the stage unless you have died at some time. A monster incapable of any affection might not make a great success of a love-song, but even he might do it by listening to other singers and watching other people in love. The listener, merely by listening, has very little chance of finding out how you learn your songs; and the sincere listener does not care—he leaves the biographer, the illustrated paper, and the tea-party to worry about such things.

By precept very little can be done beyond the enunciation of certain general principles when discussing the correct way to sing a particular song, for the subtle combination of minute effects whose aggregate influence upon the imagination is so immense can be illustrated very rapidly in practice, but only very tediously in print. It is possible, however, to discuss one or two points in this song which will illustrate certain principles of interpretation in general. The music of the first phrase makes nine singers out of ten, at a modest estimate, say, 'What 's this dull town to me.' Such an accentuation misleads the imagination of the listener, and makes him anticipate that the town is to be compared with some other place, whereas afterwards he discovers that under certain conditions this same town is 'heaven on earth.' If the words are presented in the form 'What 's this dull town to me' the listener is prepared for the 'heaven on earth' which comes later. This may seem trivial, but it is really nothing of the sort. It is the business of the singer to present the song in such a way that the intellectual effort of the listener is reduced to a minimum, for you cannot stimulate the imagination of someone to whom you have just set a problem in parsing. Even this is putting the matter too mildly, for the song does not stop to give the listener time to solve the puzzles which are set him. The song is a panorama which passes before the ears instead of the eyes, and the parts are much more interdependent than the panorama of the visual world. The omission or faulty placing of an emphasis may spoil not only an individual phrase but a whole song. The stresses on certain syllables in a sentence

* The melody is of Irish origin, I believe, or at all events has an Irish version—see the note on the melody 'Aileen Aroon' in Stanford's edition of Moore's Irish Melodies (Boosey). The little jerks in the popular version, so effective in some melodies, put decided difficulties in the way of a singer who is aiming at a dignified rendering. I much prefer the simpler form of the melody with an ascending scale-passage for the refrain. I once heard a prima donna put in a minor sixth in the last verse for the first syllable of 'Adair': but she was neither Irish nor Scotch, and for all I know may have come from a land where the minor sixth is the conventional sign of grief. For the moment my sympathies were with Robin Adair himself.

* 'It is by giving up these identities that art gains true strength.'—R. L. Stevenson.

† 'By a wise falsification the great masters of painting got at their true conclusions.'—Charles Lamb.

not only bring out its own meaning, but also often have a more far-reaching importance in that they prepare the mind for the rapid assimilation of a sentence which is to follow.

The settling of the often conflicting claims of the formal stresses of music and the more capricious stresses of the words, and the consequent presentation of vocal music so that both are suggested to the listener is perhaps the most important problem that the singer has to solve. The few singers who do it successfully often make a song sound much better than the composer has any right to expect. Upon the efforts of these few depends the right of 'interpretation' to consider itself an independent creative art.

The correct singing of this song would bring out another general principle, namely, that it is not sufficient to sing a sad song sadly; that is to say, it is not enough to present the words of a sad song with exactly the same expression that would be used in the ordinary affairs of life by a sad person. Such a treatment usually, if not invariably, does no more than give the impression that the singer is bored with the song. For the moment it is not necessary to consider what particular associations in the mind of the listener brings about this effect; any experienced teacher knows that it is true. A song on a sad subject has to be sung in such a way that it arouses the memory of certain sad thoughts in the mind of the listener. One of the essentials for this is not that the singer should feel sad himself, but that he should say the words in a way that suggests that he himself is interested in their meaning. This suggestion of interest is largely a matter of articulation and intelligent emphasis, and is done in very much the same way whether the song is a sad or happy one. A singer may be considerably affected by the sound of his own singing, but his feelings on such occasions are the effect and not the cause of his artistic rendering; his singing is reflected back, so to speak, and effects him objectively, as it does the rest of the audience.

While we are looking at or listening to any work of art certain things must be thrust into the background of conscious attention, for it is only under such conditions that one is enabled to abandon oneself to the stimulation of the conventional signs. Although this inhibition of certain parts of the critical faculty goes on easily and automatically as a rule, yet the inability to effect it is without doubt one of the reasons why some people find some works of art so puzzling. This is shown very plainly by the bitter but amusing criticism of the early part of 'Siegfried' in Tolstoi's 'What is Art?' Tolstoi had some sound reasons to give for his dislike of opera as an art. Yet to say that some one came on to the stage trying to represent* Mime, but that one could see he was an actor by his lack of muscle, is as absurdly irrelevant as to say that Michael Angelo's 'David' is easily seen to be a piece of stone. But Wagner certainly had need of his amazing musical genius to overcome his occasional lapses into childish naïveté in staging. It is one of the greatest compliments that can be paid to the compelling power of his music that one puts up comparatively contentedly with his dragons, swans, doves, and flames. No one who is really interested in the music of an opera worries, after the first shock, whether the weight of Isolde is nearer twelve stone than nine, provided that her singing is good enough; still there is no sense in multiplying things that easily become a hindrance instead of an aid to the imagination. Tolstoi's remarks make it plain that the music was quite incapable of setting him free from the tyranny of the visual sense, and it must be admitted that some operas make such an escape very difficult. That Wagner himself realised this is shown by an incident related in Romain Rolland's 'Musiciens d'aujourd'hui.' A friend of Wagner's was attentively watching a scene from 'The Ring' when some one came behind her and put his hands over her eyes, and she heard the voice of Wagner saying impatiently, 'Don't watch so much: listen.'

'Tristan and Isolde' will provide another simple illustration. I suppose that everyone will agree that the singer taking the part of Tristan is not expected to sing the whole of the third Act as if he were actually dying. Yet this is what the Tolstoian method of criticism pushed to its logical conclusion would require him to do. A dying man cannot compete with a full orchestra, and he would certainly be indifferent to the conductor's baton; in any case, how absurd to make a mortally wounded man sing loudly for the last three-quarters of an hour of his life!

Such criticism may be amusing, but it is not relevant. The singer who takes the part of Tristan is not trying to imitate a dying man. The intensity of the singing—its loudness, volume, and emphasis—does not represent the state of Tristan's physical health: its object is to suggest to the audience the intensity of his feelings.

The curtain in the theatre does not hide a mirror in which we are to see a reflection of human beings occupied in their ordinary affairs; it hides a picture where the figures suggest things to our imagination. If we do not realise this we shall be wasting our time, as much as Tolstoi wasted his, in going to the opera, or in listening to singing.

* '. . . with weak, white, genteel hands (his easy movements and especially the shape of his stomach and his lack of muscle revealed the actor) beat an impossible sword with an unnatural hammer in a way in which no one ever uses a hammer; and at the same time, opening his mouth in a strange way, he sang something incomprehensible.'—(Aylmer Maude's translation of Tolstoi's 'What is Art?')

A book on Dvorák by Prof. Karel Hofmeister and Mrs. Newmarch is to be issued early in December by John Lane (The Bodley Head). The work is based on a series of lectures given to Czech students by Prof. Hofmeister.

THE NATIONAL TEMPERAMENT IN MUSIC

By Béla Bartók

(In an interview)

Two different procedures can be ascertained in the study of the style of music of bygone days. We can trace a return either to the popular tunes, like those during the so-called 'Russian period' of Stravinsky and of my own Hungarian contemporaries, or to the artistic music especially of the 17th and 18th centuries.

The Hungarian and also the Rumanian and Slovak peasantry of pre-war Hungary preserve an incredibly rich treasure of popular melodies. We had only, as it were, to reach out our hands to appropriate them. Here we found the national temperament in music, although this 'reaching out of our hands' was by no means so simple as might at first be imagined.

About twenty-five years ago the attention of a few quite young musicians—among them Zoltán Kodály and myself—turned towards the Hungarian peasantry. A longing for the unknown, some indefinite feeling that the true popular music, the genuine national temperament in music, could be discovered only among the peasants, led us to our first inquiries. These first inquiries resulted in the discovery of rich and—up to that time—entirely unknown material. And only then did we commence the regular collection. It is impossible to imagine what an immense amount of work we had to do. To find musical material still untouched by civilization we were compelled to visit such villages as were remotest from the centres of civilization and the means of communication. If we desired to gather older songs, handed down throughout the centuries, we were obliged to pursue our investigations among the oldest people, especially women, and it was very difficult to persuade them to sing the old tunes. They were shame-faced before the strangers, afraid of being scoffed at by the villagers, afraid of the strangers' phonograph, which was nearly always at hand. We lived in a primitive way in the most miserable hamlets, but in spite of this fact, those days were the happiest of my life. Here the true national character and temperament of music unfolded its wings in full splendour.

To get the right idea of national temperament we never looked for melodies written down or printed because, in general, we considered them to be dead material. To enter the true vibrating life of popular music by means of these tunes is an impossibility. Whosoever desires to enjoy the charms of genuine popular music must get into immediate contact with the peasants. And it is of equal importance to get acquainted with the surroundings from whence these tunes have sprung. It is necessary to see the peasant's mimicry, to be present at his dances, wedding festivities, Christmas celebrations, funeral ceremonies, because every occasion brings forth its special melodies which most advantageously reflect the national temperament.

We wanted to feel the true spirit of this hitherto unknown music, and in conformity with this spirit—hard to express in words—we intended to create our own musical style. Therefore we betook ourselves to the original source of music—the soul of the peasantry. According to my conviction, the popular tune—using the term in a restricted sense—which shows the national temperament in its entirety, is a paragon of the highest musical perfection. In its limited scope I consider it as much a masterpiece as—in the world of larger scales—a fugue by Bach or a sonata by Mozart. Such a melody is a classical example of the infinitely condensed expression of a musical thought. It is true that such laconicism only seldom makes an impression upon the average musician. But the average musician regards as more important such accessories as accompaniment, development, &c., and is rarely able to appreciate fully the fundamental essence.

If I should be asked: Who is the completest representative of the Hungarian musical spirit?—I must point to Zoltán Kodály. His compositions are a confession of faith of a Hungarian soul, and his work is exclusively based upon Hungarian popular music. They owe their origin to Kodály's intrepid belief and confidence in his people's power of construction and future.

As for myself, I collected not only Hungarian but also Slovakian and Rumanian popular songs. Before the war I paid a visit to North Africa to study the melodies of the Sahara-Arabians, and a few of my compositions have been influenced by these.

In conclusion I add that internationalism is not only unimaginable but also injurious to music and to every other art. Music and its sister arts must always reflect the true character of its region and surroundings. From this results variety in art and life.

Ad Libitum

By 'Feste'

Most musicians know that there is an immense amount of bad pianoforte teaching being inflicted on the youth of this country, but only about a score of men have real first-hand knowledge of its desperate, almost incredible, badness. No doubt the examiners for the Associated Board and Trinity College strike some bad patches, but they never plumb the depths, because practically all their candidates have had the benefit of instruction from accredited teachers. Competition Festival judges sometimes get samples of the ineptitude and fraud in the pianoforte-teaching line, but the samples are too small to enable them to realise the extent of the evil.

The few men who really know are those who have been examining in the local centre stage of the Daily Express pianoforte-playing contest. I happen to be one of them. Comparing notes with fellow-examiners, I find our experiences have been much the same. I had not intended to write on the subject, but second thoughts seemed to show that no harm and some good might result from a few notes on my experiences, so here they are.

I examined for seven weeks in the local competitions, and one in the area stage, with no more than an occasional day's break, hearing in round figures about two thousand five hundred players. There were four grades, the two junior playing two pieces, the senior three. The total number of performances I leave the reader to compute, the higher mathematics being beyond me. I have been able to do no more than calculate that the copies used, if placed end to end (or even side by side) would reach from here to there and back again, and then some.

The experience was fatiguing and nerve-racking beyond anything I have ever known, because of the monotony and the low standard. Competition Festival work is pretty exhausting, but even the longest and hardest day of solo classes is lightened by contact with the crowd, and relieved by excursions to the platform for adjudications. But here one had only a room (often small), a pianoforte (which seemed to grow larger and louder with each performance), and a candidate. For six hours daily—sometimes longer—at the rate of ten per hour, the candidates came and set about that pianoforte. The great majority smote it, some timidly tickled and dusted the keyboard, ten per cent. played, and about two per cent. showed first-rate form. A terrible experience, then; yet I am glad to have been through it. A musical journalist ought to welcome every means of getting practical first-hand knowledge of any department of musical life; and in that long succession of competitors there was much that was of human interest, not a little that was instructive, and a good deal that was amusing.

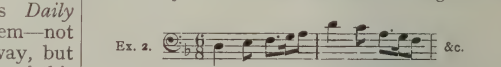
Many musicians pooh-poohed this Daily Express contest. I don't agree with them—not because it put a job of work in my way, but for the reasons expressed by the Editor of this journal in August. He said:

> 'The Daily Express National Piano playing Contest is worthy of support by musicians, on several grounds. It will serve as a stimulant to three departments of the musical world that are in need of such help—the teaching profession, the pianoforte-makers, and in a lesser degree (though perhaps considerably in the long run) the publishers of serious instrumental music. . . . Frankly, we don't like this use of music; but the present time is not one in which musicians can afford to sniff at any scheme that will give an impetus to the study of any branch of the art. Anyway, we are sure there will be no false pride among music-teachers. They will bless the happy chance that leads newspaper - millionaires to scatter a few thousands in their direction.'

This so exactly represents my views that I might have written it myself. The musical profession and trade are not so flourishing that they can afford to despise any project that benefits them even temporarily. I hope the Daily Express will follow the pianoforte-playing contest with one for string players, both solo and ensemble. From a publicity point of view, of course, a solo-singing contest would be best of all. If anything of the kind is in prospect I suggest that the examiners' marking sheet, or at all events a copy of his criticisms, be sent to every competitor. This is a tall order, I realise. But the extra labour and expense would be comparatively small, and the educational benefit large. I gather that most examiners in the pianoforte-playing contest wrote a brief criticism on every marking-sheet, even though they were aware that the sheets would not be seen by the competitors. Personally, I came across many players of marked natural ability whose progress was being hindered by some defect that could be pointed out in a couple of sentences. Having paid their entrance fee, worked, and come (often from a considerable distance) to compete, they ought to have the benefit of the examiner's criticism.

Of the four grades the smallest proportion of good players seemed to be among the youngest. An astonishing number had failed to grasp the rhythmic scheme of Carse's 'Miniature Scherzo':

Almost as many in the next grade made a hash of the rhythm in Markham Lee's 'Legend':



This was distorted in a variety of ways, the favourite being a version in 4-4:

But the booby-prize must go to this version:

This youngster stuck to 5-4 for the theme wherever possible, adopting the normal rhythm only when the accompanying parts compelled her to do so. I was still in a state of happy bewilderment when the next candidate entered—and made exactly the same mistake, adding to the effect by keeping the 'loud' pedal down throughout.

Now it is inconceivable that all these distorters were self-taught, so we are faced with the fact that there are pianoforte-teachers who are unable to see the difference between the right and wrong rhythm and time schemes. Any doubt as to the existence of such teachers was removed by other evidence. Thus, a whole batch of youngsters in a district would make the same mistake—sometimes a mistake that seems to have occurred nowhere else. For example, at one Lancashire centre a succession of children produced a slip that I came across nowhere else, bar 2 of the Carse 'Scherzo' (see Ex. 2 above) being played with the F sharpened:

Ex. 5

In fact, there was a deplorable lack of fundamental knowledge. For many of the players time-values scarcely existed, and over and over again one was reminded of the girl who was declared by her proud mother to have 'learned music in no time.'

All this points to widespread bad teaching. What is the remedy? Clearly the majority of these mistaught children could not afford anything like the fee that would be required by a good teacher. The solution will probably be some form of class work. By a happy coincidence some material for class instruction comes to hand while I am writing. I propose to discuss it shortly.

The misuse of the so-called 'loud' pedal was even worse than I had anticipated. About fifty per cent. of the C grade players, for example, played the four-bar opening phrase of the 'Legend' (Ex. 2 above) with the pedal held down throughout, evidently misled by the direction con ped., which, of course, meant no more than a touch on the longer notes. One youngster even went so far as to hold the pedal down without a break during Dunhill's 'Dew Fairies'—a piece that depends for its effect on a continuous light staccato. I couldn't refrain from asking the young miscreant why he did this thing. 'Oh,' he said, brightly, 'I always like the pedal down when I play'—no matter what you fussy old folk think! When I pointed out that no pedal was indicated, he said (still brightly) that he thought the composer had forgotten it.

What the 'loud' pedal did for the series of thick chromatic chords in York Bowen's 'Reverie' and the gruff dissonances in Ireland's Rondo may be imagined; it cannot be described.

The seniors included some whose playing was grotesque—no other word fits. I heard several performances in which the music was so distorted that without the aid of the copy I could not have identified it. (This is the literal truth.) Quite a lot of players disposed of difficult ornamental passages (especially those in the R.H. of the York Bowen piece) by the simple process of throwing the hand speculatively somewhere in the part of the keyboard concerned, and vigorously waggling their fingers. There was something positively disarming about so frank a bluff; at times I could hardly believe my eyes and ears.

Among the examinees heard by one of my colleagues was an ample and elderly lady who clenched her fist save for the third finger, which was left protruding. With this member she slowly and rigidly poked her way through the advanced pieces, taking only the outer notes in chords! The method suggested a one-fingered novice at typewriting. She had travelled nearly twenty miles to perform this feat, and went away apparently well pleased with her outing. No doubt she had enjoyed some months of preparation, so who shall say that she had wasted her time? Not I, for one.

It was often necessary to suppress the conversational tendencies of players, if only on the score of time. We got tired of hearing about the finger that had got damaged a few days before, or the hands that couldn't stretch an octave, and so forth. But I liked the nine-year-old girl who (evidently primed by mamma) hurried to my table and in a tiny voice breathlessly released the carefully-rehearsed sentence:

Oifyouplease I'mafraidtheywontsoundverywellI'veonlyhadthemusicthreeweeks.

And I liked another (this was in a grimy Lancashire industrial town) who, her task over (and very well done, by the way), said, 'I'm going to tell the other girls to learn the piano, too, so that they can earn their living by it, and not have to go to work in the mill!' With the cotton trade in its present state, the mills don't offer much of a living; I didn't tell the little optimist that the pianoforte offered still less.

Talent sometimes showed itself in unexpected quarters. One of the best players I heard was a London boy who entered in two grades, and played from memory like a born musician. His face and manner showed arrested mental development, and he was barely articulate. He stopped on his way out and volunteered the information that he was going to be an engine-driver as well as a pianist. (May I never be in a train driven by him!) 'Which do you like best,' I asked, 'engines or music?' 'Both,' he replied, and shambled out, babbling.

Before I leave the conversationalists I must refer to a young fellow (apparently Jewish, of the handsome type) who on entering the room at once took up his parable and thus addressed the chair: 'I have no doubt, Sir, that by this time you must be heartily sick of these pieces. I hope, however, to be able to revive your interest in them.' I raised a drooping head and signified my willingness to be interested. 'Now,' he went on, warming to his work, 'which shall I play first? Probably most competitors begin with the quieter and slower pieces—the "Reverie" or "Primrose Mount." I propose, however, to start with Ireland's "Rondo."' And did so. The performances over, he again took the floor, informing me that he was self-taught, and had been studying for only a year. Could I tell him what his chances were? I could not, under the regulations. 'Very well, Sir; then I can only express a hope that we meet again in the next stage,' and, with a cordial shake of the hand, he withdrew, rather as if he were a Deputation. In case this meets his eye, I add for his encouragement that, although he was not good enough to pass into the area stage, he showed real promise.

I don't want to give the reader an impression that the examinations produced little beyond eccentricity and incompetence. On the contrary, a good deal of very fine playing was heard—some of it fit for any concert platform. But inevitably a contest of the kind attracted a host of people who had no standard, and only a very hazy idea of what constitutes really good playing. Several of the best performances I heard were by blind players, and I recall no very bad work from this source—as is, perhaps, to be expected, seeing that practically all the players came from institutions where the teaching is invariably good.

The best of the youngsters were fascinating. I have never realised until now the extent to which the nascitur, non fit tag applies to pianists. There were nine- and ten-year-old boys and girls who, with the first note they played, seemed lost to the world, reacting physically to the rhythm, and with facial expression responsive to any harmonic progression that was beautiful or unusual. I hope the Daily Express scheme of scholarships will benefit some of these kiddies, most of whom were clearly in humble circumstances. (But I add the view that if they are already being well taught, the scholarship should not take them away from the local teacher who has done so well by them. In such cases the only fair thing is to pay the teacher a good fee, and increase the pupil's lessons for a given period, at the end of which he or she would benefit by being drafted to a recognised training centre.)

Observing a twelve-year-old Lancashire girl working her jaws vigorously while she played, I asked why she did it. 'It 's chewin'-goom,' she replied; 'it gives me ploock!' As several other young competitors at the same town also chewed their way through the pieces, this is evidently a local method of taking Dutch courage. I pass the useful tip on to nervous singers.

The test-pieces wore surprisingly well, on the whole. A good performance of Swinstead's delightful 'Serenata' always found me ready to enjoy it again; the consecutive sevenths and luscious bits in Rowley's 'Rambling Sailor,' however, still don't convince me that they are in place. Ireland's 'Rondo,' it was interesting to note, was invariably played much faster than the composer himself played it when broadcasting. Personally, I prefer the quick pace. Players almost without exception clearly enjoyed this piece—probably because its appeal is mainly physical. The actual musical attractiveness is so slight that one can visualise some family jars over its repeated practisings.

On the business side, a word of praise is due to the Federation of British Music Industries for the excellence of the organization. Very few hitches occurred, and none were avoidable. Local dealers were invariably helpful. There seemed to be general agreement among them that the contest has given a much-needed fillip to trade. Certainly it must have benefited teachers, publishers, and the lucky composers of the test-pieces. (The average sale of the ten pieces was round about thirteen thousand, I understand.) When all is said in condemnation of newspaper stunts, it has to be admitted that one per year would do much for music and musicians in this country.

After all, if popular newspapers must increase their circulation, there are many worse ways than this of the Daily Express. Better set twenty thousand folk playing the piano (even badly) than a million trying their luck with football coupons.

PALESTRINA AND THE MAJOR SIXTH

By Arthur T. Froggatt

Strict counterpoint in these days is somewhat at a discount. Notwithstanding the attempt made seventeen years ago by the musical authorities of the English Universities to render some of its rough ways a little smoother, there still appears to be room for a considerable difference of opinion as to what is really implied by this mysterious term. Even the above-mentioned attempt failed to meet universal approval; for in the list of signatures appended to it, that of the then Professor of Music in the University of Cambridge was conspicuous by its absence. And now, after seventeen years, our attention is occasionally drawn to small groups of apologetic-looking crotchets endeavouring to make their way past sundry couples of very obstructive minims, of which crotchets we are told that some have a right of way, while others have no such right; and we find it impossible to feel much interest in the fate of any of them.

Just as melodies and figured basses have their use in the teaching of harmony, so strict counterpoint may be helpful in teaching elementary part-writing. And I believe that Macfarren was right in saying that counterpoint should come first—not, however, first altogether, but hand in hand, step by step. Such matters should be included in the first Mus. Bac. examination, if only to weed out the obviously incompetent candidates. But they should go no further. Beyond the first stage, the examination should be concerned with music. Grammatical exercises are not literature, and harmonic and contrapuntal exercises are not music.

The last sentence is a truism; but, in common with some other truisms, it is sometimes forgotten. There never was a time when composers wrote strict counterpoint, or when Balbus was building a wall. Take any period you like, since the first dawn of what we now call harmony—the period of Hucbald, or Pérotin, or Franco, or John of Fornsete, or Odington, or Dufay, or Okeghem, or Josquin—any one of them; you may find something worse, perhaps, but you will never find anything like our strict counterpoint. And yet I have been told of a work produced at a Three Choirs Festival, much less than a hundred years ago, which contained a movement written throughout, or nearly throughout, in the third species.

I firmly believe that the immensely exaggerated importance for so long attached to the study and practice of strict counterpoint is very largely responsible for much of our present-day lawlessness. When students are told that they must not write so and so, not because it sounds badly (for it doesn't), but because it transgresses a certain law, or because it implies a chord which isn't there (and which would sound very well if it were); and not only so, but that they must write something which sounds much worse than the wicked thing they have written—is it to be wondered at if in the end they kick over the traces altogether? Is it not the inevitable swing of the pendulum?

Perhaps the best definition of strict counterpoint is that given by Rockstro: 'The art of writing, in parts, for two or more voices, without the employment of unprepared discords.' But it is not a perfect definition by any means; it is defective both on the score of inclusion and exclusion. It excludes passing-notes, which are admissible, and would seem to include the second inversions of common chords, which are inadmissible. And it makes no mention of the five species. But a complete definition of strict counterpoint would fill a chapter.

A very slight acquaintance with the music of the 16th century should be sufficient to convince us that its composers have broken every single rule of so-called strict counterpoint again and again. But at the present moment I am concerned only with violations of one of these rules.

I have never been able to understand the objection to the skip of a major sixth. It is forbidden by the old contrapuntists, and is not allowed by Cherubini. Even Bridge, who in his well-known primer brings more commonsense to bear upon the subject of counterpoint than any other writer with whom I am acquainted, says that it is perhaps better to avoid the major sixth until the second species. Why? If the skip of a minor sixth be permitted, why should the other be forbidden? If there be any good reason for making such a distinction, I have never heard or read of it.

But a living authority, whom I prefer not to mention by name, goes much further than this. He asserts (I quote from memory) that 'the melodic interval of the major sixth forms no part of the technique of Palestrina.' And this is the position which I feel constrained to traverse.

So far as my knowledge of his compositions extends, Palestrina writes the skip of a sixth, whether major or minor, very sparingly; and the former much less frequently than the latter. Nevertheless, there are quite enough skips of a major sixth to disprove the accuracy of the above-quoted statement. Here are a few examples:

From the Agnus Dei of the Mass 'Æterna Christi munera,' in the alto:

Ex. 1.

From the Gloria of the Mass 'De Beata Virgine,' in the soprano:

Ex. 2.

From the Sanctus of the same Mass, in the alto:

Ex. 3.

From the Credo of the Mass 'Papæ Marcelli,' in the soprano:

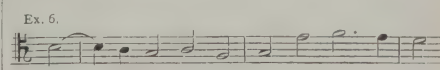
Ex. 4.

From the Motet, 'Beatus vir,' in the alto:

Ex. 5.

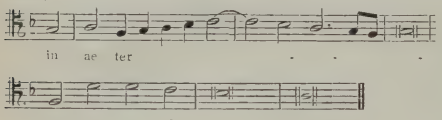
From the Motet, 'Super flumina Babylonis,' in the tenor:

Ex. 6.



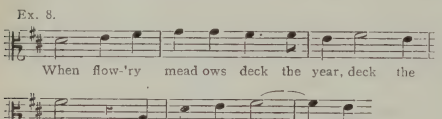
From the Motet, 'Ego sum panis vivus,' in the tenor :

Ex. 7.



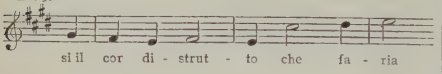
From the very well-known madrigal, 'When flow'ry meadows,' in the alto :

Ex. 8.



From the madrigal, 'Mori quasi il mio core,' in the soprano :

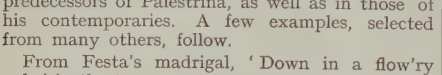
Ex. 9.



The skip of the major sixth is, of course, to be found in the compositions of the immediate predecessors of Palestrina, as well as in those of his contemporaries. A few examples, selected from many others, follow.

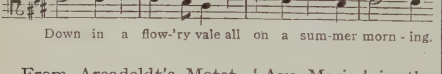
From Festa's madrigal, 'Down in a flow'ry vale,' in the tenor :

Ex. 10.



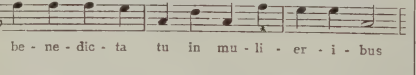
From Arcadeldt's Motet, 'Ave Maria,' in the bass :

Ex. 11.



From Tallis's Motet for forty voices, in the alto of the seventh choir, p. 31 of Dr. Mann's edition :

Ex. 12.



From Byrd's Motet, 'Justorum animæ,' in the second soprano :

Ex. 13.

I wish that the Musical Times would offer a small prize for the discovery of the name of the man who first forbade the skip of a major sixth, in order that he might be properly posthumously pilloried—that is to say, pilloried in a Pickwickian sense, seeing that he has long since been pulverised.

GÖSTA NYSTRÖM: A NEW SWEDISH COMPOSER

By Leonid Sabaneev

Sweden is not rich in composers, though the nation as a whole is a very musical one. It has hitherto been untouched by modernism, and its composers usually adhere to academic tendencies in musical thought.

I have recently become acquainted, however, with the works of a young Swedish musician, Gösta Nyström, in which the breaking-out of a new musical stream seems to me to be revealed. He is neither futurist, nor polytonalist, nor atonalist; in his musical outlook he is pre-eminently sensitive and even naïve. He accepts music clearly and simply, and with a certain straightforward forcefulness. Hence the astonishing freshness of his work.

He is somewhat of an impressionist, and the shades of Grieg's creations overlie Nyström's compositions. I think this is all to the good, as the genius of the great Scandinavian composer cannot but influence favourably the normal and organic creative work of a musician belonging to a Scandinavian nation. From Grieg he gets the freshness of his musical thought and his touching simplicity of feeling—qualities which one rarely has to proclaim amongst his contemporaries. Nyström's work rejoiced me because of its immense talent and direct musical feeling; which have not drooped nor become enfeebled by entanglement in the thickets of philosophisings and cold calculations and constructions.

Nyström is above all things a melodist. His themes are simple, even bucolic; in them there is undoubtedly something of the people, and this, of course, supplies a reason for conjecturing the great vitality of his compositions. At times he is fond of harsh harmonic colouring, but in this there is neither insolence nor preconceived design; it is an intuitive harshness, similar to that with which Moussorgsky sometimes astonished the world.

Amongst Swedish composers he stands alone. He is the only 'modernist' in his country, the only composer who appeals not only to Gade and Mendelssohn but also to Debussy and Ravel, and even to the early Stravinsky. There is much in his work that needs to be burnt away and some that requires strengthening, since the composer is still quite young, but his general contours are drawn in a very attractive light, and that is why I wished to direct attention to this creator, who, like all true artists, is modest and retiring. In his 'Regrets' we find him in his intimate moods. His 'Rondo capriccioso' for violin and pianoforte is a very arresting and brilliant thing, but is not the real Nyström. The symphonic poem 'Ischavet,' which is to be performed this season at Monte Carlo, under M. Steiman, shows him in the panoply of splendid orchestral colouring—he is a fine colourist, of the impressionistic type. 'Ischavet,' which has a sub-title, 'In Arctic Seas' is a powerful musical landscape, influenced by pictures of Scandinavian nature; it has already been played at Stockholm.

Nyström was a student at the Stockholm Conservatory, and afterwards studied composition under Prof. Liberman at Copenhagen. In addition to the works already mentioned he has written a Symphony, a symphonic poem, 'The Tower of Babel,' two Ballets, a Quartet, and pianoforte and vocal pieces.

The purpose of these remarks is to draw the attention of wider musical circles to this fine, powerful, and characteristic talent, which has every prospect of a brilliant future.

(Translated by S. W. Pring.)

(N.B.—Prof. Liberman's name is given in its Russian spelling, which may not be that of the original—the Russians spell foreign names as they pronounce them.—S. W. P.)

THE MILITARY MUSICIAN IN LITERATURE

By J. PAINE

Whenever it is possible, have music to march to. If the band is broken up, the drums and bugles should play together. Nothing is more martial in sound, and the men march a hundred per cent. better to it than in silence.—Field-Marshal Viscount Wolseley, 'The Soldier's Pocket Book.'

The death of Thomas Hardy removed the only writer of a novel of any marked merit in which the hero was a British military musician. His story of 'The Trumpet Major' is not a stirring military romance such as one would find between the covers of a book by James Grant, nor has it the rollicking flavour of Charles Lever's military yarns, but it is a fine unvarnished character study of the type of non-commissioned officer to be met with in a cavalry regiment in the days when the soldier selected to take charge of the trumpeters was regarded as a personage of no mean account. His prototype exists to-day in our mounted branches in the shape of the Sergeant Trumpeter, but old titles die hard in the Service, and he is as seldom referred to by this less dignified title as are the Drum Majors and Pipe Majors by the equally undignified names of Sergeant Drummer and Sergeant Piper.*

Of novelists who have fallen to the charms of chubby-faced drummer boys and curly-headed bugler lads, several instances might be given, though the hero's profession is not always revealed in the titles of such stories. Major E. A. Haggard's 'Only a Drummer Boy' gives one a fair idea of what to expect in a book thus styled, and the same might be said of a well-known story of the Peninsular War, 'The Young Buglers,' told by that beloved writer of our youth, G. A. Henty, who, as a war correspondent, served in several campaigns. The Hon. John Fortescue, the historian of the British Army, has had little time in which to create imaginary soldiers, but his story of 'The Drummer's Coat' is as deserving of mention as is that priceless short study of those two young red-coated rogues who belonged to 'The Drums of the Fore and Aft,' and who, in novel circumstances, saved the honour of that unfortunate regiment.

Taking a glance at half-a-dozen volumes devoted solely to military poems, the few contributions which catch the eye favour the martial musical instrument in preference to the player, since 'I Hear the Trumpet Sounding' has its companions in E. H. Cummings's 'The Last Bugle,' May Byron's 'The Bugle,' Walt Whitman's 'Beat! Beat! Drums!' and Adam Lindsay Gordon's lengthy lay, 'The Roll of the Kettle-drum.' The ugly side of war is revealed in a line in the Ingoldsby 'Legend of Salisbury Plain,' where a battlefield is recalled by some one who 'found a raven a-picking a drummer-boy's bones'! This drummer is described as belonging to the Forty-Third, a regiment of Peninsular fame, to which the poet Thorburn appointed the dauntless drummer who said :

O men of the Forty-Third,
Teach me the way to die.

This particular poem is a fine tribute to a type of youthful soldier by no means rare in the ranks of the regular army of those days. Frank Taylor, whose 'Minden Drums' was set to music a few years ago as a marching tune for the First Hampshire Regiment, has a fallen drummer of the Guards in mind in his verses on 'Audenarde,' since one is told :

Through St. James's and the 'Mell,' he will no more strut and swell
To the changing of the guard.

For a rhyme of a humorous character there is R. Kelly's 'Thump 'em, the Drummer,' which probably has its equally ridiculous theme in many other doggerels unworthy of mention.

Though the drummer and the bugler have been favoured by novelists and poets, the same cannot be said of the military minstrel of higher qualification, the regimental bandsman, though he may be met in fact and not in fancy in Punch's verses, 'A Tale of the Tenth Hussars,' wherein one is reminded of the sad story of Valentine Baker's dismissal from the Queen's service. The hero of the poem is Private Hayes,* a bandsman of the 10th Hussars, who, after winning the D.C.M. in Egypt, asked as a simple request that Baker Pasha might be restored to his old regiment. Another military musician whose gallantry on the field of battle has been perpetuated in verse is Piper George Clarke, whose name is erroneously given as 'Stewart' by W. S. Passmore in 'The Piper of Vimiera,' one of the many stirring contributions included in a volume of Peninsular verses published in the year of Wellington's death. William Sinclair's 'The Pipes and The Banner,' included in the same work, is a poetical allusion to the armoral pipe banners which, even in these matter-of-fact times, are still carried by the pipers of Scottish regiments.

It is seldom a senior officer fills the rôle of a musician on active service, but such circumstances may be cited in the rallying, during the early part of the late war, of a body of stragglers by Major Bridges, whose beating of a drum, which was certainly not of the regulation pattern, is the subject of one of the 'Folk-Rhymes of the Great War,' in which Mary Kent Rivers asks :

What ghost of military pomp and pride
Lurks in this drum so blithe and gay?
Stirring the old desire to be
Over the hills and far away!

There are one or two important personages in the military musical world who, at the outset of

* Since this article was written, His Majesty The King has approved the revival of the original titles of these appointments.

* Hayes is but one of a gallant company of military musicians in the annals of war, and one trusts the names are still familiar of the Camerons' piper at Waterloo, Kenneth Mackay; Bugler Hawthorne, V.C., of Mutiny fame; Piper Findlater, V.C., of Dargai memory; and Bugler Dunn and Trumpeter 'Robin Redbreast' in the Boer War. Bugler Sutton, Trumpeter Monaghan, and Drummers Ryan and Flinn also gained during the Mutiny the coveted bronze cross which Drummer Stagpoole won in the New Zealand War, Drummer Magner in Abyssinia, and a still serving Highland Drum Major during the late war.

their career, were just plain drummers, buglers, pipers, or bandsmen. Rifle regiments have their little-heard-of Bugle Majors, but these worthy gentlemen, like the cavalry kettle-drummers, are hardly ever mentioned in the literary world. The leader of the band on parade, the Drum Major, is best beloved by artists, photographers, and song-writers, whilst the Pipe Major of our Scottish regiments is the subject of a grievance in three post-war volumes devoted solely to pipers, since each of the authors puts forward the plea for the appointment of this Sergeant to Warrant rank. Last, but not least, there is the bandmaster himself, whose task is not as easy as it may appear to the average looker-on.

Mindful of a serious omission in many works purporting to treat of the evolution of music, one is pleased to observe that William Galloway does not forget to devote a chapter to 'Music in the Army and the Navy' in his 'Musical England,' published eighteen years ago, his chief lament being that so few Army bandmasters are able to enjoy the privileges of a commission, predicting that this unjust state of affairs 'will one day be looked back upon with bewilderment and possibly shame.' Unfortunately, these talented servants of the State still rank, in the Line regiments, as Warrant Officers, commissions being held only by the Musical Directors of the Guards, and other staff bands, but even the majority of these officers retire only with the rank of Lieutenant or Captain after many years of industrious plodding, to say nothing of their service in the ranks, for all our Army bandmasters were humble bandsmen at the start, a fact unknown to many civilians. The first two bandmasters to receive commissions were both sons of the great Charles Godfrey, whose three sons all eventually became, like their father, bandmasters in the Guards. Some interesting facts relating to this talented family were recorded four years ago in 'Memories and Music,' by Sir Dan Godfrey, at one time the bandmaster of the Corps of Commissionaires and the son of that other Dan who, during the major portion of his life, wielded the baton in the band of the Grenadier Guards.

Allusion in the foregoing lines has not been made to any of the works dealing solely with military music, since the majority are of a semi-technical nature, and with a few notable exceptions would make little appeal to the average reader.

WALTER ODINGTON:
THE CONSONANCE OF THE THIRD, AND THE COMMON CHORD

By Jeffrey Pulver

The sanctioning of the third, major and minor, as a consonant interval and the acceptance of the common chord as something pleasing to the ear, are landmarks as important in the history of harmony, as Beethoven understood that science, as are the Ten Commandments in the history of ethics. This being axiomatic, it is certainly astonishing that the name of Walter de Odington is not honoured in this country above all others, for he conferred a distinction upon England that is great only as it is understood and appreciated. He explained how the thirds might be made admissible in the system of harmony then in vogue, and did so before the 13th century had fully run its course—certainly before the 14th century had grown very old. It seems rather late in the day (six and a half centuries after the event) to stress my opening sentence, but it remains a fact that Odington has not yet been accorded the unanimous praise of his countrymen for having engrossed upon the musical statute-book ordinances which, if he did not actually invent them, were by him for the first time placed on record for all the world to see. The state of affairs regarding this man and his musical tractate is, to say the least of it, unnatural; for how else can such unparalleled national modesty be termed? Was Shakespeare the last to claim for 'this England' that which is this country's right? Have we developed what has recently come to be called an 'inferiority complex'? We find the German Dr. Hugo Riemann ('Geschichte der Musiktheorie im 9-19. Jahrhundert,' 1898) saying that 'one of the most surprising results' of our studies was to establish the fact that the honour of declaring 'that the undoubted and generally accepted consonance of the major and minor third is to be traced to the division of the fifth (2 : 3) into the ratios 4 : 5 and 5 : 6,' and belongs, not 'to Ramis [as Bartolomeo Ramos de Pareja is abbreviated], but to the Oxford mathematician Walter Odington, who lived some two hundred years earlier.' Almost at the same time we read in the English 'Oxford History of Music' (vol. 1, Prof. H. E. Wooldridge) that 'we must as yet hold it at least doubtful whether our country can really lay claim to any special share in the introduction of thirds and sixths among the musical concords.' These two quotations illustrate the findings of the two schools of thought at the opening of the present century. Dr. Riemann had no richer material to work with than had Prof. Wooldridge, yet the former used the results of his researches in a manner that more recent discoveries have fully justified.

If Odington's own written words do not make good the English claim (and there is no reason for denying them this power), the actual practice of the English composers of his age does so. The unrestricted use of the intervals in question marks an enormous advance in the science of harmony, for while the scheme in vogue until almost the end of the 12th century permitted only sequences of fourths and fifths, with a very circumscribed use of the third, Odington—probably influenced by the usage becoming more and more common about him—alludes to much greater possibilities, and describes what is to us the common chord. Writing, or at least studying, in Worcestershire, Odington would have come more closely in contact with the system that looked upon the third as insufficiently consonant for general use. At the same time he alludes to the interval as if it had been known and employed in these islands long before he wrote. Whatever the source of the practice may have been, the fact remains pretty well established that in the extreme north of England, as in the west, and most probably also in Ireland, harmonizing by thirds was common. Whether the acceptance of the interval was of Danish origin (and possibly dating from pre-Norman times), or, as Dr. Lederer, of Prague, holds, of Celtic birth, we shall have to look upon Odington's cell-study as the meeting place of two tendencies—as the Gothic-windowed, candle-lighted apartment in which an ancient usage of native musicians was authoritatively grafted upon another of equal antiquity though of different provenience.

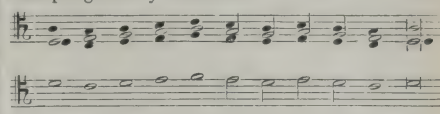
I said that the actual practice of the English composers proved the English claim. An examination of the compositions known to us to date from Odington's period of activity shows his theories in use. That most conscientious, well-balanced, and advantageously-placed worker in this field, Dom Anselm Hughes, O.S.B., has analysed a dozen compositions of the era under consideration and the percentage of third sequences that he has discovered is astonishingly high (v. 'Laudate' for September, 1923, p. 146). My opinion, for what it may be worth, is that in certain parts of this country at any rate the harmonizing by thirds and sixths was of greater antiquity than were the earliest examples of these intervals in what we may call the 'art-music' of Odington's day in the middle-west counties of England. It may well be, as has so often been the case in the history of harmony, that a popular usage of fairly wide distribution became at last a sanctioned method in the established harmonic scheme. However untrustworthy Giraldus Cambrensis may be on many points, there is now no reason for doubting that the popular part-singing this Norman churchman alludes to was one that proceeded in thirds and sixths. At any rate, as I have already suggested, Odington does not mention the third in a way that would lead us to believe that it was new to his readers. With him it was merely a question of justifying its acceptance as a consonant interval. But remembering this prevalence of the third in early English harmony, and the added knowledge to be obtained from Odington's writings, we cannot but accept without further debate the statements of Gulielmus Monachus to the effect that Gymel and Faux-Bourdon (that which gave place to the modified and much-loved Fa-burden of the Tudors) were essentially English practices.

Odington was a profound scholar and an able mathematician; he knew the work of the philosophers of antiquity, and 'Babylonian numbers' held no mysteries for him. His investigations consequently progressed along lines that are perfectly familiar to us. The fifth (3 : 2) was a combination of 5 : 4 and 6 : 5 ($5/4 \times 6/5 = 30/20 = 3/2$); why, then, should not both major and minor thirds be consonant? But he realised, as Pythagoras did eighteen centuries earlier, that the two whole-tones making up the major third, each with the ratio 9 : 8, could not produce exactly the third 5 : 4. But although he thus came face to face with the difficulty of the Pythagorean, or Syntonic, Comma—the bugbear that introduced the small but exceedingly troublesome difference of 81 : 80 in the justice of his thirds—he was not more dismayed at its presence than were the good singers of all times or are the violinists of the present day. In his treatise he suggests a practical solution of the difficulty by—tempering: 'Et si in numeris non reperiantur consone, voces tamen hominum subtilitate ipsos ducunt in mixturam suavem.' That the question of temperament was a highly important one must be seen when we fully realise the behaviour of the middle voice in fauxbourdon in relation to the part that was a third below it on the one hand, and the one which was a fourth above it on the other. In the example given by Monachus:



we have to remember that the lower black notes (the treble part) were to sound an octave higher and thus come a sixth above the open semibreves (the tenor part). The treble part at its actual audible pitch followed the unsung plainsong given in Gulielmus's lower stave. In thus sanctioning processions of thirds made bearable by tempering, Odington, whether he knew it or no, was following in the spirit of Aristoxenus and his 'harmonists.'

From the third to the sixth should be no great stride for any mathematician or musician; yet Odington, though advocating its use as a pleasant interval, still keeps it back among the dissonances: 'Verumtamen per diapente cum tono proceditur multotiens in cantilenis istius temporis quod fit, ut concordia, cum acciderit, quia rara est, fiat suavior.' On the question of the minor sixth he is silent. Possibly he did not wish to appear too much given to pandering to the popular taste; we can hardly imagine that a mathematician of Odington's standing would fail to see the futility of denying admission to one interval when he has already justified its inversion. But to compensate us for this disappointment we have in his work what is probably the first indication of the triad with octave-doublings as a consonant chord. Plainly he says: 'Compatientur ergo se simul, si eidem voci gravi comparentur, ditonus vel semiditonus, diapente, diapason, diapason cum ditono vel semiditono, diapason cum diapente, bis diapason ut in his numeris patet sub hac formula: 64, 81, 96, 128, 162, 192, 256'—giving the chord C E G c e g c. Only the accepted consonance of the third could have made this possible. The combination of a note with its fifth and octave would not have surprised us much earlier, and after what we have read of Odington's attitude towards the major third, the adding of that interval to form the triad need cause no wonder. But what should surprise us—and it is a thing that places Odington a very long way in advance of his age—is his 'vel semiditonus' and his 'diapason cum semiditono'—the constitution of what we now call the common chord of C minor. Can we, in an age that looks upon the chords of the dominant and diminished seventh as 'banal' combinations, realise the effect of the minor common chord upon ears that knew nothing more complicated than long sequences of fourths and fifths (the quatrible and the quinible of the Middle Ages), and nothing more exciting than a third occasionally on the up-beat? The thought may help to make us more patient with the gropings of the modernists who are to-day seeking for new means of expression; who do not agree with the traditionalists of the present that the harmonical materials of Bach and Beethoven and Brahms are not yet effete; who may be the Odingtons and the Monteverdes of future generations. Thus does history teach us to be tolerant while it tells us that all art progresses by a developing evolution and not by sudden revolution.

The treatise containing the astounding information above alluded to is the only one of Odington's known to us on a musical theme. It is preserved in the library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, as MS. 401 (Parker's Manuscripts), and is entitled 'De Speculatione Musices.' Its date must lie somewhere in the vicinity of 1280-1300, though Riemann suggests that 1275 may even be possible, while the 'Oxford History' says that the treatise 'dates probably from 1300 or rather later.' The error between the earliest and the latest possible dates can hardly exceed twenty-five years, which, for a mediæval event, is near enough for our purpose. The tract falls into six books, and contains what may be accepted as the sum of all the musical knowledge—acoustical, harmonic, prosodial, and rhythmic—then in the possession of the cultured world, the legacy that the 14th century inherited from the 13th. It was printed by de Coussemaker in vol. 1 (p. 182 et seq.) of his 'Scriptores de Musica Medii Aevi' (1863-76). The contents of the six libri are comprehensive. Books 1 to 3 contain treatises on the usual physical elements of music, such as the knowledge that is to be derived from a scientific manipulation of the monochord, mathematical ratios for the various intervals, and material with which we are familiar from the ancient Greek teachings. The fourth book is far more important from the historian's point of view, for it gives one of the best accounts of the mediæval rhythmic system extant. It should be noticed in this connection that he was very early in the field with a subdivision of the semibreve, which he labelled 'minuta.' The fifth book is devoted to the rules governing the ecclesiastical cantus planus, and the sixth to the various types of composition belonging to his period. In the last some very interesting and illuminating scraps of information may be found. For example, he goes carefully into the treatment of the Hocket ('Ochetus' or 'Truncatio'), that breaking up of the regular flow of a part by numerous rests—again an early use of a term that became more common in the 14th century.

His accounts of the Conductus and the Motetus are the usual ones; but on the subject of the Rondellus he is exceptionally explicit. His recipe for a composition in this style is plain: Take a melody, as beautiful as possible, with or without text, and make each voice sing it in turn; let different melodies be invented to accompany the first one in the second voice, and (if three parts be available) in the third voice also. The second voice was to be so managed that it moved in consonances but in contrary direction, while the third was similarly to proceed consonantly but was not persistently to rise or fall with the other parts, but to follow now the one and now the other. These new inventions were likewise to be sung by all the parts in succession. The addition of new themes prevents us from looking upon the Rondellus as a Canon or Round in the usually accepted meanings of these terms—for while in the latter the voices entered in succession, the Rondellus began with all its voices in action, each performing its own melody which it exchanged for the others in succession. The benefits that such a method of composition could confer upon students of the science that was afterwards to be called Counterpoint need no stressing. And Odington's early counterpoint was not simplified by his injunction regarding the various parts, 'ut principaliter in consonantia fiant.'

The material from which we have to construct the biography of Walter Odington is exceedingly scanty. All we know with certainty is that he was a monk in the Benedictine Abbey at Evesham (for his treatise on alchemy, 'Yeocedron,' Digby Manuscripts, is signed 'Ego frater Walterus de Otyntone monachus de Evesham'), that he wrote a Calendar for 1301 onwards while he was there (Cambridge University Library), that he later went to Oxford, being occupied there with writing on astronomy in 1316 (cf. 'Laud.' MSS. Misc., 674), and that in c. 1330 he was living in Merton College, for Walter de Evesham was one of those who had new locks fitted to their doors ('Merton College Account-Book'). The date of his birth is thus to be fixed only by deduction. We cannot place it earlier than 1250, for he obviously did not die until after 1330. His birthplace is likewise unknown. Even if we accept his name—de Odington, de Oddington, or de Otyntone—as a guide, we are not much nearer a solution, for there are a number of villages of that name in England; though Oxfordshire or Gloucestershire may possibly have the best claim. But although we may have poor material upon which to work, we can at least depend upon that little. Not so the earlier investigators. Their great difficulty (probably provided by Bale in the first instance) was the existence of one Walter de Einesham who was selected by his brethren at Canterbury to be their Archbishop in 1228, and the similarity of the name, together with the comparative proximity of the date with that to which 'De Speculatione Musices' was at first assigned, completed the confusion. Walter de Einesham (who, in spite of his election, did not become Archbishop) and Walter de Evesham were without the slightest doubt two individuals who most probably flourished in successive generations. It was this error that caused so many writers to assign a far too early date to Odington's important treatise.

Walter Odington is considerable, not only because he pleaded for the 'official' inclusion of the third among the consonances and mentioned the common chord, but also on account of the date at which he lived. If the Reading Rota be mentioned now it will be thought that some sort of conspiracy had been hatched among musical historians, not to mention the 13th century without dragging in, somehow or other, the round 'Sumer is icumen in.' But it happens that the Reading Rota (with its large number of thirds) is a landmark dividing two distinct periods, neither of which can produce sufficient material for a continuous history. Gradually, however, light is breaking in upon the darkness that for so long enshrouded the two centuries lying between the famous round and the 'Agincourt Song.' Music actually written and sung at the period in question is being discovered and made accessible to the student of mediæval music in England. One by one the doubts and errors of historians are being removed. The researches of Dom Anselm Hughes, for one, among the scattered fly-leaves and parchment bindings that produced the manuscripts known as 'Worcester Add. 68,' have completely overthrown the assumption of Prof. H. E. Wooldridge ('Oxford History of Music') that before the first quarter of the 15th century England could lay claim to no definite native school of composition. The evidence, as it comes to the surface, tends to prove more and more conclusively that England enjoyed the highest possible musical culture, compatible with the dates that bound the period, between the two familiar compositions already mentioned. But just as the Reading Rota, by its very structure and contents, could not have been produced without a long evolutionary period before it, so also could the comparatively advanced works of the 14th century not have been thought of without a similar preparatory era. It is for this reason that workers like Odington become important in the history of English music; for although in many respects his teachings followed those of Franco of Cologne (without, perhaps, any direct influence being provable), he expanded the older doctrines and placed on record a set of rules which the compositions now coming to our knowledge prove to have been obeyed commonly by the creative musicians of the time.

Music in the Foreign Press

DECADENCE OF ORGAN-BUILDING

In the October Courrier Musical, Ch.-M. Widor writes:

'Our happy-go-lucky organ-builders copy the methods of wind supply discovered by Cavaillé-Col, but it is the only method of his which they copy. They lack the sensitiveness that would enable them to appraise the delicacy of his timbres, and the capacity to reproduce these timbres. Some of them even dare to infringe all the rules adopted in France for over sixty years and confirmed by the Vienna Congress of 1909—rules concerning the keyboards, the keys, the combinations, &c. . . . all of which should be common to all organs. The result, naturally, is anarchy. Mechanism has been replaced by electric wires: an economy for the builder, but a disappointment for the organist. Security is lacking: you have to expect accidents every week, if not every day. Once I caused one of these new-fangled consoles to be opened, and I was able to see how indifferently it had been planned, and how carelessly carried out. The tone of the instrument was as unsatisfactory as its construction. Let the decisions, the plans, the very spirit of the Vienna Congress be remembered. At the present time all German organists agree to remind organ-builders that the instruments must be made to suit those who will play them, and that builders cannot have it all their own way. We cannot and will not witness in cold blood the downfall of our art.'

ABRIDGING WAGNER'S SCORES

In the October Melos, Roger de Campagnolle (who is, a foot-note tells us, a medical practitioner of Munich, and no specialist in music) declares that it is high time for the decision to bring Wagner's masterpieces down to normal length:

'It is all too true that "Wagner gives us wonderful moments and terrible quarters of an hour." In Wagner's works the effective things are not the drama, but the beautiful moments and lyrico-musical gems, that shine out as jewels amid the sand. And if the sand—the endless orchestra—does not crush them out of sight, it is because one gets gradually so tired that one no longer hears the orchestra as music. Wagner's works will long continue to be played, but not in their original form. It is difficult to decide how they should be shortened. "Tristan" should remain untouched; it is the most perfect and most genuine of Wagner's works, and, alas, I fear that it will be the first to disappear from the stage. Likewise, there can be no question of cuts to "Parsifal"—not on account of its religious character, but because it is the most compact of the leitmotiv dramas, and the most pleasant to listen to. Remain "The Mastersingers" and "The Ring." These should be shortened, but not by "cuts." In "The Mastersingers," the whole verbal text should be preserved, but for the greater part in ordinary speech forms; all the sung dialogues—and even some of the Preludes and Interludes and bits whose only function is to emphasise melodramatically the purport of the words—should go overboard. In this drastic procedure lies the one hope of ultimate salvation. "The Ring" cannot be treated similarly, but should reverently be condensed so as to fill two evenings. Only the capital scenes should be staged, and the remaining, explanatory parts could be recited off-stage—say, from the orchestral pit, at times with orchestral accompaniment.'

BARTÓK

In the September Auftakt, Ladislaus Pollatsek offers a number of useful remarks on Bartók's music in general, emphasising the individuality and consistency of his style, his profound and highly original sense of the grotesque, 'far deeper than the irony of Poulenc, Medtner, Prokofiev, or even Stravinsky,' and the correspondences between his art and folk-music. He considers the pantomime 'The Wooden Prince' as most typical by virtue of its sharp definition of situations and of 'the formalisation of the grotesque in dancing and acting.' The 'Wonderful Mandarin,' he says, is one of his most baffling achievements on account of its realism and bitterness of tone. In this work and in the Pianoforte Concerto Bartók's affinities with Stravinsky are clearly shown.

In the October Musikblätter des Anbruch appears an excerpt of a forthcoming book on Bartók's musical style by Edwin von der Nüll. This excerpt is an exposition of the view that Bartók's harmony should be considered as embodying 'extended tonality,' not atonality; and that in all technical respects we have to deal, in his music, with evolution, not revolution. His creative imagination is entirely instinctive, and owes nothing to intellectuality.

CAN THERE BE A 'JEWISH' MUSIC?

In the same issue, Erwin Felber writes:

'Nationality in music depends partly on geographical, ethnographical, and cultural influences, partly on heredity and spiritual disposition. Jewish music cannot be Jewish simply by being founded on more or less genuine old Jewish elements. Let it also be remembered that the Jew of France is very different, in mind and body, from the Jew of Russia. Meyerbeer and Mendelssohn were Germans in spirit and outlook, who could never have written music to be spoken of as "Jewish" in the same way as we may speak of "Italian" or "French" music. The same applies to Mahler, whose conscious acknowledgment of Western culture greatly outweighed any unconscious memories of, or leanings towards, the East he may have had. In Russia (the bridge between East and West) the way might be easier for real Jewish music. But Russian Jewish composers (Engel, Akhron, Krein, Milner, Gnessin, Feinberg) start by utilising purely European conceptions (forms) and materials (harmony, rhythm, &c.). Therein lies their fundamental error. A really Jewish music can exist only on the basis of a "Pan-Asiatic" sensitiveness, which will be consciously averse to the "Pan-European" musical language.'

ERIK SATIE

The September Bolletino Bibliografico Musicale contains a complete list of Erik Satie's works. Its length will surely surprise most readers, for very few of these works are known, except to a small number of Satie specialists.

M.-D. Calvocoressi.

Gramophone Notes

By 'Discus'

H.M.V.

Only two orchestral records have turned up—in fact very few H.M.V. records of any kind have been received up to the time of writing. No doubt a consignment will arrive just too late for these notes.

It is a pity the first 'Peer Gynt' Suite has been allowed to put its companion almost entirely in the shade. The actual difference in quality is very slight, and no doubt the fact of No. 1 happening to end with 'In the hall of the Mountain King' was enough to turn the scale heavily. The second Suite has been recorded in an excellent performance by the New Light Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Eugène Goossens. 'Ingrid's Lament' and the Arab Dance are on the first of the pair of records; 'The return of Peer Gynt' and Solveig's Song on the second. The recording is well above the average (C1571-72).

First-rate, too, is the record of Glazounov's 'Valse de Concert,' Op. 47, played by the San Francisco Orchestra under Alfred Hertz. These Russians make the staple Viennese Waltz seem a poor thing musically. (Compare the most popular of all—the 'Blue Danube'—with this Glazounov example, or with Tchaikovsky's efforts in the same field.) This 'Valse de Concert' is not only a delightful example of music for dancing—even my heavy feet felt some stirrings and twitchings—but also full of points of musical interest, such as the charming bit of canon between the strings and flutes, and the syncopation in the middle section. The record should be very popular (D1492).

The tone is far from good in the records of Beethoven's 'Moonlight' Sonata, played by Hambourg. The middle movement is the least bad in this respect. Why record this Sonata for the umpteenth time? There are several among the early and middle groups that are rarely played by recitalists, but which are at least as good as the over-rated, so-called 'Moonlight.' Let us have more enterprise and less follow-my-leader and play-for-safety policy! A good mark may be given to Hambourg for filling the fourth side with the tuneful variations on 'Nel cor più'; familiar though they are, they are less hackneyed. But he plays the rapid passages too quickly for clearness or grace, so half the good mark comes off. (C1549-50).

Choral music, like organ music, has so far received a good deal less than justice from the gramophone, and some of our finest choirs (such as the Glasgow Orpheus and the Philharmonic) have on the whole been actually misrepresented. It is a pleasure, therefore, to find the Philharmonic Choir sounding very much like their true selves in Schubert's Mass in G. The Mass belongs to a type of Church music that is hardly likely to regain the vogue it once had. Tastes now are for something more austere, or at all events more definitely ecclesiastical in style. But Schubert never did anything better in the choral line than the best parts of this Mass. The Agnus Dei shows his lyricism at its purest. The soloists are a capital team—Elsie Suddaby, Percy Manchester, and Howard Fry. Kennedy Scott, of course, conducts, and the performance and recording are unusually good all round. These records should take a high place among the Centenary material (D1478-80).

Of the few vocal records I single out the best—Florence Austral in 'Ocean, thou mighty monster' (D1504); Chaliapin at his finest in 'Der Doppelgänger' and a bit less convincing in 'Der Tod und das Mädchen'—he makes the former a thrilling little operatic scena, which is no doubt wrong of him, but it comes off in a way that leaves the hearer spellbound (DB1184); John Goss in excellent performances of four Schubert songs—'Whither,' 'Hark! hark! the lark,' 'Song of the fisherman to the stars,' and 'The hedgerose' (B2686); and Paul Robeson and Lawrence Brown in a couple of 'spirituals'—'Hear, de Lam's a-cryin',' and 'Ezekiel saw de wheel' (B2838).

COLUMBIA

Interest naturally centres in Karl Atterberg's Symphony No. 6, in C—the winner of the Schubert Centenary Prize. As several performances are announced to take place at about the present time it will receive ample discussion, and so calls for only brief notice here. The records leave me with an impression of attractiveness rather than of originality and of strength. Of the three movements I prefer the Finale, with its Beethovenish false starts of the fugal subject and its spirited writing. The Symphony might easily prove popular. Given an unusually good start by the blazing publicity surrounding its origin, its moderate length and lively, vivid style should do the rest. The players are the Royal Philharmonic Society, conducted by Beecham, and both recording and performance seem to be first-rate (L2160-63).

A re-recording to be noted is that of Brahms's first Symphony, played by the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra under Weingartner. Fine in the slow movement, almost as good in the Finale, and somewhat laboured in the first movement—there are my impressions in brief (L2145-49).

The best orchestral recording of the batch, I feel, is that of the Sinfonia to Mascagni's

'Le Maschere,' played by the Milan Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Lorenzo Molajoli. The music is a curious mixture of Mozart and some of the Italian opera composers of the last generation. Few hearers will see in it much of the only Mascagni that is familiar to us—that of the 'Cav.' The playing and reproduction are so good as to make the Sinfonia enjoyable (9472).

I wish we could hear the Bournemouth Municipal Orchestra worthily represented both in material and recording. So far no record doing them justice has come my way. Two pieces by Gennin —'Fluttering Birds' and 'Idylle Bretonne'—are poor stuff on which such players are wasted; and the focussing seems quite out so far as the flute and piccolo are concerned. Both—or their players —seems to have been partaking of Wells's Food of the Gods when engaged in the high register (9471). The orchestra is far better employed in Suppé's 'Pique-Dame' Overture. It is good to hear these old operatic war-horses once and again. They may have given a bit at the knees, but there is still a prance and a curvet left. Sir Dan gives us a capital performance (9496).

After all the flood of Schubert records I am inclined to think that nothing better has come along than two chamber-music recordings issued last month. The Quartet in E flat is a slight work, but so delightful that it is able to stand up against some defects in playing and recording. The surface in the Adagio disc is bad (but this fault may be peculiar to my sample), and there are some roughnesses in the performance. The players are the Musical Art Quartet (9473-75). The odd sixth side is given to an arrangement, by Held, of 'Hark! hark! the lark.' The arrangement of the song is well enough, but the variations are only so-so, and the modulatory passages are badly out of the picture. It seems a pity to record this when there must surely be on the shelf some good odd movement from an otherwise inferior and neglected Quartet by Schubert

The other chamber music is an undisputed masterpiece, worthily presented—the Quintet in C, the players being the London String Quartet, with Horace Britt as the extra violoncello. This is beyond any criticism save of the carping kind (9485-90).

The admirable Virtuoso Quartet unbends with good results in Glazounov's 'Orientale' and the Gavotte from 'Mignon' (B2784).

A notable organ record is that of the brilliant French organist Edouard Commette playing in Lyon Cathedral a couple of familiar French Toccatas—Boëllmann's from the 'Suite Gothique,' and Gigout's less-known but very effective example in B minor. This is one of the best organ records known to me, with enough echo to take off dryness and not enough to confuse. Commette's playing is fine in its rhythmic swing and drive (9497).

The London Catholic Choir has been recorded in some simple music, mostly of the hymn-tune variety, though the labels promise something much more imposing; and the ascription 'Traditional' is surely misapplied to such things as the tune to 'Faith of our fathers,' some familiar tunes by Samuel Webbe, the Arcadelt 'Ave Maria,' and, above all, to Mozart's 'Ave Verum.' The singing generally is good, without being distinguished. The organ is used far too much; practically all this batch of items should be sung a cappella, and two—the tunes to 'Hail! Queen of Heaven!' and 'Faith of our fathers'—should not be sung at all (4967-70).

Paul Whiteman and His Orchestra should confine themselves to their proper field if the best they can do elsewhere is the medley called 'Tchaikovskiana.' The motto theme from the E minor Symphony leads into the second subject of the slow movement of the String Quartet (with the tune sobbed out per saxophone), and so forth. It is all slick and strident—even the 'Sugar-plum Fairy' has been lip-sticked and cabaretised. Only good taste and a sense of fitness can stop this sort of thing: hence 'Tchaikovskiana' (9470).

I confess to heresy concerning Kipnis. His singing of 'The Calf of Gold' and Mephistopheles' Serenade from Gounod's 'Faust' strikes me as being largely out-of-tune noise, and his Satanic laugh a sheer grotesque exaggeration (5044).

---

Parcels of 'Metropole' and 'Piccadilly' records have also been received. These are mainly dance music and similar light stuff, generally good of its kind and low in price. For readers of this journal detailed discussion would be of no interest. In the 'Piccadilly' set the instrumental recording is far better than the vocal. The voices have a somewhat muffled quality in the records of Dorothy Bennett singing 'The lass with the delicate air' and Sanderson's 'Little Brown Owl' (121), and in those of Frank Chamberlain's performance of a couple of Woodforde-Finden's 'Indian Love Lyrics' (111). The record of St. Luke's choir and organ in two well-known hymns suffers from bad balance, the soprano making only a fitful appearance (103). The Viennese Symphony Orchestra is heard in the 'Liebesträume' and 'Les Trésors de Columbine' (113), and a selection from the 'Coppelia' Ballet Music (110). But the effect is that of a restaurant band rather than of a symphony orchestra. The pick of the 'Metropole' lot is that of the Emory University Glee Club in 'Steal away' and 'Little David, play on your harp' (1040). Here are excellent voices, a lot of character, and first-rate recording.

Player-Piano Notes

ÆOLIAN

Duo-Art.—The roll of Beethoven's Andante in F, played by Wanda Landowska, is a striking instance of the ability of a strong personality to make itself felt through any means—mechanical or otherwise. Wanda Landowska brings out fully the appealing simplicity of the Andante (7135).

Joseph Greene gives an adequate performance of de Falla's attractive 'Cubana' (0342), and there is a Chaminade 'Air de Ballet' (No. 4), well played by Robert Armbruster (7197).

A batch of Audiographic and Biographical rolls has been received rather too late for adequate notice in this number. One, however, calls for immediate notice because of its topical character—the Children's Centenary Roll of Schubert, by Percy Scholes. This takes the form of a lecture, the supposed speaker calling on 'our friends' Paderewski, Gabrilowitsch, Friedman, &c., to play illustrations. The composer's life is related in simple language, and there are some admirable woodcuts. It would be difficult to imagine a better method of interesting and instructing children (including those of larger growth). (Incidentally, it is good to see that the words of 'Hark! hark! the lark' are given as Shakespeare wrote them, without that foolish 'improvement' invariably inflicted on us by singers—'with everything that pretty bin.' 'Pretty is' has three things in its favour: it is English, correct, and infinitely preferable on poetic grounds. 'Pretty bin' is neither, and every time a singer uses it, something other than a bouquet ought to be thrown at once.) This truly excellent and enjoyable roll should be noted and used before the Schubert year is gone.

Hand-played.—The only fully satisfactory medium for Bach's D minor Toccata and Fugue is the organ. Even with such a transcription as Tausig's, and an executant of Ignaz Friedman's virtuosity, it is impossible to obtain anything like the effect intended. Organists, it goes without saying, are inclined to sniff at such transcriptions, but they can hardly expect to keep this fine, stirring stuff to themselves, and they must not grudge the pianist an occasional poaching, especially when the results are as good as these. It is a capital roll in every way. The player-pianist who would enjoy it to the full should, after trying it on his pianoforte, take the first opportunity of hearing it on the organ; then, returning to the roll, he should use his imagination (A1107*e*).

There are two Schubert rolls—the Impromptu in B flat, delightfully played by Cortot (A1109*e*); and Liszt's arrangement of the 'Serenade,' in which Lionel Levinson-Sinclair over-emphasises the sentimental side (A1105*d*).

The one Metrostyle roll of interest is Daquin's 'Cuckoo.' This is well cut, but could bear a much quicker pace than is marked (T30400*b*).

Song Rolls.—Outstanding is Elgar's 'Pipes of Pan,' played by Charles Blackmore (26915). The accompaniment is a very full one, and makes it a little difficult to follow the melody at times. It is really worth taking extra trouble over, however; the best plan is to study roll and music side by side.

BLÜTHNER

Animatic.—There is a very fine batch of Chopin rolls. They are all so good that it is difficult to particularise. Perhaps the most attractive is the Study in F, Op. 25, No. 3, played by Arthur Schnabel (55770). Here are the others: Ballade in G. Op. 23, played by Raoul Pugno (55756); Study, Op. 10, No. 5, played by Paula Hegner (56328); Study, Op. 25, No. 9, played by Francis Plante (55772); and Valse in E (posthumous), played by Wijsmann (56381).

Paul Aron gives us four of Debussy's Preludes, 'La fille aux cheveux de lin' and 'Les collines d'Anacapri' on 59845, and 'Ondine' and 'Serenade interrompue' on 59846. There is also 'Bruyères' (59731)—less attractive at first than the other Preludes. It is played with sympathy and understanding by Franz Wagner.

Oswin Keller gives us the not very interesting Hungarian Rhapsody No. 18 of Liszt (55068).

A Schubert Sonata, Op. 164, proves rather boring, owing to the chief Schubertian failing—over-repetition. The performance, by Otto Weinreich, is above reproach (54875-76).

Excellent playing is that of Scharwenka's in Schumann's 'Warum?' (57333) and 'In der Nacht' (57335).

D. G.

Occasional Notes

The London Symphony Orchestra's concert on November 12 (when Karl Atterberg's Schubert Centenary Prize Symphony had its first London performance) and the three concerts of the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra are given no notice in this issue, because no press tickets were received. We make this explanation lest readers should think the omission was due to oversight, and also because the question of the concert-agent's functions are just now being raised in several quarters. The Times of November 10 contained an article which discussed the matter so frankly and sensibly that (by kind permission of the Editor of The Times) we propose to quote from it liberally. The article was inspired by the fact that The Times (of all papers!) had not received tickets for two of the Berlin Philharmonic concerts, and its critic could not, therefore, make a proper estimate of the orchestra's work:

> 'In case [said The Times] Herr Furtwängler and his magnificent orchestra should return home with the feeling that, while the London public was enthusiastic, the London press showed little discriminating interest in its comment, they must be assured that the fault does not lie with the press, but with their own London agents.'

The writer then went on to point out that London concert agents look on the critical columns of the press as a means of obtaining valuable (and free) advance publicity for their clients. This publicity having ensured a full hall, the press is then cold-shouldered, and tickets are grudgingly doled out, or not sent at all. The Times writer added that 'in countries with a higher level of musical intelligence, notably in Germany,' this method does not prevail:

> 'The Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra is accustomed to having its performances seriously discussed, not with the object of "puffing" them before a public which might otherwise remain indifferent, but because members of the general public are so keenly interested already that they will want to know how this and that feature of the interpretation strikes the minds of others, especially of those whose experiences in listening are wider than their own. The artists themselves may or may not benefit by such criticism, though probably Herr Furtwängler would freely admit that the constant attention of the Berlin Press to the performances of the orchestra which he now directs has played a part in creating its sensitive style.
>
> 'Whether this concert or that is noticed or not in the press is a matter of no consequence whatsoever. Whether an individual critic writes "favourably" or otherwise is a matter of quite minor interest. What is of importance is that distinctions should be drawn, that those whose business it is to draw them should have the fullest evidence before them and should compete, not in forcing their way uninvited into concert halls in order that their several papers may be "represented," but in the exercise of discernment about the music offered to them and to the public. Where an art flourishes, untrammelled criticism adds its stimulus to the growth of the art, and the failure to understand the uses of criticism is one of the penalties we pay in this country for leaving the provision of music to the enterprise of the commercial concert agent.'

This is plain speaking, and says some things that have long needed saying. The Musical Times has more than once lifted up its voice on this matter of press tickets. In regard to the particular concerts mentioned above, our telephonic inquiry as to tickets was met with the tartly-delivered information that the agent didn't send tickets to weekly and monthly journals. We have not observed any reluctance on the part of this or any other agent to send us paragraphs for use as advance puffs. (As a matter of fact, by the way, this particular agent does send us tickets for the bulk of recitals and concerts given under his direction.) As we have pointed out in a previous discussion of this topic, the Musical Times exercises functions very different from, but no less useful than, those of the daily press. The newspaper is read and cast aside; the Musical Times is usually retained, often in bound volumes. Its value as a record may be seen by a glance at 'Grove,' from the earliest edition to the latest. As an authoritative source of information concerning first performances and appearances, and other matters of concert and general history, it is the most quoted of all musical journals. (We do not flaunt the fact; we mention it with modest pride as a part of our argument.) A concert agent who refuses to send tickets to the Musical Times because it happens to be a mere monthly journal does no immediate harm to his own business; certainly he does not injure the Musical Times, which has always in hand enough matter to fill its pages many times over; but he is dealing unfairly by his clients in hindering their activities from being recorded in an organ that is widely read by musicians both at home and abroad, and whose bound volumes have for over half-a-century established themselves as authoritative works of reference.

The article in The Times was entitled 'Unmusical Agency,' and the fullest justification for this uncomplimentary caption was given, as will be seen from the following quotations:

'It is not only in regard to this one detail that the thing is liable to be mismanaged. Where the concert agent controls the artist his influence is constantly exerted against the taking of any artistic risk. . . . The smallest deviation from the wonted path makes him nervous lest there should be an empty seat or two. Herr Furtwängler originally planned to give one of Bruckner's Symphonies (No. 4, in E flat, called "Romantic") in the course of these concerts. When asked why it was withdrawn after it had been first advertised, he said that he had been "dissuaded" from giving it. Now Bruckner is a symphonist whom English audiences have never appreciated. . . .

'It is open to any one to say that he did not much care for this Symphony when he heard it six years ago, but that is hardly a reason for saying that it should never be played again. The recent programmes of the Berlin Orchestra in London have been entirely devoid of any music which the average well-educated person does not know by heart. That, however, is not the fault of the Berlin musicians, but once more, apparently, of their London agents. Herr Furtwängler wished to offer to London musicians an opportunity to revise an unfavourable opinion of Bruckner based on imperfect knowledge. It was an ideal opportunity. He brought an orchestra which presumably knows its Bruckner as well as it knows its Brahms. He said in effect to his English audience: We think this is fine music, and we think you only do not like it either because you do not know it, or because you have only heard it given by orchestras who were half familiar with its style. Let us show you what we find in it.

'There is not the least doubt that an audience eager to hear whatever the Berlin Orchestra chose to offer would have accepted the invitation with alacrity, and the keener minds would have willingly foregone one of the well-known symphonies which were played in order to enlarge their experience and possibly their artistic sympathies. Quite apart from the particular case of Bruckner, it ought to be impossible for such a representative institution as the Berlin Orchestra to visit a foreign country and bring with it nothing new beyond the refinements of its own performance.

'We want to know what Germany to-day is doing with music. We know better than to believe that it is entirely wrapped up in giving polished performances of the masterpieces of the last century plus the early tone-poems of Richard Strauss. . . . Are English audiences to conclude that modern Germany produces no music worth carrying abroad? We rather conclude that a concert agent may be a good servant but is certainly a bad master.'

The conclusion of the whole matter is that concert-givers and performers generally should make it clear that the agent is their employé, and that their interests in the long run will often be best served by methods in which art takes precedence of commission. If the agent involved in this discussion—Mr. Lionel Powell—reads the above he may retort that he knows his own business better than we do. That is not the point. The question is, does he know his client's?

The gramophone is now so much taken for granted as a musical medium that the rapidity of its development is sometimes overlooked. We recently came across the following, in the 'Occasional Notes' of our issue for November, 1887, and found it so interesting that we reprint it:

'That modern miracle worker, Mr. Edison, is "at it again." Having got the electric light out of hand, his restless inventiveness has taken up once more with what most of us had come to regard as a discarded toy—the phonograph. A few years ago we were all talking about the phonograph. They had one, of course, at the Crystal Palace, and there eminent singers, and others, were wont to warble into it, afterwards grinding from the interior sounds supposed to be a reproduction of their most sweet voices. The instrument became a nine-days' wonder, and then was practically forgotten. But it remained present in the mind of the inventor, who now claims to have made it a thing of commercial value. "A merchant who wishes to send a letter has only to set the machine in motion, and talk in his natural voice at his usual rate of speed into the receiver. When he has finished a sheet, or phonogram, as I call it, it is ready to be put into a little box made on purpose for the mails. . . . The receiver of the phonogram will put it into his apparatus, and the message will be given out more clearly than the best telephone message ever sent." This reads like an extract from the modern romance of the "Coming Race" school, but what of developments that may arise? Will singers and instrumentalists sing and play into the "receiver," and scatter examples of their skill all over the globe to order? Will Rubinstein or little Hofmann make a tour of the world by phonogram, sitting quietly at home preparing new specimens, while agents travel about displaying them? Shall we have shops for the sale of Albani, Patey, Lloyd, and Santley phonograms? May we hope—but a truce to questions which the reader can ask himself in any number. Lucky artists of the future, if the phonogram becomes fashionable!'

All this has come to pass, and more. The wonders forecast by this writer of over forty years ago are nothing to those of the radio. Yet he probably thought himself very daring and imaginative in suggesting that 'little Hofmann' and others might some day 'sing and play into the receiver and scatter examples of their skill all over the globe.' Similarly this present writer might try his hand at visualising some of the possibilities opened up by the latest marvels of television and the phonofilm. But he won't. Miracles are so cheap to-day that the faculties of imagination and wonder are in danger of being put out of action.

---

The seventy-fifth anniversary of the house of Bechstein is both a source of pride to the firm and a matter of interest to a host of pianists. The story of the origin and growth of Bechstein's is one that would have delighted the author of 'Self-help'—for the first of the famous pianofortes was produced by an obscure young man, aided by a staff of one assistant, with home-made tools, in premises consisting of two small rooms.

Having built an upright, young Carl Bechstein essayed a grand. This had the good luck to come under the notice of Hans von Bülow, at that time a pupil of Liszt. The pupil told the master of his 'find'; Liszt came, played, was conquered, and from thenceforward was the patron and friend of the maker. Other intimate friends were Schumann, Brahms, Wagner, and Rubinstein. Wagner tried the sketches for 'Parsifal' on a Bechstein which is still preserved at Villa Wahnfried. This instrument (supplied to Wagner in 1875) was used at a recent Bayreuth Festival, and critics who admired its tone were astonished to learn of its age.

The two-room factory of the first Carl Bechstein is now the honoured core of a vast establishment consisting of five miles of workshops and a timber-yard of over six acres, wherein is stacked for seasoning enough wood to make twenty-five thousand pianofortes. This staggering growth on the material side, however, is of interest mainly to business men. Musicians care only for the fact that as a guarantee of artistic excellence the name of Bechstein to-day stands at least as high as ever it did.

The Musical Times desires to add its congratulations to those now being received by Messrs. Bechstein.

---

The Bach Cantata Club has arranged for December 4, at 8.15, an event of unusual interest: the performance of the B minor Mass at St. Margaret's, Westminster, by a chorus of thirty and a small orchestra—forces approximating to those of Bach's day. The soloists will be Caroline Hatchard, Margaret Balfour, John Adams, and Arthur Cranmer. Mr. Kennedy Scott will conduct. Tickets (5*s*. 9*d*.) may be had of the Club Secretary, at Amen House, Warwick Square, E.C.4.

---

We have received several letters—one from a well-known Cathedral organist—condemning strongly the tune sung at the Armistice services to the hymn 'O valiant hearts.' We are reluctant to strike any contentious note in connection with the Armistice Day celebrations, so we refrain from publishing the very outspoken letters. But the question should be faced, we think, so we are bound to say that the tune customarily sung is weak and bad. (To avoid the risk of confusion we add that the tune referred to is by the Rev. C. Harris, D.D.) As the metre of the hymn—10.10.10.10—is not uncommon, good familiar tunes for it may easily be found. We therefore suggest to clergy and organists that they should select a worthy alternative tune in good time for next year's celebrations. It is typical of the casual English way of managing such things that no authoritative body or person seems to have seen the necessity of choosing a tune fit for use on a great national occasion, or (better still) of asking an outstanding English composer to write one.

---

The many friends and ex-pupils of the late Sir Herbert Brewer, and musicians generally, will be glad to hear that a fund is being raised for the provision of a window in his memory to be erected in the Musicians' Chapel of Gloucester Cathedral. Any surplus will be devoted to some charitable object connected with music. Donations should be sent to the Hon. Treasurer, Mr. A. A. G. Jones, Eldon Chambers, Berkeley Street, Gloucester.

---

The committee of the Mendelssohn Scholarships Foundation, which for many years has been handicapped for want of funds, is now able, as the result of recent benefactions, to offer a scholarship for composition at the rate of £200 a year, open to musical students of either sex under the age of thirty.

Though the regulations provide that the education of the scholars shall be carried on 'in this country or abroad,' the Mendelssohn Scholarship was always regarded prior to the outbreak of war in 1914 as a travelling scholarship, and the scholars were sent abroad to the chief musical centres of Europe armed with letters of introduction to leading musicians.

This practice has recently been revived, and the present scholar, Mr. Godfrey Sampson, returned only in August last from a tour during which he visited Paris, Brussels, Munich, Rome, Florence, Vienna, Frankfort, and Dresden.

The first Mendelssohn Scholar, elected in July, 1856, was a lad of fourteen named Arthur Seymour Sullivan. Among his successors have been Frederick Corder, Maud Valerie White, Eugène d'Albert, and in more recent times Dr. George Dyson. The present committee includes Sir Hugh Allen, Mr. Arnold Bax, Sir Frederic Cowen, Sir Edward German, Dr. McEwen, Sir Alexander Mackenzie, Sir Landon Ronald, and Dr. Vaughan Williams.

The hon. secretary is Mr. J. F. R. Stainer, The Old Rectory, Ashtead, Surrey.

From Musical America :

GUESS WHO THIS IS

'From the N.Y. Evening World, October 10.

'"Flecked with sleet and bent was that once dark and upflung head. The proudly noble face had broken into a mask of sad and unearthly sweetness. The shoulders stooped wearily; almost eclipsed was the light of joyous strength which formerly shone from his presence. . . . The cavalryman of old was transfigured into a saint. Never before was the mouth of his art touched with so hallowed a flame of gentleness, resignation, and piety. . . . No discourse of Francis d'Assisi was more lowly and wistful."

'Our own translation: "Fritz Krelsler gave a recital the other night. He played well."'

Simple terms no longer satisfy some folk. We have just read a substantial paragraph concerning a prima donna and her teacher. But is the latter described as a mere teacher of singing? He is not. He is a 'vocal adviser' and 'vocal diagnostician.'

New Music

TWO PIANOFORTES

Pianoforte duettists have been grateful to Bax for 'Moy Mell,' and will look with interest at his two new works in this genre—'The devil that tempted St. Anthony' and 'The poisoned fountain' (published by Murdoch). There is plenty here to occupy players, both technically and from the point of view of interpretation, and there is reward at the end of it all, for the pieces have real imaginative power and a sure knowledge of pianoforte effect. The first is a study on the growth and tyranny of an idea. The little four-note figure that dominates the work is heard at first softly and insinuatingly, then little by little it becomes more and more insistent and pestering. Musically the work is very powerful; and a consideration of its rise and fall, the attacks and momentary withdrawals of the temptation, will show it to be also true. Scriabin did the same sort of thing in 'Vers la flamme,' but Bax's essay is in some ways more vivid.

There is strong suggestive power, again, in 'The poisoned fountain.' The sinister effect of the deep opening second-pianoforte chords, the deceptive clearness of the cantabile melody, and the subsequent expansion of these ideas—all contribute to an unmistakable and striking effect. Some passages sound rather facile and may not wear well, but the work hangs together and never hesitates. It is difficult for both players: those whose ensemble is shaky may welcome it in spite of that, as the first pianoforte plays for a good deal of the time 'quite independently of the beat in the second piano part.' T. A.

SONGS

Even reviewers have their feelings. They are often supposed to be acid, disappointed, insensitive, and venomous 'licensed tasters' (as Thomas Hardy calls them), seeking whom they may belittle; but even reviewers get depressed. When two or three batches of music have brought them little to admire and nothing to like they begin to feel unhappy. 'Am I getting blasé,' they ask themselves. 'Why do I get no pleasure from all this well-meant effort? Why am I blind to what publishers' readers can see?' The answer is, of course, that it is stupid to expect more than a very little that is good. Many writers of one beautiful poem wrote nothing else in a lifetime but the dull and uninspired: hundreds of bad symphonies (and good ones) had to be written to make ready for Beethoven; and 'rarely, rarely comest thou, Spirit of delight.'

Then suddenly one opens a new parcel and finds some work that dispels the gloom. It is good to know that where there is the spark one is still able to recognise it. I have been grateful to Miss Elizabeth Poston before, and I am grateful again. And her touch which was always firm and sensitive seems now, at its best, even surer. There is a real vein of poetry in this music; one feels it in all the songs that have just been issued by Winthrop Rogers; sometimes it speaks more clearly than at other times, but it is always there. In one or two cases the composer's texture is a little too rich for her melody line, as in 'Be still, my sweet sweeting,' which is over-full in sound. A good melody is surely 'like a rich stone, best plain set,' and it is the simple adequacy of the accompaniment of 'Ardan Mor' that makes this such a beautiful song. 'Call for the robin redbreast,' on the other hand, with Webster's fine and sinister words, seems to want an elaborate and richly-worked accompaniment, and here Miss Poston strikes just the right note to begin with. Whether she quite matches the great effect of the last verse is more doubtful, but it is a good song. 'In youth is pleasure' well treats one aspect of the words, but misses the less obvious and equally essential other aspect. 'Whimsically,' certainly; but what about 'and when I waked it was not so'? There is a possibility here that the composer has not wished to tackle, and some will feel that the lost opportunity detracts from the song. One pays these songs the compliment of consideration as finished works; that is to say, they begin where most song-writers leave off. There are points of view, and preferences of personal taste, but all the works have distinction of style and outlook.

From the same publishers are six settings of poems from the Chinese, by Katharine Parker. Here there is not so much distinction of handling or insight, and the music is much more ordinary. But it has its picturesque touches, and the composer writes in a business-like way, never descending to the frankly commonplace, and always presenting her neat little ideas in a lucid and compact way. Most attractive, probably, is 'I wait my Lord,' with its unusual three-line structure.

Augeners send four jolly little works of Arne's, reprinted under Adam Carse's editorship from 'The Masque of Alfred.' Arne inherited some of Purcell's melodic gift, and had something very definite of his own to add. There is real expressive power in 'Come, calm content,' with its steady and competent handling of the modulations on pp. 3 and 4. And the broad tune of 'The Shepherd' is a typically English thing in spite of the slightly Handelian turns in the vocal line. 'Though storms awhile' is reminiscent of 'The Beggar's Opera,' but in the middle section looks far ahead almost to the later Haydn manner. 'See, Liberty,' a somewhat naïve work in the 'Rule, Britannia' style of sentiment, is saved by its vigorous and musicianly phrasing. Altogether a very good reprint, warmly to be recommended to those responsible for competition music. The compass in each case is mezzo-soprano.

Mabel Browning Fairlie's 'Arise, shine, for thy Light is come,' is better than most sacred songs. One of the chief qualifications for the writer of sacred songs seems to be a lack of sense of humour; it is impossible to feel thrilled by this very tame handling of the passage about 'the great light.' It's all been done once for all, by a towering genius, and from his vision the words cannot now be separated. B. Burrows writes a steady, competent, but uninspired setting of Synge's 'The Oaks of Glencree.' He is seen to better advantage in a far more imaginative treatment of 'I am Raftery.' Augeners publish all three songs.

The Oxford University Press sends a very sensitive setting by Ralph Greaves of Belloc's 'Lady, when your lovely head.' It is a beautiful poem, with an almost magical ending:

> 'Sleep your fill:—But when you wake,
> Dawn shall over Lethe break,' and the composer does not lose the sense of tenderness and fragility. The song is very fresh; the music moves 'by a kind of felicity (as a musician that maketh an excellent air in music), and not by rule.' Dennis Arundell's 'Leave me, O Love,' does not seem to me successful. The vocal line is flowing, and well-matched to the words, but the harmonic basis of the song sounds too self-conscious and theoretic. Here, the opposite of Ralph Greaves's work, one can follow the unconvincing logic of a clever mind, and it has a chill, forbidding effect. Dennis Arundell also issues through this Press a good edition of Linley's charming 'Orpheus with his lute.' But there is one serious blemish. The editor perpetuates that old error of a comma after 'in sweet music is such art.' This is how the worst singers sing it, but the sense of the words forbids it: editors of the poem have long ago corrected it, and composers (as Vaughan Williams in his late setting) have set it rightly. One expects better than that of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge when they unite to re-issue with all the éclat of this edition some well-known song. 'Shew 's the way to Wallington' (also Oxford University Press) is an arrangement by Dr. Whittaker of a Northumbrian and very racy folk-song.

A simple and unassuming light song is 'There are fairies in the garden,' by Netta Forbes-Smith (Cramer); and settings of 'Music, when soft voices die,' 'The Rosebud,' and 'Ode on Solitude,' by Ivy Frances Klein, come from Murdoch. The last song, with its pastoral feeling and moving rhythm, is probably the best. The same publishers issue G. T. Francis's 'Garden of Paradise,' a thoroughly commonplace affair, in both words and music. Three unaffected and sincere songs, very obviously written by amateurs, are T. J. Clark's 'Love of friends' and 'The king of love' (Goodwin & Tabb), and Florence Miller's 'Magic Memory' (Arthur Guthrie). Schirmers send Sidney Homer's 'powerfully written' three songs from Masefield's 'The Widow in the Bye Street.' It is effective music. The two authors are both crudely emotional, and each seems to emphasise the worst features of the other's work.

T. A.

---

VIOLIN

Five Easy Duets by Paul Zilcher (Augener) are characteristic of the work done by pedagogues with a taste for composition. They are not only easy but very easy, and their object is obviously to make young violinists familiar with the elements of ensemble playing. This purpose they fulfil, and students should find enjoyment as well as profit in the performance. Henry Farmer's second book of 'Celebrated Violin Solos' (Joseph Williams) consists of arrangements of a type no longer fashionable—the type of Bériot's 'Airs with Variations.' Some of the themes, however, such as 'Auld Robin Gray,' 'Ye Banks and Braes,' and 'Charlie is my darling,' must outlast fashions; and after a gathering where not necessarily the celebrated are celebrating, these tunes (and the variations) may be welcome. 'An Ebb-Tide Rêverie,' by Donald Ford (Murdoch), is not bad music of its kind; it suffers, however, from imperfect realisation of the resources of the violin. The range is that of the human voice, not of the instrument; and this means that the most effective strings of the violin, G and E, are not given a chance. It is, in fact, possible to play the whole piece without touching them, and without going higher than the third position. The only possible explanation of this shortcoming would be a desire to keep the violin part within reach of the beginner. But this is negatived by the last bar, which sends the violinist to the high harmonic G on the G string.

Messrs. G. Schirmer, of New York, have added a volume on 'The Art of Expression' to their admirable 'Scholastic Series.' The purpose of this work is wholly praiseworthy, but the labours of the author, A. H. Weisberg, become nugatory because of the curious ideas he appears to entertain on the subject of interpretation. For instance, he asserts that if the second subject of a movement in sonata form contrasts with a first cantabile subject, it should be played 'somewhat faster.' 'Passage work' also must be played 'somewhat faster than the basic tempo.' The development section may be played somewhat faster, 'especially when the themes are worked out' and the final passages and codas are played, he asserts, either faster (if the music is of a brilliant nature) or slower (in elegiac movements). There is something to be said for all this tug-of-war with tempi, but the composer alone can dictate the tempi; individual cases invariably demand individual attention, and without this caveat Mr. Weisberg's ruling can only be a fruitful source of error. Can anything be more misleading than this: 'Long, sustained notes in the course of a phrase are usually played crescendo, but final long notes are played diminuendo'? What is the use of the advice: 'Wide skips should be played distinctly'?

ORCHESTRA

Frank Bridge's 'There is a willow grows aslant a brook' (Augener) is perhaps a short work for so long a title, but admirable in conception and workmanship. The subdivision of the parts well deserves the student's careful consideration; they are balanced to a nicety, and the effect should be very striking. A likely acceptable piece of music is Giovanni Grazioli's 'Minuetto,' arranged for strings with optional flute, bassoon, and timpani by Michele Esposito (Oxford University Press). The Minuet is a charming composition and the arrangement of the 'optional' score, an able piece of work, though not wholly free from perhaps inevitable blemishes. In the sixth bar, for instance, the melody is suddenly doubled at a distance of two octaves, so that it stands above the harmony, and, in the lowest octave, also between the harmony and the bass.

'CELLO

The Oxford University Press has laid us under a debt of gratitude with its publication of Peter Hellendaal's 'Solo for the violoncello' in a new arrangement by Willem Pijper. The very skilful treatment of the editor has given Hellendaal's music an interest which is but too often lacking, especially in the arrangements of old 'cello music. Sir Alexander Mackenzie's 'Valse Humoresque' and 'Andante Espressivo' (Augener) do not need commendation other than the name of their composer, which stands for clarity of thought and sound technique. They should prove very useful for competition purposes.

CHAMBER MUSIC

Eric H. Thiman's 'Folk-Song Suite' (Augener) hardly attains the distinction of style one expects in the string quartet—the most aristocratic form of music. On the other hand a string orchestra would find these simple, flowing numbers pleasing and effective. Serge Tanéïèv's Trio in D major (E. W. Organ) has now been published by the 'Elite' Edition, which has secured the rights after paying a substantial sum to the State Music Department of Soviet Russia. The new edition is wholly commendable; the pianoforte part has been fingered and edited by G. Groschwitz, the violin by Henri Marteau, and the 'cello by A. Kinkulkin. These gentlemen are experts, and so conscientious that not a passage—no matter how easy or obvious—has escaped their attentions.

F. B.

CHURCH MUSIC

Some new numbers of the Church Music Review come from the H. W. Gray Company (Novello). Leo Sowerby's setting in B flat of 'Benedictus es Domine' is an effective work, broad and dignified in style, and not difficult. It is for the usual four voices, all of which occasionally divide, and the excellent organ-part is fully set out on three staves. Hugh A. Mackinnon has provided a setting of 'This endness night I saw a sight,' which admirably fits these old words. The carol is for S.A.T.B. unaccompanied, and though not difficult, needs a good choir. Philip Gordon has adapted music by J. S. Bach for his setting of 'Benediction' ('The Lord bless thee and keep thee'). It is for S.A.T.B. unaccompanied, and is quite simple and straightforward. For his setting of 'Jesu, Word of God Incarnate,' Walter Williams has arranged an old Italian chorale. Some of the numerous dotted notes which occur in the tune might with advantage have been accompanied by a different rhythm in the other voices. On p. 2, 'were torn' should be, 'was torn.' Palestrina's 'O Holy Jesus' ('O Bone Jesu') has been arranged for S.S.A.A. unaccompanied, by E. Harold Geer. Both Latin and English words are given. The Rev. W. Boyd's popular tune 'Pentecost,' to 'Fight the good fight,' is now issued separately by Novello in the key of G, and with an effective, yet simple, descant. The music appears in both notations.

From H. W. Deane come three new numbers of the Year Book Press Series of Anthems and Church Music, edited by Martin Akerman. Hubert Middleton's Motet,' Let my prayer be set forth,' is an expressive and musicianly little work for double choir (S.A.T.B.) unaccompanied. It is an admirable example of diatonic writing, in which, by the way, the second choir strictly imitates the first throughout at a bar's distance. Four bars from the end there appears to be an error in the bass of the instrumental score. Alfred Allen is responsible for both words and music of 'Hymn for Commemoration.' The music is well written and singable, and provision is made for both unison and harmonized verses. E. T. Chapman's setting of the Old English prayer 'God be in my head' is simple and devotional. It is for S.A.T.B. unaccompanied.

Several new works of considerable interest come from the Oxford University Press. Choirs looking for a good unison setting of the Communion Service should examine Healey Willan's 'Missa de Sancta Maria Magdalena.' It is tuneful and straightforward, the upward compass is limited to D, and there is an excellent, and not too difficult, organ part. The setting is complete, including both forms of Kyrie, and Benedictus and Agnus Dei. Arthur S. Warrell's setting in C of the Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis is intended for choir and congregation. It is well planned to secure variety and contrast. A fair amount is for unison singing, but opportunities are provided for simple four-part work, and occasional verses are for choir alone (optional unaccompanied quartet). Another work in which the congregation may take a share is Alan Gray's congregational hymn-anthem 'Jerusalem on High.' Dr. Gray has written a good, dignified tune, and treated it skilfully and effectively. Needless to say, the organ-part is full of interest. For use at Christmas, Alec Rowley's 'Man, be merry,' and a carol-anthem, 'Before Dawn,' by H. K. Andrews, may be recommended. The first is a brightly-written work in 6-8 time which gives scope for variety of treatment. 'Before Dawn' is an expressive setting for small choir of words by Walter de la Mare. It needs delicate handling. Both these works are for unaccompanied S.A.T.B., and a good choir is essential. Gordon Slater's short anthem, 'For life, with all it yields,' is a thoughtful and musicianly setting of words from Robert Browning's 'A Death in the Desert.' It is modern in style, and calls for expressive treatment, but is not really difficult.

Alec Rowley has made an effective setting for chorus and organ of Aidan Clarke's 'Praise.' It is easy and straightforward, and would suit choirs of quite modest resources. Somewhat off the beaten track are 'Two Choral Hymns' by Norman Cocker: No. 1 (A. & M., 318), 'Bread of Heaven'; No. 2 (A. & M., 279), 'O help us, Lord.' The composer has developed from these well-known tunes two interesting and effective little anthems of only moderate difficulty. They are issued separately. C. Hylton Stewart has edited 'Rejoice in the Lord,' by Pelham Humphreys (1647-74). It is for A.T.T.B., except for the last section (S.A.T.B.), and consists of brief choruses separated by solos (tenor and bass). New numbers of the Oxford Choral Songs from the Old Masters have been arranged and edited by W. G. Whittaker. 'Praise to the Highest' ('Lobe den Herren') is the Chorale from Church Cantata No. 137. This number was arranged by Bach for the organ, and appeared about 1746 as No. 6 of the 'Schübler Chorale Preludes.' The Chorale, 'Lord Christ above,' is from Church Cantata No. 166, and the aria, 'Love, ye faithful,' from Cantata No. 76. In all these the English text is by C. Sanford Terry (from 'Bach's Cantata Texts, Sacred and Secular,' Constable). The aria, 'Et exultavit' ('My soul rejoices'), is the second number of the (Latin) Magnificat. For this, score and parts for string orchestra and continuo may be hired. The duet (for two sopranos), 'Et misericordia' ('And His mercy'), is No. 6 in the same work. In all these arrangements the voice-part appears in both notations.

From the Faith Press come the Communion Service in the Dorian mode by Tallis (c. 1515-85), edited by Ernest Bullock, and two useful works by Charles F. Waters—'Missa Sancti Philippi' (unison setting in D, in free time, and suitable for congregational singing) and Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis in the Dorian mode for unison singing with occasional descant (ad lib.). For those needing simple music Dr. Waters's settings may be cordially recommended. The edition of Tallis has been made from Boyce's collection of Cathedral Music and from Barnard. The music has been transposed up a tone, the crotchet unit beat has been substituted for the minim, and the barring has been varied according to the flow of the words. An organ-part has been added for use at rehearsal, and in an Appendix a Ninefold Kyrie, Benedictus, and Agnus Dei have been adapted and written in the style of Tallis by the editor, who has drawn on various other works by Tallis for the necessary material.

The hymn, 'Come, Thou Holy Spirit, come,' with music by Palestrina, issues from the S.P.C.K. (and Oxford University Press) as No. 24 of Church Music Society Reprints. The music is for four voices, and is quite easy except for the last verse, which is written for double chorus. A simple alternative form for this verse is, however, given. The same publishers send also an attractive and well-written carol or Christmas anthem, 'Love came down at Christmas,' words by Christina Rossetti, and music by Charles T. Powell. It is in 5-4 time, and is intended for unaccompanied singing. Schubert's 'The Great Hallelujah' has been arranged for mixed voices with organ or orchestra by Rutland Boughton, who is also responsible for the English version of Klopstock's text. The music is of a straightforward, singable character, well within the powers of the average choir (Joseph Williams). A setting of the Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis in D, by T. A. Bevis (Weekes), has nothing particularly fresh to say, but the broad, simple writing for both voices and organ should sound effective. 'Ave Maria' has been set for two voices (soprano and contralto) and organ by E. J. Allain-Lenoir (Paris, Alphonse Leduc). Smooth, melodious, and devotional in style, this duet would make an acceptable item at an organ recital. The text is in Latin.

G. G.

---

The ancient carol is inevitably sharing in the revival of plainchant and folk-song. 'The Oxford Book of Carols,' just published (Oxford University Press), may be regarded as the carol equivalent of the 'English Hymnal.' It contains over two hundred numbers. The editors are Percy Dearmer, Ralph Vaughan Williams, and Martin Shaw. There is an admirable preface of twenty-two pages, full of lore attractively set forth; and foot-notes in abundance tell us all that we are likely to want to know about the words and tune of each carol. The arrangements are mainly by Vaughan Williams and Martin Shaw, plus some by Geoffrey Shaw. These names guarantee excellence, but they also involve some monotony. An increase in the number of arrangers would certainly have achieved variety, with very little risk of falling-off in quality. But this suggestion is no derogation of a very fine and delightful collection. Three editions are to be had—complete (6*s.*), words complete (4*s.* 6*d.*), and cheap edition without music or foot-notes (1*s.* 6*d.*, or paper, 1*s.*). H. G.

---

CHORAL MUSIC: MIXED-VOICES

Felix White's 'The Blossom of Bethlehem' is a carol with rich harmony, needing real basses, not merely baritones, to support it. The lines flow sweetly, and the strength of the music's build must be found also in the singers. The organ may accompany, but the piece is best sung unaccompanied.

It is good to find so high a standard in the batch of carols to hand this month. We need no more of the etiolated hymn-tunes that still are too often sung at Christmas. Strange that in the past, though there were plenty of good carol poems, so few of them were set in the spirit that drew from us, remembering our literary traditions of the season, a joyous cry of 'There 's richness for you!' Carol composers now often go further back for their poems, and deeper for their inspiration. Here is Peter Warlock again, with 'Bethlehem Down,' modern words this time, set for (if possible) unaccompanied singing, in a slow, thoughtful, quiet style. With but a touch of imagination a spirit of beauty can be evoked here. Alec Rowley has made a 'Nautical Fantasy' entitled 'By the deep: Nine' for mixed voices, bringing in a number of old tunes, pleasantly put together. This would make an acceptable light item in a concert programme. The score costs 2*s.* 6*d.* The accompaniment is helpfully arranged, from the orchestral score, either for pianoforte solo or, if two pianofortes are available, for four hands. The vocal score, of course, contains only the single pianoforte accompaniment (Rogers).

Two new S.A.T.B. settings by Boughton are interesting. 'The Tiger' (Blake) is a bold attempt to find music for a little marvel of word-setting. There is device and subtlety in the effort. Will it be found to come off all the way? I wonder. Try it, and see! 'Sunset' seeks colour, to match its subject, and finds a good deal. Much depends on the singers. This is a song to emphasise the idea of partnership between composer and interpreters. There is no other technical difficulty than this of the concentration on timbre and tone (Williams).

The last Warlock carol of the batch is 'I saw a fair maiden' (S.A.T.T.B.), to a mediæval poem. It combines simplicity and fineness of thought in the happy manner of its composer. Steuart Wilson has edited and adapted Bach's cantata No. 207 as a work 'In Praise of Bach.' It was originally written in honour of a professor of Leipsic University; then the text was re-drafted to suit the birthday of the King of Saxony. It is a bright idea to give it yet another turn and make it honour J. S. B. himself. The soloists required are soprano (or tenor) and contralto (or bass). There is some brilliant note-spinning and hearty rejoicing—a jug of steaming punch, you may say, to cap a jolly celebration. The work is scored for strings and pianoforte by Gordon Jacob, and the pianoforte arrangement is by Harold Davidson (Oxford University Press).

In 'The Count of Como, or A Bandit's Bride,' we have the latest comic opera by W. H. Bullock, whose 'Dogs of Devon' and 'Highwayman Love' are already known to amateurs. R. F. Bell and Harold Ellis have written the book and lyrics, which, with the music, present 'the mixture as before.' The way in which writers of comic opera contrive to put together their amusing productions is admirable, and far more difficult than it looks. There are here nine singing characters, and five others who do not sing, besides eight 'flower girls' and 'lady assistants,' and the usual chorus of male and female peasants, bandits, Pomeranian Hussars, and heaven knows what odds and ends that the all-embracing arm of comic opera in Oblivia gathers in (Curwen, 7*s.* 6*d.*). W. R. A.

MALE-VOICE

S. E. Lovatt's choral ballad 'The Saga of Bal-der the Beautiful' is a setting for T.T.BAR. BAR.B.B. of Longfellow's well-known poem. The contrapuntal interest in the six-part writing is not always strong. It takes a Parry to throw the parts about with the ease of a Cinquevalli. The idiom will be appreciated most by men's choirs brought up on the solid joys of the last century. The music might have been just as effective in four parts, and would have had a larger audience. The majority of choirs that can tackle six-part stuff want something bigger and deeper (Williams).

Dr. Whittaker has arranged a robbers' quartet from one of Schubert's many unfinished works—the opera 'Die Bürgschaft,' which he wrote at eighteen. This T.T.B.B. piece is a natty bit of glorious melodrama, worth the attention of choirs that like to show their fat fortissimos and purling pianissimos. The same arranger has 'freely set' for T.B.B. the folk-tune 'There was a maid went to the mill.' This is full of interest. Choirs with few tenors and tip-toe keenness in rhythmic pointing should enjoy it exceedingly (Oxford University Press). W. R. A.

PART-SONGS FOR CHILDREN'S AND FEMALE VOICES

The two Purcell pieces edited by Dr. Whittaker which were mentioned in the list of unison songs are the 'Spirits Scene' (two-part) and 'Come, follow me' (three-part—S.S.S.). The first needs staccato singing, and has some light runs to negotiate with rhythmic fluency and poise. The other is a straightforward, flowing six-four. This is charming music altogether. One other Purcell piece is the 'Fairies' Chorus,' arranged by Dr. Whittaker for S.S., from a trio published in 'Orpheus Britannicus,' Playford's collection—the first—of Purcell's music. There is some pretty answering of one voice to the other, and a piquant sprightliness. Felix White sets C. Rossetti's 'I know a baby' for S.M.-S. This, flowing quietly, with rich, mellow tone, will delight all hearers. The same composer, in 'The Red-breast' (S.S.), gets contrapuntal interest without fussiness, and draws a free vocal line that suggests the bird's grace (Oxford University Press).

Alec Rowley's 'The Fortune Ballot' is a musical play for girls, with book and lyrics by Rodney Bennett. This is a light entertainment which will be appreciated by players and singers of unsophisticated tastes—and quite as much by any school-concert audience. It can be performed indoors or out, with little expense. There are five characters, with two-part chorus (Rogers, 2*s.* 6*d.*). W. R. A.

UNISON

Alec Rowley writes a happy jingle in 'Camping,' one of the set of 'Vocational Songs for Boys.' It goes in a brisk rhythm of dotted-quaver-semi-quaver. The same composer's 'Blessing Song' gives good practice in stepping fairly wide intervals smoothly, and building up rich tone in broad phrasing. Peter Warlock sets an ancient poem as a carol, 'What cheer? Good cheer!' It swings upliftingly—a capital roof-raiser (Rogers: Hawkes).

Dr. Whittaker's musicianly, imaginative ingenuity has made out of Schubert's song 'Violet' ('Viola') a short unison cantata for female voices. The music mirrors the sensitive beauty of the words of Schober, and is never difficult for keen listeners to sing. The full edition costs 1*s.* 3*d.*, the voice-part edition 6*d.* A new Purcell arrangement is also made by Dr. Whittaker—'But while the nymph,' from 'The Rival Sisters.' This warning against the falseness of a fair one suits grown-up singers. Another Warlock in happy, swinging style is the carol, 'Where riches is everlastingly' —an easy six-four. Two original compositions by Dr. Whittaker are the boldly subtle 'Ring out, ye crystal spheres,' fitted for massed singing (after some careful architectural work by the conductor), and 'Michael's Song' (words by W. W. Gibson). This needs fine exhilaration and delicacy of spirit, and a pianist with a neat finger for light runs. Both songs have real quality and freshness.

One more arrangement is to hand—'Let not a moonbeam elf,' from Purcell's 'King Arthur.' This daintily tripping short piece can be used, with the two pieces mentioned above under 'Part-Songs for Children's and Female Voices,' as a continuous scene for female voices. H. E. Piggott's 'Come, my Way, my Truth, my Life' is a sturdy, cleanly-built piece, that can be used in church or Sunday School. Felix White again sets Carlyle—'From the mountains to the champaign.' The detail is well thought out, and the mood, though perhaps a little finicking for Tammas's thought, will please singers who can give the music the right flexible impetus (Oxford University Press).

The school edition of Martin Shaw's 'Nature Song' book contains the melody and words only of nearly fifty songs, chosen from poems of C. Rossetti, Wordsworth, Tennyson, and others. A good many of these have extremely happy musical treatments. This edition costs 6*d*. The vocal score is 4*s*. (Cramer).

Felix White's 'Dolly Town' is a neatly-turned ditty for small kiddies. The words matter little. In drawing the vocal line much may be learnt and enjoyed (Stainer & Bell). W. R. A.

The Musician's Bookshelf

'Giacomo Puccini: Epistolario. Raccolto e ordinato da Giuseppe Adami.'

[Milano: Mondadori, L. 40.]

Puccini was not a great letter-writer, but this book is all the same of much interest. The correspondence between the composer, his librettists, and his publishers will be a revelation to most readers in England, where opera is so little considered, and where composers of operas have so rarely any sense or knowledge of the stage.

A great many of the letters are addressed to Giulio Ricordi. What a publisher! He was far more than a mere business-man; he was part-author of a good many of the works that were issued by his firm. Publishing was, for him, not merely a matter of receiving (or rejecting) completed compositions. He kept incessant watch on the progress of an opera as it was being written. He was the critic, a constructive critic, of both librettists and composers. And with his tact and authority he was an invaluable go-between when relations were strained. Ricordi was, in fact, Puccini's collaborator.

Puccini's name is, of course, associated with nothing but opera. After reading his letters we see clearly enough that if the operatic field had not existed, he would not have been a musician at all. Without the incitement of stage action no music came into his head. He acknowledged the fact in a whimsical letter:

> 'The Almighty touched me with His finger and said, "Thou shalt write for the theatre, and —now pay heed—only for the theatre." And I have followed the supreme injunction. If Providence had designed me for some other line of action, perhaps I should not have been in the position I now am of having no raw material to work on.'

To secure an adequate libretto was always the difficulty. Puccini did not profess to have literary ability, and he never attempted to write his own texts. But he was indefatigable and relentless in extracting what he wanted from his harassed authors. He felt rather than knew what he wanted. His genius lay in his being never tired of rejecting until he was satisfied at the very bottom of his heart.

Those who have no love at all for Puccini's music cannot but feel respect, a new respect, after reading these letters; and if any thought that the success of 'Bohème' and 'Tosca' was due merely to a lucky shot the book will open their eyes. Two verbs, 'sentire' and 'commuovere,' always recur when Puccini is expounding his æsthetic to publisher or librettist. He himself must feel, or he cannot work; and his work must always be directed towards moving his audience.

There are few readers who will not be surprised to learn how great was Puccini's share in the shaping of his librettos. There would be more successful operas by the great composers (Beethoven, Weber, Schubert, Schumann) if they had had a measure of Puccini's gift for guiding his collaborators. Once the plot and the situations were right he had no difficulty with the music. It appears from the correspondence that dramatic invention was always the crux.

Puccini proposed the subject of 'Manon Lescaut' to Marco Praga, a playwright. Praga wrote a scenario, which—after thorough discussion—Domenico Oliva versified. But the composer's endless demands for alterations wore both these authors down, and another couple (Illica and Giacosa) had to be brought in before Puccini was suited. His tone is, in these proceedings, always reasonable. He does not hector; he pleads with pathos. But he is of an iron determination.

This is how he rejects a subject proposed by Ricordi (whom he esteems to the point of revering):

> '. . . what I am saying will, I know well, displease you; but how can I take up a work that I do not utterly feel?'

Thirty years after composing 'Manon Lescaut' he returns to it in a letter to a later librettist, Adami:

> 'In the aria in the fourth Act there is much repetition of three or four words (sola, perduta, &c.). What I want in place of these repetitions are other felt words. You could do it in five minutes.'

It is not too much to say that every would-be opera composer might learn something from the accounts given in these letters of Puccini's choice and rejections of subjects and scenes. His poetic ideals were, no doubt, not high, but such intensity as his must earn respect.

The last Act of 'Tosca' was to have begun with a 'Latin Hymn' in which the painter Cavaradossi passed in review the artistic history of Italy and his own aspirations. Puccini rejected it as too formal and unreal. We know what the effect on a million listeners has been of Cavaradossi's 'e muoio disperato.' Concerning the same Act he laments to Ricordi:

> 'The duet has all along been the difficulty. The authors [Illica and Giacosa] have not been able to let me have anything useful, above all anything true. Always academic stuff, and the hackneyed amorous messes.'

Puccini's admirers will be interested in the details given here of the opera 'La Rondine,' which was produced at Monte Carlo in 1917, but has never been given in England. In the chapter on Puccini's numerous unachieved projects we learn that he contemplated setting 'Pelléas et Mélisande,' until Maeterlinck told him that Debussy had it in hand.

Later on we get his impression of Debussy's opera—one of the few remarks on a contemporary's music in the book:

> 'Debussy's "Pelléas" has extraordinary qualities of harmony and diaphanous instrumental sensations. It is truly interesting in spite of its sombre colour, as uniform as a Franciscan's dress.'

He was not convinced by Strauss's 'Salomé,' but he did not censure.

Puccini the man comes out well. Though he enjoyed success he faced rebuffs and hostility with coolness—and there was much bitter hostility to face, a good deal of it arising from sheer base envy. The worst rebuff was the howling down of 'Madame Butterfly' at Milan in 1904. For all his passion for the stage, Puccini was not a townsman. His happiest times were spent shooting woodcock in the desolate Maremma. The final letters have a painful interest. We see the composer positively battling for time to finish 'Turandot.' He was beaten—by cancer—on the last lap.

C.

---

'Foundations of English Opera.' By Edward J. Dent.

[Cambridge University Press, 12*s.* 6*d.*]

Prof. Dent's book is a 'study of musical drama in England in the 17th century,' and is full of authentic information. It is very useful to have within the covers of one volume the plots and plans, and, in several cases, lengthy quotations from the music, of the most important works in that century's history of musical drama, such as Lawes's and Shirley's 'Triumph of Peace' and 'Cupid and Death,' Locke's and Shirley's 'Psyche,' Blow's 'Venus and Adonis,' and Dryden's and Grabus's 'Albion and Albanius.' The author has made it his aim to keep the triple point of view of librettist, composer, and producer in criticising the successive attempts to create an opera conformable to 'what may be called the operatic principle,' and not to allow a work to be dismissed as insignificant unless it fails to satisfy the demands of all three inquisitors. Thus, although none of the music to them has survived, he discusses at length d'Avenant's 'Siege of Rhodes' and other plays, because of the merits of their librettos; he takes pains to show that insufficient appreciation of the dramatic possibilities of Blow's 'Venus and Adonis' has allowed it to be underestimated and neglected. In fact, every manifestation of effort on the part of English people in the 17th century to produce a real, proper opera is given due consideration, and the survey ends with the regrettable death of Purcell before he managed to write what could have been called (we suppose) an English Grand Opera.

Prof. Dent, being convinced that there is such a thing as English opera, and that only the unequalled misfortune of Purcell's surroundings accounts for the latter's failure to 'become the greatest operatic composer of his time in Europe,' cannot see that, with Purcell, English opera was not only dead but had never had, and would never have, any existence. He says that 'there was just a moment's hope that Handel might have built up an English opera on Purcell's foundations' had not 'the prejudices of the Bishop of London' unfortunately forbidden the public performance of his 'Esther'; but Dr. Ernest Walker* is nearer the mark when he points out that opera is an Italian exotic to which English people turned as a superior foreign novelty whose chief attraction and essential feature was that it should not be English.

Mr. Dent, like W. S. Rockstro, thinks that English opera developed as the legitimate offspring of the Masque, yet his whole book is a record of the inability of English poets and composers, of the intractability of the English language, and of the incorrigibility of the English people with regard to 'the operatic principle.' 'The majority of the public no doubt wanted plays, and not operas,' he writes when dealing with the 'genuine but short-lived operatic movement' of the middle of the century, and he notes a disinclination towards 'a continuous frame of music' in relation to Purcell's latest work. He describes d'Avenant's devices for catching the public taste with foreign fashions during the changes of Charles I.'s reign, the Protectorate, and the Restoration, as 'the only period at which serious opera in England, set to music all through . . . has ever enjoyed a real and supreme popularity with English audiences.' He gives a deeply informing analysis of Dryden's struggles to do violence to his poetic conscience, and calls the combined effort of this poet and a French composer to force the genius of the English language into a suit of operatics, 'this monument of stupidity.' Quite so; but what would Mr. Dent have us learn from this 'example of the way in which attempts have been made, and are still made occasionally, to achieve English opera at one blow'? It would seem that English opera has not yet been achieved, and that we have always gone the wrong way to work to achieve it. 'Shakespeare,' he tells us, 'however practised and effective in his stage-craft, was not adventurous in the application of music to drama.' That, no doubt, was what was wrong with the Elizabethans: they ought to have got that operatic principle working before the Florentine Contemporary Music Centre started. But our 17th-century people were apparently too much inclined to go for a national opera bald-headed, save for Purcell, whom Mr. Dent finds wasting his time writing plays with Masques, which 'to the idea of opera are absurd and useless excrescences.'

---

* 'A History of Music in England.'

It all seems very regrettable and naughty, unless we take a view in which these transgressions of Purcell's can be reckoned to him for righteousness. He had his own battles with the great Dryden over operatic English, and although he could never have expressed himself on the 'disruptive force' of the English language in such beautiful words as does our Cambridge Professor, yet it is conceivable that his failure to write that hypothetical 'immortal masterpiece of English opera' which he ought to have written was due to intention and not to 'unfortunate surroundings.' He was the supreme genius of English music, and his genius, like the public taste, turned again and again to the English ideal of 'plays liberally interspersed with music.' He was closer than we are to that century which was the golden age both of our music and of Shakespeare, and he and his public probably detected, and healthily shrank from, the corpse-like odour of those works which Prof. Dent in the gruesome simile of his final paragraph invites students to dissect. Opera, of course, must be studied, but we should prefer to encourage our composers to feel that England's mission is not to make music and poetry shackle each other by submitting to the arbitrary 'operatic principle,' but, rather, still to give expression to thought by means of the finest language on the face of the globe, and to free music—which is a language for the intuition transcending thought—from the tyranny of words.

K. E. E.

---

'A Musician at Large.' By Harvey Grace. ('Feste' of the Musical Times.)

[Oxford University Press, 6*s*.]

Here is a book that needs no introduction to readers of this journal. Except that 'Feste' might have found a title more worthy of the vein of amiable humour that runs through his random essays, it presents itself as an old friend returning to an assured welcome. Some of the subjects with which he deals thus playfully really need the attention of a more vitriolic pen than his, but then the reading would be far less enjoyable, for nobody who has settled down for a quiet smoke and read is at all inclined to be grateful for being invited to get into a paddy. A well-remembered essay is that on 'Brows, High and Low,' with its pilloried samples of the meretricious muck that too often passes for popular music. At the same time, if 'Feste' had carried his argument a little further, it would have led him to apportion the blame somewhat differently. His text is a quotation from Chesterton which, after we have substituted 'music' for 'literature,' reads thus: 'The public does not like bad music. The public likes a certain kind of music, and likes that kind of music even when it is bad better than another kind of music even when it is good.' Well, the obvious thing was to supply the public with good music of the kind that it liked. That is what a mere Mozart or Schubert would have done. But, roughly speaking, from the early days of the Romantic Movement it became—Heaven knows why—infra dig. for a composer of solid attainments to serve the public. Look at the silly things that were said when Sullivan elected to do so! It is a form of priggishness that hails from Germany, where the worst charge you can bring against a composer is still that of writing Kitsch. Now, if the people who could do a job well desert it and leave the field open to the incompetent and the charlatan, it is not logical to throw all the blame on the latter for making the most of the opportunity.

Another favourite essay is 'Music and Tears,' wherein 'Feste' confesses to four occasions during his—how many?—years of musical activity when he found himself in that form of embarrassment which a man discreetly masks by blowing his nose. 'Has anybody ever seen a critic beguiled of a tear during the execution of his duty?' is the question that paves the way for the confession. To keep 'Feste' company the critic who pens these lines will confess to one analogous incident. It occurred long ago, at Paris, during the fifth Act of 'Pelléas et Mélisande,' when that poignantly simple music was new to him.

There is a charming, confidential informality about these stray papers. Their mixture of plain 'horse' sense, honest musicianship, and not too subtle humour is one that can be recommended, to be taken in frequent doses. Whether the subject be 'Hearing with the Eye,' 'Short Cuts and Royal Roads,' 'Cliché and Commonplace,' or a more serious contribution to the literature on Beethoven, there is nearly always something that lingers pleasantly upon the mental palate.

E. E.

---

'Ninety-nine per cent.: How success at Musical Competitive Festivals is Won.' By J. Frederic Staton.

[Curwen, 4*s*. 6*d*.]

This is about as comprehensive a little book as festivalites can desire. It covers all the ground save elocution or folk-dancing, or such lesser musical classes as composition or musical dictation. There are first-rate chapters for the pianist, the solo-singer, the string-player (for this chapter Dr. Staton has called in help from a string specialist—Mr. Charles Woodhouse), and the choral trainer and conductor. Each chapter ends with an exhaustive list of useful books and other material. There are plenty of music-type illustrations. Conductors will welcome the clear directions and diagrams as to beating time. Such questions as diction and interpretation for solo singers are fully discussed. All the advice is practical, and couched in simple direct language. Although designed for festival competitors there are few music teachers who would not benefit from a study of the chapter dealing with their special subject. Altogether a capital handbook. Its title, 'Ninety-nine per cent.,' has an application beyond that intended by the author, for it may truly be said that ninety-nine per cent. of competitors will learn much from it, the remaining one per cent. being he—occasionally she—who is in the hopeless state of already knowing everything.

H. G.

---

BOOKS RECEIVED

[Mention in this list neither implies nor precludes review in a future issue.]

'L'élément flamand dans Beethoven.' By Ernest Closson. Pp. 216. Brussels: Imprimerie Veuve Monnom.

'Appreciation of Music.' By F. Howes. Pp. 90. Workers' Educational Association Outlines. Longmans Green, 2*s.* cloth; 1*s.* paper.

Nelson's Music Practice. Senior Teacher's Book. Pp. 88. Thomas Nelson, 2*s.* 9*d.*

'On Conducting School Orchestras.' By Adam Carse. Pp. 16. Augener, 1*s.*

'A Survey of Contemporary Music.' By Cecil Gray. Second edition. Pp. 266. Oxford University Press, 7*s.* 6*d.*

'A Musical Pilgrimage in Yorkshire.' By J. Sutcliffe Smith. Pp. 340. Leeds: Richard Jackson.

'The Poets and Music.' By Edward W. Naylor. Pp. 180. J. M. Dent, 6*s.*

---

In last month's list of books received the price of the 'Proceedings of the Musical Association' was given as 2*s.*—an obvious slip. The price is 21*s.*

Teachers' Department

(Continued from the 'Musical Times' for November, page 1018)

HIGHER DIVISION.—LIST C

No. 39. Bertini. Study in C, Op. 29, No. 24.—A capital study as a gateway to the keyboard aspect of Bach. It is, of course, not in the Bach idiom, but its insistence upon independence between the hands and upon the need to listen to the whole texture is salutary in the extreme. In addition to these things, the study affords good discipline in hand rotation. Take, for example, the right-hand passage in the first two bars; for there you have a perfect exercise in the lateral and rotatory adjustments. The average tempo may be minim 60, but some latitude may be allowed on account of the general difficulty.

No. 40. Beethoven. First movement of Sonata, Op. 49, No. 1.—Crotchet 56 to 60 is the almost universally recognised speed. The cantabile style prevails throughout, and this may be regarded as the outstanding feature of the whole. The following points should be observed: (a) Bars 14 and 15. A very general rendering of these turns starts the first two on the beat and the third before the beat, i.e., virtually in the previous bar. In my own 'Studies in Musical Graces' I have given the rendering of the first two, but not of the third. (b) The responsive section of the second subject (bars 21-29) requires a tone-wave in each case, but with no exaggeration. (c) The thought comprised within bars 5 to 13 after the double-bar should be played in half-light with a slight messa di voce before the cadence. (d) Bars 21 to 30, counting from the double-bar. A gradual awakening in anticipation of the return to the first thought. The tone need not be big, though a crescendo is permissible towards the end, but some energy must be aroused. (e) The slightest of commas before the return. (f) Great attention to the theme when, like a singing 'cello, it appears in the left hand, the right-hand part retiring, but, in view of its interest, to no great extent. (g) Generally speaking, the movement requires Mozart-like pedalling. Beware of thickening the delicate texture by an inordinate use of the pedal.

No. 41. Olive Pull. 'Mirth.'—A charming piece which, it seems to me, requires a higher speed than the one I suggest—crotchet 108. Still, the composer asks for a moderate tempo, and we must obey. A difficulty arises from the idiom, which is as striking as it is original; but a mastery of this idiom will greatly help in the quest of keyboard-knowledge, that is, acquaintance with the structure of the keyboard from the digital point of view. How often do young players fail in compassing a piece as simple as this, merely because they do not know their keyboard!

No. 42. Kjerulf. 'Frühlingslied,' Op. 28, No. 5.—A Spring Song ought to be fresh, genial, and inspiring. Being a song, it must be sung; hence the need throughout for the cantabile spirit. Much depends upon the use made of the pedal. It can easily thicken the arpeggios until they become commonplace masses of tone, destructive of the lyric side of the music. Certainly, I would not retain it as marked in the first two bars. It is, of course, a matter for experiment with the instrument one happens to be using. Again, in the episode, it will be best as far as possible to retain the melodic sounds with the hand, so as to leave the foot free to pedal without necessarily holding on the whole of the material of each half-bar. Here, also, experiment alone will show the best way. Tempo, about crotchet 63.

INTERMEDIATE GRADE.—LIST A

No. 43. Cramer. Study in E minor.—An important study, in view of modern technique. Note, however, that the right hand gets the better chance, which is another way of saying that it has the major part of the difficulty. How much more useful would the study have been if, for instance, the left-hand passage from bar 5 had been reversed in movement. On the other hand, there is a compensation. Bars 9 to 12 are undeniably more difficult for the right hand. Persevere, then, until that hand can play the figures with the same freedom as the left. The acciaccature in bar 5 onwards must be sharply played, the notes almost, but not quite, coming together like the old early 18th-century type. The tempo to aim at should be dotted minim 69; if surpassed, so much the better, provided freedom be not sacrificed.

No. 44. J. S. Bach. Prelude in E major, No. 9 of the '48.'—An old-world yet ever new charm pervades music like this. Note how it continues in uniform movement, broken only by the exhilarating semiquaver phrase. Yet, at the same time, note that this movement, though insistent, is really sporadic in its effect upon the mind. It starts in an upper part; presently it passes to a lower; at other times two parts collaborate in carrying it on. This is the feature which Bach delights in, at least when he is not engaged in the pursuit of a fugal subject; and this is the feature which must seize the imagination of the player who wishes to reproduce the thought of Bach. Every moving part must have its chance, but this can be only when the parts as a whole have been mentally grasped. This is music for the armchair as well as for the keyboard. The tempo may be about dotted crotchet 88.

No. 45. Paradies. Toccata in A, from sixth Sonata.—Pietro Domenico Paradisi spent many years of his life in London, where he was much in request as a teacher. It is therefore of interest to surmise that this well-known piece was written here. On paper, it has the look of a movement in the old binary form, but, since there is a direct return to the first theme in the original key, it is evident that the work falls within the range of the three-part forms. The texture is interesting throughout; in fact, it still makes a very effective keyboard piece. The average tempo may be crotchet 100, but latitude in either direction may be advisable. The direction Molto legato can hardly be original—nor is it possible altogether to approve it; moreover, the phrase-marks, as applied to the semiquavers, just mean nothing at all!

No. 46. Chopin. Nocturne in F minor, Op. 55, No. 1.—Chopin's Nocturnes are not works to sentimentalise over. They are strong, virile creations, often of deep thought, and always grateful to the musically self-reliant and strong. Let the pace of this one be about crotchet 76; then there will be no room to languish over phrases, to separate the hands on main accents, or to do the hundred-and-one melodramatic absurdities which place first-rate music at the mercy of third-rate interpretations. Observe the marked difference between the two sections of the first thought. The first (bars 1 to 8) is quiet and restful; the second (bars 16 to 24) is warm, generous, impelling to the highest sound, whence it declines to meet the returning first phrase. There are several tonic cadences in the first part; avoid sameness in their treatment. On the whole, be restrained at the più mosso. Keep speed in reserve for the working up to the big climax. In the Coda, although the original tune is not in the text, it should be in the mind, dominating the delicate decoration as it passes along to the end.

No. 47. Frank Bridge. 'Heart's Ease.'—This may be described as a vignette in the form of music. It will probably need long acquaintance to seize its undeniable charm. The main body of the thought may move about quaver 44—at least that is how I picture it to myself. The sylph-like interludes will necessarily be somewhat faster. The sentimentalism referred to in No. 46 must not be allowed to ruin the rhythm of the phrases. At the cadences the rhythm halts, as it were; somewhat after the manner of a German chorale where time is allowed for the interposition of matter extra to the prevailing strains. Here the intervening matter consists of the interludes which are played dreamily, with impersonal and far-away tone.

INTERMEDIATE GRADE.—LIST B

No. 48. Czerny. Study in G, Op. 299, No. 18.—Two points only call for direct remark. Firstly, the fingering should be taken throughout and with no exceptions, the difficulty of fingering aright being one of the salutary features of the study. Secondly, the speed should depend wholly upon facility of fingering and muscular freedom. Crotchet 66 may be taken as the first aim, the tempo to be increased with the advent of greater power and confidence.

No. 49. Mendelssohn. Andante in E minor, Op. 7, No. 1.—Strangely reminiscent of the effect of a string quartet. Indeed, it will very greatly assist the player to keep this aspect of the music in his mind; it will enable him to perceive the need for giving each part its chance in the outlay of the whole. Take, for example, bar 10. Here the second violin is silent, but the first violin introduces an effective figure, presently to pass to the second violin (bars 13 and 14), then to the viola (bar 15). Thus thinking, the player will not forget the 'cello and the importance of its part. Strictly speaking, no one who has not touched the subject of part-playing should attempt this piece; on the other hand, it may prove an introduction to the subject. This is entirely a matter for the individual teacher. Tempo, about quaver 63.

No. 50. Beethoven. Bagatelle in A, Op. 33, No. 4.—It is worth while to scan this carefully before studying it in detail. The construction is square—indeed, solidly so. Think of the first section (bars 1 to 16) as of a quatrain with eight syllables in each verse (line), the first, second, and fourth verses (lines) being similar, the third alone different. This is hardly conceivable in poetry, but in music all things of the kind are possible. Then, pass at once to the third section; there, the first thirty-two bars will be found a replica of the first section, which, with repeats, also contains thirty-two. This leaves the middle section for consideration. In many good editions this also is phrased in four-bar groups, with a half-group at the end. I prefer, however, the narrower phrasing as given here. It suits the little chattering groups and, what is more to the point, makes an effective contrast of thought with the longer phrases of the first section. After having succeeded in outlining the tune in the first section, turn at once to the last and, amidst the simple decoration, make the tune equally clear and convincing. Tempo, about quaver 92.

No. 51. Harold Samuel. 'The Finished Task.'—The thought in the composer's mind may have been similar to what I feel was in Couperin's when he wrote 'La Diligente,' the difference, apart from idiom and texture, being that Couperin was evidently delineating the execution of the task, whereas Mr. Samuel comes in at the finish. Like all the pieces of the Suite from which it is taken, this is most attractive. A word of warning is due to the fingering. Ease and the giocoso spirit depend upon exactness in that respect. The pedal requires to be used with great discrimination, and never so as to block the clearness of the semiquaver movement. Perhaps crotchet 84 suggests a convenient speed, but some latitude must be allowed in a piece which demands so much personality of conception.

No. 52. Grieg. Canon, Op. 38, No. 8.—Perhaps the cleverness of this piece is hidden by its undoubted felicity of expression. The canonic side is so managed that every imitation of a figure adds to the emotional atmosphere of the whole. The parts which form the canon should at first be practised alone, the harmony being added only when the progression of the canonic parts is mentally clear to the student. The pedalling is a problem; frankly, it cannot be indicated. One point may, however, be mentioned—the low F in bar 11 should be held in sound as long as possible, and this should be done by half-damping, possibly at the places marked. It is not easy to suggest an average speed. Crotchet 60-72 is perhaps convenient, but may be difficult to those who lack the experience to combine the intellectual and emotional in the way here demanded. The tempo of the episode may be easily determined by comparison with that of the first section.

(Continued on page 1112)

To my friend The Rev. HARCOURT B. S. FOWLER, Elmley Castle, Worcestershire

I sing the Birth

CAROL

(AN HYMN ON THE NATIVITY OF MY SAVIOUR)

Words by Ben Jonson
(with Alleluias added)

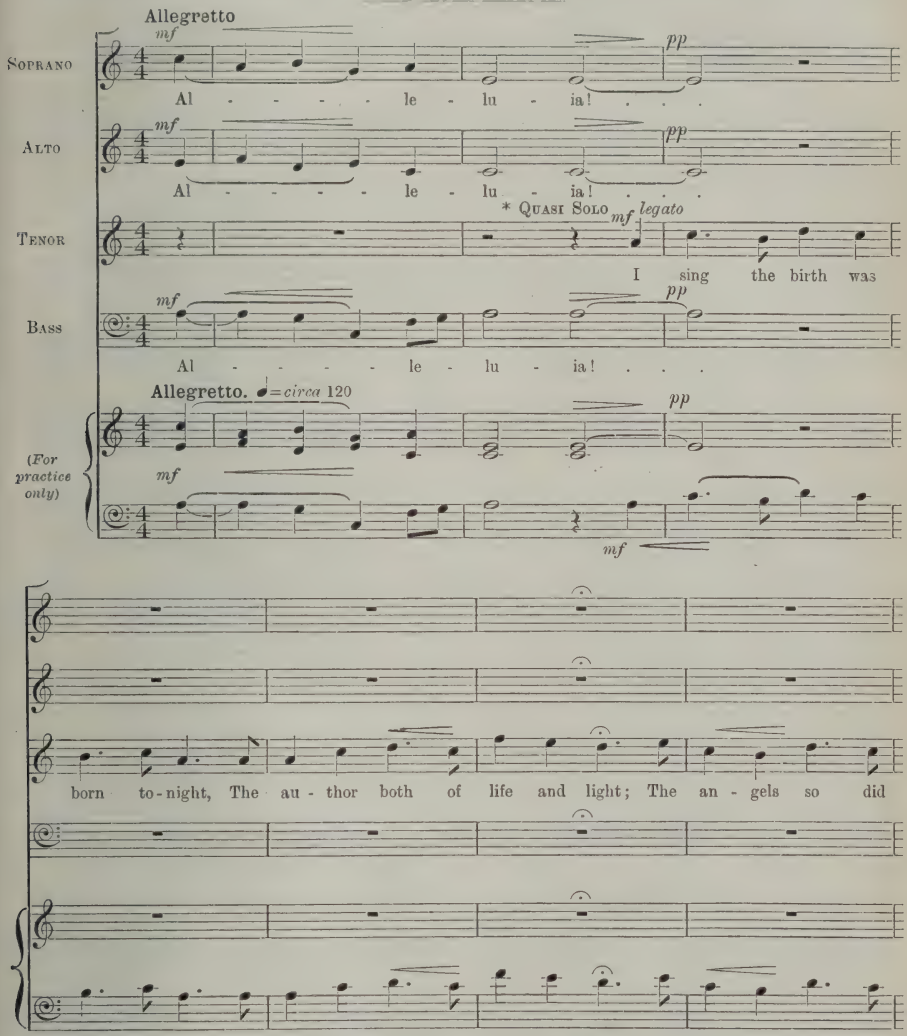
Music by Edward Elgar

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited; New York: THE H. W. GRAY CO., Sole Agents for the U.S.A.



Allegretto
mf
pp
Soprano
Al - - - - - le - lu - ia! . . .
Alto
Al - - - - - le - lu - ia! . . .
* Quasi Solo
mf legato
Tenor
I sing the birth was
Bass
Al - - - - - le - lu - ia! . . .
Allegretto. ♩=circa 120
(For practice only)
born to-night, The au - thor both of life and light; The an - gels so did

* These passages should be sung in a very free manner, without any rigid adherence to tempo. They may be taken by Solo voices if desired.

Copyright, 1928, by Novello and Company, Limited

a tempo
Al - - - - - le - lu - ia!
Quasi Solo
Al - - - - - le - lu - ia! And like the rav - ish'd sound it.
Al - - - - - le - lu - ia!
a tempo
rit.
shep - herds said, Who saw the light, and were a - fraid, Yet search'd, and true they rit.
a tempo
Al - - - - - le - lu - ia!
found it.
Al - - - - - le - lu - ia!
Quasi Solo
Al - - - - - le - lu - ia! The Son of God, Th' E - a tempo

allargando
- ter - nal King, That did us all sal - va - tion bring, And freed the soul from allargando
a tempo
Al - - - - le - lu - ia! He Whom the whole world
Al - - - - le - lu - ia! He Whom the whole world
A - - - - le - lu - ia! He Whom the whole world dan - ger; . . . He Whom the whole world
a tempo
dim.
could not take, The Word, which heav'n and earth did make, Was now laid in a
could not take, The Word, which heav'n and earth did make, Was now laid in a
could not take, The Word, which heav'n and earth did make, Was now laid in a could not take, The Word, which heav'n and earth did make, Was now laid in a dim.

rit.
dim.
p pp
man - ger. Al - - - - - le - lu - ia, Al - le - lu - ia!
man - ger. Al - - - - - le - lu - ia, Al - le - lu - ia!
man - ger. Al - - - - - le - lu - ia, Al - le - lu - ia!
man - ger. Al - - - - - le - lu - ia, Al - le - lu - ia!
a tempo
mf pp
Al - - - - - le - lu - ia!
Quasi Solo
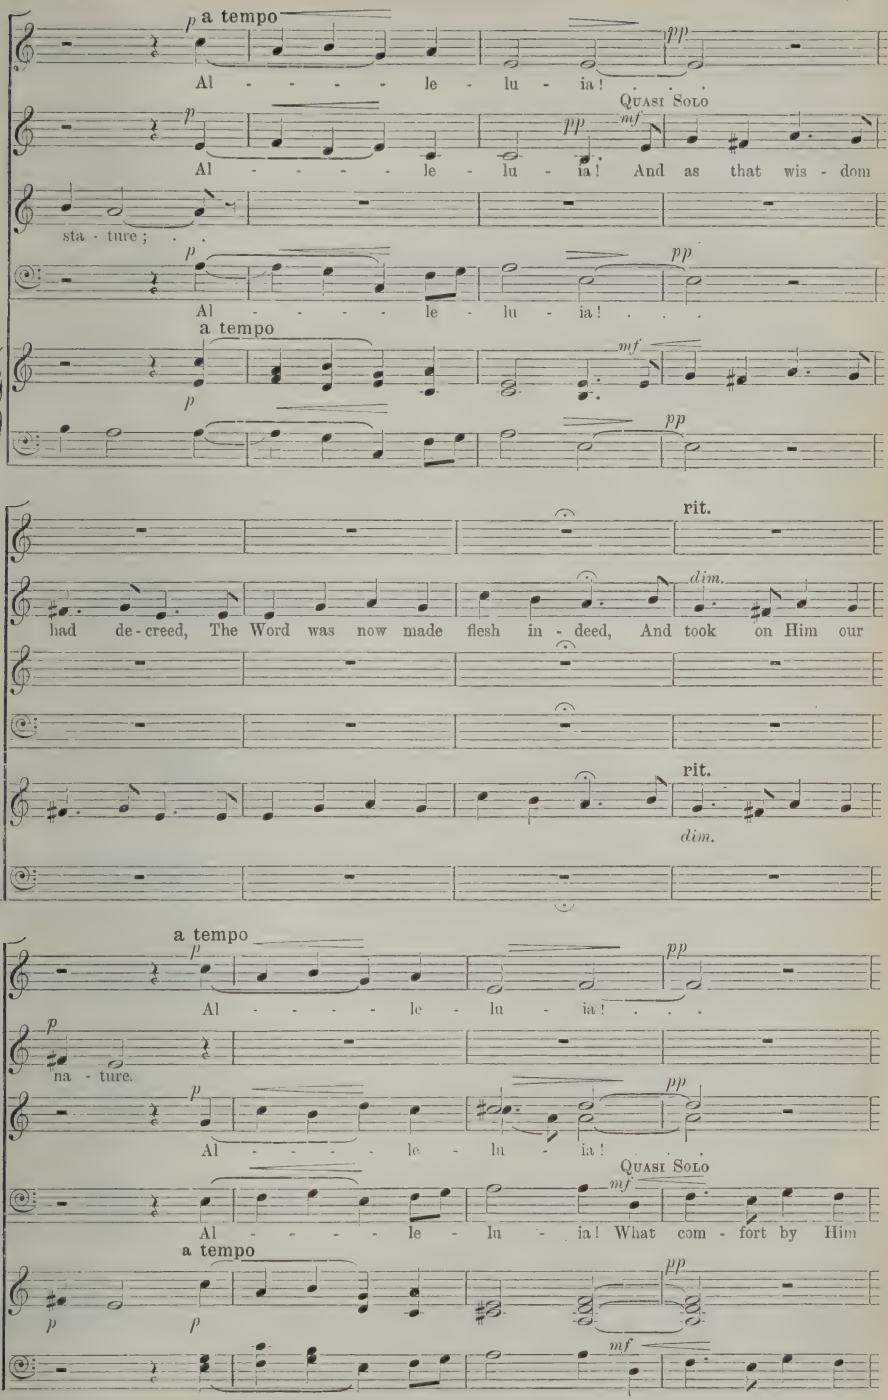
The Fa - ther's wis - dom will'd it so, The Son's o - be - dience knew no No, Both wills were in one



a tempo
Al - - - - - le - lu - ia!
Quasi Solo
Al - - - - - le - lu - ia! And as that wis - dom sta - ture;
Al - - - - - le - lu - ia!
a tempo
rit.
had de - creed, The Word was now made flesh in - deed, And took on Him our rit.
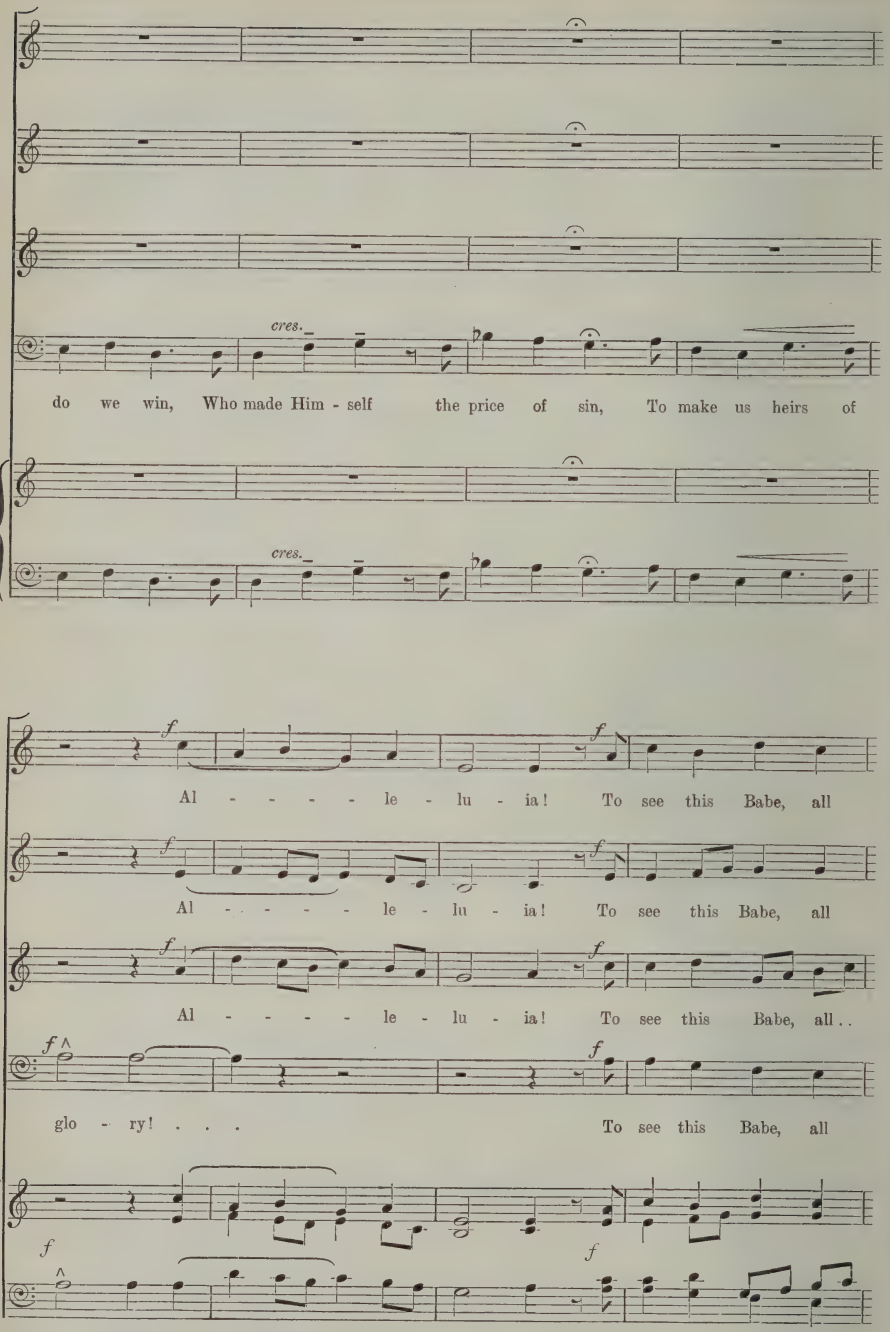
a tempo
Al - - - - - le - lu - ia!
na - ture.
Al - - - - - le - lu - ia!
Quasi Solo
Al - - - - - le - lu - ia! What com - fort by Him
a tempo



cres.
do we win, Who made Him - self the price of sin, To make us heirs of cres.
f
Al - - - - le - lu - ia! To see this Babe, all
f
Al - - - - le - lu - ia! To see this Babe, all
f
Al - - - - le - lu - ia! To see this Babe, all . .
f glo - ry! . . . To see this Babe, all
f
f poco allargando

dim.
in - no - cence, A mar - tyr born in our de-fence; Can man for-get this in - no - cence, A mar - tyr born in our . . de-fence; Can man for-get this in - no - cence, A mar - tyr born . . in our . . de-fence; Can man for-get this in - no - cence, A mar - tyr born . . in our . . de-fence; Can man for-get this più lento
pp
rit.
sto - ry? Al - - - - le - lu - ia, Al - le - lu - ia!
sto - ry? Al - - - - le - lu - ia, Al - le - lu - ia!
sto - ry? Al - - - - le - lu - ia, Al - le - lu - ia!
sto - ry? Al - - - - le - lu - ia, Al - le - lu - ia!

(Continued from page 1104.)

INTERMEDIATE GRADE.—LIST C

No. 53. J. S. Bach. Prelude in F minor, No. 12 of the '48,' Book 2.—One of the master's calm, dignified preparations for the coming of a fugue. This is in pure binary (cf. No. 45), the first part ending in the key of the mediant major. Let the music tell its own story. Light and shade there must be; slight, almost unpremeditated touches of rhythmic freedom; but no attempt to 'improve' the music by individual tricks of interpretation. Liken the initial figure which occurs so frequently throughout to an amphibrach; a word such as im-per-il will convey the idea. Problems of part-playing occur here and there, as in bars 20 to 28. For tempo, crotchet 76 will be sufficient.

No. 54. Mozart. Finale from Sonata in E flat.—An abbreviated version of sonata form. It will be profitable to examine the tonal construction. Compare, in that respect, the exposition with the recapitulation, and note where they differ. The exposition is curiously reminiscent of D. Scarlatti, not in material, but in the arrangement of the material. It is formed by a succession of short thoughts, and clear interpretation depends upon perception of the position of these thoughts and of their inter-relationships. The whole passage should be rhythmically bound together, and not presented in rhythmic patches. Generally regarded, the pedal should be reserved for the brilliant spots, and not allowed to mar the liquidities of the text. Tempo, about crotchet 100.

No. 55. Mayer. 'Grâce,' Op. 149, No. 5.—A reminder of our school-days in music, when we were familiar, more or less, with flowing arpeggios of a quasi-sentimental nature. Still, Mayer did his best; and, indeed, when we recall the times when he worked, we are obliged to confess that his best was often artistically good. The study will be valuable to those people who invariably put down the pedal when they see an arpeggio. Modern pianofortes have so much more sustaining power than those of Mayer's day that he would be aghast to hear this played with full harmonic pedalling. Except in climactic moments, let the pedal be reserved for sustaining the bass of the harmony. It must be used frequently, but rarely sustained for whole bars as indicated. Half-damping is, of course, the secret. For tempo, take about dotted crotchet 58.

No. 56. Harold E. Scott. 'Song of the Seal-Woman.'—Celtic tunes have an undeniable fascination; moreover, in skilful hands they are susceptible of harmony which not only preserves but adds to their charm of isolation and detachment. Before venturing upon this piece, the student should become acquainted with some of the tunes made available in recent years by Hebridean enthusiasts. The local colour of this example is perfect. For the 'lilting rhythm' I suggest crotchet 60, but it is, of course, open to question. It is as I feel it myself. The middle section demands care in interpretation. At first, two forces seem to be in antiphonal rivalry. The string-like tune which appears between the chordal phrases seems to suggest an atmosphere far-off, plaintive and weird. Further, it is clear that the middle section is perfectly free in rhythm; this is, in fact, its greatest asset, seeing that it is the quality which makes the return ('as at first') to a strict rhythmic outline so welcome. The whole should be played tenderly, and with a keen sense of tone-colour.

No. 57. Grieg. Humoreske in G sharp minor, Op. 6, No. 2.—The word energico explodes forthwith any real connection with the direction Tempo di Menuetto; the episode finishes any illusion about the matter. Yet, in truth, it is charming, and the early Grieg at his best. Outline the tune throughout, but not at the cost of the harmony or, in particular, of the bass. Think of the bass-part of the first four bars as of the pizzicato of 'cellos and basses; of the next four bars as of the same arco. The episode should be gay rather than 'energico.' Give great heed to the tone-values of the last page; the greatest possible tone followed by a veritable estinto, to use Liszt's term. Tempo, about crotchet 120, but this may be momentarily increased at the episode.

ADVANCED GRADE.—LIST A

No. 58. Loeschhorn. Study in E, Op. 136, No. 31.—My previous remarks with reference to preparation here need to be recalled. Many apparently agile students, but with no real muscular discrimination or control, are thrust into examination work as a part of their curriculum. Often, indeed, it is not the fault of the teacher, but of a 'system' in vogue. Let us suppose that we have such a case before us, one in which we have no casting vote one way or the other. What can be done? Look at the five numbers of this list. Nos. 1 and 2 require particularly free agility technique, No. 5 calls for resilient hand touch. Therefore, start with Nos. 3 and 4 and, for a time, supplant Nos. 1, 2, and 5 by preparation in the essentials of finger and hand agility. After a while, sufficient will have been done to ensure the practice of the three without muscular harm. Take for the tempo of this Study dotted crotchet 72 upwards.

No. 59. J. S. Bach. Two Bourrées from second 'English' Suite.—Two great dance-tunes! Nevertheless, they will lose much of their force if played l' istesso tempo as directed. It is usually conceded that the two movements represent two aspects of the Bourrée, the second being in marked contrast to the impetus of the first. I shall, of course, be confronted with the fatal l'istesso tempo and reminded that I am dealing with music for the examination-room and not with its interpretation on the concert platform. Well, then, the choice is to sacrifice speed in No. 1 in order to preserve the daintiness of No. 2; or, conversely, to infuse vigour into No. 1 and lose the rhythmic charm of No. 2. For this reason, and in particular in view of the examination conditions, I append two different tempi—all to the minim: No. 1—100, No. 2—100; No. 1—116, No. 2—92 (or even slower).

No. 60. Grieg. Saraband from 'Holberg' Suite, Op. 40, No. 2.—The most helpful thing to say of this superb piece is that it must be played in the spirit of the age to which it refers. (N.B.—Holberg, the Danish poet, covers the whole of Bach's life.) Those who heard Grieg play this movement will remember the infinite pathos with which he invested it. The tempo is slow, as befits a Saraband, perhaps about crotchet 54-58, and is chiefly gauged from the poco piu mosso. Let this be played about crotchet 63-66, and the main subject falls easily into the pace just given. The whole piece is an excellent subject for harmonic and melodic pedalling. The management of the climaxes pertaining to the respective phrases is highly important, and calls for much interpretative ability.

No. 61. Walter Niemann. 'Moonlight beneath the Palms,' Op. 76, No. 9.—From a collection of 'Impressions of the Far East.' This source explains the languorous and strangely exotic character of the music, which requires a dolce far niente attitude, the rhythm being just kept on its way without push or strain. This is, in fact, the danger. Inexperience will let the rhythm dawdle, and turn what should be mystic into sentimentality. The long-held sounds on the weak part of many bars will be a stumbling-block! Let the tempo of the first line be 76, of the body of the work 92, each to the quaver.

No. 62. Moussorgsky. 'Gopak.'—One of the most effective keyboard pieces by a man who was at once an idealist and a realist. The structure of the dance and, in particular, its commencement, probably prove its gipsy origin—the tuning-up, the growth towards a frenzied exaltation, and the final vanishing of energy. Appropriately to the nature of the dance, an even beat must be kept throughout, varied only in the larger rubato sense by the allargando. A difficulty will be experienced in the last section, where the tempo must be kept up through a perfectly contrived lowering of tone to the softest pianissimo. A convenient average pace is crotchet 100, but this may have to be slightly modified in individual cases.

ADVANCED GRADE.—LIST B

No. 63. Cramer. Study in G.—Full advantage may be taken of the qualifying moderato, and quaver 112 ought to be sufficient. Excessive speed would ruin the poetic side of the music, which can be best considered as a combination of melody (cantabile touch) and accompaniment (moderate agility touch). The latter requires the utmost smoothness of movement in progression, with a type of tone always responsive to the melody above. Viewed in this light, the Study is quite difficult; and its conquest cannot but be stimulating to the purely æsthetic side of the student's work. A word of warning with reference to the fingering: let that indicated be taken in every case and from the first.

No. 64. Beethoven. Last movement of Sonata, Op. 2, No. 1.—A very high speed is indicated in some authoritative editions. The average student must be content with minim 84. Great energy is the hall-mark of the movement, this being relaxed only during the episode. The following are points of importance: (a) The alternate pianos and fortes of the main theme. (b) Harmonic grip, especially in such a passage as bars 26-34. (c) Beautiful cantabile in the second theme (bar 34 onwards), with an undercurrent of energy lowered in tone but not in pace. (d) Careful and personal rubato in the episode. (e) Observance of the pianissimos (p. 9, bars 16, 20, and 24) which herald the return of the main thought.

No. 65. Leonardo Leo. Arietta in G minor.—Leo was a contemporary of Domenico Scarlatti. The fact affords a vantage ground from which to examine the music. There can be but little doubt that, in this piece, the influence of the Italian cembalo school is particularly clear. It is, in truth, the same influence which prompted that far greater keyboard composer, Scarlatti, to write on precisely similar lines. The movement is in simple binary form, and, within its small space, contains a wealth of material. The prevailing style is staccato, 'imitating a spinet.' The pedal should be practically limited to the places marked. Great care must be taken with the execution of the demisemiquaver phraselets. The whole must be both executively and mentally perspicacious. Tempo, quaver 76-84.

No. 66. Chopin. Waltz in A flat, Op. 64, No. 3.—As an art-form, the waltz—like many other dance-tunes in similar circumstances—is susceptible of a variety of interpretations as well as of tempi. In this case dotted minim 60 will be a suitable tempo. The notation of the music reveals possibilities of sameness, of monotony. This should be countered by a rhythmic freedom which, however, does not disrupt the omnipresent waltz-swing. The piece is a good example of Chopin's own dictum: Let your left hand be your conductor, do what you will with your right. The episode perhaps calls for a slightly relaxed beat. Note the dual melodic outlines occurring twice on p. 18; also the sequential-like climb to the climax just before the resumption of the main theme. The quickening of the movement towards the end demands some skill in the conjoint management of tone and tempo.

No. 67. Edouard Schütt. 'Sérénade d'Arléquin,' Op. 48, No. 2.—The musical value of this piece can hardly be estimated in the absence of its companions in the Suite. It is, of course, 'light' music; notwithstanding, it presents its subject musically and attractively. Two executive matters claim attention: Firstly, the difference in style between the cantabile features and the staccato effects; secondly, the presence of the cantabile element, practically throughout. The point of most importance is probably that concerned with the rhythm. The phrases demand the utmost freedom; against this is the need for presenting the quaver figures (first heard in bars 1 and 2) with neatness and clearness. Tempo, about dotted crotchet 66.

ADVANCED GRADE.—LIST C

No. 68. Clementi. Study in C, No. 12 of 'Gradus.'—A fine study for the purpose designed. In all preparatory practice, broken chords should also be played in unbroken form. Two phases of discipline are thereby obtained, and the consequent sense of chord-grip greatly stimulates the execution of the broken forms. I advise the stratagem in this Study. Tempo, from crotchet 100 onwards.

No. 69. Beethoven. First movement of Sonata, Op. 27, No. 2.—That is, the Sonata called by the vulgar, 'Moonlight'! In the first place, do not lose the meaning of the Italian direction at the head of the movement, and especially of the words senza sordini. No work of Beethoven's has been more maltreated than this, and it is unfortunately significant that the maltreatment has been equally evident in the case of players whose culture should have been sufficient to teach them not to patronise the great. The import of this movement is the creation of atmosphere, in which the player succeeds in proportion as he himself recedes in the mentality of the hearer. Consequently, the first condition of success is to bring to the task the virtue of veneration. The second condition may be described as the possession of extremely sensitive powers of cantabile; the third, as the capacity to use rubato in an all but perfectly concealed manner. The tone-signs in bars 16 and 18 appear to be misplaced, and should refer to the left-hand part alone. The same feature occurs later on in the movement. The pedalling is fairly indicated; although practically continuous, it must not be allowed to thicken the harmonic texture. With lights dimmed and pulses lowered, the semi-mystic music pursues its way from the mind of the great master. The tempo actually given, crotchet 56, could not be improved.

No. 70. Graun. Gigue in B flat minor.—It is valuable to observe the difference between, let us say, one of Bach's more characteristic Gigues and this one by Graun. In Bach's, harmony and counterpoint, the perpendicular and horizontal, will be found marching side by side. In this Gigue, counterpoint is very little more than a side-issue, the musical interest being virtually limited to the making of figures upon a harmonic basis. Here, then, the mind is freed from the stringencies of counterpoint, from the always pressing need to prepare for the entry of contrapuntal parts and subjects. The corollary follows that the music approximates to the decorative style reached at the latter part of the 18th century. This is, in fact, the interpretative key. Let the music be brilliant with plenty of provision for contrasts; that is to say, attend with care, even with a little exaggeration, to the tone-markings throughout. Tempo, from minim 76 upwards.

No. 71. Frank Bridge. 'The Spell.'—Quite apart from the mental image evoked, this piece possesses much purely musical charm—charm of idea and, in a particular sense, of harmony. A quiet cantabile style pervades the whole. Note the absence of climax in the larger sense—this being a necessary issue of the atmosphere depicted. The greatest care is needed with all marks of nuance, as, indeed, with the pedalling, the latter being of a very complex character. The words con pedale express the hopelessness of any adequate paper indication. Generally speaking, the pedalling is harmonic, but the melodic kind is very often needed; added to which must be skill in half-damping and, occasionally, in half-pedalling. In the latter connection observe the tie-signs, used in the bass at the end of bar 4 and elsewhere, signifying the continuance of the sounds into the following harmony or phrase. The average tempo would seem to be about crotchet 42.

No. 72. Déodat de Sévérac. 'Valse romantique,' in E flat.—In view of the idiom and period of the composer, curiously though interestingly diatonic. The music is, in fact, a subtle commentary upon the theory of the ultra-modernists that diatonicism, based upon the classic harmonic scales, is outworn. Although it looks back to diatonic idioms, the music is original and, within its slender limits, grateful to the cultured ear. The form in which it is cast is merely the older Rondo—yet another glance at the past. There is a danger of monotony in treating figures which recur with such remarkable persistency, but this can be avoided by varying the atmosphere and style of the episodal portion. An average tempo of dotted minim 66 suits the general movement, but agile players may experiment with higher speeds.

. . . . . .

It is evident that while the foregoing fugitive notes may contain material to stimulate research and provoke thought—this, indeed, being the one and only reason for their appearance—it is impossible that they can touch upon the many perplexing and usually purely technical points which so frequently harass students and teachers. Therefore it cannot be too widely known that questions upon such points, addressed to the Editor of the Musical Times, 160, Wardour Street, London, W.1, will be answered in the ensuing number. The name and address of the inquirer should, of course, be privately given, though a pen-name may be used to identify the answer. In certain cases a letter to the Editor, containing a stamped and addressed envelope, will convey the answer by post; this provision, however, should be used only when time is a matter of urgency. It goes almost without saying that a public reply to one reader may be of help to many others, and that comradeship is therefore the basic reason why the general rule should, whenever possible, be observed.

It is with regret that, owing to my lecture engagements in the United States during December and January, I have to announce the postponement of my usual recital-lectures upon the music of the Associated Board. As a rule, they take place at the Training School for Music Teachers during the first week of January. Miss Nellie Holland—the originator, by the way, of the lectures—will take my place, lecturing on January 3, 4, and 5. I advise every reader to attend lectures by so distinguished a teacher and lecturer. I hope, during the Easter recess, to follow in her steps. The dates are not yet settled, but can be obtained later on from the Secretary, 73, High Street, Marylebone, W.1.

It is with reluctance that I lay down my pen. If I have helped any teacher to view the music for an examination from a wide and healthy standpoint, I have already my reward. One thing only remains to be said. The musical examination is often confused with the test at a Music Competition Festival. The two are entirely diverse in scope and aim. The Festival test is an appraisement of performing values; the examination test, of educational development. Hence, the whole force of the latter depends upon the part it has played in the musical education of the student. It is not a matter of playing power alone, but of mental and spiritual growth. This thought is one to stimulate every teacher in the frequently discouraging atmosphere of the examination. It is also one with which my remarks may be suitable closed.

---

POINTS FROM LECTURES

The lecture season was only beginning when these notes were written. Elementary lectures are always the most numerous, and the tendency more and more is to amuse or instruct the general public, which is quite a good feature, but of little value to the musical reader.

Sir Landon Ronald, addressing the Manchester Luncheon Club, answered the pessimists who say that music in this country is dead. This wave of pessimism is to his mind absolutely unwarranted. He added, 'Too much importance is attached to the one or two people who get up and make remarks without thinking them out. If you repeat a thing sufficiently often it will eventually be accepted as a fact. I believe in the future of music, and in the present of music.'

Two Welsh advantages were pointed out by Sir Walford Davies recently in conversation with the writer: the existence of a permanent orchestra and the provision of free orchestral concerts. These privileges were also mentioned in an address at the Cardiff Business Club by Mr. E. T. Davies, director of music at Bangor University. Wales to-day needed public halls; he envied Cardiff its opportunities for listening to the National Orchestra and of hearing the finest examples of the great composers. North Wales and England were watching, and hoping to share in the scheme of providing permanent orchestras for the big centres of population. Civic and national pride was stirred because Cardiff had been chosen to lead.

A suggestion which was approved by the Archbishop of York was made by Sir Henry Hadow when he addressed the S.P.C.K. annual meeting at York. Right from the reign of Henry VII., he said, to the present day there had never been a dead period in our Church music, and he could not help wishing that one of these days York would take the opportunity, with its Minster, its organ, its organist and choir, of giving to this country a demonstration of the history of English Church music from the early days down to the present time. It would take two or three days, but it would really let England see, and not only England but Europe, once and for ever, what they had never seen—what a magnificent treasure house this country had got.

William Jackson, of Masham, has had his deserts recorded in a biography by Dr. J. Sutcliffe Smith, of Harrogate. Dr. Smith has also been instrumental in placing in Masham Town Hall a memorial of personal relics of this composer and conductor. At the opening ceremony of the memorial, Dr. Smith gave a lecture on the life and work of Jackson, who was spoken of as the 'miller musician.' Besides writing three oratorios and the better known prize glee, 'The Sisters of the Sea,' Jackson conducted the Bradford Harmonic Society and the Bradford Festival Choral Society. His Bradford singers sang at Buckingham Palace before the Queen and the Prince Consort.

'History and Criticism' was Prof. Percy C. Buck's subject of the first of the course of Alsop lectures at Liverpool University. In illustration of the point that young people have new ideas while the old are usually suspicious of change, Dr. Buck said a friend who had been engaged in excavations on the site of the ancient city of Ur of the Chaldees told him of the discovery of an inscription—possibly the oldest message the world possessed from the remotest past—which was translated, 'Here lie the bodies of —— and his wife, who gladly die because they cannot think what young people are coming to.' Every development in the art of music had been thought wrong—at first morally wrong, and later punishably wrong—but ultimately it had beaten its predecessor.

Mr. Frederick Woodhouse, conductor of a string orchestra, has been telling the Woolwich Co-operative Institute the story of 'The Place of Music in the Lives of the People.' It passed from a means of expressing emotions by sounds to the exclusive privilege of the educated; and then, the greatest fraud of all took place. Various cheap-jack publishers came into being and said, 'There 's a monopoly for music; so we'll turn out music and line our pockets.' To-day it remained the same. The publisher, who cared not a snap for music, sat in his office in Charing Cross Road and engaged a man to write some words, another to put them to music, and then a comedy star, who blew kisses to the gallery and made googly eyes to the ladies, to sing it. Then the newspapers announced it as the latest 'hit'—and everyone believed them! J. G.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

Questions must be of general musical interest. They must be stated simply and briefly, and if several are sent, each must be written on a separate slip. Our 'Answers to Correspondents' Column closes on the 14th of the month. We cannot undertake to reply by post.

Speedite asks for the metronomic indications of the following Associated Board lists. It is evident that he is a new reader, or he would have kept his copies of the Musical Times for November and December last, when the information for which he is now seeking first appeared. Intermediate Grade, List A: Scarlatti, crotchet 108; Bach, crotchet 56; Haydn, dotted minim, 56; Grieg, crotchet 84; Chopin, crotchet 132. Advanced Grade, List B: Clementi, crotchet 80; Couperin, dotted crotchet 50; Beethoven, quaver 76; Samuel, crotchet 72; Chopin, crotchet 76. Advanced Grade, List C: Grieg, crotchet 144; Bach, dotted crotchet 126; Schubert, crotchet 69; Chopin, crotchet 116; Swinstead, crotchet 116. An approximate tempo for the theme of the Brahms-Handel Variations is crotchet 60, but changes of speed are inevitable in the course of the Variations. E. F.

B. E. E.—You will find all you require in any of the following methods: J. P. Waud, Hegner, Michaelis, N. Hanse. If you are only a beginner, Francke's 'Anleitung' may be useful. The most complete method is Hanse's, which has many studies (notably Nos. 57, 75, and 76) meant to give speed to the fingers. But are you sure you are making the best use of the methods you already possess? Fingering should be learnt by heart and finally become a second nature, so that the figures over the notes need no longer hinder your speed. Remember that speed alone is useless. Accuracy is the first requirement: accuracy in rhythm, and above all, accuracy in intonation. F. B.

A. E. D.—You ask for about a dozen works for two pianofortes, for players of moderate ability. Try these: Chopin, Rondo for two pianofortes, Op. 73; Victor Staub, 'Sous bois,' Op. 6; Lack, 'Cabaletta,' Op. 83; Durand, Waltz No. 1, Op. 83; Godard, Waltz No. 2, Op. 56; Tchaikovsky, 'Sleeping Beauty' Waltz; Debussy, Arabesque, No. 1; Dennée, 'Danse Moderne,' Op. 9, No. 1; Hahn, 'Pour bercer un convalescent' (three pieces); Lemaire, Valse-Serenade, Op. 18; Saint-Saëns, 'Danse Macabre,' Op. 40; Ten Brink, Gavotte. All these can be obtained through Novello.

Composer.—(1.) We cannot identify the melody fragment; it has so little character that it might be anything, by anybody. (2.) For a low-priced book dealing with all the orchestral instruments you can't do better than get 'Instruments of the Orchestra,' by John E. Borland (Novello, 1*s.* 6*d.*). (3.) We don't know the average size of a violin as used by the player in a modern orchestra,' but we assume it 's the same as that used by other violinists.

Oakfield.—(1.) Why give your pupils 'some of Batiste's easier pieces'? Vary the regime, by all means, but ring the changes between various types of good, not between good and bad. (2.) The slow movements from Mendelssohn's Organ Sonatas are published separately by Novello. (3.) There are many 'short, interesting pieces by Rheinberger'—about a hundred. Make a start with the Twelve Monologues (Novello). For the pupils who (you say) might like something easier and lighter, try the volumes of short Preludes by various composers, published by Novello.

A Student.—(1.) In Bach's Organ Prelude in C minor (Book 7, Novello) the should be played as throughout. (2.) We prefer to give no metronome mark for the Larghetto from Mozart's Quintet, Op. 108. The determining factor is the demisemiquaver figuration; the pace that strikes you as being right for that—clear and animated, without being fussy or showy—is the pace for the movement as a whole. It is better for you to discover a pace for yourself in this way than by consulting a mechanical device.

Organ.—Here are a few works for organ and strings: Benedictus, Mackenzie; 'Hymn to St. Cecilia,' Gounod; an arrangement of the Largo, Handel; Intermezzo, John E. West; 'Cornelius' March, Mendelssohn; 'Solemn Melody,' Walford Davies. Some of these have pianoforte accompaniment, but adaptation to the organ is easy. You might well try one of Handel's Concertos, as they are practically complete with strings and organ. We suggest either No. 2 or No. 4. All the above may be had from Novello.

W. E. J.—(1.) Your part-song is far better than many that achieve publication. It has some weak moments, which we cannot spare time or space to discuss. But send it on its rounds, and try your luck. (2.) Yes; the Behnke books on voice matters are of good repute. (3.) In singing the word 'glorious' make it 'glo-rious,' and make it of two syllables, not three—'glo-ree-ous.'

K. T.—You are mistaken. A new neck with an old scroll, generally, is not a necessity, but a misfortune in an old and valuable instrument. The bridge is slightly more arched now than it was in Paganini's time. This, however, is not the outcome of a reform which can be dated, but of a gradual development.

F. B.

W. B.—You want some Franck for your American organ. His two works for harmonium, 'L'Organiste' and 'Posthumous Pieces,' contain a good proportion of delightful things, despite the inequality of standard as a whole. Saint-Saëns has written and arranged for harmonium a few pieces, including the Three Organ Rhapsodies on Breton Airs (Novello).

Hermann.—Your L.M. tune is good on the whole. There are rather too many root positions of the tonic chord, and we don't like the resolution at the end of line 3, with the seventh rising. The accidental natural is necessary, despite what your friend says about 'the rule being obsolete.' There is no rule; it is merely a matter of commonsense, convenience, and safety.

G. H. H.—For varied organ harmonies to hymn-tunes see the book by the late Dr. Harford Lloyd, recently published by the Year Book Press (7*s.* 6*d.*). The books of descants by Geoffrey Shaw would also be useful for the purpose (Novello, 2*s.* each book). So would 'The Tenor Tune Book' (Faith Press, 1*s.* 6*d.*).

A. M. W.—For your performance of the 'Christmas Oratorio' do not depend on organ accompaniment alone if you can get (as you say you can) a few good violinists and a flautist. Add a good pianist, and use the organ as a background (but not constantly) and in climaxes. The pianoforte will be of great help rhythmically.

A. B. C.—We think you will have difficulty in finding any Communion Service for two-part men's choir other than Blair in G (Novello), which you already have. Perhaps a reader may be able to tell us of other settings.

D. H. W.—We cannot trace the book of 18th century (?) nursery rhymes containing 'Miss Lucy was a charming child,' 'Giddy Miss Helen,' 'When Philip' good mamma was ill,' 'Miss Ann saw a man,' &c. Can a reader help?

C. P. S.—The harvest anthem by Humphrey J. Stark, opening with a recitative, 'He turneth the wilderness into a standing water,' was published by Messrs. Morley, a firm that no longer exists. We do not know where copies can now be had, if at all.

J. T.—The anthem 'Blessed be Thy glorious Name,' by Thomas Gick (?), cannot be traced. Perhaps some Irish reader can help, as the work was published by a Dublin firm. Our correspondent will be glad to purchase old copies, if no new ones are to be had.

Grumpy.—The progression is good. The chord you mark is a seventh, properly resolved. (Don't write and tell us that it is half a dozen other things that sound more pretentious! We prefer the simplest derivation and title.)

B. H.—So far as we are aware, there is no monthly journal issued in connection with the College you name. Its diplomas do not 'rank next to those of the R.A.M. and R.C.M.' In fact, they don't rank at all.

R. P.—What queer ideas folk get! Of course one need not be a member of the I.S.M., or of any other body, in order to have his manuscript considered by a publisher.

D. L. L. is puzzled as to why bells are always rung down the scale. Is there any reason why they should not be rung up as well? Perhaps a campanological reader can tell us.

C. H.—In Psalm 145, verse 3, 'marvellous worthy' is correct. Modern usage would be 'marvellously worthy,' as you say, but the Psalms are not written in modern English.

C. W. H.—The tune 'Thornbury' is by Basil Harwood, and will be found in a collection of tunes by that composer, published by Novello (6*d.*).

Pianist.—We cannot explain the figures in the Kuhlau Sonatinas without seeing the work, or a copied extract therefrom. Why not inquire of the publishers?

E. M. (Ontario).—We advise you to study at Toronto Conservatory, and give up thoughts of the English diploma you mention. It is of very little use.

M. B.—In the F minor Prelude and Fugue, Book 1 of the 'Forty-eight,' we should certainly play all the shakes with a turn, as there is ample time for it.

---

Several correspondents kindly write to suggest that the song 'England's Glory,' about which an inquiry was inserted last month, is 'The Sea is England's Glory,' by Stephen Glover.

Church and Organ Music

SOUTHWARK CATHEDRAL

The 1928-29 series of special musical services (Saturdays, at 3) was announced to open on November 3 with Brahms's 'Requiem' and Elgar's 'For the Fallen.' On December 29 Christmas Carols will be sung. The season's programmes include Kodály's 'Psalmus Hungaricus,' Holst's Two Psalms and 'Hymn of Jesus,' the 'St. Matthew' Passion, Purcell's Te Deum, and Casella's 'Suite Romano' for organ and strings.

---

The eighth annual Festival of the Coventry Church Choirs Association took place at Coventry Cathedral on October 11, when nearly nine hundred singers, representing about thirty choirs, joined forces with stirring effect. The music included Harwood's Te Deum, Goss's 'The Glory of the Lord,' and a processional hymn by Sir Walford Davies. Mr. H. B. Osmond conducted, and Dr. Harold W. Rhodes accompanied. Sir Walford Davies gave an inspiring address and singing lesson. The Cathedral was filled to overflowing, and the service was relayed by wireless to Holy Trinity Church, where another large congregation was present and joined in the proceedings.

On October 22 a Memorial Case, standing six feet high, to the memory of William Jackson, the Miller Musician of Masham, was opened in the Town Hall of his native place. Dr. Sutcliffe Smith, the author of a biography of Jackson, has been the moving spirit in the placing of this recognition to one whose music and conducting was a force in Yorkshire during his lifetime, 1815 to 1866. Musical visitors to this Wensleydale town should see this memorial, and are invited to write their name in the visitors' book which has been placed in the case.

A recital of old Cathedral music will be given at St. Mary's Church, Kilburn, on December 5, at 8 o'clock, the programme including anthems by Weldon, Hayes, Batten, Croft, Kent, &c. The recital choir meets weekly (Wednesdays, at 8) for the study of rarely-heard Church music. In the new year it will begin rehearsals of Clarke-Whitfeld's oratorio 'The Crucifixion and Resurrection.' Singers and others interested should write to the Organist, St. Mary's Vicarage, 50, Priory Road, N.W.6.

As our readers know, Mr. G. D. Cunningham is about to undertake a recital tour in America. Many organists will wish to hear him play once more before his departure, and an opportunity will occur on December 15, at 3 o'clock, at St. Luke's, Redcliffe Square, Earl's Court, when he will give a recital, playing some of the more important works from his American programmes —the Reubke Sonata (complete), Roger-Ducasse's Pastorale, &c.

A Festival service, organized by the Manchester Diocesan Church Music Society, took place in Manchester Cathedral on November 3, when about seven hundred members of local choirs took part. The setting of the Canticles was by Stanford, and the anthems were S. S. Wesley's 'O Lord, my God,' Handel's 'Sing we to God,' and Crotch's 'Lo! star-led chiefs.' Dr. A. W. Wilson, the Cathedral organist, conducted, with excellent results.

Messrs. J. W. Walker have recently built and despatched a small two-manual organ for St. Mark's Church, Seramban, Negri Sembilan, Federated Malay States. The instrument has been specially constructed to stand the climatic conditions, with its extremes of heat and moisture, to say nothing of vermin. The leatherwork is poisoned, a special glue and brass screws are used, and the woodwork is almost exclusively mahogany.

We have received a booklet giving programmes of the third series of organ recitals and musical services arranged by Mr. G. W. Harris Sellick to take place in Middleton Parish Church, near Manchester. The series began in September last, and will continue until July 28, 1929. The scheme is very comprehensive, and excellent in all ways. Copies of the booklet are obtainable from Mr. Harris Sellick at the Church (3½*d.* post free).

On November 16 a presentation was made to Dr. Sydney Nicholson from Westminster Abbey choristers, past and present. The gift consisted of a cheque for £50 and an album containing the autographs of the subscribers. Dr. Nicholson signified his intention of devoting the cheque towards the cost of providing the altar furniture for the chapel of the School of English Church Music.

The organ in Thatcham (Berkshire) Parish Church, built in 1859 by Messrs. Gray & Davison, has been renovated by Messrs. A. Cary, of Newbury, and is now a three-manual with twenty-six stops. Dr. A. C. P. Embling gave the opening recital, on October 30, playing Bach's A minor Prelude and Fugue, Mozart's F minor Fantasia, Charles Wood's Prelude on 'St. Mary,' &c.

Under the auspices of the St. Edmundsbury and Ipswich Diocesan Church Music Committee a Choir Festival was held in the Parish Church of Holy Trinity, Long Melford, on October 27, when over three hundred singers took part. The anthem at evensong was Ouseley's 'From the rising of the sun,' and descants were used in the hymns. The Rev. A. H. Stevens conducted, and Mr. G. C. Gray was at the organ.

Nearly a hundred local organists gathered at Burton, on October 6, under the auspices of the Lichfield and District Organists' Association. After a recital at the Parish Church by Madame Stephenson (soprano), Mr. H. Thompson (violin), Mr. A. W. Head, and Mr. Henry Hackett (organ), and the choir, Dr. Sydney Nicholson gave an address on the School of English Church Music.

Mr. H. V. Spanner will give a recital of pieces from the R.C.O. syllabus, at the National Institute for the Blind (224-228, Gt. Portland Street, W.), on December 5, at 3 o'clock. The Institute organ being a replica of that at the R.C.O., the occasion should be of special interest and value to candidates for the College diplomas.

Brahms's 'Requiem' was sung at Wimbledon Wesleyan Church on November 11 as part of a special Armistice Service. The accompaniment was played on organ and pianoforte by Mr. D. S. Hayward and Miss Winifred Wilson. Mr. Frank Uppington conducted.

Mr. Ronald Chamberlain gave an organ recital at the Pro-Cathedral, Buenos Aires, recently, playing Mendelssohn's fourth Sonata, Bach's Fantasia and Fugue in G minor, two Chorale Preludes by Parry, &c. This was the first organ recital given at Buenos Aires for about twelve years!

At Doncaster Parish Church, on October 11, the Special Service Choir gave a programme of short miscellaneous works by Mozart and Schubert. Mr. H. A. Bennett conducted, and also played Mozart's F minor Fantasia and the Andante con moto from the 'Unfinished.'

The St. Michael's Bach Society, Croydon, gave its fifth recital on October 11, the programme comprising Bach's 'O Light Everlasting,' and two of the Schemelli songs, Beethoven's Violin Concerto (Mr. C. Pecskai), and the 'Unfinished' Symphony. Dr. George Oldroyd conducted.

Handel's 'Joshua' was performed by the Catford Choral Society at St. James's United Methodist Church, on October 17, conducted by Mr. A. M. Gifford. A further performance was announced for November 15, at St. Michael and All Angels' Church, Blackheath.

The Leicester Bach Choir sang Bach's Motets, 'Jesu, Joy and Treasure' and 'Sing ye to the Lord,' at Leicester Cathedral on October 21. Miss Sybil Eaton played the Chaconne and the E major Suite. Dr. Gordon Slater conducted.

The new Harrison organ at St. Helen's Parish Church, Lancashire, was dedicated on November 6, recitals being given on that day and subsequently by Dr. E. C. Bairstow, Dr. Alan Gray, and Mr. William Cooke, the organist of the church.

This year's special Advent musical service at St. Paul's Cathedral will take place on December 4 at 6 o'clock, when Mozart's 'Requiem' will be sung with orchestral accompaniment. No tickets are required.

A new two-manual organ, built by Messrs. A. Noterman, has been erected in the New Eastern Avenue United Methodist Church, Ilford. Mr. Gatty Sellars gave the opening recital.

Messrs. Rushworth & Dreaper have recently built an organ for St. Andrew's Church, West Kirby, Cheshire. The instrument is a three-manual of thirty-one stops and twenty-four pistons.

Carols will be sung at St. Mary Aldermary, E.C., under the direction of Mr. Alan May on December 11 at 6 p.m. A short talk will be given by the Rev. G. R. Woodward.

RECITALS

Mr. Stanley Blizard, St. Lawrence Jewry—Prelude and Fugue in D, Bach; Benedictus, Stanford; Andantino, Scherzoso, and Passacaglia (from Sonata No. 8), Rheinberger.

Mr. Eric Brough, St. Mary-le-Bow—Prelude and Fugue in A minor, Bach; Allegro (Symphony No. 6), Widor; Pièce Héroïque, Franck; Rhapsody No. 3, Howells.

Mr. George Metzler, St. Stephen's Walbrook—Prelude and Fugue in F minor, Bach; Intermezzo, Luard-Selby; Sonata No. 1, Rheinberger; Two Chorale Preludes, Healey Willan.

Mr. F. Vernon Curtis, St. Peter's, Carmarthen—Dorian Toccata, Bach; Fantasia on Campion's 'Babylon's Streams,' Harris; Romance, Haydn.

Mr. Maughan Barnett, Town Hall, Auckland—Reverie on 'University,' Harvey Grace; 'Song of Triumph,' West; Finale (Sonata), Reubke; Rondino, Wolstenholme; Final in B flat, Franck; Sonata No. 2, Mendelssohn; Finale, Wolstenholme.

Mr. N. S. Wallbank, Lancaster Parish Church—Voluntary, Battishill; Elegie, Vierne; Fantasia in F minor, Mozart; two Chorale Preludes, Bach.

Dr. Chastey Hector, Brighton Parish Church—Toccata in F, Bach; Fugue No. 5, Schumann; Rêverie, 'Sunshine Glade,' Chastey Hector; 'Finlandia.'

Mr. H. Percy Richardson, Parish Church, Horton—Overture to 'Athalia'; Pastorale, Franck; Introduction and Variations on a Theme by Beethoven, Merkel; Finale (Suite No. 2), Boëllmann.

Mr. V. S. Read, St. John's, Torquay—Sonata No. 1, Mendelssohn; Rhapsody, Harvey Grace; Fantasia and Fugue in G minor, Bach; Allegro, Greene.

Mr. C. H. Trevor, St. John's, Mortimer—three Preludes from 'The Little Organ Book,' Bach; Fantasia (Sonata No. 12), Rheinberger; Quasi-Scherzo, Karg-Elert; Scherzo (Sonata No. 5), Guilmant.

Mr. D. Cecil Williams, St. Mary's, Tenby—Allegro Marziale, Greenhill; Prelude on a Theme by Tallis, Darke; Finale ('Sonata Britannica'), Stanford.

Mr. W. F. Kingdon, St. Lawrence Jewry—Choral No. 1, Franck; Kyrie Eleison, Reger; Finale (Sonata No. 11), Rheinberger; Sicilienne and Toccata, Vierne.

Mr. F. Vernon Curtis, St. Peter's, Carmarthen—Dorian Toccata, Bach; Fantasia on Campion's 'Babylon's Streams,' Harris; Romance, Haydn.

Mr. Francis W. Sutton, St. Lawrence Jewry—Toccata and Fugue ('Dorian'), Bach; Berceuse, Hollins; three Preludes on Welsh Hymn-Tunes, Vaughan Williams.

Mr. Maughan Barnett, Town Hall, Auckland, N.Z.—Scherzoso, Rheinberger; Moderato Cantabile (Symphony No. 8), Widor; Toccata and Fugue in D minor, Bach; Spring Song, Mendelssohn.

Mr. R. Meyrick-Roberts, St. Lawrence Jewry—Psalm-Prelude No. 3, Howells; Scherzo, Best; Rêverie, Bonnet.

Mr. C. J. King, St. Matthew's, Northampton—Fantasia and Fugue in F minor, Mozart; Prelude and Fugue in B minor, Bach; two Sinfonias from Cantatas, Bach-Grace; Benediction, Hollins.

Mr. Claude A. Forster, St. John's, Forfar—Sonata No. 6, Mendelssohn; Scherzo, Faulkes; Bridal Song, Wolstenholme; Prelude and Fugue in A minor, Bach.

Mr. W. Brennand Smith, St. Austell Parish Church—Scherzo in C minor, Guilmant; Meditation, Delius; Fanfare, Lemmens.

Mr. Herbert Knott, St. Mary Magdalene, Taunton—Prelude and Fugue in G, Bach; two movements from 'Paulus,' Malling; Allegretto in E flat, Wolstenholme; Pièce Héroïque, Franck.

Mr. A. M. Hawkins, St. Lawrence Jewry—Reverie on 'University,' Harvey Grace; Adagio in E, Frank Bridge; Cantabile (Symphony No. 6), Widor; Two Sketches, Schumann.

Mr. W. Edward Kirby, St. Paul's, Bath—two Chorale Preludes, Bach; Psalm-Prelude No. 2, Howells; 'Cathedral Windows,' Karg-Elert; Sonata No. 1, Mendelssohn.

Dr. Gordon Slater, Boston Parish Church—Agitato (Sonata No. 11), Rheinberger; two Sinfonias from Cantatas, Bach-Grace; Prelude on 'St. Columba,' Robin Milford; Evening Song, Bairstow.

Mr. Leonard Herivel, Presbyterian Church, Jersey—Grand Chœur in D, Guilmant; Chorale, Fugue, and Finale (Sonata No. 6), Mendelssohn; Prelude on 'Rhosymedre,' Vaughan Williams; Andante Cantabile (String Quartet), Tchaikovsky.

Mr. Fred Gostelow, Luton Parish Church—Prelude and Fugue in D minor, Mendelssohn; Sonata in A minor, Borowski; Arabesque No. 2, Debussy; Military March in D, Schubert.

Mr. Ernest Harris, St. Lawrence Jewry—Fantasy on 'Babylon's Streams,' W. H. Harris; Prelude in Form of a Chaconne, Stanford; Passacaglia, Rheinberger; Finale, Wolstenholme.

Mr. W. J. Lancaster, Bolton Parish Church—Coronation March, Meyerbeer; Andante and Presto (Sonata), Elgar; Two Studies, Schumann.

Mr. Ralph Downes, Princeton University Chapel—Prelude and Fugue in F minor and Trio-Sonata in C, Bach; Prière, Franck; Introduction, Passacaglia, and Fugue in E flat minor, Healey Willan.

Mr. H. T. Gilberthorpe, Bermuda Cathedral—Allegro Maestoso (Sonata), Elgar; Larghetto in F sharp minor, S. S. Wesley; Andante Cantabile (Symphony No. 4), Widor; Grand Chœur, Guilmant.

Mr. H. C. J. Churchill, St. Lawrence Jewry—Fantasia and Fugue in G minor, Bach; two Choral Improvisations, Karg-Elert; Prelude on 'Hanover,' Parry.

APPOINTMENTS

Mr. Clifford Roberts, choirmaster and organist, St. John's, Hove.

Mr. Clement Roy Spackman, choirmaster and organist, Knox Church, Dunedin, N.Z.

THE ST. MICHAEL'S SINGERS

The ninth annual Festival in St. Michael's Church, Cornhill, began on November 12 with a programme of music commemorative of Armistice Day. Elgar's 'For the Fallen,' Mozart's Requiem Mass, and a choral setting of 'As the leaves fall' (Joseph Courtney), by Dr. Harold Darke, were sung as a tribute to the dead, and Parry's 'Peace' at the end of the programme appropriately turned our thoughts to the present time. On the second evening Schubert's Centenary was celebrated by the performance of the Mass in A flat and a setting of 'Tantum Ergo' for solo quartet; and on the Thursday a performance of 'The Messiah' was given with Handel's original accompaniments in St. Martin-in-the-Fields. Besides these and other choral works, organ recitals, which covered a large and interesting field of music, were given by Dr. Stanley Marchant, Mr. C. Hylton Stewart, Mr. Thalben-Ball, and Dr. Harold Darke, who is the mainspring of the Festival. The St. Michael's Singers are a well-trained choir, and apart from the usual (one must unfortunately say!) weakness in the tenors, their tone and balance are excellent. The best performance I heard was that of Schubert's Mass, which, though somewhat uneven, contains some fine moments both of lyrical beauty and dramatic strength. It is a very healthy sign that this City church can be filled twice a day with local audiences eager, in the luncheon-hour and after their day's work, to hear music for chorus and organ by the great composers.

D. H.

Letters to the Editor

SCHUBERTIANA

SIR,—I should like, if I may, to express my thanks to 'Schubertian' for his corrections, in the November number of the Musical Times, of what he indulgently calls 'two little slips' in my articles on Schubert in the August and September numbers of your journal. As to his query regarding the accuracy of the fifth paragraph on p. 869, my authority for it was Kreissle von Hellborn, who states on p. 23, vol. i., of his 'Life of Schubert,' that Ruczizka 'pronounced his pupil omniscient. He has learnt everything,' he said, 'and God has been his teacher.' The result of this report was, adds Hellborn, that Salieri took to Schubert more warmly than ever, and made himself responsible for the further development of his rare gifts.

The Dante sonnet is included unspecified in Th. Gérold's French life of the Viennese composer. I have asked Prof. Edmund Gardner, the well-known Dante scholar, if he knows which of the Italian poet's sonnets was set to music by Schubert. He writes me he has been unable to trace which it is, but while searching he found a reference to a setting by Schubert of a passage from the Divina Commedia which he thinks were lines from Purgatorio V. or VIII., probably from both. The sonnet, he says, might possibly be 'Tanto Gentile e tanto onesta pari.'

As regards Schubert's tenth Symphony, I would refer 'Schubertian' to the Daily Mail of November 17, in which Mr. Richard Capell gives an interesting account of this unfinished Symphony in E minor. Hellborn mentions that it was given by Schubert's brother, Ferdinand, to Mendelssohn, and, as stated by Mr. Capell, Mendelssohn presented it to Sir George Grove. It is now in the library of the Royal College of Music.—Yours, &c.,

L. LIEBICH.

Silverdale,
Carnforth, Lancs.

---

SIR,—Your reviewer's notice of my book on Schubert is scarcely worthy of the Musical Times.

A passage is quoted—and the authority asked for—which the writer deliberately states to have been an explanation upon my part of how Schubert came to write so many works in the year 1815.

I wish to point out that the passage quoted does not refer to the year 1815 at all; that it appears in a chapter which deals with the year 1814; and that it does not refer to anything excepting Schubert's first opera which was suggested by Salieri. This much is perfectly plain to anyone who has ordinary intelligence. Neither is it guesswork.

Had your reviewer read every English and German biography of Schubert which the British Museum contains, together with much matter of very recent source—as I had done before I began to write—he might have been in my position and have been able to speak with authority; as it is he merely questions that of which he has no knowledge.

Unfortunately, this is the sort of thing which authors who are authorities upon their subjects have to endure from critics who are not.

As for his remarks upon my arrangement of the A flat Impromptu, they are too utterly puerile to consider here. Altogether, that notice is as inaccurate as it is destructive; it is not criticism—it is an insult to the very term.

Your reviewer has, I fear, yet to learn how to handle a book when it is given to him; paragraphs which contain stupid mis-statements and babyish sentiments do very little for English journalism.—Yours, &c.,

C. WHITAKER-WILSON.

[We sent Mr. Whitaker-Wilson's letter to our reviewer, who replies as follows:]

If Mr. Whitaker-Wilson will kindly read what I wrote he will see that I put a question. Everyone has wondered how Schubert found time while he was assistant-master at his father's school (1814-17) to compose so much music. Mr. Whitaker-Wilson's book gave circumstantial details that were new to me—Schubert begged off some of the less-important afternoon classes; he set the boys 'something to write' which he scarcely ever found time to correct; or his conscience would prick him, he would fling the new score into the desk, and would teach hard for the best part of a day. I asked what was the source of the information. Such biographical statements either have the evidence of a contemporary, or else they are fancies and have less interest and value.

I felt inclined similarly to question many other details given by Mr. Whitaker-Wilson, which were new to me. We have all read that the boy Schubert, when he went up for his examination as a candidate for the Court Chapel Choir, wore a light-coloured suit and was chaffed by the other boys as a 'miller.' Mr. Whitaker-Wilson adds the information that the suit had 'a pattern upon it which might have better become a bathroom wall-paper.' Is this a fact or a fancy? (Observe, I still simply put a question.)

In the account given in this book of Salieri's teaching we are actually given—I believe for the first time—the master's ipsissima verba, thus: '"Of course, if you will persist in imitating the immortal Mozart," he used to sneer.'

Mr. Whitaker-Wilson says he speaks with authority, but a reader may still be allowed, surely, to ask him for his authorities. His letter indicates displeasure (and I sincerely say I am sorry for having hurt his feelings), but still he does not answer my questions about his new circumstantial details.

I find I marked other statements by this author for questioning, e.g., 'Liszt's piano music suffers from great technical difficulties.' And here is another sentence about Schubert the schoolmaster: 'Half the time he was "ragging" with the boys, and the other half was irritable with them when they wanted to "rag" and he did not.' Is this a certainty, or a guess? The reader has a right to know. I find another question-mark beside this:

> 'Goethe was so pleased with his own personal success as a poet and dramatist and so susceptible to the flattery that was showered on him that he had little time to appreciate the fact that there were other geniuses in the world besides himself.'

The following is (and here I do not question, but assert) an inaccurate account of Schubert's first publications:

> 'Diabelli sent for Schubert and offered him abominable terms for permission to print the first seven opus-numbers, which were all songs. Franz, of course, would agree to anything rather than argue; thus the contract was made and the songs issued.'

There is no need to go to the British Museum—one can easily find the facts in 'Grove.' Schubert's Opp. 1-7 were published on commission, Diabelli having refused point-blank to publish them on his own account.

Now a question about Beethoven and Schubert. 'They met more frequently after this [their first meeting], and Beethoven was always most cordial towards Schubert . . . sometimes they had their evening meals together.' The question, I know, is a thorny one. It all depends whether you are willing to believe Schindler or not. But does not Mr. Whitaker-Wilson here go a good deal farther than Schindler himself? Does he not believe his own authority?

All this may seem finicking to the general reader. Perhaps I should have confessed last month that I set out with a prejudice against the fashionable biographical fiction of the day, and had been in hope that the Centenary would produce (as it has not) a Life of Schubert that would simply give us the facts, all the facts, and nothing but the facts.

As for Mr. Whitaker-Wilson's vocal version of the Pianoforte Impromptu in A flat, I take back my 'puerile' words—I take them back, and simply offer to the world of music in their place a few bars from this unforeseen addition of the Centenary year to the six hundred songs :

'The Fisherman's Night-Song'
(Schubert—Whitaker-Wilson).

'LE JARDIN PARFUMÉ'

Sir,—As your good reviewer quite elaborately criticises my 'Jardin Parfumé' because it isn't what I never intended it to be, perhaps I may venture to hope that you will allow me to explain? This piece is in no manner of way 'an attempt to extend the explorations of Scriabin' or of any one else, nor is it intended as a cross-word puzzle for those who take months to grasp (and then don't) its quite moderate technical and musical problems. And as it is my work the fact that it lacks 'Scriabin's logic' is surely not only natural but very right and proper. It has my logic, and that, I think, is what matters. And although no one can accuse me of being optimistic as to the powers of the 'ordinary musician's' intelligence, I think that even I would have hesitated before expressing an opinion so insulting to the latter as that implied in your reviewer's remark, 'there is no logical structural basis at all in Mr. Sorabji's work that is to be discovered by the ordinary musician.' That is to say that 'the ordinary musician' cannot discover the theme around which, with its derivatives and variants, the entire work is woven—a theme worked in one form or another into the fabric of almost every page—and for no other reason apparently than that it is not docketed off into two-, three-, or four-bar phrases! I will be much more polite and ask how a critic so sensitive, imaginative, and cultivated, so adept in the humaner letters, so exemplary, admirable, and discreet as 'T. A.' came to overlook the obvious allusion of the title of my piece to the most famous work of that great Arabian poet and writer the Sheik Nefzaoui? *

The fable that my works, particularly my pianoforte works, are unplayable, and that I cannot play them myself, is industriously propagated by those with whom the wish is both illegitimate father and mother to the thought. That it is quite untrue, and that I myself, who make no pretensions at all as a pianist, can play them, as plenty of people, including, Sir, your admirable self, as you bore witness in the Musical Times of September, 1922, can vouch, does not, of course, affect the fable in the least. Nothing is more firmly believed than that which is most demonstrably false, and I could go on for a long time with some of the fantastic tales that are current apropos your humble and obedient servant, but will confine myself to the following incident which I think will be found instructive if not edifying.

The reviewer of one of our biggest dailies, being, as I discovered later, almost completely ignorant of the subject and having but indifferent knowledge of the language, once questioned the accuracy of my observance of French prosody, a matter on which I have received the highest compliments from the most distinguished French composers and musicians, who are notoriously scrupulous in this matter. Being unable to answer my challenge to show where and how the alleged offences were to be found, this gentleman took refuge in vague generalities about the conflict between poetry and music—he had not my songs by him at the moment, but would take an early opportunity of returning to the matter. Needless to say, he never did; it is now four years ago . . . but, from that time till now, during which several of my largest and most important works have been issued, all of which have been duly sent, as always, for review, these have all been totally ignored. Post hoc ergo propter hoc? . . . Coincidence? ? . . . Long arm? ? ?—Yours, &c.,

Kaikhosru Sorabji.

* This work exists in an English translation by the illustrious Burton, but is exceedingly rare and difficult to get at; also a French translation, based, I believe, on Burton.

'THE FAULT, DEAR BRUTUS, IS NOT IN OUR STARS, BUT IN OURSELVES . . .'

Sir,—I was interested in the views expressed recently by your correspondents on the above subject, but I find it difficult to believe that the stars in their courses fight either for or against Miss Snell and Dr. Pearce.

I do not doubt any of their facts; I merely question the significance of them. If Miss Snell is interested in astrology purely as a scientific fact (to quote her own words), then she should consider evidence scientifically. When she says, '14 per cent. of organists are born when the sun is in Capricorn, whereas the theoretical proportion would be only 8.33 per cent.,' she should say rather, '14 per cent. of those about whom I have collected statistics,' which is a different thing. Apparently she has considered only fourteen cases. A more comprehensive survey might easily give a different result. Miss Snell's argument amounts to this: Organists born under Saturn, if well aspected, usually live long. Therefore Saturn, so aspected, produces longevity—I am not quite sure whether she implies generally or only among organists. At any rate she admits that this is not the only configuration which produces longevity, but she does not give any statistics for comparison.

But if we are interested in astrology as a scientific fact, we must have statistics not only of these 'other configurations' and their influence on organists, but also, for comparison, a survey of the horoscopes of the members of some other profession, say bricklaying. These statistics, of course, would have to take into account the number of potential organists or bricklayers, born under Saturn, who had the misfortune to die in infancy, as well as those who were cut off prematurely in whatever might be described by courtesy as youth or middle-age. We should then be in a position to determine (a) whether organists born under Saturn live longer than organists born at a less favourable season; (b) whether a similar rule holds true in the case of bricklayers (i.) similarly born, (ii.) born under a different configuration—and so on, all of which would be an immense contribution to the sum of knowledge, and might furnish Americans with a subject of research for many generations.

Dr. Pearce's interest in the subject seems anecdotic rather than scientific. If he is struck by the number of eminent musicians who share August 22 as a birthday, he might be still more struck by the number of non-musicians born on that date. I have not the least idea what the world's birth-rate averages per annum, but it must be almost literally true that 'every moment dies a man, every minute one is born.' Therefore, the number of days in a year on which to be born being comparatively small, and the choice of possible professions similarly limited, it follows that many people probably share the same birth-day (and many more the same birth-date), and some of these will probably adopt similar professions. But, quite naturally, if we are musicians we notice only the musicians who share our anniversary, and we are apt to forget the tinkers, tailors, soldiers, and sailors who were born on the same date.

I do not know if Miss Snell and Dr. Pearce are interested in any 'back to Hucbald' movement, but in this matter they seem well on the way back to the Dark Ages.

'Taurus, that's sides and heart. No, Sir, it is legs and thighs.' Personally, I don't mind which it is and I don't suppose many of your readers do either, but even musicians might be the better for a little clear thinking occasionally.—Yours, &c.,

'The Beehive,' A. BELARD.
Kingsland, Shrewsbury.

---

SIR,—Your correspondent, Dr. C. W. Pearce, has given some remarkable horoscopical coincidences. May I add, for the benefit of your readers, the following important cases:

A former housemaid of mine who was very musical, and always sang at her work, died on April 3, 1897, the day on which the immortal Brahms died.

My old friend Dr. Thomas Smith, organist of Whelcaster Parish Church and composer of an excellent service, was presented with his third son on June 5, 1925, on which day the great Orlando Gibbons died, three hundred years before.

My mother, who was a pianist of no mean ability, died on March 2, 1909. She was very fond of Chopin's pianoforte music, and it should be noted that he died exactly a hundred years and a day before.

Ludwig van Beethoven was born on December 16, 1770, and I was born on the same day in 1856.

I have composed but little myself, but am considered to be very musical by my friends, and have studied the rules of harmony and counterpoint.—Yours, &c.,

121, Caroline Street, S.W.1. R. BURLINGTON.

---

[The instances cited by Mr. Burlington are indeed remarkable. Some in our own experience run them very close, however. For example, on April 1—but we refrain. In fact, this correspondence is abruptly closed.—EDITOR.]

---

CHAMBER MUSIC STUDY

SIR,—As a result of a discussion on string classes at the recent annual Conference of the British Federation of Musical Competition Festivals it has been suggested in a special article in The Times that a Summer School in Chamber Music under competent artistic direction would be a great help and encouragement to amateur string players, whether they have taken part in chamber music hitherto or no.

I shall be glad if you will allow me space in your valuable paper to ask any of your readers to write to me if the idea appeals to them and they would care to attend a School if one were held.

It would be necessary to secure suitable premises well in advance in which all the students would find accommodation—sleeping, eating, and practising—under one roof. It might be possible to find it near the sea, but this is by no means certain.

It is suggested that practising classes and lectures would occupy the mornings and evenings, and that the afternoons be devoted to recreation.

The fees for tuition would be approximately £2 2*s.* for the week—Monday until Saturday; the charge for living should be about 10*s.* a day. These are only rough estimates.

I shall be glad to hear from any of your readers who are interested.—Yours, &c.,

22, Surrey Street, H. FAIRFAX JONES.
London, W.C.2.

---

THE LARYNX AGAIN

SIR,—The letters on the subject of the larynx appearing in your issues of October and November are of great interest, especially that of the Rev. W. R. Whately.

However fascinating the drawing of diagrams illustrative of the formation of the throat and larynx may be, the wise teacher and student thinks as little as possible about the throat—for where the singer's thought is there shall his voice be also. In this connection the vocalist's chief concern should be the free, gentle emission of 'breathed tone' and its concentration upon the hard palate.

With many years' experience of Musical Competition Festivals (at which the general standard of singing is extremely high), and with such well-known singers and adjudicators as Maurice d'Oisly, Dawson Freer, H. Plunket Greene, Madame Edith Hands, Dan Price, Marcus Thomson, &c., I have never yet heard the subject of the larynx even mentioned in their admirable criticisms, although throaty tone is frequently condemned.

The singer, amateur or professional, who knows his business produces his tone by consistently ignoring his larynx. He use his hard palate as a result of enlightened practice, and gives the whole of his attention to the rendering of his song.

At the slightest sign of his worrying about larynx or technique his interpretation falls to pieces like a house of cards.—Yours, &c., WALTER ADRIAN.

1, Bingham Road,
Croydon.

---

ORGANISTS' SECURITY OF TENURE

SIR,—Many organists have read with interest the correspondence under the heading, 'Organists' Security of Tenure' and the Editor's comment in your last issue. As a member of the deputation who interviewed the Archbishop of Canterbury at Lambeth Palace, I may say that everything possible was done at that time by the Council of the R.C.O. to obtain for organists some security of tenure, by giving them the right of appeal to the Bishop of the diocese in those cases where their dismissal was apparently unjust: but we did not succeed. A full report of the petition presented, of the interview with the Archbishop, and the Archbishop's reply, was printed and supplied to all the members of the R.C.O. at that time. From an intimate knowledge of the whole episode I think it would be quite useless to make any further attempt in the same direction, but I think another course of procedure is about to offer itself.

The Incorporated Society of Musicians is making an effort to become a representative society of the musical profession. It aims at taking a place in our profession something like that taken by representative bodies of the medical, the scholastic, and other well-organized professions. One of the duties of such societies is to protect their members, so far as they are able, from unfair and arbitrary treatment when this is meted out in connection with public appointments. I hope that the re-formed I.S.M. will consider this to be one of its functions. Such a Society, however, can only speak with authority if it represents the whole of a profession. It seems, therefore, most desirable that every properly qualified professional musician should join this newly constituted Society, and so help to create for the musical profession an official body which not only can speak in its name when occasions arise, but also when it does speak will command attention.—Yours, &c.,

4, Sydenham Park, FREDERICK G. SHINN.
Sydenham, S.E.

---

THE TORONTO MUS. BAC.

SIR,—Dr. Ernest MacMillan's letter in your November issue so completely covers the ground of this unexpected controversy, that it leaves me little or nothing to add to my own letter on this subject. It seems clear (1) that the present Toronto University neither seeks nor needs 'recognition' of its graduates in music beyond that which the merit of their work deserves; and (2) any mistakes or makeshifts of bygone times are now rectified.

It may be hoped, however, that in the near future there may be a big U.G.M. sufficiently comprehensive for the protection of true academic interests from unqualified 'intruders and cowans,' not merely in the British Isles, but throughout the British Empire. No one can deny that the musical profession is as 'close-tiled' as it should be; but everyone will admit that in spite of its difficulty, such a proposed extension of the U.G.M. as that referred to in its current Roll is both desirable and worthy of adequate effort for its achievement.

C. W. Pearce.

The Paddocks,
Ferndown Dorset.

---

Sir,—If Dr. E. MacMillan, of the University of Toronto, cares to read my letter in your September issue again, he will surely see that I did not 'attack' the University to which he belongs and its musical degrees; but the so-called 'degrees' granted many years ago in absentiâ by Trinity College, Toronto, through an agency set up in this country. Nor did I write 'without acquainting myself with the facts.' I know of the high value of musical degrees granted by McGill and Toronto Universities—and I should imagine that most musicians here do also; but that does not make us ready to accept as genuine those 'degrees' obtained from Trinity College, Toronto, 'through the post'!

Sir Frederick Bridge (in 1892) advised the (Trinity College) Toronto degree-holders 'to drop their ridiculous false plumage and strive to obtain legitimate degrees.' Many did so; yet some Toronto men go on using the 'degree,' but omit to mention the source of it. That is bad enough, but when Dr. C. W. Pearce comes along and wants us to recognise such 'imitations' as 'good classical stuff,' well ——!—Yours, &c.,

T. H. Hill.

St. Andrew's Parish Church,
Buckland-in-Dover.

---

We have received a number of letters championing the cause of Tonic Sol-fa notation. As the correspondents are unanimous, we trust they will forgive us for not inserting their letters.

The Amateurs' Exchange

Under this heading we insert, free of charge, announcements by amateur musicians who wish to co-operate with others.

Baritone, excellent sight-reader, wishes to meet soprano or tenor for mutual practice; or would help to form quartet or sextet. Weekly. Classical, oratorio, or operatic. Hampstead or Highgate districts.—W. F. H., c/o Musical Times.

Viola player, gentleman, wishes to meet violinist, pianist, or violist for practice of easy classical chamber music. Evening, weekly. Chiswick, Gunnersbury, or Kew districts.—E. Cousins, 32, Thorneyhedge Road, Gunnersbury, W.4.

Singer (lady) wishes to meet accompanist for mutual practice. S.W. district.—Lord, 13, Elmfield Road, Balham, S.W.17.

Lady pianist wishes to meet lady violinist for practice of sonatas and advanced classical music.—G. R., 9, Japan Crescent, Crouch Hill, N.4.

Violinist and viola player wish to meet another violinist and 'cellist for practice of string quartets. Barnes neighbourhood.—A. A. M., c/o Musical Times.

Pianist (lady) wishes to meet instrumentalist or vocalist for mutual practice. Blackpool.—A. W. J., c/o Musical Times.

Violinist (medium ability) wanted for mutual practice with 'cellist and pianist. Mondays, Fridays, Sundays, 7.30 to 9.30 p.m. Fine collection of good orchestral music.—'Cellist, 20, Oseney Crescent, Camden Road, N.W.

Lady pianist wishes to meet 'cellist and violinist, or separate, for mutual practice. S.E. district.—Mrs. M. Goldie, 56*b*, Wickham Road, S.E.4.

Viola and 'cello players (ladies or gentlemen) required for small orchestra. Practices, near Oxford Street, Thursdays, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.—H. G. K., c/o Musical Times.

Sharps and Flats

I speak feelingly of modern music, because it has given me such an insufferable let-down. I began, not so long ago, as an ardent disciple of modernism. In music, as in other walks of life, I held that what was trying to break away from constricting tradition and come inhibitory 'dont's' must be wholesome. But I've back to Beethoven much chastened.—Alfred A. Knopf.

It is wrong to assume that good music means a kind of music. People do not say that good meat means beef and not mutton, or that a good picture means a picture of a particular size and shape. Good music means a quality of music, and is compatible with any kind or species.—Sir Henry Hadow.

Our modern composer composes in the morning in a modern mode which is old-fashioned at dusk. He evolves a new theory, or a new method, every half-hour. There are half a hundred different ways of writing music. But alas, there still remains only one way of listening to music.—Leonard Liebling.

In these days when we have the miraculous invention of wireless, the oyster shares something in common with music. The oyster, I believe, owes something to being a bivalve, while music is largely dependent on the multivalve.—Sir Hugh Allen.

In Schönberg, as Arthur Lourie has justly observed, we have 'an egocentric conception dominated by personal and æsthetic elements which assume the significance of a fetish'—in a word, the development of romantic emotionalism into neurosis.—Leigh Henry.

We had a very moving performance of the anthem, 'Fierce was the wild bellow,' by the choir.—Yorkshire Parish Magazine.

To live on Berlioz—to hear Berlioz day in, day out—would be like adopting a diet of anchovies and sawdust.—Richard Capell.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

Late October and the early days of November have been distinguished by two important concerts. On Monday, October 29, the programme of the students' chamber concert in the Duke's Hall was entirely devoted to the works of Schubert, in celebration of the composer's Centenary. It began with a performance of the Quartet-Satz, and the four young women played exceedingly well. Four male students gave the complete Quartet in A minor with infinite credit to themselves, and the 'Trout' Quintet was also adequately performed.

On Tuesday, November 13, also in the Duke's Hall, Sir Henry Wood conducted a students' orchestral concert. Not for the first time has mention been made in this little monthly article of Sir Henry's work at the Academy. He would seem to be inspired in his power of training orchestras, and it is hardly possible to overestimate the importance of the orchestral experience gained by the students under his tuition. The results at this concert were illuminating. A Concerto Grosso in C minor by Corelli was most pleasing in its neatness, the Scherzo from 'A Midsummer Night's Dream' delightful in its delicacy, and that the orchestra can be vigorous when necessary was proved in Schubert's Marche Militaire in D. It was also sympathetically alert in the solo accompaniments. Distinctly the best soloist was Mr. David Taylor, a violinist from South Africa.

Although it is not solely concerned with the Academy, the announcement that a Mendelssohn Scholarship of the value of £200 per annum will be offered for competition is of all-round interest. Sir Arthur Sullivan was the first holder. The Secretary of the Foundation is Mr. J. F. R. Stainer, The Old Rectory, Ashtead, Epsom.

Lord Howard de Walden has been elected to the Board of the Royal Academy in place of Mr. Robert Ward, deceased.

The Review Week will this year take place from December 3 to 8. There will be a chamber concert, and among the lecturers Mr. Ambrose Coviello, Sir Charles G. Robertson, Mr. Charles Woodhouse, Mr. Walter de la Mare, Mr. Marcus Thompson, Mr. E. J. D. Radclyffe, Mr. Kenneth Barnes, Mr. Arthur Bliss, Mr. Walton O'Donnell, Mr. Alexander Wood, and the Principal. Mr. Lionel Tertis and Mr. York Bowen will give a viola and pianoforte recital, and there will be dramatic performances under the direction of Mr. A. Acton-Bond.

Owing to the Festival of Easter falling on an unusually early date next year, the Lent term will begin on January 3, 1929. F.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC

An event which roused great interest and enthusiasm among the students was the visit to the College of Maurice Ravel, the distinguished French composer, briefly referred to in our November number. M. Ravel lunched with the director, Sir Hugh Allen, and afterwards received a hearty welcome from the students in the Concert Hall, where the orchestra, under Dr. Adrian Boult, played a Symphonic fragment from the ballet 'Daphnis and Chloe.' In a brief but happy speech, M. Ravel thanked the orchestra and expressed his pleasure at the compliment paid him. 'Daphnis and Chloe' was repeated at the College orchestral concert, the other chief items being Mozart's Violin Concerto in D, skilfully played by Mr. Ernest Sealey, with much beauty of tone and musical insight, and a performance of John Ireland's 'Forgotten Rite,' which seemed to give great pleasure to the composer, who was present.

The Cobbett Prizes, as Mr. W. W. Cobbett's generous foundation for chamber music has come to be called, are for this year divided into two sections, one for composers and one for performers. The composers' prizes were awarded to two women students—Imogen Holst, for a Fantasy Quartet for strings, and Grace Williams, for a Fantasy Quintet for pianoforte and strings. These works are now being learnt by sets of performers and will be played early in the New Year. One distinctive feature of the performers' competition is that the works have to be learnt independently of any coaching whatever, so the composers may anticipate, possibly with apprehension, undreamt-of readings and tempi.

November 17 was a day of great doings by the Boy Scouts as guests of the College. Musical competitions occupied the energies of Boy Scout troops from all parts of the country, followed by a Camp Fire concert (without the camp fire) in the evening, in the Concert Hall.

TRINITY COLLEGE OF MUSIC

The College joins in hearty congratulations to Mr. C. E. Bryan, the veteran Local Secretary of the Southport centre, on celebrating the jubilee of his secretaryship. At the recent annual distribution of certificates, when the College was represented by the Secretary, a testimonial was presented to Mr. Bryan by his many friends.

Distributions have also been held at Tottenham, Lincoln, High Wycombe, Bournemouth, and at Lowestoft, where a programme of music from the syllabus was performed by students from the College.

The Local Examination syllabus for 1929 is now being issued, and attention is called to the alteration in 'passing' marks which will come into force in January, 1930.

Mr. R. Chamberlain has returned from a very successful examining tour in S. America, British Guiana, &c.

The Queen's Hall Orchestral concert takes place on December 12. The choir and chamber music concert at Grotrian Hall on December 6.

'Monsieur Beaucaire' has been chosen for the next performance of the Opera Class.

A very interesting lecture in connection with the Schubert Centenary (1828-1928) was given by Mr. C. Whitaker-Wilson in the College Concert Room recently. Some Schubert songs were given by Miss Dorothy Whybrow, and the Quartet 'Death and the Maiden' (Schubert) was played by students of Mr. Lebell's chamber music class.

'THE BARTERED BRIDE' AT L'OPÉRA-COMIQUE

A few weeks ago Smetana's 'Bartered Bride' was produced for the first time at Paris at L'Opéra-Comique under the title 'La Fiancée Vendue.' This enterprising act on the part of the director, M. Ricou, was well justified. There were difficulties, of course. The most important of them were connected with the translation. A work so essentially national as this was bound to suffer a shock in being removed from its natural environment, but the shock was considerably reduced by the tactful and intelligent adaptation of Daniel Muller and Raoul Brunel. The stage performances also helped the work to survive the uprooting and replanting. Subtle changes in the characterisation were effected at various points, but without disturbing the unity and light-hearted progression of the work. In the rôle of Marienka, Mlle. Féraldy brought about a very skilful compromise between a Czech peasant girl and an Opéra-Comique soprano. The inclusion of both elements was well calculated to please the audience since, on this occasion, it was about equally divided between Czechs and Parisians.

The most intelligent singing and acting came from André Allard in the difficult part of Ketzal, the marriage broker. He raised this buffoon to the plane of high comedy, every fine point of which was made clear by his admirable diction. It was a foregone conclusion that the part of Vachek would be a problem, for this character is full of the Czech idiom. M. Hérant's performance was very polished and restrained, and it was not altogether his fault that the significance of the stammering fool was not fully realised.

The singing of the chorus was a big factor in the success of this experiment. It was the more remarkable seeing that the orchestral playing left much to be desired. This defect was certainly not due to any lack of diligence on the part of M. Masson, the conductor. His direction was both sympathetic and sensitive, but whereas the spirit of his players seemed willing enough, the flesh was decidedly weak.

The production was acclaimed with great enthusiasm. It is possible that the Czechs in the audience were aware of the absence of various traditional details in the manner of presentation; if so, they showed no sign of resentment. Their delight in being brought into close contact with the endeared music and episodes of their national opera forbade them to be hypercritical.

B. M.

CROYDON FESTIVAL

The chief musical event on the fringe of London has been the second Triennial Festival at Croydon, which was held on November 6, 8, and 10 under Sir Henry Wood as conductor-in-chief. The choir, supplied by local choral societies, sang throughout in a way that did credit to local musicianship and to the training given to the singers by Mr. A. J. Kirby. The London Symphony Orchestra played at each of the three concerts. The Festival opened in Croydon Parish Church with a programme that included Dr. G. Oldroyd's setting of the 'Stabat Mater,' which the composer conducted, W. H. Reed's 'Elegy' for strings and organ, Handel's sixth Chandos Anthem, and Holst's 'Two Psalms.' 'The Kingdom,' which was the chief work of the Festival (as it also was three years previously), was given in the Baths Hall with Miss Dorothy Silk, Miss Muriel Brunskill, Mr. Parry Jones, and Mr. Harold Williams as the soloists. The final programme included 'Hiawatha's Wedding-Feast,' Ernest Austin's 'Hymn of Apollo,' three of Handel's operatic choruses arranged by Sir Henry Wood, and W. H. Reed's 'The Lincoln Imp.' Other artists of the Festival, besides those named, were Miss Harriet Cohen, Mr. Albert Sammons, Mr. Joseph Slater, Mr. Roy Henderson, Mr. Edward Shakespeare, and Miss Violette Browne.

Sixty Years Ago

From the Musical Times of December, 1868:

We have received a prospectus of the newly invented 'Pianoforte and Organ Key and Finger Warmer.' It appears that the improvement consists of the application under the keys of the instrument, of the means of warming them, and the surrounding air; and therefore also the hands of the performers. We can imagine that in cold weather, when the fingers become numbed by practice (especially in schools, where fires are often not too plentiful) some such invention as this would be a real luxury. Mr. G. Price is the patentee.

ELGAR'S MUSIC TO 'BEAU BRUMMEL'

The performance of Mr. Bertram Matthews's romantic play 'Beau Brummel' at Birmingham had a very special interest in that the incidental music was written by no less famous a composer than Sir Edward Elgar. It is good to hear of Mr. Gerald Lawrence commissioning Sir Edward and, still better, to see Sir Edward accepting and discharging the commission with his usual flair for the right thing at the right time, and his consummate mastery of every resource, great and small, of musical art. Inevitably in such a production the play 's the thing, wherein they hope to catch the 'conscience' of the public. But if there are to be recorders it is surely important that their music should be as good as possible. With Sir Edward's help Mr. Lawrence secured for his production a distinction shared by no other play of the kind. In accepting a task of secondary importance Sir Edward showed once more that those who are best fitted to command also know best how to obey.

His opportunities were, of course, strictly limited. Brief preludes, a minuet, music en sourdine to accompany the most important and pathetic dialogues. It seems a small thing for a composer who has written the greatest Violin Concerto and the noblest oratorios of our time. But Elgar set about it with good-will, and the result is a pattern of what incidental music should be. It never disturbs the action; it never intrudes, yet it has not only charm and merit but characteristic individuality.

The most touching and effective scene is the last, where Beau Brummel, now an old man, dies in exile and in poverty. He sees, as if in a dream, the ghosts of his past; he hears the sound of the violins of the assembly rooms where he used to lead the dance; he believes the woman he loved so well is at his side; he thinks the Regent, once his friend, is coming for him. But a greater Being has come, and Beau Brummel must follow. It is in this scene (which made a deep impression at Birmingham) that the discreet, wistful Elgarian melodies, played so softly that every whispered word of the actor is heard distinctly, tell with greatest effect. The minuet danced in the first Act evolves to music that has grace and originality, and a most laudable ecomony of effect is evident everywhere.

The only flaw lay in the weakness of the orchestra Sir Edward had to instruct and conduct. What is the use of securing the best music unless the means are provided for an adequate performance? F. B.

The Paddington Music Club announces an interesting season's programme—December 4: Violin and song recital, Orrea Pernel and Keith Falkner; January 21: The Catterall Quartet; February 4: Song recital, Elisabeth Schumann; March 4: Sonata and Trio recital, Mrs. Derenburg, Adila Fachiri, and Alexander Fachiri. Full particulars as to membership, &c., from the Club Hon. Secretary, Mrs. Herbert Lousada, 4, Clifton Place, W.2.

Competition Festival Record

BLACKPOOL FESTIVAL

(from a manchester correspondent)

With advancing years the Blackpool Festival reveals no sign of declining vitality—rather the contrary. Success has not attended all its efforts to bring within the scope of its influence any bassoon or horn players, although the other members of the wind-family flock there in sufficient numbers to make the present dearth of professional wind-players somewhat hard to explain. When five amateur oboists, one a lady, play George Henschel's 'Shepherd's Lament' (inscribed to Léon Goossens), and many more clarinettists the Ralph Greaves 'Idyll,' it justifies the policy of nothing short of the highest even in classes which are often deemed to stand in need of nursing. Rather curious confirmation of the truth of this attitude was forthcoming in the String Quartet class, where Alec Rowley's 'Phyllis and Corydon'—a work distinctly on the light and somewhat easy side, was used and only two entries resulted! A classic quartet the previous year attracted thrice as many, and the E minor 'Cello Sonata of Brahms this year brought nine pairs of candidates, and (what is more to the point) a definitely higher standard was reached in the classical works.

Nowadays there is little need to dilate upon the peculiarly high attainment repeatedly revealed here in choral matters; and it is increasingly evident that the best from many other centres regard Blackpool experience (and with some luck, honours, maybe!) as the Mecca of their desire.

In choral affairs in the North-Western area audiences have come to regard superlatively high standards very much as a matter of course, but the last few years have made many realise that in the Tudor work, in chamber music, in the more advanced string and pianoforte solo classes, the advance in sound musicianship is moving upwards rapidly: witness the Brahms playing just mentioned, and the quality of the playing in the sight-reading of an accompaniment to a tricky violin composition.

Ten years back we had as a matter of course to assume a rather apologetic tone towards most 'cello members in the Trio class, and oftener to protest against a too dominant pianist, but not so to-day, so rapidly has the ensemble sense been cultivated.

Probably nowhere else would it be possible to compress into twelve hours as much folk-dancing as was done on October 19, when the vast spaces of the Empress Ballroom were given over to this work for the day. On the empty stage lay all the paraphernalia of a modern dance orchestra; on its crowded floor was one fiddler, name of Elsie Avril, and in the surrounding balconies swarms of friends and admirers of the dancing youngsters. The old, well-known saying about 'In the beginning was rhythm' used to be followed by a rider 'but no longer so to-day.' Current developments in this and many other forms of dancing have, at any rate, averted any fear of rhythmical decline or death.

Not many Festivals have persevered so valiantly in the cause of the operatic ensemble classes, where individual brilliance has to take second place; here it always involves heavy expense in the reprinting of the excerpts (this year from 'La Bohème'), and none but such an altruistic band as appears to exist at Blackpool would cheerfully sacrifice year after year a cool £50 in such a cause. But its reward comes in the shape of verdicts like those passed by a seasoned operatic-conductor and an equally sapient opera critic, who jointly asserted, after hearing two groups from Manchester and Nelson (an East Lancashire, cotton manufacturing town), in the Finale of Act 3 of 'Bohème,' that few English-singing professional companies could have equalled, much less excelled, the team-work of these enthusiastic amateurs.

Not fewer than five hundred solo singers kept matters lively on the Wednesday and Thursday, and the finals witnessed the usual searching trial and re-trial of the several best voices that had emerged from the mass. Stamina and indomitable will-power must be allied to vocal quality if you would win through to the Rose Bowl at Blackpool! But what a crowd you sing to! How discerning, how appreciative of interpretative subtleties! Where else, someone asked, would you get an audience to sit from 6.30 to 10.45 as they do on 'Rose Bowl' night, to listen to men and women who find relaxation from arduous toil in mill, foundry, mine, or shop, in working on the great things in vocal music? And this audience does not budge until Mr. Plunket Greene has given not merely the winner but the why and wherefore for his choice, who was Nora Rust, a weaver in an Accrington mill, finding alleviation from the eternal clangour of looms in Mozart's 'Non più di fiori,' Schumann's 'Er, der herrlichste,' and Hubert Parry's 'Maiden.'

Conspicuous amidst all the glorious singing on the final day were readings of Julius Harrison's 'Blessed Damozel,' so fully reviewed recently in these columns. It constitutes a landmark in music for women's choirs, and no more completely satisfying work than this has been heard at a Festival in recent years. Those who approach it must first assimilate Rossetti, they must live with it as they do with their work, for only so can they absorb its emotional content. Then when they have done the same with Harrison's music, we get such an emotional outpouring of the spirit of word and music as was our joy during that unforgettable half-hour on the Saturday night when Barrow, Plymouth, and Blackpool singers each added something of their own interpretative genius.

The six orchestras which played Schubert's 'Rosamunde' Overture at the opening of the Saturday evening season contrived, from the point of numbers, to make this one of the most important events of its sort yet held in competitive circles. Professional aid to the extent of ten per cent. was permissible, but one band from the South Yorkshire coalfield disdained, perhaps unwisely, any such assistance.

---

JERSEY EISTEDDFOD (October 29 to November 3).—The continued success of this musical Festival gives Jersey a claim to be considered, with perhaps one exception, the most musical island. There were a hundred classes, covering all sorts of musical and dramatic performance, and not only was there plentiful support, but the efforts of the competitors reached a very high standard. In the choral competitions the first prizes were won by Mr. W. Morley Powell's Mayo Choir (female-voice) and Mr. J. B. McNair's Cæsarean Choir (male-voice and mixed-voice).

KEIGHLEY.—This year's 'Summerscales' Festival was notable for the quality of the male-voice choral singing. Some splendid performances of Holst's 'Swansea Town' and Bantock's 'Drake's Drum' were given, the best choirs being, in order, Colne Orpheus Glee Union (Mr. Luther Greenwood), Zion Baptist Glee Union, Nelson (Mr. George Walmsley), and Todmorden (Mr. T. H. Lees). In the mixed-voice section, Nelson Glee and Madrigal Society (Mr. T. Hartley) were a few marks ahead of Keighley Vocal Union (Mr. J. Harker), Bramley Choir (Mr. G. A. Holgate) was first in the female-voice class.

NOTTINGHAM (October 24-27).—This was a satisfactory Festival in many ways. More schools entered, a new class for school bands brought fourteen entries, there were six pianoforte trios for Beethoven, and th choral standard showed an improvement. The best standard was shown by the male-voice choirs from Melbourne, Derbyshire (Mr. G. Walton), and Cheslyn Hay (Mr. E. Amphlett), who were first and second in their singing of Elgar's 'The Herald' and Lyon's 'The Fisherman.' The winning mixed-voice and female-voice choirs were Leicester Oriana (Mr. A. C. Nicholls) and Mr. William Turner's Nottingham Choir. A remarkable series of successes was won by the children of High Oakham School, Mansfield, under Mr. Harry Smith.

WORKINGTON (November 5-7).—This Festival, which is of great antiquity, was revived, after war-time cessation, by the Shopping Week Committee in 1924, and is now well established. If memory serves, this was a region that used to yield school singing of surpassing quality. The local faculty has not been lost. It was manifested above all by the singing of boys, particularly those of St. John's School, Workington. In the adult classes the village of Dean won the prizes for mixed-voice and female-voice choirs, the conductor being Mr. J. W. Huddart.

Among the other Festivals recently held were those at BACUP, CHESTERFIELD, INDIAN QUEENS (Cornwall), LEICESTER (where well-known choirs sang in competition), SWINDON (the Eisteddfod, with sixty-four classes), and WADEBRIDGE.

---

SEVENTH ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING AND CONFERENCE OF THE BRITISH FEDERATION OF MUSICAL COMPETITION FESTIVALS

[The following report was unavoidably held over from our November issue.]

The annual meeting and Conference of the British Federation of Musical Competition Festivals was held this year at Buxton. The Central Board and committees met there on Friday afternoon, September 28. In the evening about a hundred Festival representatives were entertained to a reception by the Mayor and his lady in the Palace Hotel, in the course of which a programme of music was performed by local artists. It may be usefully suggested here that greater attention than is usual at these functions might be given to suiting the music to the occasion and the audience. The visitors enjoyed with obvious zest an impromptu community sing-song under the inspiring leadership of Mr. Hugh S. Roberton, of Glasgow Orpheus Choir fame.

On Saturday morning Festival secretaries and representatives conferred unofficially and informally for a couple of hours under the comfortable chairmanship of the Vice-Chairman, the Rev. C. J. Beresford, but the discussion tended to circle rather aimlessly about such threadbare topics as the giving of money prizes. At noon the annual General Meeting opened, Sir Henry Hadow presiding. The business was largely formal, the annual reports and accounts being presented and discussed.

Finance dominated the discussion to such an extent as to draw from the Hon. Vice-President, Mr. F. H. Bisset, the comment that the Federation for several years back had been employing its best brains not on the work for which it was founded but on the mere material problem of how to keep itself in being. He appealed to the Festivals to face the fact that there was but one permanent and basic solution to the problem of Federation finance, viz., that every Festival increase by threepence the amount of each entrance fee of two shillings and upwards and remit the proceeds to the Federation. Sir Henry Hadow warmly supported the appeal, and it was decided to urge all Festivals to adopt the scheme and so dispose of the financial difficulty once and for all.

After lunch Sir Henry Hadow opened the annual Conference with an interesting review of the Federation's work. Captain Gedge (Bedford) opened a discussion on :

HOW TO ATTRACT THE PUBLIC

and spoke on prices of admission, arrangement of programmes, and choice of adjudicators. A general discussion followed, ranging over a wide area. Interest centred chiefly on a pungent speech from Mr. Hugh S. Roberton (Glasgow) on the necessity for improvement in adjudicators' equipment, which gave more than one furiously to think.

Mr. James Brown (London) introduced a discussion on :

STRING CLASSES

which created only a mild interest, except when he announced himself as rather a heretic on balance, and claimed as an example of fine balance a combination of six first violins, six seconds, six violas, and six 'cellos ! A desultory discussion followed, which finally petered out without ever getting anywhere.

Mr. Roberton announced that a committee of the Central Board was considering a scheme for the promotion of which it was proposed to hold, possibly at Liverpool as a convenient centre, probably in 1930. The scheme under consideration was as follows, viz., 1930, mixed choirs ; 1931, men's choirs ; 1932, women's choirs ; 1933, children's choirs ; i.e., in every fourth year choirs in each of these four sections would have an opportunity of winning the blue riband of the Festival world. Each Festival would last for one day only, and one prize only would be awarded each year—the Diploma of the Federation. As the announcement was made by way of preliminary intimation only, no discussion took place, and the Conference ended, the members being entertained to tea in the Spa Gardens by the committee of the Buxton Festival.

A NATIONAL COMPETITION FESTIVAL

In the evening the annual banquet took place in the Palace Hotel, Sir Henry Hadow again presiding. Speeches were taboo. Dr. Bairstow piloted the company tactfully through half-a-dozen madrigals, but why the same half-dozen as last year ? Was it due to economy in the matter of copies, or to lack of enterprise, or to playing for safety ?

The Sunday programme included an afternoon drive through the Peak district of Derbyshire, and on Monday the visitors were conducted round the city. Altogether a decided success on the social and personal side. But in future the Federation will really have to put a little more thought, and enterprise, and preliminary work into the organizing of the 'discussion' side of the Conferences.

S. B. N.

THE EASTBOURNE FESTIVAL

The annual Festival of music at Eastbourne was given during the first week in November, and the residents had the opportunity of hearing their orchestra under the direction of several distinguished conductors, including Sir Henry Wood, Sir Landon Ronald, and Sir Thomas Beecham. Mr. H. G. Amers, the permanent conductor of the orchestra, also took a large share in the direction of the programmes, which embraced a wide variety of music from the classics to that of the present day. Unfortunately, the most important modern works—Respighi's 'Concerto Gregoriano' for violin and orchestra, Bantock's 'Hebridean' Symphony, and Goossens's Sinfonietta—were all put into one programme, with the result that none of them was sufficiently rehearsed or adequately presented. Madame Fachiri played the difficult solo part in Respighi's work with great brilliance, but the background to it was all out of drawing, and we must wait for a more finished performance before criticising it. It was evident, however, that Mr. Amers has an orchestra which can deal very competently with more familiar music, and he may at least be honoured for his enterprise in attempting to break new ground.

D. H.

The Harold Brooke Choir announces a very attractive programme for its concert at the Bishopsgate Institute on December 12, at 8 p.m. Quasi-novelties are Grieg's Four Psalms for chorus and baritone solo, and Brahms's motet 'O rend the heavens.' The programme includes also Bach's double-choir motet, 'Be not afraid,' and carols and part-songs by Prætorius, Sweelinck, Walford Davies, Dale, &c. There will be violin solos by Mr. William Primrose.

London Concerts

CZECH SOCIETY'S CONCERT

It was a gracious move on the part of the Czech Society of Great Britain to organize an orchestral concert at Queen's Hall, on October 16, in commemoration of the tenth anniversary of the re-establishment of Czechoslovakia, and to devote the proceeds to the funds of the British Legion. The concert, which consisted entirely of Czechoslovak music, was memorable in several respects, and pre-eminently for the re-appearance in London of Madame Emmy Destinn. Those who in the long interval during the war, and after, had come to regard this great artist merely as a delightful memory were astonished to find that her vocal powers were still fresh and vigorous and her artistry by no means tarnished by her years of partial retirement. Probably no artist suffered more from the world war than Emmy Destinn. An ardent patriot, the doors of many Continental opera houses were closed to her, and, after 1916, she was no longer able to visit America. She retired to her country home, the Castle of Stráz, in Bohemia, and interested herself in literature. Here she wrote a novel of considerable descriptive merit, 'In the Shadow of the Blue Rose.' From time to time she emerged to sing at charity concerts, and at the National Opera at Prague. In this way she upheld the spirit of her people during the worst days of the war.

At the concert in question, Madame Destinn began with familiar items from her operatic repertory. 'Terinka's Song,' from Dvorák's opera 'The Jacobin,' is not very interesting apart from the scene to which it belongs ; nor is the invocation ('Ye, the Almighty Gods') from Smetana's 'occasional' music-drama 'Libusa,' an ideal concert excerpt. It was not until she sang Marenka's air, 'This dream of love,' from 'The Bartered Bride,' that Madame Destinn seemed quite happy in her work, and made her audience happy too. Afterwards she sang a Slovak song, specially written for her by Kovarovic, the late conductor of the National Opera at Prague. This song, which she gave with all her old charm and brilliancy, carried away her mixed audience, Bohemian and British, and was warmly encored.

Sir Henry Wood and his Symphony Orchestra (a hundred performers) gave an appropriately festive reading of the Overture to 'The Bartered Bride,' and a superb performance of Dvorák's 'New World' Symphony, which satisfied the critical sense alike of the Czechs and English present at the concert.

There was only one novelty in the programme—the recently published orchestral rhapsody 'Taras Bulba,' by the late Leos Janácek, the Moravian composer, whose operas have only recently become popular in so many German and Central European cities. Janácek died on August 12, 1928. 'Taras Bulba' consists of a series of linked movements based on episodes from Gogol's well-known epic of Cossack life. Like all Janácek's later works, it is a vivid expression of a strong and entirely conventional personality—a personality which undoubtedly expresses itself most freely and effectively through the medium of choral music ; nevertheless 'Taras Bulba' contains much that it would be interesting to hear again.

R. N.

THE GERMAN SINGERS

Two years ago a party of students from Brandenburg came to England and gave concerts of early German music in a delightfully informal but dignified manner characteristic of the spirit set free in Germany by the Youth Movement. Last month they returned with an inter-University team of undergraduates as we should describe it, including players of instruments and singers of both sexes. They spent a month here, and gave recitals of sacred and secular music in many towns. I heard a sacred concert in Southwark Cathedral, and a secular entertainment which included a puppet-show at the Royal College of Music. My own chief impression derived from their singing of the early polyphonic German works was the internationality of music in 16th-century Europe. We are for the most part familiar only with the motets and madrigals of the Flemish, Italian, and English masters, but we find that a hymn of Baltasar Resinarius and a madrigal by Othmayr show characteristics common to them all. We can differentiate the gravity of Byrd and Gibbons from the sensuousness of Lassus and Palestrina, and if we knew more French and German work of the period we should appreciate its diversity in unity. A cantata of Michael Prætorius, 'Erstanden ist der heilige Christ,' for soli, two- to seven-part choir, and all manner of instruments (as the programme correctly described it), was a piece of warm-hearted music that anticipated Bach's Easter cantatas.

The German Singers, besides introducing us to unfamiliar things, also sang Bach's motet 'Sing to the Lord,' and gave us a puppet performance of Mozart's 'Bastien and Bastienne.' Herr Georg Götsch treats Bach almost as though it was a madrigal, obtaining thereby a buoyancy mentally lacking in our more massive performances, and sacrificing the majestic rhythmic tramp which we have come to expect in Bach for a lightness and flexibility which we associate with earlier music. But it is well done in itself, interesting to us as a change, and probably nearer to Bach's own performances in which his resources were similar. Mozart's opera is too slight for the operatic stage, but it is admirable for puppets, and the magic scenes are most convincing when executed with the superhuman agility of marionettes and the bewildering lighting effects of a dolls' theatre. Of their playing of recorders, of Josquin's 'Pange Lingua' Mass, and a number of well-sung canons, there is no room to speak. They played Purcell—a compliment appreciated by an English audience—but they had not quite 'got the hang' of him; his music has a keener edge than if he had been a German. It was all very interesting, and most of it extremely enjoyable.

F. H.

ROYAL PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY

The first concert brought a welcome visitor, Nicolas Medtner, to play us his Pianoforte Concerto in C (No. 2, Op. 50). For an hour, or perhaps less, he and the orchestra chatted away. This music could never be mistaken for Tchaikovsky's. It never emphasises or enlarges; it merely mentions, and having mentioned passes on. Medtner's style is too good for this rapid showing, and it became a little fidgeting to have it set before one in so many hurried glimpses. It was like a lantern lecture at which every picture is whisked away just as you are beginning to take it in. So that, however good the stuff of Medtner's music, it was difficult to enjoy it, and the desire to hear the Concerto again is only a desire to give it another chance. Medtner's playing was rather like his composition—he crouched over his work and deftly disposed of it, bit by bit.

Was Wallace's 'Villon' (which preceded the Concerto) guiltless of the same fault? There is nothing in it that is ill said or not worth the saying. It goes well, and always did, from start to finish. But at the finish there is a feeling that one has never been gripped. There has been some failure in the art of showmanship, an art which every aristocratic composer, of course, abhors, often to the loss of contact with his audience.

Then came Elgar's 'Falstaff,' and contact was made. Not that this is easy music to listen to, but Elgar does make one hear, thoroughly and comprehendingly, what he is telling us from his soul about Falstaff and Prince Henry, and Shakespeare, and England. Sir Landon Ronald was the conductor. He seemed, for a while, to be getting on well enough, but later on something better than that was in the air, for those who know and love the work simply got lost in it, a thing that has often happened before.

M.

Schubert's Mass in E flat, No. 6 (composed in 1828), was sung at the Philharmonic concert which fell nearest to the composer's death-day. The programme also included Strauss's 'Don Quixote,' and considerable extracts from Berlioz's 'Romeo and Juliet.'

Sir Hamilton Harty was to have conducted, but he fell sick. His place was taken at short notice by Sir Hugh Allen and Sir Henry Wood. The Mass was eminently worth hearing, if one was prepared not to ask of Schubert that he should when writing on the sacred theme be other than himself—be Palestrina, Bach, or Beethoven. Sacred and profane love were hardly separable in his mind; and consequently there is sometimes a homely flavour in his celebration of the Mysteries, notably in the sweet violoncello solo which ushers in 'Et incarnatus.'

The vogue is, we know, all against Schubert's Church music, which does not chime in with the new austerity. Otherwise the tender and pathetic beauties of the E flat Mass would not be so generally ignored. The 'Kyrie' is a lovely piece of music. The G minor 'Domine Deus' plunges into the depths of feeling, and again this is true of the 'Crucifixus' and the powerful C minor 'Agnus Dei.' The 'Dona nobis' is full of Schubertian charm. On the other hand some of the polyphonic writing seems perfunctory and wanting in certainty of direction. The Philharmonic performance of this work (like that by Dr. Darke's choir of the A flat and by Mr. Kennedy Scott's choir, on a recent gramophone record, of the early G major Mass) should awaken choral societies to the existence of all this unfashionable but beautiful music.

In the circumstances of November 15 a highly finished performance was hardly to be expected, but the Philharmonic choir sang well. It is a pity that it does not include more men. The solo quartet was barely adequate, the soprano being somewhat weak and constricted, and the tenor too aggressive. Mr. Stuart Robertson, the bass, was, however, capital.

In Strauss's 'Don Quixote' the violoncello solo was ably played by Livio Mannucci. The concert should have ended here, and another whole evening should have been allowed for the over-due revival of Berlioz's 'Romeo and Juliet,' the extracts from which found a tired audience who were for the most part obviously unprepared for the great development of the love-scene.

C.

B.B.C. CONCERT

Apart from the Borodin Symphony in B minor (which the orchestra conducted by Sir Henry Wood played rather casually), the interest of the B.B.C. concert rested on two works, one of which was new to us and the other unfamiliar—a Violin Concerto by Alfredo Casella, played by Szigeti, and an Orchestral Suite by Albert Roussel. The Concerto has good points—better points than any other work of the composer's played so far in London. The orchestra is handled with great skill and, what is rarer, with due regard for the limitations of the solo instrument. Moreover, in the slow movement there are flashes of real beauty. In the Roussel Suite the composer seems to try to make the best of two worlds, for his score has at times an almost Wagnerian solidity, and claims at times the utter freedom of the modern. The result is rather ponderous wit. The best thing in the evening was the violin playing of Szigeti, a violinist whose technique excels by far that of the frigid stylists prominent at the moment. His tone is ever warm and convincing, whose artistic sympathies apparently know no limitation.

F. B.

HALLÉ ORCHESTRA IN LONDON

The Hallé orchestra, conducted by Sir Hamilton Harty, played at the B.B.C. concert on November 9 at Queen's Hall. The programme consisted of three Symphonies: Beethoven in A, Schubert in B minor, and Brahms in E minor. The public showed its appreciation of the Manchester Orchestra's visit by filling the hall, a fact worth mentioning since the Berlin Orchestra had already had three crowded audiences that week.

The Berliners, too, had played Beethoven's seventh Symphony, so that there was no avoiding comparisons. The Berliners excelled in quality of tone (though their wood-wind was by no means perfect). The Hallé Orchestra had a characteristic spiritedness and accent. Brahms's Symphony kept the listener's attention taut. It was a performance of unusual vehemence, but the vehemence was not improvised, and the details came out with fine precision.

SIR HENRY WOOD'S SUNDAY CONCERTS

Sir Henry Wood has been conducting Sunday afternoon concerts at the Palladium Theatre near Oxford Circus—an immense auditorium which is said to be a possible choice for Sir Thomas Beecham's operatic enterprise (if the Imperial League can increase its membership and bring the imposing scheme into practice). It was good to see a huge audience at a concert of Bach, Handel, and Beethoven on October 19, and at one of Bach, Beethoven, and Brahms on November 4. At the latter the fifth 'Brandenburg' was played, with Mr. Harold Samuel, Mr. Bernard Reillie, and Mr. Arthur Greghorn as soloists, and Mr. Samuel also played in Beethoven's early B flat Concerto, with great charm and appropriate style. The orchestra was on the stage. It seemed to need a sounding-board to collect the tone which was probably escaping into the flies.

ARMISTICE DAY CONCERT

The Armistice Day concert at the Albert Hall was conducted by Sir Thomas Beecham and Mr. W. H. Reed. An opportunity was missed of making it a fit expression of the thoughts of the day. True, it began with Elgar's ode 'For the Fallen.' But then came incongruous things, such as a Flute Concerto and Russian ballet music. It is strange that musicians should not realise what a great part their art might rightly play in the observance of the day of national remembrance and proud sorrowing.

The singers were the Manchester Beecham Opera Choir, who were paying their first visit to London. They are a comparatively small body of exceptionally good voices. The tone in all sections was beautiful. The Albert Hall was, however, not the place in which one would have chosen to hear them; nor was Delius's 'Sea Drift' a good piece for the occasion—it was half lost.

MICHELE SENTINI

This was the nom de guerre of an ambitious Oxford undergraduate, who conducted the London Symphony Orchestra at Queen's Hall in a programme of familiar masterpieces (Mozart's G minor Symphony, Franck's Symphony, the 'Flying Dutchman' Overture, and so on). It is hard to find the right words in which to say nicely, with due appreciation of a sportsman and with hopes for his future, that his present form does not do. If conducting were only a question of beating time and keeping up with the orchestra, Mr. Sentini would not be amiss, but it is hardly so simple. Control of shaping and of balance was beyond him. C.

JULIAN CLIFFORD

Mr. Julian Clifford, the son of the late conductor of the Harrogate Orchestra, made his first appearance as a conductor in London at a concert in Queen's Hall on October 19. His programme was not adventurous, containing Berlioz's 'Carneval Romain' Overture, Mozart's 'Haffner' Symphony, and the second Symphony by Brahms. But there is something to be said for trying out a new car on a familiar road; at least it makes judgment of its performance easier. It was evident at once in the Overture, which needs skilful handling, that Mr. Clifford possesses a considerable knowledge of the technique of conducting. The leads and the changes of rhythm were clearly indicated, and his judgment of pace seemed sure. Brahms presents a more serious problem than the technical one, and it is not for the inexperienced in life and music to do full justice to his symphonies. But the concert showed that Mr. Clifford is a conductor of great promise, though his energy seemed to flag towards the end of the evening. The Royal Philharmonic Society's Orchestra gave him every assistance, and played especially well in the 'Haffner' Symphony, and in Elgar's Violoncello Concerto with Miss Beatrice Harrison as soloist. D. H.

THE NEW ENGLISH MUSIC SOCIETY

The first concert of the New English Music Society suggested enterprise and intelligence. No doubt the organizers, eager to make a good impression, overstepped the mark. Not all the performances of the London Chamber Orchestra reached the high level of the Respighi 'Trittico,' and perhaps an English Music Society may reasonably be expected to give greater prominence to English music. But Mr. Anthony Bernard no doubt made the best use of his opportunities for rehearsal, and secured adequate readings of two novelties—the 'Trittico' and a Suite by Boyce.

Both compositions proved unusually attractive. The Respighi work draws inspiration from three pictures of Botticelli's—'Spring,' 'The Adoration of the Magi,' and 'The Birth of Venus.' The first and easiest of the three subjects is the least distinguished; the second holds our interest on account of the clever handling of ecclesiastical themes; the third, which might well have puzzled a less talented composer, has been treated with consummate tact and resource. The Boyce Suite is typical of an age which produced in England much that without fuss and boastings possesses a quiet dignity and charm of its own. We look to the New English Music Society to encourage the research that must bring to light other works of this kind.

As for the songs—neither music nor performance calls for comment. F. B.

GORDON BRYAN'S FIRST CONCERT

Maurice Ravel was the hero of Mr. Gordon Bryan's first concert, the French composer being responsible for the whole programme and a fair share of the performance. It began with the A minor Trio (Gordon Bryan, Frederick Holding, and May Muckle), and after some songs came the second piece of chamber music—the Introduction and Allegro for harp with string quartet, flute, and clarinet (conducted by the composer). The 'Chansons Madécasses,' for voice, flute, 'cello, and pianoforte, and the Sonata for violin and pianoforte, concluded a scheme which, a sceptic suggested, was meant to illustrate the rise and fall of Maurice Ravel. It behoves the critic to dissociate himself from all such extreme views. But it cannot be denied that the Ravel of 1906 is a more engaging person than the Ravel of 1926, and that there is charm in the Introduction and Allegro which is not to be found in the Sonata for violin and pianoforte or in the 'Chansons Madécasses,' which gave Miss Odette de Foras so hard a nut to crack. Even the Trio of 1915, in spite of its obvious padding (trills and arpeggios galore), is the work of a grave and reverend gentleman in comparison with the crude jests of the 'Blues' in the Sonata. But we take this to be rather a proof of the great versatility of the composer. He can and does out-herod Herod. If the public wants eccentricity he will provide it; if they ask for 'blues,' he'll show them what 'blues' really are. Of course, the concert was a great success. There were many encores, and applause for the composer and his distinguished interpreters. F. B.

LÉNER QUARTET

The Léner Quartet began a new series of recitals at Queen's Hall on October 30, with an admirable programme—Haydn's Quartet in D, Elgar's Quartet, and Brahms's Clarinet Quintet. Technically, the first work gave the best results, for the matchless ensemble and the neatness of the detail work were simply above praise. Elgar's Quartet provided an interest which may be compared to that of a first performance. The Quartet is not, perhaps, the best of the three contributions Elgar has made to chamber music, but these Budapest players brought out the rare beauties of the middle movement as they have never been revealed before. This is the highest peak of the range, and, thanks to the inspired leading of Mr. Jeno Léner and his colleagues, we got the full benefit of the brighter sun and purer air. The Brahms Quintet was the most consistently beautiful and the noblest of the three works performed. But even so expert a player as Mr. Charles Draper had some little difficulty in matching the perfect balance of the strings—nothing more, however, than can be explained by the fact that perfect ensemble is not built up in a day but in years of constant association. To Mr. Draper and to the Quartet we are indebted for a performance otherwise most lucid and most enjoyable. The proceeds went to the Middlesex Hospital.

At the second concert the London String Quartet joined Mr. Jeno Léner and his colleagues in a memorable performance of Mendelssohn's Octet. The work itself is full of interest. Although an early composition (Op. 20), there is no sign of immaturity to be found anywhere, but an easy flow of melody, a felicity of touch that recalls Mozart. Certainly no other master showed such accomplishments and such facility at so early an age. As to the performance, much could be written in comparison of the two teams that played side by side. F.B.

WORKS OF VAN DIEREN

Mr. John Goss has once more staked a large sum of money on his faith in the works of Van Dieren. The concert which he gave at Wigmore Hall on November 10 contained the sixth String Quartet, played by the International Quartet, which to the uninitiated is quite unintelligible, a Serenata for chamber orchestra (conducted by Mr. John Barbirolli), about the same, some songs which do make some sort of sense to ordinary ears and have a certain fragile beauty of their own, and an elaborate joke called 'Marginalia in musica to de Quincey's Essay on Murder.' This last was real fun, full of mock solemnity, with a Latin refrain chanted by Mr. Goss's faithful male-voice quartet, and with a fantastic pianoforte part brilliantly played by Mr. Reginald Paul. F. H.

NICOLAS MEDTNER

M. Medtner, who came to England to introduce his Pianoforte Concerto at the first Philharmonic concert, gave a recital of his works at Æolian Hall later in the month (November 16). The programme consisted of two groups of songs (words by Goethe and Pushkin respectively), sung by Madame Tatiana Makushina, and two groups of pianoforte solos played by the composer himself, who is a good pianist with a musical touch and a fine technique. The songs are really pianoforte solos with verbal comments rather than songs in the ordinary sense, but they are full of unforced, fluent, and agreeable music. The Sonata-Ballada shows the same characteristics with a balance of classical and romantic feeling much as in Brahms. M. Medtner's music is alive, unlike that of most other conservative composers of to-day who do not employ modern idioms; it is agreeable to the ear and satisfying to the mind, and it is not dry. He is a descendant of Tchaikovsky, free from the latter's violent reactions; in both, German training and Russian temperament have combined to produce music that is at once individual and couched in commonly understood language. F. H.

SINGERS OF THE MONTH

Miss Elena Gerhardt began a series of Schubert concerts at Queen's Hall. The first programme contained some very rarely-sung pieces, including the beautiful 'Vor meiner Wiege,' which, I am inclined to think, Mr. Capell has underrated in his new book. In the songs that really suited her Miss Gerhardt sang admirably. She included a number that are outside her scope, songs like 'Der Atlas,' 'Ständchen,' and 'Aufenthalt.' Suave songs of domestic sentiment are her province. She has not the breath-control to produce a forcible tone, and even in placid pieces she is apt to go out of tune at the end of a line, particularly on a narrow vowel. It would not be worth while pointing out the defects of this truly fine artist if it were not that some of the potentates of the press hold her to be unequalled and flawless. Mr. Ivor Newton played the accompaniments neatly, but without much character.

It is curious how in the daily papers it is assumed that Miss Gerhardt is a veteran singer, and that once she was far finer than before Time began his inroads. The Observer is given to this view. Miss Gerhardt is, of course, in her prime. The faults in Mr. Reinhold von Warlich's singing were also, I noticed, put down to wear and tear. He, too, gave us a Schubert evening in company with a distinguished pianist, Mr. Philip Jarnach. His faults—dryness, lack of colour, and false intonation—are due simply to a constricted throat. Anyone who sings can tell in a few moments that he does not breathe aright. A pity: for he has the artist's instincts. A large and fashionably dressed audience applauded a performance of 'Am Meer' which lacked the veriest beginnings of a sound technique.

Mr. John Goss sang some difficult songs by Van Dieren at a concert of that composer's works at Wigmore Hall. The discussion of the music is not my province. Mr. Goss's singing has very agreeable quality with a small range of expression. His tone is suave, and its darkness of colouring suits songs of homesickness and the like; but after a little, the sustained lugubriousness of his singing makes one wish for a change. The opera stage, with its demands for animation and clear utterance, would perhaps develop his art.

Mr. Malcolm Davidson gave two concerts at Wigmore Hall. His name had been known for some time as a composer of some genuine songs. As a singer he proved to have a solid baritone voice. It had been well trained in essentials, and it was always pleasing to the ear. The lower notes required more power, especially as the voice was on the heavy side. Mr. Davidson excelled in Bach and Handel. His Lieder-singing was immature. It was too plain and impersonal, and the individual shaping of words and phrases, and the play with dynamic nuances which count for so much in Schubert and Wolf, were missing. We had heard Mr. Davidson's own songs sound more effective on other lips.

Mr. John Hartigan, an American baritone, sang at Grotrian Hall. He was too nervous to do himself justice. His tone was pleasant and promised well, but the singer never got into his stride. One obvious fault was that he sang with too square a mouth, with the result of stiffness, particularly in the upper range. More naturalness and mobility in the play of the facial muscles would make a difference.

Miss Olive Townend gave two recitals. Her voice was warm and even, and she knew well how to deal with those songs which did not ask for too much elaboration or intensity. She might make a step in advance by thinking more of consonants (unwise advice, in most cases!) and less of her vowels, which are sure and good. She need have no fears on the score of hard tone, since she sings so easily and flowingly.

H. J. K.

ERROR.—We regret that our November concert notices contained a slip, Miss Nancy Dyson's name being given as Miss Nancy Dyer.

Music in the Suburbs

'Samson' was performed in spirited fashion by the People's Palace Choral and Orchestral Society on October 27, under Mr. Frank Idle.

Alexandra Choral and Orchestral Society, under Mr. Allen Gill, opened its season at the Northern Polytechnic with 'The Song of Hiawatha.'

The audience for the Dulwich Philharmonic Society's performance of 'A Princess of Kensington,' on November 3, also enjoyed a long speech about opera by Sir Thomas Beecham.

The L.N.E.R. Musical Society, which comes of age this season, gave a programme of great but not unusual enterprise at Hamilton Hall on October 24, when the orchestra played Franck's Symphony, under Mr. E. R. Wilby. The Male-Voice Choir showed its usual quality under Mr. Maddern Williams.

The Northern Symphony Orchestra, founded and conducted by Mr. Harry E. King, opened a new series of Popular Orchestral Concerts at Harrison Hall, Tottenham, in October. The first programme included the 'Unfinished' Symphony. Franck's 'Symphonic Variations,' played by Miss Eileen Willmott, were part of the programme given by Bexley Heath Orchestra under Mr. George H. Coombs. At one of his Bromley Orchestral Concerts Mr. W. H. Reed conducted Dvorák's Symphony in G and the 'Unfinished,' and Mr. Arnold Trowell played the D major 'Cello Concerto by Haydn. The 'Unfinished' was also played, with Tchaikovsky's fourth, at one of the Wimbledon Conservatoire Symphonic Concerts, under Mr. Otscharkoff.

Palmer's Green and District Orchestral Society celebrated its twenty-first birthday with special ceremony on November 2. The programme opened with Gounod's 'Mirella' Overture, with which the Society began its career.

Loughton Choral Society and Orchestra, under Mr. Henry Riding, has adopted the following programme: 'Judas Maccabæus,' 'The Village Blacksmith' by C. F. Noyes, Percy Fletcher's Fantasia on Welsh Airs, and a number of smaller works.

Music in the Provinces

MANCHESTER

REVIVAL OF BERLIOZ'S 'TROJANS AT CARTHAGE'

Whatever may have been the case in prospect, there can scarcely be any doubt now that in the mind of most people (possibly even in Harty's) this revival on November 1 yielded in retrospect what may be regarded as æsthetic disappointment. The grandeur of the theme of 'Les Troyens' must appeal to all, and to a Berlioz more than to most; but whilst the Berlioz of 'Faust,' the 'Te Deum,' the 'Messe des Morts,' or 'Romeo and Juliet,' reveals himself to the maturest minds in music as a Titan, anyone hearing 'The Trojans' for the first time, without anterior knowledge of the works just mentioned, might justifiably be forgiven the shrug of shoulder indicative of something bordering on indifference, if of nothing stronger, at such puerilities as here masquerade in the guise of 'big operatic' ideas. Candour compels the admission that Harty did his prodigious Berlioz propaganda no good at all by this, maybe, final effort, and it is not straining language to state that despite all the inspired and inspiring work so ungrudgingly devoted by him and his co-workers in orchestra and chorus to this opera, the final effect on the great majority of an audience having experience of the other major works of Berlioz will be to leave him much lower in estimation than would have been the case had enthusiasms ceased at the 'Messe des Morts' and 'Romeo and Juliet' in recent years. Cowen did 'The Trojans' at Liverpool, Manchester, and Bradford over thirty years ago, and we may be sure Richter or Beecham would have tackled any revival before now had it been deemed artistically worth while.

A comparative failure to live up to the full stature of so gigantic a theme is one thing, but such facile descents as the insipidity of the love duet of Dido and Æneas (redeemed only by the imaginative touch of the surge of the incoming tide) or the tawdry Ballet Music, not to name the commonplace march of Trojans or Numidian slaves, all point to fundamental poverty of imaginative energy, without which any musical scheme must perish.

The great spreading Berlioz oak-tree, deeply-rooted and fed by the life-giving waters of genius, has grown branches like 'Harold in Italy,' the 'Symphonie Fantastique,' 'Romeo and Juliet,' 'Faust,' the 'Te Deum,' the 'Requiem Mass,' and these will weather all storms of criticism and endure any drought of indifference. If the present writer who, even in boyhood, found Berlioz to fire his imagination and who now, as in youthful days, would gladly make a long journey to hear any truly adequate Berlioz presentation, feels constrained to write thus of 'The Trojans,' imagine the views of the thoroughgoing Berlioz sceptic!

Nothing in the performance missed fire; a reasonable objection may be urged against the poverty of the English text used—apparently it was that or nothing. Harty and his staunch chorus-master had spent weeks on the job, and the choir, on and off the stage, was alert, adequate, and effective, knowing its work inside out.

Orchestrally all went well, save as regards the horn-playing in the 'Chasse Royale'—which, by the way, is one of the Hallé band's standing dishes. But some time or other even the most elect of horn-players may find lips stubbornly refusing to do their duty, and this was their 'off-night'—more 's the pity, when so many distinguished strangers were within our gates.

In the song of Hylas, Walter Glynne had the most effective solo chance, for the long scena for Æneas (Francis Russell) is by no means convincing, even when sung with such obvious good-will as was evinced. Wireless listeners told me next day that Dido's singing, especially the 'Song of Farewell,' sounded to them astonishingly good—even moving, Seated in the hall I could scarcely share their enthusiasm. Does wireless flatter some and diminish others?

The long ensemble sestet in Act 1, Scenes 6 and 7, impressed me as being charged with more dramatic vitality than anything else in the long evening. Whether or no there be agreement with the trend of Harty's enthusiasms, all can acknowledge his wholehearted devotion to the cause he is pleading at the moment.

[Our next number will contain an article by Richard Capell on Berlioz, with special reference to 'The Trojans.'—Editor.]

KURT ATTERBERG'S 'SCHUBERT' SYMPHONY: FIRST PERFORMANCE IN ENGLAND

Whatever views may be held about some aspects of this new work, which was played on November 8 by the Hallé Orchestra under Sir Hamilton Harty, few will be found in disagreement with the broad generalisation that it belongs to the fabricated type so familiar nowadays, and not to the order of inspired work which simply had to be written because the composer could not rest until his passion for self-expression had thus exhausted itself. Symphonies like Atterberg's are not unlike the sectional, portable kind of habitation rapidly disfiguring the choicest stretches of our countryside, which can so easily be put together by competent men on the site; and we can no more think of classing them with notable works of high artistic worth than we would claim these modern makeshift dwellings as models of beautiful domestic architecture. Where is there to be found any sense of balance in its design or lay-out? Where any sustained and logical development of idea, or any suggestion of organic growth from the use of the materials with which the tonal architect and builder can work?—which is leaving out of account altogether any case for the need of self-expression. And without some evidence of the existence of these fundamentals, what can be said for the creation of any new symphony, whether of the 'prize' or any other order? So unbalanced did one find this Atterberg structure that it would have been better, even merciful, to have left it as another 'unfinished' symphony of only two movements, for against any merit of the broadly sustained melodic power evident towards the close of the first movement or the use of a Swedish folk-melody in the Adagio, must be set the sheer banality of the third and closing movement, with the dead weight of its ponderous orchestration. Thus hampered by the relative poverty of thought or idea, deficiencies in the beauty of the structure's main lines are not to be atoned for by any amount of dexterous external adornment. People in the London and other subsequent performances will no doubt be occupied, as many were here, with 'spotting' reminiscent passages and analogies of style. Such things are of no moment. What should matter is that, where, consciously or unconsciously, imitative tendencies are observed, there should be something notably individual blended with it. By that standard Atterberg falls short, however well played and conducted, as at Manchester, he may be. And all this in honour of Schubert! Many Manchester folk, like the writer, left the Free Trade Hall not as we did after Richter's first performance of Elgar's No. 1, treading on air, having experienced a great mental, musical, spiritual uplift, but saddened by the thought that there had been six hundred symphonies entered for this contest, and that Atterberg's had been deemed the best! C. H.

---

BATH.—The season of Orchestral Concerts at the Pump Room, under Mr. Jan Hurst, is proceeding busily. An all-British programme given on November 1 included Quilter's 'Three English Dances,' Holst's 'A Somerset Rhapsody,' Dunhill's 'Guildford Suite,' Sullivan's Masque from 'The Merchant of Venice,' and, conducted by the composer, Dame Ethel Smyth's Overture 'The Bosun's Mate' and 'Two Interlinked French Folk-Songs.'

BIRMINGHAM.—Elgar's music to 'Beau Brummel' is discussed by our Special Correspondent on p. 1124.——'Israel in Egypt' and 'Sing ye to the Lord' were sung with admirable choral technique by the City Choir under Mr. G. D. Cunningham on November 7.——At the City Orchestral Concert on November 8 Dr. Boult conducted the Schubert 'Grand Duo in C' as orchestrated by Joachim, Brahms's Violin Concerto, played by Madame Adila Fachiri, and 'Till Eulenspiegel.'——The Sunday Concerts opened on October 28 with a first-class programme that included the 'Siegfried Idyll,' the 'Unfinished' Symphony, and Dohnányi's 'Variations on a Nursery Theme.'——At the following concert Mr. Niedzielski played a Concerto by Rozycki, and Dr. Whittaker conducted his arrangement of a Northumberland funeral pipe-tune, 'Noble Squire Dacre'; Eric Fogg's 'June Twilight' was played on November 12.——Dvorák's Te Deum and Elgar's 'The Spirit of England' were sung on November 14 by the Catholic Choir, under the Rev. Robert Eaton.——The Rev. E. Benson Perkins played the chief part, as lecturer and organist, in a Schubert Centenary Concert given on November 3 before a proletarian audience of two thousand at the Central Hall.——The chief event in chamber music has been the concert on October 30 at which the Catterall Quartet played Turina's Quartet in D minor, Borodin's in D major, and Ernest Walker's 'Fantasia,' Op. 32.

BLACKPOOL.—The Choral and Orchestral Society opened its season on November 15 with the concert version of 'Faust,' under Mr. Percy M. Dayman.——Future arrangements consist of 'The Messiah' in December and 'The Creation' in March.

BOLTON.—As a background to a pianoforte recital by Backhaus on November 7 the Philharmonic Choir, under Mr. Charles Risegari, gave a selection of part-songs, including Balfour Gardiner's 'Sir Eglamore,' Elgar's 'Go, song of mine,' and Stanford's 'The Blue Bird.'

BOURNEMOUTH.—The winter season at the Winter Gardens is now going with a swing. Recent programmes have included the 'Cockaigne' Overture, Hermann Grabner's 'Kleine Abendmusik,' Dvorák's second Symphony, Smetana's 'Vltava,' Cowen's 'English Country Dances,' Brahms's fourth Symphony, Berlioz's 'Symphonie Fantastique,' Mendelssohn's 'Scotch Symphony,' and Respighi's Violin Concerto.——On November 7 the Pro Arte Quartet played music of Goossens, Milhaud, and Debussy.

BRADFORD.—The music given by Mr. Keith Douglas and the West Riding Chamber Orchestra on October 28 included Mozart's Bassoon Concerto, played by Mr. Archie Camden, and Satie's 'Two Gymnopedies,' orchestrated by Debussy.——Mr. Erik Brewerton played the 'Variations on a Theme by Hüttenbrenner' in the course of a Schubert pianoforte recital on November 1.——The Bradford Philharmonic Orchestra was conducted by Mr. Keith Douglas on November 11 in Farrar's 'Three Spiritual Studies' and Schubert's fifth Symphony.

BRISTOL.—The Bristol Operatic School undertook a characteristic enterprise during the first week of November by producing Holst's 'The Perfect Fool' in modern costume. Mr. Tom Lempriere played the Fool in a pullover and plus-fours, and the rest were in keeping. An excellent orchestra was conducted by Mr. Robert Percival. Purcell's 'King Arthur' was also performed, with excellent choral singing and artistic staging.——Smyth's Mass in D, conducted by the composer, and Coleridge-Taylor's 'A Tale of Old Japan,' conducted by Mr. C. Kingsley Killip, did not attract a large audience on November 3, although the Choral Society has a good and well-deserved reputation at Bristol.——A series of four recitals by the Léner Quartet began on October 17 with a Mozart programme.——The Catterall Quartet played Ernest Walker's 'Fantasia' on October 24.——Miss Alice Ehlers, at the Little Theatre on November 10, displayed her skill as a harpsichordist as one of the artists in a programme that ranged from Byrd to Mozart.——The new Bristol Symphony Orchestra opened a series of concerts at Colston Hall, under the direction of Mr. Richard Austin, on November 14. The programme included Glazounov's Symphony in C minor.

BURTON.—The Hallé Orchestra and Sir Hamilton Harty, paying their annual visit on October 30, gave Elgar's 'Enigma Variations.'

CAMBORNE.—The tenth series of concerts by the Cornwall Symphony Orchestra opened on Sunday, November 4, with a concert under Dr. Charles Rivers, who conducted Brahms's fourth Symphony; Mozart's 'Magic Flute' Overture was given under Mr. Walter Barnes, who had been conductor of the Orchestra for over twenty years.

CAMBRIDGE.—The entertainment given by the A.D.C. on November 7 consisted of Shakespeare's 'A Lover's Complaint,' given as an illustrated and danced poem with music by Mr. Dennis Arundell, and Stravinsky's 'The Soldier's Tale.' The principal dancer in both productions was a Cambridge resident, Madame Lydia Lopokova.——The first concert of the C.U.M.S. was given on November 10. Sir Thomas Beecham conducted the Royal Philharmonic Society's Orchestra in Brahms's third Symphony, works of Delius and Debussy, and the Suite entitled 'The gods go a-begging,' which Sir Thomas has arranged from Handel.——The C.U.M.S. programme for December 3, includes Jannequin's 'La bataille de Marignan,' for unaccompanied choir, Holst's Two Psalms, a selection from the 'Christmas Oratorio,' Sweelinck's 'Hodie Christus natus est,' and Vaughan Williams's Fantasia on Christmas Carols. The conductor is Dr. Cyril Rootham.

CHELTENHAM.—The second of the annual series of concerts that have grown from the Holst Festival of 1926 opened on October 29, when the City of Birmingham orchestra, under Dr. Boult, played Brahms's first Symphony and Mr. P. J. Taylor played the organ part in Guilmant's Symphony in D minor.

COVENTRY.—The 'Unfinished' Symphony was conducted by Mr. George Williams at the first concert of the Co-operative Symphony Orchestra.

DERBY.—The Municipal and County Chamber Concerts opened with a programme given by Miss Jelly d'Aranyi, Madame Adila Fachiri, and Mr. Roy Henderson.

DONCASTER.—The Musical Society gave the second Act of Gluck's 'Orpheus' and Purcell's 'Dido and Æneas' on October 24. Mr. H. A. Bennett conducted, and the three principals were local singers.

GUILDFORD.—Mr. Claud Powell opened his twentieth series of subscription concerts on October 16 with a popular programme that included a good deal of Bach and, under the composer's direction, Dunhill's 'Suite for String Orchestra.' This was Mr. Powell's seventy-seventh orchestral concert at Guildford.

HALIFAX.—The following is only a selection from the programme given by the Madrigal Society, under Mr. Shepley, on November 8: Dowland's 'Awake, sweet Love,' Morley's 'Now is the month of maying,' Geoffrey Shaw's arrangement of 'Gossip Joan,' Jones's 'Fair Oriana,' Debussy's 'Lord, lovely hast Thou made' and 'Cold Winter, villain that thou art,' Brahms's 'Night watch,' Elgar's 'Death on the Hills,' Bach's 'The Heavens shout,' Dale's carol 'Rosa Mystica,' and Holst's 'This have I done.'——'The Banner of St. George' and Mendelssohn's 'Italian' Symphony were given under Mr. Walter Haworth on November 13 by the new Musical Society at Mytholmroyd.

HASTINGS.—Winter music, under Mr. Basil Cameron, began with a Wagner concert on October 27. The orchestra of about thirty players is said to be one of the best in the South of England.——Hastings Festival is in progress as we go to press.

HUDDERSFIELD.—Sir Henry Coward conducted a concert given on a large scale by the Choral Society on November 2. 'The Dream of Gerontius' and 'The Mystic Trumpeter' were performed in accordance with the best Yorkshire traditions, with Miss Muriel Brunskill, Mr. Walter Widdop, and Mr. Horace Stevens as the principals.

HULL.—The Harmonic Society did not draw a large audience with its concert on November 2. The programme included Schubert's 'The Song of Miriam,' a part-song, 'To-night,' by the conductor, Mr. Walter Porter, and a good selection of Bach and Handel.——The Vocal Society, under Sir Henry Coward, had a successful evening with 'The Song of Hiawatha.'

IPSWICH.—The first of the Municipal Concerts at the Public Hall, on October 31, was a recital by Mr. Lionel Tertis (viola), Mr. Leslie Holmes (baritone), and Mr. Harry Isaacs (pianoforte).

LEICESTER.—At its first concert of the season the Symphony Orchestra played the 'Unfinished' Symphony and other well-known works under the direction of Dr. Malcolm Sargent, who founded the orchestra and still maintains a regular connection with it.

LEEDS.—At a Schubert Centenary Concert by the Leeds Symphony Orchestra on November 10, Mr. Julius Harrison conducted the rarely-heard fifth Symphony in B flat and the 'Fierrabras' Overture.——Mr. Raymond Meert was the horn player in Brahms's A flat Trio at the Mid-day Recital on October 30.

LINCOLN.—Canon Scott conducted the Lincoln Orchestral Society on October 31 in the 'Unfinished' Symphony and Grieg's Pianoforte Concerto, with Mr. John Bee as soloist.

LIVERPOOL.—The sixth Symphony of Sibelius was heard for the first time at Liverpool on October 24 at the Philharmonic concert conducted by Sir Henry Wood. M. Szigeti, who played the Beethoven Violin Concerto, was severely criticised in the press for the length and inappropriateness of his cadenzas. Dr. A. W. Pollitt conducted the choir in Bantock's 'The world is too much with us' and Schubert's 'The Lord is my Shepherd.'——The next of the Society's concerts, on November 7, was given by the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra under Furtwängler, the Symphony being Brahms's first.——The Catterall Quartet played Turina in D minor, Schumann in F, and Beethoven in B flat at the first meeting of the Rodewald Society.——The second of the Sandon Sunday Chamber Concerts was a recital of music by Vaughan Williams, including the Fantasy Quintet, the 'Concerto Accademico,' and 'The Lark Ascending.' The violinist was Miss Sybil Eaton.——A new Melomime, with a scenario by Mr. T. H. Stafford and music by Dr. James Lyon, was performed by the Repertory Company on October 26. In the same bill was a new production of 'I Pagliacci.'——Members of the Sandon Studios Society produced de Falla's 'Master Peter's Puppet Show' and Ravel's 'L'heure espagnole' on October 19. The producer was Mr. Frederick Wilkinson, headmaster of Wallasey Grammar School, and his chief helper was Mr. A. K. Holland, who translated the libretto of Ravel's work into English, reduced the score to a two-pianoforte version, and played at one of the pianofortes.——In the course of their two-pianoforte programme on October 16, Mr. John Tobin and Miss Tilly Connelly played Busoni's 'Fantasia Contrappuntistica' and Walton's 'Facade' (without the Sitwell poems).

MANCHESTER (see p. 1130).—At the first few Hallé concerts a great deal of interesting music and excellent playing confirmed the orchestra in the leading position which it occupies under Sir Hamilton Harty's direction. The following were the chief points in the programmes: October 18, Strauss's Festal Prelude, Schubert's C major Symphony, and Kodály's 'Hary Janos' Suite; October 25, 'Falstaff'; November 1, 'The Trojans'; November 8, the first performance in England of Atterberg's Prize Symphony; November 15, a Purcell-Bliss Suite of Airs and Dances and two of Debussy's Nocturnes.——Ernest Bryson's 'Drum Taps' and the Kyrie from Vaughan Williams's Mass were performed by the Vocal Society under Mr. Harold Dawber on November 7, and in the same programme Mr. Harry Mortimer played some unfamiliar clarinet music—'Two Pieces' by Eric Fogg and Hurlstone's 'Intermezzo and Scherzo.'——Harp music was played by Miss Mildred Dilling at a Bowdon Chamber Concert, and several artists of promising talent have appeared at the Tuesday Mid-day Concerts.——Chaliapin sang at the Brand Lane Concert on October 27.——Beethoven's Quartet in B flat, Op. 130, was played by the Catterall Quartet on November 14, and Elgar's Quintet at a meeting of the University Musical Society.

NEWCASTLE.—Mr. Edgar Bainton opened the season of the Philharmonic Society with Beethoven's 'Pastoral' Symphony and third Pianoforte Concerto, the pianist being Mr. Edward Isaacs.——The new Symphony Society made its debut on November 4 with a programme of music and speeches, including one by Sir Dan Godfrey, who conducted the concert. Beethoven's fifth Symphony was the chief item.——The Léners played Schubert's 'Death and the Maiden' Quartet and Dvorák's Op. 90 for the Chamber Music Society on October 19.

NORWICH.—Mozart's G minor Symphony, Miss Isolde Menges's violin playing, and Miss Molly O'Callaghan's singing were the features of the Municipal Concert under Mr. Maddern Williams on October 20. At the next concert Dr. Heathcote Statham played Boëllmann's 'Fantaisie Dialoguée' with the orchestra.

——On November 12 a new ballad opera, 'Waterloo Leave,' by Clifford Bax and Martin Shaw, was produced by the Norwich Players.

OXFORD.—The German Singers gave two concerts on October 22 and 23, a secular programme at Queen's and a sacred programme in New College Chapel, the latter including Bach's 'Come, Jesu, come' and 'Sing to the Lord a new song.' They were assisted by the Liverpool and Oxford Consort of Viols.——A Ravel concert was given by Mr. Gordon Bryan, the Virtuoso Quartet, and others, on October 23. The composer, wearing his new Doctor's robes, conducted the Septet.

RAMSGATE.—The Choral Society, with little support from the public, performed 'Judas Maccabæus' on October 31 under the direction of Mr. P. V. Henniker.

RICHMOND (YORKS).—The works chosen for performance during the season by the Richmondshire Choral Society under Mr. Arthur Fountain are 'Sleepers, wake,' 'Blest pair of sirens,' 'News from Whydah,' the 'Coffee' Cantata, Schubert's 'Great is Jehovah,' and Brahms's 'German Requiem.'

SHEFFIELD.—'Elijah' was given by the Musical Union on November 8 under the direction of Sir Henry Coward, with Mr. Horace Stevens in the title part.——At the Five o'clock Concert on October 31 Miss Orrea Pernel and Madame Lily Henkel played Delius's second Violin Sonata; a later programme included Debussy's 'L'enfant prodigue' and Franck's Symphonic Variations.

SLAITHWAITE.—The Philharmonic Society, under Mr. L. H. Eagland, opened its season on November 7 with a programme that included a movement from the 'Eroïca,' the 'Hebrides' Overture, and Handel's 'Water Music.'

SHILLINGSTONE.—The Earl of Shaftesbury (tenor) was one of the artists at a concert given in aid of local funds; 'cello solos were contributed by Mrs. Beresford-Melville, who, as Miss Audrey Chapman, founded the orchestra that bears her name.

STOCKTON.—At a miscellaneous concert given with the help of excellent artists by the Vocal Union under Dr. Keighley the choral music included 'Hark how the woods,' from Handel's 'Atalanta,' and 'The foolish lover squanders,' from 'Deidamia.' The audience was small, but there was a good attendance at a performance given by a choral society of 'Merrie England.'

STROUD.—The performance of Purcell's 'King Arthur' by the Choral Society on November 1 was in every way a success, the singing being full of spirit and a large audience showing great appreciation. The conductor was Mr. S. W. Underwood, and the accompaniments were played at the pianoforte by Mr. A. J. Pritchard.

TRURO.—Dr. C. Rivers conducted the Cornwall Symphony Orchestra on November 5 in Brahms's fourth Symphony and the 'Magic Flute' Overture.

WALSALL.—The works to be performed by the Philharmonic Society under Mr. Ambrose Porter during the season are Elgar's 'For the Fallen,' Charles Wood's 'Dirge for two veterans,' a selection from 'The Messiah,' parts 1 and 2 of 'The Creation,' Vaughan Williams's 'Toward the Unknown Region,' and 'The Golden Legend.'

WINDSOR.—Sir Walford Davies and Sir Edward German conducted their own part-songs at a concert given by St. George's Chapel Choir at the Royal Albert Institute on November 5. Sir Walford also joined Mr. Courtenay Boyle in Bach's G minor Organ Fugue as a pianoforte duet.

WOKING.—The Music Club has attained its full membership of four hundred, and the list is closed for the season. Nearly all the members turned up at the first concert to hear the Bach Chamber Orchestra play a Concerto Grosso and Byrd's Fantasie for sextet under Mr. Kennedy Scott. The programme also included Bach's eighty-fourth Church Cantata, with Miss Phyllis James as the soprano and Mr. Leon Goossens as oboist.

YORK.—The Tudor Singers, under Mr. Cuthbert Bates, sang madrigals and ballets by Weelkes, Byrd, and others at the first meeting of the York centre of the B.M.S.

Music in Ireland

BELFAST.—At the first concert of the Philharmonic Society, on October 19, Mr. E. Godfrey Brown conducted the orchestra in the 'Unfinished' Symphony and the choir in the three Handel-Wood operatic choruses and Cornelius's 'The Surrender of the Soul to Everlasting Love.' Mr. W. Primrose, replacing M. Szigeti, played the Mendelssohn Concerto.——On November 2 Sir Henry Wood conducted a B.B.C. concert, the chief feature of which was the performance of Franck's Symphony. Mr. C. J. Brennan played Handel's fifth Organ Concerto, in G major, as rearranged by Wood. Miss Jelly d'Aranyi having failed to turn up at the morning rehearsal, Mr. E. A. Stoneley, the leader of the orchestra, learned Mozart's fourth Concerto in the afternoon and played it in the evening. ——The Dorian Trio of North Wales played chamber music, including works by Hubert Davies, Purcell Warren, and Vaughan Williams ('The Lark Ascending') on November 9.

DUBLIN.—Franck's Symphony was also performed at Dublin on October 22, the occasion being the visit of the Hallé Orchestra, under Sir Hamilton Harty, to give two concerts for the Royal Dublin Society. The programmes also included the Handel-Harty 'Water Music,' 'Don Juan,' Berlioz's 'Beatrice and Benedict' Overture, Tchaikovsky's fourth Symphony, and Wagner selections.——The Philharmonic Society celebrated the Schubert Centenary on November 3 by performing both the 'Unfinished' and C major Symphonies, under Col. Fritz Brase, and the Mass in B flat, under Mr. Turner Huggard. A group of Schubert songs was sung in Italian with orchestral accompaniment.

Music in Wales

ABERYSTWYTH.—At the Thursday College Concerts the orchestral items have included Bach's Overture in D and Suite in B minor for flute and strings, Beethoven's first Symphony, the 'Unfinished,' and Elgar's 'From the Bavarian Highlands.' Chamber music has included Haydn's String Quartet, Op. 64, No. 5, and Mozart's in B flat.

CARDIFF.—The recent Thursday Subscription Concerts given by the National Orchestra of Wales in the City Hall have included many interesting items, among them Franck's 'Les Djinns,' Brahms's fourth Symphony, Glazounov's A major Violin Concerto, Dvorák's 'Cello Concerto, and 'Slavonic Rhapsody,' and Suk's 'Fairy-Tale Suite.' The Saturday concerts are of a more popular character, and have introduced such numbers as Vaughan Williams's 'Old King Cole' and Eric Coates's 'The Three Bears.'——At the mid-day and afternoon Free Concerts in the Museum a number of the less-known Haydn and Mozart Symphonies have been played.——On November 11 the Cardiff Catholic Choral Society gave a new 'Requiem Mass' by Perosi, followed by Gounod's 'Mass of the Sacred Heart of Jesus,' the last-named work making a great contrast with the remote unaccompanied music of Perosi.

LLANELLY.—At the Llanelly Parish Church, on Armistice Day, Wesley's 'Lead me, Lord,' Palestrina's 'O Bone Jesu,' and Parry's 'There is an old belief' were sung unaccompanied, and Wesley's 'Blessed be the God' and Bach's 'O happy flock in Jesu's keeping' were sung accompanied by orchestra and organ. A number of orchestral items were also given under the direction of Mr. Frank Phillips.

SWANSEA.—The Chamber Music Society's first concert of the season was a Dolmetsch recital with a programme that included Jenkins's Fantasia for three viols in A minor (No. 8) and Matthew Locke's Suite for four viols.——On October 30 Mr. Morgan Lloyd and Miss Claudia Lloyd gave a successful recital, the chief feature of which was the performance of the 'Kreutzer' Sonata.

Musical Notes from Abroad

GERMANY

SYMPHONIC NOVELTIES

At one of the chief concerts of the Berlin Staatskapelle the audience laughed while Ernst Krenek's 'Little Symphony' was being performed under Otto Klemperer. Krenek seems to be in good humour now. His 'Jonny' angered so many people that the young composer set about consoling them by indulging in a little fun, and this was the form which it took. Again there was anger, because a number of people had expected him to give them something serious. In the Symphony Krenek has used much the same means as in his 'Jonny,' but, of course, has put them on a higher plane. There is, for instance, sonata form, but not too much of it, in the Symphony. He employs an orchestra without violas or 'cellos, but there are plenty of jazz instruments, and they are used with the highest possible effect. It is to be hoped that Krenek intends this little Symphony to be no more than an episode in his artistic career.

The difference between him and Emil Bohnke, a well-known musician who died last year and left a voluminous Symphony, is really striking. Bohnke was an unhappy artist. Working very hard at composition, he never succeeded in finding a style of his own. A true Brahmsian, he moved with the classical stream, though at the bottom of his heart he wished to be among the moderns. In his new Symphony, which we may call the 'Tragic,' he became Mahlerian and Brucknerian. The score is interesting as a specimen of craftsmanship, but it leads one to think that Bohnke was born for artistic disappointments.

It was very interesting to see and to hear, after many years of absence, Georges Enesco, the famous violinist who, not content with being a great player, proved his versatility by his compositions. To Dr. Ernst Kunwald, conductor of the Berlin Symphony Orchestra, goes the credit for calling the attention of Berlin concert-goers to Enesco's Suite for full orchestra, a work pleasing to the great public. In addition to a musicianship that is rooted in Bach, there is a sense of sonority that recommends Enesco to the interest of musical connoisseurs. It is astonishing to find a musician of our days who is attracted to the key of C major.

Michael Taube, a young conductor who is interested in modern music, is giving a series of concerts with a chamber orchestra, whereby he emphasises the principal achievements of present-day music. At one of these concerts he presented for the first time Honegger's 'Le dit des Jeux du Monde,' a composition of some years ago that gave us by contrast an estimate of the composer's development during the last two years. We shall not over-rate the importance of this work, which is a piece of incidental music born under the influence of impressionism, and often illustrated in a very ingenuous manner. It did not leave a great impression pon the hearers. ADOLF WEISSMANN.

HOLLAND

'Turandot' formed the first item of the opera season, and was given with some degree of excellence under the direction of the composer's protégé, Mario Parenti, by the De Hondt Italian Opera Company. The rest of the season's repertory is entirely made up of familiar works. The other opera troupe here, the 'Co-Operatie,' made a feast in celebration of the completion of its first lustrum, the company having started in the autumn of 1923. 'Tristan und Isolde,' was mounted in a special setting, but it must be said, as a lamentable indication of the slight interest of the Dutch people in opera, that the theatres in the different towns, and particularly at The Hague, at which this was given, were not so full as could have been hoped. The Company makes steady progress in the standard of its performances, with Albert van Raalte as a tower of strength on the musical side.

On the actual date of the commemoration the performance at The Hague was given with the assistance of the Utrecht Municipal Orchestra, and was followed by a reception and supper at which, in addition to the appropriate compliments to the directors and the Company as a whole, considerable hopes for the future were expressed. An event of more than usual interest at Amsterdam has been the opening of the new building of the 'Muziek Lyceum,' which has, besides an up-to-date concert-hall and studios, the unusual feature of accommodation for artists who have to stay the night in the town in order to fulfil their engagement. Close to the platform, but separated by sound-proof walls, the artist who is fortunate in securing lodging here may rest in luxury from the labours of his performances or in preparation for those to come. The building was 'dedicated' with speeches by a member of the board of directors, Mr. C. D. Salmonson, by the manager, Mr. E. Calkoen, by the Burgomaster of Amsterdam, and others, and with music by Dutch composers—Bernard Zweers, Anton van der Horst, and Willem Pijper.

A visit of the 'Quatuor de Harpes Marie Louise Casadesus,' on behalf of the Alliance Française, brought music of an unusual character and of varying degrees of merit. A Mozart 'Divertissement' successfully suggested the original harpsichord character of the music, while among the modern works the most successful were those of a light character—a Scherzo by Jacques Larmanjat and a short Suite, 'Les Oiseaux,' by Georges Auric. Joy MacArden proved herself at the same concert a Lieder singer of fine qualities. Record should be made of the production of a new Symphony, the second, of Joh. Winnubst's, by the Utrecht Municipal Orchestra, under the direction of the composer. As I was confined to my bed at the time, I am unable to express any opinion on the work, but the Dutch critics without exception spoke well of it as closely knit, somewhat conservative in structure, and with excellent thematic and orchestral ideas.

Among recent visitors have been Myra Hess, who increases the admiration of Dutch music-lovers at every appearance (she has made two or three in each of the principal towns on this occasion), and the veteran Ludwig Wüllner, who sang a Schubert programme in his individual and inimitable style. The Mengelberg concerts, under Monteux, are continuing in an even manner their high standard of performance. Béla Bartók has played his Concerto at these concerts at Amsterdam, The Hague, and Rotterdam, and has aroused alternate admiration, perplexity, and despair among the different classes of his audiences. His playing and personality in every case, whatever the opinion may have been of his music, have been exceedingly popular. HERBERT ANTCLIFFE.

PARIS

In addition to 'The Bartered Bride'* we have had a novelty of a different character, namely, Pietro Mascagni's 'Il piccolo Marat,' given at the Gaîté-Lyrique under the direction of the composer. The plot, drawn from an episode of the French Revolution, is presented in a typically melodramatic style. Mascagni's score is realistic, with pathetic and stormy declamation, and unbridled flights of romance. The Spanish tenor Hipolito Lazaro displayed splendid vocal means.

* A notice of this will be found on p. 1123.

He was efficiently seconded by Madame de Voltri and M. Donaggio. The composer conducted with conviction and authority. At the end of every Act he was wildly cheered by a numerous public composed mainly of enthusiastic compatriots.

The symphonic societies have taken up their usual work, which consists chiefly of the execution of the great classic works with, now and then, a novel item. The public seems very prompt in responding. A significant movement is visible towards Berlioz, whose 'Requiem' and 'The Damnation of Faust,' repeatedly performed by more than one orchestral and choral group, attracted huge crowds. Writing in the Matin, M. Alfred Bruneau hints that the phenomenon may be a protest by the music-loving public against the emotional deficiencies of modern works. The point is one of real interest.

A momentous event in the symphonic life of our city is the foundation of a new orchestral group under the title, 'Orchestre Symphonique de Paris,' and having as joint artistic directors Messrs. Alfred Cortot, Ernest Ansermet, and Louis Fourestier, with M. André Schaeffner as artistic secretary and Messrs. Kiesgen and Delaet as managers. The new Society will present, during the coming season, eighty concerts in three series. The programmes give prominence to modern music, and many well-known composers, conductors, and soloists have already been enlisted to appear on the platform. No doubt the O.S.P., backed by considerable financial means and rehearsing for three hours every day under the leadership of the aforesaid eminent artists, will attain brilliant results and, together with the existing Concert Associations, will render precious services to classic, French, and International music.

Petro J. Petridis.

TORONTO

A strange thing has happened here during the past three weeks—that is, strange when compared with past experience. The D'Oyly Carte Opera Company has enjoyed an overwhelming success—and three whole weeks of it—thereby climbing the box-office pinnacle attainable up to the present only by the greatest musical comedy companies of America. It has been a triumph for what is essentially British opera. The Toronto public crowded to hear 'The Mikado,' 'Ruddigore,' 'Trial by Jury,' 'The Pirates of Penzance,' 'Iolanthe,' and 'Patience,' the critics being unanimous in praise of the high level of artistry and vocalism displayed throughout the entire company.

The chief item at the Toronto Symphony Orchestra's opening Twilight Concert was George Butterworth's Rhapsody 'A Shropshire Lad,' which work was a novelty here. The assisting artist was Marguerite d'Alvarez. More or less successful recitals have come this month from Rose Ponselle, Margaret Magenauer, Sophie Braslau, the attractive Salzedo harp ensemble, and the Welsh Imperial Singers.

As we are promised nearly forty concerts by visiting artists and ensembles this season, we can safely hold the opinion that the business of concert performance has never faced a more hopeful future. And this in spite of radio programmes that are better than ever!

H. C. F.

[We regret that unexpected pressure on our space compels us to hold over the Notes from Italy and Vienna.—Editor.]

The London School of Dalcroze Eurhythmics will hold Christmas vacation classes from December 31 till January 5. Full particulars and entrance form from the Secretary, L.S.D.E., 23, Store Street, W.C.1.

Nottingham.—A new touring Trio consisting of Miss Joy Carter (violin), Mr. E. A. Wright ('cello), and Miss Lucy Pierce (pianoforte), all of Liverpool, visited Nottingham on November 9. The works they played were Brahms's Op. 87, Frank Bridge's Fantasy in C, and Delius's second Violin Sonata.

Obituary

We regret to record the following deaths:

Nikolaï Findeisen, on September 20, at Leningrad. He was a great scholar and a most incisive writer on music—especially on Russian music. His activities are very little known to western musical circles: it is a typical fact that there is no article on him either in Grove's 'Dictionary' or in Dent's 'Dictionary of Modern Music.' Yet the musical world owes him a heavy debt for his books and pamphlets, his editorial work, and especially for his activities in connection with the Russkaya Muzykalnaya Gazeta ('Russian Music Review'), which he founded in 1894 and continued editing until 1918. This periodical was for many years the only one of its kind in Russia. It covered a wide field, and had the merit of calling attention to Russian composers — especially to Borodin and Moussorgsky—at a time when very few people in Russia were concerned with them. Findeisen's specialities were musical history and archæology. Just before his death he had completed a history of Russian music, from the earliest times to the end of the 18th century, which is an altogether admirable book (an English edition of it is being prepared). Other books of his—on Glinka, Dargomyjsky, and other Russian composers—are of lasting value. Among his recent labours should be mentioned a history of early Russian song (unpublished) and important contributions to the forthcoming Cobbett 'Cyclopædia of Chamber Music.' He was born at Petrograd on July 24 (August 5), 1868, and spent practically all his life in that city, always hard at work. Of late he had founded the Museum of the Leningrad State Philharmonia, of which he was curator until his death. All those who—like the present writer—have had the opportunity of applying to him for advice and help will gratefully remember his knowledge and eager, unfailing kindness.

M.-D. Calvocoressi.

Arthur Eaglefield Hull, at Huddersfield, on November 4, after an illness brought about by a fall under a train a couple of months previously. He was born at Market Harborough in 1876, and a distinguished academic career began with his obtaining the A.R.C.O. diploma at the age of seventeen and the F.R.C.O. a year later. When only twenty-two he took the degree of Mus. Bac. at Queen's College, Oxford, becoming Doctor in 1903, and also having the honour of being the youngest holder of the degree. In 1897 he was appointed organist and choirmaster of Plaistow Parish Church, and in 1904 he proceeded to a similar post at Huddersfield Parish Church. The Huddersfield College of Music was established by him a few years later, and in 1918 he founded the British Music Society. A versatile and prolific writer, he is perhaps most widely known by his 'Organ Playing: Its Technique and Expression' and 'Modern Harmony,' the latter having been translated into almost every European language. An outstanding and valuable piece of work was his general editorship of the 'International Dictionary of Modern Music and Musicians.' He also edited various series of books on music, contributed to the recent new edition of 'Grove,' composed and transcribed a good deal of organ music, lectured extensively, and gave many organ recitals at home and abroad. He was a member of the Council of the Royal College of Organists, and also an examiner for that institution. During recent years he edited the Monthly Musical Record, besides writing many articles for other musical journals.

John Harris, of Cwmavon. His death has removed a musician whose life story is typical of many another in Wales. Starting in life as a collier-boy, he became precentor at All Saints' Church, afterwards of St. Hilda's Church, Griffithstown. Returning to Cwmavon he became conductor of the brass band and the Cwmavon Orchestral Society.

Mattia Battistini, the baritone, at Rieti, aged seventy-one. He was born at Rome on February 27, 1857, and made his debut at the Argentine Theatre in that city fifty years ago, the opera being 'La Favorita.' He first visited London in 1883, but his gifts were not fully realised until his next appearance there in 1887, at Covent Garden, under the Augustus Harris regime. Thenceforward his career was one long triumph. He had a repertory of over eighty operas of all periods, and was everywhere held to be without a superior as an exponent of bel canto. As recently as 1922 and 1923 he gave recitals at Queen's Hall, when his finished style and the astonishing freshness of his voice were such as to belie his age at the time—sixty-five.

Evangeline Florence (Evangeline Florence Houghton), on November 1, at her home at Kensington. Born at Cambridge, Mass., on December 12, 1873, she studied first at Boston, where she made her debut in 'Martha' in 1891. She then came to London, and took lessons from Henschel, Randegger, Blume, and Mrs. Lehmann. Her first London appearance was at St. James's Hall, in 1892. She sang in the first London performance of Parry's 'Job.' Her soprano voice, of unusually high compass, was notable for its sweetness. She retired from public life about 1904.

Isidor Cohn, the well-known pianist, at Manchester, on October 29. He was born at Hamburg in 1856, and studied with Hans von Bülow and Scharwenka. Coming to England in 1879, he lived first at Bradford, Yorkshire, but after a successful London debut in 1892 he took up his residence in London. He was a frequent player with the Joachim Quartet at the famous 'Pops.' In 1898 he removed to Manchester, where until the end of his life he was a prominent figure in the city's musical doings.

The Hon. Sir Edward Thesiger, in London, on November 11, aged eighty-five. He had been an official of the House of Lords for half a century, and had occupied many important positions. He found time, however, for numerous hobbies, and among them was music. An excellent violinist, he was for some time a member of the orchestra of the Wandering Minstrels and of the Handel Society.

Richard Thomas, at Chester, on October 17, aged sixty-seven. A pupil of Dr. J. C. Bridge at Chester Cathedral, he was organist at St. Paul's Church, Boughton, Chester, from 1883 till his death. He had previously held two similar posts in the district, and had done over fifty years' continuous service as organist.

John David, at Loughton, Essex, aged sixty-one. He was organist at St. Peter Port Church, Guernsey, and Secretary to the States Education Council. The Guernsey Musical Competition Festival owed much to his work as conductor and secretary.

Francis William Webster, at Windsor, on November 3, in his seventy-fifth year. He did over fifty years' service as organist at various churches in the Windsor area, and was for many years a music master at Eton College.

Send for a Foyle's Schubert Centenary Guide (gratis)

Including a list of all his compositions; a selection of Gramophone Records, and the Best Books on his life and works.

FOYLE'S MUSIC DEPT.,
CHARING CROSS ROAD, LONDON, W.C.2.

DURING THE LAST MONTH

Published by NOVELLO & CO., Limited

Bainton, Edgar L.—"Praise of Cynthia." Song. In two keys, C and D. 2s.

Brahms, Johannes.—Eleven Chorale Preludes for the Organ. Edited by John E. West. Book 1 (Nos. 1-4). (No. 116, Original Compositions for the Organ. New Series.) 3s. 6d.

—— Ditto. Book 2 (Nos. 5-11). (No. 117, Original Compositions for the Organ. New Series.) 3s. 6d.

Descant Carol Book.—A collection of well-known Carols with Descants. 8d.

E. K.—Six Special Chants for use with the Psalms. Set 1. 2d.

Elgar, Edward.—"I sing the birth." Carol. (No. 1030, The Musical Times.) 3d.

Grace, Harvey.—Handbook for Choralists. Containing Hints on Sight-Singing and Technique and Expression. (No. 104. Novello's Music Primers and Educational Series.) 1s. 6d.

Ham, Albert.—"The snow lies white." Song for Baritone. 2s.

—— Six Hymns and Carols (with Descants). 1s.

J. M. H.—"The Christmas Story." Carol. 2d.

Kingston, M.—"My Prayer." Sacred Song. 2s.

Novello's Christmas Carols:

No. 442. "A Virgin Unspotted." (Traditional.) (Arranged with Descant) ... ... 2d.
,, 443. "What Child is this?" (Old English.) (Arranged with Descant) ... ... 2d.
,, 444. "Good Christian men, rejoice!" (Old German.) (Arranged with Descant) ... ... ... ... 2d.
,, 445. "I saw three ships." (Traditional.) (Arranged with Descant) ... ... 2d.
,, 446. "Shepherds! shake off your drowsy sleep." (Besançon Carol.) (Arranged with Descant) ... ... 2d.

Novello's Hymns and Tunes for Sunday School Anniversary:

No. 85. "Glory to God Who reigns above." Arthur F. Tate ... ... ... 1½d.

School Music Review, No. 438, contains the following music in both notations. "The Answer." (Unison Song.) G. Rathbone. "What Child is this?" (Carol.) (Arranged with Descant.) Old English. 2d.

School Song Series.—Published in two forms. A. Voice Parts in Staff and Tonic Sol-fa Notations, with Pianoforte Accompaniment (8vo). B. Voice Parts only, in Tonic Sol-fa Notation.

| | | A. | B. |
|---|---|---|---|
| No. 1188. | "The Drums of Freedom." (Unison Song.) H. E. Crimp | — | 3d. |
| ,, 1517. | "I vow to thee, my country." (Unison Song for massed voices.) Geoffrey Shaw | 3d. | — |
| ,, 1524. | "The Lord is my Shepherd." (Arranged as a Two-part Song.) Franz Schubert ... ... | — | 3d. |
| ,, 1525. | "The Bonnie Banks o' Loch Lomond." (Scottish Air.) Arranged with Descant by H. A. Chambers ... ... | 2d. | — |
| ,, 1527. | "I've been roaming." (Arranged as a Two-part Song.) C. E. Horn ... ... ... ... | 3d. | — |

Tonic Sol-fa Series:

No. 2570. "On this, the Christmas morn." Carol-Anthem. J. Job ... ... 2d.

No. 439. NOVELLO'S CHRISTMAS CAROLS. Price (1½*d.*).

HIS DWELLING

Composed by GEORGE RATHBONE.

Stainer, John
Bramley, H. R. } CAROLS, NEW AND OLD.

FIRST SERIES. Three-halfpence each.
Tonic Sol-fa (complete), 1/6.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| *1. | God rest you merry, gentlemen | Traditional |
| *2. | The Manger Throne | C. Steggall |
| *3. | A Virgin unspotted | Traditional |
| *4. | Come, ye lofty | Elvey |
| *5. | Come, tune your hearts | Ouseley |
| *6. | The First Nowell | Traditional |
| *7. | Jesu, hail | J. Stainer |
| *8. | Good Christian men | Old German |
| *9. | Sleep, holy Babe | Dykes |
| *10. | Good King Wenceslas | Traditional |
| *11. | When I view the Mother | J. Barnby |
| *12. | The seven joys of Mary | Traditional |
| *13. | On the Birthday of the Lord | Dykes |
| *14. | What Child is this? | Old English |
| *15. | Glorious, beauteous | Maria Tiddeman |
| *16. | Waken! Christian Children | S.C. Hammerton |
| *17. | A Child this day is born | Traditional |
| *18. | Carol for Christmas Eve | Ouseley |
| *19. | When Christ was born | A. H. Brown |
| *20. | Christmas Morning Hymn | J. Barnby |

SECOND SERIES. Three-halfpence each.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| *21. | Carol for Christmas Eve | Traditional |
| 22. | Jesus in the Manger | H. Smart |
| *23. | The Holly and the Ivy | Old French |
| 24. | The Moon shines bright | Traditional |
| *25. | The Virgin and Child | C. Steggall |
| 26. | The Incarnation | Traditional |
| *27. | Christmas Day | J. Stainer |
| 28. | The Cherry-Tree Carol | Traditional |
| 29. | God's dear Son | Traditional |
| *30. | See, amid the winter's snow | Goss |
| 31. | The Babe of Bethlehem | Traditional |
| 32. | In Bethlehem, that noble place | Ouseley |
| *33. | A Cradle Song of the Blessed Virgin | J. Barnby |
| 34. | Christmas Song | Dykes |
| 35. | Jacob's Ladder | Traditional |
| 36. | The Story of the Shepherd | J. Barnby |
| *37. | The Wassail Song | Traditional |
| *38. | In terrâ pax | Dykes |
| 39. | Dives and Lazarus | Traditional |
| *40. | From far away | Dykes |
| *41. | Carol for Christmas Day | A. Sullivan |
| 42. | The Child Jesus in the Garden | J. Stainer |

THIRD SERIES. Three-halfpence each.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 43. | What soul-inspiring music | Har. by J. S. |
| 44. | In the country nigh to Bethlehem | G. Hine |
| *45. | We three Kings of Orient are | Har. by J. S. |
| 46. | Emmanuel, God with us | H. Gadsby |
| 47. | New Prince, new pomp | C. Steggall |
| 48. | A Babe is born | Har. by J. S. |
| 49. | Come, let us all sweet Carols sing | F. Campneys |
| 50. | Let music break on this blest morn | J. B. Calkin |
| 51. | Carol for New Year's Day | A. H. Brown |
| 52. | The Angel Gabriel | Har. by J. S. |
| 53. | The Shepherds amazed | A. H. Brown |
| 54. | Noël! Noël! | Har. by J. S. |
| 55. | I sing the birth | G. C. Martin |
| 56. | Christmas Night | A. H. Brown |
| 57. | The Christmas Celebration | E. Prout |
| 58. | Arise and hail the Sacred Day | A. H. Brown |
| 59. | The Holy Well | Har. by J. S. |
| 60. | The Angel and the Shepherds | E. H. Thorne |
| 61. | The Coventry Carol | Har. by J. S. |
| 62. | The Morning Star | J. F. Bridge |
| 63. | The Shepherds went | J. F. Barnett |
| 64. | I saw three ships | Har. by J. S. |
| 65. | Mountains, bow your heads | W. H. Cummings |
| 66. | Luther's Carol | J. Higgs |
| 67. | The Boy's Dream | W. H. Monk |
| 68. | Legends of the Infancy | J. F. Bridge |
| 69. | Let Christians all | Traditional |
| 70. | Immortal Babe | |

1½d.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| The above 70 Carols, complete, cloth, gilt | 6 | 0 |
| Library Edition, with Historical Preface Roxburgh binding | 11 | 6 |
| Illustrated Edition, 1st and 2nd Series | 11 | 6 |
| Three Series (cloth, gilt, 3s.) each | 1 | 6 |
| Words only, complete | 0 | 6 |
| Words, each Series | 0 | 2 |

Helmore, T.
Neale, J. M. } CAROLS, Set to Ancient Melodies.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 71. | Here is joy for every age. | |
| 72. | Earthly friends will change. | |
| 73. | Gabriel's message. | |
| 74. | Christ was born on Christmas Day. | |
| 75. | Earth to-day rejoices. | |
| 76. | Good Christian men, rejoice. | |
| 77. | From church to church. | |
| 78. | In the ending of the year. | |
| 79. | Royal day that chasest gloom. | |
| 80. | O'er the hill and o'er the vale. | |
| 81. | Good King Wenceslas. | |
| 82. | Toll! toll! because there ends. | |

1½d. each.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| The above 12 carols, complete | 1 | 6 |
| Folio, with pianoforte accompaniment | 7 | 0 |
| Treble part | 0 | 8 |
| Words only | 0 | 2 |

Twelve Carols.—Words by S. WENSLEY.
Twopence each.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 83. | O holy star | J. Stainer |
| 84. | The shepherds | Eaton Faning |
| 85. | Hymn of the angels | G. M. Garrett |
| *86. | The anthem of peace | J. Barnby |
| 87. | The desert | Emma Mundella |
| 88. | Bethlehem | Myles B. Foster |
| 89. | Daybreak | Berthold Tours |
| 90. | In the manger | J. Barnby |
| 91. | The mother and child | Myles B. Foster |
| 92. | Christ is born | J. F. Bridge |
| 93. | Christmas Day | Battison Haynes |
| *94. | Sweet Christmas Bells | J. Stainer |

Complete, 1/6. Tonic Sol-fa, 1/-. Words only, 3d.

Ten Carols. Twopence each.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 95. | Now join we all with holy mirth | J. Stainer |
| 96. | Softly the night | J. M. Crament |
| 97. | Sleep, Holy Babe | J. T. Field |
| 98. | Now dies in David's City | J. Swire |
| 99. | There dwelt in Old Judea | R. Jackson |
| 100. | Good people, give ear | J. Swire |
| 101. | Carol for Christmas Day | J. T. Field |
| 102. | Ye stars of night | J. Swire |
| 103. | Ring out, ye bells | J. H. Wallis |
| 104. | Two thousand troubled years | J. F. Bridge |

Complete, 1/6. Tonic Sol-fa, 1/- Words only, 3d.

* All Carols marked with an asterisk may be had in Tonic Sol-fa.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

(Oct., 1928.) MADE IN ENGLAND.

His Dwelling

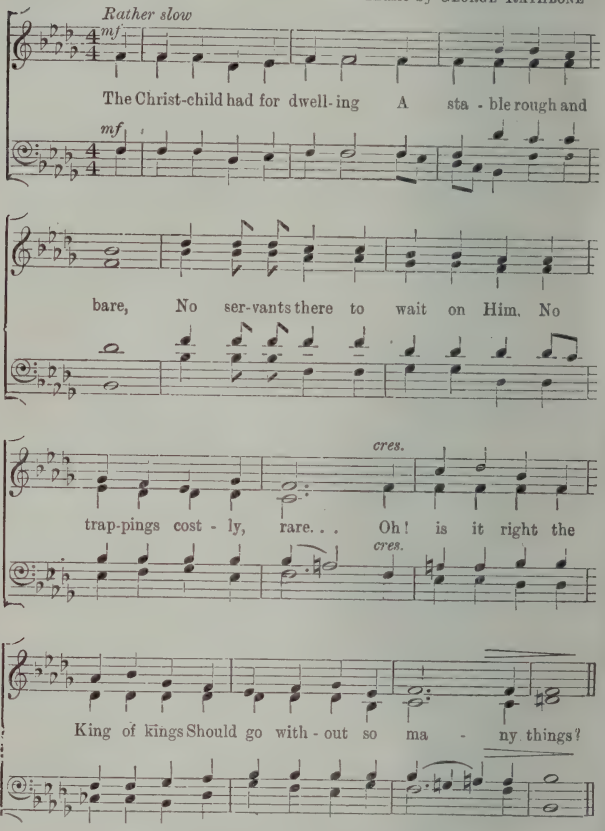
CHRISTMAS CAROL

Words by IRENE GASS

Music by GEORGE RATHBONE



Rather slow
mf
The Christ-child had for dwell-ing A sta-ble rough and
mf
bare, No ser-vants there to wait on Him. No
cres.
trap-pings cost-ly, rare. . . Oh! is it right the
cres.
King of kings Should go with-out so ma-ny things?

Copyright, 1928, by Novello and Company, Limited

p
Yet in that dwell-ing low - ly Was love on ev - 'ry
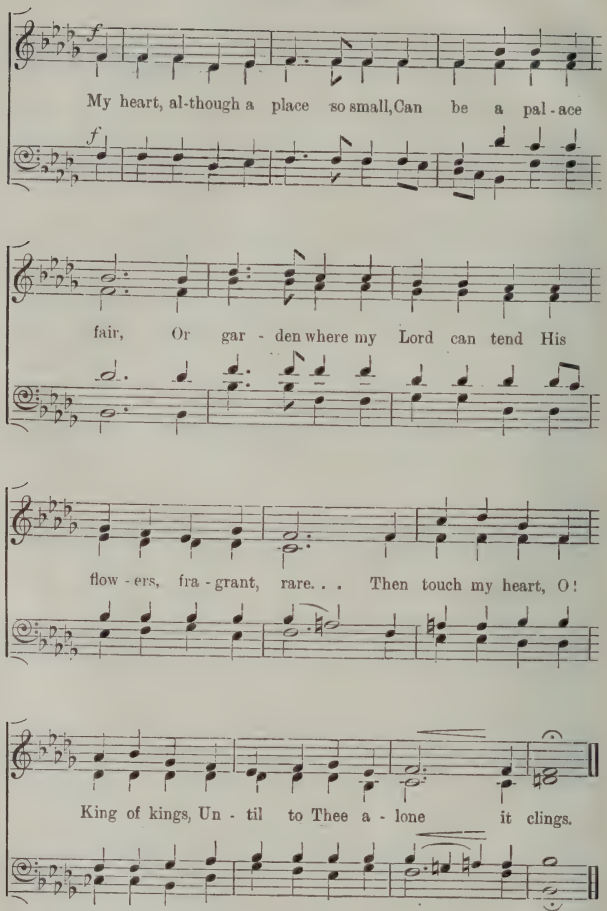
p side, In Ma - ry's soft ca - ress ing hands, In Jo - seph's ten - der pride; And so in - deed the King of kings Had all the care that child - hood brings.



My heart, al-though a place so small, Can be a pal-ace fair, Or gar - den where my Lord can tend His flow - ers, fra - grant, rare. . . Then touch my heart, O!
King of kings, Un - til to Thee a - lone it clings.

No. 440. NOVELLO'S CHRISTMAS CAROLS. Price (1½*d.*).

MAGI! SEE THE STAR O'ERHEAD

Composed by GEORGE RATHBONE

Stainer, John } CAROLS,
Bramley, H. R. } NEW AND OLD.

FIRST SERIES. Three-halfpence each.
Tonic Sol-fa (complete), 1/6.

*1. God rest you merry, gentlemen .. Traditional
*2. The Manger Throne .. .. .. C. Steggall
*3. A Virgin unspotted .. .. .. Traditional
*4. Come, ye lofty .. .. .. .. Elvey
*5. Come, tune your hearts .. .. Ouseley
*6. The First Nowell .. .. .. Traditional
*7. Jesu, hail .. .. .. .. J. Stainer
*8. Good Christian men .. .. .. Old German
*9 Sleep, holy Babe .. .. .. Dykes
*10. Good King Wenceslas .. .. Traditional
*11. When I view the Mother .. .. J. Barnby
*12. The seven joys of Mary .. .. Traditional
*13. On the Birthday of the Lord .. .. Dykes
*14. What Child is this? .. .. .. Old English
*15. Glorious, beauteous .. .. Maria Tiddeman
*16. Wake! Christian Children } 1½d. S.C. Hammerton
*17. A Child this day is born } .. Traditional
*18. Carol for Christmas Eve .. .. Ouseley
*19. When Christ was born .. .. A. H. Brown
*20. Christmas Morning Hymn .. .. J. Barnby

SECOND SERIES. Three-halfpence each.

*21. Carol for Christmas Eve .. .. Traditional
22. Jesus in the Manger .. .. .. H. Smart
*23. The Holly and the Ivy } 1½d. .. Old French
24. The Moon shines bright } .. Traditional
*25. The Virgin and Child .. .. C. Steggall
26. The Incarnation .. .. .. Traditional
*27. Christmas Day .. .. .. J. Stainer
28. The Cherry-Tree Carol .. .. Traditional
29. God's dear Son .. .. .. Traditional
*30. See, amid the winter's snow .. .. Goss
31. The Babe of Bethlehem .. .. Traditional
32. In Bethlehem, that noble place .. Ouseley
*33. A Cradle Song of the Blessed Virgin J. Barnby
34. Christmas Song .. .. .. Dykes
35. Jacob's Ladder .. .. .. Traditional
36. The Story of the Shepherd .. .. J. Barnby
*37. The Wassail Song .. .. .. Traditional
*38. In terrâ pax .. .. .. .. Dykes
39. Dives and Lazarus .. .. .. Traditional
*40. From far away .. .. .. .. Dykes
*41. Carol for Christmas Day .. .. A. Sullivan
42. The Child Jesus in the Garden .. J. Stainer

THIRD SERIES. Three-halfpence each.

43. What soul-inspiring music .. Har. by J. S.
44. In the country nigh to Bethlehem .. G. Hine
*45. We three Kings of Orient are Har. by J. S.
46. Emmanuel, God with us .. .. H. Gadsby
47. New Prince, new pomp } 1½d. .. C. Steggall
48. A Babe is born } Har. by J. S.
49. Come, let us all sweet Carols sing F. Champneys
50. Let music break on this blest morn J. B. Calkin
51. Carol for New Year's Day .. A. H. Brown
52. The Angel Gabriel .. .. Har. by J. S.
53. The Shepherds amazed .. A. H. Brown
54. Noël! Noël! .. .. .. Har. by J. S.
55. I sing the birth .. .. G. C. Martin
56. Christmas Night .. .. A. H. Brown
57. The Christmas Celebration .. .. E. Prout
58. Arise and hail the Sacred Day A. H. Brown
59. The Holy Well .. .. Har. by J. S.
60. The Angel and the Shepherds E. H. Thorne
61. The Coventry Carol .. .. Har. by J. S.
62. The Morning Star .. .. J. F. Bridge
63. The Shepherds went .. .. J. F. Barnett
64. I saw three ships .. .. Har. by J. S.
65. Mountains bow your heads W. H. Cummings
66. Luther's Carol .. .. .. J. Higgs
67. The Boy's Dream .. .. W. H. Monk
68. Legends of the Infancy .. J. F. Bridge
69. Let Christians all } 1½d. .. Traditional
70. Immortal Babe }

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| The above 70 Carols, complete, cloth, gilt Library Edition, with Historical Preface | 6 | 0 |
| Roxburgh binding .. .. .. | 11 | 0 |
| Illustrated Edition, 1st and 2nd Series .. | 11 | 6 |
| Three Series (cloth, gilt, 3s.) .. each | 1 | 6 |
| Words only, complete .. .. .. | 0 | 6 |
| Words, each Series .. .. .. .. | 0 | 2 |

Helmore, T. } CAROLS,
Neale, J. M. } Set to Ancient Melodies.

71. Here is joy for every age.
72. Earthly friends will change.
73. Gabriel's message.
74. Christ was born on Christmas Day.
75. Earth to-day rejoices.
76. Good Christian men, rejoice.
77. From church to church.
78. In the ending of the year.
79. Royal day that chasest gloom.
80. O'er the hill and o'er the vale.
81. Good King Wenceslas.
82. Toll! toll! because there ends.

1½d. each.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| The above 12 carols, complete .. .. | 1 | 6 |
| Folio, with pianoforte accompaniment .. | 7 | 0 |
| Treble part .. .. .. .. .. | 0 | 8 |
| Words only .. .. .. .. .. | 0 | 2 |

Twelve Carols.—Words by S. WENSLEY.
Twopence each.

83. O holy star .. .. .. .. J. Stainer
84. The shepherds .. .. .. Eaton Faning
85. Hymn of the angels .. .. G. M. Garrett
*86. The anthem of peace .. .. .. J. Barnby
87. The desert .. .. .. Emma Mundella
88. Bethlehem .. .. .. Myles B. Foster
89. Daybreak .. .. .. Berthold Tours
90. In the manger .. .. .. .. J. Barnby
91. The mother and child .. Myles B. Foster
92. Christ is born .. .. .. J. F. Bridge
93. Christmas Day .. .. Battison Haynes
*94. Sweet Christmas Bells .. .. J. Stainer

Complete, 1/6. Tonic Sol-fa, 1/- Words only, 3d.

Ten Carols. Twopence each.

95. Now join we all with holy mirth .. J. Stainer
96. Softly the night .. .. .. J. M. Crament
97. Sleep, Holy Babe .. .. .. J. T. Field
98. Now dies in David's City .. .. J. Swire
99. There dwelt in Old Judea .. .. R. Jackson
100. Good people give ear .. .. J. Swire
101. Carol for Christmas Day .. .. J. T. Field
102. Ye stars of night .. .. .. J. Swire
103. Ring out, ye bells .. .. .. J. H. Wallis
104. Two thousand troubled years J. F. Bridge

Complete, 1/6. Tonic Sol-fa, 1/- Words only, 3d.

* All Carols marked with an asterisk may be had in Tonic Sol-fa.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

(Oct., 1928.) MADE IN ENGLAND

Magi! see the Star o'erhead

CHRISTMAS CAROL

Words by IRENE GASS

Music by GEORGE RATHBONE

With great breadth and dignity

Ma - gi! see the star o'er - head, Mys - ter - ies fore -
- tell - ing. Shep herds! seek the man - ger bed
In that lone - ly dwell - ing. Christ, the Lord of Vir - gin - e.
Love, is born Ex Ma - ri - a Vir - gin - e. Sing -
Love, . . . is born - Vir - gin - e.

Copyright, 1928, by Novello and Company, Limited

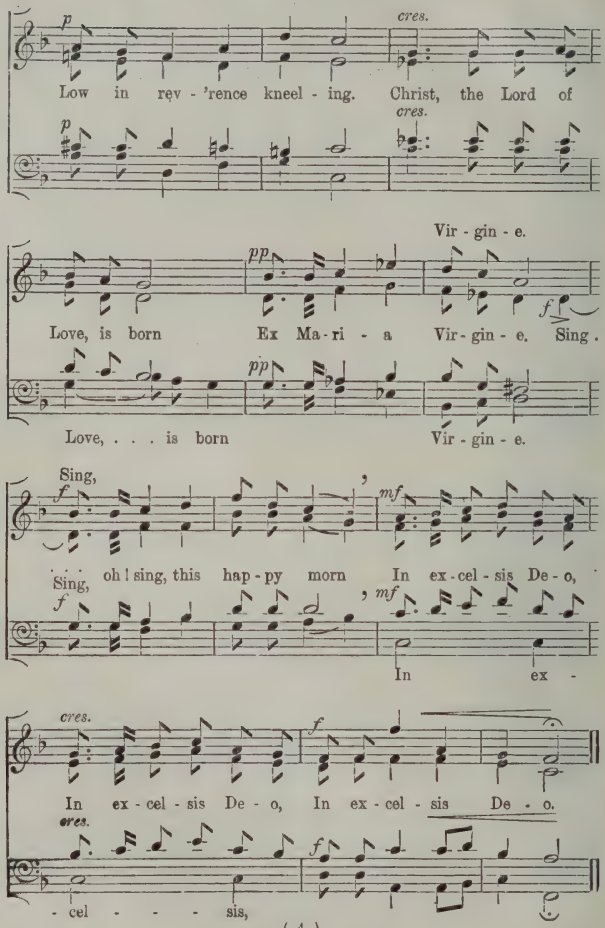
Sing,
Sing, oh! sing, this hap - py morn In ex - cel - sis De - o,
In ex -
cres.
In ex - cel - sis De - o, In ex - cel - sis De - o.
cres.
- cel - - - sis,
There the Ba - by lies a - wake, In - no - cence re -
- veal - ing, Gifts we bring for His sweet sake,



p
cres.
Low in rev - 'rence kneel - ing. Christ, the Lord of
p
cres.
Vir - gin - e.
pp
f
Love, is born Ex Ma - ri - a Vir - gin - e. Sing.
pp
Love, . . . is born Vir - gin - e.
Sing,
f
mf
Sing, oh! sing, this hap - py morn In ex - cel - sis De - o, f
mf
In ex -
cres.
f
In ex - cel - sis De - o, In ex - cel - sis De - o.
cres.
f
- cel - - - sis,

No. 441. NOVELLO'S CHRISTMAS CAROLS. Price (1½*d.*).

THE SEVEN JOYS

Composed by C. S. LANG.

Stainer, John } CAROLS,
Bramley, H. R. } NEW AND OLD.

FIRST SERIES. Three-halfpence each.
Tonic Sol-fa (complete), 1/6.

*1. God rest you merry, gentlemen . Traditional
*2. The Manger Throne .. .. .. C. Steggall
*3. A Virgin unspotted .. .. .. Traditional
*4. Come, ye lofty .. .. .. .. Elvey
*5. Come, tune your hearts .. .. Ouseley
*6. The First Nowell .. .. .. Traditional
*7. Jesu, hail .. .. .. .. J. Stainer
*8. Good Christian men .. .. .. Old German
*9 Sleep, holy Babe .. .. .. Dykes
*10. Good King Wenceslas .. .. Traditional
*11. When I view the Mother .. .. J. Barnby
*12. The seven joys of Mary .. .. Traditional
*13. On the Birthday of the Lord .. .. Dykes
*14. What Child is this? .. .. .. Old English
*15. Glorious, bounteous .. .. Maria Tildeman
*16. Wake! Christian Children } 1½d. S.C. Hammerton
*17. A Child this day is born } .. Traditional
*18. Carol for Christmas Eve .. .. Ouseley
*19. When Christ was born .. .. A. H. Brown
*20. Christmas Morning Hymn .. .. J. Barnby

SECOND SERIES. Three-halfpence each.

*21. Carol for Christmas Eve .. .. Traditional
22. Jesus in the Manger .. .. .. H. Smart
*23. The Holly and the Ivy } 1½d. .. Old French
24. The Moon shines bright } .. Traditional
*25. The Virgin and Child .. .. C. Steggall
26. The Incarnation .. .. .. Traditional
*27. Christmas Day .. .. .. J. Stainer
28. The Cherry-Tree Carol .. .. Traditional
29. God's dear Son .. .. .. Traditional
*30. See, amid the winter's snow .. .. Goss
31. The Babe of Bethlehem .. .. Traditional
32. In Bethlehem, that noble place .. Ouseley
*33. A Cradle Song of the Blessed Virgin J. Barnby
34. Christmas Song .. .. .. Dykes
35. Jacob's Ladder .. .. .. Traditional
36. The Story of the Shepherd .. .. J. Barnby
*37. The Wassail Song .. .. .. Traditional
*38. In terrâ pax .. .. .. .. Dykes
39. Dives and Lazarus .. .. .. Traditional
*40. From far away .. .. .. .. Dykes
*41. Carol for Christmas Day .. .. A. Sullivan
42. The Child Jesus in the Garden .. J. Stainer

THIRD SERIES. Three-halfpence each.

43. What soul-inspiring music .. Har. by J. S.
44. In the country nigh to Bethlehem .. G. Hine
*45. We three Kings of Orient are Har. by J. S.
46. Emmanuel, God with us .. .. H. Gadsby
47. New Prince, new pomp } 1½d. .. C. Steggall
48. A Babe is born } Har. by J. S.
49. Come, let us all sweet Carols sing F. Champneys
50. Let music break on this blest morn J. B. Calkin
51. Carol for New Year's Day .. A. H. Brown
52. The Angel Gabriel .. .. Har. by J. S.
53. The Shepherds amazed .. A. H. Brown
54. Noël! Noël! .. .. .. Har. by J. S.
55. I sing the birth .. .. G. C. Martin
56. Christmas Night .. .. A. H. Brown
57. The Christmas Celebration .. .. E. Prout
58. Arise and hail the Sacred Day A. H. Brown
59. The Holy Well .. .. Har. by J. S.
60. The Angel and the Shepherds E. H. Thorne
61. The Coventry Carol .. .. Har. by J. S.
62. The Morning Star .. .. .. J. F. Bridge
63. The Shepherds went .. .. J. F. Barnett
64. I saw three ships .. .. Har. by J. S.
65. Mountains bow your heads W. H. Cummings
66. Luther's Carol .. .. .. J. Higgs
67. The Boy's Dream .. .. W. H. Monk
68. Legends of the Infancy .. J. F. Bridge
69. Let Christians all } 1½d. .. Traditional
70. Immortal Babe }

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| The above 70 Carols, complete, cloth, gilt | 6 | 0 |
| Library Edition, with Historical Preface | | |
| Roxburgh binding .. .. .. | 11 | 6 |
| Illustrated Edition, 1st and 2nd Series .. | 11 | 6 |
| Three Series (cloth, gilt, 3s.) .. each | 1 | 6 |
| Words only, complete .. .. .. | 0 | 6 |
| Words, each Series .. .. .. .. | 0 | 2 |

Helmore, T. } CAROLS,
Neale, J. M. } Set to Ancient Melodies.

71. Here is joy for every age.
72. Earthly friends will change.
73. Gabriel's message.
74. Christ was born on Christmas Day.
75. Earth to-day rejoices.
76. Good Christian men, rejoice. } 1½d. each.
77. From church to church.
78. In the ending of the year.
79. Royal day that chasest gloom.
80. O'er the hill and o'er the vale.
81. Good King Wenceslas.
82. Toll! toll! because there ends.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| The above 12 carols, complete .. .. | 1 | 6 |
| Folio, with pianoforte accompaniment .. | 7 | 0 |
| Treble part .. .. .. .. .. | 0 | 8 |
| Words only .. .. .. .. .. | 0 | 2 |

Twelve Carols.—Words by S. WENSLEY.
Twopence each.

83. O holy star .. .. .. .. J. Stainer
84. The shepherds .. .. Eaton Faning
85. Hymn of the angels .. .. G. M. Garrett
*86. The anthem of peace .. .. .. J. Barnby
87. The desert .. .. .. Emma Mundella
88. Bethlehem .. .. .. Myles B. Foster
89. Daybreak .. .. .. Berthold Tours
90. In the manger .. .. .. J. Barnby
91. The mother and child .. Myles B. Foster
92. Christ is born .. .. .. J. F. Bridge
93. Christmas Day .. .. Battison Haynes
*94. Sweet Christmas Bells .. .. J. Stainer

Complete, 1/6. Tonic Sol-fa, 1/-. Words only, 3d.

Ten Carols. Twopence each.

95. Now join we all with holy mirth .. J. Stainer
96. Softly the night .. .. J. M. Crament
97. Sleep, Holy Babe .. .. .. J. T. Field
98. Now dies in David's City .. .. J. Swire
99. There dwelt in Old Judea .. .. R. Jackson
100. Good people give ear .. .. J. Swire
101. Carol for Christmas Day .. .. J. T. Field
102. Ye stars of night .. .. .. J. Swire
103. Ring out, ye bells .. .. J. H. Wallis
104. Two thousand troubled years J. F. Bridge

Complete, 1/6. Tonic Sol-fa, 1/- Words only, 3d.

* All Carols marked with an asterisk may be had in Tonic Sol-fa.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

(Oct., 1928.) MADE IN ENGLAND.

The Seven Joys

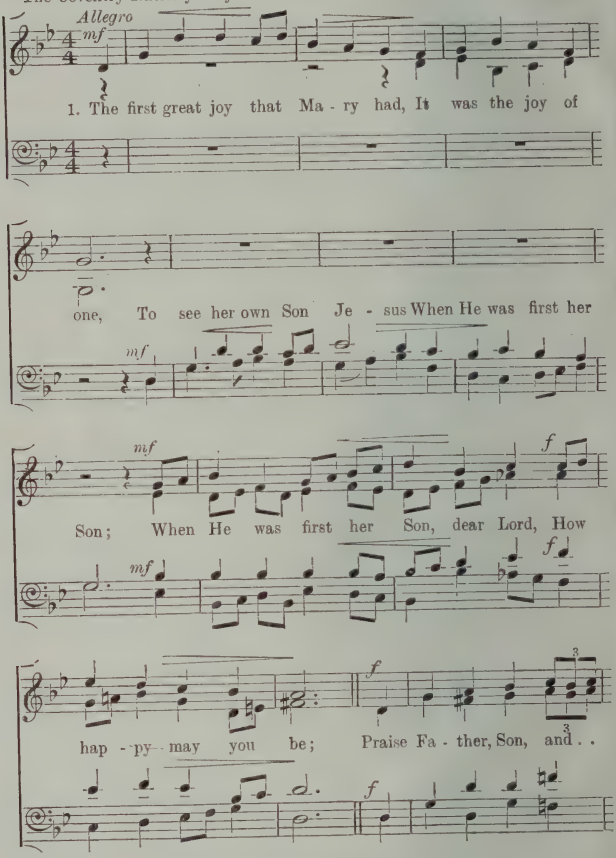
CHRISTMAS CAROL

Words from
The Coventry Nativity Play

Music by C. S. Lang



Allegro
mf
1. The first great joy that Ma - ry had, It was the joy of one, To see her own Son Je - sus When He was first her
mf
Son; When He was first her Son, dear Lord, How
f hap - py may you be; Praise Fa - ther, Son, and

Copyright, 1928, by Novello and Company, Limited

mf 2 The next good joy that Mary had.
It was the joy of two,
mf To see her own Son Jesus
To make the lame to go,
mf To make the lame to go, dear Lord,
How happy may you be;
f Praise Father, etc.

f 3 The next good joy that Mary had,
It was the joy of three,
f To see her own Son Jesus
To make the blind to see,
f To make the blind to see, dear Lord,
How happy may you be;
Praise Father, etc.

p 4 The next good joy that Mary had,
It was the joy of four,
p To see her own Son Jesus
To read the Bible o'er,
p To read the Bible o'er, dear Lord,
How happy may you be;
p Praise Father, etc.

f 5 The next good joy that Mary had,
It was the joy of five,
f To see her own Son Jesus
To raise the dead alive,
ff To raise the dead alive, dear Lord,
How happy may you be;
Praise Father, etc.

pp 6 The next good joy that Mary had,
It was the joy of six,
pp To see her own Son Jesus
Upon the crucifix,
pp Upon the crucifix, dear Lord,
How happy may you be;
Praise Father, etc.

f 7 The next good joy that Mary had,
It was the joy of seven,
f To see her own Son Jesus
Ascending into heaven,
ff Ascending into heaven, dear Lord,
How happy may you be;
ff Praise Father, etc.

NOVELLO'S
CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

Stainer, John (Adapted and arranged by).
TWELVE OLD CAROLS. Three-halfpence each.

*105. Shepherds! shake off your drowsy sleep.
106. Come, shepherds, come! shake off your sleep.
107. Now sing we all full sweetly.
108. The good men all of Chastres.
109. Whence comes this rush of wings afar?
110. Come with us, sweet flowers, and worship. / Infant so gentle, so pure, and so sweet! — 1½d.
*111. O night, peaceful and blest!
112. Of the Father's love begotten.
113. We saw a light shine out afar.
114. Christmas hath made an end.
115. Now farewell, good Christmas.
Complete, 1/6. Tonic Sol-fa, 8d. Words only, 1½d.

Martin, G. C. (Harmonised by).—CAROLS. Three-halfpence each.

PART I. (Old Breton Melodies).

116. Hail! Christmas Bells.
117. O'er her Child the Virgin weeps. / The stars are bright. — 1½d.
118. On this day was born.
119. Glad hymns, with one accord.
120. Outside the city gates.
121. On Asia Minor's sunny shore.
*122. Across the desert sands by night.
Complete, 8d. Words only, 1½d.

PART II. (Old French Melodies).

123. The Shepherds glad.
124. Merrily ring the Christmas bells.
125. The sombre shadows darker fall.
126. Poising bright on golden wing.
127. Round the Virgin gently sleeping.
128. The Circumcision.
129. In the golden lands afar.
130. A Legend of the Flight.
Complete, 8d Words only, 1½d.

Stainer, John. / Bramley, H. R. } CAROLS, NEW AND OLD.
Arranged for Men's Voices.
Complete, 3s.; each, 2d. Words only, complete, 3d.

131. A Virgin unspotted .. .. .. Traditional
132. The Manger Throne .. .. C. Steggall
133. Sleep, Holy Babe .. .. .. Dykes
134. Good Christian men, rejoice .. Old German
135. 'Twas in the winter cold .. .. J. Barnby
136. Good King Wenceslas .. Helmore's Carols
137. Come! ye lofty .. .. .. .. Elvey
138. God rest you merry, gentlemen .. Traditional
139. Listen, Lordings .. .. .. Ouseley
140. The First Nowell .. .. .. Traditional
141. When Christ was born .. Arthur H. Brown
142. Jesu, hail! O God most holy .. J. Stainer
143. The seven joys of Mary .. .. Traditional
144. What Child is this? .. .. .. Old English
145. The Waits' Song .. .. .. Traditional
146. The Virgin and Child .. .. C. Steggall
147. The Holly and the Ivy .. .. Old French
148. The Lord at first .. .. .. Traditional
149. The Incarnation .. .. .. Traditional
150. The Cherry-Tree Carol .. .. Traditional
151. A Cradle-song of the Blessed Virgin J. Barnby
152. Jacob's Ladder .. .. .. Traditional
153. Dives and Lazarus .. .. .. Traditional
154. The Wassail Song .. .. .. Traditional

Stainer, John. / Bramley, H. R. } CAROLS. NEW AND OLD.
Arranged for Two-part. 2d. each.

155. Good King Wenceslas.
156. Good Christian men, rejoice.
157. Christmas hath made an end.
158. God rest you merry, gentlemen.
159. The First Nowell.
160. A Virgin unspotted.
161. The Wassail Song.
162. I hear along our street. / The Boar's Head Carol. — 2d.
163. The seven joys of Mary.
164. Hark! how sweetly the bells.
165. The Holly and the Ivy.
Complete, 8d. Tonic Sol-fa, 8d. Words only, 2

Fox, G.—CAROLS. For Little Singers. Each.

166. Good King Wenceslas.
167. I hear along our street.
168. Brightly shone the Eastern star.
169. As Joseph was a-walking.
170. Hark! what mean those holy voices.
171. The Holy Well.
172. While Shepherds watched.
173. God rest you merry, gentlemen.
174. Hark! how sweetly the bells.
175. A little robin.
176. As I sat on a sunny bank.
177. Why in tones so sweet and tender.
178. The moon shone bright. / All you that in this house. — 2d.
179. Clearly in the East it shone.
180. Shepherds at the Grange. / These good people. — 2d.
181. Nuns in frigid cells. / Washerwomen old. — 2d.
182. The Holly and the Ivy.
183. How grand and how bright. / Hosanna to the living Lord. — 2d.
184. Lo! a heavenly form appearing. / The Boar's Head Carol. / In excelsis gloria. — 2d.

Legge, R. H.—TWELVE NEW CAROLS.
Unison. Words by A. E. ALSTON. Each, 2d.

185. Præludium.
186. The Midnight Masse.
187. The bells of Christmas.
188. Pastor Bonus.
189. Rejoice, Christian men.
190. A Children's Carol.
191. Caraula Pastorum.
192. Wassail Song.
193. Kings of Orient.
194. Good Christians all.
195. Cometh the day.
196. Ye Angelus Bell.
Complete, 1/6. Tonic Sol-fa, 1s. Words only, 3d

197. The Anthem of Peace .. J. Barnby / On Christmas Morn A. C. Mackenzie / Across the desert sands ..G. C. Martin / Shepherds! shake off your drowsy sleep .. .. .. J. Stainer — 3d
(Words only, 4s. per 100.)

* All Carols marked with an asterisk may be had in Tonic Sol-fa.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

(Oct., 1928.

ACTUALLY recorded at the COVENT GARDEN Opera House season 1928

These records and others of The Royal Opera Chorus and Orchestra were made at public performances at Covent Garden, during the recent Season of Grand Opera. Not only do these records maintain a very high standard of reproduction, but they reproduce the subtle excitement in the atmosphere present at any public performance.

The records are of interest to both music-lovers and "connoisseurs" alike and represent one of the most remarkable achievements in the history of the gramophone. They can be obtained by placing a special order with your local dealer

CHALIAPINE AS BORIS

DB1181—I have attained the highest power — and Heavy is the hand of Retribution—(sung in Russian)—price 8/6.

DB1182—Oh! I am suffocating! (Clock scene) — (in Russian); Come, let us vote, Boyars (in Italian, with chorus) price 8/6.

DB1183—It is a pity Prince Shuisky is absent, though he is a rebel (in Russian); Farewell, my son (in Russian) price 8/6.

These three records are all from BORIS GODOUNOV

HISLOP AS FAUST

DB1189—Salut! demeure, chaste et pure (All hail, thou dwelling pure and lowly); Nous nous retrouverons (Waltz and chorus) price 8/6.

"His Master's Voice"

The Gramophone Company, Ltd. Oxford Street, London, W. 1.

DURING THE LAST MONTH—continued.

PUBLISHED FOR

THE H. W. GRAY CO., NEW YORK

ALEXANDER, I.—"Song of the Pilgrims." Anthem with Tenor Solo. (No. 985, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.).

—— "Song of the Pilgrims." Sacred Song. 50 cents (2s.).

ANDREWS, M.—"Rock of Ages." Hymn-Anthem. (No. 961, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.).

BINGHAM, S.—"Pioneer America." (Second Organ Suite.) $2.50 (10s.).

CREWS, L.—"At morn, O Lord." Sacred Song for High Voice. 50 cents (2s.).

DAY, E. F.—"Shew me Thy ways, O Lord." Anthem for S.S.A. Solo or Chorus. (No. 964, Church Music Review.) 10 cents (6d.).

HALL, W. H.—"Christmas on the waters." Anthem. (No. 983, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.).

JENNINGS, A. B., JR.—"Message of the stars." Anthem for Christmas. (No. 973, Church Music Review.) 15 cents (8d.).

MACKINNON, H. A.—"Give to my restless heart, O God." Anthem. (No. 947, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.).

MATTHEWS, J. S.—Benedictus es, Domine, in G. (No. 988, Church Music Review.) 12 cents (6d.).

NEARING, H.—"My soul, be on thy guard." Sacred Song for High Voice. 50 cents (2s.).

—— "South-western Sketches." Suite for Organ. $1.50 (6s.).

PEERY, R. R.—Four-fold Amen. (Harmony or Unison.) (No. 29, Supplementary Hymns.) 5 cents (3d.).

—— Triple Amen. (No. 27, Supplementary Hymns.) 5 cents (3d.).

RULISON, C.—Christmas Carol. ("I sing of a maiden.") (Solo Voices and Unison Chorus.)

SANDERS, H.—"O Master, let me walk with Thee." Sacred Song. 50 cents (2s.).

TAYLOR, J.—"A Christmas Folk-Song." Sacred Song. 50 cents (2s.).

—— "Sheep and Lambs." Sacred Song. 50 cents (2s.).

WARD, V.—"Advent." Sacred Song. 50 cents (2s.).

WARREN, E. R.—"Autumn sunset in the Canyon." Three-part Song (S.S.A.). (No. 367, Modern Series.) 12 cents (6d.).

—— "Spring morning in the hills." Three-part Song (S.S.A.). (No. 365, Modern Series.) 12 cents (6d.).

—— "Summer noon on the desert." Three-part Song (S.S.A.). (No. 364, Modern Series.) 12 cents (6d.).

—— "Winter night in the valley." Three-part Song (S.S.A.). (No. 368, Modern Series.) 12 cents (6d.).

WEBBE, W. Y.—"The Hound of Heaven." Tenor Solo. Chorus, and Orchestra. $1.00 (4s.).

WHITMER, T. C.—"Choral Rhapsody." Solo Quartet, Chorus, and Orchestra (or Piano). $1.50 (6s.).

LINCOLN CATHEDRAL

The Dean and Chapter will shortly proceed to fill a VACANCY amongst the PRIEST-VICARS. Stipend £300, and house. Age under 35.

For full particulars of appointment, apply to The Chapter Clerk, 7, Bank Street, Lincoln.

THE WESSEX ALTERNATIVE TUNE-BOOK OF ORIGINAL HYMN TUNES. By CHARLES R. J. GIBBS. Written as alternatives to those already published in the various Hymnals, or for use on Special occasions. Price 2*s.* 6*d.*, by post 2*s.* 7*d.*; from Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

CLARINET.—TEACHER REQUIRED Two evenings weekly. West End. Accompany on pianoforte. Apply, Box 50, c/o Novello & Co. Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

CONTENTS

| | PAGE. |
|---|---|
| The Problem of the Conductor: and a Proposed Mechanical Solution. By Leonid Sabaneev | 1073 |
| Imitation and Suggestion.—II. By W. S. Drew | 1076 |
| The National Temperament in Music. By Béla Bartók | 1079 |
| Ad Libitum. By 'Feste' | 1079 |
| Palestrina and the Major Sixth. By Arthur T. Froggatt | 1082 |
| Göstra Nyström: A New Swedish Composer. By Leonid Sabaneev | 1084 |
| The Military Musician in Literature. By J. Paine | 1085 |
| Walter Odington: The Consonance of the Third, and the Common Chord. By Jeffrey Pulver | 1086 |
| Music in the Foreign Press. M.-D. Calvocoressi | 1089 |
| Gramophone Notes. By 'Discus' | 1090 |
| Player-Piano Notes | 1091 |
| Occasional Notes | 1092 |
| New Music | 1095 |
| The Musician's Bookshelf | 1100 |
| Teachers' Department:—Associated Board Pianoforte Examinations for 1929: Notes on the Studies and Pieces (concluded). By Ernest Fowles | 1103 |
| Points from Lectures | 1114 |
| Answers to Correspondents | 1115 |
| Church and Organ Music | 1116 |
| The St. Michael's Singers | 1118 |
| Letters to the Editor | 1119 |
| The Amateurs' Exchange | 1122 |
| Sharps and Flats | 1122 |
| Royal Academy of Music | 1122 |
| Royal College of Music | 1123 |
| Trinity College of Music | 1123 |
| 'The Bartered Bride' at L'Opéra-Comique | 1123 |
| Croydon Festival | 1123 |
| Sixty Years Ago | 1124 |
| Elgar's Music to 'Beau Brummel' | 1124 |
| Competition Festival Record:—Blackpool Festival | 1124 |
| Seventh Annual General Meeting and Conference of The British Federation of Musical Competition Festivals | 1125 |
| The Eastbourne Festival | 1126 |
| London Concerts | 1126 |
| Music in the Suburbs | 1130 |
| Manchester: Berlioz's 'Trojans at Carthage' and First performance of Atterberg's 'Schubert' Symphony | 1130 |
| Music in the Provinces | 1131 |
| Music in Ireland | 1133 |
| Music in Wales | 1133 |
| Musical Notes from Abroad | 1134 |
| Obituary | 1135 |

MUSIC.

'I Sing the Birth.' Carol. By Sir Edward Elgar ... 1105

THREE EXTRA SUPPLEMENTS are given with this number:

'The Seven Joys.' Christmas Carol. By C. S Lang.

'His Dwelling,' and 'Magi! see the Star o'erhead?' Christmas Carols. By George Rathbone.

FOR SALE.—SCHOOL OF MUSIC. PIANOFORTE SINGING, VIOLIN. 80 pupils. House if required. Apply, Box 47, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

FOR SALE.—AN OLD VIOLIN made by Joan Carol Kloz, in Mittenwald, Anno 17. Well preserved, beautiful sound. What offers? Box 46, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

FREDERICK MARRIOTT, F.R.C.O., CORRESPONDENCE TUITION for F.R.C.O., A.R.C.O., and L.R.A.M. paper work requirements. 28, Belmont Hill, Lewisham, S.E.13.

YOUNG LADY PIANIST.—Experienced Chamber Music and Solos, wishes to form Trio. Artist students preferred. Box 49, c/o Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

ACCOMPANIST and COACH.—20 years' experience, including Covent Garden Opera. Any distance. 4*s.* per hour. Box 48, Novello & Co., Ltd., 160, Wardour Street, W.1.

MARYLEBONE Presbyterian Church, 38, Upper George Street, Marble Arch, W.1. TENOR and BASS REQUIRED. £25 per annum. Sundays, 11 and 7. Fridays, 8.30. Apply to the Organist, Howard Vernon.

FRANK POULTON

L.R.A.M., L.G.S.M. Singing (Performer).

BASS-BARITONE.

Available for Oratorio or Choral Works.

Fee, 2½ gns. in London.

Quartet of Soloists supplied if required.

Broadcasts this year:

March 14th, 5 G.B.; July 30th and Oct. 11th, 2 LO.

33, Hounslow Ave., Hounslow. Hounslow 1536.

THE BELLS OF CHRISTMAS

BY

MARTIN SHAW

Price 1s. 6d. net.

Why do the bells of Christmas ring?
Why do little children sing?

Once a lovely shining star,
Seen by shepherds from afar,
Gently mov'd until its light
Made a manger's cradle bright.

There a darling Baby lay,
Pillow'd soft upon the hay;
And its mother sang and smil'd,
"This is Christ the Holy Child."

Therefore bells of Christmas ring,
Therefore little children sing.

EUGENE FIELD.

Published in three keys:

A minor, B minor, and D minor.

CHURCH MUSIC

TE DEUM AND BENEDICTUS, Key G ... MARTIN SHAW, 1s.
SERVICE IN D ... ... ... ... ... NOEL PONSONBY, 6d.

ANTHEMS

1. GO NOT FAR FROM ME, O GOD ... NOEL PONSONBY. 4d.
2. TO THE NAME OF OUR SALVATION C. HYLTON STEWART, 4d.
3. MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS in A minor HAROLD E. DARKE, 4d.

OTHER SONGS SPECIALLY SUITABLE FOR CHRISTMAS

THE SHIPS OF YULE
By MARTIN SHAW
Price Two Shillings net.
Keys: F, G, A.

WINDS OF BETHLEHEM
By C. VILLIERS STANFORD
Price Two Shillings net

LITTLE JESUS
By ALEC ROWLEY
Price Two Shillings net

THE HOLY BABE
By THOMAS F. DUNHILL
Price Two Shillings net

STARS ALL DOTTED OVER THE SKY
By EVELYN SHARPE
Price One Shilling and Sixpence net
Keys: D minor, and F minor.

THE BIRDS
By D. CLEGHORN-THOMSON
Price Two Shillings net.

MINSTRELS' CHRISTMAS CAROL
By LESLIE WOODGATE
Price Two Shillings net.

For full particulars, write to:

J. B. CRAMER & CO., LTD., 139, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.1

"Such settings as these cannot do otherwise than tend to popularise the Church Service."—Musical Standard, June 6, 1891.
"Good, effective, easy, and dignified."—Musical Times, April 1, 1891.
"Admirably adapted to meet the requirements of the majority of choirs and congregations." "Deserve extensive recognition and use."—Musical News, September 4 and 25, 1891.
Also recommended by the Guardian, Church Times, &c., &c.

POPULAR CHURCH MUSIC

BY

J. H. MAUNDER

| | Staff Notation. | Tonic Sol-fa. |
|---|---|---|
| CHRISTMAS ANTHEMS. | | |
| Anthem—Christians, Awake ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Once in Bethlehem ... ... ... ... | 3d. | 2d. |
| Two Christmas Carols ... ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| SERVICES | | |
| SERVICE IN G ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2s. | 1s. 4d. |
| Or, separately:— | | |
| Te Deum ... ... ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Benedicite, omnia Opera ... ... ... | 3d. | 3d. |
| Benedictus ... ... ... ... ... | 3d. | 3d. |
| Jubilate ... ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Office for the Holy Communion ... ... | 10d. | 8d. |
| Pater Noster from the above ... ... | 3d. | 3d. |
| Amen ditto ... ... ... | 1½d. | 1½d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| SERVICE IN CHANT FORM (No. 1) ... ... ... | 1s. 4d. | 10d. |
| Or, separately:— | | |
| Te Deum, &c., with Kyrie ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Office for the Holy Communion ... ... | 8d. | 6d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Te Deum in B flat... ... ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in C (partly Unison) | 4d. | 2d. |
| Magnificat and Nunc dimittis in D ... ... ... | 4d. | 3d. |
| ORGAN. | | |
| Voix Seraphique (for Recitals)... ... ... ... | 2s. 6d. | — |
| CHURCH CANTATA. | | |
| Penitence, Pardon, and Peace (for general use) ... | 2s. | 1s. 4d. |

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

TEXT-BOOKS

BY

ALBERT HAM, Mus. Doc., F.R.C.O.

OUTLINES OF MUSICAL FORM

WITH ANALYSES FROM

WELL-KNOWN CLASSICAL WORKS.

Price ... Five Shillings.

"In all respects this is an admirable little work, with no waste, no hiatus of a serious nature, handy in size, and with a practical scheme well carried through."—Musical Times.
Dr. C. W. PEARCE, in alluding to the above work, says:
"Quite the best I have ever seen, and I shall lose no opportunity for recommending it."

THE RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC AND ELEMENTARY HARMONY.

THIRD EDITION.

Price ... Five Shillings.

"Dr. Ham's admirable little work may be cordially recommended."—Musical Times.

THE SOLITUDES OF THE PASSION

A PASSIONTIDE CANTATA.

For Solo Voices (Tenor and Baritone) and Chorus, with Hymns for Choir and Congregation.

Price 2s. Words only, 12s. 6d. per 100.

"A useful addition to the store of choral works for use in Lent and Passiontide is Dr. Albert Ham's Cantata, 'The Solitudes of the Passion.' The words are Biblical and well selected. The music is devotional and very singable."—Musical Times.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| MINUET AND TRIO FOR ORGAN ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| PEDAL AND MANUAL SCALES AND ARPEGGIOS ... | 2 | 6 |
| ANTHEMS: The desert shall rejoice. S. or T. Solo and Chorus (S.A.T.B.) ... ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 3 |
| I heard the Voice of Jesus say. Bar. Solo and Chorus (T.T.B.B.) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 0 | 4 |
| PART-SONG: Music, when soft voices die (S.A.T.B.) ... ... | 0 | 3 |

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

CANTATAS FOR CHRISTMAS

THE HOLY CHILD

FOR SOPRANO, TENOR, AND BASS SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORGAN

THE MUSIC BY

T. ADAMS

Price One Shilling and Sixpence;
Tonic Sol-fa, Eightpence.
Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

THE NATIVITY

FOR SOPRANO, TENOR, AND BASS SOLI AND CHORUS

With Hymns to be sung by the Congregation

(THE WORDS AND HYMNS SELECTED)

THE MUSIC BY

T. ADAMS

Price One Shilling and Sixpence;
Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.
Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

†CHRISTMAS ORATORIO

THE MUSIC BY

J. S. BACH

Divided into six sections, intended originally for separate performance on the three days of Christmas, New Year's Day, New Year's Sunday, and the Festival of the Epiphany.

Price, Paper Cover, Three Shillings.
Boards, 4s.; Cloth, 6s.
Vocal Parts, One Shilling and Sixpence each.
Parts 1 and 2, 1s. 6d.; Parts 3 and 4, 1s. 6d.;
Parts 5 and 6, 1s. 6d.
Tonic Sol-fa, Parts 1 and 2, 8d.; Parts 3 and 4, 1s.
Book of Words, complete (per 100), 12s. 6d.
Books of Words, Parts 1 and 2 (per 100), 6s. 6d.

†CHRISTIANS, GRAVE YE THIS GLAD DAY

(CHRISTEN ÄTZET DIESEN TAG!)

A Christmas-Day Cantata (S.A.T.B. Soli)

Edited by J. E. WEST. English Words by C. AVELING.

THE MUSIC BY

J. S. BACH

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.

†BEFORE THE PALING OF THE STARS

A CHRISTMAS HYMN

(FOR VOICES AND ORCHESTRA)

THE WORDS BY

C. ROSSETTI.

THE MUSIC BY

B. J. DALE

Price One Shilling and Sixpence;
Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.

THE COMING OF THE KING

CANTATA FOR FEMALE VOICES

THE WORDS BY

H. M. BURNSIDE

THE MUSIC BY

M. B. FOSTER

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence;
Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.
Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

†CHRISTMAS EVE

FOR CONTRALTO SOLO, CHORUS, AND ORCHESTRA

THE MUSIC BY

N. W. GADE

Price, Paper Cover, One Shilling and Sixpence;
Boards, Two Shillings and Sixpence;
Tonic Sol-fa, Sixpence.

CHRISTMAS CANTATA

FOR SOLI AND CHORUS

THE WORDS BY

R. D. BETJEMANN

THE MUSIC BY

J. HARRISON

Price One Shilling and Sixpence.
Words only, 6s. 6d. per 100.

†FIRST CHRISTMAS MORN

THE WORDS BY

S. J. STONE

THE MUSIC BY

H. LESLIE

Price, Vocal Score, Four Shillings.
Vocal Parts, Eightpence each.
Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

BETHLEHEM

FOR FOUR SOLO VOICES AND CHORUS

Interspersed with Hymns to be sung by the Congregation

THE WORDS WRITTEN AND ARRANGED BY

E. C. NUNN

THE MUSIC BY

J. H. MAUNDER

Price Three Shillings;
Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling and Sixpence.
Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

†THE STORY OF BETHLEHEM

FOR SOPRANO, TENOR, AND BASS SOLI, CHORUS, AND ORGAN.

THE WORDS BY

S. WENSLEY

THE MUSIC BY

J. E. WEST

Price Two Shillings and Sixpence;
Tonic Sol-fa, One Shilling.
Words only, 9s. 6d. per 100.

† Full Score and Orchestral Parts may be had.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

ANTHEMS, &c., FOR CHRISTMAS

RECENTLY PUBLISHED

GEORGE RATHBONE
HOW BEAUTIFUL UPON THE MOUNTAINS
Price 4d.; Tonic Sol-fa, 3d.

P. E. FLETCHER
NOW ONCE AGAIN
CAROL-ANTHEM.
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.
Ditto, Female Voices, Fourpence.

H. W. JONES
THERE WERE SHEPHERDS
Price Fourpence.

GEORGE RATHBONE
AND WE BEHELD HIS GLORY
Price Fourpence: Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

SELECTED LIST

A. ADAM
O HOLY NIGHT
ARRANGED AS ANTHEM FOR SOPRANO (OR TENOR) SOLO AND CHORUS.
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Three-Halfpence.

T. ADAMS
ARISE, SHINE, O JERUSALEM
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

T. ADAMS
THOU ART MY SON
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

W. G. ALCOCK
BREAK FORTH INTO JOY
Price Fourpence.

E. C. BAIRSTOW
OF THE FATHER'S LOVE BEGOTTEN
Price Fourpence.

C. BAYLEY
GLORY TO GOD IN THE HIGHEST
Price Threepence: Tonic Sol-fa, Three-Halfpence.

J. F. BRIDGE
IN THAT DAY
Price Fourpence: Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

E. BUNNETT
ARISE, SHINE, FOR THY LIGHT IS COME
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

E. BUNNETT
BEHOLD, I BRING YOU GOOD TIDINGS
Price Threepence.

E. BUNNETT
IN THE BEGINNING WAS THE WORD
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

H. A. CHAMBERS
ARISE, SHINE, FOR THY LIGHT IS COME
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

P. E. FLETCHER
RING OUT, WILD BELLS
FESTIVAL CAROL
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Fourpence.
Ditto, T.T.B.B., Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Fourpence.
Dit o, S.S.A., Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.
Ditto, S.A., Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Threepence.

M. B. FOSTER
CHRIST'S INCARNATION
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

CH. GOUNOD
NAZARETH
ARRANGED FOR BARITONE SOLO AND CHORUS.
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

E. V. HALL
WHILE SHEPHERDS WATCHED
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

A. HOLLINS
SING, O HEAVENS
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

C. H. LLOYD
REJOICE GREATLY, O DAUGHTER OF ZION
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

A. W. MARCHANT
O COME, REDEEMER OF MANKIND
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

J. H. MAUNDER
SING, O HEAVENS
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

G. SHAW
HOW FAR IS IT TO BETHLEHEM
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.
Ditto, Unison Setting, Twopence.
Ditto, S.S.C., Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

C. V. STANFORD
WHILE SHEPHERDS WATCHED
Price Fourpence.

B. STEANE
LET US NOW GO EVEN UNTO BETHLEHEM
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

B. STEANE
SING, O HEAVENS
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

A. S. SULLIVAN
SING, O HEAVENS
Price Threepence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

J. E. WEST
A SONG OF JOY
Price Fourpence; Tonic Sol-fa, Twopence.

A. W. WILSON
WITH ALL THY HOSTS
Price Twopence.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

JUST PUBLISHED

THE DESCANT
CAROL BOOK

A COLLECTION OF
WELL-KNOWN CAROLS
WITH DESCANTS

No. CONTENTS:
1 A VIRGIN UNSPOTTED
2 GOOD CHRISTIAN MEN, REJOICE
3 GOOD KING WENCESLAS
4 I SAW THREE SHIPS
5 SHEPHERDS! SHAKE OFF YOUR DROWSY SLEEP
6 THE FIRST NOWELL
7 WHAT CHILD IS THIS?
8 WHILE SHEPHERDS WATCHED

PRICE EIGHTPENCE
May also be had separately: Nos. 1-7, 2d. each; No. 8, 1½*d.*

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

W. D. V. DUNCOMBE'S CAROLS
: : FOR CHRISTMAS : :
AND EVERY OTHER FESTIVAL DAY
IN ITS CYCLE, UP TO PURIFICATION
LIST SENT
Address: "Duncombe,"
c/o Messrs. Cowlin & Sons, Victoria St., Clifton, Bristol.

CHRISTMAS MUSIC

CHRISTMAS CAROLS

Four Books, 4½d. each net. Each containing a selection of Ten Popular Carols.

CHRISTMAS ANTHEMS & GLEES

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Hail, Smiling Morn. A.T.T.B. or T.T.B.B. | Spofforth | 2d. |
| Peaceful Gladsome Christmas | Tenney | 2d. |
| Behold I Bring | Goss | 2d. |
| Christmas Anthem | Tenney | 2d. |
| Hail, Heavenly Star | Challinor | 2d. |
| Sleep, Holy Child | Whitley | 2d. |
| Hosanna | Cooke | 2d. |
| Hark, on the Midnight Air | Bottomley | 2d. |
| To the Humble Shepherds | Bottomley | 2d. |

ORGAN MUSIC FOR CHRISTMAS USE

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Two Christmas Pieces | David Clegg net | 2s. |
| Minuet de Noel | Frederick Lacey net | 2s. |
| Adeste Fideles (variations) | Arthur Meale | 2s. |
| Adeste Fideles | C. E. Melville | 2s. |
| Christmas Eve | E. H. Smith | 1s. 6d. |

Any or all of the above will be sent "on appro." if desired.

ASK FOR CATALOGUE OF ORGAN MUSIC AND ANTHEMS, Post Free.

LONDON, W.C.2:
BEAL STUTTARD & Co., LTD.
29, HIGH STREET, NEW OXFORD STREET.

CAROLS BY JOSEPH C. BRIDGE.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| 1. | ON CHRISTMAS NIGHT | 3d. |
| 2. | AWAY WITH GRIEF | 3d. |
| 3. | THE MERRY CHRISTMAS MORN | 3d. |
| 4. | HOLY NIGHT | 2d. |
| 5. | AWAKE THE VOICE (s.s.a. only) | 4d. |
| 6. | CHRISTMAS IN THE FIELDS (Béarnais Melody) | 2d. |
| 7. | WHEN CHRIST WAS BORN (Chester Mystery Play) | 3d. |
| 8. | REJOICE WITH HEART AND VOICE (Old French Melody) | 2d. |
| 9. | THE SHEPHERDS' CAROL (Coventry Mystery Play) | 3d. |
| 10. | LULLABY (Coventry Mystery Play) | 2d. |
| 11. | ACROSS THE SNOW | 2d. |
| 12. | THE SHEPHERDS HAD AN ANGEL (s.s. only) | 2d. |
| 13. | ON BETHLEHEM'S HILL | 3d. |

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

JUST PUBLISHED

ANTHEM

O LORD, MY GOD

BY

CHARLES A. SALT, F.R.C.O.

Price Twopence.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

MAGNIFICAT AND NUNC DIMITTIS
By T. A. BEVIS

"Excellent Setting. It is simple, and has many effective points. I much hope it will be widely used"—DR. W. G. ALCOCK.

PRICE FOURPENCE.

WEEKES & CO., HANOVER STREET, LONDON, W.1

T. MEE PATTISON'S POPULAR CANTATA
THE ANCIENT MARINER
33rd 1,000.
Vocal Score, 2s. 6d. Choruses only, 1s. 3d.
Band Parts may be hired.
London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

PRODUCED AT THE GLOUCESTER MUSICAL FESTIVAL

JUST PUBLISHED

Ye Choirs of New Jerusalem
MOTET
For Chorus, Organ, and Orchestra
Founded on the ancient Sarum Hymn Melody, "Chorus Novæ Jerusalem"
COMPOSED BY BASIL HARWOOD
OP. 47.

PRICE ONE SHILLING

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

NOVELLO'S RECENT PUBLICATIONS

FOLIO SONGS

SACRED

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| AS A SPIRIT DIDST THOU PASS. Tenor Solo, from "The Light of Life" ... ... ... Edward Elgar | 2 | 0 |
| BIRDS, THE. In 2 keys, C and D ... Eric H. Thiman | 1 | 6 |
| COME, O THOU TRAVELLER UNKNOWN. In 2 keys, D and F. Melody by Robert King, 1722. Arr. by H. A. Chambers | 2 | 0 |
| GOD OF LOVE MY SHEPHERD IS, THE. In 2 keys, F and A♭ ... ... ... ... ... Eric H. Thiman | 2 | 0 |
| IN THE BLEAK MIDWINTER. In 2 keys, D and F Eric H. Thiman | 2 | 0 |
| JESUS, THE VERY THOUGHT OF THEE. In 2 keys, B♭ and D ... ... ... ... ... Eric H. Thiman | 2 | 0 |
| MY MASTER HATH A GARDEN. In 2 keys, F and G Eric H. Thiman | 1 | 6 |

SECULAR

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| DOLLY (THE MILKMAID). In 2 keys, C and E flat E. Douglas Tayler | 2 | 0 |
| LORDING'S DAUGHTER, THE. In 2 keys, D minor and F minor ... ... ... ... ... Edward German | 2 | 0 |
| RAINBOW, THE. In 2 keys, E and G Eric H. Thiman | 2 | 0 |
| SILVER SWAN, THE. In 2 keys, B♭ minor and C minor Eric H. Thiman | 1 | 6 |
| SONG OF THE VOLGA BOATMEN (arr. by John E. West) In 3 keys, C, D and F ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| SPRIG OF SHAMROCK, A (Four old Irish Airs). String Quartet or Pianoforte accompaniment. High or low voice. Adapted and arranged by A. Herbert Brewer | 3 | 6 |

PART-SONGS FOR FEMALE VOICES

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| BLESSED DAMOZEL, THE. S.S.A.A., with Semi-Choruses, 1 and 2 ... ... ... ... ... ... Julius Harrison | 1 | 6 |
| BRIDAL SONG (S.S.A.) ... ... ... Edgar L. Bainton | 0 | 3 |
| GREEN LINNET, THE. Two-Part ... Edgar L. Bainton | 0 | 4 |
| SONG OF THE WATERS, THE. Two-Part. George Rathbone | 0 | 4 |
| TO DAFFODILS. Two-Part in Canon ... Eric H. Thiman | 0 | 3 |
| WHEN THE GREEN LEAVES COME AGAIN. Two-Part Percy E. Fletcher | 0 | 4 |
| WHO IS SYLVIA? Two-Part (arr. by John Pointer) Edward German | 0 | 4 |
| WOODED HILL, THE (Four Two-part Songs): | | |
| No. 1. EARLY SPRING, THE ... ... Ethel Boyce | 0 | 4 |
| 2. SUMMER HEAT ... ... ... ... ,, ,, | 0 | 3 |
| 3. AUTUMN TIME ... ... ... ... ,, ,, | 0 | 4 |
| 4. THE HOLLY ... ... ... ... ,, ,, | 0 | 4 |

PART-SONGS FOR MIXED VOICES

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| CAMEL'S HUMP, THE (arranged) ... Edward German | 0 | 4 |
| GOLDEN SKEIN, THE ... ... ...Edgar L. Bainton | 0 | 3 |
| SLEEP (S.A.A.T.B.B.) ... ... ... ... Bernard Johnson | 0 | 4 |
| SONG OF THE VOLGA BOATMEN (S.S.A.A.T.T.B.B.) Arr. by H. Balfour Gardiner | 0 | 4 |
| STARS OF THE SUMMER NIGHT W. A. C. Cruickshank | 0 | 3 |
| THERE IS A GARDEN IN HER FACE H. A. Chambers | 0 | 4 |
| THERE IS A LADY SWEET AND KIND Eric H. Thiman | 0 | 4 |
| TO BLOSSOMS... ... ... ... ... W. G. Alcock | 0 | 3 |

PART-SONGS FOR MALE VOICES

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| CALL, THE (T.T.B.B.) ... ... ... Thomas F. Dunhill | 0 | 4 |
| FAIN WOULD I CHANGE THAT NOTE (T.T.B.B.) R. Vaughan Williams | 0 | 3 |
| IF I WERE YONDER WAVE (T.T.B.B.) Edgar L. Bainton | 0 | 4 |
| IN SILENT NIGHT (T.T.B.B.) German Folk-Song Johannes Brahms | 0 | 3 |
| THE LEE SHORE (T.T.B.B.) ... ... Percy E. Fletcher | 0 | 4 |
| SONG OF THE VOLGA BOATMEN (T.T.B.B.) Arr. by H. Balfour Gardiner | 0 | 4 |

ANTHEMS

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| AND I SAW A NEW HEAVEN ... ... Edgar L. Bainton | 0 | 4 |
| COME, MY WAY, MY TRUTH, MY LIFE (with Solo for Contralto or Mezzo-Soprano) ... ... Roy Thompson | 0 | 3 |
| HAIL, GLADDENING LIGHT. (Short Anthem for Evensong) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... Hugh Blair | 0 | 3 |
| LET ALL THE WORLD IN EVERY CORNER SING Eric H. Thiman | 0 | 4 |
| O FATHER, WHO DIDST ALL THINGS MAKE. (Unaccompanied, for Evensong) ... ... Eric H. Thiman | 0 | 3 |
| O GOD OF WISDOM... ... ... ... F. W. Wadely | 0 | 4 |
| O REND THE HEAVENS. (Motet) ... Johannes Brahms | 0 | 4 |
| O WORSHIP THE KING. (Harvest or General use) Ernest Bullock | 0 | 4 |
| REMEMBER, O THOU MAN (Carol Anthem) ... C. S. Lang | 0 | 4 |
| THUS SAITH THE LORD. (Short unaccompanied Anthem for Saints' days or General use) H. C. L. Stocks | 0 | 2 |
| STRIFE IS O'ER, THE ... ... ... Eric H. Thiman | 0 | 4 |

CANTATAS, ETC.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| GOD WITHIN. Motet for Chorus, Orchestra, and Organ A. Herbert Brewer | 1 | 0 |
| JOHN GILPIN. For Female (or Boys') Voices, in Unison (2nd part optional), with Pianoforte accompaniment (2 Violins and percussion optional) ... Colin Taylor | 2 | 0 |
| LOCHINVAR. Ballad for Chorus and Orchestra C. S. Lang | 2 | 0 |

VIOLIN (OR 'CELLO) AND PIANOFORTE

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| CRADLE SONG ... ... ... ... Byron Brooke | 2 | 0 |
| NOCTURNE ... ... ... ... Colin M. Campbell | 2 | 0 |

ORGAN

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| ALLELUYA. Festal Prelude on "Lasst uns Erfreuen" W. Faulkes | 1 | 6 |
| BENEDICTION (Wedding Souvenir) ... Alfred Hollins | 1 | 6 |
| CHORALE, "Jesus bleibet meine Freude" (J. S. Bach) arr. by John. E. West | 1 | 6 |
| FANTASIE IMPROMPTU ... ... ... W. G. Alcock | 2 | 0 |
| FIVE SHORT AND EASY PIECES, founded on Hymn-Tunes ... ... ... ... ... C. Hylton Stewart | 2 | 0 |
| MAYTIME (Gavotte) ... ... ... ... Alfred Hollins | 1 | 6 |
| PARTITA IN E (Op. 100), in seven movements S. Karg-Elert | 5 | 6 |
| SUITE FROM "BONDUCA" (arr. by Eric H. Thiman) Henry Purcell | 2 | 0 |
| THREE DANCES FROM "HENRY VIII." Edward German ... ... ... ... ... ... ... each | 2 | 0 |
| VARIATIONS ON ARNE'S "WHERE THE BEE SUCKS" (arr. by Chastey Hector) ... Julius Benedict | 2 | 0 |

NOVELLO'S EDITIONS

A SELECTED LIST OF SACRED SONGS

PRICE TWO SHILLINGS, except where otherwise stated.

Abbreviations: (S) Soprano; (M-S) Mezzo-Soprano; (C) Contralto; (T) Tenor; (Bar) Baritone; (B) Bass.

| | Range of Lowest Key. |
|---|---|
| FRANZ ABT | |
| Ave Maria (O Lord most Holy). E (S or T) ... ... (1/6) | E—G♯ |
| THOMAS ADAMS | |
| Nearer my God to Thee. E flat (C or B); F (S or T) ... | B♭—E♭ |
| Radiant Morn, The. D (M-S, C, or Bar) ... ... ... | C♯—E |
| Rock of Ages. E (C or Bar); G (S or T) ... ... ... | B—E |
| IVOR ATKINS | |
| Virgin's Lullaby, The. G minor (M-S) ... ... (1/6) | D—F |
| EDGAR L. BAINTON | |
| Song of the Virgin Mother, A. D (M-S) ... ... ... | D—F♯ |
| JOSEPH BARNBY | |
| Elizabeth's Song. G minor (C or M-S) ... ... ... | D—E |
| Soft southern breeze. B flat (Bar); D flat (T) ... ... | D♭—F |
| JOHN F. BARNETT | |
| Rock of Ages, The. E minor (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... | B—F♯ |
| JULIUS BENEDICT | |
| I mourn as a dove. A (S) ... ... ... ... ... (1/6) | D♯—A |
| Lord is very pitiful, The. F (T) ... ... ... (1/6) | E—G |
| W. STERNDALE BENNETT | |
| His salvation is nigh them that fear Him. G (Bar); B (T) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... (1/6) | D—E |
| O Lord, Thou hast searched me out. F (C) ... ... (1/6) | C—D |
| Whosoever drinketh of this water. E (B) ... ... (1/6) | B—E |
| A. HERBERT BREWER | |
| Virgin's Cradle Song, The. F (M-S) ... ... ... ... | D—F |
| GERARD F. COBB | |
| It came upon the midnight clear (Christmastide). D (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | D—E |
| WILLEM COENEN | |
| Beyond. D flat (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... ... ... ... | D♭—F |
| Come unto Me. D (C or B); F (M-S or Bar); G (S or T) | C—D |
| Father, forgive them (Lent). F minor (S or T) ... ... | E—F |
| I shall see Thee again. F (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... | E—F |
| Thou wilt remember us. C (C or B); D flat (Bar or M-S); E flat (S or T) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | B—E |
| ANTONIN DVOŘÁK | |
| Inflammatus et Accensus (Latin words only). D minor (C) | A—E |
| EDWARD ELGAR | |
| Angel's Song, The. C (M-S) ... ... ... ... (1/6) | D♯—E |
| As a Spirit didst thou pass. E flat (T) ... ... ... | F—A |
| PERCY E. FLETCHER | |
| Hark! hark! my soul! C (C or B); E flat (S or T) ... | A—D |
| MYLES B. FOSTER | |
| O for a closer walk with God. C (M-S or Bar); D (S or T) | C—E |
| ALFRED R. GAUL | |
| Eye hath not seen. G (C); B flat (M-S) ... ... (1/6) | B—D |
| Ruth (Entreat me not to leave thee). B flat (M-S or S) (1/6) | C—F |
| CHARLES GOUNOD | |
| Angel hosts descending. F (S or T) ... ... ... ... | C—G |
| Holy Vision, The. D minor (S or T) ... ... ... ... | D—F♯ |
| Jerusalem. A minor (S or T) ... ... ... ... ... | E—B |
| Nazareth. E flat (C or Bar); F (S or T) ... ... (1/6) | B—F |
| Power and Love. A (M-S or Bar) ... ... ... ... | E—F♯ |
| There is a green hill. D (C or B); E (M-S or Bar); F (S or T)... ... ... ... ... ... ... | C♯—D |
| CARL H. GRAUN | |
| Lo! the heaven-descended prophet. B flat (S) ... ... | E♭—C |
| ROBERT KING (Arranged by H. A. CHAMBERS.) | |
| Come, O Thou Traveller unknown. D (C or B) F (M-S or Bar) | C—F |
| CHARLES H. LLOYD | |
| O Father all-creating (Weddings). E (S or T) ... ... | E—G♯ |
| ALEXANDER C. MACKENZIE | |
| Cross and Crown. B flat (S or T) ... ... ... ... | C—G |
| Dormi Jesu (The Virgin's Cradle Hymn) (Latin words only). E (C or M-S) | E—E |
| For lo, the winter is past. B flat and C (T)... ... ... | E—G |
| Lord is my Shepherd, The. G (S) ... ... ... ... | E—G |
| EDWARD J. MARGETSON | |
| Far from my heavenly home. E flat (C or Bar); G (S or T) | B♭—E♭ |
| JOHN H. MAUNDER | |
| O lovely flowers (Harvest). G (C or Bar); A (S or T) ... | B—G |
| BERNHARD MOLIQUE | |
| Pour out thy heart before the Lord. A flat (T) ... (1/-) | E♭—A♭ |
| ALICE A. NEEDHAM | |
| Far from my heavenly home. C minor (C or Bar); D minor (M-S) | C—F |
| HORATIO W. PARKER | |
| Come, Holy Ghost (Whitsun). D (S) ... ... ... | D—G |
| Lo, now the shades of night A flat (C) ... ... ... | A♭—E♭ |
| Declining now the sun's bright wheel. E flat minor (Bar) | B♭—E♭ |
| C. HUBERT H. PARRY | |
| Ballad of Meshullemeth, The. E flat (C) ... ... ... | B♭—F |
| God breaketh the battle. G (T) ... ... ... ... | D—A |
| Lady! thou Queen of Israel. E flat (S) ... ... ... | D—A♭ |
| Lord is long-suffering, The. (C or M-S) ... ... ... | D—E |
| JOHN POINTER | |
| How shall I sing that Majesty (with Chorus ad lib.) In two keys, C and D | C—G |
| D. PUGHE-EVANS | |
| Lead, Kindly Light. E flat (C or Bar); F (M-S); G (S or T) | C—E♭ |
| Return unto thy rest. E flat (C or Bar) ... ... ... | B♭—E♭ |
| HENRY PURCELL | |
| Now that the sun (Evening Hymn). E flat (C); G (S) ... | B♭—E♭ |
| J. JOACHIM RAFF | |
| Twilight is gently falling, The (Ave Maria). E flat (S or T) | E♭—A♭ |
| ROLAND ROGERS | |
| Lead, Kindly Light. F (C or Bar) ... ... ... ... | A—F |
| FRANZ SCHUBERT | |
| Litany for All Souls' Day. E flat (C or Bar) ... (1/6) | C—E♭ |
| JOHN STAINER | |
| My Maker and my King. D (S) ... ... ... (1/6) | C♯—F |
| ALESSANDRO STRADELLA | |
| O God, have mercy (Pietà Signore). D minor (S or T) ... | D—G |
| ERIC H. THIMAN | |
| Birds, The. C (M-S or Bar); D (S or T) ... ... ... | D—F |
| God of Love my Shepherd is, The. F (C or Bar); A flat (M-S) | A—D |
| In the bleak mid-winter. D (C or Bar); F (S or T) ... | A—E |
| Jesus the very thought of Thee. B flat (C or Bar); D (M-S) | B♭—D |
| My Master hath a garden. F (M-S or Bar); G (S or T) (1/6) | C—F |
| HERBERT W. WAREING | |
| Jesu, Lover of my soul. E flat (M-S or Bar) ... ... | B♭—F |
| H. LANE WILSON | |
| Lord is my Shepherd, The. E flat (C or Bar); F (M-S); A flat (S or T) | B♭—E♭ |

For songs by Bach, Handel, Mendelssohn, &c., see separate lists and catalogues.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

JUST PUBLISHED

NEW ORGAN WORK

BY

SIGFRID KARG-ELERT

(Op. 100.)

PARTITA IN E

1. Entrata
2. Canzona
3. Corrente e Siciliano
4. Rigaudon (Alla Burla)
5. Sarabande
6. Gavotte e Carillon
7. Finale quasi ritorno

PRICE FIVE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited.

New Numbers in the "YORK SERIES."

ALLELUIA HAIL WITH GLADNESS.
J. LAMONT GALBRAITH.
Cantata. Price 2s. net.

CROWN OF LIFE.
NOEL HANNENFORD.
Cantata. Price 2s. net.

THE SHEFFIELD CATHEDRAL DESCANTS.
(24 Settings of Popular Hymn Tunes.)
By T. W. HANFORTH.
Price 6d.

BANKS & SON, MUSIC PUBLISHERS, YORK.

JUST PUBLISHED

UP HILL DOWN DALE

SHORT PIECES

FOR THE

PIANOFORTE

BY

ARTHUR BAYNON

1. Squirrels at play
2. The Woodland Dell
3. The Old Mill
4. The Fairy Ring
5. Autumn Song
6. By the Duckpond
7. The Song of the Milkmaid
8. The Hay Wain
9. The Reapers' Song
10. In the Wood

Price Two Shillings

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

YOUNG SINGERS
Their Voice Cultivation and Preservation.

A concise, comprehensive, up-to-date guide to all engaged in teaching voice-production, enunciation, and singing to boys and girls

By JAMES BATES

To be obtained from:—
MESSRS. STAINER & BELL, 58, Berners Street, London, W.1.

Price One Shilling and Twopence, post free.

SUITABLE FOR CHRISTMAS GIFT

"LONELINESS"

and other Essays, also extracts from Lectures on Singing delivered to the Students of the Royal Academy of Music, London.

By AGNES J. LARKCOM, F.R.A.M.

Price 4s. 6d.; postage, 4d. extra.

GERALD DUCKWORTH & CO.,
3, HENRIETTA ST., COVENT GARDEN, or any bookseller.

THE

MONK'S DREAM

BY

A. E. LUMLEY-HOLMES

Arranged for ORGAN, 2s.; Piano, 2s.: also Orchestra, 2s.

Publishers: BEAL, STUTTARD & Co., LTD.,
29, HIGH STREET, NEW OXFORD STREET, W.C.2.

AVE MARIA

MELODIA RELIGIOSA

The greatest of all novelty Pianoforte Solos, Op. 10.

By CARLOS EUGENIO FERREIRA

J. RANGEL & CO., established in Portuguese India, published a new composition for the pianoforte and the violin, entitled "Ave Maria" (Religious Melody), whose author is the Portuguese pianist, Carlos Eugenio Ferreira, barrister-at-law and distinguished writer.

The transformation of European and Indian music into one-step, tango, waltz, melodies, serenades, ballads, &c., is arranged by Mr. Ferreira, and named "Dolente" (Mandó), Goanish dance with variations, Op. 1; "Sobre o Mandovy," waltz, Op. 2; "Canto de Rueminim," waltz, Op. 3; "Echos da India," melody, Op. 4; "Sous les palmiers," waltz, Op. 5; "Serenata Indiana" (Mandó), with variations, Op. 6, printed in London; "Les Charmes de Gôa," waltz, Op. 7; "Les Ballets du Concan," modern one-step, and tango; characteristic dances ("Sur des Motifs et Chansons Indiennes"), Opp. 8 and 9; and among his pianoforte works, the melody "L'Arrivée" is a delightful piece, widely appreciated as played by the Portuguese Orpheons, and all the leading bands.

As a composer of pianoforte music of an educational nature Mr. Ferreira occupies a notable place among modern musicians. His ideas are always fresh, and thus exercise a strong appeal, particularly with Portuguese and Indian music-lovers.

Delicacy and grace are the outstanding features of the piece "Ave Maria," and the notes of this are not difficult; but notes alone are not enough. The difficulty here is to get perfect tone values, and to get a sense of continuity in the melody, in spite of the gaps and "breathing places."

Writing of Schubert, Mr. Ernest Newman said: "His melodies have an inexhaustible charm . . . They fall gratefully on the ear, but they have also a curious appeal to the imagination, partly because of a touching strain of wistfulness in them, that is characteristic of Schubert. It is because of this appealing, imaginative quality in them that we can bear him to repeat them as often as he does." We can perfectly apply these words to Mr. Ferreira's works, wherein the style, the melody, the soundness, the rhythm, and the lyric Orientalism are well accentuated.

The whole piece is founded on J. S. Bach's Preludes, Nos. 5 and 10 in E and A.

The melody "Ave Maria" comprises fourteen pages, with two of them detached with songs for solos and chorus voices, and words in Portuguese and English, and presenting as a frontispiece the portrait of the Virgin Mary.

The music may be obtained of the Library Coelho-Pangini, Gôa, and of all music sellers.

The House, Arthur Viegas, Nova Gôa, Portugese India, will give all information upon request. Price, Rs., 1½, post free.

ORGAN MUSIC

SUITABLE FOR PERFORMANCE AT CINEMAS, ETC.

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| J. BENEDICT | | |
| Variations on Arne's "Where the bee sucks" ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| DUDLEY BUCK | | |
| At Evening ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| WALFORD DAVIES | | |
| Solemn Melody ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| EDWARD ELGAR | | |
| Contrasts (The Gavotte) ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| PERCY E. FLETCHER | | |
| Fountain Reverie ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| Matinale ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| EDWARD GERMAN | | |
| Morris Dance (Henry VIII.)... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Shepherds' Dance ,, ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Torch Dance ,, ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| R. G. HAILING | | |
| Chanson de Joie... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| KING HALL | | |
| Canzone ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| ALFRED HOLLINS | | |
| Allegretto Grazioso ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Barcarolle... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Berceuse ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Evening Rest ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| In Springtime ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Intermezzo in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Maytime (Gavotte) ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Minuet ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Morning Song ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Spring Song ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| EDWARD J. HORSMAN | | |
| The Curfew ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| BERNARD JOHNSON | | |
| Pavane in A ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| S. KARG-ELERT | | |
| Harmonies du Soir ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| EDWIN H. LEMARE | | |
| Andantino in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Chanson d'Eté ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Elegy in G ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Intermezzo in B flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Madrigal ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Minuet Nuptiale ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Pastorale in E ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| Reverie in E flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| Romance in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| J. A. MEALE | | |
| Chanson d'Espoir ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 2 | 0 |
| J. RAFF | | |
| Cavatina ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| SCHUBERT | | |
| Ave Maria ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Serenade ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| BERTHOLD TOURS | | |
| Allegretto Grazioso ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Menuetto ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| TSCHAIKOWSKY | | |
| Chanson Triste ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Chant sans Paroles ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| Andantino (Symphony No. 4) ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| ERIC WEBSTER | | |
| Berceuse ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| H. DAVAN WETTON | | |
| Andantino in D flat ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 1 | 6 |
| H. A. WHEELDON | | |
| Cantilene ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 6 |
| Canzona ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |
| W. WOLSTENHOLME | | |
| Canzona ... ... ... ... ... ... ... ... | 5 | 6 |
| Romanza and Allegretto in E flat ... ... ... ... ... | 3 | 0 |

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

ORGAN MUSIC

Published by the Oxford University Press

J. S. BACH

TEN INSTRUMENTAL MOVEMENTS FROM THE CANTATAS. Transcribed by HARVEY GRACE ... ... ... ... complete, 5*s.*
In eight separate parts, 1*s.* 6*d.* each.

JESU, JOY OF MAN'S DESIRING. Chorale from Cantata No. 147. Arr. by HARVEY GRACE ... 2*s.*

TWO CHORUSES. Arr. by HARVEY GRACE ...
(READY SHORTLY)

FOUR SACRED SONGS. Arr. by J. BERNARD JACKSON ... ... ... ... complete, 3*s.* 6*d.*

HANDEL

ORGAN CONCERTO, No. 4. Arr. by E. STANLEY ROPER. Four Movements ... 2*s.* 6*d.* each LARGO IN E. From Concerto Grosso No. 12. Arr. by SIR HENRY WOOD ... ... ... 2*s.*

HENRY G. LEY

FANTASIA ON THE WELSH HYMN-TUNE 'ABERYSTWYTH' ... ... ... ... ... 3*s.*

F. H. SHERA

AUBADE AND NOCTURNE ... ... 2*s.* each

HEALEY WILLAN

TWO CHORALE PRELUDES ... ... 2*s.* each

ERNEST FARRAR

EPILOGUE ON THE OLD HUNDREDTH ... 2*s.*
TRIO AND PASTORALE ... ... ... 2*s.*
TWO PRELUDES AND POSTLUDE ... ... 2*s.*
ELEGY ... ... ... ... ... ... 2*s.*
WEDDING PIECE ... ... ... ... ... 2*s.*

ARTHUR EGERTON

AN EASTER PRELUDE ... ... ... ... 2*s.*
PRELUDE IMPROVISATION ... ... 2*s.* 6*d.*

PHILIP TOMBLINGS

INTERMEZZO ... ... ... ... ... 2*s.*

ROBIN MILFORD

TWO SEA PRELUDES ... ... ... 2*s.* 6*d.*
TWO CHORAL PRELUDES ... ... 2*s.* each

T. TERTIUS NOBLE

PRELUDE SOLENNEL ... ... ... ... 2*s.*
CHORAL PRELUDES ON THE TUNES, 'MELCOMBE,' 'ST. ANN,' 'ROCKINGHAM,' 'DUNDEE,' 'PICARDY,' 'STRACATHRO,' 'ST. KILDA,' 'WALSAL' ... ... ... 2*s.* each FANTASY ON A WELSH TUNE ('TON-Y-BOTEL') ... ... ... ... ... 2*s.*

THE OXFORD BOOK OF CAROLS

BY PERCY DEARMER, R. VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, and MARTIN SHAW

Music Edition, 6*s.* net. Words Edition, with notes, 4*s.* 6*d.* net. Cheap Words Edition, 1*s.* and 1*s.* 6*d.* net.

WRITE FOR A PROSPECTUS TO THE

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS 95, WIMPOLE STREET, W.1

NOVELLO'S EDITIONS

ORGAN VOLUNTARIES

BASED ON POPULAR HYMN TUNES

ADAMS, THOMAS

Short Fantasia on 'Abridge' (No. 16, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

Short Fantasia on 'Veni, Creator Spiritus' (No. 46, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

BEST, WILLIAM T.

Preludes on the tunes 'London,' 'Halifax,' and 'St. Bride' (Bk. 3, Best's Collection of Pieces)... ... 3 0

CALKIN, J. BAPTISTE

Study on Pleyel's Hymn (No. 4, Calkin's Compositions) ... ... 3 0

DARKE, HAROLD E.

Three Choral Preludes:
'St. Peter'
'Darwell's 148th'
Theme by Tallis
(No. 60, Original Compositions) (New Series) 3 6

FAULKES, WILLIAM

Alleluya, Festal Prelude on the tune 'Lasst uns erfreuen' (No. 110, Original Compositions) (New Series) ... ... ... ... ... 1 6

Fantasia on the old melody 'Urbs beata' (No. 379, Original Compositions) ... ... 1 6

Festival Prelude on 'Ein' feste Burg' (No. 3, Original Compositions) (New Series) 2 0

HIGGS, HENRY M.

Variations on the tune 'Heinlein' (No. 44, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

LÉFÉBURE-WÈLY, L. J. A.

Processional Hymn, 'Adoro te' (No. 6, 'The Modern Organist') ... ... 3 0

LEMARE, EDWIN H.

Concert Fantasia on the tune 'Hanover' (No. 4, Lemare's Original Compositions)... 4 6

MACFARREN, GEORGE A.

Variations on the tune 'Windsor' (No. 81, Original Compositions) ... ... 1 6

MORGAN, THOMAS J.

Fantasia on the tune 'Twrgwyn' (No. 66, Original Compositions) (New Series) 2 0

PARRY, C. HUBERT H.

Seven Chorale Preludes (1st Set):
'Dundee' 'Melcombe'
'Rockingham' 'Christe, Redemptor omnium'
'Hampton'
'Old 104th' 'St. Ann's'
(No. 1, Original Compositions) (New Series) 5 6

Seven Chorale Preludes (2nd Set):
'Croft's 136th' 'St. Mary'
'Martyrdom' 'Eventide'
'St. Thomas' 'St. Cross'
'Hanover'
(No. 45, Original Compositions) (New Series) 5 6

PYE, JAMES T.

Introductory Voluntary on the Russian Hymn (No. 446, Original Compositions) ... ... 1 6

SILAS, EDWARD

Fantasia on 'St. Ann's' tune (No. 14, Silas's Original Compositions) ... 2 0

SPARK, WILLIAM

Jerusalem the Golden, with Variations and Finale ... ... ... ... ... ... 2 0

STEPHENS, CHARLES E.

Concluding Voluntary or Fantasia on the Chorale 'St. Mary' or 'Hackney' (No. 13, Original Compositions) ... ... 1 6

Fantasia on Choral 'St. James's' (No. 260, Original Compositions) ... ... 2 0

STEWART, C. HYLTON

Five Short and Easy Pieces, founded on Hymn Tunes:
'Caithness' 'Croft's 136th'
'Babylon's Streams' 'St. Peter'
'Aberystwyth'
(No. 115, Original Compositions) (New Series) 2 0

THORNE, EDWARD H.

Variations on the tune 'St. Luke' (No. 306, Original Compositions) ... ... 3 0

WALLACE, JAMES E.

Chorale Fantasia on the tune 'Heinlein' (No. 75, Original Compositions) (New Series) 3 0

WEST, JOHN E.

Prelude on Dykes's tune 'Requiescat' (No. 37, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

Three Chorale Preludes:
'Winchester New'
'Burford'
'St. Michael'
(No. 47, Original Compositions) (New Series) 3 6

Improvisation on Schultz's tune 'We plough the fields' (No. 43, 'The Village Organist') 1 6

Prelude on Sullivan's tune 'We are but strangers here' (No. 37, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

Prelude on Dykes's tune 'Now the labourer's task is o'er' (No. 37, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

WOODS, F. CUNNINGHAM

Variations on Elvey's tune 'Come, ye thankful people, come' (No. 43, 'The Village Organist') ... ... 1 6

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

THE ENGLISH COUNTRY DANCE

GRADED SERIES

CONTAINING THE DESCRIPTION OF THE DANCES TOGETHER WITH THE TUNES

BY

CECIL J. SHARP

VOL. 1.

BRIGHTON CAMP.
*GALOPEDE.
*NANCY'S FANCY.
*THE BLACK NAG.
*GATHERING PEASCODS.
*RUFTY TUFTY.

VOL. 2.

RIBBON DANCE.
GODDESSES.
*THE MARY AND DOROTHY.
*IF ALL THE WORLD WERE PAPER.
PICKING UP STICKS.
*HASTE TO THE WEDDING.

VOL. 3.

BONNETS SO BLUE.
THE MAID PEEPED OUT AT THE WINDOW.
CHRISTCHURCH BELLS.
*HEY, BOYS, UP GO WE.
*SELLENGER'S ROUND.
THE MERRY, MERRY MILKMAIDS.

VOL. 4.

SAGE LEAF.
EPPING FOREST.
CHILDGROVE.
*THE OLD MOLE.
HIT AND MISS.
NEWCASTLE.

PRICE THREE SHILLINGS EACH VOLUME.

* The Dances marked with an asterisk may be had for Brass or Military Band.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

TWELVE COUNTRY DANCE TUNES

COLLECTED BY

CECIL J. SHARP

ARRANGED FOR

BRASS OR MILITARY BAND

By GORDON JACOB

IN THREE SETS

PRICE ... ... 4*s.* 6*d.* EACH.

Separate Parts, 3*d.* each.

SET 1.

THE BUTTERFLY
GALOPEDE.
HASTE TO THE WEDDING.
NANCY'S FANCY.

SET 2.

GATHERING PEASCODS.
RUFTY, TUFTY.
HEY BOYS.
THE BLACK NAG.

SET 3.

IF ALL THE WORLD WERE PAPER.
THE OLD MOLE.
SELLENGER'S ROUND.
THE MARY AND DOROTHY.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

Songs for Boys

"When I'm a man"

VOCATIONAL SONGS FOR BOYS.

No more delightful series of songs was ever destined for a better purpose. Twelve jolly little rhymes set to rollicking tunes that will appeal to all boys. Every normal lad longs at one time or other to embrace one of those callings that come to his daily notice, and which appeal to his youthful spirit of romance and adventure. Here they are portrayed in rhyme and rhythm:

"Boys have a grievance: they are like Mother Hubbard's dog—only it is their music-cupboard that is bare. They have nothing new to sing. "Billy Boy" and "The Golden Vanitee" they like; but they want something new," Uncle Percy.

THE WATCHMAN.

I want to be a watchman with a bucket full of fire
And toast myself some bacon on a piece of broken wire,
And sit all night and smoke my pipe and watch the hot coals glow, [that blow.
All sheltered in my little hut from all the winds
I want to be so very old and look so very wise
That all the children at our school will get a great surprise.
I want to be a watchman by a hole dug in the ground,
With buckets, rammers, picks, and spades, and red lamps all around [board,
And great big pipes to crawl along and mortar on a
And hear the people passing by remark: "That man's a Lord!"
I'd put a line across the street and wave my hand and say:
"Now all you carts and motor cars go round the other way."

E. SHENTON.

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1 | WHEN I'M A MAN | Shenton | Unison | 4d. |
| 2 | JACK TAR ... | Wright | Unison | 3d. |
| 3 | THE BAKER ... | ,, | 2 Parts | 3d. |
| 4 | THE TINKER ... | ,, | 2 Parts | 4d. |
| 5 | THE TAILOR ... | ,, | 2 Parts | 4d. |
| 6 | THE FARMER'S BOY | ,, | Unison | 4d. |
| 7 | THE SOLDIER ... | ,, | 2 Parts | 3d. |
| 8 | THE WATCHMAN | Shenton | Unison | 3d. |
| 9 | THE KNIFE GRINDER | ,, | Unison | 3d. |
| 10 | THE SAILOR ... | ,, | Unison | 3d. |
| 11 | THE DUSTMAN ... | Moy | 2 Parts | 3d. |
| 12 | THE BARGEE ... | Rowley | 2 Parts | 3d. |
| 13 | THE POLICEMAN... | ,, | Unison | 4d. |
| 14 | CAMPING ... | ,, | Unison | 4d. |

WINTHROP ROGERS, LTD.

SOLE AGENTS: HAWKES & SON (LONDON), LTD., DENMAN STREET, W.1.

NATIONAL SONGS

WITH

Ddescants

SET I. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 271

THE BAY OF BISCAY (English)
A HUNTING WE WILL GO (English)
JOHN PEEL (English)
ALL THROUGH THE NIGHT (Welsh)
SCOTS, WHA HAE (Scottish)
THE OAK AND THE ASH (Scottish)
EARLY ONE MORNING (English)
OH, DEAR! WHAT CAN THE MATTER BE? (English)
THE BRITISH GRENADIERS (English)
THE ASH GROVE (Welsh)
GOOD KING WENCESLAS (Traditional)
THE FIRST NOWELL (Traditional)

SET II. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 275

COME LASSES AND LADS (English)
WI' A HUNDRED PIPERS (Scottish)
DAVID OF THE WHITE ROCK (Welsh)
THE YOUNG MAY MOON (Irish)
THE GOLDEN VANITY (English)
THE FLIGHT OF THE EARLS (Irish)

SET III. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 276

MEETING OF THE WATERS (Irish)
THERE'S NAE LUCK (Scottish)
DRINK TO ME ONLY WITH THINE EYES (English)
LET ERIN REMEMBER (Irish)
THE BAILIFF'S DAUGHTER OF ISLINGTON (English)
THE BELLS OF ABERDOVEY (Welsh)

SET IV. NOVELLO'S SCHOOL SONGS. BOOK 307

THE CAMPBELLS ARE COMIN' (Scottish)
IN DERRY VALE (The Londonderry Air) (Irish)
THE AGINCOURT SONG (English)
ANNIE LAURIE (Scottish)
AUTUMN'S GOLDEN LEAF (English)
SILENT, O MOYLE (Irish)
MINE EYES HAVE SEEN (American)
OFT IN THE STILLY NIGHT (Irish)
I SAW THREE SHIPS (Traditional)
SHEPHERDS! SHAKE OFF YOUR DROWSY SLEEP (Traditional)

(PRICE EIGHTPENCE EACH SET)

(Each Song can be had separately.)

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED

ENGLISH LYRICS

SET TO MUSIC BY

C. HUBERT H. PARRY.

EACH SET, PRICE FOUR SHILLINGS.

FIRST SET.

1. *My true love hath my heart ...Sir Philip Sidney
2. Good-night ... ... ... ... Shelley
3. Where shall the lover rest ... ... ... Scott
4. Willow, Willow, Willow ... ... Shakespeare

SECOND SET.

1. O Mistress Mine ... ... ... Shakespeare
2. Take, O take those lips away ... Shakespeare
3. No longer mourn for me ... ... Shakespeare
4. Blow, blow, thou winter wind ... ... Shakespeare
5. When icicles hang by the wall ... Shakespeare

THIRD SET.

1. To Lucasta, on going to the wars ... ... Lovelace
2. If thou would'st ease thine heart ... ... Beddoes
3. *To Althea, from prison ... ... ... Lovelace
4. *Why so pale and wan ... ... ... Suckling
5. Through the ivory gate ... ... Julian Sturgis
6. Of all the torments ... ... William Walsh

FOURTH SET.

1. *Thine eyes still shined for me ... ... Emerson
2. *When lovers meet again Langdon Elwyn Mitchell
3. *When we two parted ... ... ... Byron
4. Weep you no more ... ... ... Anon.
5. There be none of beauty's daughters ... ...Byron
6. Bright star ... ... ... ... ... Keats

FIFTH SET.

1. *A stray nymph of Dian ... ... Julian Sturgis
2. *Proud Maisie... ... ... ... Scott
3. *Crabbed age and youth ... ... Shakespeare
4. Lay a garland on my hearse Beaumont & Fletcher
5. Love and laughter ... ... Arthur Butler
6. A girl to her glass ... ... Julian Sturgis
7. A Lullaby ... ... E. O. Jones

SIXTH SET.

1. *When comes my Gwen ... ... E. O. Jones
2. *And yet I love her till I die ... Anon.
3. *Love is a bable ... ... ... ... Anon.
4. *A lover's garland ... ... Alfred P. Graves
5. At the hour the long day ends ... Alfred P. Graves
6. Under the greenwood tree ... ... Shakespeare

SEVENTH SET.

1. On a time the amorous Silvy ... ... Anon.
2. Follow a shadow ... ... ... Ben Jonson
3. Ye little birds that sit and sing Thomas Heywood
4. O never say that I was false of heart Shakespeare
5. Julia ... ... ... ... ... ... Herrick
6. *Sleep ... ... ... ... ... Julian Sturgis

EIGHTH SET.

1. Whence ... ... ... ... Julian Sturgis
2. Nightfall in winter ... Langdon Elwyn Mitchell
3. Marian ... ... ... ... George Meredith
4. Dirge in woods ... ... ... George Meredith
5. Looking backward ... ... Julian Sturgis
6. Grapes ... ... ... ... Julian Sturgis

NINTH SET.

1. Three aspects ... ... Mary E. Coleridge
2. A fairy town (St. Andrew's) Mary E. Coleridge
3. The witches' wood ... ... Mary E. Coleridge
4. Whether I live ... ... Mary E. Coleridge
5. Armida's garden ... ... Mary E. Coleridge
6. *The maiden ... ... ... Mary E. Coleridge
7. There ... ... ... Mary E. Coleridge

TENTH SET.

1. My heart is like a singing bird Christina Rossetti
2. Gone were but the winter cold Allan Cunningham
3. A moment of farewell ... ... Julian Sturgis
4. The child and the twilight Langdon Elwyn Mitchell
5. From a city window Langdon Elwyn Mitchell
6. One silent night of late ... ... ... Herrick

ELEVENTH SET.

1. One golden thread ... ... ... Julia Chatterton
2. The spirit of the Spring ... Alfred Perceval Graves
3. What part of dread eternity ... Author unknown
4. The Blackbird ... ... Alfred Perceval Graves
5. The faithful lover ... ... Alfred Perceval Graves
6. If I might ride on puissant wing Julian Sturgis
7. Why art thou slow ... ... ... ... Massinger
8. She is my love beyond all thought Alfred P. Graves

TWELFTH SET.

1. When the dew is falling ... ... Julia Chatterton
2. To Blossoms ... ... ... ... ... Herrick
3. Rosaline ... ... ... ... ... Lodge
4. When the sun's great orb ... ... H. Warner
5. Dream pedlary ... ... ... ... Beddoes
6. O World, O Life, O Time ... ... Shelley
7. The sound of hidden music ... Julia Chatterton

* Published separately, price 1s. 6d.

LONDON: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, LIMITED.

MOZART'S LETTERS

Selected by HANS MERSMANN and translated by M. M. BOZMAN. Illustrated. 10s. 6d. net. Prospectus post free.

These letters are of intense interest to musicians, and no less to the student of human nature. "Had all his music perished we would still value him as a prince of correspondents."—Nation.

THE POETS AND MUSIC

By E. W. NAYLOR, MUS.D., lecturer in the History of Music at Cambridge University. Illustrated in half-tone. 6s. net.

A companion volume to DR. NAYLOR'S memorable Shakespeare and Music. A critical study of perception and originality, dealing with the treatment of music by twelve great English poets. "A book of exquisite erudition."—Morning Post.

MECHANICS OF SINGING

By EDGAR T. EVETTS and R. WORTHINGTON. Illustrated with diagrams. —— 6s. net.

A completely original book, in which the physiology of the voice is adequately and logically correlated with an actual method of singing. Illustrated with twelve diagrams and three X-ray photographs.

ALDINE HOUSE DENT BEDFORD ST. W.C.2.

ASTONISHING ACHIEVEMENT IN IMPROVEMENT OF VIOLINS

NOVARI VIOLINS, VIOLAS, & 'CELLOS.

PURE Italian tone, light touch, great volume, perfectly balanced. Fully equal in tone to instruments of old masters. Improvement in tone is not obtained through impregnation of wood, but solely by harmonious tuning of belly and back. Fitted with genuine ebony. Appearance guaranteed. Valued by experts equally at home and abroad. Highly interesting brochure on Violin Making and Tone improvement gratis.

CURRENT PRICE, 73 M; MASTER-VIOLIN, 160 M.

Carriage and packing extra. Sent on approval, without obligation, by arrangement. Obtainable through General Agents:

G. A. TEICHMANN, 20, SEMINAR STRASSE, DRESDEN.

THE VOCAL MOVEMENTS: Kegan Paul 2*s.* net.

FOUR SONG-DIAGRAMS, 6*d.* 12 copies, 5*s.*

1. Belle qui tiens ma vie.
2. Morgen muss ich fort von hier.
3. Believe me, if all those endearing young charms.
4. Why weep ye by the tide, lady?

SHOWING THE EXACT MODULATIONS.

These diagrams are essential for Harmonizers, as well as for students of Singing and Languages. A copy should be in the hands of every pupil. They are obtainable by post from the Author.

JANET McKERROW, 135, BUCHANAN GARDENS, WILLESDEN, N.W.10.

FOREIGN MUSIC

FOR CHRISTMASTIDE

ORGAN

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| BIRN.—Christmas Pastorale, Op. 4 | 1 | 6 |
| BOËLLMANN.—Offertoire sur des Noëls | 2 | 0 |
| CHAUVET.—9 Christmas Offertories | 5 | 0 |
| GRISON.—Christmas Offertory | 2 | 6 |
| LORET.—6 Noëls with Variations | 7 | 6 |
| MALLING.—Christmas—3 Tone-Pictures, Op. 48 | 2 | 0 |
| MERKEL.—Christmas Pastorale, Op. 56 | 1 | 0 |
| ROQUES.—50 Noëls anciens | 5 | 0 |
| THOMAS.—Christmas Pastorale, Op. 2 | 1 | 6 |
| TOMBELLE.—2 Fantasias or old Noëls | 5 | 0 |
| WACHS.—Pastorale | 2 | 6 |
| ZVONAR.—Pastorale (Old Bohemian Carol) | 1 | 0 |

VOICE AND PIANOFORTE (OR ORGAN)

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| ADAM.—Cantique de Noël | 2 | 0 |
| ROQUES.—40 Noëls Anciens | 5 | 0 |
| VERSEPVY.—15 Noëls d'Auvergne | 3 | 0 |

PIANOFORTE

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| LISZT.—The Christmas Tree (12 Pieces) | 2 | 6 |

GIFT ALBUMS

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| RHEINBERGER.—Organ Sonatas, complete in one Volume cloth | 70 | 0 |
| WIDOR.—Organ Symphonies, complete in one Volume cloth | 70 | 0 |
| CHOPIN.—Complete Pianoforte Works, in two Volumes cloth, each | 20 | 0 |
| GRIEG.—Lyric Pieces, complete in one Volume cloth | 16 | 0 |
| —— Other Pianoforte Works, in two Volumes ... cloth, each | 16 | 0 |
| SCHUBERT.—Complete Pianoforte Works, in six Volumes paper | 84 | 0 |

NOVELLO & CO., LTD., have also in stock numerous other Volumes (including BOUND MINIATURE SCORES), which make attractive gifts for the Music-lover.

A SELECTION OF THE MOST POPULAR CONTINENTAL ORGAN COMPOSITIONS

| | s. | d. |
|---|---|---|
| BOËLLMANN.—Fantasie dialoguée, Op. 35 | 3 | 6 |
| —— Suite Gothique, Op. 25 | 4 | 0 |
| —— 2nd Suite, Op. 27 | 7 | 0 |
| —— 12 Pieces, Op. 16 complete | 10 | 0 |
| BONNET.—12 Pieces, Op. 5 | 10 | 0 |
| —— 12 Pieces, Op. 7 | 10 | 0 |
| —— 12 Pieces, Op. 10 | 10 | 0 |
| —— Poèmes d'Automne (3 Concert Pieces) | 4 | 0 |
| —— Variations de Concert | 3 | 6 |
| CHAUVET.—Andantino | 2 | 6 |
| DEBUSSY.—12 Pieces (Transcribed for Organ) complete | 8 | 0 |
| DUBOIS.—10 Pieces | 10 | 0 |
| —— 12 Pieces | 10 | 0 |
| —— 12 New Pieces | 10 | 0 |
| FRANCK.—6 Pieces | 10 | 0 |
| —— 3 Pieces | 6 | 0 |
| —— Prelude, Fugue, and Variation | 2 | 6 |
| GIGOUT.—10 Pieces complete | 10 | 0 |
| —— 12 Pieces | 10 | 0 |
| —— Album Grégorien. 2 Books ... each | 8 | 0 |
| KARG-ELERT.—66 Choral Improvisations, Op. 65. 6 Books, each | 5 | 0 |
| —— Nun danket, Op. 65, No. 59 | 1 | 6 |
| —— Wagner Album (18 transcriptions) | 4 | 0 |
| RHEINBERGER.—Organ Sonatas, No. 1, 1*s.* 6*d.*; No. 2, 2*s.*; Nos. 3-20 each | 4 | 0 |
| —— 10 Trios, Op. 49. 2 Books | 1 | 6 |
| —— 12 Trios, Op. 189. 3 Books | 2 | 0 |
| ROPARTZ.—Au pied de l'Autel (60 Pieces) | 8 | 0 |
| SAINT-SAËNS.—3 Rapsodies sur des cantiques bretons, each | 2 | 0 |
| —— 3 Rapsodies sur des cantiques bretons complete | 4 | 0 |
| —— Fantasia in Eb | 2 | 6 |
| —— Le Lygne (transcribed by Guilmant) | 2 | 0 |
| —— Mon Cœur (Samson and Delilah) | 2 | 6 |
| SALOMÉ.—10 Pieces. 2 Books ... each | 8 | 0 |
| —— 12 New Pieces, Op. 59 complete | 10 | 0 |
| VIERNE.—Symphony No. 1 | 8 | 0 |
| —— 24 Pieces | 7 | 6 |
| —— Fantasy Pieces. Books 1-4 each | 4 | 0 |
| WIDOR.—Symphonies, Nos. 2, 3, and 4 | 6 | 6 |
| —— Symphonies, Nos. 1, 6, 7, and 8 | 7 | 0 |
| —— Symphony No. 5 | 8 | 0 |

Particulars and prices of separate numbers contained in any of the volumes will be sent on request.

London: NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited

CHAPPELL & Co.'s NEW SONGS

FOR ALL VOICES

THE TIME OF ROSES ... ... ... ... ROGER QUILTER
BIRD SONGS AT EVENTIDE (sung by John McCormack) ERIC COATES
LITTLE LADY OF THE MOON ... ... ... ERIC COATES
IN THE MARSHES ... ... ... ... TERESA DEL RIEGO
ONE HOUR ... ... ... ... ... ERNEST LONGSTAFFE
I LOVE TO HEAR YOU SINGING ... ... HAYDN WOOD

FOR SOPRANOS AND MEZZOS

LOVE, THE JESTER ... ... ... ... MONTAGUE F. PHILLIPS
A YOUNG GIRL'S SONG ... ... ... MONTAGUE F. PHILLIPS
THE FIDDLER OF JUNE ... ... ... ... LESLIE ELLIOTT
EVERYWHERE I LOOK ... ... ... ... MOLLY CAREW
BETHLEHEM (also for Contraltos) ... ... ... JAN BROECKX
LITTLE ROSE OF LOVE ... ... ... DOROTHY FORSTER

Price 2*s. net each: by post*, 2*s.* 1*d.*

CHAPPELL & CO., LTD., 50, NEW BOND STREET, LONDON, W.1

AND MAY BE OBTAINED AT ALL MUSIC SELLERS

CHRISTMAS CAROLS

BAX, A. "A CHRISTMAS CAROL" ... ... ... ... ... ... 2s. 0d.
For Soprano or Tenor, and Pianoforte.

FARWELL, E. "ALL YE WHO ARE TO MIRTH INCLINED" ... ... ... 1½d.

SAWYER, F. J. "I HEARD THE ANGELS YESTERNIGHT" ... ... ... 2d.
(Solo or Duet) with accompaniment of Pianoforte (or Harp) and Harmonium ad lib.

SAWYER, F. J. "SOFTLY FELL THE SHADES OF EVENING" ... ... ... 2d.

SAWYER, F. J. CAROLS FOR THE SEVEN FEASTS OF CHRISTMAS
for two or four voices ... ... ... ... ... each 1d.
Complete, 4d.
1. For Christmas Day.
2. For the Feast of St. Stephen.
3. For the Feast of St. John the Evangelist.
4. For the Feast of the Holy Innocents.
5. For the Feast of the Circumcision.
6. For the Feast of the Epiphany.
7. For the Feast of the Purification.

SAWYER, F. J. SIX CHRISTMAS CAROLS ... ... ... ... complete 6d.
1. I heard the bells of Heaven all ringing.
2. Rocking so slowly.
3. Three Wise Kings of the Rhine.
4. While Shepherds Watched.
5. Good Christians all rejoice.
6. God bless you all, good Gentlemen.

BYRD, W. "O MAGNUM MYSTERIUM" (Edited by H. B. COLLINS) ... 4d.
Motet for four voices for Christmas and the Circumcision (S.A.T.B.). Latin words.

COOPER, DR. R. "GLORIA IN EXCELSIS DEO" (Edited by H. B. COLLINS) ... 4d.
A Short Motet for Christmas Day for four equal voices (S.S.S.A.). Latin words.

WRIGHT, T. "NESCIENS MATER" (Edited by H. B. COLLINS) ... ... ... 4d.
Motet for four men's voices on the Plainsong for Christmas and the Circumcision. Latin words.

COMPLETE LIST OF CHRISTMAS CAROLS WILL BE FORWARDED, POST FREE, ON APPLICATION.

J. & W. CHESTER, Ltd., 11, Gt. Marlborough Street, London, W.1.

London: —Printed by NOVELLO AND COMPANY, Limited, at Novello Works, Soho, and published at 160. Wardour Street, Soho, W.1.
Saturday, December 1, 1928.

THE

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC

YORK GATE, MARYLEBONE ROAD, N.W.1

(Telephone: LANGHAM 1950.)

INSTITUTED 1822 INCORPORATED BY ROYAL CHARTER, 1830

Patrons:
HIS MAJESTY THE KING
HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN
H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AND STRATHEARN, K.G.
H.R.H. THE PRINCESS LOUISE (Duchess of Argyll)

PRESIDENT:—
H.R.H. THE DUKE OF CONNAUGHT AND STRATHEARN, K.G.

PRINCIPAL:—
JOHN B. McEWEN, M.A., D.MUS., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M.

LENT TERM BEGINS

THURSDAY, 3RD JANUARY, 1929.

SCHOLARSHIPS.

72 Scholarships and Exhibitions, by competition only. Except where the contrary is stated, both Students and non-Students are eligible.

L.R.A.M. EXAMINATIONS.

During the Summer, Christmas, and Easter vacations. Open to Composers, Conductors, Performers, and Teachers, whether educated at the Academy or not.

TEACHERS' TRAINING COURSE.

Special Course for the Training of Teachers.

CONDUCTORS' CLASSES AND OPERA CLASS.

For the training of Conductors and Operatic Singers.

STUDENTS' ORCHESTRA.

Conducted by SIR HENRY J. WOOD, D.Mus., F.R.A.M., F.R.C.M.

ENSEMBLE CLASSES.

JUNIOR SCHOOL.

Suitable curriculum for pupils under sixteen years of age.

CONCERTS.

Members of the Public are invited to attend the Students' Practice Concerts, which take place every week during the Term. Particulars of the Public Orchestral, Choral, and Chamber Concerts are advertised in the daily Press.

PROSPECTUSES,

Entry Forms, and all other information may be obtained from

A. ALGER BELL, Secretary.

BOSTON PUBLIC LIBRARY
3 9999 08819 018 4
APR 16 1929